ANNOTATIONS

On the Book of the Prophet

ISAIAH.

The Argument,

BY two ſorts of perſons did God anciently make known his minde, and will, to his people the Iews; by ordinary Miniſters, and by extraordinary Meſſengers. The ordinary Miniſters were the Prieſts, and Levites: both theſe, all of one Tribe, the linage of Levi; the former of them, all of one houſe in that Tribe, the off-ſpring of Aaron. The extraordinary Meſſengers, were the Prophets; ſo termed, of foretelling future events, by divine revelations; men immediately called by God himſelf, and by him immediately inſpired. Theſe were of any houſe, tribe, or profeſſion, indifferently, as God was pleaſed to cul, and call. The Prophets, whoſe monuments we have ſeverally booked in Scripture, are in number ſixteen: whereof the four former are called, in regard of the largeneſs of their prophecies, the greater; the latter twelve, in regard of the ſhortneſs of them, the leſſer.

Of the four larger, Iſaiah, as in place, and rank, ſo in order of time, is without queſtion, the firſt; and lived alſo, in likelihood, ſome time at leaſt, together with the firſt of the other twelve: no one of them, whoſe times are expreſſed, riſing higher then the raign of Jeroboam the ſecond King of Iſrael; who reigned fifteen yeers together, with Uzziah King of Iudah, in whoſe reign this our Prophet began his prophetical employment. What Tribe he was of, or of what eſtate, and profeſſion, before his entrance upon his Office, is uncertain: no mention being made of his pedegree, either here, or elſe-where; further then his next progenitor. So that what the Iewiſh Doctors tell us, concerning his being of the Tribe of Judah, and of the blood-royall; as alſo of his Fathers being a Prophet, and brother to King Amaziah, are matters of no certainty, having no footing in Scripture. His Sermons, or Prophecies, here recorded, abound with great variety of religious inſtructions, ſerious admonitions, ſharp reproofs, ſevere menaces, and comfortable promiſes. And theſe all delivered in a ſtile ſuteable to the ſubject matter, very lofty, and ſtately; full fraught with rhetorical garniſhes, and ſuch native elegancies, as in other languages cannot eaſily, if at all, be expreſſed. Beſides his predictions of Gods judgments to befall his own nation for their ſins, partly by the Aſſyrians, and partly by the Chaldeans, and concerning the utter deſtruction of the adverſaries of Gods people, as well joyntly, as ſeverally; he is moſt plentifull in foretelling their deliverance from the Babylonian Captivity by Cyrus, whom by name he mentioneth, above one hundred yeers before he was born, and well neer two hundred, before the thing it ſelf effected: and withal in declaring the reſtitution and enlargement of the Church, whereof that was a figure; together with the calling in of the Gentiles by Chriſt; whoſe incarnation, birth, breeding, calling, offices (royall, prieſtly, prophetical) life, teaching, courſes, ſufferings, death, riſing again, glory enſuing, Kingdoms length, and extent, he ſo largely and lively deſcribeth, that he may ſeem rather to write a ſtory of things already done, then a prophecy of things to come. In regard whereof, he is by the Ancients not undeſervedly termed An Evangelicall Prophet, and A Prophetical Evangeliſt. Even his menacing predictions being uſually tempered, and cloſed with ſome gracious promiſes of the Goſpel. His continuance in the Prophetical function, is from the times of the Kings under whom he propheſied, not improbably deemed to have been about threeſcore years. Howſoever, that which is from the Iewiſh Doctors received, concerning his propheſying under Manaſſes, and ſuffering death by him, ſeemeth groundleſs: the inſcription of his Prophecies making no mention of any King under whom he propheſied, lower then Hezekiah; towards the latter end of whoſe reign, it is not unlikely that he dyed. Beſides this Book of prophecies, he wrote alſo the acts, firſt and laſt, of King Uzziah; as appeareth by 2 *Chron.*26.22. but that ſeemeth not now extant. See on Chap. 6.1. So much of his writings hath by Gods providence been preſerved, as he deemed neceſſary for the good of his Church.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. THe viſion of Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz, which he ſaw concerning Judah, and Jeruſalem] This firſt verſe containeth in it, the title, or inſcription, not of this firſt Chapter alone, or the Sermon therein delivered, but of the main body of the whole Book, and all the Sermons, or prophecies therein contained; as by the times, and reigns of the ſeverall Kings hereafter mentioned, may appear: ſee the like, *Ier.*1.1, 2. Hoſea 1.1.

the viſion] Gods word, or minde made known to this his ſervant by viſion, or revelation. *Rev.*1.1. and 9.17. a kinde of divine, or ſpirituall rapture. *Num.*24.4, 16. *Ezek.*1.1. & 11.24. one of thoſe means, whereby God in thoſe times imparted his minde to his Prophets; of which ſee, *Gen.*15.1. *Num.*12.6. ſo *Obad.*1. *Nahum.*1.1.

viſion] Put collectively for viſions; as Chap.22.1. 1 *Sam.*3.1. Dan.1.17. becauſe it hath reference in general, to all the enſuing viſions, prophecies, or ſermons, as was before ſhewed. So oxe, and aſſe; for oxen, and aſſes, verſ.3.

of Iſaiah] Or Jeſhajah, as Amaziah, and Azariah. 2 King 15.1. and Jeſhajah alſo, *Ezra.*8.7, 19. yet here, Heb. Jeſhajahu: (for ſo is the name of this Prophet conſtantly written) as Uzzijahu, Chizkijahu, and others; as well here, as elſe-where. Greek, Eſaias. Mat.15.7. Ioh.1.23. and 12.39, 41. as Jeremias Mat.16.14. and Zacharias. Luk.1.5, 12. In our ordinary ſpeech, following the Greek, rather Eſay, then Iſaiah; as in Ezekiel, Ezekiah, Ieremie, Zachary, and the like. And ſo our ancient verſions; ſpeaking in Engliſh forms to Engliſh eares, not amiſſe render it. The word ſignifies, Gods ſalvation. No unfit title for him; who ſo clearly, and largely propheſied of Chriſt, and of ſalvation to be archieved and accompliſhed by him; whereof, ſee the Preface: and to this purpoſe, ſome of the Iewiſh Doctors alledg Chap.49.1. As if it were there intimated, that God for this cauſe had aſſigned him that name, before he was born. But of that, See more on the place.

The ſon of Amoz] The Iewiſh Doctors have a rule, that where any Prophet hath his Father mentioned together with him, (as Iſaiah here, and ſome others elſe-where. Ier. 1. 1. Ezek. 1. 3. Hoſea 1. 1. Ioel 1. 1. Zeph. 1. 1. Zach. 1. 1.) there both Father, and Son, where Prophets; whence they conclude, that Daniel, Amos, Obadiah, Nahum, Habbakock, Haggy, and Malachy, were Prophets indeed, but no Prophets Sons; becauſe, though the place of their birth, or abode, be mentioned, yet their parentage is concealed; which, albeit of Amos it be true. Amos. 1. 1. and 7. 14. Yet of the reſt of them, is altogether uncertain. Nor hath that rule concerning the former, any good ground; but is a meer fruit of their own fancy. The mention of the parents of ſome of them ſeems to have been added; either becauſe their parents were of ſome eminent note or place, in Church, or ſtate; as Ier. 1. 1. or, becauſe, there were ſome other of the ſame name in thoſe times, from whom they might, by ſuch mention of their linage, be diſtinguiſhed. And ſo it might well be with this our Prophet; in being not unlikely, that in his dayes, there were other perſons, bearing the ſame name, as well as in divers other ages, both before and after the times he lived in; as appeareth, 1 Chron. 26. 25. Ezra. 8. 7, 19.

Amoz] or, Amots. Not the ſame with the Prophet Amos: as ſome have imagined: (for their names in the original differ, not in the two letters onely; the firſt, and the laſt: but in notation alſo, the one having a ſignification of might, the other of weight) but ſome other. One, whom the Iewiſh writers affirm to have been the Son of Ioaſh, King of Iudah, and Brother (not to Uzziah, or Azariah, as moſt interpreters, by miſtake, miſreport them, but) to Amaziah. For which yet, becauſe they produce no authentick record, their report of it, deſerves no great credit.

Which he ſaw] That is, was revealed to him, 1 Pet. 1. 12. 1 Cor. 2. 10. As cleerly, and as certainly, as if he had ſeen it. 2 Cor. 4. 18. and 5. 1. Heb. 11. 27. From whence alſo the Prophets were anciently termed Seers. 1 Sam. 9. 9, 19. Chap. 30. 10. So Chap. 2. 1.

Judah, and Jeruſalem] As 2 Kings 23. 1. 2 Chr. 34. 3. Chap. 3. 1. Ier. 19. 7. and 27. 20, 21. Though the one be comprehended in the other; yet mentioned apart, the one from the other; becauſe the latter, a more eminent, and remarkable part of the former. So, the land, and Jericho. Ioſh. 2. 1. Of Davids ſervants nineteen men, and Aſahel. 2 Sam. 2. 30. Out of the hands of all his enemies, and out of the hands of Saul. 2 Sam. 22. 1. Or, becauſe Ieruſalem, as the principall place both of Church and State in Iudah; Pſal. 76. 1, 2. and 122. 4, 5. ſo (which uſually falleth out in bad times) more diſordered then other parts of the land; and by her example, a leader of others into the like. Micah. 1. 5. Judah and Jeruſalem put here for the State and people of either. as verſ. 27. Chap. 2. 1. and 3. 1. Theſe are only here mentioned; becauſe unto them, chiefly, was the Prophet ſent. Chap. 6. 9. Albeit he propheſied of, at leaſt, if not unto other nations, beſides them. But that alſo, for the inſtruction, conſolation, or reprehenſion of Gods people: thoſe nations being, for the moſt part, ſuch as they either had been oppreſſed by, as Aſſur, and Babel, Chap. 10. & 13. Or had too much relyed upon: as Egypt, and Ethiopia; Chap. 20. & 30.

Judah] The name of Jacobs fourth Son by Leah; Gen. 29. 35. & 49. 8. whoſe poſterity alſo did bear his name. Deut. 33. 17. Jud. 1. 2, 3, 4. and alſo the land that fell to their lot; and wherein they abode. Jud. 17. 9. & 18. 12.

Jeruſalem] The name of a city in the land of canaan; formerly called Jebus; Judg. 19. 10. 1 Chr. 11. 4, 5. and Salem, Gen. 14. 18. Pſal. 76. 2. In regard whereof, ſome ſuppoſe it to have been called, in proceſs of time, from thoſe two terms put together: firſt, Jebuſalem, and then Jeruſalem. Others would have it ſo termed, as a formidable city, in regard of the ſtrength and impregnableneſs of it; as a place dangerous to be dealt with: 2 Sam. 5. 6. See Zach. 12. 2, 4, 6. Others, as a peaceable poſſeſſion, or a poſſeſſion of peace. See Hebr. 7. 2. and others, laſtly, and that moſt probable; as a place of ſpeciall providence: whereof ſee further, Chap. 22. 1. The word is ſometimes found in a duall form; becauſe the city was divided into two parts, the upper, and the lower. See Jer. 39. 3. And Joſephus of the Jewiſh war: l. 6. c. 13. or, becauſe it ſtood in the confines of two Tribes, Judah, and Benjamin; part of it belonging to the one Tribe, and part to the other, Joſh. chap. 15. verſ. 63. and 18. 28. Jud. 1. verſ. 21.

in the dayes] That is, the times, the reigns, as Hoſ. 1. 1. Amos 1. 1. the uſual manner of computation in Scripture, by dayes, Gen. 5. 4, 5, 8. & 47. 9. Pſal. 39. 4, 5. teaching us to make reckoning of every day, as being for every day accountable, Pſal. 90. 10, 12.

of Uzziah] Heb. Uzzijahu, (as Jeſhajahu, and Chizkijahu, before.) Greek, Ozias, Matth. 1. 8, 9. called alſo Azariah, 2 King. 15. 1. having, it ſeems, two names, as Ornan, the Jebuſite, 1 Chro. 21. 18. called alſo Araunah, 2 Sam. 24. 16. Jehojachin, 2 King. 24. 8. called alſo Jeconiah, 1 Chron. 3. 16. Jehojada, 2 Chr. 24. 20, 22. called alſo Barachias, Matth. 23. 25. and divers others. See Jer. 22. 11. Of this kings reign, ſee 2 King. 15. 1, 7. & 2 Chr. 26. Of his acts, it is ſaid, that this our Prophet wrote; but that book of his ſeems not now extant: no more then that of Jaſher, 2 Sam. 1. 18. and that of Jeremie, 2 Chro. 35. 25. For it cannot well be underſtood of that ſhort abridgment, in ſo few verſes comprized, in the ſecond book of the Kings; and coming ſo far ſhort of that larger relation in the ſecond of the Chronicles, where yet it is mentioned, as relating much more, then is there upon record.

Jotham] Of his reign, ſee 2 King. 15. 32, 38. 2 Chro. 27. 1, 7.

Ahaz] Heb. Achaz: as Achab. And ſo the Greek, Matth. 1. 9. as Rachab alſo there, v. 5. Of his wicked reign, ſee 2 King. 16. & 2 Chr. 28.

and Hezekiah] Heb. here, Jechizkijahu: and Mic. 1. 1. Jechizkijah. Though moſt commonly Chizkijahu, as chap. 36. 1. and 38. 1. and ſometime Chizkijah, as 2 King. 18. 1, 10. Greek, Ezekias, Matth. chap. 1. ver. 9, 10. Of his religious reign, ſee 2 King. chap. 18. 19. and 20. and 2 Chro. from chap. 29. unto chap. 32. as alſo of ſome good part of it, in this Prophecie, from chap. 36. unto chap. 39. He being the laſt King mentioned under whom Iſaiah propheſied, it may be probably hence gathered, that the Prophet Iſaiah did not ſurvive Hezekiah: and conſequenly, that he ſuffered not under Manaſſes, as is commonly, but groundleſly held.

Kings of Judah] That is, of the Kingdom, or State of Judah, conſiſting of that tribe, with thoſe of Benjamin that adhered unto it: ſo tearmed, as diſtinguiſhed from the other ten tribes, commonly called by the name of Iſrael; after their revolt from the houſe of David, under Rehoboam, 1 King. 11. 31, 32. & 12. 16, 17. So Jer. 3. 8. Hoſ. 4. 15. Some ſuppoſe, that the Sermons, or Prophecies in this book recorded, are diſpoſed, and digeſted in order ſucceſſively, according to the times and reigns of the kings here mentioned: but of that there is no great certainty. See v. 2. Nor do we finde the like in the writings of the other Prophets obſerved. See Jer. 27. 1.

V. 2. Heare, &c.] Here beginneth Iſaiah's firſt Sermon, or Prophecie, contained in this Book; and that concluded in this Chapter: which yet to ſome, ſeems not to have been the firſt in time, after his deſignment to his office. See verſ. 7, 8. (where the deſolations, mentioned ſeem to have reference unto Ahaz his time:) and Chap. 6. 1, 8. In it the Lord firſt arraigneth this people; as in the view of the whole world, of extream unthankfulneſs, ſtupidity and brutiſhneſs in their carriage towards him: Verſ. 2. 4. as alſo of deſperate obſtinacy under his hand, that had been ſo heavy upon them, for their ſins: verſ. 5. 9. Secondly, acquainteth them with the cauſe, why their ſacrifices and ſervices found no acceptance at all with him. verſ. 10, 15. Thirdly, Inviteth them to a friendly debate, propounding them terms of compoſition, and reconcilement. verſ. 16, 10. Fourthly, complaineth of a ſtrange alteration with them, in their Rulers eſpecially, for the worſe. verſ. 21, 23. Fiftly, promiſeth a reſtitution of them, upon their ſincere and ſerious reformation, verſ. 25, 27. and withall denounceth deſtruction unto thoſe of them that ſhall ſtill perſiſt in their wicked courſes, verſ. 24, 28, 31.

heare O heavens, and hearken O earth] The fore-mentioned arraignment of them the Prophet makes entrance into, with a ſolemn conteſtation: wherein heaven, and earth, the whole frame of the creature, Gen. 1. 1. are ſummoned, and called upon: as to appear, and bear witneſs in Gods behalf againſt his people, as Deut. 4. 26. & 30. 19. & 31. 28. ſo to hear, and to take notice of Gods charge given in againſt them: as Mic. 6. 1, 2. Thereby implying them to be ſo extream obſtinate, and ſenſeleſs; that the very liveleſs creatures were more ready to hear, and obey Gods word, then they, Num. 20. 8. Pſal. 105. 31. 34. & 107. 25. & 147. 15, 18. Mat. 8. 26, 27. And their carriage towards God ſo vile, baſe, and abominable, as might well make the very liveleſs and ſenſeleſs creatures to abhorr it, and to be aſtoniſhed at it.

Ier.2.12. Luk.19.40. Howbeit ſome by Heavens, here underſtand the bleſſed Angels; whoſe abode is in heaven ; as Iob 15.15. Pſal.97.6,7. By Earth, people living on the ſurface of the earth: as Pſal.96.9,13.& 98.9. As if men, and Angels, were both appealed unto, for the hearing, and deciding of the controverſie between God, and his people . ſo Chap.5.3. Ier.2.9,10. But the former ſeems the ſounder, and more ſimple expoſition. In like manner doth Moſes begin his ſong: Deut.32.1. as Iſaiah here this propheſie: for frivolous and ridiculous is that conceit of the Chaldee Paraphraſt there, that Moſes ſhould ſay : Attend, O heaven, and hear, O earth ; becauſe he was neer to heaven, and far from the earth ; whereas Iſaiah ſaith, hear, O heaven, and attend, O earth : Becauſe he was farther from heaven, and nearer the earth ; whereas it is well known , that the words are promiſcuouſly uſed ; and either of them as well to thoſe afar off, as to thoſe that are neer at hand : See Pſal.5.1,2. & 17.1. and 49.1. verſ.10. Chap.28.23.

heavens] Or, heaven. As it is well rendred, Gen.1.1.1. Kings,8.23. Chap.49.13. & 66.1. For, though the word have a duall form ; ſuppoſed to have its appellation, from the waters, therein contained , whoſe name is alſo deemed to have the like form, in regard of thoſe two general receptacles of water, the one above in the clouds , the other below in the ſea : and other parcels , that either environ the earth, or ſhoot themſelves into it : Gen.1.6,7. And it be not denied , that there is mention in Scripture of more heavens, then one : Deut. 10.14. 1 King. 8.27. Pſal.148.4. Yet neither is that notation certain, or the deduction, and compoſition ſo exact. And we reade of more, then two heavens: a third, 2 Cor.12.2. and both in Hebrew , and other languages , many words are found, that under a plurall form bear but a ſingular ſenſe ; as that of water among other. verſ.22,30.

O earth] Not the Inhabitants of the earth , as Pſal.2.10. & 33.8. but the earth it ſelf, as Ier.6.19.& 22.29.

for the Lord] Not man, but God ; not the Prophet , but the Lord : 1 Theſſ.2.13. Heb.13.7. not the Herald, or crier : Chap.44.3. Mar.1.3. but the King and Judg, Chap. 33.22. By whoſe command, and authority , and in whoſe name, and perſon,he ſpeaks : Chap.6.1,9.& 40.1,6. He that ſpeaks by him, and in him. Acts.4.25. 2 Cor.13.3.

the Lord] Heb. Iehovah. as Pſal.83. 18. The only true God. Deut.6.5. who alone hath his being of himſelf, Exod 3.14. Chap.43.11,13. and giveth being to all things. Act. 17.25,28. Rom.11.36. Rev.4.11. See Exod.6.3. Chap. 26.4.

hath ſpoken] Or, doth ſpeak, ſpeaks. As Amos.1.3, 6. & 3.8. Or, is about to ſpeak ; (as periſh, for, about to periſh, ready to periſh. Prov.31.6. Chap.27.13. And ſay,for, am about to ſay, 1 Cor.10.15.) And requires therefore all due attention. as chap.41.1. Which if Moſes require, when he ſpeaks : though by Gods appointment, yet in his own perſon : Deut. 32.1. Surely Iſaiah , ſpeaking in Gods own perſon, much more.

I have nouriſhed] God beginnes this his conteſtation with his people , with a recitall of his ſingular favours conferred on them, and continued unto them : in a more eſpecial manner, then unto many, yea, unto any other people. Deut.7.6. & 10.15. & 26.18. Pſal.147.20.

nouriſhed] Or, nurſed. Heb. reared , brought up. So is the word uſed, Job.31.18. Chap.23.4.& 51.18. I have from their firſt beginning to be a people, while they were yet in Egypt, as an abject infant, diſregarded, and not looked after, taken them up, undertaken the charge of them : provided for them, protected them , ſupplyed them with all neceſſaries, had as tender a care of them, as parents are wont to have of their children,untill they come to their full growth, or to mans eſtate; chap.46.3,4. Ezek.16.7,14. Hoſ.11.3. children] The people of Iſrael, whom he had adopted to be his peculiar ones, his children. Deut.32.6,14. chap. 63.8.

and brought them up] As Chap.23.4. Or, advanced,exalted: As 1 Sam.2.7. Ezek.31.4. And this rather here : becauſe that was,before, not implyed only, but expreſſed : and this latter ſeems to be a further addition to the former. I have not only brought them up, but preferred, honoured, advanced them, by entring into a ſolemn covenant with them, taking them to be ſo neer to me,committing my ſacred oracles to them ſetting my place of ſpeciall reſidence among them, working ſtrange, and unheard of miracles for them ; and raiſing them up to a kingdome of great note , and renown. Deut.4.6,7,8,32,36.Ezek.16.8,14. Pſal.135.4.& 147.19,20.& 148.14. Chap.42.21. Rom.3.1,2.& 9.4,5. For neither can I aſſent to the Iewiſh Doctor that confoundeth this with the former, expounding both of advancement onely : and much leſs approve of his fathers nice diſtinction, reſtraining the the former, unto Gods giving them his Law ; [illegible] the latter to the ſetling of his Sanctuary among them, Pſal. 76.1,2. Chap.[illegible] and they have rebelled againſt me] After the relation of Gods goodneſs towards them , follows a narration of their unworthy demeanour towards him, who hath dealt ſo graciouſly, and bountifully with them: The one much aggravating the guilt of the other, Deut.32.10,18. 1 Sam.2.27,29. chap.63.9,10. Ezek.16.7,20. Amos 2.9,13.

and] Or, but. The copulative, for the adverſative , as ver. 20,21.

rebelled] As the word is uſed, 2 King. 3.7. & 8.20. or, tranſgreſſed : as it is rendered,chap.43.27. Jer. 33.8. yet diſobedience and tranſgreſſion is as rebellion, ch.63.10. 1 Sam. 15.22,23.

have rebelled] Or, as it may well be rendered, do rebell, as v. 3. know, know not, conſider not : as noting, not only their fore-paſſed rebellions, but their perſiſting ſtill in them, Jer. 2.25.

againſt me] I ſet them up, and they ſet themſelves againſt me. So Num.16.9,11.

V. 3. The ox knoweth,&c.] The very bruit-beaſts, and the dulleſt of them (Pſal..32.9. Prov.7.22. & 26.3.) are brought in,by their carriage and courſes toward their maſters, as benefactors, ſuch as feed them and make much of them ; to controll, and condemn the demeanor of Gods people towards him, who took no notice of, nor regarded him that had done the like , and much more,for them, v.2. So Jer.8.7.

ox knoweth] Or, oxen know : ox, for oxen ; and aſſe, for aſſes ; as viſion, for viſions , ver. 1. and the like, verſ. 6. For thoſe popiſh legendaries groſly and palpably abuſe this place, who out of it, have forged us a fable of an ox, and aſſe; that being in the ſtable, where our Saviours Mother was delivered of him,ſhould take notice of him,and cheriſh him with their warm breath, as he lay in the cratch.

knoweth] takes notice of, regards ; as Prov.12.10. chap. 42. 25. They ſo regard him,as not to offer to hurt,or wrong him; but are obſequious to him, however they be fierce, and offenſive to others, Exod.21.28,31.

his owner] Or, buyer. Him, properly,that by bargain and ſale, (Levit.25.28. chap.24.2. Ezek.7.12.) or more largely, that any way, or by any means, is poſſeſſed of him, Zach.11. 5. It is given to God, as Lord and owner of all things,Gen. 14.19,22. but more ſpecially, as by purchaſe , the Poſſeſſor of his people, Deut.32.6.

and the aſſe] The word here uſed , properly ſignifies the male ; as another the female ; but are both promiſcuouſly uſed, as well for the one ſex, as the other. As the word that ſignifies a fiſh, is uſed ſometime in the maſculine form ; ſometime in the feminine, of one and the ſame fiſh, Jon. 1. 17. & 2. 1. whatſoever the doting Rabbins there dream of two fiſhes, a male, and a female. The word is uſed generally, to comprehend all of that kinde, of whether ſex , or for what uſe ſoever, as here, ſo elſewhere, Exod.21.33. as well thoſe for burden, Gen. chap.49. ver. 14. as for the ſaddle, Exo. 4. 20.

his maſter's crib] Heb. the manger of his maſters. For the word is in a plural forme ; but ſuch as is oft uſed in a ſingular ſence : as of God, Mal. 1. 6. So of man, Exod. 21. 29,36. He taketh notice of him that bringeth him to the crib , or manger, and feeds him there : and to ſuch an one God compareth himſelf, Hoſ.11.4. I was to them, as one that taketh the yoke off their jawes, and layeth them meat.

but Iſrael, &c.] The different , yea the contrary practice followeth, of Gods people towards God, as before, v. 2.

but] Or, yet. A defect of the particle adverſative, as v.6. Pſal. 30. 7.

Iſrael] The name given to Jacob, (as he was at firſt called, Gen. 25. 25.) upon his wraſtling with the Angel, and prevailing therein, Gen.32.28. Hoſ.12.3. and tranſmitted from him, as the more honourable title, to his poſterity ; called ſometime the ſons, or, children of Iſrael, Gen.32.32. & 36.31. and ſometime ſimply, Iſrael, Gen. 48. 20. & 49. 7,15. Pſal. 149. 2. and ſo here. But ſo here ſtiled in way of reproach , as having degenerated from him who firſt bare that name ; nor anſwering to what it imported. So Jeſhurun, though of it ſelf a name of honour, Deut.33.26. yet in way of exprobation, enunciated of that people, Deut.32.15.

doth not know] Heb. hath not known, ſee verſ.2. doth not know, hath no knowledg, or underſtanding: as Deut.31.13. Pſal.14.4. they are a people of no underſtanding, Pſal.53.4. ſo ch. 44. 18. they know not, nor underſtand. They have no more knowledg, nor underſtanding , then the bruit beaſts; Ier.10. 8,14.(whom yet,being endued by God with reaſonable ſouls, they ought therein, to go beyond : Iob.35.11.) yea, herein they come ſhort of them. Or, doth not know me, is ignorant of me: as Ier.4.22. & 9.3. they know not me, ſaith the Lord.

and, there is no knowledg of God in the land, Hoſ.4.1. But know here rather, for, take notice of, reſpect, acknowledg; as Pſal.1.6. Prov.27.23. Ier.2.23. Mat.7.23.& 25.12. know not me: a defect of the pronoun neceſſarily ſupplyed, to make the ſenſe perfect, as verſ.15. They know not me, though their owner. Deut.32.6. their maſter. Mal.1.6. One, that from time to time have fed them; and moſt kindly entreated them. Deut.8.3,4.& 32.13,14. They know not me, whom I have known above others, Amos.3.2.

my people] Who have been better taught then others, having been trained up under me. Deut.4.8, 14. Pſal.147.19,20. And to whom I have been more beneficial, then to any other. Pſal.105.11,45. Mal 1.2,3. doth not conſider] As the word is rendred, Pſal37.10.& 52.15. Or, underſtood; as it is tranſlated, Pſal. 107.43. either, they are of no underſtanding, as before, chap.27.11. Ier.5.4,21. They are more blockiſh, and ſottiſh, then the bruit beaſts: they have not ſo much underſtanding as they have; Ier.8 7. Or, they conſider not the great things that God hath done for them: nor the great goodneſs that he hath from time to time ſhewed them. Deut.29 2,3,4. Pſal.92.5. chap.42.18,20. Ezek.12.2. they neither take notice of him, nor think upon him.

V 4. Ah ſinful nation] He proceedeth here to aggravate their ſins, and to bewaile their miſery, thereby procured: ſo chap.24.16,18. Ier.9.1, 2,3.

ah] The word here uſed, is ſometimes a note of compellation; as chap.55.1. ſometime of denunciation, as chap.5.8, 11,18,20. (See chap.10.5. & 18.1.) and ſo ſome take it in this place; ſometime of lamentation, as 1 Kings.13.30. chap.6.5. Ier.22.18. And ſo rather here: but ſometimes mixt with indignation as; verſ.21. and with ſo deteſtation, as chap.28.1 And ſo it may well alſo be in this paſſage.

ſinfull] Addicted, and given wholly to ſin, and to looſeneſs of life: Pſal.1.1,5. Luk.7.34,37. John 9.31. Gal.2.15.

nation] The term uſually given to thoſe people that lived without the pale of the Church: and were ſtrangers from the common-wealth of Iſrael. Eph.2.12. ſo Pſal96.5. chap.11.10, & 42.6.& 61.9.& 66.19. Ier.10.2,25. And which the Iews to this day, are wont in way of reproach, to ſtile all other by, but their own. The Prophet may the rather ſeem here to have uſed it; thereby partly to imply, that they had made themſelves no better, if not in ſome reſpect worſe, then any other people, in Gods repute, by their ſins and exerciſes. Ier.9.25,26. Ezek.5.6,7. And partly, to intimate the generality of their ſin, and apoſtacy; which not ſome few, or more among them, but the main body of the nation, ſtood guilty of. It was a generall defection, a national evill. chap.59.4. & 64.6,7. Ier.5.1. & 9.2. Mic.7.2,4. Mal.3.9. ſee verſ.6.

a people laden with iniquity] Heb. a people of heavineſs of iniquity. Not laden with ſin, as groaning under the burthen of it: as Pſal.38.4. Mat.11.28. But committing, and ſtanding guilty of, not ſmal ſo much, as heavy and hainous ſins: heavy, for, great, and grievous: as chap.21.15.& 30.27.&.36.2. Great, and grievous ſinners: ſuch as the Sodomites: Gen.13.13.& 18.20. and as Elies ſons are ſaid to have been, 1 Sam.2.17.

a ſeed of evill doers] A wicked, and wretched race, that tread, and run on in the footſteps of their ungodly progenitors; and tranſmit their ungodlineſs unto thoſe that come of them. Num.32.14. Pſal.78.8.& 106.6. chap.57.3. Ier.7.18,26.& 16.11,12.

children that are corrupters] Or, as ſome, corrupt children, children, that deal corruptly, 2 Chron.27.2. Ier.6.28. Or, that have corrupted themſelves. Exod.32.7. Deut.32.5. and their doings: Zeph.3.7. Heb. children corrupting, or, corrupters, that is, waſtfull: or, waſters; as Prov.18.9. or, deſtroyers, as Prov.28.24. ſtroy-goods; or waſtfull children. A metaphor taken from riotous, and prodigall yonkers; that waſte, and conſume their patrimony, the meanes left them by their parents. Luk.15.13,30. Applyed to this people, as having embezeled their ſpirituall patrimony, derived and tranſmitted to them, from their religious predeceſſors. Gen.17 7. Deut.7.6,8.& 32.9,10. Pſal.147.19,20.& 148.14. Rom.3.1.& 9 4,5.

they have forſaken the Lord] By refuſing to walk according to the preſcript of his Law: and by following falſe Gods, and addicting themſelves unto the ſervice of ſuch, verſ.28. Ier.1.16. & 2.13.& 16.11. & 22.9. See chap.2.6.

the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. See verſ.2.

they have provoked unto anger] As Num.14.11, 23.& 16.30. Or deſpiſed, contemned, ſet light by: as Deut.31.20. Pſal.107,11. Prov.1.30. & 15.5. or, abhorred, as Deut.32.19. 1 Sam.2 17. Ier.14.21. or, reproached, blaſphemed, as 2 Sam.12.14. Pſal.10.13.& 74.10,18. chap.52.5. They ſo carried themſelves, in their wicked courſes, ſinning with an high hand; Num.15.30,31. As if they did what they did, on purpoſe, to provoke God to wrath. chap.3.8.& 65.3. Ier.7.18,19.& [illegible] of Iſrael] Who was in covenant with them, and was to be worſhipped, and ſerved by them: Deut.6.5,6.& 26.27,28. ſo Pſal.89.18. Of the name, See verſ.3.

the holy one] The holy God, or Lord; a defect of the ſubſtantive, as chap.5.19,24. ſo verſ.24. to be ſupplyed: as chap.5.16. he, who both is holy himſelf, Chap.6.3. and ſanctifieth thoſe that are his, Levit.19.2.& 20.7,8. Ezek.20.12.

they are gone away backward] Heb. they are ſevered, or alienated, or eſtranged backward. That is, they are ſevered, or alienated, (to wit, from him) and turned backward; or, gone, or, go backward: A defective ſpeech; the like whereunto ſee chap.38,14,17,21. as alſo in the like argument, Hoſ.9,10. they are ſevered, or, have ſeperated themſelves (to wit, from the Lord) unto that ſhame, or, ſhameful thing; that is, and betaken themſelves to it.

gone away] Or, alienated: they have ſevered, or eſtranged themſelves from God by their ſins. Pſal. 58.3. chap.59.2. Eph.4.18,19. Col.1.21. by their Idolatry eſpecially. Ezek.14.5,7. Where yet the ſame word is rendered, eſtranged, in the former place; and ſeperateth himſelf, in the latter place: as if the words there uſed, came from two ſeverall roots. And in like manner the Iewiſh Criticks, ſpeak doubtfully of the word here uſed; one while referring it to that root, that hath a notion of ſeperation: Levit.22.2. An other while to that which hath a notion of alienation, Job.19 13. Pſal.78.30. But whether way we here take it, it will come in effect to one: ſeparation, and eſtrangement, in the preſent caſe, being in a manner the ſame.

backward] It ſeems a metaphor taken, either, from undutifull children, or ſervants; that turn their back on their parents, or maſters, in diſdain, when they like not what they are bidden to do: Ier.2.27. & 15 6. & 32.33. Ezek.8.16. Or, from reſtive jades, that go the more backward, the more the rider, or driver, ſtrives to put them on forward: See verſ.5.

V 5. Why ſhould ye be ſtricken any more? ye will revolt more, and more] Or, it may be read, as one continued ſentence, Thus, Why, the more ye are ſtricken, do ye more and more revolt? Or, why ſhould ye be ſtricken any more; ſince ye will, or do, revolt more and more? What availeth it, to ſeek, or ſtrive to amend you, by chaſtiſements: (Gen.6.3. Pſal.95.10,11. Ier.5.3.) when as the more you are chaſtiſed, the worſe ye wax: 2 Chr.28.22. Ier.7.24.

ſtricken] With variety of judgments: which are as Gods rods, or ſtrokes. Deut.28.22,27,28. 2 Sam.7.14. Pſal.89.32 Amos.4.9. Mic.6.9.

ye will] Or, ſince that ye will; a defect of the particle, as Iob.32..22.& 38.21.

will] Or, do; the future, for the preſent; as Deut.25.3. Ruth.1.17. 1 Sam.3.17. See chap.3.16.

revolt more and more] Heb. encreaſe; or, add revolt: as verſ.13. chap.7.10. Clean contrary to that which God intended in ſmiting them: he ſmote them to reclaim them, and bring them home to him; chap.9.12,13. Amos.4.6,11. And they took occaſion thereby, to go further away from him. Ier.44.17,18,21,22. See verſ.4.

the whole head is ſick] The whole ſtate, both civill, and eccleſiaſticall, is diſtempered, and out of frame: and thoſe worſt, and weakeſt, that ſhould ſupport and ſtrengthen the reſt; Pſal.75.3.& 82.5. So ſome, underſtanding it of their exceſs of ſinne, and wickedneſs; in ſuch eſpecially, as were as the head, and heart of the State: Num.25.4. Mic.3.1,9. But it ſeems rather to be ſpoken of their lamentable condition; by meanes of Gods judgments inflicted on them, for their ſins.. The evils, that have befallen, and lye ſtill heavy upon you, are both general; few or none eſcaping ſcot-free in them; and withall ſore, and grievous, like hurts received (Gen.3.15. Pſal.68.21.) or diſeaſes lying in the head. 2 Kings 4.19,20. Or, ſuch as ſtrike, and pierce to the heart; Ier.4.18,19.& 8.18.

the whole head] Or, every head: as Ezek.29.18.

is ſick] Heb. unto ſickneſs: or, in ſickneſs. For ſo the particle here uſed, is obſerved, oft to ſignifie, Pſal.16.10. Hoſ.7.2. In a lamentable plight; in a grievous diſeaſe: 2 Chr.21.18. Pſal.38.7. The phraſe is emphatical: as in ſinne; in iniquity. Pſal.51.5. Ioh.9.34. In the gall of bitterneſs; and in the bond of iniquity. Act.8.23. Not lightly touched with it, but wholly poſſeſſed of it.

and the whole heart] As noting the extremity of the evill. Pſal.22.14.& 25.17.& 102.4. Or, every heart; as implying the generality of it, ſee verſ. 4. chap.2.9. The Iewiſh Doctor referreth it to that commination, Deut.28.28.

is faint] It is, as with women in their infirmity of courſe. Lev.15.33.& 20.18. or, languiſhing, Lam.1.22. & 5.17. As with thoſe that pine away, through grief, or affliction, or by meanes of ſome lingring and waſting diſeaſe. Deut.7.15.

[illegible] 1 Sam.23.4. Lam.2.23.

V.6. From the ſole of the foot, even unto the head] Ye have been ſo ſcourged, over and over, that there is no part free, from top, to toe: a proverbiall ſpeech; the uſe whereof, ſee 2 Sam.14.25. Iob.2.7. The meaning is; that in the calamities, and afflictions, which in thoſe times had befallen them, none had eſcaped Gods hand; but all, as well greateſt and higheſt, as leaſt and loweſt, had ſuffered: they had been plagued all, one with another: 2 Chron.28.5,8.

the ſole] The Hebrew word ſignifies, bending, or, hollow; and it is applyed ſometimes to the foot, as here, the ſole. Deut.2.5. & 11.24. Sometimes to the hand, the palm, Lev.14.15, 26,19. Sometimes to the thigh, the hollow, wherein the huckle bone reſteth. Gen.32.25,32.

even] Heb. and: as Deut.4.32.

unto the head] Incluſively, taking it in with the reſt of the body: as 2 Chron.34.30. Pſal.143. Ier.8.10. Elſe-where more fully: unto the top; or crown of the head. Deut.28.35. Iob 2.7.

there is no ſoundneſs] Or, nothing, no part ſound: ſo is the word uſed, Exod.19.1. Lev.9.2,3. Or, as ſome, there is no ſhape of a man: for, ſo is the word taken, Iud.20.48. He compareth the Iewiſh State, to a mans body; ſo generally poſſeſſed with ſome malignant diſeaſe, that no part of it is ſound, or free, either from the inward taint, or the outward ſymptomes thereof: or to ſuch a body, as either by the like malignity, or by ſore and oft ſcourging, or evill uſage otherwiſe, is with tumors, and ulcers, ſo overſpread, that no ſhape, or figure of a man, almoſt, appeares on it. So Pſal.38.3,7. where the very ſame phraſe, is found.

but wounds] The adverſative particle is wanting, as verſ.3.

wounds] Heb. wound; taken collectively, as Prov.20.30. So bruiſe, and ſore, or ſtripe, and ſtroke, afterwards, of which ſee, verſ.1. viſion. & verſ.3. ox, and aſſe. Yet there ſeems to be ſome emphaſis in it: nothing but wound, and bruiſe, ſtripe, or mark: as if the party were ſo be-martyred, as we uſe to ſay, that the whole body might ſeem to be, but as one wound, one ſtripe, one ulcer, one tumour, one ſore.

bruiſes] Heb. bruiſe. The word properly ſignifies the mark of a ſtripe formerly given; remaining ſtill to be ſeen on the body. Pſal.38.5. Prov.20.30. chap.53.5. The Iewiſh criticks thus diſtinguiſh this and the former. A wound, ſay they, is that which maketh a breach in the fleſh, and bringeth out blood; a bruiſe, ſuch as makes no breach in the skin or fleſh, but coagulateth the blood under the skin.

putrifying ſores] Heb. moiſt. That is, either green hurts; as a green jawbone, Judg.15.15. New hurts, lately made. Or, as other mattier: moiſt with mattier: ſuch as old feſtered ſores uſe to be. The word is ſaid to be in Arabick writers, uſed for a green wound: but in the Talmudick language, ſaith one of the Iewiſh commenters, for a mattery ſore.

ſores] Heb. ſtroke; as Lev.26.21. Chap.14.7.& 27.7. Ier.30.12. ſee verſ.5. ſtroke, for ſtrokes, as before; So verſ.13.

they have not been, &c.] No means, at leaſt, available, have been uſed for the cure or removall of theſe evils wherewith our State is thus ſurpriſed, and defaced, ſee 2 Chron.28.13. Expreſſed here by metaphoricall phraſes, borrowed from the art and practice of chirurgery: the like whereunto are found, Pſal.60.2.& 147.3. chap.3.7. Ier.30.12,13.

cloſed] To make up the wound, or the breach in the body: chap.30.26. Or, cruſht, rather: (for ſo the word properly ſignifies) as chap.59.5. or, wrung out. As Jud.6.38. To expreſs, and force out the mattier: as in feſtered ſores, where the corrupt mattier muſt be removed, before they be cloſed, or made up. Yet one of the Iewiſh commenters ſeemeth to underſtand it of waſhing: as wounds are wont to be, commonly, before they be cloſed: referring us to Job.18.15. Brimſtone ſhall be ſcattered upon his habitation. And then it would be rendered ſprinkled, or ſyringed: but the roots are divers. And another, whom he alſo citeth, it too large, who rendreth it, healed; building on, Ier.30.13. Whereof in its place.

neither bound up] as wounds and ſores are wont to be, when the purulent mattier is wrought out; to keep out winde, and aire: and to cauſe the lips of the wound, or ſore, to ſodder. Chap.3.7.& 61.1. Ezek.30.21. Hoſ.6.1.

neither mollified] Pſal.55.21.

with ointment] Heb. oyle. As Eccleſ.7.1.& 9.8. To aſſwage the ſwellings: and to ſupple the ſores. Ezek.16.4.

V 7. Your country] Or, land. Heb. earth: as chap.2.19, 21. He proceeds to declare the miſerable condition of their State; by the lamentable devaſtation, and deſolation of their land. So Ier.4.23,26.

is] The verb ſubſtantive to be ſupplied; underſtanding, in the preſent tenſe, as; underſtanding it of ſuch waſtes as had already been made of it, by the Syrians, and others joyning with the Iſraelites, under Ahaz: 2 Chron.28. Otherwiſe underſtand it, in the future; ſhall be: ſuppoſing it a prediction of an evill to come: but the former is rather to be admitted, ſee verſ.5.

deſolate] Heb. deſolation. That is, moſt deſolate: and deſolate, as deſolation it ſelf. ſo chap.64.10. The abſtract for the concrete, as Ier.22.16. Ezek.29.12 & 33.29. Or, brought unto deſolation: as Jer.12.11. or, is in deſolation, the particle wanting: as Job.1.18. In deſolation, as in ſick-neſſe, verſ.5, ſee chap.3.26.

your cities are burnt] By the enemy; either in the ſurpriſall of them, or afterward, in the extremity of rage, to ſatisfie their fury: or, that they might not be places of refuge, or habitation again, to thoſe that formerly held them. Joſh.11.11. Ier.39.8,10.

your land] your ground: Or, tilled land. Gen.2.5.& 3.17. & 4.2,12.

ſtrangers] The Syrians, Edomites, Philiſtims, and others, 2 Chr.28.5,17,18. chap.9.12.

devour it] That is, conſume, and eate up the fruit of it: Deut.28.33,51,53. Ier.5.17. It, or your land; for, the fruit of it: as, the tenth of the land. Lev.27.30. For the tenth of the fruit of it. Deut.26.12. See Lev.26.16. Ier.5.17.

in your preſence] Heb. before you. Before your faces, in your ſight, to increaſe your grief, being unable, either to reſcue ought from them, or to reſtrain their rage. Deut.28.32,33,34,51,52.

and it is deſolate, as overthrown by ſtrangers] Heb. according to the overthrow of ſtrangers. That is, ſay ſome of the Iewiſh Doctors, ſuch as thoſe of Sodom and Gomorrah, verſ.9. people eſtranged from the fear of God, who were therefore overthrown by God, and ſo the word overthrown ſhould be taken paſſively. Ier.49.18. But rather, as ſtrangers are wont to overthrow a land, making havock of all before them, as being none of their own; nor like long to enjoy it: And ſo it is taken actively, as Ier.50.40. Amos.4.11. See the like phraſe, Deut.29.23. chap.13.19. But as thoſe Iewiſh Doctors pervert the ſenſe; ſo thoſe of them alſo corrupt the text, that in ſtead of the word that ſignifies ſtrangers, would ſubſtitute another ſomewhat like it; that ſignifies a ſtorm: Chap.25.4. & 28.2. As alluding to thoſe Egyptian ſtorms, Exod.9.23,25.

V 8. And &c] From the condition of the whole land, & State, he paſſeth here unto the State of the chiefe city, ſee Ier 15.8. & 34.1.

the daughter of Zion] Or, the daughter Zion. Pſal.9.15. Zach.2.10. & 9.9. As the daughter of Zidon. or, the daughter Zidon. chap.23.12. (for ſo it would rather be rendred) for Zion it ſelf, and Zidon it ſelf. Or, if it be the former way rendred, it is no otherwiſe to be underſtood; then as when we ſay, the city of Rome, and, the city of London; and the Evangeliſt, the feaſt of paſſover: Luk.2.41. And the Apoſtle Paul, the ſign of circumciſion, Rom.4.11. that is, circumciſion, which is a ſign, or, for a ſign: and ſo Zion, that is as a daughter; becauſe the ſpeech is metaphoricall: ſee chap.5.1. For, they are far out of the way, who by daughter of Zion, conceit to be meant (which conceit yet ſome great ones ſeem taken with) either a parcel of buildings, branching out of the old Zion; or, the whole nether city, as deſcending from, or iſſuing out of it: not conſidering, how abſurd a thing it is, to imagine, that from ſome inferiour, and meaner part, the denomination, as here it is, ſhould be given to the whole city: nor obſerving, or attending, at leaſt, the uſuall manner of Scripture: wherein great cities, and States, as compared to goodly, and beautifull daughters, or damſels, are commonly ſo ſtiled: See of Babel, Chap.47.1. Of Egypt, Ier.47.11. Of Edom, Lam.4.21. And of others, elſe-where. Though of Zion, it is not improbable, that God in a more ſpeciall manner, doth here ſo ſpeak: as the Prophet in the like, Ier.9.1. Becauſe, as dear to him, as a daughter: (ſee chap.22.4.) That which makes the miſery the more ſtrange, and grievous: that one ſo dear to God, ſhould be ſo deſtroyed, or diſtreſſed. Lam.1.15,& 2.1, 2,& 4.12.

Zion] That is, Ieruſalem. So termed, from a principall part of it; to wit, that mountain, or upper-part. 2 Sam.5.6,7. Wherein both Gods temple, and the Kings Palace, were ſeated: Pſal.2.6.& 48.2. Zach.9.9. See chap.2.2,3. & 14.12.

is left] Not by the keeper, that is, God, Pſal.121.4,5 the keeper of Iſrael; as ſome of the Iewiſh commenters expound it: but left ſtanding alone by it ſelf, as other of them better: like ſuch a lodge, or cottage hereafter deſcribed, that hath no other houſing uſually about it, or neer it: and ſo Ieruſalem; all about her being deſtroyed, and laid waſte; either, as ſome of them apply it, by the Aſſyrian invaſion, ch. 7. 17, 20. and 36. 1, 2. or rather, by the waſte of the land, made in Ahaz his reign, by the Syrians and Iſraelites, 2 Chro. 28. 5, 8, 17, 20.

as a cottage in a vineyard] As a ſhed, or, a booth, ſet up in the midſt, or on the one ſide of the vineyard, for the keeper there to watch, or repoſe himſelf in, Job. 27. 18. ch. 4. 6.

as a lodg] Made for the gardiner to lodg, or reſt in, chap. 24. 20. Lam. 2. 6.

in a garden of cucumbers] Or, melons. A fruit frequent, as in Egypt, ſo in thoſe Eaſtern parts, Num. 11. 5. Howbeit it ſeemeth a meer nicety, which from the Chaldee Paraphraſt, one of the Jewiſh Doctors here hath, that it is not ſaid, in a garden, ſimply, but in a garden of melons, as before in a vineyard; becauſe, in a garden, there may be ſtill uſe and need of a keeper, though this, or that plant, or fruit be gone; whereas in a vineyard, or field of melons, when the grapes are gathered in the one, and the melons gone in the other, there is now no need or uſe of a keeper in either: For this is grounded upon a miſ-expoſition, before mentioned.

as a beſieged city] Heb. kept, watched. As Ezek. 6. 12. Or, as ſome, waſted, as chap. 65. 4. where ſome, as here alſo, ſtrain the word over far, to make it ſignifie, a place ſo defaced and horrid, that men ſhun it, and keep aloof from it for fear, as Pſalm. 30. 11. Nahum 3. 7. but the former rather: As deſolate, in regard of the country round about; ſo in great diſtreſs it ſelf, being ſo ſtraitned, that none can go in, or out, in ſafety, 1 King. 15. 17. 2. King. 6. 24, 25. and 18. 27. Jer. 4. 16, 17. and 5. 6.

V. 9. Except, &c.] From the devaſtation of the country, and diſtreſs of the city, he proceeds now to the conſumption of the people; appearing by the paucity of the perſons ſurviving. See ch. 4. 1.

the Lord] That all is not clean gone, and utterly deſtroyed, it is Gods gracious work, his great and meer mercy, Lam. 3. 22.

the Lord of hoſts] Heb. Jehovah Sabaoth. Which ſome ſuppoſe to be a defective form of ſpeech, thus to be ſupplyed, The Lord, or, Jehovah, the God of Hoſts, as Levit. 12. 5. But that needs not, ſince that we have the one without the other, frequently in the Prophets; ſo with the Apoſtles, Rom. 9. 29. Jam. 5. 4. Nor hinders it, that the word is not in a contracted form: for the word, Elohim, is alſo, oftimes, uſed in the very ſame phraſe entire: four times in one Pſalm, Pſal. 80. 4, 7, 14, 19. And this may be the priviledg of the word, Jehovah, that it admitteth no ſuch contraction: the rather, if it have (as may well be deemed) a prick, or point, in its laſt letter, as Jah, and Eloah, both have: which keepeth the word, ſo marked, alwaies entire. For the word it ſelf, ſee verſ. 2. The Jehovah, or, the Lord of hoſts. That is, the powerful, and Soveraign Commander of all the creatures, in heaven, and earth; which are, as his hoſte, ready preſt to do him ſervice, Gen. 2. 1. and 32. 1, 2. Joſh. 10. 11, 13. Judg. 5. 10, 11. Pſal. 68. 17. and 163. 21. and 119. 91. and 148. 8. chap. 14. 26, 27. Joel 2. 11, 25. Matth. 26. 33. Luk 2. 13. See further, verſ. 24.

had left unto us] Had reſcued, and reſerved ſome few of us, as brands ſnatched out of the fire, Amos 4. 11. Zach. 3. 2. That which God doth in mercy, that he may have ſome ever to ſerve him, and to be monuments of his mercy, Pſal. 130. 3. 4. chap. 4. 3. and 6. 13. Matth. 24. 21, 22. See Rom. 9. 27, 29.

unto us] The Prophet, very frequently, here varies the perſon, ſpeaking ſometime, as in the perſon of God, verſ. 23. Sometime, as in his own perſon, verſ. 4. Sometime in the perſon of his people; and ſo here: the uſual manner of pathetical ſpeeches.

a very ſmall remnant] An handful, in regard of the whole. A very poor, and ſorry company, in regard of thoſe that had periſhed in the calamities of the times, ch. 10. 22. and 17. 6. a remnant only, and that very ſmall. So is the word uſed, Pſal. 105. 12. Ezek. 16. 47. Yet ſome render it, almoſt, (and it is alſo frequently ſo uſed, Gen. 26. 10. Pſalm. 94. 12. and 119. 87.) referring it to the latter clauſe, We had almoſt been as Sodom, &c. But the pointing in the original, carrieth it rather the other way.

we ſhould have been as Sodom, and we ſhould have been like unto Gomorrah] We ſhould have been utterly ruinated, and conſumed; (none, or nothing left of us) as thoſe Cities, and the Regions adjacent were, with all their inhabitants, Gen. 19. 24, 25. Deut. 29. 23. Lam. 4. 6. Amos 4. 11. The defect of the copulative, makes the ſentence the quicker, as verſ. 3, 4, 8. and needed not therefore to have been expreſſed.

V. 10. Hear] Here God begins to turn the tenor of his ſpeech, from the heaven and earth, unto thoſe, whom what he had before ſaid, concerned; to the Princes of Judah, and the people. And his ſpeech to them, he enters upon here, with a very tart and ſharp increpation; and continueth, afterward, with no leſs vehement and paſſionate expoſtulation, verſ. 11, &c. Nor is this, as ſome have thought, the beginning of ſome new ſermon, but a continued purſuit of the former diſcourſe.

hear] Hear ye, whom that which I ſpeak, concerneth, ſo, Mich. 6. 1, 2, 3. Mal. 2. 1, 2.

the word of the Lord] The word of Me, who am the Lord, (Hebr. Jehovah.) So after here, verſ. 20. See ch. 2. 1.

ye Princes] Ye firſt, becauſe the worſt; and by your example encouraging others, to do evil. See v. 28.

of Sodom] Like them for wickedneſs, Deut. 32. 32. as bad as they, or worſe rather, Ezek. 16. 46, 48. and juſtly therefore deſerving to be deſtroyed, as they were. See verſ. 9. from whence he taketh the hint of the terms, here given.

give ear unto the law] Or, doctrine. Not the law delivered you ſometime by Moſes; but thoſe leſſons, (though conſonant to that) and that meſſage, which from God I now bring, and deliver unto you in his name. So the word, Law, is uſed, Pſal. 78. 1. Prov. 1. 8. and 3. 1, 21. and 6. 20.

of our God] The God whom we profeſs to ſerve, and whom, both you, and we, ought to hear and obey: ſo chap. 55. 7. Yet here ſpeaking to them who neither regarded to hear, nor take notice of him: he ſaith our God, as not theirs; who owned not him, verſ. 3. as God afterward; Your ſacrifices, as not his, becauſe not owned by him, from them, verſ. 11.

ye people of Gomorrah] People as like them, as if you were of the ſame lineage, as Ezek. 16. 3. and in the ſame repute with me, as Amos 9. 7.

Gomorrah] So Rom. 9. 29. Judg. 7. as Gaza, Act. 8. 26. Heb. Amorah, as Amots, v. 1.

V. 11. To what purpoſe is the multitude of your ſacrifices unto me, ſaith the Lord] Heb. upon what; or, for what. Not, as demanding, as ſome would have it, on what part he ſhould ſmite them; there being already no part free: nor, as others, with what new plague he ſhould ſmite them: as having tryed them with ſuch variety of Judgments already. But For; or, To, what, to wit, end? in plainer tearms: wherefore? or, why? as the ſame tearm is uſed, Pſal. 10. 1. But here the words run expreſly thus; To what end, or purpoſe, unto me? that is, either, brought to me? or, in regard of me? as if I liked them, or accepted of them. It is ſpoken in way of expoſtulation, as Jer. 6. 20. implying, that all they did in their daily devotions, was in vain, to no end; all but loſt labour: neither grateful to God, nor uſeful therefore to themſelves: not unaccepted with God only, but abhorred of him, and abominable in his ſight, v. 13.

is the multitude of your ſacrifices?] Or, your multitude of ſacrifices. That is, your many ſacrifices. As, a multitude of words, for, many words, Prov. 10. 19. and, thy multitude of witchcrafts: For, thy manifold witchcrafts, chap. 47. 12. Now ſuch ſacrifices as theſe, though God had commanded to be brought, and offered to him, as all the other duties enſuing, to be done; yet being done, as well the one, as the other, by ſuch as they were, and in ſuch manner as they did them, without hearty repentance, and due devotion: he refuſeth to own them, and accept them; he rejects them, as not his, but theirs. See v. 10. our God. So Pſal. 50. 8, 16. Prov. 15. 8. and 21. 27. chap. 61. 8. and 66. 3. Jer. 6. 20. & 7. 21. Amos 5. 21, 22. Mic. 6. 7.

I am full of] I am cloyed with them, as a man is with ſome meat which he loathes, and his ſtomack goes againſt, Pſal. 107. 18. Prov. 27. 7. and is ready, even to caſt up again, Prov. 25. 16. Rev. 3. 16.

the burnt-offerings] Such as were wholly conſumed with fire, Levit. 1. 3, 9. Pſal. 40. 6. & 51. 19. Mar. 12. 33. Heb. 10. 6.

of rams] Male-ſheep, above a year old. For, thoſe that came ſhort of that age, go under the name of lambs, Exod. 12. 5. Levit. 1. 10. Of lambs was the daily ſacrifice, Num. 28. 3. Of rams, thoſe in their principal ſolemnities, Num. 28. 11, 27. and upon ſome other ſpecial occaſions. Levit. 5. 15. & 6. 6. and 8. 2. 1 Sam. 15. 22. Pſal. 66. 15.

and of the fat] Not of the fleſh, or the body of the beaſt, (for that, the Hebrews have two other words to expreſs, Pſal. 63. 5. and 109. 24. and it might lawfully be eaten, Neh. 8. 10. chap. 25. 6. & 55. 2.) but the fat, or ſuet, that is about the flank, and the kidneys, or about, and upon the entrails, Levit. 3. 3, 4. which out of all the ſacrifices, was reſerved as Gods portion, to be burnt upon his altar, Levit. 3. 15, 16. & 4. 8, 10. & 17. 6. Deut. 32. 38. 1 Sam. 2. 15, 16. (alluded to, Pſal. 37. 20.) and is forbidden therefore to be eaten by any, Levit. 3. 17. & 7. 23, 25.

of fed beaſts] Not fat barely, but fatted of purpoſe, Luk. 15. 23, 27. the beſt and choyceſt ye can bring, 2 Sam. 6. 13. 1 King. 1. 9. Amos. 5. 22.

I delight not in] Heb. have not delighted. See v. 2, 3. Though he much delighted in the good affection, and obedience of his faithful people expreſſed in, and teſtified by ſuch performances, Gen. 4. 4. and 8. 21. Pſal. 20. 3. and 51. 19. Mal. 3. 4. Yet not at all, in the things themſelves ſimply conſidered, Pſalm. 50. 15. (howſoever the Gentiles had ſuch a fond and groſs conceit of him, as of their own falſe gods, Deut. 32. 37,38.) much leſs in them, by ſuch perſons, and in ſuch manner performed, ch. 57. 6. Jer. 7. 22, 23.

the blood] Reſerved, as the fat, to make atonement for their ſouls, Levit. 17. 11. As a type of the Meſſias his blood, whereby our propitiation, and peace with God is procured, and purchaſed, Rom. 3. 25. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14, 20. Hebr. 9. 12, 22. The principal cauſe of the prohibition of eating blood, Levit. 7. 26, 27. and 17. 10, 12.

of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he-goats] Of theſe three kinds of cattel only their ſacrifices were, bullocks, or heifers of the herd; ſheep or goates, of the flock, Gen. 15. 9. Levit. 1. 2, 3, 10. and 3. 23. Numb. 19. 1. Pſal. 50. 9. and 66. 15.

lambs] Becauſe rams were mentioned before, Pſalm, 37. 20.

he-goates] The hebrew word ſignifies the greater ſort of that kinde, chap. 14. 9. Jer. 50. 8. For there is another word that ſignifies ordinarily, Male-goates, Gen. 37. 31. Levit. 4. 23. and goates, in general, a third. Levit. 1. 10. and 3. 12. See before, fed beaſts.

V. 12. When ye come to appear before me] Which thrice a year, all their Males were enjoyned to do, Exo. 23. 17. and 34. 23. Deut. 16. 16. As alſo upon other occaſions, many of them, oft, at other times, did, 1 Sam. 10. 3. Pſal. 42. 2, 4. and 66. 13.

to appear] Heb. to be ſeen. As Exod. 34. 23. Deut. 31. 11. Which, though the ordinary phraſe of ſuch acceſs and approach; yet may here have ſome emphaſis, more then ordinary: as implying, that they repaired thither, onely to be ſeen there; and that was all the good that thereby they gained. So our Saviour of the Phariſees, Matth. 6. 2, 5, 16.

before me] In my houſe, in my temple: the place of my ſpecial reſidence, Deut. 12. 5, 11. Pſalm. 42. 2. and 84. 7. and 95. 2. Jer. 7. 10.

who hath required this] Or, who doth require it? As before, I delight not, verſ. 11. yet had he required it, Deut. 12. 5, 6. But not ſo much that, as other things, which he more regarded, Jer. 7. 21, 23. Ezek. 20. 39, 40. and that from ſuch as were accordingly qualified, Levit 10. 3. Ezek. 14. 3, 4. So that it is, as if he had ſaid; I neither deſire, nor require, either the company of you, or ought from you: What I required ſometime of my people, I require not now of you: being ſuch as you are, and coming ſo as ye do. Againſt whom, therefore, he wiſheth his temple-doors ſhut, Mal. 1. 10.

at your hand] Heb. from your hand. That is, of you, or, from you, as 2 Sam. 4. 11. Mal. 1. 9, 10, 13. Yet, there may here be ſome eye to their hands, being ſuch as he ſaith they were, 15.

to tread] Or, trample on. As ch. 63. 3. As if by repairing to his houſe, they did but trample upon the pavement of it, as a company of beaſts would do; and foul it only, and wear out the ſtones of it with their feet. That was all the good they did, or was gotten by their appearance there, Ezek. 23. 38, 39.

my courts] The cours of the Temple, or Sanctuary, Pſalm 84. 2. and 116. 19. which were principally two; the inner court, wherein the Prieſts and Levites miniſtred; and the outer court, wherein the people met, 2 Chr. 4. 9. Ezek. 40. 31, 44. Luk. 1. 10. This reproof therefore ſeems to reach the Prieſts, as well as the people. Howſoever, courts may be put for court, as chap. 62. 9. And the great court, into which the people had free acceſs, ſeems to have been divided into divers partions. See Jer. 26. 10. and that alſo is ſtiled the temple: for there they were whom our Saviour drove out, Mat. 21. 12, 14.

V. 13. Bring no more] Heb. add not to bring. as verſ. 5. chap. 23. 12. He would rather have none brought, then any brought in that manner: rather not be ſerved at all, then to be ſerved by ſuch, Jer. 7. 21. Ezek. 20. 39. Mal. 1. 10.

vain oblations] Heb. an oblation of vanity, as, Lam. 2. 14. Oblation, for, Oblations, as, verſ. 1, 6.

oblations] meat-offerings. Sometime offered alone, Levit. 2. 1. Sometime addionals to other ſacrifices, Numb. 15. 4. The word ſignifies, in general, a preſent ſolemnity tendred unto God, or man, in acknowledgment of honorable reſpect to either, or for procurement of grace and favour with either, Gen. 4. 3, 5. and 32. 13, 18, 20, 21. and 43. 11. 1 Sam. 10. 27. 2 King. 20. 12. Pſal. 45. 12. in regard whereof, it is by ſome deemed to deſcend from a word that ſignifieth, to bring; by others, from one that ſignifies, to pacifie, or make quiet. But it is more ſpecially applyed to ſome certain ſort of religious oblations; whereof, ſee further on ch. 57. 6.

vain] Becauſe a ſervice, not ſincerely, but feignedly, performed, chap. 29. 13. and 59. 4. Lam. 2. 14. Or, vain, becauſe in vain offered, as not regarded, not accepted, Gen. 4. 5. verſ. 11. Mal. 1. 9, 10. and 2. 13. Matth. 15. 9.

incenſe] Both that which the Prieſts daily burnt on the golden altar, Exod. 30. 3, 7, 8, 35, 36. As that alſo which the people brought, together with their offerings, Levit. 2. 1, 2.

it is an abomination to me] Heb. abomination it is to me, It, for is. The pronoun, for the verb-ſubſtantive: a thing in Hebrew very frequent, Pſal. 44. 4. Eccl. 1. 5, 10. and 5. 9. Abomination, that is, very abominable, Levit. 18. 22. As deſolation, for very deſolate, ver. 7. That which was formerly reputed, a pleaſing, and pleaſant ſavour unto God, Exod. 29. 7, 8. Pſal. 141. 2. Ezek. 20. 41. That now, from them, as a thing moſt unſavoury, and of evil ſcent, he utterly abhorreth, Levit. 26. 31.

the new Moons, and Sabbaths, the calling of Aſſemblies] Or, the calling of Aſſemblies, in the new Moons, and the Sabbaths. A defect of the particle, in, as Jer. 9. 2. ſo Numb. 12. 8. Pſalm 10. 4. and elſewhere.

new Moons] Heb. new Moon, as Pſal. 81. 2. So, Sabbath, and Aſſembly. See verſ. 1, 3, 6.

Sabbaths] Either weekly, or yearly, Levit. 23. 3, 32, 38, 39.

calling of aſſemblies] Heb. to call; Or, proclaim a Convocation. Which was done in thoſe ſolemn times of convening, by ſound of trumpet, as well to give warning to the people of meeting, as to incite them unto due preparation of themſelves thereunto, Numb. 10. 2, 7, 10. Pſal. 81. 2. Joel 2. 15. A learned Annotator, lately divulged, giveth two other readings here; either taking the words abſolutely, As for the new Moons and Sabbaths, and calling of aſſemblies. Or, with ſupply from the former branch, Add not to call, that is, call no more meetings, on the new Moons and Sabbaths. Which latter I miſlike not.

I cannot away with] Heb. only, I cannot: or, am not: or, ſhall not be able; to wit, to bear it, or, to endure it any longer, or the like; I cannot; for, I cannot bear: as, ye could not; and, ye cannot, for, ye could not bear; and, ye cannot bear, 1 Cor. 3. 2. and, I could not; for, I could not forbear, Jer. 20. 9. An imperfect ſpeech, intimating an inexpreſſible meaſure or degree of diſcontent. Such a burthen it was to him, that he was even tired out with it, and no longer able to endure it. See v. 14. Jer. 44. 22. Amos 2. 13.

it is iniquity] So moſt Interpreters. As declaring the cauſe, why theſe offices were ſo diſpleaſing to him, in regard of the iniquity inherent in thoſe by whom they were performed, or adhering to the duties in their performance of them, Pſal. 66. 18. Prov. 15. 8. and 22. 27. chap. 43. 23, 24. Others rather, it is an affliction, or, a grievance, as the word is uſed, Job 5. 6. chap. 10. 1, and oft elſwhere. And this ſeems the more probable.

even the ſolemn meeting] So it is generally rendred; or, much to the ſame purpoſe. Yet with that late learned Annotator, I finde this laſt clauſe thus faſtned to the words foregoing, I cannot endure iniquity, and a convent: that is, ſaith he, a ſolemn meeting joyned together with wickedneſs, as with you it is: And much to the ſame purpoſe, with one only before him; but in another conſtruction, iniquity, and congregation, that is, a wicked congregation. As a conſumption, and determination, for, a determinate conſumption, chap. 10. 23. And it is true, that ſuch kinde of conſtruction as this, is not unuſual: of which, ſee chap. 4. 5, 6. As alſo, that the word here uſed, and another not unlike it, do both ſometime ſignifie, a ſolemn aſſembly; or day of reſtraint, Jer. 9. 2. Joel 1. 14. So tearmed, Becauſe the people were thereon reſtrained, from their ordinary employments, and affairs, Levit. 23. 7, 8, 21, 24, 25, 27, 31. For thence, I ſuppoſe it rather ſo termed, then as that learned Annotator, becauſe it cloſed, or concluded the feſtival, being given therefore to the laſt day thereof, Levit. 23. 36. Numb. 29. 35. Deut. 16. 8. 2 Chron. 7. 9. for the word is uſed more generally, of dayes of ſuch ſolemn meeting, with the like reſtraint implyed, Amos 5. 21: and that alſo, where no other of that nature at all had then preceded, as 2 King. 10. 20. Joel 2. 14. But yet to me it ſeems here rather to have a ſignification of vexation. As another of the ſame original hath the like, Pſal. 107. 39. ch. 53. 8. And ſo the words may well be rendred, It is a grievance, or affliction, and a vexation, to me. The laſt words are to be ſupplyed from the former clauſe, concerning incenſe. So verſ. 14.

V. 14. Your new Moons] Both the ſolemnities themſelves, and the ſacrifices offered in them, Numb. 10. 10. 2 Chr. 31. 3.

your appointed feaſts] Heb. ſet-meetings. And ſo it would rather be rendred, more generally, both here, and Hoſ. 2. 11. to comprehend, as well faſts, as feaſts, Levit. 23. 2, 4, 27, 37. See ch. 58. 3, 6. and of the word further, on ch. 14. 13.

my ſoul hateth] I hate, or, I abhor, as Job 6. 7. or, I hate them from my heart, Pſal. 11. 5. Prov. 6. 16. Zach. 11. 8.

they are a trouble to me] Or, a combrance. As Deut. 1.12. where burthen, and it, are joyned together. They are ſuch an encombrance, as wearies, and tires me out, Job. 37.11.

I am weary to bear them] Or, with bearing of them. Or, of bearing them. For ſo we uſe to ſpeak: as Gen. 19.11. they were weary, or, wearied, to finde, (that is, of ſeeking, or, with ſeeking to finde) the door. And Jer. 6.11. I am weary with holding. See verſ. 13. Jer. 15. 6. and 20.19. a defect of the pronoun: as verſ. 3,15.

V. 15. And when, &c.] Or, when alſo. As Jer. 1.3. Neither your ſacrifices, and oblations; nor your ſuits, and ſupplications: the incenſe of your prayers, Pſam 141. 2. nor, the calves of your lips, Hoſ. 14. 2. ſhall finde any acceptance with me, Prov. 1. 28. Jer. 11. 11. and 14. 12. Mic. 3. 9. Zach. 7. 13.

ye ſpread forth your hands] To wit, in prayer; Deſcribed by the geſture therein ordinarily then uſed, with arms ſpread forth, and hands laid open; eſpecially in ſolemn and earneſt prayer, Exod. 9. 29, 33. 1 King. 8. 22, 38. Ezr. 9. 8. Job. 11. 13. Pſalm 88. 9. and 143. 6.

I will hide mine eyes from you] I will not regard, either you, or your prayers; but I will hide my face, as Pſalm 27. 9. and 30.7. chap. 8.17. (for eyes, are ſometime put for face, Ezek. 23. 40. compared with Jer. 4.30. as, face, for eyes, chap. 25. 8.) Or, my ſelf, as Pſalm. 10. 1. chap. 57. 17. from you; as one that withdraweth himſelf, and will not be ſpoken with, Hoſ. 5. 6, 15. Or, I will turn mine eies from you, as from ſome loathſome, and abominable thing, that one cannot endure the ſight of, Pſalm 109.7. Prov. 15.8. and 21.13. and 28. 9. See the phraſe, Prov. 28.27. and the like, chap. 58.7. Ezek. 22.26.

yea, when ye make, &c.] Though ye be never ſo inſtant, and importunate, by ſuch your inſtancy and importunity, hoping and expecting to ſpeed, and prevail, Matth. 6. 7. Luk. 11. 8. Yet it ſhall not avail you, Prov. 1. 28.

yea] Heb. alſo. As Pſalm 41. 9.

when] Or, though. As Gen. 8. 21. Joſh. 17. 18. Pſalm 2 [illegible]. 4.

ye make many prayers] Heb. multiply prayers. As multiply ſope, Jer. 2.22. and multiply medicine, Jer. 48.11. For, uſe much ſope, and many medicines.

I will not bear] I will not bear you. The pronoun wanting to be ſupplyed: As verſ. 3. Iſrael knoweth not me: So here, I will not bear you: and chap. 40.5. all fleſh ſhall ſee it. To bear, with man, is ſometime, to obey: as verſ. 19. 1 Sam. 15. 22. with God, to grant, Pſalm 4.1. and 20. 1. But there ſeems here, to be ſome emphaſis in it, more then ordinary. I will not ſo much as give you the hearing, much leſs grant your requeſts. See Zach. 7. 11, 13.

Your hands are full of blood] The reaſon why God ſo abhorred their prayers, becauſe their hands, which they ſpread out in prayer, and ought therefore to have been pure, and clean, 1 Tim. 2. 8. were polluted, and that with blood, ch. 59.3. See v. 12.

blood] Heb. bloods. That is, blood-guiltineſs, Pſalm 51. 14. and 55. 23. ch. 26. 23. Murther, cruelty, oppreſſion, extortion, verſ. 20. which are as murther, in Gods repute, verſ. 21. chap. 3. 25. Mic. 3.3. 1 Joh. 3. 15. That which was the cauſe why their prayers ſped no better, ſeemed they never ſo devout, chap. 58. 2,3,4. and 59. 2, 3. Job. 27.8,9. Ezek. 8. 17,18. See ch. 4.4.

V. 16. Waſh ye] An exhortation taking its riſe, from the reaſon before rendred, of the evil ſucceſs of their ſuits; and directing them, to what was to be done by them, if they deſired to ſpeed in prayer, and to have their ſervices accepted. So ch. 58.6, 10.

Waſh ye, make your ſelves clean] If the foulneſs of your hands be that which hinders the acceptance of your ſervices, and the ſucceſs of your ſuits, then muſt you waſh and cleanſe them, ere you can hope to have gracious acceptance of the one, or effectual audience for the other, Job 11.13, 14.

waſh ye] Cleanſe both your hands and hearts, Pſal. 26. 6. and 73.13. Jer. 4.14. Jam. 4. 8. An alluſion to the rites of waſhing, then in uſe, of mens bodies, their garments, and their ſacrifices, Exod. 19.10. Levit. 1.9. and 8. 21. Numb. 19. 28,29. Deut. 21. 6. & 23. 11. Heb. 9. 10. and 10.22.

make ye clean] Heb. be cleanſed, ch. 52. 11. as verſ. 24. See ch. 50. 1. Waſh your ſelves ſedulouſly, and diligently, over, and over; again, and again, until you be effectually, and throughly cleanſed, Pſal. 51.2,7.

put away the evil of your doings from mine eyes] Which cauſe me to turn my face away, and to hide mine eyes from you, verſ. 15. Let me not hear, or ſee any more of them, if you would have me to regard, and hear you, your ſervices, and your ſuits, Job. 11. 14. Remove them from before my face, leſt I ſet them before yours, Pſalm 50.21.

ceaſe to do evil] The firſt ſtep to amendment, Pſalm 34. 14. and 37.27. 1 Pet. 3.11. Surceaſe your cruelty, your injurious and mercileſs carriage towards your brethren, chap. 4.6. Ezek. 45. 9.

V. 17. Learn to do well] Apply your ſelves unto the practice of the contrary duties, Pſal. 34. 14. and 37. 37. Luk. 3. 9, 14. and 19. 8, 9. Epheſ. 4. 22, 24, 28. Col. 3.5,13.

learn] Be inſtructed, and taught: take out a new leſſon: as Deut. 5.1. Pſal. 119. 71,73. ch. 26. 9,10. Epheſ. 4. 20,24. Phil. 4. 12. Or, enure, and accuſtom your ſelves unto it: as Jer. 13. 23. and 31.16. Hoſ. 10. 11.

to do well] To exerciſe mercy, and beneficence, ch. 58. 6,7, 10. Dan. 4. 27.

ſeek judgement] From the general he deſcendeth to thoſe particulars wherein they moſt failed: and preſſeth them with the duties of the ſecond Table. Becauſe hypocrites, though profeſſing a great deal of devotion, yet are therein wont much to falter and fail. So Pſal. 50.16, 18. Mic. 6.7,8. Matth. 23. 23. Jam. 1.26,27. and 2.14,26. While they vainly imagine, that their ſedulity and aſſiduity in the one, may make amends for their defects and defaults in the other, Prov. 21. 27. Jer. 7. 9, 10. Howbeit theſe are the things, that God profeſſeth to prefer before ſacrifice, Prov. 21. 3. ch, 61.8. Mark 12.23.

ſeek judgement] Conſider ſeriouſly, and ſedulouſly, what belongeth to you in your places of judicature, and do it, cap. 16. 5. So ſeek peace, and the like, Pſalm 34. 14. Amos 5. 14. Zeph. 2.2. He bendeth his ſpeech to the Princes, and Rulers eſpecially; becauſe they were principally in fault; and by their example encouraged others to thoſe evils, which they ought to have redreſſed in others, verſ. 23. Eccleſ. 3. 16.

relieve] Heb. righten, as Prov. 23.19. do them right. Set things right, and ſtrait, between the oppreſſed and thoſe that oppreſs them. Do as God himſelf doth, whoſe Vice-gerents ye are, Pſal. 82.1,3. and 146.7.

the oppreſſed] The word properly ſignifies thoſe whoſe hearts are ſo vexed with evil uſage, that their ſpirits are made as ſour as vinegar, or leven; or as with vinegar, or leven, Exod. 12.39. So Pſal. 73.21. and the ſame intimates the term given to the Oppreſſour, ſo called, as a ſourer of the hearts and ſpirits of thoſe, whom he ſo dealeth with, Pſal. 71.4.

judge] Judge for them. Do them juſtice: as Deut. 32.36. Pſal. 7. 8. and 26. 1. or, judge the cauſe of the orphan, as verſ. 23.

the fatherleſs] Heb. the orphan. Such as want either parents, or either parent, to protect them. Concerning whom therefore, God gives ſpecial charge, Exod. 22.21. Deut. 10.18. and 24.17. and 27.19. Pſal. 82.3. the want hereof is complained of, and reproved, v. 23.

plead for] Heb. debate, contend for, Prov. 25.9. chap. 3.13. or, upon, debate, decide for, Pſal. 43.1. and 119. 154. Mic. 7. 9. or, plead the cauſe of the widow, as before.

the widow] Who wants now her husband to help her; and whom God therefore takes ſpecial care of, Exod. 22.21. Pſal. 68.5. Jer. 7.6. and 22.3. widow, for widows: as before, viſion, verſ. 1. and orphan here.

V. 18. Come now] A gracious invitation, with offer, and promiſe of reconcilement, remiſſion of fore-paſſed tranſgreſſions, and reſtitution of former bleſſings, and benefits, upon ſuch reformation, as was before here required. So chap. 55. 1,3,6,7. and 58.6,12. Ezek. 18.21,22.

let us reaſon together] Let us debate the matter btween our ſelves, ſetting apart the creatures formerly called in, verſ. 2. Conſider well, you your ſelves, whether the terms I propound be not equall and reaſonable, and for your own good. Thus is God content to condeſcend, and ſtoop ſo low to ſorry wretches, as to argue with them, and to make them even as Judges in their own cauſe, Job 9.32. & 16.21. chap. 5. 3, 4. Jer. 2.5,31. Mic. 6.1,2,3.

though] Heb. if. As Job 14.7,8. & 16.6.

your ſins be as ſcarlet] That is, as red, as ſcarlet: as Exo. 4. 6. his hand was as ſnow; that is, as white as ſnow: as red as ſcarlet, that is, of the deepeſt dye, of the heynouſeſt guilt: of a ſcarlet colour that comes neereſt unto blood; ſins in grain, as we uſe to ſay, chap. 63. 1, 2. alluding to that of blood, v. 15.

ſcarlet] The word is by ſome ſuppoſed, to ſignifie cloth double-dyed; either firſt in the wool, and then again in the web: or, after it hath paſt the Weavers hand, twice dipt, to make the colour the deeper, and the cloth to keep colour the better. But this ſeems not ſo probable; for the ſentence ſhould then fall in the latter branch: which is not ſo agreeable to reaſon. Nor is it probable, that the invention of thoſe double dyes, were any thing neer ſo ancient, as the uſe of this word, in matter of dye, or colour, is found in Scripture; being of ſo late a date in compariſon of Moſes, that ſeven hundred years were over, after the building of Rome, ere it came to be in uſe there. See Plin. lib. 9. cap. 39. The word is indeed uſed ſometime for double garments, Prov. 31.21. and ſometime for a twined, or twiſted thred, Gen. 38. 28,30.

or line, or, cord, Joſh.2.15,18,21. For there is little reaſon to imagine, that a woman of ſo mean condition, as was Rahab, ſhould have in her houſe, a cord of crimſon, or ſcarlet, and, that double-dyed too, as ſome have rendered it, ſo ſtrong, and ſo long, as to let the ſpies down, from the top of the Town-wall; of whoſe height, ſee Deut.1.28. Howbeit, the word is moſt commonly uſed, for ſuch a deep red, as the corchionel, or the ſcarlet-grain yeelds, 2 Sam.1.24. Cant.4.3. Jer. 4.30. Seldom is it found without the latter hereafter mentioned: and it is here in the plural, as Prov. 31. 21. but in another ſence there, ſcarlets, for ſcarlet, as we alſo ſometime uſe to ſpeak; but in that form, never elſewhere.

they ſhall be as white as ſnow] they, That is, your ſins. But the phraſe is metonymical, for to ſpeak properly, the ſins themſelves are not purified; but the perſons, whoſe ſins they are, when they are done away: as the garments of ſuch are ſaid to be whitened, when the ſpots of them are done away, Rev.7.14. and ſo Chriſt is ſaid, to purge our ſins, Heb. 1. 3. when he purgeth us from our ſins, Heb. 9.14. The meaning is, that the guilt of your ſins ſhall be ſo utterly aboliſhed, being waſhed away in the blood of the Meſſias, 1 Joh.1.7. Rev. 1.5. & 7.13,14. that ye your ſelves, who were formerly ſo tainted, and diſcoloured with them in your ſouls, as if your bodies had been from top to toe, dyed all over with ſome deep red, ſhall appear, as clean, as pure, as white, as ſnow, in Gods ſight, Pſal.51.7. Cant.4.7. as white as ſnow, and whiter then ſnow, a proverbial forme of ſpeech, very frequent in Scripture, Pſal.68.14. Dan.7.9. Lam.4.7. Matth.17.2. and 28 3. Mar.9.3. Rev.1.14.

though they be red like crimſon] Or, as crimſon: that is, as red as crimſon, as 2 King.3.22. red as blood: that is, as red as blood. Some of the Rabbines take this to be a deeper colour then the former; and ſo in reaſon it ſhould be, if they be ſeveral colours. But others of them, affirm them to be one and the ſame: they are moſt commonly joyned together, as importing one and the ſame thing, both in the deſcription of the work of the Tabernacle, and the Prieſtly apparel; as alſo in the purification of the leper, and other unclean ones: ſave, that this is put firſt, that after, in the one, Exod. 25.4. and 26.1,31. & 28.5,6. Whereas, this followeth that, in the other, Levit. 14. 4, 6,&c. Numb. 19. 7. being found alone, and in a maſculine form, twice only, in this place, and Lam. 4.5. But in both the forms of ſpeech formerly mentioned, wherein they are conjoyned, the conſtruction is ſuch, as argues a concurrence of both, in one and the ſame ſubject: ſcarlet of crimſon, and crimſon of ſcarlet, (to uſe the words, whereby they are commonly rendered) as a rock of flint, or, a flinty rock, Deut.8.15. and, a flint of rock, or, a rocky flint; as Deut.32.15. (which in effect are all one) or, (to render it, as I ſuppoſe the genuine notion of either, to be) the ſcarlet grain of crimſon; or, of the worm: that is, the wormy, or crimſon grain, (for thereof hath the crimſon its name, from the worm, not from the grain.) and the worm of the ſcarlet grain; or, the grainy worm: or, crimſon. For the latter word here uſed, ſignifies a worm, chap.41.14. Jon. 4.7. and a worm ordinarily grows in that grain, wherewith the crimſon is dyed; from whence alſo, both in Arabick, and in other tongues, it hath its name. Of this worm, ſee Pauſanias in Phocicis, & Plin. lib.24. cap.4. The former word therefore, I conceive to ſignifie the grain; the latter, the worm: and the ſame colour to be in both intimated: unleſs this latter add ought to the deepneſs of the dye, the worm being of it ſelf, a deeper red then the grain is by it ſelf alone. See Nahum.2,3.

they ſhall be as wool] That is, as white, as wool, as of ſnow before: a defect of the former epithet, to be from the particle of ſimilitude underſtood, as 2 King.5.27. or out of the former branch to be here ſupplyed; as the term, red, in the former, out of this latter.

as wool] That is, as pure wool, as Dan.7.9. or, as white wool, Rev.1.14. For, there are as well black, or brown; as white, wools in thoſe parts, as well as with us, Gen.30.32. as white wool undyed, another defect of the epithet: the like whereunto, ſee chap.5.2. Mal. 1. 14. and the very ſame, where ſnow and wool are joyned together; and ſnow likened to wool, Pſal. 147. 16. the very ſame thing that was ſpoken in the former branch, is (after the uſual manner of this Prophet) repeated; but with other terms of expreſſion in this latter. For, as for that, which one of the Jewiſh writers hath, that Gods meaning ſhould be, that if their ſins were but as ſcarlet, they ſhould be made as white as ſnow: but if they were, as crimſon, (which is a deeper dye) they ſhould be made no whiter then wool; that comes ſhort of ſnow: It is a frivolous fancy; wronging the text, and mincing Gods mercy: whoſe mind and intent, doubtleſs, was, to give his people aſſurance of a full, and entire purging of them, from the guilt of their ſins, by the blood of his Son, were they never ſo heynous, upon their repentance, 1 Joh.1.7. Beſides, that it is affirmed by thoſe that are well skilled in ſuch affaires, that wool, even with us, artificially dreſſed for worſted, is not, for whiteneſs, inferiour to ſnow it ſelf. As little credit, I ſuppoſe, is to be given to that groundleſs conceit, that ſome of our Rabbinical Writers have of late vented; (who yet tax all for blind buzzards, that dealt with this place before them,) to wit, that the Prophet in theſe words, alludes to a rite uſed in ſending out of the ſcape-goat, Levit.16.10. between whoſe horns (as the Talmudiſts tell us) the high Prieſt, before the diſmiſſion of him, was wont to put a piece of ſcarlet, cut out like a tongue; which if of it ſelf it turned white, (as it may be, by ſome jugling, the Prieſts made the people believe ſometime that it did) they then believed that their ſins were remitted. But of this rite, there is no precept; of this miracle, no mention in Moſes. And it is more likely, that from this place the fable was forged, then that the Prophet ſhould here have reference to any ſuch figment.

V. 19. If ye be willing,&c.] If you can be content to accept of the terms before propounded, v.16,17.

willing, and obedient] Implying, that whatſoever they had hitherto ſuffered, was to be juſtly aſcribed to their former wilful diſobedience, Pſal.81.11,16.

be willing and obedient] Or, will conſent, (as Prov. 1. 10.) and obey, or, conſent to obey, (as Ezek.3.7.) to what is now required of you.

ye ſhall eat the good of the land] Ye ſhall reap, receive, perceive, and enjoy, whatſoever benefit and commodity the land is able to afford you, Levit. 26. 3,5, 10. Deut. 21. 11, 12. it ſhall not be devoured, as before, by your enemies, v. 7. but you your ſelves ſhall enjoy it, chap.62.8,9.

good] Heb. goodneſs. For good things, as Neh.9.36. Jer.2. 7. the abſtract for the concrete, as v.7. chap.64.10. Of the goodneſs of the land, ſee Gen.13.10. Numb.13.27. & 14.7. Deut.8.7,9. Joel 2.3.

V. 20. But] Heb. And; as v.2,21. So Gen.4.2. chap. 29. 13.

if ye refuſe] Oppoſed to conſenting, Neh.9.17. Pſal 78.10. Prov.1.24.

and rebel] Oppoſed to obeying, v. 2. chap.63.10.

ye ſhall be devoured] A fearful commination annexed, to enforce them to accepcance of the conditions propounded. So Lev.26 14,&c. Deut.28.15,&c.

devoured] Heb. eaten up. So Jer.21.7. the ſword is ſaid to have a mouth; and therewith to devour, Jer.46.10,14.

with the ſword] Of your enemies, chap. 3. 25. yet called alſo the ſword of the Lord, Jer, 12. 12. becauſe ſent in upon them, by him, Levit.26.25. and coming with his commiſſion, and by his command, Jer.47.6,7. Ezek.14.17. See a paſſage parallel to this, Job 36.11,12. the ſword, as comprehending by a Synechdoche, all warlike weapons, chap.21. 15. Jer. 51. 35,37. is put frequently for hoſtile invaſions, and all ſuch calamities as are wont to accompany the ſame, Deut. 28. 22. Ezek.14.17,21.

for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it] God himſelf, as by word of mouth, hath ſpoken it, chap. 40.5. and 58.14. and it is therefore of moſt undoubted truth, and ſhall aſſuredly be effected, 1 King.14.12. chap. 11.17. & 55. 11. Jer. 44. 28, 29. Ezek.12.25.

the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. He, who, as he hath his being in himſelf, Exo.3.14. and gives being to all things, beſide himſelf, Rev.4.11. So to his word alſo, as well as to his works; whether of promiſe, or of menace, Exod.6.3. See v.2.

ſpoken it] A defect of the pronoun, or affix, as chap.21.17. Hoſ.8.4.

V. 21. How is,&c.] A new increpation of them for their general defection; as promiſing little hope of a ſound reformation.

How] Spoken in way of admiration, as wondring at ſo ſtrange an alteration with them. So Jer 2.21.

is the faithful city become an harlot?] Jeruſalem, which had plighted fidelity unto God, 2 Chr.15.2,15.& 23.16. and had for ſome time continued faithful to him, (even when Iſrael fell away) as a loyal wife to her husband, 2 Chro. 13. 9, 11. Hoſ.11.12. but now carried her ſelf diſloyally, as an harlot, or common ſtrumpet, Pſal.73.27. & 106.39. chap.57.4,11. Jer. 2.20. & 3.20.21. Ezek.16.15,23. & 23.3,&c.

it was full of judgment] A place, wherein judgment and juſtice had been plentifully and conſtantly exerciſed, and executed under her religious Kings, and righteous Rulers, 2 Sam. 8.15. 1 King.10.9. 2 Chr.19.5,10. Jer.22.5,6.

full] Of it, as a river of water at high tide, or ſwelled up with a land-floud, Amos.5.28. See ch.11.9. For the Jewiſh Doctor here dallieth, who from the word rendred ful, gathereth, that there were 480 either courts of Judicature, or oratories, (for the term of convention uſed by him, may import either) in Jeruſalem; becauſe the letters of that term make up that number, as indeed they do, and one over. Which pity it is, he took not notice of, to coin us out of it ſome other myſterie: that letter eſpecially being a radical, which the two laſt are not.

righteouſneſs lodged in it] Or, in her. The meaning is, that matters were there ſo evenly carried, and uprightly decided, that Juſtice it ſelf might ſeem to have taken up her abode there. See Pſal. 85.9,11. and the contrary hereunto, Pſal. 55.9,11. Howbeit, in regard of murtherous perſons in the oppoſite member mentioned, ſome by juſtice, underſtand here, men of juſtice, juſt men; as might, for, men of might, mighty men, chap.3.25. and righteouſneſs, for, the moſt righteous ones, chap.64.6. See v.26. For our Jewiſh Maſters here again dally with us in their deſcant upon the word, lodge: as if that term were here uſed in relation to the manner of their judiciary proceedings, wherein pecuniary controverſies were uſually decided the ſame day; but in caſes of life and death, or capital crimes, the judgment was not diſpatch'd the ſame day that the cauſe was heard; but unleſs the party appeared to be guiltleſs, the doom of death was deferred unto the day following, being put off till then, of purpoſe, in this regard, if ought mean while might come to light, whereby the parties innocency might appear: and juſtice therefore ſhould be ſaid to lodge there. But as one of them well obſerveth, the word is not here in the notion of a mighty ſtay, as Judg. 19.15, 20. Jer.14.8. but in a notion rather of conſtant abode; as Job 17. 2. & 41.22. Pſal.25.13. Jer.4.14. Zach. 5.4. So 2 Pet. 3. 13. wherein righteouſneſs dwelleth; the ſame with lodged here.

but] Heb. and. As v.20,28.

now murtherers] That is, men given to oppreſſion and cruelty, v.15. chap.3.11. For our Jewiſh maſters here, either dally again, renewing their former note, of condemning and executing men without reſpite, or reprival, the ſame day that their cauſe was heard; or ſhoot wide, referring the Prophets words to times far remote, to the murther of Zachariah under king Joaſh, 2 Chro.24.21,22. which was long before Iſaiah's dayes: and of Uriah, under Jehojakim, Jer. 26.23. which was again as far later then his times. Whereas the Prophet ſpeaketh expreſly of the time he lived in, and that more particularly, at which he delivered this Prophecie; now murtherers. It is a defective form of ſpeech, (but quick and emphatical) to be ſupplyed from one of the members in the fore-going ſentence: as the like, verſ.18. chap. 2.6. either ſuch now lodge in it, or it is full of ſuch. And if it were ſo in Manaſſeh's time, 2 King.21.16. it is very probable, that it was no otherwiſe in Achaz his dayes.

V. 22. Thy ſilver is become droſs] Some underſtand it, as the letter ſounds, of the counterfeiting, or embaſing of their coyn. But it ſeems rather to be a figurative ſpeech, implying, that whatſoever purity or goodneſs had formerly been among them, it was all now clean gone: and if any outward form of it remained, it was but as droſs, which though it may ſometime have a ſhew of good metal; yet it is of no true worth, or value, Prov.26.23. ch.64.6. Jer.6.28:30. Ezek. 22. 18, 19. 2 Tim.2.20,21. & 3.5.

droſs] Heb. droſſes. Either the plural, bearing the ſame ſence with the ſingular, Ezek.22.18. where both are uſed, as tins, v.25. or the plural uſed by way of exceſs; for all droſs, or all manner of droſs: not of ſilver alone, but of other baſer metals too. See Ezek.22.18,19.

thy wine is mixt with water] Some underſtand this alſo of the Vintners fraud, and the like in other trades, practiſed, by mixing unſound ſtuff with the better ſort of their wares, thereby to vent the one, for, or with the other. Yea, there want not thoſe, that refer both this and the former, to their Vintners, that cheated their cuſtomers, as well with counterfeit coyn mixt with baſe metal, as with wine mingled and marred with water. But theſe go too low, far beneath the the Prophets purpoſe. The paſſage, doubtleſs, is figurative, as the former; implying, that nothing was retained by them, in Church, or State, but it was ſome way or other, groſly and grievouſly corrupted. So Hoſ.4.18.

wine] The word properly ſignifies ſtrong wine, or wine meer, and unmixt, Rev. 14.10. ſuch as uſually, and eaſily, is wont to overcome men, ch.56. 12. Nah.1.10. the beſt and excellenteſt ordinances are thereby ſignified; or thoſe that in former times, had been kept moſt free from corruption.

mixt] Or, ſpoiled with water. Which both taketh away the purity, and abateth the ſtrength and efficacy of wine. The word is no where elſe found in Scripture.

water] Heb, as ſome think, waters. But of that, ſee heavens, v.2.

V. 23. Thy Princes, &c.] See v.10.

are rebellious] Or, revolters. As it is well rendred, Hoſ. 9. 15. For theſe two are diſtinguiſhed, Jer.5.23. and the verb, whereof it comes, ſignifies to turn away, go aſide, or, depart from, Pſal.34.14. Jer.6.4,8. See v.4,5.

and companions of thieves] Maintaining extortioners, and evil-doers; not winking only at them, Levit. 20.4. but countenancing, encouraging, bearing them out, partaking with them, Prov.27.24. Mic.3.11. & 7.3. and doing themſelves, the very ſame that ſuch do, Eccleſ. 3.16. chap. 5. verſ. 23.

thieves] Put here, for all manner of wrong-doers; ſuch as wrong others by force, filching, or fraud. So Jer.7.9.

every one loveth gifts] Heb. a gift, or, bribe. So Pſal. 28. 10. taken collectively, as v.1,2.

loveth] Deſires, likes, expects, requires, and takes, Ezek. 22.12. Hoſ.4.18. a practice forbidden, Exod.23.8. Deut.10. 17. & 17.19. and that with a curſe on him that ſo doth, Deut. 27.25. Job.15.34. noted, and condemned in ſome, 1 Sam.8. 3. chap.5.23. and the contrary approved, and commended in others, Pſal.15.9. chap.33.15.

and followeth after rewards] He is as eager upon them, as a martial man is in the field, on the enemy, whom he hath in purſuit, Judg.4.16. Pſal.18.38. or, as a merchant man in his trade, on ſuch commodities as he deems to be moſt advantagious, Pſal.34.14. chap. 51.1. Prov. 21. 21. Epheſ. 4. 19. and omitting no means, or occaſions, of procuring them, Prov.1.19. & 28.21.

rewards] Doing nothing freely in their places, but all for hire, and retribution, Mic.7.3. And becauſe this latter word hath a notion of retribution, or, requital in it; Hence the Jewiſh Commenters expound it, of the Judges complotting and combining among themſelves, to give by turns, wrong judgment, one for another, as eithers occaſion ſhould require. But the word ſeems to look another way, and that the ſame with the former.

they judge not the fatherleſs] They judge not for them, be their cauſe never ſo juſt, (as verſ.17.) but againſt them rather, Pſal.109.31. or, they refuſe to hear them, becauſe they are not able to bribe them; as in the next clauſe, the widowes cauſe comes not before them, Jer.5.28. Zach.7.10.

fatherleſs] Or, orphan; and, widow, collectively, as gift, before. So verſ.17.

before them] Heb. to them. As Neh.2.13. Jer.6.21.

V. 24. Therefore thus ſaith, &c.] A dreadful commination, yet mixt with a promiſe of reformation, and reſtauration, ver. 25, 26.

ſaith] Heb. the ſaying of the Lord. And ſo chap.3.15. & 14. 22. and oft elſewhere.

the Lord] Heb. Adon. The title given to God in regard of his creatures, as their Soveraign Lord, and owner, Joſh. 3. 11, 13.

the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] As chap.3.1. & 10.16. the latter would be retained, as in the Hebrew, Jehovah; to diſtinguiſh it from the former: the Jehovah of hoſts. See v.9. And hereby it may appear, that the word Jehovah, is ſometime taken appellatively: as it is alſo, Deut.6.4. where it is ſaid, Jehovah our God, is one Jehovah; that is, is the only true and eſſential God, 1 Joh.5.20. one, for only: as Zach.14.9.

the mighty One of Iſrael] The mighty Lord, or God, or Protector of Iſrael; as of Jacob, Gen. 49. 24. chap. 49.26. and 60.16. See v.4. He that was formerly their powerful Protector, will now exerciſe his power in puniſhing of them, ch. 63.9,10.

mighty One] And able therefore to maſter them, be they never ſo ſtrong, or great, v.31. Yet ſome ſuppoſe the word to ſignifie rather Chieftain, then Mighty, as 1 Sam. 21. 7. Job 34. 20.

Ah] An expreſſion of grief, as Jer. 22.18. & 34. 5. See verſ. 4. Thus God goes about the puniſhing of his people, with grief; as enforced by their ſins to do that, which otherwiſe he hath no mind unto, Lam.3.33. Ezek.18.31,32. and 33.11. Hoſ.6.4. and 11.6.

I will eaſe me] Heb. I will be comforted; or, I will comfort my ſelf: as v.16. I will ſatisfie my ſelf, and eaſe my mind, by taking vengeance. See chap.57.5. Spoken after the manner of men, ſo unſufferably provoked, and ſo much enraged, that they cannot therefore be at reſt, untill they be avenged, Gen.27.41,42. So chap. 47.24. Jer.5.9. Ezek. 5.13. and 16.42. Hoſ.10.10.

of mine adverſaries] My people, whom I account now, not as children, but as enemies, and adverſaries: Such as by ſetting themſelves againſt me, and walking croſly with me, have enforced me to carry my ſelf, as an enemy toward them, Levit. 26.21,24. Deut. 32.5,15. verſ.2. chap. 63. 10. Jer. 30. 14. Luk.19.14,27.

V. 25. And I will turn mine hand upon thee] Some render it againſt thee. (ſee verſ.1.) Underſtanding it, as a proſecution of the former denunciation in the full rigour of it. Mine hand, that had wont formerly to be ſtretched out for you, as my friends, againſt your foes, Pſal. 89.21.23. & 136. 11,12, 15. ſhall be now turned againſt you, to take vengeance upon you, and to deſtroy you, as my foes, Judg. 2. 14, 15. But others rather, unto thee, (as the particle is found uſed, Pſal.13. 6. chap.53.1.) I will put mine hand again unto thee, as a workman ſets his hand to his work, Prov. 31.19. chap. 11. 11. (for to return is uſually in Hebrew, to do a thing again, Gen. 26.18. Eccleſ. 4.7. chap.8.5. Dan.9.25.) I will once more ſet upon the reforming of thee: and the new moulding of thee again, as at the firſt, v.26. ſuppoſing it, by what followeth, to be ſpoken in way of mitigation, and moderation in part, at leaſt, of that dreadful and direful intermination, v.24. as God intending by the doom therein denounced, the deſtruction, only of the worſer ſort; and the amendment of the better, Dan.12.10.

and I will purely purge away thy droſs] I will, by thoſe calamities that I ſhall ſend upon thee, deſtroy out of thee, the incorrigible wicked ones, Pſal. 119.119. Ezek.20.38. & 22. 19,22. ver. 31. and purify the reſt, ch.4.4. Jer. 9.7. Dan.9.35. Zach. 13.8,9. Mal.3.3.

purely] Throughly, Heb. according to purity, as Pſal.18.20,24. (but in another ſence) or, by purity, as Job.22.30. ſome render it, as with ſope. And the word here uſed, comes neer indeed to that of ſope; both of them deſcending from the ſame ſtock: Yea, the very word here uſed, ſeems to be ſo taken, and were moſt fitly ſo rendred, Job 9.30. where ſnow water, and it, are joyned together; but the words following, carry it rather another way. For ſope, as alſo nitre is for the ſcouring of mens bodies, and garments, Job 9.30. Jer. 2.22. not for the melting and trying of metals, here intimated: and it may rather therefore well be rendred, as with the fire of purity: the noun incloſed in the verb. Purity, for purifying matter, whether ſope, as Job 9.30. or fire, as here, (be his as the finers fire, and as the fullers ſope, Mal.3.2.) as fining, for fining pot, or fire, Prov.17. 3. & 27.21.

purge away] Heb. melt; or, burn out by melting, ch. 4. 4. Jer.6.29. &9.7. Ezek.22.20.

thy droſs] Heb. droſſes. See verſ.22. the wicked themſelves, which are as the refuſe of a State, Pſal.119.119. Prov.25.4,5. Jer.6.30. or the vices, and corruptions of mens hearts and lives, Prov.17.3. & 27.21. chap.48.10. Ezek.36.25,27. or both.

and I will take away all thy tin] Tin is mentioned among the baſer metals, Num.31.22. Ezek. 22. 18. and it is ſaid, being mixed with gold and ſilver, to make them harder, or ſhorter, and more brittle, Heb. tins, as droſſes, v.22. though in the ſingular number more uſual, to intimate an utter riddance of ſuch wicked ones, and wickedneſſes of all ſorts. Some by droſs, underſtand groſs iniquity: by tin, glittering hypocricie: or perſons openly prophane by the one, inwardly unſound by the other. Which may well be, for that tin carrieth an outward reſemblance of ſilver; as copper, or braſs burniſhed, of gold, Rev.1.15. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe rather with the Jewiſh Commenters here, that by ſeveral reſemblances, the ſame wicked ones, are here, after our Prophets uſual manner, repreſented and intended.

V. 26. And I will reſtore] Heb. bring back; or, cauſe to return: as 2 Sam.15.15. Jer.34.11. See v.25.

thy Judges] Thy Rulers and Governours, Judg.2.16. Act. 13.20. not by raiſing up the ſame again; but others like them, in their room, as Mal.4.5. with Matth. 11. 14. Luk. 1.17.

as at firſt] Such as thou hadſt at firſt. Moſes, Joſhua, David, &c. fulfilled in Ezekiah, Joſiah; and after the captivity, in Zorababel, Joſhua, Nehemiah, and others.

and thy Counſellours] Such as by their advice, were aſſiſtant to the Rulers in chief, 1 Chr. 27.32,33. 2 Chro.25.16. and are, if prudent and faithful, a great ſtay to a State, Prov.11. 14. chap.3.3.

as in the beginning] At the firſt ſetling and conſtitution of thee, as a State, after the coming out of Egypt, chap.44.2. and 46.3. Jer. 2.2.

afterward] Heb. after ſo, or, thus. When God hath thus purged thee, and ſet good Rulers over thee. See chap. 4.2, 3. and Ezek.36.33.

thou ſhalt be called] Heb. it ſhall be called to thee; or, of thee: as ch.64.4,12. thou ſhalt both be ſo, and be ſo accounted, as ch.4.3. & 61.6. Matth.5.9.

the city of righteouſneſs] Or, a city of righteouſneſs, Jer. 31. 23. & 50.7. as, a city of truth, Zach. 8.3. that is, a true and righteous city: as, weights, and meaſures of juſtice: for juſt weights and meaſures, Levit.19.36. or, a city of juſt, or righteous ones, of men of righteouſneſs, chap.4.3. and 62.21. the abſtract, for the concrete, as Prov.12.27. and 21.26. See v.21. chap. 41.2. and 64.6.

the faithful city] Or, a faithful city. As returned to her former loyalty, v.21. Hoſ.2.7,16. faithful, as a faithful ſpirit, Prov.11.13. or, a firm, ſetled, well eſtabliſhed State; as a firm houſe, 2 Sam. 7. 16. For the word is in both places the ſame. See chap.2.2.

V. 27. Zion] Jeruſalem, and the whole State of Judah. See v.8. Here the place for the people, as ch.40.9. & 49.14.

ſhall be redeemed] Reſcued, and delivered from her forepaſſed calamities, by her ſins formerly procured, and from her ſinners, and ſins, whereby they have been procured. So the word of redeeming, is commonly taken in Scripture, Pſal. 55. 18. & 107. 2. & 130. 5. chap. 29. 22. Theſe promiſes are added, for the ſupport and comfort of the faithful, as ch.4.2. and 10.24. Jer.3.14.

in judgment] Or, by judgment. To wit, executed by God upon the wicked among them, and upon the enemies of his people, chap.4.4. and 5.16. and 34.2. Ezek.20.38.

and her converts] Thoſe that are reformed in her, from their former evil courſes, chap. 10. 20, 21. & 59. 20. Or, thoſe of her that return, to wit, from captivity, being bettered (as Manaſſeh ſometime, 2 Chro.33.22,23.) by their bonds, Ezra, 6.21. Pſal.126.1.

in righteouſneſs] That is, in faithfulneſs, ſhewed on Gods part, by fulfilling his promiſes to his people, as Pſal.143.1,2, chap.51.5. and 56.1. or, by righteouſneſs; that is, by ſetting righteous Rulers over them, and ſetling the due execution of juſtice (before wanting, v. 23.) among them. Pſal. 122. 5. chap.32.2. and 33.5. and 54.14 and 60.17.

V. 28. And] Or, But. The copulative for the adverſative, as v. 2. ch.29.23.

the deſtruction of the, &c.] The wicked ſhall have no part or portion in the bleſſings promiſed. Being either cut off by Gods judgments before denounced, Pſal. 38.37. or, continuing ſtill in an accurſed condition, by reaſon of their obſtinacy in their ſins, chap.65.20. The droſs is conſumed, or caſt away, when the gold is once fined. So Job 31.3. Pſal. 1. 6. and 37. 20. and 73.26. and 92.9. and 104.35.

deſtruction] Heb. breaking. Alluding to the breaking of ſome earthen veſſel, Pſal.2.9. ch.30.14. Jer.19.11. So chap. 14.25. & 15.5. Jer. 4.6,20. & 6.1.

tranſgreſſors] See v.2. men openly prophane; ſuch as have caſt off all profeſſion of piety, chap.46.8.

and ſinners] Men of lewd life; though retaining ſome outward ſhew and ſemblance of devotion, ch.48.1,2. & 58.1,2. Luk.7.37,39. 2 Tim.3.5. Tit.1.16. See v.25.

ſhall be together] They ſhall be deſtroyed, as well the one, as the other; as v. 31. or, the main body of them, at once, Pſal.25.26. & 37.38.

and they that forſake the Lord] Verſ.4. by going after ſtrange gods, ch.65.21. Jer.1.16. & 5.7. or by breach of his commandments, and their covenant with him, Deut.29. 25. Jer. 11.10.

ſhall be conſumed] By the fire of Gods judgments, ver. 31. ch.26.11. or, there ſhall be an utter riddance of them, Pſal. 37.20. Jer.16.4.

V. 29. For] Or, When. As verſ. 30. Some underſtand it, as noting the time when they ſhould ſo periſh: others, as one reaſon, why they ſhould ſo miſcarry; to wit, becauſe their Idols were unable to help, ſave, or relieve them, chap.16.12. Jer. 2.28. & 11.12.

they ſhall] Or, ye ſhall, &c. The perſon changed, as Job. 18.4. chap.3.14,26. & 42.20. Ezek.31.26. See v.9.

ſhall be aſhamed] Of your Idols, when you find them unable to relieve you, or to ſtand you in any ſtead. So chap. 30.5. & 44.9. See ch.2.20.

of the okes] Or, groves. Of ſuch trees, Ezek. 31. 14. or, as ſome, of the gods, Idols, falſe gods, Exo.15.11. See the like ambiguity, chap.57.5. but the former here rather, for that which followeth. Trees and groves ſet apart for idolatrous ſervices, chap.65.3. Jer. 2. 20. & 3. 6. Ezek. 20. 28. forbidden, Deut.12.2,3. & 16.21.

okes] Yet ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors expound it not okes, but elmes. That it was ſome kind of ſhroudy and ſhadowie tree, appears, Hoſ.4.13. where it is alſo rendred elmes.

which ye have deſired] Or, delighted in. As chap.2.16. Jer. 22.28. not ſo much in regard of the pleaſantneſs of them, as for the worſhip of your idols, which your hearts were wholly ſet upon, and taken up with, chap. 57. 7, 8. & 66. 3. Jer.17.1,2.

and the gardens] Abuſed in like manner to the practice of idolatry, chap.65.3. & 66.17. intimating, that in every place they had their idols, and exerciſed their idolatry, as well in their gardens, as in the woods and groves. See chap. 2. 8. & 27.9.

that ye have choſen] Made choyce of for ſuch purpoſes, ch.65.12. & 66.3.

V. 30. For] Or, when. As Pſal.75.2. See v.29.

ye ſhall be as an oke] Like one of thoſe okes, or trees, (which ye delighted ſo much in, v. 29.) when you ſhall be ſtript of all your wealth and ſtate; as it is of all its leaves and verdure, chap.28.1,2. Jer.17.6. & 48.6. See the contrary in the bleſſed eſtate of the godly, illuſtrated by the ſame kind of reſemblance, Pſal.1.3. Prov.11.28. Jer.17.8.

whoſe leaf fadeth] Heb. fading, or, falling with her leaf, that is, ſhedding, or, having ſhed her leaves, (ſee on chap. 10, 14.)

deſpoiled of all its bravery, chap. 34.4. leaf, for leaves, as Jer. 8.13. Ezek.47.12. See v.1,6.

and as a garden that hath no water] Heb. to which water is not. That is, not watered, either from heaven, chap.5.6. Amos 4. 7. or with the hand, and help of man, Deut. 11.10. As one of thoſe gardens you made ſuch choyce of, verſ. 29. wanting water in time of drought: wherein nothing thrives, but all windles, and withers away, chap. 5.13. & 10. 17. & 17. 4. See the contrary, chap. 58.11. He alludeth to the trees, and gardens, that theſe idolaters had offended in: as to thoſe flowers and garlands, that the drunkards uſed to wear at their drinkings, chap.28.1.

V. 31. And the ſtrong] Either the ſtrongeſt of you, and all that they are able to do, as Pſal.76.5,6. Amos 2. 14, 16. or your ſtrong idols, as ye eſteem them; and all the makers of them, as Pſal.97. 7. and 115. 18. ſhall periſh together, when the Lord, truly mighty, v.24. ſhall come to deal with them. See ch.2.18,21.

ſhall be as tow] As eaſie to take fire as tow, (ſee verſ. 17.) which from the leaſt ſpark that is, fireth, and is ſuddenly therewith conſumed, Jud.15.14. & 16.9.

and the maker of it] To wit, of the idol, Hab.2.18. or, and his work; that is, all that he (to wit, the ſtrong man) doth, or can do. So the word is uſed, Pſal.104.22. Ier.22.13.

and none ſhall quench them] The fire that God kindles, none but he can quench, Jer.4.4. & 17.27. & 21.12. Ezek.20.47, 48. Amos 5.6.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. T*He word*] Here beginneth a ſecond Sermon; contained in the three enſuing chapters, concerning the reſtitution of the Church, principally under Chriſt. Which he both beginneth with chap. 2. 2, 4. and after the denunciation of many heavy judgments inſerted, to be inflicted upon the main body of the Jewiſh people, for their manifold groſs and grievous ſins, at length concludes with ch. 4. 2, 6.

that Iſaiah] Or, Eſay. See chap.1.1.

ſaw] Had revealed unto him from God; and was as ſure of, as if he had ſeen done. See ch.1.1. and 5.9. Amos 1.1. Hab. 1. 1.

concerning Judah, and Jeruſalem] Both their ruine, and reſtitution. See ch.1.1. Thus far the title, or inſcription of this particular Prophecie.

V. 2. And] Or, Now. As 1 Sam.9.1. Ezra 1.1. Neh.1.1. For the enſuing diſcourſe hath no connexion, with any foregoing. But the particle is here uſed, as oft-times in the Hebrew, to make entrance into ſome new relation, without dependance upon, or reference unto any other. So Hoſ. 1. 2. Jon.1 1.

it ſhall come to paſs] Heb. it ſhall be. Chap.4.3. a prediction of the reſtauration and enlargement of the Church, in the times of the Goſpel. See the very ſame, Mic. 4.1, 2,3. but Micah in likelihood after Iſaiah, if we compare Mic. 4. 12. with Jer.26.18,19. And the Church to be gathered out of all Nations, is here deſcribed and illuſtrated, by its eminency, frequency of repair to it, v.2. alacrity and fervency of people repairing to it, ver. 3. and tranquility and peaceableneſs of them among themſelves, v. 4. Cloſed up with an incitement unto the Jewiſh people, to imitate their forwardneſs, v.4.

in the laſt dayes] Heb. poſterity: or, latter end of dayes, as Jer.23.20. & 30. 24. The phraſe commonly uſed to deſign (as the Jewiſh Commenters themſelves on this place obſerve) the laſt age of the world, the dayes of the Meſſias, the times of the Goſpel, Jer. 48.47. & 49.39. Ezek.38.8. & 16. Dan. 10. 14. Hoſ.3.5. Joel 2.28. Act.2.17. 1 Joh. 2.18. And yet a late Annotator, (in this kind too oft faulty) would have this ſo pregnant a Prophecie of the times of the New Teſtament, fulfilled in Ahaz his dayes, upon the deliverance of Jeruſalem from Rezin and Pekah, ch.7.1,7.

the mountain of the Lords houſe] The mountain on which the houſe of the Lord ſtands. Mount Zion, on the North wing whereof, (where Ornans threſhing floor ſometime was, called alſo Mount Moriah, as bearing the name of the Region) the Temple was by Solomon built. See Gen. 22. 2. 1 Chron.21.18,26,28. 2 Chro.3.1. Pſal.48.2. & 87.1. chap. 14.13. Zach.8.3. put here for the Church, whereof it was a type, Pſal.2.6. and 87.5. chap. 40. 9. and 61. 3. and 62. 1. Though ſome would have it here to ſignifie Chriſt, the ſtone, that being cut out of a rock, became a great Mountain, Dan.2. 34,35. But the tenour of the text, and uſe of the type here, carries it rather the former way.

ſhall be eſtabliſhed] As chap. 16.5. or prepared, as Hoſ. 6. 3. So Pſal.108.1. or ſet, placed, ſeated, as Pſal.93.2.

in the top of the mountains] In a moſt conſpicuous place, Matth.5.14. and in regard of ſpiritual glory, advanced above all ſecular State, and power, Pſal. 68.15, 16. chap. 60. 1, 16. 2 Cor.3.9,10,18. Rev.21.2,10,23.

in] Or, on. As, on the mount, 1 King. 19. 11. on an hill, Matth.5.14. on earth, (for ſo it would be rendered) Matth. 6. 10.

and all nations] The calling in of the Gentiles is here foretold; which out of all parts of the world ſhould adjoyn themſelves to the Church, Pſal.87.5. chap.11.10. Jer.3.17. & 32. 12. Matth. 8. 11.

nations] Who are now in ſo mean and vile repute with you, that you eſteem them unworthy of any ſociety with you, Act. 10.14,15,28. and 11.3. and 22.21,22. Epheſ.2.11,12. See chap.1.4.

ſhall flow unto it] Shall by whole flocks, and ſholes, come into the Church, and embrace the Goſpel, like leſſer rivers, that meeting together, run all into ſome one common ſtream; or as great rivers, ſwelling up at the flood, or tide, come flowing with a full ſtream, up into the land. A metaphor intimating as well a plentiful, as a voluntary confluence: for the waters are thus wont to flow in, not forced, but of themſelves, Pſal.110.3. Matth.11.12. Act.2.41. and 4.4. So Pſal.34.5. Jer.31.12. & 51.44. A learned Writer obſerveth here, an elegant conſonancie and ſimilitude of ſound, in the original, between this word of flowing, and the term before-going, that ſignifies a mountain; ſo thence called, as he deemeth, becauſe rivers uſe to flow down from it: and it ſeemeth to flow with them, chap.30.25. & 64.1,3. Joel 3. 18. and withal, hence gathereth, as therein intimated, the alacrity of the people here ſpoken of, making as faſt up the hill, as rivers run down from the hill. But neither doth the notation of the word ſeem ſound and ſolid; and the notion built on it, rather witty then weighty. But ſee more hereof on Jer.3.17.

V. 3. And many people] Heb. peoples. As Pſal.100.1. v. 4. a numerous company out of ſeveral nations, verſ. 2. Rev. 7. 9.

Zach. 8.23. Others rather, (and ſo the Jewiſh Commenters) as the words of the Prophet, ſhewing by what means the people ſhould be induced to flock, and flow in ſuch manner, thither; to wit, by the notice given them, through the preaching of the Goſpel, of what was there to be had, Pſalm 96. 10. and 98.2. ch. 61.9. and 66. 19. The Goſpel was to be preached, firſt at Jeruſalem, and among the Jews; and from thence, to go abroad into all parts of the world, Pſalm 110. 2. Luk. 24. 47. Act. 1. 8. and 13. 46, 47. See v. 2.

nation ſhall not lift up ſword againſt nation] Nation againſt nation, as Matt. 24. 7. That is, one nation againſt another. This, ſome expound of the general peace, that was, throughout the whole Roman Empire, about the time of Chriſts coming into the world, which, as it is apparent, from the Romane Hiſtories: ſo may be gathered from the univerſality of the Tax, or muſter, mentioned in the ſtory of the Goſpel; which could not well be, but in time of a general peace, Luk. 2. 1. But it ſeems rather to be underſtood of that peace, and agreement, that ſhould be among thoſe, one with another, perſons, and peoples, who had ſincerely embraced the faith of Chriſt. Who as he is called, a Prince of peace: and is ſaid to leave peace, as a legacy to his, Joh. 14. 27. So his doctrine is called, a Goſpel of peace, Epheſ. 6.15. And is ſuch as worketh people to a peaceable diſpoſition towards each other, Phil. 4. 2,7. Col. 3. 14, 16. Jam. 3.17. The meaning is, that theſe Nations, which were before at enmity, ſhould then be in amity, one with another, Luk. 9.52, 55. and 10.33,37. compared with Joh. 4.9. Act 11. 3, 12, 18. Eph. 2. 14,16. That which is indeed the proper and genuine fruit, and effect of the Goſpel, Rom. 14. 17,18. Heb. 12. 11. Jam. 3.18. For, as for that war, and jar, fire, and ſword, that the Goſpel is ſaid to bring with it, Matt. 10.21,22. Luk. 12.49,53. It ſpringeth not from the nature of the doctrine it ſelf, which enjoyneth the faithful to be at peace, ſo far as lyeth in their power, with all men, Rom. 12. 18. Heb. 12.14. and much more to maintain it among themſelves, Mark 9.50. Joh. 14. 27. Rom. 14. 19. 1 Cor. 14.33. Eph. 4. 1. 6. Phil. 2, 1,2. But it ariſeth from the corrupt nature of mans heart, wholly unſubdued, as yet, in the enemies of the truth, whoſe corruptions it croſſeth, which ſetteth them therefore on work, with all eagerneſs to oppoſe it, Act. 13.8,10,50. and 14. 2, 19. and 28. 22. Rom. 8. 7. 1 Theſſ. 3. 16. and from the reliques of that corruption, even in the faithful themſelves, ſtill remaining, Rom. 7. 17, 20,23. Whence jars ariſe ſometime among them, by the prevalency thereof, warping from that gracious diſpoſition, that God, and his Spirit, have in part wrought them unto, Mark 9.34. Luk. 9. 54,55. Gal. 2. 19, 26. Jam. 3. 14, 17. and 4. 1.

neither ſhall they learn war any more] Learn; or, exerciſe, accuſtome themſelves unto war. As Jer. 13. 23. and chap. 1. 17. Warlike exerciſes, being much diſuſed in times of peace. Yet, neither is this ſo ſpoken, as if all uſe of arms, either defenſive, or offenſive, were to Chriſtians utterly interdicted. (See Luk. 3.14. and 22.36,38. compared with Matt. 26.52,) or, as if under the Goſpel no wars at all, ſhould at any time be among thoſe that profeſs the ſame; (which by woful experience, we finde, and feel to be otherwiſe.) But by theſe, and the like expreſſions, the Prophet would intimate, what a ſtrange temper of meek, and peaceable diſpoſition, mens hearts ſhould be wrought unto, by the Miniſtery of the Word, who had been fiercely, and furiouſly affected before: as if men, that had been bred ſouldiers, and trained up all their life long in martial, and military affairs, ſhould now wholly give over, and, as grown out of love thereof, ſhould abandon that courſe of life, and betake themſelves to other more peaceable employments. See ch. 11.6, 9. and to hold forth withal, that entire affection, and conjunction of ſpirit, that true-hearted Chriſtians ſhould bear either to other. Whereof ſee a ſingular example, Act. 4. 32. Five thouſand (at leaſt, if not eight thouſand, Act. 2.40. and 4.4.) believers, all of one heart, and one minde. As if one ſoul had dwelt in ſo many bodies. Lord, for thy mercy, vouchſafe us the like.

V. 5. O houſe of Jacob] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to his own people: to provoke them, by the example of other peoples forwardneſs, to come in unto God, Deut. 32.21. Rom. 10.19. and 11.13, 14. Yea, to endevour to prevent them; and by going before them, (as they were firſt called upon) to ſhew other people the way, to ſerve, and obey him, Jer. 50. 8.

houſe of Jacob] Ye Jews of the family, and linage of Jacob, verſ. 6. ch. 8. 17. Called alſo the houſe of Iſrael, chap. 5. 7. As the houſe of Aaron, Pſalm 115.10. And, the houſe of David, ch. 7. 2. See verſ. 3.

Let us walk in the light of the Lord] Let us (whatſoever others do, Joſh. 24. 15. Pſalm 26. 11. Hoſ. 4. 15.) frame our lives, and courſes, according to the direction of that ſpiritual light, that God in his word, and by his Spirit, affords unto us, Pſalm 89. 15. and 119. 105. Prov. 6. 23, ch. 8. 20. Joh. 12. 35. 2 Cor. 4. 5,6. Eph. 5. 8.

in the light] Michah renders it, in the name, Mich. 4. 5. That is, the ſervice, and worſhip, by God himſelf preſcribed, Deut. 12. 5, 11,21.

of the Lord] Heb. Jehovah, (See ch. 1. 2, 10.) our God; as other nations do of their Gods, Mich. 4. 5.

V. 6. Therefore thou haſt forſaken thy people] At theſe words begins the ſecond part of this long Sermon, conſiſting of a very ſad ſubject, Gods deſertion of his people, and proceeding in wrath againſt them, for their great and grievous ſins; together with their impudency and obſtinacy therein, ch. 5. 8,9. The crimes charged upon them, may be referred to two heads: Firſt, their impiety, in abundance of idolatry, ſorcery, and confidence in the creature, chap. 2. 6,8. for which God threatens; 1 To abate and abaſe their pride, by pulling down whatſoever height, or ſtrength, they confide in, verſ. 9, 18. And ſo to diſtreſs them, that neither their idols, nor any humane help ſhould be able to relieve them, verſ. 19, 22. 2 To withdraw from them all thoſe ſtaies and ſhores, wherewith, either mans life is ſuſtained, ch. 3. 1. Or, Church and State ſupported, verſ. 2, 3. Whereupon ſhould inevitably enſue, a general confuſion in all eſtates, verſ. 4,5. and ruine irrecoverable, verſ. 6,9. Where yet, by the way, is a word of comfort inſerted, for the ſupport of the faithful, verſ. 10, 11. The ſecond head of crimes charged upon them, the Rulers eſpecially, is, their cruelty and oppreſſion, verſ. 12, 15. Whereunto is ſubjoyned the pride, exceſs, vanity, and levity of their women, diſcovered in their attire and carriage, verſ. 16. for which God threatneth to ſtrip them, and expoſe them to much ſorrow and ſhame, verſ. 17, 24. And in concluſion, to diſpeople the land, verſ. 25, 26. and chap. 4. 1.

Therefore] So indeed ſeemeth the particle, here uſed, not amiſs rendred, Pſalm, 116. 10. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 13. as alſo Jer. 9.20. Howbeit I conceive, it would rather be here rendred, But. And ſo it is uſed alſo, Pſalm 118. 17. Neh. 6.8,12. Job. 9. 31. and 23. 10.

thou haſt] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech again from

and as a garden that hath no water] Heb. to which water is not. That is, not watered, either from heaven, chap.5.6. Amos 4. 7. or with the hand, and help of man, Deut. 11.10. As one of thoſe gardens you made ſuch choyce of, verſ. 29. wanting water in time of drought: wherein nothing thrives, but all windles, and withers away, chap. 5.13. & 10. 17. & 17. 4. See the contrary, chap. 58.11. He alludeth to the trees, and gardens, that theſe idolaters had offended in: as to thoſe flowers and garlands, that the drunkards uſed to wear at their drinkings, chap.28.1.

V. 31. And the ſtrong] Either the ſtrongeſt of you, and all that they are able to do, as Pſal.76.5,6. Amos 2. 14, 16. or your ſtrong idols, as ye eſteem them; and all the makers of them, as Pſal.97. 7. and 115. 18. ſhall periſh together, when the Lord, truly mighty, v.24. ſhall come to deal with them. See ch.2.18,21.

ſhall be as tow] As eaſie to take fire as tow, (ſee verſ. 17.) which from the leaſt ſpark that is, fireth, and is ſuddenly therewith conſumed, Jud.15.14. & 16.9.

and the maker of it] To wit, of the idol, Hab.2.18. or, and his work; that is, all that he (to wit, the ſtrong man) doth, or can do. So the word is uſed, Pſal.104.22. Ier.22.13.

and none ſhall quench them] The fire that God kindles, none but he can quench, Jer.4.4. & 17.27. & 21.12. Ezek.20.47, 48. Amos 5.6.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. THe word] Here beginneth a ſecond Sermon; contained in the three enſuing chapters, concerning the reſtitution of the Church, principally under Chriſt. Which he both beginneth with chap. 2. 2, 4. and after the denunciation of many heavy judgments inſerted, to be inflicted upon the main body of the Jewiſh people, for their manifold groſs and grievous ſins, at length concludes with ch. 4. 2, 6.

the word] Or, thing; or, matter. As the word is frequently uſed. So 1 Sam. 14.6. and 16. 18. Job 4. 12. that which Eſay ſaw.

that Iſaiah] Or, Eſay. See chap.1.1.

ſaw] Had revealed unto him from God; and was as ſure of, as if he had ſeen done. See ch.1.1. and 5.9. Amos 1.1. Hab. 1. 1.

V. 2. And] Or, Now. As 1 Sam.9.1. Ezra 1.1. Neh.1.1. For the enſuing diſcourſe hath no connexion, with any foregoing. But the particle is here uſed, as oft-times in the Hebrew, to make entrance into ſome new relation, without dependance upon, or reference unto any other. So Hoſ. 1. 2. Jon.1.1.

it ſhall come to paſs] Heb. it ſhall be, Chap.4.3. a prediction of the reſtauration and enlargement of the Church, in the times of the Goſpel. See the very ſame, Mic. 4.1, 2,3. but Micah in likelihood after Iſaiah, if we compare Mic. 4. 12. with Jer.26.18,19. And the Church to be gathered out of all Nations, is here deſcribed and illuſtrated, by its eminency, frequency of repair to it, v.2. alacrity and fervency of people repairing to it, ver. 3. and tranquility and peaceableneſs of them among themſelves, v. 4. Cloſed up with an incitement unto the Jewiſh people, to imitate their forwardneſs, v.4.

in the laſt dayes] Heb. poſterity: or, latter end of dayes, as Jer.23.20. & 30. 24. The phraſe commonly uſed to deſign (as the Jewiſh Commenters themſelves on this place obſerve) the laſt age of the world, the dayes of the Meſſias, the times of the Goſpel, Jer. 48.47. & 49.39. Ezek.38.8. & 16. Dan. 10. 14. Hoſ.3.5. Joel 2.28. Act.2.17. 1 Joh. 2.18. And yet a late Annotator, (in this kind too oft faulty) would have this ſo pregnant a Prophecie of the times of the New Teſtament, fulfilled in Ahaz his dayes, upon the deliverance of Jeruſalem from Rezin and Pekah, ch.7.1,7.

the mountain of the Lords houſe] The mountain on which the houſe of the Lord ſtands. Mount Zion, on the North wing whereof, (where Ornans threſhing floor ſometime was, called alſo Mount Moriah, as bearing the name of the Region) the Temple was by Solomon built. See Gen. 22. 2. 1 Chron.21.18,26,28. 2 Chro.3.1. Pſal.48.2. & 87.1. chap. 14.13. Zach.8.3. put here for the Church, whereof it was a type, Pſal.2.6. and 87.5. chap. 40. 9. and 61. 3. and 62. 1. Though ſome would have it here to ſignifie Chriſt, the ſtone, that being cut out of a rock, became a great Mountain, Dan.2. 34,35. But the tenour of the text, and uſe of the type here, carries it rather the former way.

ſhall be eſtabliſhed] As chap. 16.5. or prepared, as Hoſ. 6. 3. So Pſal.108.1. or ſet, placed, ſeated, as Pſal.93.2.

in the top of the mountains] In a moſt conſpicuous place, Matth.5.14. and in regard of ſpiritual glory, advanced above all ſecular State, and power, Pſal. 68.15, 16. chap. 60. 1, 16. 2 Cor.3.9,10,18. Rev.21.2,10,23.

nations] Who are now in ſo mean and vile repute with you, that you eſteem them unworthy of any ſociety with you, Act. 10.14,15,28. and 11.3. and 22.21,22. Epheſ.2.11,12. See chap.1.4.

ſhall flow unto it] Shall by whole flocks, and ſholes, come into the Church, and embrace the Goſpel, like leſſer rivers, that meeting together, run all into ſome one common ſtream; or as great rivers, ſwelling up at the flood, or tide, come flowing with a full ſtream, up into the land. A metaphor intimating as well a plentiful, as a voluntary confluence: for the waters are thus wont to flow in, not forced, but of themſelves, Pſal.110.3. Matth.11.12. Act.2.41. and 4.4. So Pſal.34.5. Jer.31.12. & 51.44. A learned Writer obſerveth here, an elegant conſonancie and ſimilitude of ſound, in the original, between this word of flowing, and the term before-going, that ſignifies a mountain; ſo thence called, as he deemeth, becauſe rivers uſe to flow down from it: and it ſeemeth to flow with them, chap.30.25. & 64.1,3. Joel 3. 18. and withal, hence gathereth, as therein intimated, the alacrity of the people here ſpoken of, making as faſt up the hill, as rivers run down from the hill. But neither doth the notation of the word ſeem ſound and ſolid; and the notion built on it, rather witty then weighty. But ſee more hereof on Jer.3.17.

V. 3. And many people] Heb. peoples. As Pſal.100.1. v. 4. a numerous company out of ſeveral nations, verſ. 2. Rev. 7. 9.

and ſhall ſay, Come] The zeal and forwardneſs of the people is here deſcribed, that ſhould be in thoſe times; not content, alone to flock unto Gods houſe, and to embrace the Chriſtian faith and profeſſion themſelves; but inciting others alſo: and each one another, thereunto, Pſal.122.1. in his paths] As he ſhall direct us. Wayes, and paths, are here the ſame, as Pſal.25.4. Prov.3.17.

for, &c.] Some take this clauſe, as a part of the peoples ſpeech, rendring a reaſon, why they repaired thither to be taught; to wit, becauſe the true knowledg of God was there onely to be had, ch. 60. 2. Zach.8.23. Others rather, (and ſo the Jewiſh Commenters) as the words of the Prophet, ſhewing by what means the people ſhould be induced to flock, and flow in ſuch manner, thither; to wit, by the notice given them, through the preaching of the Goſpel, of what was there to be had, Pſalm 96. 10. and 98.2. ch. 61.9. and 66. 19. Rom.10.18.

the Law] The doctrine of ſalvation by Chriſt, Pſalm 19. 7. Rom. 3. 27. and 16. 25, 26. Epheſ. 3. 3, 5, 6. Law, for, doctrine: as ch. 1.10.

ſhall go forth out of Zion] Or, from Zion: as after, from Jeruſalem. See ch. 1. 8, 27. from Zion, Pſal. 50. 2: as before, from Sinai, Deut. 33. 2. Heb.12.18,22.

and the Word of God] His meſſage concerning the Meſſias, now exhibited, Act.2.22,36. and 3.13,18. and 10.36,43. & 13. 23,39,44.

from Jeruſalem] A type of the ſpiritual Jeruſalem: the mother; and mother-City, of all the faithful, Gal. 4. 25, 26. Heb. 12. 22. The Goſpel was to be preached, firſt at Jeruſalem, and among the Jews; and from thence, to go abroad into all parts of the world, Pſalm 110. 2. Luk. 24. 47. Act. 1. 8. and 13. 46, 47. See v. 2.

V. 4. And he ſhall judge among the nations] The Lord Jeſus, having all power of judicature given him by the Father, Matt.11.27. Joh. 5.22,23. ſhall, by the powerful Scepter of his Word, exerciſe his royal authority, not among the Jews alone, but among the Gentiles abroad, and ſubdue their hearts unto the obedience of it, Pſal. 2.8, 9. and 45. 5. and 110. 2, 6. Matth. 28. 18. Mark 16. 15, 16. 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. Rev. 6. 2. and 19.21,26.

and ſhall rebuke many people] Heb. peoples: as verſ. 3. He ſhall convince them of their ſins, and bring them to repentance, and faith in him; that ſo he may aſſoil them of their ſins, and they may be ſaved by him, Joh. 16. 8, 9. Act. 2. 37, 38. and 3. 26. and 5. 31. and 11. 18. and 15.9. and 26.18.

and they] The people ſo convinced, and converted.

ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares] Beat; as Zach. 11. 6. Or, break: as ch. 30.14. That is, by beating; or, breaking; or, having beaten out, or, broken; they ſhall convert, or, turn, their ſwords into plow-ſhares. See the like phraſe, ch. 1. 4. A deſcription of that peace and concord, that the Goſpel preached doth produce among thoſe that embrace it, Pſalm 46. 9. ch. 9. 6. Hoſ. 2. 18. Zach. 9.10. Luk. 2. 14.

into plow-ſhares] Albeit they leave warring one with another; yet not living idly, but applying themſelves to other honeſt, and peaceable employments, Epheſ.4. 28. 2 Theſſ. 3. 10, 12.

nation ſhall not lift up ſword againſt nation] Nation againſt nation, as Matt. 24. 7. That is, one nation againſt another. This, ſome expound of the general peace, that was, throughout the whole Roman Empire, about the time of Chriſts coming into the world, which, as it is apparent, from the Romane Hiſtories: ſo may be gathered from the univerſality of the Tax, or muſter, mentioned in the ſtory of the Goſpel; which could not well be, but in time of a general peace, Luk. 2. 1. But it ſeems rather to be underſtood of that peace, and agreement, that ſhould be among thoſe, one with another, perſons, and peoples, who had ſincerely embraced the faith of Chriſt. Who as he is called, a Prince of peace: and is ſaid to leave peace, as a legacy to his, Joh. 14. 27. So his doctrine is called, a Goſpel of peace, Epheſ.6.15. And is ſuch as worketh people to a peaceable diſpoſition towards each other, Phil. 4. 2,7. Col. 3. 14, 16. Jam. 3.17. The meaning is, that theſe Nations, which were before at enmity, ſhould then be in amity, one with another, Luk.9.52, 55. and 10.33,37. compared with Joh. 4.9. Act 11. 3, 12, 18. Eph.2. 14,16. That which is indeed the proper and genuine fruit, and effect of the Goſpel, Rom. 14.17,18. Heb. 12. 11. Jam. 3.18. For, as for that war, and jar, fire, and ſword, that the Goſpel is ſaid to bring with it, Matt.10.21,22. Luk. 12.49,53. It ſpringeth not from the nature of the doctrine it ſelf, which enjoyneth the faithful to be at peace, ſo far as lyeth in their power, with all men, Rom. 12. 18. Heb. 12.14. and much more to maintain it among themſelves, Mark 9.50. Joh. 14. 27. Rom. 14. 19. 1 Cor.14.33. Eph. 4. 1.6. Phil. 2, 1,2. But it ariſeth from the corrupt nature of mans heart, wholly unſubdued, as yet, in the enemies of the truth, whoſe corruptions it croſſeth, which ſetteth them therefore on work, with all eagerneſs to oppoſe it, Act. 13.8,10,50. and 14. 2, 19. and 28. 22. Rom. 8. 7. 1 Theſſ. 3. 16. and from the reliques of that corruption, even in the faithful themſelves, ſtill remaining, Rom.7. 17, 20,23. Whence jars ariſe ſometime among them, by the prevalency thereof, warping from that gracious diſpoſition, that God, and his Spirit, have in part wrought them unto, Mark 9.34. Luk. 9. 54,55. Gal. 2. 19, 26. Jam. 3. 14, 17. and 4. 1.

neither ſhall they learn war any more] Learn; or, exerciſe, accuſtome themſelves unto war. As Jer. 13. 23. and chap. 1. 17. Warlike exerciſes, being much diſuſed in times of peace. Yet, neither is this ſo ſpoken, as if all uſe of arms, either defenſive, or offenſive, were to Chriſtians utterly interdicted. (See Luk.3.14. and 22.36,38. compared with Matt.26.52,) or, as if under the Goſpel no wars at all, ſhould at any time be among thoſe that profeſs the ſame; (which by woful experience, we finde, and feel to be otherwiſe.) But by theſe, and the like expreſſions, the Prophet would intimate, what a ſtrange temper of meek, and peaceable diſpoſition, mens hearts ſhould be wrought unto, by the Miniſtery of the Word, who had been fiercely, and furiouſly affected before; as if men, that had been bred ſouldiers, and trained up all their life long in martial, and military affairs, ſhould now wholly give over, and, as grown out of love thereof, ſhould abandon that courſe of life, and betake themſelves to other more peaceable employments. See ch. 11.6, 9. and to hold forth withal, that entire affection, and conjunction of ſpirit, that true-hearted Chriſtians ſhould bear either to other. Whereof ſee a ſingular example, Act. 4. 32. Five thouſand (at leaſt, if not eight thouſand, Act. 2.40. and 4.4.) believers, all of one heart, and one minde. As if one ſoul had dwelt in ſo many bodies. Lord, for thy mercy, vouchſafe us the like.

V. 5. O houſe of Jacob] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to his own people: to provoke them, by the example of other peoples forwardneſs, to come in unto God, Deut. 32.21. Rom. 10.19. and 11.13, 14. Yea, to endevour to prevent them; and by going before them, (as they were firſt called upon) to ſhew other people the way, to ſerve, and obey him, Jer. 50. 8.

houſe of Jacob] Ye Jews of the family, and linage of Jacob, verſ. 6. ch. 8. 17. Called alſo the houſe of Iſrael, chap. 5. 7. As the houſe of Aaron, Pſalm 115.10. And, the houſe of David, ch. 7. 2. See verſ. 3.

Let us walk in the light of the Lord] Let us (whatſoever others do, Joſh. 24. 15. Pſalm 26. 11. Hoſ.4. 15.) frame our lives, and courſes, according to the direction of that ſpiritual light, that God in his word, and by his Spirit, affords unto us, Pſalm 89. 15. and 119. 105. Prov. 6. 23, ch. 8. 20. Joh. 12. 35. 2 Cor. 4. 5,6. Eph. 5. 8.

in the light] Michah renders it, in the name, Mich. 4. 5. That is, the ſervice, and worſhip, by God himſelf preſcribed, Deut. 12. 5, 11,21.

of the Lord] Heb. Jehovah, (See ch. 1. 2, 10.) our God; as other nations do of their Gods, Mich. 4. 5.

V. 6. Therefore thou haſt forſaken thy people] At theſe words begins the ſecond part of this long Sermon, conſiſting of a very ſad ſubject, Gods deſertion of his people, and proceeding in wrath againſt them, for their great and grievous ſins; together with their impudency and obſtinacy therein, ch. 5. 8,9. The crimes charged upon them, may be referred to two heads: Firſt, their impiety, in abundance of idolatry, ſorcery, and confidence in the creature, chap. 2. 6,8. for which God threatens; 1 To abate and abaſe their pride, by pulling down whatſoever height, or ſtrength, they confide in, verſ. 9, 18. And ſo to diſtreſs them, that neither their idols, nor any humane help ſhould be able to relieve them, verſ. 19, 22. 2 To withdraw from them all thoſe ſtaies and ſhores, wherewith, either mans life is ſuſtained, ch. 3. 1. Or, Church and State ſupported, verſ. 2, 3. Whereupon ſhould inevitably enſue, a general confuſion in all eſtates, verſ. 4,5. and ruine irrecoverable, verſ. 6,9. Where yet, by the way, is a word of comfort inſerted, for the ſupport of the faithful, verſ. 10, 11. The ſecond head of crimes charged upon them, the Rulers eſpecially, is, their cruelty and oppreſſion, verſ. 12, 15. Whereunto is ſubjoyned the pride, exceſs, vanity, and levity of their women, diſcovered in their attire and carriage, verſ. 16. for which God threatneth to ſtrip them, and expoſe them to much ſorrow and ſhame, verſ. 17, 24. And in concluſion, to diſpeople the land, verſ. 25, 26. and chap. 4. 1.

Therefore] So indeed ſeemeth the particle, here uſed, not amiſs rendred, Pſalm, 116. 10. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 13. as alſo Jer.9.20. Howbeit I conceive, it would rather be here rendred, But. And ſo it is uſed alſo, Pſalm 118. 17. Neh. 6.8,12. Job. 9. 31. and 23, 10.

and as a garden that hath no water] Heb. to which water is not. That is, not watered, either from heaven, chap.5.6. Amos 4. 7. or with the hand, and help of man, Deut. 11.10. As one of thoſe gardens you made ſuch choyce of, verſ. 29. wanting water in time of drought: wherein nothing thrives, but all windles, and withers away, chap. 5.13. & 10. 17. & 17. 4. See the contrary, chap. 58.11. He alludeth to the trees, and gardens, that theſe idolaters had offended in: as to thoſe flowers and garlands, that the drunkards uſed to wear at their drinkings, chap.28.1.

V. 31. And the ſtrong] Either the ſtrongeſt of you, and all that they are able to do, as Pſal.76.5,6. Amos 2. 14, 16. or your ſtrong idols, as ye eſteem them; and all the makers of them, as Pſal.97. 7. and 115. 18. ſhall periſh together, when the Lord, truly mighty, v.24. ſhall come to deal with them. See ch.2.18,21.

ſhall be as tow] As eaſie to take fire as tow, (ſee verſ. 17.) which from the leaſt ſpark that is, fireth, and is ſuddenly therewith conſumed, Jud.15.14. & 16.9.

and the maker of it] To wit, of the idol, Hab.2.18. or, and his work; that is, all that he (to wit, the ſtrong man) doth, or can do. So the word is uſed, Pſal.104.22. Ier.22.13.

and none ſhall quench them] The fire that God kindles, none but he can quench, Jer.4.4. & 17.27. & 21.12. Ezek.20.47, 48. Amos 5.6.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. THe word] Here beginneth a ſecond Sermon; contained in the three enſuing chapters, concerning the reſtitution of the Church, principally under Chriſt. Which he both beginneth with chap. 2. 2, 4. and after the denunciation of many heavy judgments inſerted, to be inflicted upon the main body of the Jewiſh people, for their manifold groſs and grievous ſins, at length concludes with ch. 4. 2, 6.

that Iſaiah] Or, Eſay. See chap.1.1.

ſaw] Had revealed unto him from God; and was as ſure of, as if he had ſeen done. See ch.1.1. and 5.9. Amos 1.1. Hab. 1. 1.

V. 2. And] Or, Now. As 1 Sam.9.1. Ezra 1.1. Neh.1.1. For the enſuing diſcourſe hath no connexion, with any foregoing. But the particle is here uſed, as oft-times in the Hebrew, to make entrance into ſome new relation, without dependance upon, or reference unto any other. So Hoſ. 1. 2. Jon.1 1.

it ſhall come to paſs] Heb. it ſhall be. Chap.4.3. a prediction of the reſtauration and enlargement of the Church, in the times of the Goſpel. See the very ſame, Mic. 4.1, 2,3. but Micah in likelihood after Iſaiah, if we compare Mic. 4. 12. with Jer.26.18,19. And the Church to be gathered out of all Nations, is here deſcribed and illuſtrated, by its eminency, frequency of repair to it, v.2. alacrity and fervency of people repairing to it, ver. 3. and tranquility and peaceableneſs of them among themſelves, v. 4. Cloſed up with an incitement unto the Jewiſh people, to imitate their forwardneſs, v.4.

in the laſt dayes] Heb. poſterity: or, latter end of dayes, as Jer.23.20. & 30. 24. The phraſe commonly uſed to deſign (as the Jewiſh Commenters themſelves on this place obſerve) the laſt age of the world, the dayes of the Meſſias, the times of the Goſpel, Jer. 48.47. & 49.39. Ezek.38.8. & 16. Dan. 10. 14. Hoſ.3.5. Joel 2.28. Act.2.17. 1 Joh. 2.18. And yet a late Annotator, (in this kind too oft faulty) would have this ſo pregnant a Prophecie of the times of the New Teſtament, fulfilled in Ahaz his dayes, upon the deliverance of Jeruſalem from Rezin and Pekah, ch.7.1,7.

the mountain of the Lords houſe] The mountain on which the houſe of the Lord ſtands. Mount Zion, on the North wing whereof, (where Ornans threſhing floor ſometime was, called alſo Mount Moriah, as bearing the name of the Region) the Temple was by Solomon built. See Gen. 22. 2. 1 Chron.21.18,26,28. 2 Chro.3.1. Pſal.48.2. & 87.1. chap. 14.13. Zach.8.3. put here for the Church, whereof it was a type, Pſal.2.6. and 87.5. chap. 40. 9. and 61. 3. and 62. 1. Though ſome would have it here to ſignifie Chriſt, the ſtone, that being cut out of a rock, became a great Mountain, Dan.2. 34,35. But the tenour of the text, and uſe of the type here, carries it rather the former way.

ſhall be eſtabliſhed] As chap. 16.5. or prepared, as Hoſ. 6. 3. So Pſal.108.1. or ſet, placed, ſeated, as Pſal.93.2.

in the top of the mountains] In a moſt conſpicuous place, Matth.5.14. and in regard of ſpiritual glory, advanced above all ſecular State, and power, Pſal. 68.15, 16. chap. 60. 1, 16. 2 Cor.3.9,10,18. Rev.21.2,10,23.

in] Or, on. As, on the mount, 1 King. 19. 11. on an hill, Matth.5.14. on earth, (for ſo it would be rendered) Matth. 6. 10.

nations] Who are now in ſo mean and vile repute with you, that you eſteem them unworthy of any ſociety with you, Act. 10.14,15,28. and 11.3. and 22.21,22. Epheſ.2.11,12. See chap.1.4.

ſhall flow unto it] Shall by whole flocks, and ſholes, come into the Church, and embrace the Goſpel, like leſſer rivers, that meeting together, run all into ſome one common ſtream; or as great rivers, ſwelling up at the flood, or tide, come flowing with a full ſtream, up into the land. A metaphor intimating as well a plentiful, as a voluntary confluence: for the waters are thus wont to flow in, not forced, but of themſelves, Pſal.110.3. Matth.11.12. Act.2.41. and 4.4. So Pſal.34.5. Jer.31.12. & 51.44. A learned Writer obſerveth here, an elegant conſonancie and ſimilitude of ſound, in the original, between this word of flowing, and the term beforegoing, that ſignifies a mountain; ſo thence called, as he deemeth, becauſe rivers uſe to flow down from it: and it ſeemeth to flow with them, chap.30.25. & 64.1,3. Joel 3. 18. and withal, hence gathereth, as therein intimated, the alacrity of the people here ſpoken of, making as faſt up the hill, as rivers run down from the hill. But neither doth the notation of the word ſeem ſound and ſolid; and the notion built on it, rather witty then weighty. But ſee more hereof on Jer.3.17.

ſhall go] Heb. walk. As after here, ſo ch.60.14, they ſhall be content to take, though long, journies to ſuch places, where they may be partakers of Gods ordinances, and joyn themſelves unto the Congregations of Gods people, Pſal.84. 6,7. Ier.50.4,5. Eph 2.13.

and ſhall ſay, Come] The zeal and forwardneſs of the people is here deſcribed, that ſhould be in thoſe times; not content, alone to flock unto Gods houſe, and to embrace the Chriſtian faith and profeſſion themſelves; but inciting others alſo: and each one another, thereunto, Pſal.122.1. Ier.31.6. Zach. 8.20,23. Ioh. 1.36,37,40,41,45.

let us go up] Or, repair unto; as chap.37.14. and 38.22.

unto the mountain of God] That, which at Mount Sinai (called alſo the mountain of God, 1 King. 19. 9.) what time the law was delivered, they might not do, Exo.19.12,21,23. Heb. 12. 20.

unto the houſe of the God of Jacob] The houſe, the Temple; the place of his ſpecial abode. So Gen.28.17, 19. 1 Sam. 10. 3. 1 King.8.17,19,27. Pſal.42.4. Ier.7.11.

the God of Jacob] Whom, he and his poſterity worſhipped, and were in covenant with, Pſal.46.11. & 105.10.

Jacob] The ſon of Iſaac, the brother of Eſau; born, (but the latter) with him, at the ſame birth. So called; becauſe, by holding his brother by the heel, at the time of his birth, he ſeemed to ſupplant him, who had ſtarted out before him, and thereby gotten the priviledg of birth-right; whereof yet afterward he defeated him. See Gen.25.26, 33. and 27. 36. Hoſ.12.2. His poſterity were alſo called by his name, Pſal. 14.7. Hoſ.12.2.

and he will teach us] Or, that he may teach us. Intimating, either, the effect, or the end of their repairing to Gods houſe, to be taught, to learn, Deut.31.12. Neh. 8.1,8,12. Act. 13. 44. See the like uſe of the particle, Joſh.24.9. Pſal. 86. 11. Mal.1.9.

for, &c.] Some take this clauſe, as a part of the peoples ſpeech, rendring a reaſon, why they repaired thither to be taught; to wit, becauſe the true knowledg of God was there onely to be had, ch. 60. 2. Zach. 8.23. Others rather, (and ſo the Jewiſh Commenters) as the words of the Prophet, ſhewing by what means the people ſhould be induced to flock, and flow in ſuch manner, thither; to wit, by the notice given them, through the preaching of the Goſpel, of what was there to be had, Pſalm 96. 10. and 98.2. ch. 61.9. and 66. 19. ſhall beat their ſwords into plow-ſhares] Beat; as Zach. 11. 6. Or, break: as ch. 30.14. That is, by beating; or, breaking; or, having beaten out, or, broken; they ſhall convert, or, turn, their ſwords into plow-ſhares. See the like phraſe, ch. 1. 4. A deſcription of that peace and concord, that the Goſpel preached doth produce among thoſe that embrace it, Pſalm 46. 9. ch. 9. 6. Hoſ. 2. 18. Zach. 9.10. Luk. 2. 14.

into plow-ſhares] Albeit they leave warring one with another; yet not living idly, but applying themſelves to other honeſt, and peaceable employments, Epheſ. 4. 28. 2 Theſſ. 3. 10, 12.

nation ſhall not lift up ſword againſt nation] Nation againſt nation, as Matt. 24. 7. That is, one nation againſt another. This, ſome expound of the general peace, that was, throughout the whole Roman Empire, about the time of Chriſts coming into the world, which, as it is apparent, from the Romane Hiſtories: ſo may be gathered from the univerſality of the Tax, or muſter, mentioned in the ſtory of the Goſpel; which could not well be, but in time of a general peace, Luk. 2. 1. But it ſeems rather to be underſtood of that peace, and agreement, that ſhould be among thoſe, one with another, perſons, and peoples, who had ſincerely embraced the faith of Chriſt. Who as he is called, a Prince of peace: and is ſaid to leave peace, as a legacy to his, Joh. 14. 27. So his doctrine is called, a Goſpel of peace, Epheſ. 6.15. And is ſuch as worketh people to a peaceable diſpoſition towards each other, Phil. 4. 2,7. Col. 3. 14, 16. Jam. 3. 17. The meaning is, that theſe Nations, which were before at enmity, ſhould then be in amity, one with another, Luk. 9. 52, 55. and 10.33,37. compared with Joh. 4.9. Act 11. 3, 12, 18. Eph. 2. 14,16. That which is indeed the proper and genuine fruit, and effect of the Goſpel, Rom. 14. 17,18. Heb. 12. 11. Jam. 3.18. For, as for that war, and jar, fire, and ſword, that the Goſpel is ſaid to bring with it, Matt. 10.21,22. Luk. 12.49,53. It ſpringeth not from the nature of the doctrine it ſelf, which enjoyneth the faithful to be at peace, ſo far as lyeth in their power, with all men, Rom. 12. 18. Heb. 12.14. and much more to maintain it among themſelves, Mark 9.50. Joh. 14. 27. Rom. 14. 19. 1 Cor. 14.33. Eph. 4. 1. 6. Phil. 2, 1,2. But it ariſeth from the corrupt nature of mans heart, wholly unſubdued, as yet, in the enemies of the truth, whoſe corruptions it croſſeth, which ſetteth them therefore on work, with all eagerneſs to oppoſe it, Act. 13.8,10,50. and 14. 2, 19. and 28. 22. Rom. 8. 7. 1 Theſſ. 3. 16. and from the reliques of that corruption, even in the faithful themſelves, ſtill remaining, Rom. 7. 17, 20,23. Whence jars ariſe ſometime among them, by the prevalency thereof, warping from that gracious diſpoſition, that God, and his Spirit, have in part wrought them unto, Mark 9.34. Luk. 9. 54,55. Gal. 2. 19, 26. Jam. 3. 14, 17. and 4. 1.

neither ſhall they learn war any more] Learn; or, exerciſe, accuſtome themſelves unto war. As Jer. 13. 23. and chap. 1. 17. Warlike exerciſes, being much diſuſed in times of peace. Yet, neither is this ſo ſpoken, as if all uſe of arms, either defenſive, or offenſive, were to Chriſtians utterly interdicted. (See Luk. 3.14. and 22.36,38. compared with Matt. 26. 52,) or, as if under the Goſpel no wars at all, ſhould at any time be among thoſe that profeſs the ſame; (which by woful experience, we finde, and feel to be otherwiſe.) But by theſe, and the like expreſſions, the Prophet would intimate, what a ſtrange temper of meek, and peaceable diſpoſition, mens hearts ſhould be wrought unto, by the Miniſtery of the Word, who had been fiercely, and furiouſly affected before; as if men, that had been bred ſouldiers, and trained up all their life long in martial, and military affairs, ſhould now wholly give over, and, as grown out of love thereof, ſhould abandon that courſe of life, and betake themſelves to other more peaceable employments. See ch. 11.6, 9. and to hold forth withal, that entire affection, and conjunction of ſpirit, that true-hearted Chriſtians ſhould bear either to other. Whereof ſee a ſingular example, Act. 4. 32. Five thouſand (at leaſt, if not eight thouſand, Act. 2.40. and 4.4.) believers, all of one heart, and one minde. As if one ſoul had dwelt in ſo many bodies. Lord, for thy mercy, vouchſafe us the like.

V. 5. O houſe of Jacob] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to his own people: to provoke them, by the example of other peoples forwardneſs, to come in unto God, Deut. 32.21. Rom. 10.19. and 11.13, 14. Yea, to endevour to prevent them; and by going before them, (as they were firſt called upon) to ſhew other people the way, to ſerve, and obey him, Jer. 50. 8.

houſe of Jacob] Ye Jews of the family, and linage of Jacob, verſ. 6. ch. 8. 17. Called alſo the houſe of Iſrael, chap. 5. 7. As the houſe of Aaron, Pſalm 115.10. And, the houſe of David, ch. 7. 2. See verſ. 3.

Let us walk in the light of the Lord] Let us (whatſoever others do, Joſh. 24. 15. Pſalm 26. 11. Hoſ. 4. 15.) frame our lives, and courſes, according to the direction of that ſpiritual light, that God in his word, and by his Spirit, affords unto us, Pſalm 89. 15. and 119. 105. Prov. 6. 23, ch. 8. 20. Joh. 12. 35. 2 Cor. 4. 5,6. Eph. 5. 8.

in the light] Michah renders it, in the name, Mich. 4. 5. That is, the ſervice, and worſhip, by God himſelf preſcribed, Deut. 12. 5, 11,21.

of the Lord] Heb. Jehovah, (See ch. 1. 2, 10.) our God; as other nations do of their Gods, Mich. 4. 5.

V. 6. Therefore thou haſt forſaken thy people] At theſe words begins the ſecond part of this long Sermon, conſiſting of a very ſad ſubject, Gods deſertion of his people, and proceeding in wrath againſt them, for their great and grievous ſins; together with their impudency and obſtinacy therein, ch. 5. 8,9. The crimes charged upon them, may be referred to two heads: Firſt, their impiety, in abundance of idolatry, ſorcery, and confidence in the creature, chap. 2. 6,8. for which God threatens; 1 To abate and abaſe their pride, by pulling down whatſoever height, or ſtrength, they confide in, verſ. 9, 18. And ſo to diſtreſs them, that neither their idols, nor any humane help ſhould be able to relieve them, verſ. 19, 22. 2 To withdraw from them all thoſe ſtaies and ſhores, wherewith, either mans life is ſuſtained, ch. 3. 1. Or, Church and State ſupported, verſ. 2, 3. Whereupon ſhould inevitably enſue, a general confuſion in all eſtates, verſ. 4,5. and ruine irrecoverable, verſ. 6,9. Where yet, by the way, is a word of comfort inſerted, for the ſupport of the faithful, verſ. 10, 11. The ſecond head of crimes charged upon them, the Rulers eſpecially, is, their cruelty and oppreſſion, verſ. 12, 15. Whereunto is ſubjoyned the pride, exceſs, vanity, and levity of their women, diſcovered in their attire and carriage, verſ. 16. for which God threatneth to ſtrip them, and expoſe them to much ſorrow and ſhame, verſ. 17, 24. And in concluſion, to diſpeople the land, verſ. 25, 26. and chap. 4. 1.

Therefore] So indeed ſeemeth the particle, here uſed, not amiſs rendred, Pſalm, 116. 10. compared with 2 Cor. 4. 13. as alſo Jer. 9.20. Howbeit I conceive, it would rather be here rendred, But. And ſo it is uſed alſo, Pſalm 118. 17. Neh. 6.8,12. Job. 9. 31. and 23. 10.

thou haſt] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech again, from the Jewiſh people, to God; lamenting his deſertion of them, procured by their croſs walking with him; and their grievous exceſſes in all manner of ſin, ch. 50. 1. Rom. 11. 20. Of this change, and paſſage from perſon to perſon, See on ch. 1. 9. and hereafter, ver. 9.

haſt forſaken] As if he ſhould ſay, What, do I call on this people, whom, for their ſins, God hath deſervedly rejected? and little hope therefore left of prevailing with them, Ier. 6. 29, 30.

forſaken] As, Judg. 6. 13. Ier. 12. 7. where the ſame word is uſed. Thou haſt forſaken them; becauſe they have forſaken thee, Ier. 15. 6. where the ſame word is again. See ch. 1. 4, 28.

thy people] In part, or for the greater part; the main body of them; yet not all Rom. 11. 1, 2, 25.

the houſe of Jacob] See v. 5.

becauſe they be repleniſhed from the Eaſt] With matters (ſuch rites, ſuperſtitions, and idolatries, as come to them) from the Eaſt. Or, they are fuller, (of ſuch abominations) then the Eaſt: they go beyond it in thoſe vanities. See the like phraſe, Pſal. 18. 17. & 45. 7, and 69. 4. and the like ambiguity, Ier. 4. 15. & 49. 19. They ſeem, needleſly to vary here from the more received interpretations, who would have it rendred, either, they have filled the land, with Eaſterly matters; becauſe the verb hath, ſometime, an active notion; as Job 36. 17. Or, they have drawn ſuch matters from the Eaſt: Becauſe Chaldee and Syriak verſions do ſo oft uſe the word.

the Eaſt] That is, the Eaſtern parts, or people. Thoſe of the Eaſt, the Syrians that lay Eaſt from Judah, 2 King. 13. 17. ch. 9. 12. See 2 Chr. 28. 23.

and are Southſayers] Or, and with Southſayers. (for the particle inſtrumental, is oft deficient, as Pſal. 44. 2.) They are repleniſhed, or, abound; as before. The ſentence, either running on in the ſame continued tenour, They are full of things from the Eaſt, and of Southſayers; or, the verb ſupplyed, and repeated again from the former branch. See chap. 1. 21.

Southſayers] Concerning the proper ſignification of the word here uſed, there is much variety of opinion, as well amongſt the Jewiſh Doctors, as among our own writers. Some will have it to ſignifie, ſuch as take upon them to fore-tel future events, by the view of the skie, and the poſture of the Stars, and Planets, ch. 47. 13. And they deduce it from a word that ſignifies, to eye, or obſerve, 1 Sam. 18. 9. From whom thoſe ſwarve not much, who would have the term uſed of ſuch, as raiſe their conjectures, from the various figures, and motions of the clouds in the skie; or from the flight of fowls, that flye in the skie toward the clouds, Gen. 1. 20. Deut. 4. 17. Prov. 23. 5. And they derive it from a word, that commonly ſignifies a cloud. Others, ſuch as by magical skill delude mens ſight: as drawing a cloud, or caſting a miſt, (as we uſe to ſay) before mens eyes; whereby things are made to appear other, then in truth they are. So it is thought, the Magicians in Egypt did, Exod. 7. 11, 12. And of theſe, ſome deduce it from a word, that ſignifies an eye: others, from a verb, that ſignifies to cloud, Gen. 9. 14. Others underſtand by it, ſuch as give anſwers to thoſe that repair to them, for advice and direction, concerning their affairs, and ſucceſs of them; deriving it from a word that ſignifies to anſwer: but this ſeems over general. Others, ſuch as obſerve dayes and times; as good, or bad; lucky, or unlucky: ſuch as thoſe, that caſt lots before Haman, Eſth. 3. 7. fetching its original from a word, which ſignifies, as they ſuppoſe, a ſet time, Exod. 21. 10. but that word ſeems rather to bear another ſenſe. The firſt, and ſecond, are the moſt probable.

like the Philiſtims] Of theſe, ſee Gen. 10. 14. chap. 14. 29. Theſe bordering on the Weſt of Judah, as the Syrians on the Eaſt, ch. 9. 12. were much addicted to ſuch ſuperſtitions, 1 Sam. 6. 2. and the Jewiſh people, though forbidden them, Levit. 19. 26. Deut. 18. 4, 10. Yet had from thoſe learned the practice of them; contracting much evil from bad neighbours on both ſides. See 2 King. 21. 6. 2 Chr. 33. 3. chap. 57. 3. Ier. 27. 9. Mic. 5. 12.

and they pleaſe themſelves in the children of ſtrangers] They are much taken, affected with, and addicted unto the rites and faſhions of Outlandiſh people, Jer. 10. 2, 3. Zeph. 1. 8. Or, they delight in commerce, and matches with ſuch, Ezr. 9. 14. Nehem. 13. 23. Pſal. 106. 35. though by God forbidden ſo to do, Deut. 7. 2, 3. 1 King. 11. 1, 2. Nehem. 13. 25. Or, which I take to be the genuine ſenſe of the place, With ſuch they abound: For the word is uſed for plenty, and abundance; as 1 King. 20. 10. And it fitteth better ſo, both with what went before, and with what followeth, ver. 7. ſo it is taken, Job 20. 22. where fulneſs, and it, are both joyned together. It ſignifies indeed, ſometime the ſtroke of the hand, Iob. 36. 18. or the clapping of the hands, Iob. 27. 23. but That in indignation, This in deriſion: neither of them in delight. For that Jewiſh Maſter ſeems to go out of the way here, who by the uſe of the word for to ſuffice, 1 King. 20. 10. would have the text here underſtood, of their contenting themſelves with the ſuperſtitious courſes, and arts of heathen people, which made them ſet light by Gods law.

children of ſtrangers] For ſtrangers themſelves; as Nehem. 9. 2. Pſal. 18. 44, 45. and 144. 7, 11. chap. 60. 10. and 61. 5. Though ſome expound it of children abuſed contrary to nature. A vice grown too common, even among the Jewiſh people, 1 King. 14. 24. and 15. 12. and 22. 46. and 2 King. 23. 7. but this ſeems too coact. As they have delight in ſuch, ſo to ſuch they ſhall be left, and by ſuch plagued, chap. 7. 17. and 9. 12. and 10. 5, 6.

V. 7. Their land alſo] Heb. His earth. His; as having reference to the word, people; taken collectively, ver. 6. and ſo alſo, ver. 8. earth; as ch. 1. 6. and ſo likewiſe, ver. 8.

alſo] Heb. and; as Ier. 1. 3. and ſo v. 8.

is full of ſilver, and gold] Not that theſe things are ſimply evil, Gen. 13. 2. Iob 22. 24. Hag. 2. 8. but they are taxed for their abuſe of them, and about them. Their greedy, and undue gathering of them by fraud, and oppreſſion, ch. 3. 14. Mic. 6. 10. Hab. 2. 9. their detaining of them from thoſe, unto whom they were due, Prov. 3. 27, 28, Ier. 22. 13. Their priding themſelves, and putting of vain confidence in them, ch. 28. 15. Pſal. 49. 6. and 52. 7. & 62. 10. Hab. 2. 9. 1 Tim. 6. 17. Their exceſs by occaſion of them, in attire, chap. 3. 18, 23. And in fare, and all manner of delights, ch. 5. 11, 12, 22. Amos 6. 1, 4, 6. And the converting of them to idolatrous uſes, verſ. 8, 20. chap. 30. 22. Ezek. 16, 17. Hoſ. 2. 8.

their land alſo is full of horſes] Wherein alſo they much confided, c. 31. 1. though forbidden to multiply them, Deut. 17. 16, 17.

neither is there any end of their chariots] Whereof no uſe, without horſes; another ground of vain confidence, Pſalm 20. 7. becauſe of much uſe in war, Exod. 14. 9. Judg. 4. 3, 13.

V. 8. Their land alſo is full of idols] They are in all parts, and all places full of falſe gods, ch. 1. 29 and 57. 5, 8. Ier. 2. 28. and 11. 13. So that their land might juſtly be tearmed, as Babylon is, a land of Idols, Ier. 50. 38.

idols] So commonly termed in Scripture, Levit. 19. 4. Pſalm 96. 5. ver. 18. Either becauſe no Gods in truth; howſoever men may eſteem them, Ier. 2. 11. and 5. 7. and 16. 20. Or, becauſe nothing worth; as a thing of nothing, Ier. 2. 11. Hab. 2. 18, 19. 1 Cor. 8. 4. So the ſame word is uſed, Job. 13. 4. Ier. 14. 14. Zach. 11. 17.

they worſhip the work of their own hands] That, which they themſelves have made, inſtead of him that made them, ver. 20. Ier. 25. 6. and 32. 30.

worſhip] Heb. bow down themſelves. (As Exod. 20. 5. ver. 9.) To them, as to ſomewhat more excellent then themſelves; which if it be an unworthy thing, for man, bearing Gods image, to do in a religious way of worſhip, to any, even the moſt glorious creatures that God himſelf hath made, Deut. 4. 19. How much more baſe and abominable to do ſo, to ſome ſorry piece of his own making, ch. 44. 15, 17.

their own hands] Heb. his own hands; and after, his fingers. Either diſtributively; which each one hath either made himſelf, or, procured to be made for him; as ver. 20. Or, his; for their, collectively, as ver. 7, 8.

that which their own fingers have made] A further amplification of the ſame matter; as ch. 17. 8. becauſe the fingers are in ſuch curious artifices moſt imployed. So the heavens are ſaid to be the work of Gods fingers, Pſalm 8. 3. Yet it may here have ſome emphaſis, to imply the ſottiſhneſs of ſuch, as having been ſo long time fingring of that mattter whereof their idols were framed, had not all that while the wit to conſider, what manner of ſtuff it was that they intended to adore, as their God, ch. 44. 18, 19.

V. 9. And] As proceeding in the relation of this their folly. Or, Therefore; as Job 10. 15. and 21. 14. and 42. 8. Ier. 6. 11. as a paſſage to Gods judgements on them, procured by ſuch their courſes the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himſelf] Or, ſhall be bowed down; ſhall be humbled: That is, pulled down, and abaſed. All ſorts, and ſtates, concur in theſe idolatrous practices. Or, all ſorts and ſtates being alike guilty herein, ſhall, for ſuch their carriages and courſes, be abaſed, and laid low: ſo chap. 5. 15. And ſo the Jewiſh Doctors alſo here take it; ſave that (therein going out of the way) they put it off from their own nation, to the people of Gog and Magog, that ſhall invade Jeruſalem under the Meſſias, Ezek. 38. and 39.

the mean man] Heb. Adam. The name of our firſt parent; from the earth, whereof his body was at firſt framed, and unto which, after deceaſe, it returneth, and is reſolved into again; by God himſelf impoſed on him, Gen. 1. 26,27. and 2. 7. and 3. 19,23. Eccl. 12. 7: and from him derived unto all his poſterity, Iob. 25. 6. There are four names given to man in Scripture; two of honour, two of diſgrace. 1. Geber, a man of ſtrength, a mighty man, ch. 22. 17. Ier. 30. 6. 2. Iſh, a man of worth, of value, and valour, an eminent man: and it is uſed therefore to diſtinguiſh the ſex, Gen. 2. 23. and the age, Iudg. 8, 20,21. and 1 Cor. 13. 11. 3. Adam, a man of clay, an earthly man, 1 Cor. 15. 47. 4. Enoſh, a ſick, ſorrowful, corruptible, mortal man, Pſalm 8. 4. and 9. 19, 20. For ſo ſignifies the word whence it is derived, 2 Sam. 12. 15. Pſalm 69. 20. Ier. 30. 12. Mic. 1. 9. The name that Seth firſt impoſed on his ſon, to minde him of his miſerable and mortal condition, Gen. 4. 26. & 5. 6. And became afterward a common tearm to mankinde, in general; as the name of Adam; from him to all his, Pſalm 39. 5. and 144. 4: in both which places, alluſion is to the name of Adam, and Abel. To theſe we might add a fifth, but that never found out of a plural form, Methim, Pſalm 17. 14: and in ſignification, it ſeems to come neer home to the laſt of the four; as properly ſignifying, mortal man, as meer mortals; for it differeth ſcarce in a letter, in a point only, from the word Methim, that ſignifies, dead. But to return to the word here uſed. The word Adam, commonly imports man, in general, without diſtinction of place or ſtate, and ſo Adam, and Iſh, are all one, Prov. 3. 13,30. But where theſe two are found together, as counter-diſtinguiſhing, either man-kinde in general, as Pſalm 49. 2. and 62. 9. or ſome ſpecial perſons, or number of people; as here the main body of the Jewiſh State; there is by Adam, underſtood a mean man, a man of low degree, alluding to his firſt original from the duſt, Gen. 2. 7. and 3. 19. which, as it is the loweſt and baſeſt of the elements; ſo in Scripture language, it notes lowneſs and baſeneſs, Gen. 18. 27. Pſalm 113. 7. ch. 47. 1. Ier. 17. 13. whence that ſpeech, Iob. 30. 8. Sons of baſe men, more vile then earth.

boweth down] To do honour to his idol; as ver. 8. Or, ſhall be brought down; as ch. 5. 15. As they bow down to their idols, ſo will God bow and bring them down by his judgements, ver. 11, 17. Thus is God wont to retaliate mens ſins and exceſſes with judgements, in ſome kinde or other, correſpondent thereunto. See ch. 1. 30. and 66. 3,4. and the great man] Heb. Iſh. The word Iſh, is taken moſt uſually, and generally, for any man, indifferently, Gen. 2. 23. Levit. 7. 8,10. and 15. 2. But ſometime more ſpecially for a married man, an husband, Numb. 30. 8,9. Hoſ. 2. 16. Or, as in this place, where oppoſed to, or diſtinguiſhed from, Adam, for a man of more then ordinary ſtate, and degree. See before, Adam.

great man] And, mean man. Collectively, for men of either ſtate and degree; as Iob 7. 1. and 14. 1, 10. ver. 11.

humbleth himſelf] Forgetting his own excellency, and eminency, either by creation, as bearing Gods image; and, as Gods vice-roy, ſet above the reſt of the creatures, Gen. 1. 27,28. Or, by place and degree, in the civil State, being raiſed and ſet aloft above others; as, in ſome ſort, Gods vice-gerent among men, Exod. 22. 28. Pſalm 82. 1,6. abaſeth himſelf by advancing that, as his God, above himſelf, which God had ſet far beneath him, chap. 44. 15,17. Ier. 2. 26,27. Or, ſhall be humbled, abaſed, and laid low. God, by his juſt judgement, abaſing, and pulling thoſe down from their ſtate and greatneſs; who by their ſervice done to things of no worth, have formerly ſo abaſed themſelves; ſo ver. 11,12. The meaning is, that none, high, or low, great, or ſmall, ſhall be exempted from his judgement, ch. 5. 15.

therefore] Heb. and. Which particle is indeed ſometime ſo uſed; See the beginning of the verſe. But here, it may well be taken, as a copulative, in his firſt and native ſenſe.

forgive them not] So moſt Interpreters; taking this clauſe, as ſpoken by way of imprecation. As if the Prophet in an holy fervour of ſpirit, tranſported by the conſideration of ſuch foul enormities, and unſufferable abuſes, by all ſorts and degrees among them, committed; ſhould entreat God, not to pardon, or to ſpare them any longer. See ſomewhat the like, Nehem. 4. 5. & 6. 14. Pſalm. 59. 5. & 109. 14,15. 2 Tim. 4. 14. But the words may well rather be rendred, as a meer prediction, or denunciation, (albeit, that the Prophet by way of Apoſtrophe, in the delivery of it, turn his ſpeech unto God; as in paſſionate expreſſions, paſſage from perſon to perſon is not unuſual. See ch. 1. 2, 4,9. & 26. 3,7. Revel. 1. 5.) and thou wilt not forgive them; thereby intimating the former doom, and ſentence paſſed on them, to be ſo peremptory, that God would not revoke it; and that he had been ſo far provoked by their ſins, that he would not remit them; but the judgement for the ſame denounced againſt them, ſhould unfailably take effect. See the like denunciations, 1 Sam. 3. 14. 2 King. 23. 26,27. & 24. 4,5. chap. 22. 14. Or, that God, who had formerly born with them, and a long time forborn them; would now, at length, without further delay, proceed moſt ſeverely in judgement againſt them, chap. 27. 11. The particle here uſed, (which alone againſt this verſion can be objected) though it uſually import matter of inhibition, or deprecation; yet, in ſundry places, it implyes no more then a bare negative; ſo Pſalm 121. 3. Prov. 12. 28.

forgive] Or, ſpare. Heb. take away; or, take off. Which is ſaid to be done, when the preſent puniſhment is remitted, or removed, Pſalm 78. 38. & 99. 8. Or, the ſin it ſelf aboliſhed, chap. 38. 17. Ier. 31. 34. Mic. 7. 18,19. This latter, yet God queſtionleſs would, and did make good, upon the ſincere repentance, and ſerious return of any of them, according to his gracious promiſe, ch. 1. 18. Unto thoſe among them, that by ſincere repentance, at any time, returned unto God, 2 Chro. 15. 4. Whom, therefore, he failed not to take ſpecial notice of, either to ſave them from periſhing in the common calamity, with the reſt; or ſo to ſanctifie their ſufferings unto them, that they were diſpoſed to their greater good; albeit the ſentence, ſo far as concerned the outward judgement, touching the deſtruction of the main body of the obſtinate wicked, were not reverſed, 2 King. 22. 19, 20. chap. 57. 1,2. Jer. 21. 9. & 45. 5. Ezek. 11. 16. Rom. 8. 18, 28. 2 Cor. 4. 17. 2 Pet. 2. 5, 9.

V. 10. Enter into] The Prophet here turneth again his ſpeech from God, to the people, whom he ſpake before to, ver. 5. As if he ſhould ſay, Since that you cannot be perſwaded to return unto God, and to ſhape your courſes according to his Will and Word, for the prevention of his wrath; make what ſhift you can, to ſhelter your ſelves from that ſtorm of his indignation, that will ſhortly ſeize upon you, for this your diſobedience and refuſal, Jer. 5. 3,6. and 6. 8. and 11. 12, 13.

enter into the rock] This is ſpoken by the Prophet, not as adviſing them ſo to do; nor, as if any ſuch place could afford ſhelter, and ſecurity againſt God, Pſalm. 139. 7,10. Jer. 23. 25. Amos 9. 2,3. but as foretelling, what their eſtate and condition, then, ſhould be; and unto what ſorry ſhifts they would be ready then to betake themſelves, when God ſhould come to execute judgement upon them, ver. 19,21.

the rock] The holes, and clefts of the rocks; where they might ſeem, in likelihood, to be moſt ſecret, and moſt ſecure, ver. 19. Pſalm 104. 18. Cant. 1. 14. Rev. 6. 15. Rock, for, Rocks: as ver. 9. ch. 2. 1,3.

for fear of the Lord] Heb. from the face of; or, from before (as chap. 31. 15.) the dread of the Lord; as ch. 8. 13. Ye ſhall ſo do, by reaſon of that terrour that ſhall ſurprize you, at his appearance, ver. 19. See the like phraſe, Jer. 7. 12. & 44. 3.

and for the glory of his Majeſty] Heb. from the glory; or, excellency, &c. as ch. 35. 2. To be hid from his Majeſtical appearance, in a moſt reſplendent and magnificent manner; when he ſhall come in pomp and ſtate, as a Judge, to ſit on the bench, Pſalm 50. 1,5. & 97. 1,7. Dan. 7. 9,10. Act. 25. 23. Rev. 6. 16. ver. 19,21. See ver. 12.

V. 11. The lofty looks of man ſhall be humbled] The effect of Gods judgments, the pulling down of mans pride; and the laying low of all thoſe things wherein he prided himſelf, ver. 9. 12,17. ch. 5. 15. & 10. 33. Lev. 26. 19. Job. 33. 17.

the lofty looks of man] Heb. the eies of loftineſs; or, haughtineſs (as ver. 17.) of a man; for, a man of lofty looks, Pſalm 101. 5. Prov. 6. 17. a ſign of an haughty heart, and ſpirit, Prov. 16. 5,18. & 21. 4.

ſhall be bowed down] See v. 9.

and the Lord] Heb. Jehovah. See ch. 1. 2, 9.

alone ſhall be exalted] He only ſhall be magnified, when all mans pride and power ſhall be depreſſed, v. 17.

in that day] Or, then; at that time; as ver. 20. ch. 26. 1. & 27. 1,2. But withal, day, for, a ſet, a preciſely determinate time, Zach. 14. 7, 8. implying, that God keeps his word to a day, Exod. 12. 41.

V. 12. For the day of the Lord] Or, the day for the Lord; as, Pſalm 72. & 102. & 127. in the titles. The time that he had ſet, as a ſolemn day of ſeſſion, or aſſiſe; for the execution of judgement, either ſpecial, as here, and ch. 13. 6,9. or general, Act. 17. 31. Rom. 2. 16. 1 Theſſ. 5. 2.

of Hoſts] Wherewith he is attended, when he comes to judgement; as a Judge with his train, Dan. 7. 10. Matth. 16. 27. & 24. 30. & 25. 31. See on ch. 1. 24. & 7. 10.

ſhall be upon] Or, againſt; as Jer. 5. 25. The day wherein he will come to ſit in judgement upon them, ch. 18. 12. & 27. 1. or to proceed againſt them, ver. 17. ch. 3. 13, 14.

every one that is proud and lofty] Such God moſt oppoſeth, becauſe they moſt oppoſe him, Prov. 6. 17. & 16. 5. Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5.

and upon every one that is lifted up] In ſtate, or in heart. No mans might, or height ſhall ſupport, or ſecure him, Ier. 51. 53. Ezek. 31. 1, 10, 18. Obad. 3, 4. and he ſhall be brought low] As ver. 9, 11. Matt. 23. 12. Luk. 14. 11. and 18. 14.

V. 13. Upon the Cedars of Lebanon] A mountain lying on on the North part of the land, Deut. 1. 7. Joſh. 1. 4. So called, as ſome, from ſome ſtore of ſweet wood, or guiny-trees, that there grew: For it comes neer the word that ſignifies frankincenſe, Lev. 2. 1. ch. 43. 23. See Cant. 4. 11. Hoſ. 14. 7. Others, rather from the whiteneſs of it, by reaſon of the ſnow, that is wont to lye conſtantly on the tops of high mountains, Pſalm 68. 14. Hence, the ſnow of Lebanon, Jer. 18. 14. It was of ſpecial note for goodly tall Cedars, 1 King. 5. 6. Pſal. 29. 5. & 104. 16. ch. 14. 8. Zach. 11. 1.

that are high and lifted up] Above the other trees that grow neer them, Ezek. 31. 4, 5.

and upon all the Oaks of Baſan] A Region beyond Jordan, Joſh. 17. 5. Sometime the kingdom of Og, Deut. 3. 1, 4. famous for fair, and choice oaks, Ezek. 27. 6. Zach. 11. 2. By tall cedars, and great oaks, are underſtood, either their ſtately buildings, framed out of ſuch materials, as Ier. 22. 6, 14, 15, 23. Zach. 11. 2. Or, men proud and haughty; or powerful and mighty; high, and great in ſtate or ſtature, or both, ver. 11, 12. Iudg. 9. 15. Ezek. 31. 3. Amos 2. 9. See Ezek. 31. 14. For they ſeem over-curious, who by cedars of Lebanon, would have meant the King, and Princes of Syria; by oaks of Baſan, the King, and Princes of Iſrael.

V. 14. And upon all the high mountains; and upon all the hills, that are lifted up] Above the plain. By high mountains and hils, likewiſe ſeems to be underſtood, men of ſtrength and ſtate; and whatſoever is in them advanced againſt God, Pſalm 68. 15, 16. & 114. 6. ch. 40. 4. Zach. 4. 7. Yet not without ſome reſpect unto thoſe mountains, whereof they gloried, as places of impregnable ſtrength; and wherein they confided, as ſure ſuccours for retreat, and relief in times of difficulty and diſtreſs, Ier. 5. 17. & 21. 13. & 49. 16. Matth. 24. 16.

V. 15. And upon every high tower; and upon every fenced wall] No Fort, or ſtrong wall, ſhall be able to fence, or ſecure any, chap. 30. 25. Ier. 51. 44, 58. Lam. 2. 2, 5, 8.

V. 16. And upon all ſhips of Tarſhiſh] The land lying, a good part of it, upon the Midland-ſea, the Weſtern bound of it, Deut. 34. 2. Joſh. 1. 4. Their ſhipping was matter, both of ſtrength and wealth to them, by furniſhing of them, both with treaſure, and other rich merchandiſe; with matters, as well of neceſſary uſe, as of pleaſure alſo and delight, Gen. 49. 13. Deut. 33. 19. Judg. 5. 17. 1 King. 9. 26, 28. 2 Chron. 9. 21. Prov. 31. 14. For they are wide here, who would have Tyre here intended, ch. 23. 1. as confederate with Syria: The Prophet dealing here onely with his own people, ver. 5, 6.

ſhips of Tarſhiſh] Tarſhiſh, Or, Tharſhiſh, Was the name of one of the ſons of Javan, Gen. 10. 4. whoſe poſterity bearing his name, and ſetling, as ſome ſuppoſe, in ſome part of Spain, gave that denomination, both to the city they there built, and the Region thereunto adjacent; which, by ſome corruption of language, afterward came to be called, Tarteſſus, the one; Tarteſſia the other. And of this place, they underſtand that paſſage, Ezek. 27. 12.. Others, (and this way the moſt go) are of opinion, that having ſeated in Cilicia, they gave the name of Tarſhiſh, as to the whole region, in general, which they ſuppoſe to be mentioned, ch. 23. 10: ſo, more ſpecially, to the chief city, and Port-town of that Territory, called, in after-times, Tarſus; the place of Pauls birth, Act. 21. 39. and 22. 3. The former ſuppoſe, that by ſhips of Tarſhiſh, here, as alſo, ch. 23. 1. Pſalm 48. 7. & Zech. 27. 25. are meant ſuch ſhips, as either belonged to that Port-town in Spain; or that belonging to other places, were wont to trade thither: as alſo, that thoſe ſhips of Tarſhiſh mentioned, 1 King. 10. 22. and 22. 49. 2 Chro. 9. 21. & 20. 36. were ſo tearmed, becauſe they traded to a place in India, of the ſame name with that in Spain; which they imagine alſo, to be that which is uſually called, Ophir. But that ſeems not to be ſo; becauſe in the ſtory of Jehoſhaphat; it is ſaid, that he built ſhips of Tarſhiſh to go to Ophir, 1 King. 22. 49. 2 Chr. 20. 36. Thoſe therefore that go the latter way, ſuppoſe, that from the city of Tarſus, being a Port-town of note in the Mediterranean-ſea; and its territory lying much upon that Sea; the Midland ſea, was ſometime called, Tarſhiſh; ſo underſtand they that, Jon. 1. 3. and that the ſhips, either belonging to that Port, or trading to and fro, in that ſea, where thence called, ſhips of Tarſhiſh. Now that ſea being the greateſt, that they, of thoſe parts, were acquainted with, in regard whereof it is called, This great ſea, as neereſt alſo at hand, Pſalm 104. 5. in way of diſtinction, from that other leſs, and more remote, the red-ſea, Pſalm. 106. 7. Hence, in proceſs of time, it might well come to paſs, that the name of Tarſhiſh, was given more generally, unto any more vaſt ocean, or main ſea. From whence alſo the Greek word, that ſignifies the Sea, ſeems derived, by the interchange only of one letter, not unſual. And ſo ſhips of Tarſhiſh, in general, thoſe that were uſually employed in any ſuch great Sea. Thus it is ſaid, that the king had at Sea, a Navy of Tarſhiſh, 1 King. 10. 22. That is, ſuch a Fleet, as was imployed in the Eaſtern main-Sea; by which it traded to Ophir. But howſoever it be, for the original of the name, or the place from whence the tearm was firſt taken; both parties herein agree, that by ſhips of Tarſhiſh, are meant ſhips of great bulk and burthen; ſuch as uſed to trade in the main ſeas, in great, wide, and deep waters, Pſalm 107. 23. So tearmed in way of oppoſition to ſuch ſmaller veſſels, of leſs ſize and ſtrength, as were commonly imployed in the ſhallower waters, and more ſhallow ſeas; ſuch as the inland lakes; called alſo ſeas, ch. 9. 1. and the red ſea, ch. 18. 1.

and upon all pleaſant pictures] Heb. pictures of deſire; or, delight. As ch. 32. 12. fields of deſire; or, delight: and, a veſſel of deſire, or, delight, Ier. 25. 34. Hoſ. 13. 15. Some underſtand it, of ſuch curious pictures, or other ornaments, as their ſhips here ſpoken of, were beautified, painted, or in-laid with, Ezek. 26. 5, 6, 7. Act. 28. 11. Others, of ſuch as their chambers, were hanged, and adorned with, Ezek. 8. 12. Others, of their images, made for idolatrous purpoſes, ſuch as they were forbidden to make uſe of, Levit. 26. 1. and commanded to deſtroy, Num. 33. 52. The word hath affinity, with one, that ſignifies imagination, Pſal. 73. 7. Prov. 18. 11. and it fitly anſwers a Greek word, uſed, Act. 17. 29. In regard whereof, ſome render it, rare devices. But the word being uſed for imagery, and pictures, we may very well here take it, for all ſuch curious pictures, as being, either for ſuperſtitious uſes, or civil ornament intended, they were taken with, and took much delight in. See ch. 1. 29.

V. 17. And the haughtineſs of man ſhall be bowed down] Or, humbled, abaſed; when they are ſtript of all thoſe goodly matters, implements, and ornaments, wherein they ſo much formerly prided themſelves, chap. 39. 4, 6. Lam. 1. 7, 10. See v. 9, 11.

and the Lord alone ſhall be exalted in that day] See v. 11.

V. 18. And the idols] Of the name, or word, ſee before, v. 8. their idols ſhall not be able to ſave themſelves; much leſs thoſe that ſaved them, and expected ſafety from them. See chap. 1. 31. 2 Sam. 5. 21. ch. 46. 1, 2.

he ſhall utterly aboliſh] He, to wit, the Lord, of whom, v. 17. or, the idols ſhall utterly paſs away; or, be aboliſhed. For the verb is of a paſſive ſence, and ſignifies ſuch a changing, or paſſing away, as is accompanied with diſſolution, and deſtruction, Job 14. 14. Pſal. 102. 26. Prov. 31. 8. compared with Prov. 24. 11. or more fully, (the noun being plural, and the verb ſingular) the idols, each of them, ſhall be utterly aboliſhed. For, that is uſually intimated, in ſuch kind of conſtruction. The like is found, Gen. 49. 22. Exod. 17. 20. & 31. 14. Prov. 3. 18. and 14. 1. See v. 20. ch. 3. 5, 10. & 26. 19.

utterly] So the word, here in an adverbial notion, is found adjectively oft uſed elſewhere; as of the ſacrifices, wholly, or utterly conſumed and burnt all to aſhes, Levit. 6. 22, 23. Deut. 13. 16. & 33. 10. Pſal. 51. 20. the rather to be obſerved, (as implying a general and utter abolition of their idols) becauſe a Writer of ſome note, denyeth the word here uſed, ſo to ſignifie, and would have the text read, they ſhall paſs away, as the night doth at the Sun-riſing, Cant. 2. 17. but this the vowel points will not bear.

aboliſh] Aboliſhed they ſhall be, either by Gods judgment executed upon them, Exod. 12. 12. 1 Sam. 5. 3, 4. Ier. 43. 12. & 46. 25. See ch. 1. 31. or by the hands of thoſe, that had before made, and adored them; being now either aſhamed of them, when they finde how unable they are to help them, v. 30. or abhorring them, and ſeriouſly repenting of their folly, in the worſhip of ſuch vile, and baſe ſtuff, ch. 17. 7, 8. & 27. 9. & 30. 22. Hoſ. 14. 8.

V. 19. And they ſhall go into the holes of the rocks] The wicked Idolaters, terrified with the dreadfulneſs of Gods judgments, ſhall betake themſelves to any place, where they might, if it were poſſible, be ſheltered from Gods wrath, or be hidden from his ſight. See v. 10.

they ſhall go] Or, men ſhall go; or, there will then be going into the holes of the rocks. An imperſonal, or indefinite manner of ſpeech, (like that, Numb. 19. 5. and he; or, one ſhall burn the heifer; that is, the heifer ſhall be burnt. And Mal. 1. 5. and they; or, men ſhall call them: that is, they ſhall be called,) which makes it, here, the more emphatical. As if he had ſaid, (naming none that ſhould ſo do) there will be nothing on all hands, but running into holes, and caves, to hide themſelves, Hoſ. 10. 8. Luk. 23. 10. Rev. 6. 16. & 9. 6.

and into the caves] Heb. holes; or, hollow places. For it comes from a word, that ſignifies to pierce, or, bore; or thruſt through. Ezek. 28. 9. and hath affinity, both, with that, which ſignifies windows, that are broken through the wall, to let in air, and light, Jer. 22. 14. and with that alſo, that ſignifies pipes, that are made hollow, for wind and breath to paſs through, Judg.11.34. Such holes, or hollow places, as are as windows, or pipes, in the ground. The word is no where elſe found.

of the earth] Heb. duſt, as verſ.10.

when he ariſeth] So is God ſaid to do, when he comes to execute judgment; who before ſeemed to ſit ſtill, as not regarding what men did. So Pſal.3.7. and 7.6. and 9. 19. & 68. 1.

to ſhake terribly the earth] Or, land, as ch. 1. 7. and 9. 19. and verſ. 7. when he comes to make a terrible earthquake in the State, Pſal.75.3. Great commotions and concuſſions in a State, are compared to great earthquakes, that over-turn houſes, and buildings, and ſwallow up, ſometime, whole cities, Rev.6.12,14. & 8.5. and 11.13,19. and 16.18. Zach. 14.4. So v.21. Yea, ſuch ſometime come before, as preſages of further judgments, Matth. 24.7. Mar. 13. 8. Luk. 21. 11. and ſo it ſeems, one did, as a warning piece, or peal, to that here denounced. See Amos 1.1. Zach.1.4,5.

V. 20. In that day] Then; or, at that time: as v.11. chap. 3. 7.

a man ſhall caſt his idols] Man, for men; as verſe 9. Idolaters ſhall with indignation and diſdain, caſt their idols, the moſt pretious of them; not the treen, and the ſtone onely, Ezek.20.31. but their ſilver, and golden ones, Pſal. 115. 4. into the vileſt and filthieſt holes and corners; when they ſhall perceive them utterly unable to ſtand them in any ſtead. See ch.1.29. & 8. 21. Though ſome (but with leſs probability) underſtand it, of hiding them in ſuch places for ſecurity, in regard of the richneſs of their materials. But the verb here uſed, ſeems to imply, not a care to keep, but a contempt, and diſregard, as Ezek.7.19.

which they made each one for himſelf] Heb. which they made for him; or, for himſelf. Which may be taken, either indefinitely, and impersonally, which they made; that is, which were made for him: as Gen.41.13. he reſtored me to mine office; and him he hanged; that is, I was reſtored to mine office, and he was hanged. And ch.60.14. they ſhall call thee; that is, thou ſhalt be called. See v. 19. or, by a tranſition from number to number, in Scripture not unuſual; as Pſal.127.5. & 140. 8. diſtributively, as our Engliſh well renders it; each one for himſelf. The rather, becauſe the word is taken collectively in the former branch. See v.8,18.

to the moles, and to the bats] Some joyn theſe words with the next before-going; and ſo render the text, which they made to worſhip moles, and bats. As if the meaning were, that they made golden, and ſilver images; as the Egyptians ſometime of mice, 1 Sam.6.4,5. So of moles, and bats, thereby to worſhip thoſe creatures, whom thoſe figures did reſemble. And true it is, that the Idolaters, in thoſe times, did, in their idolatrous ſervices, make uſe of the pictures and images, even of the vileſt, and baſeſt creatures, Ezek.8.10. yet, not in likelihood, to worſhip thoſe very creatures, but ſuch imaginary dieties, as by thoſe forms they intended ſymbolically to repreſent. So the Philiſtims by their Dagon, framed like a fiſh, or a mer-maid rather, 1 Sam.5.4. intended not to worſhip any fiſh, or ſuch Sea-monſter, but their tutelar-God; whom, out of ſome ſuperſtitious conceit, they were pleaſed ſo to portray. This expoſition, therefore, ſeemeth over-much forced; and the words are rather to be referred to the firſt branch of the verſe; they ſhall caſt them to the moles, and to the bats, that is, into ſuch holes, as the one dig in the ground; and ſuch dark and duſty corners, as the other uſe to rouſt in, either about the houſe, or elſewhere; not the very ſame, neceſſarily, but any ſuch. See, ſhips of Tarſhiſh, v. 16.

moles] The word is no where elſe found; but ſignifies ſuch a beaſt, as digs, and boroughs in the ground. Which ſome therefore would have to be the cony, or the great mountain-rat, that is riſe in the Alps. But the Hebrew hath another name for the one, Levit.11.5. Pſal.104.18. Prov.30.26. And of the other it is uncertain, whether it were at all found, or known, much leſs frequent in thoſe parts. It is moſt probable therefore to be, as it is here rendered, the mole, though another word alſo be ſo tranſlated, Heb. 11, 30. Some would make two ſeveral words of it, rendring it, to dig holes, or vaults; but the former is the more generally received, and the more probable.

bats] Of this all agree, both here, and Levit.11.19. Deut. 14,18. yet the Latine word for a mole, is the very ſame with this. And the one may be derived from the other, in regard of ſome qualities, wherein thoſe two creatures agree. As in the dimneſs, and duskineſs of their eye-ſight, not enduring the broad day-light. For neither of them is ſtark blind; and the ſame word in Hebrew (yet not this) being uſed both of a fowl, Levit.11.18. and of a creeping creature in the very ſame chapter, v. 30. Some of the Rabbins render it in the former place, a bat; in the latter, a mole.

V. 21. To go into the cliſts of the rocks] When he hath thrown away his idols, that could not ſecure him, to aſſay what ſhift he can make for himſelf. See v. 18.

cleſts] As Exod.33.22.

into the tops] Or, cliſs. See ch.57.5. to go to the cleſts; or, up to the cliffs. The word in the original, doth properly ſignifie a branch, chap. 17. 6. & 27. 10. and being applyed to rocks, and hills, it ſignifieth ſuch parts thereof, as the main body of the rock, or mount, doth branch it ſelf forth into. The cliffs, as we term them, between which places of refuge and ſhelter, are oft-times found; and which being ſteep, and riſing higher then the main bulk, or body of the rock, are not of eaſie acceſs for an enemy, Judg.15.8. Pſal.104. 18. Jer. 48.20.

of the ragged rocks] The word, ragged, is not in the original; nor is it included in the term here uſed: which ſignifies any rock in general, Num.20.8. Pſal.40.2. chap.32.2. See chap. 16. 1.

for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his Majeſty] See verſe 10, 19.

when he ariſeth to ſhake terribly the earth] See before, v. 19.

V. 22. Ceaſe ye from man] A dehortation, very fitly inferred upon the former denuntiation; and making way for what followeth, ch. 3.1,2,&c. ſeeing that all humane helps, and external ſtayes will fail; and no might or height will be able to ſecure any, when God comes to execute judgment: be admoniſhed, and adviſed, to caſt off your vain confidence in frail and mortal man, Pſal.146.3. Jer.17.5,6. and remember you have to do with God, before whom no man is able to ſtand, Pſal.76.7,12. Eccl.6.10. ch. 45.9.

man] For, men; as v. 20.

whoſe breath is in his noſtrils] Heb. in his noſe. Whoſe life is ſo frail, that if his noſtrils be but ſtopt, that he cannot breathe freely, he dyeth, 2 King.8.15. or whoſe life, as a puff of wind, paſſing to and fro through his noſtrils, may be very ſoon and ſuddenly gone. Or, who may puff and blow, as if he could do great matters, Pſal.10.5. and be puffed up, and ſwell with an high conceit of himſelf, 1 Cor.8. 1. 1 Tim. 6. 4. but all is no more, but a little looſe wind, that may be ſoon gone, and he with it, Pſal. 78.39. and 146. 4. Act.5.5.

for wherein is he to be eſteemed?] What reckoning is to be made of him, Job 7.17,18. Pſal.8.4. & 144.3,4. Not, but that man is an excellent creature of himſelf, bearing Gods image, Gen. 1. 27. & 9.6. and being one of Gods maſter-pieces, Gen. 1. 26. Pſal.139.14,16. of more value then the whole world beſides, Matth.16.26. as appeareth by the price paid for his ranſome, 1 Pet. 1.18,19. But that, if he come into compariſon with God, or if he ſhall ſtand in oppoſition againſt God, he is a ſorry, feeble, worthleſs thing; a puff of wind, and a pile of duſt, Pſal.103.14. & 78.39. Eccl. 12. 7. a thing of nothing, or leſs then nothing; that God is able eaſily to blow away, and bring to nought, in an inſtant, Gen.2.7. and 3.19. & 18. 27. Pſal.62.9. chap.40.15,16,22,24. Dan.4.35.

CHAP. III.

Verſe 1. For behold, &c.] This chapter is part of the Prophecie, or Sermon, beginning chap. 2. 2. Very ſuteably ſubjoyned to the dehortation, wherewith the former chapter is concluded. He dehorted, there, from confidence in the creature; man eſpecially, and whatſoever ayd or ſupport he is able to afford. And here he renders a reaſon of that his dehortation; to wit, becauſe all ſuch props and ſtayes God hath determined to withdraw.

behold] A note as well of admiration, as of attention; giving warning of ſome, as well admirable, as remarkable matter to enſue. So Gen.6.13. ch.7.14. and 29. 14.

the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] See ch.1.24.

doth take away] Heb. is taking away; or, is withdrawing: as Prov.28.9. he is preſently about to do it. He will certainly do it; and he will ſuddenly do it: It is as ſure to be done, and ſoon done, as if it were in doing, or done already. So Gen.6.7,13. 1 King. 14. 14. chap. 29.14. Jer. 4.6. and 5.15.

the ſtay, and the ſtaff] All means, one and other, whereby, as with a ſtaff, mans life is ſuſtained, v. 1. or a State is ſupported, v.2,3. The words in the original, do both ſignifie one and the ſame thing; to wit, ſuch a ſtaff, wherewith men, weak through ſickneſs, Exod. 21.19. or age, Zach. 8.4. or for eaſe in journey, Mar. 6.8. are wont to ſtay themſelves. They differ only, herein, that the one is a maſculine, the other a feminine form; either is uſed for ought, that a man ſtayeth himſelf with, truſteth to, or relyeth on, Pſal. 18. 18. ch. 36. 26. though the latter only be found uſed for a ſtaff properly ſo termed; both mentioned here, to intimate ſtayes of all ſorts, more or leſs.

the whole ſtay of bread] Heb. all ſtaff; or, ſtay of bread. (as whole head; or, every head, chap. 1.5.) Hereby ſome underſtand that power and vertue that bread hath to nouriſh; as if God threatned to deny a bleſſing to their food. So that albeit they had bread, and did eat; yet what they did eat ſhould not nouriſh them, ſhould do them no good. A judgment ſuppoſed to be threatned, Levit. 26. 26. in thoſe words, ye ſhall eat, and not be ſatisfied; and to have been put in execution, Hag. 1. 6. where it is ſaid, ye eat, but are not ſatisfied; or, filled. And true it is, that mans life, health, and ſtrength, depends not on bread, or food; but on Gods Will and pleaſure, Deut. 8. 3. Matth. 4. 4. who, if he deny a bleſſing unto the creature, or withdraw the power and efficacy from it; which he can do, when he will, and oft doth: the creature then, though we have it, and uſe it, can nothing avail us. But even thoſe two Scriptures ſeem rather to intimate a ſcarcity of bread; as by the tenour of the context in either may appear; as alſo by the oppoſition in the former of them, of eating their fill; or, feeding to ſatiety, to the full, Levit. 26. 5. and in the preſent paſſage, God ſeems rather to threaten the taking away from them, the creatures themſelves, that are the ordinary ſtayes of mans life; as the perſons alſo of thoſe, that were the ſtayes of their State, v. 2, 3. By the ſtay, or, ſtaff of bread, therefore, I ſuppoſe rather to be meant, bread it ſelf: Bread being put for all manner of food, and ſuſtenance, as the principal, moſt generall, and moſt ſtrengthening food, Pſal. 104. 14, 15. (as 1 King. 4. 22, 23. Neh. 5. 14, 15, 18. ch. 4. 1.) and ſtaff of bread, for bread; which is as a ſtaff, or, a ſtay, Levit. 26. 26. Judg. 19. 3, 8. Ezek. 4. 14. and 5. 16. as the daughter of Zion, for Zion; that is, as a daughter, ch. 1. 8. and the ſign of circumciſion, for circumciſion, which is a ſign, Rom. 4. 11. God threatning to bring upon them (as he did ſometime upon Egypt; where he is ſaid, as here, to have broken the whole, or, all the ſtaff of bread, Pſal. 105. 16.) an extream ſcarcity of food. And what was here threatned, we ſhall finde fulfilled, Jer. 37. 21. & 38. 4.

and the whole ſtay of water] Heb. as before, all ſtay; or, ſtaff of water. All manner of drink, as needful as bread, or meat, for the ſupport of mans life: All comprehended under the name of water, becauſe water is in thoſe parts, the moſt general and ordinary drink, Num. 21. 5. Deut. 2. 28. & 9. 9. 1 King. 18. 4, 5. 2 King. 6. 22. Jer. 3. 7.

ſtay of water] As of bread before. For, water it ſelf. See Amos 4. 8. compared with Hag. 1. 6.

V. 2. The mighty man, &c.] Thoſe two mentioned, ver. 1. were the ſtays of each ſeveral mans life. Theſe that follow, being the prime perſons: for martial, civil, and Eccleſiaſtical Officers are not the chief ornaments only, but the ſtays and pillars of the joynt body politique, both of Church and State, Judg. 5. 14, 15. 2 King. 2. 12. and 13. 14. Pſal. 68. 27. & 75. 3. Eccl. 10. 17. ch. 1. 26. 1 Tim. 3. 15. which being removed therefore, the ruine of both muſt needs enſue; as of an houſe, when the principal pillars are pulled away, that ſupport it, Judg. 16. 29, 30.

mighty] For ſtrength of body, 1 Sam. 14. 52. 2 Sam. 17. 10. or, for power of command, Gen. 10. 8, 9. and the man of war] Or, the warriour. Skilful and expert in military affairs, Judg. 20. 17. 1 Chr. 12. 36.

the Judge, and the Prophet] The one to act, and by execution of juſtice, to reform, Jud. 2. 18, 19. The other to inſtruct; and by inſtruction, to reclaim, Jer. 23. 22.

and the prudent] The word properly ſignifies a Diviner; and is taken, commonly, in an evil ſence, for ſuch, as by diabolical wayes of divination, undertake to fore-tell future events, Deut. 18. 10. Joſh. 13. 22. Yet here, in the better part, for a man of much ſagacity, and depth of judgment, able ſo to bolt out the truth of things difficult, and abſtruſe; and to deem of, and gueſs ſhrewdly at the conſequences, and events of affairs, that he may ſeem to have a ſpirit of divination in him. So is the word taken, Prov. 16. 10. and an inſtance of it we may ſee in Solomon, 1 King. 3. 16, 28. See Eccl. 9. 16, 18.

and the ancient] As ch. 9. 15. by reaſon of years, and age, grave, wiſe, and experienced; and in that regard, of more authority, Levit. 19. 32. Prov. 16. 31. and 20. 19. Job 15. 9, 10. & 32. 4, 6, 7. Ezek. 7. 20. See 1 King. 12. 6, 8.

V. 3. The captain of fifty] One of the leaſt numbers that Commanders took charge of, Exod. 18. 21, 25. 1 Sam. 8. 12. 2 King. 1. 9, 11, 13. intimating, that hardly any fit to undertake the leaſt and loweſt charge, ſhould be left. See verſe 7, 8.

and the honourable] Heb. the eminent in countenance, as ch. 9. 15. one that carries authority with him in his countenance, a man of reſpect, in regard of his birth, (Eccl. 10. 17. chap. 19. 11.) place, or parts, Eccleſ. 8. 1.

and the counſellours] Such as Princes are wont to have neer at hand, to adviſe with in weighty affairs, 2 Sam. 15. 12. and 16. 23. 1 Chr. 26. 14. 2 Chr. 30. 2. Eſth. 1. 3. ch. 1. 26. & 40. 13. Such, as being pious and prudent, may be of great concernment for the ſupport of a State; and where ſuch fail, all is like to fall, and miſcarry, both at home, and abroad, Prov. 11. 14. and 24. 6. Mic. 4. 9.

and the cunning artificer] Heb. the wiſe of the workmen, in timber, ſtone, or metal; for in Scripture, as alſo in other the learned languages, the skilful in ſuch arts are termed wiſe; and skilfulneſs in them, wiſdome, Exod. 31. 3, 6. ſuch among them, as are in ſuch affairs more skilful then ordinary; who being of much uſe in a State, either for civil, or warlike employments: much inconvenience and detriment therefore may accrue to a State, by want of them, 1 Sam. 13. 19, 20. 2 King. 12. 11, 12. and 24. 14. Jer. 24. 1. Zach. 1. 20, 21. For I cannot here accord with that learned Writer, who would have the words rendred, one skilful in witchcrafts; becauſe the Chaldee uſeth the latter term commonly for witch-crafts.

artificer] The word ſignifies (as alſo the Latine that anſwers it) ſuch, as work either in metals; as ſmiths, braſiers, and goldſmiths, Gen. 4. 12. Deut. 27. 15. or, in timber and ſtone; as carvers, carpenters, maſons, and the like, 2 Sam. 5. 11. 1 Chr. 14. 1. and 22. 15.

and the eloquent Orator] Or, skilful of ſpeech. Heb. skilled in charms, ch. 26. 16. and ſo alſo would that former learned Annotator have it here taken. But it is generally ſuppoſed rather, thereby, here to be meant one of that power and efficacy in ſpeech; that he is able by his perſwaſions, ſo to prevail with thoſe he ſpeaks to, that his words ſeem to be as a ſpel; and the perſons he ſpeaks to, to be as charmed by him, Pſal. 58. 5. 1 Cor. 2. 4. As is the word of divination uſed in no ill ſence, Prov. 16. 10. Such an one was Abigail, that charmed David, 1 Sam. 25. 24, 34. and ſuch another was the woman of Abel, that charmed Joab firſt, and then the whole City, and ſo ſaved it from being ſacked, 2 Sam. 20. 16, 22. Of ſuch Solomon, Eccleſ. 9. 14, 15. The words, Orator, Artificer, and ſo the reſt of them, though in the ſingular number, are not meant of any one particular perſon; but are put collectively, for all, or moſt, of each degree or rank mentioned. So ch. 2. 7, 20. v. 5.

V. 4. And I will give children to be their Princes] The fearful effect following on the removall of ſuch as are of abilities for government and employment.

I will give children to be their Princes] Or, I will make children their Princes. For, that is the uſual ſence of the Hebrew phraſe here uſed, Pſal. 2. 8. chap. 60. 17. Jer. 9. 10.

I will give] Set up, place in Offices of government. For, into ſuch places none come, but either by Gods permiſſion, or appointment, Pſal. 75. 6, 7. Prov. 8. 15, 16. Dan. 4. 25, 32. and he gives ſuch, as well in wrath, as in mercy, Hoſ. 13. 11.

children] Either in age, and years, and conſequently rude, and raw, wanting experience and diſcretion for ſo weighty an employment, Eccl. 10. 16. or of a childiſh diſpoſition, for wit, skill, carriage, courage, and the like, no better then children; or in ſome ſort worſe, becauſe leſs teachable and tractable then children, Eccl. 4. 12. Such were Ahaz, Manaſſes, and Joſias, his ſucceſſors. See v. 12.

and babes ſhall rule over them] Babes, that is, childiſh, babiſh ones; no wiſer or diſcreeter, then either ſucking, or newly weaned babes. For, from the word that ſo ſignifies, the moſt deduce That here uſed, Pſal. 8. 2. ch. 28. 9. Yet ſome other render it, men of illuſions, or, inſolencies; that is, mockers; men of inſolent carriage; ſuch as take delight in the ſcornful uſage of others. For ſo is the word taken, from whence they derive it. But the former ſeems the genuine ſence of the word here, (being no where elſe found) as confirmed by what followeth, v. 12.

V. 5. And the people ſhall be oppreſſed] The neceſſary conſequent, either of none, or of ill government; where either no governours at all are, or ſuch in place of government, as are not able to govern themſelves, Judg. 9. 4, 6, 15, 20. & 17. 6. & 18. 1. & 19. 1. & 21. 25.

oppreſſed] Not by cloſe, and under-hand dealing defrauded; but by force, and open violence deſpoiled, as Judg. 18. 24, 25. So v. 2. Some read it, and the people ſhall oppreſs one another; or, among the people, one ſhall oppreſs another. And the ſence comes all to one, in either; but the verb here uſed, is paſſive, as 1 Sam. 13. 6. & 14. 24. chap. 53. 7.

one by another] Or, one againſt another. Heb. man by man; or, man againſt man. This clauſe ſome joyn to the former words, as our Engliſh hath it. Others begin a new ſentence with them, ſupplying a word, much of the ſame notion with that which in the next branch is ſubjoyned. Man ſhall riſe againſt man, as Mic. 7. 6. that is, one againſt another, as 1 Sam. 2. 25. and the points of diſtinction, in the original, carry it rather this way. See ch. 9. 21.

and every one by his neighbour] Heb. a man by; or, againſt his neighbour: or, friend. A common phraſe in Hebrew, for one another; without any ſpecial notion, or intimation of mutual relation, or reſpect, Exod.21.14,18,35. ch.13.8. Jer.7.5. Yet, in this place, it ſeems to have ſome emphaſis in it; as implying, that no reſpect of vicinity, or amity, would be had among them; but that they would be as forward to wrong a neer neigbour, as a meer ſtranger, a friend, as a foe. See Jer.9.4,5. Mic.7.5,6.

the child ſhall behave himſelf proudly againſt the ancient] There ſhall be a general confuſion of all degrees, without reſpect of age, or State, ch.24.2.

behave himſelf proudly] Or, ſtrengthen himſelf. For the word ſignifies, as well power, as pride, Pſal.138.3. Cant.6.5. See Rahab, ch.51.9. Heb. behave themſelves proudly; or, ſtrengthen themſelves. For the noun is ſingular, the verb plural. Of which form of ſpeech, ſee before, on ch.2.18,20. The meaning is, every boy, or young ſtripling, will be taking heart, to carry himſelf malepertly, or inſolently toward the ancient, whom he ought to reverence and reſpect, Levit.19.32. See v.12.

and the vile] Or, contemptible. Heb. of light eſteem, 1 Sam.2.30. & 18.23. See ch.16.14. every baſe fellow (as before, every boy) will make bold with, or carry himſelf ſaucily, and arrogantly toward thoſe, that be far his betters. So Shimei, 2 Sam.16.5,9.

againſt the honourable] The word ſignifies weighty, as the other light. Men of worth, and weight. For honour and weight go together; and the ſame word, with little difference, in the three learned languages, imports either, Deut.32.58. ch.23.9.

V.6. When a man, &c.] Or, as ſome, For a man, &c. as rendring a reaſon of the former confuſion; becauſe every man ſhould ſhun all publike employment, and no man be willing to take any authority upon him, ch.59.16. The particle may well ſignifie either; as before, chap.1.29,30. & 2.19. And according to the former reading, confirmed by what followeth, v.7. It containeth a relation of a further evil, mentioned rather as an effect, and conſequent of the former; to wit, that the State ſhould be in ſuch a general confuſion, that men would be glad to get any to protect them, and to offer place of command and authority to them; but thoſe whom they ſhould make ſuch offers unto, conſidering how things ſtood, ſhould utterly refuſe that, which ordinarily men are wont moſt to affect, Num.16.3. 2 Sam.15.4.

when] Or, And when. As ſome render it, that go this way, (as ch.8.19.) for the better connexion of it with the precedent diſcourſe. So v.11.

a man] Or, any man; as Levit.1.2.

ſhall take hold of his brother] Any one of his kindred; as Gen.13.8. Deut.18.2. & 25.5,9. or, of his nation; as Deut.15.7,12. & 23.19,20. For, no ſtranger was to bear rule with them, Deut.17.15.

ſaying] A needful ſupply; though not in the Hebrew, as Pſal.105.15. Jer.30.17.

thou haſt clothing] Thou haſt good apparrel; ſuch as few have left them in theſe times of plunder, and ſpoil; that, for which the common ſort of people, are wont moſt to regard men, Jam.2.2. or, apparrel, being put more generally for all ſort of neceſſaries; thou art furniſhed with means, and art not unfit therefore to bear office among us.

be thou our Ruler] As Judg.9.8,10,12. & 11.6.

and let this ruine be under thine hand] Help to ſupport, or repair the ruines of the State; or, (the abſtract put for the concrete, as chap.1.21. & 64.6.) take the charge and government of this ruinous, or tottering State, upon thee. See Pſal.75.3. & 82.5.

ruine] As Zeph.1.3. A metaphor taken from an houſe, or wall; either ready to fall, or already fallen down, Pſal.62.3. ch.30.13. Amos 9.11. See v.8.

under thine hand] Under thy charge; hand, for charge; as Num.4.28,33.

V.7. In that day] Or, Then; as ch.2.11,20. anſwering to the particle when, v.6.

ſhall he ſwear] Heb. lift up. To wit, his hand. A phraſe frequent in Scripture, taken from the rite, in thoſe times uſed, of lifting up the hand toward heaven, in the ſolemn taking of an oath, as to him that dwelleth in heaven, (Pſal.123.1. chap.57.15. & 66.1.) by whom they ſware. See Gen.14.22. Deut.32.40. Ezek.20.6,15,23. Rev.10.5,6.

an healer] Heb. a binder up. A metaphor taken from chirurgery; and the binding up of wounds, and ſores for the cure of them. See ch.1.6. & 30.26. I dare not undertake the cure of ſuch deſperate evils, as the State is poſſeſſed of, and peſtered with, chap.1.5,6.

in mine houſe is neither bread nor clothing] I am not ſo furniſhed, as you ſuppoſe me to be. Either fear ſhall make him rather to forſwear himſelf, then to undertake ſo perplexed and perilous a charge. Or ſuch ſcarcity ſhall be of all neceſſaries, comprehended all under theſe two heads, (as we uſe to ſay, meat, drink, and apparrel,) Gen.28.20. 1 Tim.6.7. that even thoſe ſhall be found to want them, that were eſteemed to have greateſt ſtore of them, 2 King.6.27.

bread] See v.1.

V.8. For Jeruſalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen] Or, when; as v.6. So ſome, continuing the former ſpeech of the party refuſing to take charge; and rendring a reaſon of his refuſal to undertake the care and cure of the State: as being ſo far ruined, that it was not in his power to ſupport and keep it up. But the context runs better, as we have it; or, as ſome other, ſurely. For ſo the particle here uſed, is alſo ſometime taken, Iob 8.6. & 20.20. Pſal.44.22. or, Therefore, as Pſal.116.10. Ier.9.20. For the Prophets intent ſeems to be, as to relate their ruine, touched upon v.6. ſo to ſhew the cauſe of it, to wit, for their extream obſtinacy and impudency, in their carriage towards God.

Jeruſalem and Judah] The Jewiſh State, the Inhabitants of that city, and people of that land. See ch.1.1. For, that he ſpeaks not ſo much of the city, or land it ſelf; as of the perſons, people, and State, conſiſting of them, as ch.1.27. the words enſuing ſhew.

is ruined] Or, as ſome, hath ſtumbled; as Pſal.27.2. ch.8.15. according to that of the Apoſtle, Rom.9.32. & 11.11. but the other agreeth better with the former paſſage, v.6. and ſo is the word uſed, Pſal.107.12. & 109.24.

is fallen] Is come to confuſion, as ch.21.9.

becauſe their tongue and their doings are againſt the Lord] They ſet themſelves both in word and deed againſt Jehovah, him from whom they have their being, (Act.17.25,28. See ch.1.2.) Pſal.73.9. Mal.3.13. Jude 15.

to provoke the eyes of his glory] As if they ſpake, and did things on purpoſe, to provoke him to his face. So Pſal.78.17. chap.1.4. & 65.3. Jer.7.18,19. See ſomewhat the like, Job 17.2.

to provoke] Or, by provoking; or, in provoking. So is the particle uſed, Gen.3.22. by knowing; or, in knowing. For ſo it would be there rendered, and Deut.9.18. in doing evill. See ch.10.2.

the eyes of his glory] Or, his eyes of glory: as, his name of glory, Pſal.72.19. For, his moſt glorious eyes: his moſt glorious name. So, his hill of holineſs, Pſal.15.1. his Son of love, Col.1.13. His word of power, Heb.1.3. For, his moſt holy hill, his moſt beloved Son; his moſt powerful word.

V.9. The ſhew of their countenance doth witneſs againſt them] Their lewdneſs and ſhameleſneſs diſcovereth it ſelf in their very face and fore-head; neither do they deſire, or endeavor, to conceal it, Ezek.24.7,8.

ſhew] Or, tryall, as ſome. For it comes from a word that ſignifies, to acknowledg, Prov.20.11. or, ſtrangeneſs; as others: becauſe the ſame word ſometime ſignifieth, to eſtrange, 1 King.14.5,6. Or, as others, hardneſs; from a word, that ſignifies, to harden, Job 19.3. and the word in Arabick, is ſaid ſo to be uſed. Nor is it unuſual in the Latine tongue, to ſay, one of an hard face; for an impudent man. The word (as many other, in this Prophecy) is no where elſe found in Scripture; that which makes it the more ambiguous. However, the ſence is certainly this, that their very looks alone, were evidence enough, without further proof, to convince them, how they ſtood inwardly affected; the diſpoſition of their heart therein as evidently offering it ſelf unto view, as if it were even enſtamped on their faces, or engraven on their foreheads: and that their extream impudency is implyed, the ſequel ſhews. See Jer.3.3. an harlots fore-head.

doth witneſs] Doth give in evidence againſt them. Heb. doth anſwer; in reference to ſuch interrogatories, as are wont to be adminiſtred to thoſe that come in as witneſſes againſt a party queſtioned, or accuſed. So ch.59.12. and in the law, Thou ſhalt not anſwer a falſe teſtimony againſt thy neighbour, Exod.20.16. Deut.5.20.

and] Or, yea. As Neh.6.10. Pſal.7.4. For it is a further aggravation of their ſhameleſneſs.

they declare their ſin] They tell it out; (as Judg.14.16. thou haſt not told it me,) they not only ſhew it in their face, as, the heavens are ſaid to ſhew Gods righteouſneſs, Pſal.89.9 but they publiſh it with their tongue; not in way of confeſſion, as David, Pſal.32.5. but in way of profeſſion, as Lamech. Gen.4.23,24.

as Sodome] That is, the men of Sodome, who openly profeſſed what they intended, and commonly practiſed, Gen.19.5. So Judg.19.22. See Jer.2.25.

they hide it not] As thoſe ſeek to do, that are aſhamed of their ſin, Gen.3.7,8. Job 31.33. See Ezek.24.7. a defect of the pronoun, as ch.9.9.

wo to their ſoul] That is, to them; or, to themſelves: as in the next clauſe, and Lam.5.16. wo to us. So Pſal.3.2. they ſay to my ſoul; that is, to me: and ch.51.23. which have ſaid to thy ſoul; that is, to thee. Yet the phraſe makes the ſpeech more paſſionate; being ſpoken by the Prophet, rather in way of deploration, then of denunciation; as that alſo in the Lamentations. See ch.1.4,24.

for they have rewarded evil to themſelves] They do, by theſe their untoward and obſtinate courſes, procure miſchief to themſelves. They hurt not God, but wrong themſelves, Job 35.4. Prov.9.12. & 11.17. Jer.7.19.

rewarded] Or, done; or, procured. For the word doth not alwayes imply, any retribution, or reward; as it doth hereafter, v. 11. but oft-times, only a doing of ought, ſimply, to ones ſelf, or another, be it good, or evil. See Pſal.7.5.& 13.6.& 116.7. Prov.3.30. ch.63.7. In all which places, is the ſame word uſed. And it might well be here rendered in the preſent tenſe, (as the like. ch. 1.2,3.) they procure; or, do evill to themſelves: or bring evill upon themſelves. See Hoſ. 12.9.

V. 10. Say ye to the righteous] Some take theſe words, as ſpoken by way of conceſſion, and pre-occupation; you will ſay, there is a promiſe made to the righteous, that they ſhall do well; but ye are no ſuch, and it belongs not therefore to you, Deut. 28.18,19. Others, as in way of reprehenſion, and caſtigation of the falſe Prophets, that ſadded the hearts of the godly; but preached peace to the wicked, Ezek. 13.19,22. Others rather, by way of caution, and conſolation, to keep up the hearts, and bear up the ſpirits of that ſmall company of godly ones, that remained yet among them; and to give them aſſurance of Gods goodneſs to be ſhewed them, and his care to protect them, amidſt thoſe confuſed and calamitous times, ch.8.24. 2 Pet.2.9.

ſay ye to the righteous] Heb. ſay the righteous; or, tell the righteous. A defect of the particle, as 1 Sam. 15.31. one told David; and 1 King.20.9. tell my Lord the King. Say to them; that is, to them be it ſaid. As, ſay to Archippus; that is, to Archippus be it ſaid. (a place more then one way wronged.) Let the godly man aſſure him ſelf of this, ch.49.9. & 44.28. Hoſ.2.1,23. For what God ſayeth, or biddeth ſay, ſhall aſſuredly be, Num.23.19. chap.55.10,11. See ch.1.20.

the righteous] the upright man. Righteous, in regard of inherent righteouſneſs, truly, and ſincerely; though not perfectly, and exactly, according to the rigour of the law: (for ſo none is here on earth, Pſal.143.2. Prov.20.9. Eccleſ.7.20.) So Pſal,32.11. & 58.10. & 97.11. Jer.5.1. & Luk.1.6.

that it ſhall be well with him] Heb. that good. As in the next verſe, evill. A ſhort, but quick, and emphatical forme of ſpeech, (the like whereunto, ſee Job 34.18.) that good ſhall betide him; that it ſhall fare well with him, however it betide others. That howſoever things go, it ſhall go well with him; for all ſhall work for his good, Eccl. 8.12. Jer. 15. 11. Rom.8.28.

for they ſhall eat the fruit of their doings] They ſhall not fail to fare well, for their well doing, Pſal.18.24,25. & 62.12. Gal. 6.7,8. Heb.6.10. A metaphor, taken from husbandmen; who are then ſaid to eat, or enjoy the fruit of their labour, when they are fed, and maintained by that, about which they had formerly taken pains, Pſal. 128. 2. 2 Tim. 2. 6. So Prov. 1. 31.

they ſhall] That is, each one of them ſhall. For there is a paſſage from number to number; as chap. 1. 18, 20. See verſ. 5.

V. 11. Wo to the wicked] Or, But wo. A defect of the adverſative; as v. 6. Wo here, a note of denunciation; as ch.5. 11. See ch.1.4.

it ſhall be ill with him] Heb. no more but, evill. See v.10. howſoever the godly fare, it ſhall be ſure to go ill with him, Eccleſ.8.12,13. ch.65.13,15,20.

the reward of his hands ſhall be given him] He ſhall be rewarded according to what he hath wrought, Pſal. 28. 4. & 62. 12. Prov.1.31. Rom.2.6. 2 Cor.5.12.

hands] For works. Becauſe the ordinary inſtrument of working, Prov.30.28. & 31.16,31 Eccl.9.10.

V. 12. As for my people] Heb. my people. Put abſolutely. See the like, Pſal.11.4. & 18.30. Prov. 8. 14. & 16. 33. The Prophet, after the former aſſertion inſerted, concerning the different eſtate of good, and bad, according unto eithers diſpoſition, and demeanour, returns again to proſecute his former diſcourſe concerning the confuſion and diſorder of the times.

my people] An emphaſis in it; that ſuch confuſion and diſorder ſhould be among Gods own people, who had better means among them, whereby to know their duty, had been better taught, and profeſſed better things, Deut.4.5,7,8. & 5. 27. or, that Gods people, thoſe whom he had in a ſpeciall manner made his, and undertaken to protect, ſhould by perſons of no men of worth, or parts; boys, and women, be ſo baffled, and abuſed, ch.32.5. See ch.2.3.

children are their oppreſſors] Or, children oppreſs them. Heb. child oppreſſing them; or, oppreſſors of them: That is, every child, or every boy, is oppreſſing them. Of the phraſe, ſee before, v. 5. Yet ſome read the words, My people do their Oppreſſors glean; that is, their oppreſſors do ſo ſpoil and peel them, that they leave nothing behind. And the word indeed may ſignifie a gleaner of grapes, properly; as another is thought to ſignifie (but that doubtful) of corn, Pſal.129.7. and ſo it ſhould be an alluſion to that, in the Law, where they were forbidden to pluck their vines ſo, as not to leave ſome cluſters behinde, Levit.19.10. Deut.24.21. and the meaning were, that they ſhould utterly ſtrip them of all; as Jer. 6.9. See Jer. 49.9. But the word rather ſeems here, to be taken in the former ſence; as that word neer unto it, and of the ſame lineage with it, doth very frequently import, Jer. 6.11. & 9.20. & 44. 10. and ſo the meaning is, that even boys and women abuſed them, and domineered over them; implying, as the inſolent carriage of the one party; ſo the baſe ſpirits of the other: that could endure to be ſo dealt with, by ſuch, Jud. 8.20,21. & 9.34. See v.4,5.

women rule over them] Thoſe of the weaker ſex, 1 Pet. 4.7. not ſo fit for rule, 1 Tim.2.12. and yet over-ruling thoſe, it may be, that ſhould rule; as Jezabel did Ahab, 1 King.21.7, 15, 25. that, which of Jeconiah's mother, ſome ſuppoſe, 2 King.24.12. or, as ſome, effeminate and womaniſh men, ch.19.16. The word in the Hebrew, wants the firſt, or head letter, of that which ſignifies men; as denying head-ſhip to ſuch. They go too far from the text, that would render the word, either uſurers; or oppreſſors.

O my people] He turns his ſpeech to the people, as minding them, who they were that were the prime and principal cauſes of this their ruine.

they which lead thee, cauſe thee to erre] Thy leaders, thy rulers, princes, prieſts, and prophets, that ſhould aright lead thee, miſlead thee; partly by their evil examples, and partly by their miſ-government, the one; and their miſteaching the other, ch.1.10,23. Lam.2.14. & 4.13.

which lead thee] Or, that ſhould direct thee. From a word that ſignifies, as, to go, Prov. 4. 14. and ſpecially, to go on ſtrait, or right, Prov.9.6. So to right; or, righten, ch. 1. 17. and to direct; or, guide: thy directors; or, thy guides, Matth. 15.14. & 23.16. or, as others, thoſe that bleſs thee. Thy falſe Prophets, that preach peace to thee, and that ſooth thee up in thy ſins, Jer.6.14. Lam.2.14. Ezek.13.6,10,16. and ſo is the word uſed, Job 29.11. Pſal.72.16. Cant.6.9. Mal.3.12, 15. But the former ſeems more agreeable to the ſcope of the Prophet, both here, and ch.9.16.

cauſe thee to erre] Heb. only cauſe to erre. A defect of the pronoun, or affix, as ch.1.15. ſeduce thee, lead thee out of the way, ch.19. 13. Jer. 50. 6. People being more prone to follow bad examples, then good; and to be led aſide by irreligious, 1 King.11.5,13. & 12.30. & 14. 16. Jer.44.17. then to be led aright by their righteous, & religious Rulers, 2 King. 14. 4. and 15.4,35. 2 Chr.27.2. & 30.3,10. & 33.17.

and deſtroy the way of thy paths] Heb. ſwallow up. They ſpoil thee, and overthrow thee, by cauſing thee to take evil wayes, and corrupting thy life and courſes. So is the word uſed for ſpoiling, and deſtroying, Pſal.35.25. & 107.27. chap. 49.19. Lam.2.2,5,16. Or, as others, they hide; or, cover. As, ſay they, the word is taken, Num.4.20. becauſe things hidden, or covered, as well as things ſwallowed down, or deſtroyed, are removed out of ſight. And they expound it of the Prieſts and Levites, that concealed, and withheld from the people, the doctrine of the Law, whereby they ſhould ſhape their courſes aright, Luk.11.52. But the former ſence is more plain, and more frequent. Nor doth the word in that place of Numbers, ſeem to ſignifie ſimply to cover, but to wrap up, or to involve, and make up in a fardle; where the things ſo made up, ſeem, as ſwallowed up in their outmoſt wrappings.

the way of thy paths] See chap.2.3.

V. 13. The Lord ſtandeth up] Heb. Jehovah. See ch. 1. 2. The Lord chief-Juſtice, or Judge-general, Pſal.50.6. & 75.7. & 82.1. chap.33.22. A deſcription of Gods entrance upon, and proceeding in judgment, againſt thoſe oppreſſors, and miſleaders of his people.

ſtandeth up] As Gen.37.7. Exod.15.8. or rather, is ſet; as Pſal.45.9. On thy right hand the Queen (thy wife, ſo the word ſignifies) is ſet; not ſtanding, but ſitting: as the Perſian kings wife beſide him, Neh.2.6. and Bathſheba the Queen-mother, on Solomons right hand, 1 King.2. 19. and ſo it would be rendred, Pſal.82.1. he is ſet, as the Judge on the bench, that ſitteth down, to hear cauſes debated before him, Exod.18.13, 14. chap.6.1. Dan.7.9. Joel 3.12. Rev.6.16. ſo, to ſet themſelves, (to wit, in battle array) and, to ſtand, (or ſtand ſtill) are mentioned, as two diſtinct notions, 2 Chr.20.17. See the like error in tranſlation, ch.52.2.

to plead] Or, to debate, Job 9.3. Prov.25.8,9. either, to plead and debate the matter in their behalf, as their advocate, Jer. 50.34. or to hear the pleas and debates on either ſide, as a Judge, Mic.7.9.

and ſtandeth to judge the people] He ſate down to hear, and debate; he ſtands up now, as the manner of Judges is, after full debate, to paſs ſentence. So Act.7.56. He appeared unto Stephen, as ready to paſs ſentence for him, againſt thoſe that had condemned him, and to avenge his blood upon them. Or, he ſtandeth to judge; that is, as he is ſet down about it, ſo perſiſteth in it, he goes on in it, and will not give it over, untill he have brought the matter to an iſſue, and finiſhed his work of judicature, Pſal. 94.14,15. chap.42.3. For, to ſtand, is ſometime to perſiſt in a buſineſs, Eccl. 8. 3. Hoſ. 10.9.

to judge the people] To judge for them; in their behalf. To paſs ſentence againſt their oppreſſors, as Pſal. 7. 8. & 26. 1. See ch.1.17.

the people] His people; of whom before, v. 12. Deut.32.36. A defect of the affix, v.12. Heb. peoples; as Pſal.7.8. chap.2. 3,4. the whole multitude of them, as well one, as another. He will hear, and right them all, be they never ſo many, Pſal. 145.14,21. & 146.7. God can, and will do it; though Moſes could not, Exod.18.14.

V. 14. The Lord will enter into judgment] Will come to a tryal, Job 14.13. Pſal.143. 2.

with the ancients of his people] Before was ſhewed in whoſe behalf, v. 13. here, againſt whom he would proceed.

the ancients] Or, elders; that is, as the next word ſhews, the Princes, and Rulers. So called, becauſe choſen ordinarily, of ſuch as were well in years, Exod. 24. 9,11. Num. 11. 16. Deut.21.2. and becauſe in maturity of underſtanding and judgment, they ought to be as ſuch, albeit they be not ſo far in years as ſome others, Exod.18.21. Deut. 1. 15. In which regard alſo, the ſame title is given unto the Miniſters of the Goſpel; though ſometime, having not attained yet to old age, 1 Tim.5.17. & 3.6. & 4.12.

of his people] Elders of the people, ſay ſome, as diſtinct from the Elders of the Prieſts. But thoſe of both ſorts were herein faulty; and in government they ſeem to have been conjoyned, Deut.17.9. 2 Chr.19.8.

for ye have eaten up the vineyard] Before, the perſons againſt whom he would proceed. Now the actions and inditements that he enters againſt them; and the crimes wherewith he chargeth them; to wit, their oppreſſions of his people.

for] Or, becauſe. Heb. and. The copulative for the cauſal; as Pſal.60.11. ch.64.5. and ſo it may be taken, 2 Sam.24.1. in thoſe words, and he moved David, &c. becauſe one (that is, Satan, 1 Chr. 21.1) had moved David; or, becauſe David had been moved. (of which forme of ſpeech, ſee chap. 1. 18, 20.) Others render it, but; as if it were the latter part of a ſpeech, partly conceived, and partly expreſſed: (as ſome make that of the Serpent, Gen.3.2.) wherein God having related what their duty was to have done, and what care they ought to have had of his vineyard; doth after proceed to ſhew, what a contrary courſe they had taken therewith; But ye have eaten it up. And indeed the copulative is oft uſed for the adverſative, as ch.2.6. & 5.2,6. Mal.2.11. But it is not needful, that it ſhould ſo be here uſed; nor are ſuch needleſs ſupplyes ſafe.

Ye have] Or, they have. A change of the perſon. See the like, chap. 1.29. Deut.31.28,29. the turning of his ſpeech to them, adds ſome emphaſis to it; as if he had ſaid, Ye, even ye, are thoſe that I ſpeak of.

eaten up] Deſtroyed, ſpoyled; a metaphor taken from beaſts, that depaſture, a ground, Exod.22.5. Num.22.4. & 24. 22. & 5.5. & 6. 13. or, that brouſe upon vines, and other plants, and ſo ſpoyl them, ch. 18.6. & 27. 10. Some render it, burnt up, as the word is taken, Judg. 15.5. Pſal.80. 16. and 83.14. ch.9.18. laid it as waſt, as if it were burnt up with fire, Joel 2.3.

the vineyard] Either Gods vineyard; that is, his Church; ch.5.1,7. his people, v.15. vineyard, for, my vineyard; as, people, for, his people, v.13. or, vineyard, for vineyards, Judg. 15.5. and with the article alſo, Deut.22.9. the vineyards, that is, the lands, and poſſeſſions of his poor people; of whom he ſpeaks, v.13,15. See 1 King.21.1,7,15. Neh.5.3,5. and] The defect of the copulative, makes the ſentence the quicker.

the ſpoyl of the poor] Not taken by them; but taken from them: as, my wrong, not done by me, but done to me, Jer.51. 35. and his ſnare, and his gin; not ſet by him, but ſet for him, Job 18.10.

ſpoyl] That which ye have wreſted, and torn from them; as in an hoſtile manner; or as wilde beaſts prey upon cattel. See ch. 10. 2.

is in your houſes] And that is evidence ſufficient againſt you, Mic.6.10. Zeph.1.9.

V. 15. What mean ye, &c.] Heb. what to you. And that all concentred in one word. A quick form of ſpeech, not unfit to expreſs anger and paſſion; What have ye to do? Or, Who gave you authority to uſe my people in this manner? A ſharp expoſtulation; as proceeding from, and intimating no ſmall meaſure of wrath and indignation: not unlike thoſe, Pſalm 50.16. chap. 52.5. Joel 3.4.

that ye beat my people to pieces] As Mic.3.2,3. Or, that ye cruſh them; as Job 4.19. Prov.22.22. Lam. 3.34. Or, bruiſe them; as chap. 53. 5, 10. Or, make pouder of them; as Pſalm 143. 3. (See the like, 2 King. 13. 7. Pſalm 18.42.) That ye exerciſe all manner of cruelty upon them. See ch. 1.15, 21. The ſame ſpeech is found, Pſalm 94.5.

and grinde the faces of the poor] Cauſe them by your oppreſſions, and hard uſages of them, ſo to pine away, that it manifeſtly appears, how it fares with them, by their faces. See ch. 1.17. Or, as ſome other, ye batter, ye beat them black and blew; ye are not content to bereave them of their goods, and means of maintenance; but you exerciſe your cruelty alſo upon their perſons; the marks whereof they bear about them in their faces. The word here uſed ſignifies, as to grinde, Numb.11.8, So to batter, Exod. 32.20.

ſaith the Lord God of hoſts] See ch.1.9,24.

V. 16. Moreover, the Lord ſaith] Heb. And; as Neh. 12. 8. Here the Prophet paſſeth from the actions, that God would proceed for againſt the men, the Rulers, and great ones eſpecially; unto the enditements that he had to commence againſt the women; and the heavy doom that ſhould be paſſed, and executed upon them, for the ſame.

becauſe the daughters of Zion are haughty] The crimes charged upon the women, are principally, their exceſs of pride, wantonnes, and vanity, diſcovering it ſelf in the manner of their gate, and garb.

Daughters of Zion] Not, as the Daughter of Zion; (of which phraſe, ſee chap.1. 18.) but, as Daughters of Iſrael, 2 Sam. 1. 24. And Daughters of Jeruſalem, Luk. 23. 28. The women that dwelt in Jeruſalem, whereof Zion, being a principal part, is put here for the whole city; as ch.4. 3. But here the rather, it may be, becauſe many of the women of chief note, and moſt faulty in the exceſſes, here taxed, (as thoſe before noted, and taxed for their domineering over Gods people, verſ. 12.) did, in that part of the city, (the kings Court eſpecially, being there ſcituate) reſide. So alſo, ver. 17. ch. 4. 4.

are haughty] Or, ſtately. Heb. are high; or, lofty; as ch. 55. 9. or, lift up themſelves; as Zeph. 3. 9. Carry their heads aloft.

and walk] Heb. will walk. And ſo after, again in the future, but put for the preſent: (as appeareth by the former) which, in hebrew, is not unuſual, eſpecially where the ordinary doing of, or continuance in the doing of a thing, is intimated. Thus they do, and thus they will do; for it is their ordinary guiſe. So Numb. 23.7,9. & 24.9,17. ch.5.8.

and walk with ſtretched-forth necks] Heb. ſtretched out in the throat: For ſo the word, here uſed, properly ſignifies; as ch. 58. 1. But is here put for the neck, becauſe part of it; or joyned to it; as alſo, Ezek.16.11.

ſtretched forth] The ſtretching out of the neck, is ſometime of earneſt deſire and expectation, Rom. 8. 19. Sometime of pride and ſtatelineſs, Pſalm 75. 5. So here.

and wanton eyes] Heb. lying, or, deceiving; or, dealing deceitfully, ch. 63. 8. With their eyes. (for both the prepoſition wants; as Pſalm 17. 7, 14. and the affix alſo; as ver. 13.) That which ſome expound of their painted faces, and counterfeit viſages. Of which, Jer. 4.30. Ezek. 23. 40. (See ch. 1. 15.) Others, of their lewd and enticing looks, Gen. 39. 7. Or as others rather read and rendred it, twinkling with their eyes. That which, as Solomon makes the note of a lewd man, Prov. 6. 13. So the Prophet here, the note of a light, and looſe diſpoſition in the women of his times.

walking, and mincing as they go] Or, tripping it, nicely, as they go along. Heb. walk, walking; or, go, going, and tripping; or, tabering; go going; as Pſalm 126. 6. That is, go ordinarily; or are wont to go tripping, or, tabering. The hebrew word, here uſed, being no where-elſe found, is ambiguous. Some ſuppoſe it, by interchange of one letter with another, of very neer affinity, to come from a word that ſignifies to beat, or, play on a taber. Which ſome of them underſtand of the creaking of their pantoſles. Others, rather of a ſet frame of affected pace, not without ſome noiſe or ſound, as they footed it: and ſo it may be rendred; They uſe to taber it as they go. As in another kinde, it is ſaid of the court-Ladies of Niniveh, carried away captive; that they ſhould go along with their Queen, in the ſame condition with them, tabering upon their breaſts, Nah. 2. 7. Others derive it from a word that ſignifies a little child, Jer.40.7. & 41.16. and render it, Go like little children; that can ſcarce go alone, and are fain to be led; imitating ſuch in the niceneſs of their gate. Or as others, going ſtruttingly, and wantonly, as littly boyes and girls are wont to do; in a lighter mannner then will ſtand with matronelike gravity. Others, laſtly, underſtanding it of ſuch an affected nice pace, as before, ſuppoſe it to come from an Arabick tearm, uſed in that language, for a pacing, or ambling-nag. Which may well be deemed the more probable, from that which next followeth.

and making a tinckling with their feet] This word alſo, as the former two, is no where elſe found. That from whence it hath its original, uſed in the ſingular number, Prov. 7. 22. ſignifies a fetter, as moſt render it; though our engliſh, the ſtocks in the plural; we have it, ver.18. for garters, or, chains, worn, uſually, about the legs. Some therefore expound it, going, as if they were fettered. Others, tinckling; that is, makeing a noiſe with their ſpangles about their gartering ſay ſome; with little bels about their ſhoes, ſay others; or with the chains of gold, or ſilver about their legs; wherewith they uſed to make a noiſe of purpoſe, as they went along in the ſtreets: See verſ. 18. Thus, as twinckling with the eyes, ſo tinkling with the feet, ſhould be taxed as a note of lightneſs. But they that render it, going, as if they were fettered; underſtand it of ſuch a nice kinde of affected pace, as was in the former tearm intimated; and here further deſcribed, by a reſemblance taken, either from captives and priſoners, that having irons upon their legs, cannot go freely and readily; but in a ſlow, and ſtalking manner, as their irons will give them leave. Or as others, from thoſe cords, or fetters, that horſe-breakers are wont to hamper young colts with, to bring them to a pace. That which ſorts well with the notation of the word fore-going, from the Arabick.

feet] For legs. as Pſal. 105. 18.

V. 17. Therefore the Lord] Heb. And. So Job 10. 15. & 21. 14. Their crimes were before, their doom now follows. God will puniſh them in thoſe things, and in thoſe parts, wherein they diſcover, and wherewith they practiſe their wantonneſs, and their pride.

will ſmite with a ſcab the crown of the head] So ours, and moſt Interpreters; as deeming the word, (no where elſe uſed) to come from one, which (with uſual change of a letter) ſignifies a ſcab; uſed oft in the deſcription of the leproſie, Lev. 13. 2, 6, &c. and without ſuch change alſo in another form, for the ſame, ch. 5. 7. So the ſence is, God with a ſcab, or, ſcal, will take off their hair, which is a part of womens glory, 1 Cor. 11. 15: and wherein theſe did pride themſelves. This might be effected, either by evil uſage, when they came into an enemies hands; or, by ſome foul diſeaſe otherwiſe ſiezing on them; ſuch, as not ſeldom follows looſeneſs of life, Job 20. 11. Prov. 5. 11. Yet ſome render it more generally; The Lord will peel, or, make bald the crown of the head. Which may alſo be done, by cauſing them to be ſhorn, or ſhaven by the hand of their enemies, with whom they ſhould be in captivity; which, with ſlaves and captives, is not unuſual, Deut. 21. 12. And is done, on purpoſe, ſometimes, in diſgrace; ſuch as it is alſo uſually deemed to be, 1 Cor. 11. 6. Or, by giving them ſuch occaſions of grief, as ſhould cauſe them to cut, yea, or to tear off their hair: that, which in heavy calamities, out of impatiency, and impotency of ſpirit, is oft done, Jer. 7. 29. But the firſt ſeems moſt probable. See verſ. 24.

the crown of the head] The natural ſeat of hair. He will make thoſe their heads, which before they carried ſo high, not only void of all lovelineſs, but ſo loathſom now, that they ſhall have little deſire to have any ſee them; and others, as little luſt to look after them, that were formerly taken with them. See Cant. 7. 5. of the daughters of Zion] As, the daughters of Moab, ch. 16. 2. See v. 16.

and will diſcover their ſecret parts] Heb. make naked; or, bare, Levit. 20. 18, 19. By bringing them into that miſerable condition, that thoſe, who now exceed in variety of apparrell, change of rayment, and unneceſſary ſuperfluities, ſhall want clothes, wherewith to cover their nakednes: ſhall hardly have to hide thoſe parts, which natural ſhame, and womanly modeſty, do, by all means, deſire and endeavour to conceal, and keep out of ſight, ch. 20. 4. Mic. 1. 11. Or, the meaning may be, that they ſhould, in way of ſcorn and abuſe, ſuffer ſuch diſgraceful uſage, by the uncivil, and immodeſt carriage of the ruder ſort of their enemies, into whoſe hands they ſhould fall, ch. 47. 3. Jer. 13. 22. Ezek. 16. 37. & 23. 10, 26. Hoſ. 2. 2, 10. Nah. 3. 5.

V. 18. In that day] What time this doom ſhall be put in execution; as ch. 2. 20. See ver. 7.

the Lord will take away] He will ſtrip them of all their ornaments, and abillements, wherein they now ſo much abound, Ezek. 16. 39. & 23. 26. Not that ſuch ornaments and attires, were of themſelves ſimply evil and unlawfull; (See Gen. 24. 22, 53. 2 Sam. 13. 18. Ezek. 16. 10, 13.) but their exceſs in them, and their abuſe of them, to the fomenting of their pride and luſt, is that wich is condemned in them; and for which the removal of them is here denounced. So Hoſ. 2. 8, 9. See ch. 5. 12.

the bravery] Conſiſting in the great variety of ornaments and attires, hereafter reherſed, being ſuch as they uſed to wear in times of feaſting and jollity: oppoſed therefore to mourning weeds, ch. 61. 3. Nor is the word to be reſtrained to the firſt of them alone, here mentioned; but hath reference alſo to all the reſt that enſue. The bravery of all theſe things; for, all theſe brave, and goodly things. As, bravery of excellency, for, brave excellency; or, excellent bravery, ch. 13. 19.

of their tinkling ornaments about their feet] Or as ſome, their ſlippers. The hebrew word properly ſignifies, fetters, Prov. 7. 22. but garters here, as the moſt; or, chains. Such golden chaines, as in divers of the Eaſtern parts women of faſhion uſe, at this day, to wear. This was, queſtionleſs, aimed at in the laſt clauſe of the verſe next before going.

and the cauls] Or, as ſome, net-works. As others, embroydered works; by change of a letter, from that which ſignifies, embroidery, Exod. 28. 4, 39. though ſome diſtinguiſh that and embroidery. Some would have it to be ſome ornament about the legs; as the former about the feet: as if the former were ſome kinde of ſhoes, or ſlippers; theſe of hoſe, or ſtockings. But there is little probability of either, The word hath no fellow.

and the round tires like the Moon] The word is found only here, and Judg. 8. 21, 26. where ſuch ornaments are ſaid to have been on the camels necks, that belonged to the Midianitiſh Princes. It is generally acknowledged, by the interchange of two letters of very neer affinity, and in ſound almoſt, if not wholly the ſame, to be derived from one, which in Syriack (whereof the Syrian deity is ſo termed) ſignifies the Moon; yet not ſo much the half, as the whole Moon. Others render it, in chains, or collars. Which are indeed round in compaſs, but do not ſo fitly reſemble the Moon. And chains are alſo ſaid to have been on the camels necks; and that diſtinguiſhed from theſe moon-like ornaments. Others, and thoſe not a few, take it, for round looking-glaſſes. And ſuch indeed ſwelling up, and bellying out, do not unfitly reſemble the Moon, and that at full; for from her roundneſs ſhe hath that name. But what ſhould looking-glaſſes do on camels necks? Others, laſtly, for ſome kinde of ornament about their ſhoes; ſuch, as the Nobility among the ancient Romans, ware: whereby they were diſtinguiſhed from the meaner ſort; or other ſuch jewels, and ornaments, ſhaped like the Moon; as among other Nations, (which ſtories ſhew) have been in uſe. Nor doth it hinder, but that theſe, here mentioned, ſhould be of the ſame ſort with thoſe; becauſe they reſembled not the figure of the round, or whole, but the half-hooked, or horned-Moon. For albeit the Moon, from her roundneſs, have that name; and ſo properly, and primarily deſign the Moon at full: Yet was it, in likelyhood, more largely uſed, to ſignifie that Planet, without ſpecial reſpect had to her ſeveral ſhapes. And ſo the word, here uſed, may well ſignifie ſuch Jewels, or ornaments, as repreſented her in any ſhape. Of which ſort might well be the ſilver, or golden boſſes, on the camels furniture, before mentioned.

V. 19. And the chains] So ſome. Others, collars; as collars of Aſſes with us. Which may therefore amount much to one. But chains, or, collars, and theſe ſeem to be diſtinguiſhed, Judg. 8. 26. where both are mentioned. The word, here uſed, comes from one, that ſignifies to drop. And becauſe pure Myrrhe, is ſuch as drops, or iſſues from the plant of it ſelf unforced, is by a word of the ſame original, thence ſo tearmed, Exod. 30. 34. Some therefore ſuppoſe, that by it here are meant, ſuch little boxes, like our civit-boxes of gold, wherein they uſed, either to reſerve, or carry about them, myrrhe, and other like odours, or ſweet oyntments; bearing the name of that for which they were firſt made and uſed. See ver. 20. Others take it for pearls; ſo tearmed from the form of them, (as ſome the like in Greek) reſembling the droppings of myrrhe, or other gummy matter: ſuch as we tearm, pendants; and our great ones were wont to wear at their ears.

and the bracelets] Or, chains. Peradventure the leſſer ſort of them, ſuch as our bracelets ordinarily are. The word, as it is here ſingle, is no where elſe found. But in a ſquare, or double form it is oft uſed, in deſcribing the wotk about the tabernacle; as Exod. 28. verſ. 14. & chap. 39. 15. and there ſignifies chains; it comes of a root that ſignifies to wreath; and hath affinity with one, that ſignifies the navel, Ezek 16. 4. And with another, that ſignifies, a coat of mail; or, a brigandine, 1 Sam. 17. 5. And it is moſt likely to import any ſuch ornaments, as conſiſt of links faſtned together; as the mail in the coat thereof conſiſting; or of gold-wire, or thread therewith covered, twiſted and wreathed together. Such as thoſe about the tabernacle, and Prieſtly robes ſeem to have been, of both kinds, whereof chains and bracelets are uſually made. It may, as ſome think, comprehend chains of all ſorts, uſed about neck, arm, wreſt, or leg. Howbeit, the Chaldee Paraphraſt uſeth the word ſometime for hooks; whence it may be ſurmiſed to intend ſuch golden hooks, claſps, or taches; as women uſe oft about their looſer garments, to faſten one part to another. Of which mention is made, Exod. 35. 22. though amiſs rendred there, bracelets, the word being commonly uſed for hooks, ch. 37. 29. Ezek. 19. 4, 19. & 29. 4.

and the muflers] Or, masks, or, veils; or, hukes. Such as women uſe to veil, or cover their faces with, as Rebekah did, Gen. 24. 65. and of which the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 11. 10, 15. (for the head there ſignifies not the skull, or ſcalp only, but takes in the face alſo; as when a man is ſaid to be beheaded, 2 Sam. 16. 9.) So ſome take it, becauſe the word whence it comes, is found uſed by the Jewiſh writers, for in that manner to cover: who yet from the word here, ſeem to have taken up that uſe of it, which in Scripture is not found. Others therefore expound it ſpangles, or ſpangled attires, that are wont to quiver, and by quivering to make a more glittering ſhew. Becauſe the original of it, is from ſuch a root, as in Scripture ſignifies trembling, and ſhaking, or, quaking, Pſal. 60. 3. chap. 51. 17, 22. Nah. 2. 3. Zach. 12. 2. The word it ſelf, is a ſole one.

V. 20. And the bonnets] Or, head-tires, or hoods. The word is of the ſame deſcent with that tranſlated, bravery, verſ. 18. And is deemed, ſometime, to be taken more largely, for all ſorts of goodly garments, ch. 61. 3, 10. But is moſt commonly uſed for head-attire; and that common to either ſex, as appeareth, Exod. 39. 28. Ezek. 24. 17, 23, & 44. 18. See ver. 22.

and the ornaments of the legs] Thus do divers render it. Some of them ſo taking it, becauſe it comes from a root that ſignifies, going, or pacing, or marching, Judg. 5. 4. Pſal. 68. 7. But theſe notations are not alwaies of certainty. The ſame word, with an Aleph onely prefixed, which alters not its original, is rendred, chains, Numb. 31. 50. and a bracelet, 2 Sam. 1. 10. Whence alſo it appears, that it was ſuch an ornament as was uſually worn, not on the leg, but on the arm. For it is ſaid to have been taken off Sauls arm; and yet in that other place in Numbers, ſome tranſlate it alſo garters, as the old latine alſo doth here; however, it appears that it was an ornament no more, if at all, of the legs, then of the arms: and the tranſlation therefore would be altered. See verſ. 19. bracelets. Of which, theſe ſeem to have been ſome ſpecial diſtinct kind.

and the head-bands] Siken fillets, or ribbens; which they uſed about their heads; therewith either to tye up their hair, or to faſten their other head-gear, or attire to their heads. See Ezek. 24. 17. It was an ornament of ſpecial note with them; as appears, Jer. 2. 32. See the note there. Nor is it to be omitted, that the royal Diadem (as the name it ſelf alſo imports) was in ancient times, no other then a fair and rich fillet. It comes of a word that ſignifies to tye, or to binde. And God ſeems to allude unto ſuch curious fillets, or ribbens; when he willeth his people to binde his precepts for a ſign upon their hands, Deut. 6. 8. As alſo Solomon, when he chargeth his ſon to tye, or binde the leſſons he taught him, about his neck, on his heart, and on his fingers; or, hands, Prov. 3. 3. & 6. 21. and 7. 3. and the tablets] Heb. houſes of the ſoul, or, breath; ſoul, for breath: as Gen. 6. 17. & 7. 22. and ſo ſome take it not amiſs, Jam. 2. 26. By theſe houſes, or receptacles of breath, ſome underſtand pomanders; or, boxes wherein they carried ſweet odours about them; with ſmall holes pierced in them (not unlike the myrrhe boxes, by ſome thought to be mentioned, ver. 19.) by the ſcent thereof, to refreſh their ſpirits when they pleaſed. Others, masks, or muflers, or the like, that covering the mouth, receive, or keep in the breath. For they ſeem to ſtray too far, that render it, pectorals; or, breaſt-plates; underſtanding thereby, ſuch jewels as they wore in their boſoms, or between their breaſts: Becauſe the ſoul, to wit, the heart, is there ſcituate. Another word is rendred, tablets, Exod. 35. 22.

and the ear-rings] Jewels, that hung in, or about their ears. So ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, and of ours. But there is another word uſed in Scripture for ear-rings, Numb. 31. 50. & Ezek. 16. 11. See ver. 21. Others therefore of them, whom ſome alſo of ours follow, underſtand by it, amulets, ſuperſtitious trinkets, of magical device, ſuppoſed to have vertue againſt charms, and enchantments, or other caſual evils: plates, or medals of gold, with ſpels, or characters engraven on them, to that purpoſe. This they ſeem, thence to conceive, becauſe of the neer affinity between the word here uſed, and that that ſignifies to charm, and enchant, Pſal. 58. 5. Eccl. 10. 11.

V. 21. And the rings] Mentioned among the Midianitiſh ornaments, Numb. 31. 50. uſed to be worn on the hand, or fingers, Eſth. 3. 10. & 8. 2. Luk. 15. 22. Jam. 2. 2. and in Heb. ſo called, of a word that ſignifies to dip deep; or, to fix, and faſten, Exod. 15. 4. Job 38. 6. Pſalm 69. 2, 15. Prov. 8. 25. Either becauſe the finger is dipt deep into the ring, and the ring faſtned unto it, Cant. 8. 6. Jer. 22. 24. Hag. 2. 23. Or, becauſe being much uſed in ſealing of deeds, they are as dipt in, and fixed upon that which they ſeal; or give an impreſſion unto, and add a greater firmneſs to the deed thereby ſealed, Eſth. 8. 8, 10.

and the noſe-jewels] Such as they uſed to wear on their foreheads, hanging down toward the noſe, Gen. 24. 47. Prov. 11. 22. Ezek. 16. 12. This kind of jewel, it ſeems, was very rife with them. For we find it oft mentioned, Gen. 24. 22. Exod. 35. 22. Judg. 8. 24. Job 42. 11. Prov. 25. 12. and they were of divers ſorts; ſome, that were hanged in, or about the ears: as appears, Gen. 35. 4. and were ſo rife with their women, and the younger ſort of that ſex, that of them alone, was made the golden calf, Exod. 32. 2. From which, to diſtinguiſh thoſe here ſpoken of, they are called jewels of the noſe. Though the word here rendred, noſe, is oft-times uſed for the whole face, Gen. 3. 19. 2 Sam. 24. 33. and ſo it may take in alſo the ears, and be rendred more largely, the face-jewels; as comprehending either kind.

V. 22. And the changeable ſuits of apparel] From their jewels, and additional ornaments, he ſeems to paſs here to their clothes and garments themſelves, that covered their bodies, or the greater part of them.

changeable ſuits] The word in Hebrew is but one; and is found but in one place more; to wit, Zach. 3. 4. where it is rendered, change of rayment. But a word of neer affinity to it, and of the ſame deſcent with it, ſignifies, ſpoils, taken from men ſlain and ſtript; whether armour, as 2 Sam. 2. 21. or rayment, as Judg. 14. 19. (where another word alſo is uſed, for change of apparel) ſo called from a word, that ſignifies to pull away; or, pull off. Deut. 25. 9, 10. and ſo it is thought, that change of apparel is here ſtiled; becauſe the one is put off, for putting on of the other: as Zach. 3. 4. But others rather deem it ſome ſpecial kind of apparel, that covered the body from the waſte downward; ſuch as our womens kirtels, or peticoats are: For it is very neer the word, that commonly ſignifies the loyns, ch. 5. 27. & 11. 5. Nor ſee I any reaſon, why it may not be ſo taken, in Zachary alſo, for ſome ſuch garments, as men uſed to wear, faſtned to them about their loyns. Onely there ſeems there, a defect of the epithet; ſuch, as in this Prophet, chap. 1. 18. & 5. 4. & Mal. 1. 14. and it may then be rendred, I will clothe thee with fair robes: or the like. Some garments and attires were, in name at leaſt, common to both ſexes. See Bonnets, v. 20.

and the mantles] From covering; or, enwrapping the body, ſo called. For that is the notion of its original, Pſal. 73. 4. This ſeems to be ſome upper garment, as the former, an inner: That girt to the body; This hanging looſe. The word is but once read.

and the wimples] It is rendred a veil, Ruth. 5. 13. Some would have it an apron.

and the criſping pins] Or, curling-pins. Such long pins, as they were wont to curle, or to faſten their hair with: or, to make uſe of about their attire and apparel. Otherwiſe, it comes neer to a word that ſignifies a pen, or pin, to write with, chap. 8. 1. or a tool, to engrave with, Exod. 32. 4. Some expound it pin-caſes; or, needle-caſes. I ſhould rather, pin-cuſhions, or, pin-pillowes: as reſembling the form of ſuch bags, as the better ſort uſed to put their money in. For which the word is uſed, 2 King. 5. 23. being not found elſe-where.

V. 23. And the glaſſes] Not drinking; but looking-glaſſes; or, mirrhors. Which yet alwayes were not in thoſe dayes, if at all, of glaſs; (for of glaſs we find no certain mention in the ſtories, or books of the Old Teſtament: nor is there any word that I know for it in Hebrew) but of fine, and bright braſs; or other the like metals. See Exo. 38. 8. though two other words be alſo uſed for ſuch; but both from one root, and notion of ſight: and but once only, as this here alſo, uſed either of them; the one in that place of Moſes: the other, Job 37. 18. The word here given them, hath its ground from the uſe of them, to reveal, and ſhew a mans, or womans own face, to themſelves, Jam. 1. 23, 24. The Apoſtle alludes to them, 1 Cor. 13. 12. & 2 Cor. 3. 18. Howbeit, ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors would have the word to ſignifie ſuch fine and thin garments of lawn, or ſilk, as do not ſo much cover, as diſcover the body clad with them, and lay it open to view of others; as the heavens, in that regard, are in the opinion of ſome, in that of Job, compared to glaſs; becauſe tranſparent: but that is queſtionable. Nor is there any notion of glaſs in the word there uſed. And of like uncertainty is that of ſome others; who ſuppoſe ſome reference to ſuch kind of apparel, as is here intimated in the term uſed, ch. 8. 1. (where alone the ſingular is found; as the plural here only) which if it ſhould ſo be, I ſhould then ſurmiſe, the word here to ſignifie ſome kind of rolls; ſuch as with us alſo, among the neater, or nicer ſort rather, are in uſe: for there the word certainly ſignifies a roll of paper, or parchment, to write in. But the firſt expoſition is moſt received; and the ſame words in the Hebrew ſometime ſignifie, one thing in the ſingular number, and another in the plural; as, that which ſignifies a pot in the ſingular, ſignifies thornes in the plural, Eccl. 7.6. that which ſignifies an aſp, or ſome kind of ſerpent, in the ſingular, chap.14.29. ſignifies excrements in the plural maſculine, Exod.4.15. iſſue, in the feminine, chap. 22. 24. that which ſignifies light in the ſingular, Eſth.8.16. Pſal.139. 12. ſignifies herbs in the plural, 2 King. chap. 4. verſ. 39. chap.26.19.

and the fine linnen] The name of the ſtuff, or matter; not of the veſture, or thing it ſelf, thereof made. It is tranſlated ſheets, in Sampſons ſtory, Judg. 14. 12. and the Greek word anſwering it, and derived from it, is uſed by three Evangeliſts, in relation of our Saviours Sepulture, for a winding ſheet, Matth.27.59. Mar.15.46. Luk. 23.53. But might peradventure, in that former place, have been better rendred, ſhirts, then ſheets: for it is not likely, that thoſe Philiſtims whom Sampſon ſlew, to make payment of his wager, carried their ſheets; and much leſs their winding-ſheets, about them. Beſides that it ſeems uſed alſo, for a ſhirt, or ſuch an inner garment of linnen, as is wont to be worn next the skin, Mar. 14.51,52. and it may well therefore here be rendred, either ſmocks, or ſhifts; the more modeſt term uſed in theſe times, comprehending both ſhirts, and ſmocks.

and the hoods] Or, Turbans. An attire for the head, different from the bonnet before mentioned, v.20. Levit.8.9,13. ſuch as the Turks and Perſians, or their women uſe at this day, conſiſting of many folds, and wreaths; and with ſome raiſed up to a great height in the middle: ſo called of a word that ſignifies to roll; or, turn round, chap.22. 18. It is uſed, both for a royal diadem, ch.62.3. Ezek.21.26. and for a prieſtly myter, Exod.28. 4. Levit.8.9. Zach.3.5. and it is ſo called, becauſe it was rolled up in many folds; and the head enwrapped with it, Levit.16.4. and the veils] Or, robes; or, frocks: or, caſſocks. A looſe upper garment, ſo called of ſpreading. For ſo ſignifies the word, from whence it comes, 1 King.6.32. It is found here, and Cant.5.7. not elſewhere.

V. 24. And it ſhall come to paſs, that] Heb. it ſhall be. As chap.2.2. and a defect of the particle, that; as ch. 4. 3. Before, was the privative part of the doom; what they ſhould be deprived of: Now followeth the poſitive; what in room thereof ſhould ſucceed.

there ſhall be inſtead of ſweet ſmell] The word comprehends all aromatical, or odoriferous ſpices, Exod.30.23. 1 King.10. 2. Ezek.27.22.

ſtinck] The word properly ſignifies putrifaction; or, rottenneſs, ch. 5. 24. and by conſequence ſtench, thence uſually proceeding. That which ſhould befall them, either from ſuch filthy ſores, and loathſome diſeaſes, wherewith God ſhould ſmite them, Deut.28.27,60. Job 7.5. & 19. 17. Pſal. 38. 5. v.17. or from ſuch evil uſage, and reſtraint, in priſons, and dungeons, which they ſhould endure in the time of their captivity, ch.42.22.

and inſtead of a girdle] Or, of girding. Which the word properly ſignifies, 2 King.3.21. as alſo the like word hereafter uſed; and may import, either a girdle, wherewith they uſed to gird to them their inner garments, Exod. 29. 5. or ſuch garments, as being girt to them, about the loynes, or paps, (1 King. 18. 46. Levit. 12. 35. Rev. 1. 13.) do fall down to the lower parts of the body; whereof before, ver. 22. For it is uſed of thoſe aprons, or girdings, which of twigs twiſted, or wreathed, rather then leaves ſowed together, (for the word there uſed ſignifies, as well twigs, or branches; as leaves, Gen.8. 11. Neh. 8. 15.) our firſt parents made to cover their ſhame with, Gen. 3. 7.

a rent] renting of garments for extreamity of grief, Jer. 41. 5. Or, rags; having no whole garment to put on. It comes of a word that ſignifies to cut down, ch 10. 34. or to cut aſſunder, ch. 29. 1. Some therefore expound it of their garments, by the enemy cut ſhort, in ſcorn, to the diſcovery of their ſhame; as 2 Sam. 10. 4. ch.20.4. Others render it, looſeneſs, diſſolution; oppoſed to girding: and the word it comes from, ſeems ſo to ſignifie, Job.19.26. Their rags; ſuch as they ſhall have, ſhall, in a ſlatternly manner, hang looſe about thoſe that were ſo curious in girding, and fitting their garments to their bodies, before: As it is wont to be with thoſe, who, either being in a ſad and forlorn condition, are wholly regardleſs of themſelves: Or, whoſe apparrel is ſo tattered and torn, and by reaſon thereof ſo unuſeful, that they hold it not worthy of any regard, nor would ſtand them in any ſtead, were they never ſo careful to gird it unto them. See v. 17.

and inſtead of well-ſet hair] Heb. work of eaven, or, ſmooth ſetting; or, trimming, to wit, of hair; as by the oppoſite doth appear. Hair eavenly, and curiouſly ſo diſpoſed, as no one hair riſeth, or ſtandeth above the reſt, but all lyes as ſmooth as the ſurface of ſome gold, or braſs-plate, artificially beaten out, and exactly ſmoothed with the hammer, ch.41.7. For from a word that ſignifies ſuch manner of work (Exod. 25. 18. Numb.10.2. ch.44.12.) is that, here onely uſed; with a ſmall alteration of one vowel onely derived. And the word which we render, ſetting, diſpoſed, or trimming, is applyed to the dreſſing, or trimming of hair, on head or beard, in the ſtory of Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam.19. 24: which place gives light to that other ambiguous one, concerning the captive-womans dealing with her nails, Deut. 21. 12.

baldneſs] Procured either by the ſcab, before mentioned, ver.18. or the hair pluckt, or cut off in ſcorn, or rage, by the hand of a foe; or torn off in extreamity of grief, through impotency of ſpirit, by themſelves, ch. 15. 2. & 22. 12. Mic. 1. 16.

and inſtead of a ſtomacher] The hebrew Doctors themſelves agree not about this. And indeed in moſt of theſe names, (as alſo in the forbidden fowls, Levit. 11, & Deut.14.) their greateſt Rabbins rove, but, as well as we. Some would have it a ſilken ſwathing-band; ſuch as they uſed to wear about their breaſts. Which, with our verſion, may not altogether unfitly agree. Others of them, a fine upper garment, of fine linnen or ſilk. Some of ours, a girdle, made of twiſt-ſilk; or thread: Becauſe it hath all the letters of a word that ſignifies twiſt, Exod.28.28. (for ſo it would rather be there rendred, then lace) and a cord, or line, Ezek. 40. 3. and ſome kinde of wearing-cloth made of ſuch; but rendred a bracelet, Gen.38.18. Others of them, a fardnigale; a garment conſiſting of many pieces, that being narrow at the top, where it is girt to the waſte, widens ſtill to the bottom, where it carries a large compaſs; ſuch, as in times paſt, were among our Gentry, very rife. Theſe ſuppoſe the word compounded of a tearm, that ſignifies a piece, Gen.18.5. Levit. 2. 6. And another that ſignifies round: whence the land of Galilee, 1 King. 9. 11. But neither is the former word uſed of pieces of cloth, but of bread, or cake onely: nor is the deduction very probable: nor would all granted afford ground ſufficient for the making up of ſuch a garment, as theſe Authors would piece together out of theſe notions. Ours may ſtand, till ſome more probable can be produced.

a girding of ſackcloth] Heb. ſack; as Gen. 42. 25. A word that holdeth its own in moſt languages. Such courſe, and ſorry ſtuff, as their ſacking was moſtly made of; and being the ordinary matter of mourning-weeds, was uſed commonly, as a badge of much heavineſs and grief, Gen. 37. 34. Job. 16.15. Pſal.30.11. & 35. 13.ch.15.3. Girding of, or, with ſack; as ch.22.12. For putting it on, and wearing it; as girding on of harneſs, 1 King.20. 11.

and burning] Tanning; or, Sun-burning. Which they had formerly been ſo curiouſly careful to ſhun, that they would not once peep out into the air, much leſs into the Sun-ſhine, without mask, or veil, for fear of abating their beauty, and altering their hew. But ſhould now ſeiz on them with a witneſs; being expoſed to all ſuch kinde of occurrences; and having nothing to ſhelter them from ſun, winde, or weather. See Cant.1.6.

and] A defect of the copulative; as Job. 12. 4. and 20. 17. ch. 5. 24. Hab. 3. 11. which makes the ſentence the quicker.

burning] A defective word, from that which, more entire, ſo ſignifies, Exod. 21. 25. not found elſewhere, unleſs ch. 32. 13. (See the note there) and here uſed, partly, to quicken the ſentence; and partly, to make it comply in ſound with its oppoſite. For in ſuch kinde of modulations, this our Prophet aboundeth. Nor is the tearm, ci, from Cawah, to burn, any more uncouth a deduction, (as a learned Authour, to make way for his own uncouth interpretation, here tearmeth it) then ri, from rawah, to water, Job 37.11.

inſtead of beauty] Which, by all means, they had formerly been ſo exceeding careful, and ſtudious to maintain; whereof they had been ſo proud, Ezek. 16. 14,15. The main ſum of all, is, that being ſtript of all their former goodly rayment, and ornaments, they ſhould, in moſt pitiful plight, and ſorry rags, be carried away bare-head, and bare-foot, in captivity to Babylon. See Jer. 2. 25, 37. That conſtruction of a late learned Annotator, ſeems over-harſh; who taking the foregoing word, not for a noun, but a particle, teareth off this clauſe from the preſent verſe, and gleweth it to the next, thus rendring the words, For inſtead of beauty, or, becauſe of beauty, thy men ſhall fall by the ſword.

V. 25. Thy men ſhall fall by the ſword] The men ſhall ſuffer; for ſuffering, and fomenting in the women, the vices and crimes before charged on them, ver.16. And the whole State, for not reſtraining and reforming them, ver. 26. Or, the women ſhall ſuffer; as in their own perſons, by the means above mentioned; ſo by the loſs of their husbands alſo, and of ſuch as might be a ſupport unto them, and a means of keeping them from reproach. See ch. 4. 1.

Thy] Thine, O Sion, thine Inhabitants; as chap. 1. 27. v. 16.

men] Diſtinguiſhed from women, and children, Deut. chap. 2. ver. 34. & chap. 3. ver. 6. Of the words, ſee chap. 2. 9.

ſhall fall] Be ſlain; as 2 Sam. chap. 21. verſ. 9. Pſal. 78. 64.

by the ſword] Of the enemy, ſee ch. 1. 20.

and thy mighty] Heb. thy might. And ſo Jer. 49. 35. their might: as we uſe to ſay, nobility, gentry, communalty, for nobles, gentlemen, commons: ſo, the height of people, for haughty people, chap. 24. 4. or, thy men of might, for mighty men; as wiſdom, for a man of wiſdome; a wiſe man, Mic. 6. 9. and honour, for men of honour, honourable men, chap 5. 13. ſo ſtrength, for ſtrong ones; or, men of ſtrength, Judg. 5. 21. See chap. 1. 21, 26.

in war] Where the mighty fall, as well and aſſoon, oft, as the weak, 2 Sam. 11. 25. Eccl. 9. 11. eſpecially then, when God fights againſt them; and the enemy comes with Commiſſion from him; againſt whom no power can prevail, and before whom no ſtrength can ſtand, Pſal. 33. 16. and 76. 7. Amos 2. 14, 16.

V. 26. And her gates ſhall lament] The City being ruinated, ſhall yeeld a moſt lamentable ſpectacle to all that behold it; or, the whole State and land ſhall be in ſuch condition; it ſhall ſo be with all her cities. See Jer. chapter 34. ver. 1.

her] A change of the perſon, as before; verſe 14.

her gates] her cities: gate, for city; as Exod. 20. 10. Deut. 16. 15. and 31. 12. Or, the gates of Zion, that is, of Jeruſalem, wherein the Judges and Elders uſed to ſit, for the hearing of cauſes, and the execution of juſtice, Ruth. 4 1, 2. Pſal. 127. 5. Jer. 3[illegible]. 7.

ſhall lament] A very pathetical expreſſion, intimating ſuch a woful condition, as even the very ſenceleſs creatures might ſeem to be ſenſible of it. So chap. 24. 4. The gates of Zion are ſaid to mourn; for want of that confluence of people that had wont to be in them; as the wayes of Zion, are ſaid to lament for want of paſſengers, that uſed formerly to paſs to and fro by them, Lam. 1. 4.

being deſolate] Heb. cleanſed: that is, emptied, of goods and people; or deſtroyed: cut off: as the word is rendred, Zach. 5. 3. But of that verſion there is ſome doubt. The word ſeems to have a metaphor in it, taken from the ſweeping of an houſe, with brooms, or beſomes, Matth. 12. 44. which by this very word, are of ſome deemed to be ſo termed, Exod. 25. 29. and elſe-where. But that is not ſo probable; for the veſſels, or inſtruments there mentioned, were of gold, and belonged to the holy Table; and the uſe of them ſeems to look and lead another way. Howbeit, to the uſe of ſuch implements, the Prophet might well be ſuppoſed here to allude; nor is it any unuſual reſemblance in Gods menaces. For ſo of Jeroboams houſe, God threatens to ſweep it away, as a man ſweeps away dung, untill it be all gone, 1 King. 14. 10. that is the ſence of the place; though the very term of ſweeping be not there expreſſed. But of Babylon he ſaith expreſly, that he will ſweep it with the beſome of deſtruction, ch. 14. 23. and of Tyrus, that he will ſcrape, or ſweep her very duſt away, Ezek. 26. 4. Or, it may be a trope, taken from the wiping, or cleanſing of a diſh, Matth. 23. 25. For in alluſion hereunto, in the ſtory of Manaſſes, God threatens to wipe Jeruſalem, as a man wipes a diſh, and whelms it, when he hath ſo done, 2 King. 21. 13. whether of the two, the phraſe here uſed, hath reſpect to; apparent it is, that by cleanſing of it, is here meant, a depopulating of it: or an emptying the place of its Inhabitants: who, as before, they were compared to droſs, and ſuch refuſe ſtuff, as muſt be ſevered and conſumed, ere the gold can be purified, chap. 1. 25. So are they here likened, for their wickedneſs, to the greaſe, or filth of a diſh; or the duſt and dirt that ſticks faſt to the pavement of an houſe, that cannot therefore be cleanſed; the one, or the other, untill the one be throughly wiped: and the other ſwept accordingly: and to ſuch ſtuff, as is ſo wiped off, or ſwept away; or ſcowred, or ſcraped off, are they compared, Lam. 3. 45. Yea, ſuch they were, even in Gods repute: and accordingly it is here intimated, that by him they ſhould be ſo dealt with. See Jer. 6. 30.

ſitteth upon the ground] As the manner is of mourners, Ezra 9. 3. Job 2. 8, 13. chap. 47. 1. Lam. 2. 10. Ezek. 8. 14. Yet withal, alluding to the ſcite and ſight of a ſacked City, that having her ſtately buildings, either pulled down, or burnt down, ſeems to lye in the duſt; or to be, as a body diſſolved into duſt, 1 King. 20. 10. Pſal. 102. 14. chap. 25. 12. and 26. 5.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſ. 1. A*Nd in that day*] In thoſe times, as chap. 3. 18. This chapter belongeth to the former Prophecie, contained in chapt. 2. and 3. And this firſt verſe of it, to the menaces denounced in the chapter next before-going, v. 25, 26. Concerning the deſtruction of their men, and deſolation that thereupon ſhould enſue; further here amplified by ſuch a paucity, and ſcarcity of that ſex ſurviving; the war having conſumed the moſt of them, (the like whereunto, ſee chap. 13. 22.) that many women ſhould be content, yea ſollicite, to come upon any terms, though never ſo unequall and unreaſonable, under one mans wing, that he may be accounted as an husband, and head to them; and they may not be deemed to want ſuch an one. So ſome take that, Jer. 31. 22. but of that in its place.

ſeven women] As Pſal. 119. 164. Prov. 24. 16. chap. 30. 26. Jer. 15. 9. A certain number, for an uncertain. So Zach. 8. 23. ten men there; as ſeven women here.

ſhall take hold] Contrary to the modeſty required in that ſex; rather to be ſued, and ſought unto by the other; then themſelves to ſeek and ſue to them.

of one man] Contrary unto that natural diſpoſition, which in that Society, is not willing to admit compeers; Marriage, and majeſty, enduring no co-partnerſhip. And the wife ſuperinduced, therefore, is ſaid to be a vexation, and, a vexer, Levit. 18. 18. 1 Sam. 1. 6.

we will eat our own bread] We will find our ſelves meat, drink, and apparel. We will expect no ſuch means of maintenance from thee, as the law tyeth husbands to, in regard of their wives, whether they have one, or more, Exod 21. 10.

bread] For all manner of food; as Gen. 28. 20. chap. 3. 1.

our own bread] That which we will earn our ſelves. See Prov. 31. 27.

and wear our own apparel] Either, wrought with our own hands; or procured by our own employments, otherwiſe. See Prov. 31. 13, 18, 19, 22, 23.

only, let us be called by thy name] Heb. let thy name be called upon us. That is, let us be called, and acounted thine; to wit, thy wives. So Jacob, Gen. 48. 16. Let my name be called upon them: that is, let them be called and accounted mine, to wit, my ſons.

called] That is, be, or, be accounted; as ch. 1. 21. but alluding withal, to the uſual manner of calling the wife by the husbands name, Joh. 19. 25.

to take away our reproach] For it was deemed a reproachful thing among that people, for a woman, as to be without iſſue, 1 Sam. 1 6. Luk. 1. 25. (for barrenneſs was accounted a curſe, Exod. 23. 26. Deut. 7. 14. and fruitfulneſs a bleſſing, Pſal. 127. 3. & 128. 3.) ſo to want an husband; to live ſingle, as one, that no man regarded, or looked after, ch. 54. 4. Jer. 30. 17. and that therefore could not have iſſue, in an honeſt and warrantable way. Hence it is mentioned, as one diſmal effect of Gods judgments on this people, that the maidens were not given in marriage, Pſal. 78. 63. See the ſtory of Jephtha's daughter, Judg. 11. 36, 37. This the Apoſtle ſeems to have had an eye to, 1 Cor. 7. 36.

V. 2. In that day] At that time; or, Then: as chap. 2. 20. or, And then. For the better connexion of it with the reſt of the context, as ch. 3. 6. but here, then; for after: as chap. 30. 25. And, as the particle then, is oft with us a note, not of the time preſent, but of the time enſuing. For, the Prophecie, or predictions here following, were to take effect. Not what time they ſhould be in that deſolate condition; but after theſe calamities over-paſt, and the people of God by theſe afflictions thus purged; the incorrigible wicked being ſwept away, and the reſidue reformed, v. 4. ch. 1. 26, 27. For this Sermon, or Prophecy, the Prophet concludes, as the former, with gracious promiſes, for the ſupport of the faithfull; and with a prediction, as moſt think, of the exhibition of the Meſſias, and the reſtauration of the Church under him; wherewith alſo he began the ſame, ch. 2. 2.

the branch of the Lord] The promiſed Meſſias; the Lord Jeſus. Whoſe name is ſaid to be Tſemach, that is, bud; or, branch, Zach. 3. 8. & 6. 12. and is ſo called: partly, in regard of his deſcent; his iſſuing from the root of Jeſſe, the ſtem, or ſtock of David, budding and ſprouting forth again, when it was much decayed, and in a manner, to ſight, dead, ch. 11. 1. 53. 2. and partly, becauſe all life of grace, and ſpiritual bleſſings are contained in him, as leaves, bloſſoms, and fruits, in a bud, or branch; and from him, ſpringing and ſprouting forth, are derived unto all thoſe, that are ingraffed into him, and have intereſt in him, Rom. 6. 5. & 11. 17, 24. 1 Cor. 1. 30. In regard whereof, he is alſo further termed a bud, or branch, of righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 15. The Jewiſh Doctors themſelves, expound it of the Meſſias; and many of ours therein, concur with them. Yet others underſtand it of the Church. That as their land, though waſted by former wars, chap.1.7. & 32.13. and much more alſo, by occaſion of the Babylonian deportation, chap. 3. 26. ſeemed never likely to recover, and return to his former fertility and beauty again, Jer.30.17. yet ſhould become, both after the Aſſyrian incurſian and devaſtation, as alſo after the return from the Chaldean captivity, as fruitful and beautiful, as ever before, chap. 32.16. & 35.1,2. Jer.33.10,13. So the Church, and people of God, called his pleaſant plant, ch.5.7. though it ſeemed ſo to be impaired, and waſted, by the fore-going calamities here denounced; and the long continuance thereof, during the Babylonian deportation, and bondage, that it was deemed as a dead corpſe, or plant, never like to recover life again; much leſs, to attain to any ſuch flouriſhing eſtate, as before it enjoyed; yet ſhould again ſpring forth, and ſprout out of the duſt, and be reſtored to as glorious a condition, as ever, chap. 26.19. & 37.31. & 44.3,4. Ezek.21.21. & 37. 11, 12, 19. Others again conceive, that by the bud, or branch, here mentioned, is underſtood, the Spirit of God, and the graces of it, that ſhould in great abundance, through Gods bleſſing on the labours of his ſervants in their ſpiritual husbandry, 1 Cor. 3.6,9. ſpring forth, and manifeſt themſelves more gloriouſly then ever, in the lives and courſes of his people, v.3. chap.1. 26,27. & 60.21. & 62.3,11. See the like phraſe, Pſal.85.11. ch.45.8. I conceive the ſecond interpretation, to be moſt agreeable to the courſe of the context.

branch of the Lord] Becauſe, which way ſoever we take it, it is from him. It is he that cauſed the Meſſiah to ſpring from the withered root of Jeſſe, Pſal.132.11,17. Jer.33.15. Zach. 3.8. Act.13.23,33. It is he, that cauſeth his Church to ſpring up again, out of her duſt, ch.26.19. & 55.10,13. Ezek.37.12. It is he, that cauſeth the graces of his Spirit, to ſpring abundantly forth, from the hearts of thoſe who were barren and fruitleſs before, chap. 44. 3, 4. Ezek. 36. 26, 27. 1 Cor. 3.7.

ſhall be beautiful, and glorious] Heb. For, or, to, beauty and glory. As, for glory, Zach.3.5. and, for a crown of glory, chap. 28.5. or, ſimply, beauty and glory; as it is rendred, Zach. 3. 5. that is, beautiful and glorious; the abſtract for the concrete: as chap.3.25. So, deſolation, and, unto deſolation, are one and the ſame, chap. 1.6. with Jer.12.11. See ch.24.16.

beautiful] Or, beauty. The word is rendred glory, chap.13. 19. & 23.9. & 24.16. and elſewhere. But glory, and it, are here diſtinct. And it ſeems rather to ſignifie ſuch lovelineſs, comelineſs, and pleaſantneſs unto the eye, as makes amiable, deſireable, delightful. So, a pleaſant heritage, Jer. 3. 19. and, a pleaſant land, Dan.11.16. For, it comes from a word that ſignifies a roe; a comely ſmooth-skinned creature, and delightful to behold; whereunto therefore, the Spouſe in the Canticles, likeneth her love, Cant.2.9. and her love, his Spouſes two breaſts, to two fawns; or young ones of that kind, as moſt take it, Cant. 4. 5. & 7. 4. nor much differeth it from thoſe lovely creatures; which Solomon would have the wife like unto, in her husbands eye and eſteem, Prov. 5. 19. This word therefore, implyes ſuch a comelineſs, or lovelineſs, as makes amiable, and draws affection to it: the other, ſuch a luſtre, as ſtands with ſtate. Both joyned together, very fitly expreſs the exceeding great amiableneſs, mixt with no leſs majeſticalneſs, that is found in the perſon of Chriſt, and in his Church, and in his ordinances, and in the graces of his Spirit, Pſal.45.2,3,4. & 110.2,3. Cant.1.9,16. & 4. 1. & 5. 10. & 60.4. ch 52,7,8. & 60. 1,14. & 62. 4, 5. Rom. 10. 15. 2 Cor.3.7,12,18. & 10.4.

and the fruit of the earth] Or, of the land: as ch. 1.19. alluding to that fruitfulneſs that the land formerly had, Gen.26. 12. Deut 8.8. and ſhould attain to again; both, after the removal of the Aſſyrian Army; and again, after their return from the Chaldean captivity; though it had lain ſo long time waſte, Jer.31.5. See ch.30.23,24. Ezek.36. 8,11,35. where it is ſaid, The land, that had lyen waſte, became as the garden of Eden. But to be withal ſpiritually here underſtood of the fruits of the Spirit, holineſs, righteouſneſs, and the like; that ſhould ſpring forth, and appear in the lives and courſes of Gods people, proceeding from the inward principle of grace in their ſouls, chap. 45. 8. & 61.3. Ezek.47. 12. Gal. 5. 22, 23. Phil.1.11. Heb.6.7. & 12.11. Jam.3.17,18.

ſhall be excellent] Heb. excellency. Or, for; or, unto excellency; as before. The word properly ſeems to ſignifie gayneſs; For it comes from a root, which that in the Greek anſwers; from whence we have our Engliſh word, gay. And it is a title, given to a chief degree among the Rabbins, as you would ſay, excellent; or, Illuſtrious. Hence, the excellency of Jacob, Pſal. 47.4. Yet is it frequently taken in the worſt part, for pride, Prov.16.18. becauſe of excellency, and gayneſs, people are wont to grow proud, Ezek. 28. 12, 17. and in gayneſs, to expreſs their pride, ch.3.16. & 13.19. & 23.9. But here it is taken for excellency, and of the excellency of the fruit of that land, ſee Num.13.24,27. ch.1.19.

and comely] Or, goodly: for comely is not the uſuall commendation of fruit. Heb. comelineſs, or, goodlineſs: As in the other before. The word ſeems to import ſomewhat more then comelineſs, and to be a degree above it. It is that, that was rendered bravery, chap. 3. 18. See chap.28. 1,4.

for them that are eſcaped of Iſrael] Heb. for the eſcaping; as chap.10.20, thoſe that through Gods mercy and goodneſs, being protected and preſerved, ſhall eſcape and ſurvive the forementioned calamities. See ch.1.27.

of Iſrael] See ch.1.3,4.

V. 3. And it ſhall come to paſs, that] Heb. it ſhall be; as ch.2. 2. with a defect of the particle; as ch.3.24.

he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jeruſalem] The ſanctified eſtate and condition of the remnant ſo preſerved, in the ſtate of Gods Church now reformed, chapter 1. verſ.25.

left] Not ſwept, or taken away by the forementioned judgments, ch.1.9. & 3.26. See v. 2.

ſhall be called holy] Shal ſo be, and be ſo reputed, as Gen. 21.21. ch.1.26. & 44.5. & 56.7. Heb. holy ſhall be ſaid to him; or, of him: For ſo alſo is the particle uſed, Gen.20.13. & 26.7. Eſth.3.2. Pſal.91.11. See the like phraſe, ch.61.6. So ch.60.21. Thy people ſhall all be righteous; and chap.62.12. They ſhall call them the holy people: for, holineſs, and righteouſneſs, are here all one. See Act.15.9. & 26.18. 1 Pet.1.2. & 2.9.

even every one, that is written among the living in Jeruſalem] Or, written unto life; or, written for life: as 2 Sam. 15. 21. Prov.10.16,17. whom God had fore-appointed to eſcape and ſurvive the calamities of the times; as if he had made a liſt of them, and enrolled their names in ſome book, Dan. 12. 1. a type of the Elect, whoſe names are ſaid to be written in heaven, Luk. 16.20. and to be entred into the book of life: or, of the living, Pſal.69.28. Phil.4.3. Rev.3.5. & 17.8. & 20.12. kept by the Lamb, the Lord Jeſus, the Maſter of the rolls in heaven, Rev.13.8. Wherein none are recorded, but ſuch as are deſigned, as well unto grace, righteouſneſs, and holineſs, as to life, glory, and happineſs; unto ſanctification, as well as unto ſalvation, Pſal.69.28. Epheſ.1.4. 2 Theſſ.2.13. 2 Tim. 1.9. Jam.2.5. 1 Pet.1.2. See alſo Exod.32.32.

V. 4. When the Lord ſhall have, &c.] This hath reference to that Then. v.1. When the reformation before ſpoken of, ſhall be throughly effected, ch.1.25,27.

when] Heb. if. So is the conditional particle uſed, Job 21.6.

waſhed away] An alluſion to the legal and ceremonial waſhings, Levit.15.5,8. Heb.9. 10. types of cleanſing from the filth of ſin, by the efficacy of Chriſts blood and Spirit, Ezek. 36. 26. 1 Cor.6 11. Heb.9.14. & 10.22. 1 Pet.1.2. 1 Joh.1. 7. Rev.1.5. & 7.14.

the filth] Heb. ordure; or, excrement. The word imports all ſuch filth, or excrement, as comes forth from the body, (for thence it is ſo termed; nor need we for the notation of an Hebrew word, to have recourſe to an Ethiopian term, ſaid to be uſed, John 11.39. for to ſtinck) either upward, as chap.28.5. 2 Pet.2.22. or downward, as Deut.23.14. Ezek.4.12. but is uſed more generally, for any exceeding foul, or filthy thing, as of ſuch garments, Zach.3.3,4. and for ſin, and wickedneſs, ſpiritual filth; ſhewing how loathſome and abominable ſin is in Gods ſight, Ezek.24.6. Matth.15.18,20. 2 Cor. 7. 1. So is it here taken: and ſo Prov. 30. 12. where Agur ſaith of ſome, though ſeeming, and deeming themſelves pure; that yet, they are not waſhed from their filth.

of the daughters of Zion] Whoſe pride, vanity, wantonneſs, and other exceſſes, had no ſmall ſhare among the procuring cauſes of the judgments before menaced. See chap. 3. 16. Though by daughters of Zion, ſome underſtand here, the cities of Judah, whereof Zion or Jeruſalem, was as the mother, Jer.34.1. But the former is more agreeable to the other paſſages of this particular Prophecy.

the filth of] them. Thereby intimating, that thoſe gates, and garbs, and courſes, and carriages, that they prided themſelves in, and accounted their bravery, chap. 3. 16, 18. were ſuch in deed and truth, as made them odious, loathſome, and abominable in Gods eye. See the contrary, 1 Tim. 2. 9, 10. with 1 Pet.3.3,4.

and ſhall have purged] Heb. waſhed out; as 2 Chron. chap. 4. verſe 6. Ezek. chap. 40. ver. 38. or driven away, carried away, caſt out, removed; as the ſame, Jer. chap. 51. verſe 58. and as the like, chap. 11. verſ. 12. ſhall have ſevered, and caſt out, as dirt, or dung; or as droſs, in regard of the metaphor following. And the Prophet may ſeem to have made uſe of ſuch a word here, as might well fit with both.

the blood] Heb. bloods, uſed commonly for murther, Pſal. 9. 3. ch.33.15. Hence, a man of bloods, for a bloody, a bloody-minded, a murtherous man, Pſal.5.6. and men of bloods. For the like, Pſal.26.9. It is uſed alſo for the guilt of blood, Exo. 22.1,2. or blood-guiltineſs, Pſal.51.14. It is put here for oppreſſion, and all manner of cruel carriage, which is as murther in Gods account, Mic.3.10. Hab.2.12. the common ſin of the one ſex; as thoſe before mentioned, of the other. See chap.1.15,23. & 3.12. & 14.15. Yet, ſome underſtand it more generally of all manner of uncleanneſs; becauſe blood defiles, ch.9.5. Ezek.16.6. Hoſ.6.8.

of Jeruſalem] Therein ſpilt, 2 King.21.16. Ezek.9.9. and therewith defiled, Num.35.33,34. Pſal.106.38. or the cruelty exerciſed by her Inhabitants, chap. 1.15. Ezek.22. 6, 9.

from the midſt thereof] Or, out of it; as Num. 14.13. Judg. 10.16. Amos 2.3.

by the ſpirit of judgment] By judgement executed upon the evill among them, Ezek. chap. 20. ver. 38. See chap. 1. verſe 27. and by a ſpirituall work of judgment, in ſevering between the fleſh and the ſpirit, in the ſouls of the faithful, Heb. chap. 4. verſe 12. Or, as ſome, by working repentance in them, Act. 5.31. and 11.18. by which, men are judged, and judge themſelves, Jer.31.18,19. 1 Cor. 11.31,32.

and by the ſpirit of burning] So the very ſame word is uſed, chap.40.16. and the verb, whereof it comes, doth moſt frequently ſo ſignifie, Exod. 22.6. chap. 1.31. & 9.18. and elſewhere: and thereof was that place, called Taberah, Num. 11.1,3. becauſe God there came to judgment with them by fire; as he ſpeaks, Amos 7.4. and the alluſion is to the trying of oare, or the caſting of metal, whereby the droſſy matter is ſevered from the purer ſubſtance, and either conſumed, or caſt away. See chap.1.25. yet, ſome render it, the ſpirit of a motion; or, conſumption: or, removal. Becauſe the verb it comes of, ſignifies ſometime to depaſture; or, eat down: as beaſts do graſs, Exod.22.5. chap. 3.14. and ſometime to remove, or, take away, 1 King.22.46. 2 King.23.24. But the former ſeems more proper to this place. And it is deemed to have reſpect to the fire of Gods zeal, chap.9.7. & 26.11. Ezek.36.5. or to the fire of the Spirit, 1 Cor.3.13,15.

V. 5. And the Lord will, &c. Here followes a promiſe of Gods gracious preſence among his people, thus purged, in all places of their abode, as well for direction, and guidance, as for protection and defence: expreſſed in way of alluſion to his leading them through the Wilderneſs, in their journying toward the land of Canaan. For unto that uſually, is reference (as to one of the moſt remarkable, and miraculous paſſages of Gods providence, in behalf of his people) both in the relations of their return from the Babylonian captivity, and other-like deliverances in thoſe times vouchſafed them; as alſo in the predictions of the reſtauration of the Church under Chriſt. See chap,40.3,4. & 41.18,19. & 42. 16. & 43.2,20. & 49.9,11. & 51.9,11.

create] Do ſtrange works, like works of creation; ſuch as are above, or beyond the power of nature, and beſide the ordinary courſe of the creature, for the ſafety, and welfare of his people, chap.41.20. & 43.19. & 65.18.

upon every dwelling place of mount Zion] Or, over: as Pſal. 105.35. upon, or over every place of the habitations of his people. Protection they ſhall have whereſoever they abide, chap.8.14. Ezek.11.16. See chap.32.18,19. & 33.20.

and upon her aſſemblies] Or, places of meeting. The word coming from a verb, that ſignifies to cry, call, or read, is uſed firſt for reading, or Scripture read, Neh.8.8. and thereof hath the Turkiſh Alcoron its name. Secondly, it is uſed for an aſſembly, or a meeting; not for the hearing of the Scripture read and opened only, Deut.31.11. Act. 13.44. but for other ſolemn ſervice alſo, Levit.23.7,27. ſo called, from the calling of them together, ch.1.13. Laſtly, it ſeems here to be put for the places of their aſſembling and meeting together for ſuch purpoſe: as the like word is uſed, Pſal.74.8. Lam.2.6. oppoſed hereunto, or diſtinguiſhed from their private houſes, or places of abode, mentioned in the former branch. So the meaning is, that God would ſo protect them, that they might not only ſit ſafely & quietly in their ſeveral places of abode, Zach.3.10. but aſſemble alſo and meet together for the publique ſervice of God, without fear of danger or diſturbance, Exod.34.14. having God and Chriſt himſelf, above, about, and among them, to protect and ſecure them, both in the one place, and in the other, Pſal.46.5. Zach. 2.5. Matth. chap. 18.20.

a cloud, and ſmoke] For, a cloud of ſmoke; or, a ſmokie cloud. A cloud like ſmoke, or as thick as ſmoke, Exod. 19.9,18. See the like, v.6. and Prov.22.15. compared with Prov. 28.15. So the moſt expound that, Matth.3.11. the Holy Ghoſt, and fire: and, water, and the ſpirit, Joh.3.5.

a cloud] Alluding to the pillar of cloud, or cloudy pillar. That both conducted and protected them in the deſart, Exod.13. 21. & 14.19. & 40.38.

And ſmoke by day] Becauſe in the day time fire is not ſo conſpicuous, as ſmoke, or ſome thicker vapour, Joſh. 8.20. Joel 2.30.

and the ſhining of a flaming fire by night] This likewiſe alludes to that pillar that conducted the people. Which being one and the ſame, appeared as a thick cloud without light by day, partly to be the more viſible in the light; Sun-light, or Sunſhine eſpecially, that uſeth to dim fire: and partly to cover, ſhadow, and ſhelter them from the heat of the Sun, more vehement and offenſive in thoſe waſte places, and ſandy grounds, Pſal.105.39. chap.32.2. and as a flame of fire in the night; both that they might ſee it, and their way by it, and follow its conduct, when by night they travelled, as ſometime they did, Num.9.21. and neither miſs their way, nor miſcarry in it, as they might otherwiſe in the dark, Joh. 11.9. 1 Joh. 2.11. And again to make the night the leſs uncomfortable to them, when they made ſtay in thoſe uncouth deſarts. And that one and the ſame pillar did both thoſe offices, and had two ſuch ſeveral appearances with it, appears hereby: in that when it paſſed over the heads of that people, (at which time they were baptized with it, 1 Cor.10.1,2. it droping, or miſling down upon them, to refreſh them, Pſal.68.9.) and came to the rear of them, where it ſtaid, and ſtood ſtill, to keep them, and the Egyptians aſſunder; it appeared at the ſame time, as a dark cloud to the Egyptians, on the one ſide; and as a bright light to the Iſraelites on the other ſide, Exod. 14.19,20,24.

a flaming fire] Heb. fire of flame. So Lam.2.3. Joel 2.5.

for upon] Or, over. As before.

all the glory] All Gods people; who are his glory, verſ. 2. whom he makes partakers of his glory: as he did Moſes, Exod.34.29,30. 2 Cor.3.18. in whom he is and will be glorified, Pſal.29.9. chap.61.3. Rom. 8.30. 2 Theſſ. 1.10. and whom by works wrought, as well for them, as in them, he makes glorious oft, even in the eye of the world, Pſal.84.11. & 85.9. & 149.4,9. chap.60.1,2. See ch.11.10. & 22.24. or, as I conceive the plain meaning to be, that that glory, or, goodly, and glorious eſtate, that God would advance his people to, after the reſtoring of them from their former dejected and diſtreſſed condition, ſhould continue firm, and ſtedfaſt, under Gods protection, overſpreading every part of it. See ch. 32. 15,19. & 33.17,21. & 35.1,2,9,10.

ſhall be a defence] Or, a covering. For the word here uſed, comes from a root but once read, that ſignifies to cover, and by covering, to protect; which is the very proper notion of the word, protect. It is uſed by Moſes in the bleſſing of Benjamin, Deut. 33,12. The beloved of the Lord ſhall dwell in ſafety by him, he ſhall cover him every day, or all the day long; that is, continually, and conſtantly. A good comment upon this place. Which may alſo be rendred, as our tranſlators there ſupply it, he, (that is, the Lord) ſhall be a covering. See v.6. It may have reſpect in general, unto choyce matters of value, price, and regard, which men are wont to keep cloſe covered, as well to keep fair, as for ſafety otherwiſe. But it is ſuppoſed more ſpecially to allude to that cloud, that covered the Tabernacle, a type of the Church, Pſal. 15. 1. When it was within filled with the glory of God, Exod.chap. 40. v. 34,35. Num. 9.22. The word is found only in two other places, Pſal.19.5. & Joel 2. 16. and it is in both thoſe places uſed for one and the ſame thing; to wit, the bridegrooms chamber, cloſet, or bower. For this was, as ſome tell us, ſuch a green booth, or bower, as in the feaſt of Tabernacles, they made uſe of, Levit.23.42. Num. 8.15,17. (though others ſay, a canopy, ſupported with four perches, or poles, at the four corners, under which the bridegroom and bride received their ſolemn bleſſing, Pſal. 128. wherein the bridegroom ſolaced himſelf with his bride. A place, as of ſecrecie, ſecurity, and ſafety: ſo of ſolace, and delight; not unfit to repreſent, as well the comfort and joy; as the immunity and ſafeguard, that Chriſt, the Bridegroom, by his gracious preſence, affordeth to the Church his Spouſe, Pſal.31.20. & 91.1. being both Sun, and ſhield, or ſhelter unto her, Pſal.84.11. See Cant.2.3. But it may juſtly be queſtioned, whether the uſe of either of theſe, were ſo ancient, as either Davids time, or Iſaiah's. Only this we are ſure, that the word here made choyce of by the Prophet, to decipher Gods protection of his people, is in Scripture uſed for that wedding room, whatſoever it was.

V. 6. And there ſhall be] Or, as ſome, he ſhall be. He, the Lord. Of whom, v.5. But the verb here is feminine. Others, of which, protection there ſhall be. Or, moſt fitly, as I ſuppoſe, which, (to wit, covering, ſupplyed from the verſe before) ſhall be. For the copulative is frequently put for the relative: as ch.5.4. Job 20.11,19. & 37.5. Jer. 6.20. Mal. 3.1. with Matth.11.10. Or, And it ſhall be. For he proceeds to illuſtrate the uſe of the forementioned covering, by divers other ſimilitudes, and reſemblances, as affording protection againſt, and freedome from all ſorts of annoyances, (ſee Pſal.91.1,13. ch.25.4. & 32.2.) not to ſpeak of ſome other covert, divers from that before ſpoken of.

a Tabernacle] Or, tent; or, as a tabernacle: or, as a tent. The note of ſimilitude ſupplyed: as Pſal.11.1. & 84.11. ch. 21.8. Alluding, as ſome think, to that tent, (for ſo it is termed) made of ſtuff woven out of goats hair, wherewith the Tabernacle was covered, Exod.26.7. or thoſe other coverings of rams skins dyed red, and of badgers skins; with both which, that tent of goats hair was covered, Exod.26.14. & 36.19. to preſerve both the Tabernacle it ſelf, and that tent with it, from the annoyances of wind and weather. The word it ſelf is ſometimes uſed for the holy Tabernacle, Pſal. 76.2. and for the Temple, Lam.2.6. which is mentioned alſo by that term, as a place of ſecurity and protection, (ſuch as were ſanctuaries with us, in times paſt eſteemed. See ch. 8. 14.) Pſal. 27.5. & 31.10. It is uſed alſo for a ſhed, or a cottage, that a garden, or vine-dreſſer, and keeper, is wont to have in the garden, or vine-yard, to retire to in a ſtorm, chap. 1.8. Job 17.18. and of that booth which Jonas made him of the plant that he found growing neer to Niniveh, to ſit under it in the ſhade, Jon.4.5. And to theſe latter rather, I ſuppoſe, in regard of what followes, that the Prophet here alludes, if not to another ſhelter, or covering, called the covering for the Sabbath, 2 King. 16.18. Which was built in the Temple, either, as ſome, for the Levites, that waited as Porters at the gates of the Temple in their weekly courſes, to repoſe themſelves in; or for the people, that on the Sabbath there aſſembled, to betake themſelves unto, when occaſion was, either for ſhelter, or for ſhade.

for a ſhadow in the day time from the heat] That which was the uſe of the cloud to the Iſraelites, Pſal. 105.39. and of Jonas his booth, while it laſted him; whereof he had much joy and comfort, while he enjoyed it: but no leſs grief and vexation when he loſt it, Jon. 4.6,8. But this, as no leſs uſeful, or much more rather, and in a better ſort, then that: ſo more permanent, even as durable as its author and creator, ver. 5. See ch.25.4,5. & 32.2. Rev.7.15,16. & 21.3,4.

and for a place of refuge] Such as the feebler ſort of creatures are wont, in hazard of their lives, to betake themſelves unto, Pſal.104.18. and ſuch is the Lord ſaid to be unto thoſe that are his; and that ſuch an one, as never fails, Pſal.9.9,10. & 46.1. & 61.3. & 62.8.

and for a covert from ſtorm, and from rain] Such as keepers, before, were ſaid to ſet up in places where they kept; to have at hand, when occaſion was, for ſuch purpoſe. It is uſed alſo for ſuch coverts, as wilde beaſts are wont to make uſe of, to lurk, and to ſhelter themſelves in, Pſal. 10.8,9. Lam. 3.10. and it is by Gods people attributed to God, as their ſureſt, and ſafeſt covert, Pſal.32.7. & 119.114. and by their enemies in deriſion; let him riſe up, and be your covert, Deut. 32.39. See chap.32.2.

from ſtorm] The word is ſometime uſed for an inundation of land-waters, breaking in upon the ſwelling up of ſome ſtream, or flood: as Pſal.90.5. Hab.3. 10. but moſt frequently for a ſtorme of ſhowers, or rain, Job 24.8. Pſal.77.17. chap.30.30. & 32.2. and ſo here.

from ſtorm, and from rain] That is, from ſtorm of rain; or, a rainy ſtorm: as, ſtorm, and tempeſt, for a tempeſtuous ſtorm, chap. 29.6. and, from the wind of ſtorm, from the tempeſt; that is, from the tempeſtuous ſtorm of wind, Pſal.55. 8. So, fire and brimſtone; for, fire of brimſtone, or, ſulphureous fire, Gen. 19.24. Pſal.11.4. Rev.14.10. & 21.8. and, a cloud and ſmoke, for, a ſmoky cloud, v. 5.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. N*ow will I ſing*] Here beginneth our Prophets third Sermon, compoſed in form of a ditty, or Song. In the firſt part whereof, he layes down, under the parable of a vineyard, the great care and coſt that God had been at with his people, and their unworthy carriage again towards him: his goodneſs to them, and their unthankfulneſs to him. That which he began alſo his firſt Sermon with, chap.1,2,3.

Now, &c.] In the former part of this verſe, is the Title, or Inſcription of this diſcourſe; or of the firſt part, at leaſt, of it.

I will ſing] As Moſes did by Gods appointment, Deut.31.19. & 32.1. So Deborah begins her ſong, Judg. 5.3. and David, Pſal. 101. ſinging of mercy, and judgment; as both Moſes, and our Prophet here.

ſing] That is, both pen, and utter, as Pſal.45.1,2. & 144.9. Deut.31.30.

to my welbeloved] There are that render it, for my beloved, in his behalf. As, for Solomon, Pſal.72. but our verſion may well ſtand, as dedicating and directing it unto the party ſo denominated, and written to his honour. So David, to thee, O Lord, will I ſing, Pſal.101.1.

to my welbeloved] That is, to Jeſus Chriſt, the welbeloved of God the Father, Matth.3.17. & 17.5. Eph.2.6. called alſo his Son of love, Col.1.13. Whence Solomon alſo, a type of Chriſt, is by the word here uſed, from God himſelf, termed Jedidiah, 2 Sam.12.25. (which title alſo Moſes gives to Benjamin, in bleſſing him, Deut.33.12.) that is, the beloved of the Lord. And the Churches beloved; ſo oft ſtyled in the Canticles; Cant.1.13,14,16. & 2.3,8,10,16,17, &c. and her love, Cant.2.7. & 8.4. as ſhe alſo is ſaid to be his, Pſal.60.5. & 108.6. Jer.11.15. & 12.7. Some therefore ſuppoſe it to be ſpoken in the perſon of God the Father, the Lord of the vineyard ſpeaking to Chriſt his Son, and Heir, concerning his vineyard, Matth.21.33,37. Others rather, in the perſon of the Prophet, (not, as ſome would have it, as of kin to Chriſt, ſuppoſing him to have been of the tribe and ſeed-Royal, a thing altogether uncertain. See ch.1.1. but) as being (therein like to John Baptiſt, Joh.3.29.) a friend and well-wiſher both to Chriſt, and to his Church; to the Bridegroom and his Bride.

a ſong] A diſcourſe made in metre, that it may be the more eaſily and readily learned, the better remembred, the more frequently chanted; and being commonly in the mouthes of all ſorts, be tranſmitted from age to age, and remain unto all poſterity; as we finde by experience, that the Pſalmes which we have turned into metre, are generally more familiar, and in more frequent uſe with us, then any other part of Scripture. See Deut.31.19,21, of my beloved] Either commanded of him, as Deut. 31. 19. or ſuggeſted by him, as 2 Sam.23.2. or compoſed in his name, and in his behalf; for it is a ſong of expoſtulation and complaint, concerning the wicked and unworthy demeanour of Gods people towards him, who had been ſo careful of their good; not unlike thoſe, Deut. 32. Pſal.78. & 106.

my beloved] The word differeth a little, but not much from the former. And as Solomon the ſon had his name from the former; ſo David his father from the latter: for it ſignifieth ones beloved. Yet ſome render it here uncle, and ſome, couſin: upon that groundleſs ſuppoſition above-mentioned; that Iſaiah ſhould be of kin to Chriſt. And it is true indeed, that the word here uſed, doth ſometime more ſtrictly ſignifie an uncle, Levit.20.20. & 25.48. and ſeems ſometime enlarged to any one neer of kin, as Amos 6.10. See Jer. 32. 7,8,12. but it is uſed as commonly for a friend, or one beloved; and that above thirty times in that ſhort book of the Canticles: and they are far out therefore, that imagine it never to be ſo uſed.

touching his vineyard] So the particle is taken, Gen. 20.13. & 26.7. Pſal.91.11. Yet it may here be rendered, and that is indeed the moſt proper and uſual ſignification of it; to, or, unto his vineyard; as compoſed in his perſon ſpeaking unto his vineyard: or to be ſung ſometime by him in perſon, when time ſhould be, to his vineyard; which they ſuppoſe done in effect, when he propounded to them, that parable concerning the vineyard, Matth.21.33,34. Mar.12.1,12. Luk. 20. 9,16. but the former ſeems better. See ch.27.2.

his vineyard] His Church; as it is expounded, v. 7. howbeit, what ſome hence gather, that this ſong was framed in alluſion to ſuch merry ſongs as in vintage time they uſed in the vineyards, ch.16.10. & 17.2, being ſuch a mournful ditty, ſeems not ſo probable.

My beloved hath] Here begins the ſong it ſelf.

my beloved] Chriſt, as before.

hath a vineyard] So is the Church uſually ſtyled in Scripture, as a place that men have much care of, take much delight in, and expect pleaſant fruit, and no ſmall gain from, Gen. 49.22. Pſal.128.3. Cant.2.15. & 6.12, & 8.11,12. See Pſal. 80.8. chap.27.2. Jer.20.21. Ezek.15.2,6. Hoſ.10.1. Matth.20.1. & 21.28,33. Luk.13.6. & 20.9.

in a very fruitful hill] Heb. in an horn, the ſon of oyl; (as Pſal. 104.15.) or, fatneſs, as 1 Chr.4.40. an horn, that is, as moſt, an hill; and hilly places are deemed fitteſt for vines, Pſal. 80.10. ſome, an high hill. For horn is uſed for height, Pſal.75.5. as being the moſt eminent part of any horned beaſt. Others, an horny hill, ſuch as bowing like an half moon, may receive the Sun-beams at all times of the day, both morning, noon, and evening; and on every ſide, for the better ripening of the grapes: and are in ſome other languages ſaid to be ſo termed; and, they ſuppoſe an alluſion to the mountains of Iſrael, Jer.17.3. & 31.5. & 33.13. and the ſon of fatneſs, that is, a very fat, and rich ſoyl: The one term importing the commodiouſneſs of the ſcituation: The other, the richneſs of the ſoyl. Yet ſome ſuppoſe them both to intimate one and the ſame thing. The horn being put for the excellency of any thing.

thing; as one of Jobs daughters is named Keren-happuch, that is, the horn of complexion, as we term it, or, of beauty, Job 42. 14. and the ſon of fatneſs, for exceeding fat; as the ſonne of the morning, for exceeding bright and illuſtrious, chap. 14. 13. ſo it would be rendered, word for word, the horn of the ſon of fatneſs, or, the horn, and the ſon of fatneſs, (a defect of the copulative, as chap. 32. 13.) that is, in a principal fat, or, a principal and very fat ſoyl; alluding to the land of Canaan, wherein God had ſeated that people, Num. 13. 27. Deut. 8. 7, 9. and 11. 9, 12. Pſal. 16. 9. & 88. 9. Ezek. 20. 6.

V. 2. And he fenced it] He ſpared for no pains nor coſt about it, either for the manuring, or fencing of it, verſ. 4. Mar. 12. 1.

fenced it] Made a fence, a wall, an hedge, or both, about it, (ſee v. 5.) to keep out, as ſtrangers, that might crop it; ſo wilde beaſts, or cattle, that might ſpoyl, or annoy it, Exod. 22. 5. Cant. 2. 15. an emblem of Gods care for, and providence over his people, ch. 27. 3. Pſal. 125. 2. Zech. 2. 5. See Job e, 10.

and gathered out the ſtones thereof] Heb. he ſtoned it. The word here uſed, ſignifies ſometime to caſt ſtones at one, 2 Sam. 16. 6, 3. Sometimes to pick ſtones out of a place, as ch. 62. 10. and ſo here. As the caſting of ſtones into a field, is ſaid to ſpoil it, 1 King. 3. 19. ſo the picking of them out is wont to amend it: becauſe ſtones hinder the growth of plants, and makes the land, or ground, leſs fertile. A type of Gods care to free his people, as well from annoyances within, as to protect them againſt incurſions, and ſurprizals of enemies from without. See Zach. 2. 5. & ch. 4. 5, 6. Some expound the fencing, of keeping them within compaſs by the law: the picking out of ſtones, of the prohibition of evil things therein forbiden: others, of the caſting out of idol-worſhip, and idols, Deut, 7. 25. and 12. 2, 3. And others of expelling the Canaanites, and other wicked people before them, and from among them, Exod. 23. 27, 30. Pſal, 44. 2. But theſe things ſeem over-curious.

and planted it] He ſetled his people in the land, Pſal. 44. 2. & 80. 8, 9. where they had been but ſtrangers before, Pſal. 105. 12. as a vineyard planted with ſtrange plants, brought from ſome forraign ſoyl, ch. 17. 10.

with the choiceſt vine] Heb. Sorek. (and ſo Jer. 2. 21.) which is the name of a place, (whether in the Philiſtims country, or in the land of Iſrael, uncertain) where Dalila dwelt, Judg. 16. 4. from whence ſome ſuppoſe, that this kinde of vine had its name. Some of the Rabbins therefore read the words here, He planted it with plants, or ſlips of Sorek. It is agreed upon, that it ſignifieth a very choice kinde of vine; whoſe grapes, ſay ſome of them, had no grains, or ſtones in them. But that is ſcarce probable. See Gen. 49. 11. ch, 16. 8. and 19. 9. Of the colour of this vine were ſome horſes, mentioned, Zach. 1. 8. as ſome in Greek called, Spadices, of the like. Some ſuppoſe it to intimate the Jewiſh people, as a choice ſeed, deſcended from the loynes of thoſe their worthy Anceſtors, Abraham, Iſaak, and Jacob, and by God therefore ſet apart for his peculiar, Deut. 7. 6, 8. & 9 27, 29. Others, of Gods precepts that he had planted his Church with, Deut. 4. 8. ch. 42. 21. Rom. 3. 1, 2. But we may not deſcend unto unto ſuch niceties, and particularities, in the expoſition of a parable. And theſe branches thus expounded, fall one into another. See more hereof, on Jer. 2. 21.

and built a tower in the midſt of it] So Mark 12. 1. A place for the keepers of it, to retire to, and lodge in; ſo ſcituate in it, that they might over-look the ground, ch. 1. 8. in the midſt of it. Either ſimply, in it; as ch. 7. 22. or, in the midſt; as a place moſt convenient for over-ſight. Of Jeruſalem ſome expound it, wherein, as in a watch-tower, the Prieſts and Princes reſided. See Jer. 6. 27.

and alſo made a wine-preſs therin] Heb. hewed out. Of wood, or ſtone, Prov. 9. 1. ch. 10. 15. and 22. 26. Mark 12. 1. It is ſaid, he digged out. But that ſeems ſpoken, not of the preſs, but of a place to ſet a veſſel in, to receive the wine from the preſs. This ſome expound of the altar, ſtreaming with the blood of beaſts offered in ſacrifices, (See ch. 1. 11. & 29. 1, 2.) like the liquor of grapes, Gen. 49. 11, 12. Deut. 32. 14. Others, of the Prieſts and Prophets, who, by their preaching, preſſed out of Gods people good works, and pious offices, as pleaſant liquor, very grateful to God, Heb. 13. 16, 21. Judg. 5. 11. But of that, as of the reſt.

and he looked] Heb. expected. After ſo much care had of it, and means uſed about it, he expected, and waited until time of year, then making account to receive fruit anſwerable to the coſt and pains that he had been at with it, Matt. 21. 34. 1 Cor. 9. 7. Heb. 6. 7. Jam. 5. 7.

that it ſhould bring forth] Heb. make; as Gen. 1. 11, 12. Matth. 3. 8, 10. & 7. 17, 19. So in the next clauſe, and ver. 10.

grapes] Grapes, of ſome kinde or other, it could not but produce, unleſs it where wholly barren. but the meaning is, ſuch grapes, as thoſe plants, or ſlips wherewith he had planted it, uſed to bear. By grapes therefore, here, we are to underſtand good grapes, or choice grapes; as, garments, for clean garments, or goodly garments, Zach. 3. 5. A defect of the epither, not unuſual. So ch. 1. 18. wool, for white wool, chap. 28. 8. no place, for no clean place, Mal. 1. 14. a male, for a ſound male; oppoſed to a corrupt one: as here grapes, oppoſed to filthy, bad, noyſom, naughty, ſtinking ones.

and it brought forth wild grapes] Moſt Intepreters, (ſome Greeks onely excepted, that render it thorns) the latine eſpecially run in a track, expounding the word, wild vines, ſo called in latine, becauſe they uſe to grow in the hedges, or edges of grounds. And to mend the matter, (becauſe that is the name, not of the fruit of ſuch, but of the plant it ſelf; and the tranſlation therefore ſeems not to ſound well;) They tell us, that the plant is put for the fruit. But we need not involve our ſelves in any ſuch difficulties, the ſence of the word being plain enough of it ſelf: The verb whereof it comes, ſignifies, firſt to rot, ch. 50. 2. then to ſtinck, Exod. 7. verſ. 18. and 8. 14. & 16. 20. Becauſe rotten things uſe to ſtinck, and becauſe things rotten and ſtinking, are naught. In the third place, it ſignifies to be evil, and naught, Dan. 6. verſ 14. and hence the word in the feminine ſingular, Ezr. chap. 4. 12. a bad, evill, or naughty city; and the ſame here in the maſculine plural, to anſwer unto, and agree with the word grapes, rotten, filthy, noyſome, or naughty, to wit, grapes: like thoſe naughty figs, Jer. 24. 2, 3. or rather like thoſe grapes of gall, and bitter cluſters; yielding wine like the poyſon of dragons, and venome of aſpes, Deut. 32. 32, 33. The word grapes is not in the Text, but may be well ſupplyed from the former branch; though there be no neceſſity ſo to do; ſince it may be rendred naughty, or noyſom ones. So the very like word is uſed, Job. 31. 40. for noyſom, or naughty, to wit, herbs; that is, weeds; ſuch as grow among corn: of which, Matth. 13. 25. where the word uſed, would rather be rendred, weeds, then tares. Nor can I aſſent to thoſe, who make that here ſpoken of, a figure of hypocricie, carrying a fair ſhew of piety, as theſe do of good grapes, without inward power, 2 Tim. 3. 5. Since that the vices, and crimes hereby ſaid to be reſembled, ver. 7. as thoſe alſo that Moſes ſpeaks of, and our Prophet elſewhere taxeth, in fore-going parallel places, are ſuch as too openly publiſh, and make profeſſion of impiety and cruelty. See ch. 1. 21. & 3. 9, 15. The defect, as of the adjunct before, in grapes, for good grapes; ſo of the ſubject here in bad, for bad grapes; is neither infrequent in other languages. For ſo in the Greek, Matth. 23. 15. we read ſea, and dry, (agreeable to that, Gen. 1. 10.) by a defect of the ſubject; which, in our Engliſh, we render, ſea, and land; by a defect of the adjunct; nor unuſual in the Hebrew: for ſo, Pſal. 38. 7. loathſom, for a loathſom diſeaſe; (for diſeaſe is not in the text:) ſo, untempered, for, untempered, or, ill-tempered morter, Ezek. 13. 10, 11, 14, 15, & 22. 28. See further, chap. 17. 5.

V. 3. And now] Having ſhewed how his vineyard had fruſtrated his expectation, he firſt requireth the judgment of others, even of thoſe themſelves whom it concerned, and were parties in it, what they deemed it deſerved to have done unto it, v. 3, 4. and then relates in what manner he purpoſed to deal with it, v. 5, 6.

O ye inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and men of Judah] That the equity of his proceedings may the more evidently appear; he is content to make them Judges in their own cauſe; judge (ſaith he) I pray you, between me, and my vineyard: as if he ſhould ſay, Tell me, what your ſelves would in the like caſe do, ſo ſerved as I have been with my vineyard. So chap. 1. 18. 2 Sam. 12. 1, 6. Jer. 2. 5. Mic. 6. 3, 7. Matth. 21. 40.

inhabitans, and men] Heb. inhabitant and man. Taken collectively, as ch. 20. 6. & 3. 2. ver. 7. or diſtributively; as if he had ſaid, Let any one of you paſs ſentence between me and it; as daring, and being content to put his cauſe to any reaſonable mans deciſion.

of Jeruſalem, and of Judah] See ch. 1. 1.

V. 4. What could, &c.] Implying, that nothing as wanting on his part, could be pleaded; in regard whereof he ſhould come ſhort of what he expected.

what could have been done] Heb. what was there to do? What was more to be done? as 2 King. 4. 13, 16. Eſth. 6. 6.

to my vineyard] Or, for my vineyard; as Pſal. 72. for Solomon; and for his land, Joel. 2. 18.

that I have not done] Heb. and I have not done. The copulative for the relative; as ch. 3. 6.

in it] Or, for it; or, to it or, about it; that might any way further the fructifying of it.

wherefore, when I looked that it ſhould bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?] Heb. wherefore did I expect, &c. and it brought forth, &c. Why hath it failed mine expectation? See ſomewhat the like ſyntax, Rom. 6. 7. grapes, and, wild grapes. See ver. 2. It did not ſo much prove barren, and yielded no fruit, which yet were ſufficient to juſtifie mine intended proceedings with it, Mat. 24. 19, 20. Luk. 13. 6. 7. Joh. 15. 2. But it brought forth filthy, naughty, noyſom fruit, Heb. 6. 8.

V. 5. And now, go to, I will tell you] He proceeds to relate his purpoſe, having formerly propounded the ground of it, and left the equity of it to be deemed by themſelves; ſo Mat. 21. 40, 41. Mar. 12. 9. Luk. 20. 15, 16. And the Prophet here paſſeth from perſon to perſon; ſpeaking now in Gods perſon, as before in his own. See ch. 1. 9.

what I will do] Heb. what I am doing; That is, am about to do; will do ſpeedily, without further delay; as ch. 3. 1. and 43. 19.

to my vineyard] Or, with it; as Pſal. 147. 20. Jer. 2. 18.

I will take away the hedge thereof] I will take no more charge of it, nor care for it; but expoſe it to ſpoyl, and let it run to ruin. I will withdraw my protection and providence from my people, and ſuffer their enemies to break in upon their land, Pſal. 8. 12, 13. & 106. 29.

I will take away] Heb. I will taking away, take away. That is, I will utterly, or certainly, take away; as Gen 2. 17. But in this place a defect of the verb finite; as Eccleſ. 9. 11. See ch. 59. 13.

the hedge] The word properly ſignifies a fence of thorns, or the like, Prov. 15. 19. Hoſ. 2. 6. Mic. 7. 4.

and it ſhall be eaten up] By beaſts breaking in upon it, Pſalm 80. 13. That is, waſted and deſtroyed, by hoſtile invaſion. See ch. 1, 7. & 3. 13. Heb. it ſhall be for eating up. Or, that it may be for eating up; as Joſh. 24. 9. Mal. 1. 9. as being good for nothing elſe, Mat. 5. 13.

and I will break down] Heb. breaking I will break down; as before. A defect of the copulative; as ch. 3. 24.

the wall thereof] Her ſtone-fence. As it is fully expreſſed, Prov. 24. 32. nor ſeems it otherwiſe taken, Eccl. 10. 8, 9. Lam. 3. 9. Hoſ. 2. 6. So this and the former are commonly diſtinguiſhed; as alſo the Jewiſh Doctors here obſerve: though ſome of ours would have them both one. See Pſalm 80. 12. & 89. 40, 41.

and it ſhall be troden down] Heb. and it ſhall be for treading down; as ch. 28. 18. Mic. 7. 10. Or, that it may be for treading down; as before. That it may be for cattel to tread down, and depaſture at pleaſure, ch. 7. 25.

V. 6. And I will lay it waſte] Heb. waſtneſs. That is, utterly, or extreamly waſte; as ch. 7. 19. the valleys of waſtneſs. In which two places onely, is the word found. See chap. 1. 7.

it ſhall not be pruned] To take off its ſuperfluous branches, that ſpend its ſap, and hinder the fructifying of it, Lev. 25. 3. Joh. 15. 2.

nor digged] As Luk. 13. 8. So the Greek, and old latine here; though otherwiſe, elſewhere. Or, boughed; as the latter latine verſions import, both here, & ch. 7. 25. Or, dreſſed; having reference to the ground, as the former to the plants; (for the word ſignifies properly, to keep in order, 1 Chro. 12. 33, 38) to rid it of weeds and briars, and to looſen the earth about the roots of the plants. The ſpade, or hough, being for vineyards, chap. 7. 25. as the plow for corn-fields, Jer. 4. verſ. 4.

but there ſhall come up briars, and thornes] It ſhall be overgrown with ſuch noxious plants, buſhes, and ſhrubs, for want of husbandry, which by thoſe means might have been prevented, Prov. 24. 3, 30. ch. 7. 23, 24. & 32. 13.

briars and thornes] Joyned frequently together, ch. 7. 23, 24, 25. & 9. 17. & 10. 17. & 27. 4. Heb. briar, and thorn; as weed, for weeds, Job. 31. 40. The former word ſeems to ſignifie ſuch a kinde of thorny plant, as for ſtifneſs, and ſtubbornneſs, or, hardneſs, is compared to an adamant, as moſt expound it, Zach. 7. 12. for the ſharpneſs of its prickles, to the point of an adamant, Jer. 17. 1. For, the ſame word is for an adamant, or diamond, (for all is one) ſuppoſed to be uſed in both theſe places: but thereof, ſee on Jer. 17. 1. The latter, is uſually, in the latine, rendred by a word that anſwers our buſh.

I will alſo command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it] Heb. and I will charge the clouds from raining rain upon it.

and] For alſo; as Jer. 1. 13.

command] Or, charge. For the word is uſed, as well for prohibition, as for precept. So Deut. 2. 37. where the ſame word is found.

that they rain no rain] Heb. from raining rain. As from ſeeing, Pſal. 69. 23. From redeeming, ch. 50. 2. From ſaving, from bearing, ch. 59. 1, 2.

rain rain] As fear fear, chap. 8. 12. ſleep ſleep, Pſalm 76. 5.

on it] That being not watered it may wither away with drought, ch. 1. 30. Amos 4. 7. Some interpret all theſe ſeveral branches, in a more myſterious way; underſtanding by plucking up the hedge, and pulling down the wall; ſome, the abrogating of the covenant between God and them, Zach. 11. 12, 14. Others, the taking from them his law, that ſevered them from other people, Eph. 2. 14. and kept them within compaſs, Gal. 3. 23. By making them deſolate; the depriving them of their civil State, and lawful policy: by not pruning and digging; the taking away of the prieſtly miniſtery, Hoſ. 3. 4. Luk. 13. 8. By the briars, and thornes ſpringing up; idolatry, and other corruptions ſpringing up among them, 2 Sam. 23. 6, 7. ch. 27. 4. By forbidding the clouds to rain on them; the bereaving them of their Prophets, Pſal. 74. 9. chap. 30. 20. But theſe curioſities, the graver, and ſoberer ſort of Interpreters, do not unjuſtly refuſe and reject.

V. 7. For the vineyard, &c.] Hitherto was the Parable. Now followeth the explication of it, applyed unto God, and his people; ſhewing how the caſe ſtood between God and them: how they had failed in their duty, and what for the ſame was to befall them.

For] So ſome, as rendring a reaſon, why it ſhould not ſo have been with it, as it was; becauſe it was Gods vineyard, v. 1. and the place that he deſired to delight in, Pſal. 132. 14. but that goes too far backwards. Others therefore rather rendor it, Truly, Verily, Surely; as Job 8. 6. & 20. 20. & 28. 1. becauſe having made an end of the parable, he proceeds now to expound it. See ch. 7. 9.

of the Lord of hoſts] See ch. 1. 9.

is the houſe of Iſrael] See ch. 1. 24. & 2. 5. and the men of Judah] In a more ſpecial manner, as ch. 1. 1. Hoſ. 4. 15. & 11. 12.

his pleaſant plant] Heb. his plant of delights, or, pleaſures; that is, in which he took exceeding great delight, Pſal. 132. 13, 14. ſo Jer. 31. 20. a child of delights. For, a childe, that God hath taken very much delight in: David uſeth the terms very frequently, thereby to expreſs the great delight he took in Gods Law, and his Word, Pſal. 94. 19. and 119. 16, 24, 70, 77, 92, 143, 174. and Solomon of the delight that God takes in his ſon, Prov. 8. 30. as alſo, of the delight that the Son of God takes in the ſons of men, Prov. 8. 31. that is, as here in his Church, while it continueth faithful unto him.

and he looked for judgment, &c.] See v. 3, 4. judgment, and juſtice; the execution of the one, and exerciſe of the other, were the good grapes, or fruit, that God expected from his people, Mic. 7. 1.

but behold oppreſſion] To wit, there, where judgment ought to have been, in places of judicature, at the barr, and in the bench of juſtice, Eccl. 3. 16. See ch. 1. 23. & 3. 14, 15. So Jer. 4. 23, 36.

but] Heb. and. As v. 2. ſo v. 6.

behold] Spoken by way of admiration, at ſo ſtrange a degeneration. See ch. 1. 21. Jer. 2. 21.

oppreſſion] Heb. as ſome render it, a conſociation, or conſpiracy, from a word that ſignifies to cleave faſt together, Job 30. 7. 1 Sam. 26. 19. ch. 14. 1. and underſtand it of the wicked Judges and Officers conſpiring and combining together to do injuſtice, Hoſ. 6. 8, 9. Mic. 7. 3. or, as moſt, a ſcab; or, as ſome, from the former root, a cleaving ſcab. Such an one, as cleaves, or ſticks faſt to the body; or cauſeth the body to ſtick faſt to the rayment. So are two other words of the ſame ſtock, with very ſmall alteration, uſed, Levit. 13. 2, 6, 8. & 14. 56. See ch. 3. 17. The word is by the Prophet here uſed, to make an elegant conſonancy, between it and its oppoſite; ſuch as is alſo in the next clauſe, and is with him very frequent. The meaning is, that the Judge, whoſe office was to be as Phyſitian, to relieve, and heal ſuch as were vexed and wringed by the iniquity of their oppreſſors, ch. 1. 17. and 3. 7. was a worſe diſeaſe to them that repaired to him for eaſe and relief; as a grievous ſcab, or ſore, that ſticks ſo faſt to him, that a man cannot eaſily be rid, or recovered of it; ſo that in them the proverb was verified, A prating Phyſitian, a ſecond diſeaſe to his patient; a bad one, worſe then the diſeaſe it ſelf. The Judges worſe then their oppreſſors; what they ſuſtained by the one, more grievous then what they ſuffered by the other. See ch. 3. 15. Others fleeced them; They fleyed them: Others bruiſed their fleſh; They brake their bones, Mic. 7. 2, 3. The word doth not ſignifie leproſie ſimply, as ſome would have it, no more then the word, plague, or ſtroke; though joyned alſo oft with it, Levit. 13. 3, 9, &c. but any ſuch ſcab, as was before ſaid, either leprous, or other, Levit. 13. 2, 6. & 14. 56.

for righteouſneſs] Or, juſtice, joyned commonly with judgment; as if theſe two were inſeparable companions: and without juſtice, judgment no judgment, or a ſcab of judgement rather; as our Prophet here ſpeaks, chap. 61. 8. See Gen. 18. 19. Pſal. 33. 5. & 89. 14. & 96. 2. Prov. 1. 3. & 21. 3. 2 Sam. 8. 15. ch. 1. 21. & 33. 5. & 56. 1. Jer. 5. 1. & 9. 23. & 22. 15. & 23. 5.

but behold a cry] The cry of the oppreſſed, crying out of their oppreſſions and wrongs done them; and crying to God, when they can get no relief with man, Exod.22.22,23, 27. Job 19.7. Pſal.12.5. Eccleſ. 4.1. Lam. 5.4. And theſe were of the bad grapes; fruits not of the ſpirit, but of the fleſh, Gal.5.19,23. complained of before, v. 2,4.

V. 8. Wo unto them,&c.] The parable being before propounded, v.1,6. and expounded, v.7. the Prophet now proceeds unto a more particular enumeration of ſome principal heads of thoſe bad fruits before touched upon, with denunciation of judgments proportionable in ſome ſort thereunto. See the like, Amos 2.9,12,15,19.

Wo] An uſual term of denunciation, ch.29.1. & 30.1. & 31. 1. See chap.1.4.

wo unto] The particle, unto, though neceſſarily to be underſtood, yet is here omitted; and with the interjection here uſed, very ſeldom expreſſed, once onely, that is obſerved; the inſeparable one, Ezek 3.13. and once the ſeparable, Jer. 48. 1. and inſtead thereof, twice the particle that ſignifies upon, Jer. 50. 27. Ezek. 13. 3. but oft expreſſed with another denunciative very neer this, ch. 3. 9. and elſewhere.

unto them,&c.] The firſt head of the evils, or crimes more eſpecially inſtanced in, is the grievous oppreſſion of the greater and richer ſort, exerciſed by them upon their poor neighbours, in expelling them out of their houſes that ſtood neer them, and their lands, that either lay within, or bordered upon their own; thereby either to multiply their own places of abode, or to enlarge their own demains. See 1 King. 21. & Mic. 2.2.

that joyn houſe to houſe] Heb. makers of houſe to touch by houſe. Not that they removed houſes out of their places, to adjoyn them unto their manſions: but that they added houſes to houſes; others, to thoſe that they were formerly poſſeſſed of, Pſal. 83. 12. That they might have variety of places to repair to, according to the times and ſeaſons of the year, Amos 3. 15. Or to make uſe of otherwiſe. So Hoſ. 4. 2. bloods touch bloods; That is, murther is added to murther: one comes in on the neck of another. Houſe to houſe; for, one houſe to another; and field to field: That is, one field to another. As, man of man; for, one man of another, chap. 3. 5.

that lay field to field] Heb. field to field they will make to approach. A double defect, both of the copulative, and; as Exod. 15. 9. ch. 3. 24. and of the relative; as 2 Chron. 28. 9. ch. 42. 5. to thoſe that,&c.

will make to approach] So have done, do, and will do. See ſuch uſe of the future, ch. 3. 16 Joh. 11. 44.

field to field] By taking in thoſe that lay between ſome of their own, on either ſide, and ſo making them to meet; or by encroaching upon, and taking in thoſe that on any ſide joyned to them, Amos 1.13. compared with Jer, 49. 1. Job 24. 2. forbidden, Prov. 22.28. & 23. 10.

till there be no place] No room for any to dwell by them, when they have engroſſed all to themſelves.

that they may be placed] Heb. and ye may be made, or, make your ſelves to dwell. The copulative for the finitive; as chap. 2. 3. The paſſive for the reciprocal; as ch. 1.16. And the perſon changed; as ch. 1.29.

alone] As if the whole land were given them to inhabit, Ezek. 11. 15.

in the midſt of the land] Or, in the land; as verſ. 25. chap. 7. 22.

V. 9. In mine,&c.] the judgment followeth, proportionable to the offence. And that, for fuller aſſurance, confirmed with an oath; as 1 Sam. 3.17. ch. 22. 15. Pſal. 110. 4.

In mine ears, ſaid the Lord of Hoſts] That is, in my hearing; as Luk.4. 21. I heard when God ſpake it, Pſal.62. 11. Or, God by ſecret inſpiration revealed it to me, ch. 22. 14. He told me it in mine ear; as 1 Sam. 15. 16. So ſome. But becauſe the affix, or pronoun is wanting, (which is not altogether unuſual, Pſal. 91. 4. ch. 1. 3, 15. & 3. 12.) nor is the verb in the text. For the hebrew hath no more then, in the ears the Lord, or, of the Lord, &c. (and yet is that verb alſo ſometime wanting; as 1 King. 20. 34. ch. 46, 4.) Others therefore, and thoſe not a few, thus render it; In the ears of the Lord of Hoſts. That is, This your cruel, and injurious carriage is gone up into Gods ears; as Gen. 18. 20. 2 Chr. 28. 9. Ezr.9.6. Jon. 1. 2. He ſees it, and takes notice of it, though ye think he doth neither behold nor regard it, Pſalm. 10. 11, 13,14. and 94. 4.

the Lord of Hoſts] Who is able to right thoſe whom ye wrong; and to avenge them on you, Pſal. 146. 7. Prov.10. 11. & 24.15,16. See ch.1. 9, 24.

of a truth many houſes ſhall be deſolate] Heb. if many houſes be not deſolate. A defective, but emphatical form of ſwearing. See Pſal.95.11. As if he had ſaid, Let me not live; or let me not be God; or let me not be deemed a God of truth, a God of my word; let me never be believed; if ſuch a thing be, which he means ſhall never be. So ch. 22. 14. & 62. 8. Or if ſuch a thing be not, which he is fully reſolved ſhall be; as in this place. See the like forms with man, Gen. 14. 23. Pſal. 132. 3. wherein, out of a cautious ſhunning diſmall expreſſions, they uſed in ſwearing to omit the tearms of execration, which yet in the form of the oath was implyed, and was to be ſupplyed to make the ſentence entire; yea, ſometime was, but in a more ſparing and undefinite way, for the moſt part, expreſſed. See Ruth 1. 17. 1 Sam. 3. 17. 1 King. 19. 2.

of a truth, &c.] Saith he, is to be ſuppoſed. As the like is very uſual, in the relation of the ſpeeches, either of God, or others. See 1 King. 1. 17. & 20. 37. Pſal. 105. 15. with 110. & 132. 14. chap. 47. 4.

many houſes,] The multitude, and variety of your houſes, ſo gotten, ſhall do you no good; you ſhall have no benefit by them, little joy of them. See Amos 3. 15. & 6. 11.

deſolate] Heb. for, or, unto deſolation. Deſigned for it, and brought to it; as Jer. 2. 11. See ch. 1. 7. Your houſes ſhall ſtand empty; the inhabitants being either driven out of them, Mic.2.10. or deſtroyed, and deceaſed in them, Amos 6. 9. 10.

even great and fair, without inhabitants] Even, wanting; as ch. 51. 22. Heb. great, and good; as we uſe to ſay goodly. So Deut.8.12. Neither the largeneſs, nor the fairneſs of your houſes, ſhall procure you ſecurity, or afford you ſafety, Amos 3. 15.

without inhabitant] Heb. from no inhabitant being. That is, for want of inhabitants, or becauſe there is no inhabitant in them. So Jer. 4. 7. See the like, ch. 50. 2.

V. 10. Yea, ten acres of vineyard ſhall yield one bath] As their houſes ſhall ſtand empty; ſo their land ſhall lye waſte and barren; as well thoſe, that thus they came by, as thoſe which they were formerly poſſeſſed of. The one part ſo gotten, ſhall bring a curſe upon the whole. See ch. 7. 23. Hag. 1. 6.

ten acres] The word ſignifies; firſt, a pair, or couple of oxen, Job 1. 3. Aſſes, Judg. 19. 10. Mules, 2 King. 5. 17. Or other beaſts, whether yoked, or unyoked; yea, ſometime not of horſe only, but of horſemen, chap. 21. 7, 9. In the ſecond place, it is uſed for ſuch a parcel of ground, as a pair, or yoke of oxen could ordinarily plough in a day, 1 Sam. 14. 14. which among the Romans, was eſteemed to be of two hundred and forty foot in length, and one hundred and twenty in breadth.

ſhall yield] Heb. make. As verſ. 2. Hoſ. 9. 16. & 10. 1. to make wine, for, to yield wine; as to make milk, for to yield milk, ch. 7.22.

one bath] That is, but one bath; not of grapes; but of wine, made of the grapes, that it ſhall bear. For the bath was a meaſure for liquid things; yet not the leaſt in uſe for them, as ſome ſay; hin, was far leſs, Levit.23.13. Ezek. 4. 11. (and the log leſs then that, Levit. 14. 10, 12, &c.) and it contained about eight or four gallons, the tenth part of an homer, Ezek. 45. 11. So that an whole acre of ground, planted with vines, ſhould not yield ſo much, as one whole gallon of wine.

and the ſeed of an homer] For, an homer of ſeed. So alſo, Levit. 27. 16. The homer was a meaſure, as well for grain, as for liquor, containing ten, either baths, or ephahs, Ezek. 45. 11. And it had its name, either from the heap that ſo much corn as that meaſure contained, laid together, would make; or becauſe it held as much as an aſs might well bear.

an ephah] That is, but an ephah; no more then one ephah; as one bath before. Which ephah, was a meaſure for dry things; as the bath for liquid, and of the ſame quantity with it; the tenth part of an homer, Ezek. 45. 11. much about our buſhel; ſo that their corn grounds ſhould not yield them above the tenth part of their ſeed; they ſhall carry out much, and bring in but little, Hag. 1. 6.

V. 11. Wo unto them that riſe early in the morning] The ſecond crime charged on their exceſs and riot; ſenſuality joyned with ſecurity, ver. 12.

that riſe early] Heb. the early riſers. As making a daily exerciſe of it. So Pſal. 127. 2.

riſe early] That riſe early to their drink, as worldly men to their work, Pſal. 127. 2. as being never well, till they be at the wine, the one; at their work, the other. (So Zeph. 3. 7. They roſe early to corrupt their actions) And in ſwilling, and drinking, paſſing away, and laviſhing out the time aſſigned and allotted to labour, and to more ſerious and neceſſary employments, according to the condition of mens ſeveral places, Pſal. 104.22. Eccl. 10. 16, 17.

that they may] A defect of the particle finitive; as Zeph. 3, 7. See ch.7.25.

follow ſtrong drink] As Pſal. 119. 150. that follow miſchief. Purſue it as eagerly as one doth his flying foe, or his trade. See chap. 23. ſo to ſeek after it, Prov. 23. 30, 35.

ſtrong drink] Not wine; but other ſuch drinks, made of honey, dates, rice, malt, or other grain, that for ſtrength, oft times, come not ſhort of wine, and (whereof alſo they have their name) do make drunk, as well as it, Num. 6.3. Judg. 13.4,14. chap. 29.9. And though ordinarily diſtinguiſhed from wine, v. 22. yet uſed here to comprehend both; and ſo ch. 56.12.

that continue unto night] Heb. continuers, or, drawers out of; to wit, their drinkings. For there is a two-fold defect, both of the copulative, as v. 8. and of the noun, after the participle: in the like caſe expreſſed, Pſal. 127.2. or ſimply, ſtaying at it, ſitting by it, to wit, at, or over the wine, Prov. 23 v. 30.

unto night] Heb. in, (for unto; as Gen. 11. 4. Ezr. 9. 7.) twilight. Which may be underſtood, either of the evening twilight, as Job 24.15. Prov. 7.9. they ſtay by it, from morning to night, all the live-long day, as we uſe to ſpeak; or of the morning twilight, as the word is uſed, Job 7.4. 1 Sam. 30. 17. from morning to morning, ſpend night and day, in drinking and revelling: as they are never well, till they be at it it; ſo they can never give over, when they are once ſet to it, Deut. 32. 19. Prov. 23.35. ch. 56.12.

till wine enflame them] A defect of the particle; whether we are to underſtand it, till, as ſome; or, that, as others: the one implying the iſſue, or effect; the other, the purpoſed end.

wine] Whence it appears, that the word uſed in the former branch, doth there comprehend both; as doth alſo here the word, wine.

enflame them] So is the word uſed, Ezek. 24.10. Obad. 18. and that is indeed the ordinary effect of wine and ſtrong drink, immoderately taken, to enflame the body, Jer. 51. 39. to bring feavers and calentures, ſuch as have thereof their name, Deut. 28.22. yea, to enflame it with filthy luſt, Gen. 19.32,36. Hoſ. 4.11. Yet becauſe the word ſometime alſo ſignifieth, eagerly, or ardently to purſue, Pſal. 7.13. & 10. 2. Lam. 4.19. Some therefore render it, till the wine purſue them: as they purſue it; ſo it purſues them in that manner, that it doth ſurpriſe them, and maſter them, and take wits, Reaſon, and underſtanding, from them, Hoſ 4.12. Prov. 20.1. but the former ſeems the ſounder.

V. 12. And the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine, are in their feaſts] They abound exceſſively in all manner of delights; abandoning themſelves wholly thereunto: not that the things here mentioned, are of themſelves evil; but as in their womens attire, and ornaments, ch. 3.18,24. So here the exceſs in them, and abuſe of them, is that which is condemned. So Amos 6.4,6.

harp] The name of a muſical inſtrument. Whence one, in the greek, hath its name, ſaid to be ſtrung with wires, and to yield ſomewhat a mournful, or querelous ſound. See ch. 23. 16. But whether of the ſame form with our harp, is uncertain.

viol] Another muſical inſtrument, chap. 14.11. ſo called, becauſe it was bellied out, after the manner of a bottle; ſo alſo called, ch. 30.14. Jer. 13. 12 See ch. 22.24. Which not unfitly anſwers our, either lute, or viol. The inſtrument, in greek, having its denomination from this, is acknowledged by ſome of them, to have its original from the Phenicians; under which name, they ſometime include the Syrians alſo, and the Jews; not from the Cappadocians, as ſome of ours. And it was among them, accounted to make a ſweter melody then the harp. No muſical inſtrument is, in Scripture, more frequently mentioned, then theſe two; and they are oft joyned together, 1 Chro. 15. 28. 2 Chro. 20. 28. & 29. 4. Pſalm 81. 2. & 150. 3.

the tabret] The word coming from one that ſignifies to beat, includes, both drums, ſuch as they uſed to beat at the ſlaughtering of their children, in ſacrifice to Moloch, whereof the place of thoſe horrid rites had its name, ch. 30. 33. Jer. 7.31. 32. and tabers, ſuch as they uſed commonly in their feaſts, and merry meetings, ch. 24. 8. Jer. 31. 4.

and pipe] Or, flute; A winde-inſtrument, (as an hand-inſtrument the former;) ſo called, becauſe hollow, or pierced through. See chap. 2.19. and 38.20. taber and pipe, are both joyned together, as here, ſo elſewhere, Exod. 15. 20. Judg. 11. 34. And were uſed commonly, as among us in dancing, from whence the frequent uſe of the pipe therein, gave the name, in Hebrew, to the daunce, Pſal. 149. 3. Jer. 31. 15. Judg. 21. 21.

wine] Without which no feaſt, no banquet: called therefore the feaſt, or the banquet of wine, Eſth. 7.7. Wine put here for all delicious drinks, (See ver. 11. ch. 22. 3.) as there, for all delicious fare, whereof wine is eſteemed a principal, Eſth. 1.7,8.

are in their feaſts] A defect of the prepoſition; as Numb. 12,8. Job 1. 18. Yet ſome read it, Are their feaſts. That is, their feaſts conſiſt wholly of theſe. There is nothing elſe to be ſeen, or heard in them, nothing pious, or ſerious: but all exceſs, and looſeneſs. Contrary to that of the Appoſtle, 1 Cor. 10.31. A pious ſence; but I conceive, not here ſo fit a ſyntaxis, as the former.

feaſts] Or, drinkings; for that cauſe ſo tearmed. So the word properly ſignifies. Hence the phraſe, as of ordinary meales, to eat with one, Gen. 31. 54. Pſal. 41. 9. Luk. 14. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 11. So of feaſting, to drink with him, Eſth. 3. 15. and 7. 1.

but] Heb. and, as ver. 2,4. As their riotous exceſs, and ſenſuallity was before taxed; ſo now their ſecurity, and contempt of God, that then they gave themſelves wholly unto this diſſolute and voluptuous courſe of life, without any regard of Gods judgements, at that time, either preſent on others, or hanging over their own heads; as being not denounced only againſt, but in part alſo inflicted on the State wherein they lived. So ch. 22. 12, 13. Amos 6.4,6. Matt. 24.38,39.

they regard not] Heb. they will not behold. So Pſal. 28. 5. where the ſame ſentence is; To behold; for to regard; look after, take ſpecial notice of, ch. 22. 11. Zach. 12. 10. Of the form of ſpeech, ſee ver. 8.

the work of the Lord] His judgements, either incumbent, or impendent, Pſal. 64. 10. Hab. 1. 5.

neither conſider the operation of his hands] Heb. and the doing of his hands; or, his hands-doing, they ſee not; or, they have not ſeen. They either conſider not, nor take notice of the things themſelves, ch. 42. 25. Hoſ. 7. 9. or, at leaſt, take no notice of an hand of God in them, ch. 26. 11. For it is too nice, that ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors have, who, by the work of God, underſtand the law of God; by the work of his hands, the writing of it in the tables of ſtone, Exod. 32. 13, 14. As if they were taxed for not regarding, and looking after Gods law, Job 21. 14. And that likewiſe to be out of the way, which ſome of them have, with whom ſome of ours concur, who underſtand thereby Gods works of creation, the celeſtial bodies that ſet forth Gods glory, Pſal. 8.3. & 19. 1. As if they were reproved, for not giving themſelves to the contemplation thereof. As alſo, that others of ours expound it, of their not taking notice of, and laying to heart the works of judgement, long before executed on the old world in Noahs time; and on Sodom, and Gomorrha in Lots dayes, 2 Pet. 2. 5, 6. & 3. 5,6. Jud. v. 7. But the Prophet ſeems rather to point at ſome judgments then preſent.

V. 13. Therefore my people are gone into captivity] The puniſhment inflicted, or doom paſt upon them for this their ſin, as ſure to take effect, as if it were executed already. See the like judgement denounced upon the like grounds, Amos 6. 7.

my people] See ch. 1.3. & 2. 6.

are gone into captivity] Or, are going. Are as ſure to go, as if they were going already. So Jer. 9. 1. Joh. 3. 18.

becauſe they have no knowledg] Heb. for no knowledg. Or, becauſe of no knowledg. Becauſe they are ſuch brutiſh, ſenſeleſs, and ſenſual people, Pſal. 92. 6. & 94. 8. chap. 27. 11. Or, for want of conſideration, becauſe they do not regard, and take notice of the hazardous eſtate they are in, and Gods Judgements ſuddenly like to ſeize on them, and having ſeized on the State in part already, ver. 12. Jer. 8.7. Matt. 24. 39. Luk. 17. 44.

and their honourable men are famiſhed] Heb. and his honour, or glory, (are, or ſhall be) men of hunger, or famine. His, to anſwer the word people, Which is, though a collective, (and the pronoun may wel therefore be rendred their,) yet a ſingular tearm. Honour, or glory; for men of honour, or of glory; men honourable, or glorious; that are in great eſteem, and make a great ſhew in the world. So pride, for a man of pride: a proud man, Pſal. 36. 12. Jer. 50. 31. might; for men of might, mighty ones, ch. 3.25. Peace; for a man of peace, a peaceable man, Pſal. 120. 7. See ch. 1. 21.

famiſhed] Men of famine; for famiſhed men; as men of vanity, for vain men, Job. 11. 11. Pſal. 26. 4. Men of wickedneſs, for wicked men, Job. 22. 15. Men of fewneſs; for, a few men, Deut. 25.5. & 28. 62. Of the word men, ſee ch. 2. 9. the firſt tearm. Of the phraſe, ſee more, Jer. 44. 28. The meaning is; the great men, that now live in ſuch pompe and State, and reveal it in that manner, ſhall be ſtarved for want, even of neceſſary food.

and their multitude dryed up with thirſt] Their; Heb. his multitude; as before. That is, the meaner ſort of them, oppoſed to their glory, or glorious ones; as Adam to Iſh, verſ. 15. dried up with thirſt. For thirſt, ariſing from want of drink, cauſeth drought, chap. 41. 17. Lam. 4. 4. And the want of drink is more unſufferable, and prejudiciall to mans life, then the want of bread. The meaner ſort of them ſhall ſuffer want, not of bread onely, but of water too, which being the uſual drink, in thoſe parts, was more obvious then bread; and more neceſſary, in ſome ſort, to the preſervation of mans life, then it. Thoſe, both great and ſmall, high and low; that have ſo much abuſed theſe good creatures of God, when they had them in abundance, ſhall now ſuffer want in either kind of them, and for want of them ſhall periſh. See chap. 3.1. & 65.13. Jer.2.5. Hoſ.2.3. Amos 8. 13. For it is not to be conceived, as if the Prophets meaning were, that the one of them only ſhould ſuffer hunger, and thereby periſh; and the other only thirſt: but, that both of them ſhould ſuſtain a grievous want of either; ſet forth in a rhetorical manner, as in way of diſtribution; for the fuller amplification and aggravation of the evil: ſuch as with this Prophet is very frequent. So v. 15,16. ch.28.17. and ſo, Pſal 106.17. Where it is ſaid, that the earth opened, and ſwallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram. Not, but that it ſwallowed up the company of Dathan, as well as of Abiram; or, but that it covered as well the one, as the other. See alſo Dan.12.3. Howbeit a learned late Annotator, becauſe the word in this latter branch is found uſed ſometime for abundance, and is applyed unto wealth, Pſal.37.16. Eccl.5.10. would have it alſo ſo taken here, and v.14. and ch. 16.14. abundance; for men abounding in wealth: and ſo it will be the ſame in effect with the former.

V. 14. Therefore hell hath enlarged her ſelf] Hell. Heb. Sheol, a term uſed commonly for the grave, as Num.16.30. Pſal. 30. 3. & 55.15. & 86.13. Herein differing from that other, keber, which alſo ſignifies grave, or ſepulchre, Pſal.5.10. & 88.11. chap. 22. 16. that the former is of larger extent, then the latter: the latter ſignifying an artificial grave, or ſepulchre only made by mans hand, whether by digging up the ground, or hewing into a rock, Matth. 27. 60. or the like. Whereas the other comprehendeth as well the natural, as the artificial Sepulchre; as well that by nature provided, as by mans hand procured, whatſoever place of receptacle a mans body after the ſouls departure, is by diſſolution, or for diſſolution, beſtowed in. Thus Jacob ſaith, he would go to his ſon Joſeph, to Sheol, whom yet he ſuppoſed not to be interred, or laid in the ground; but devoured, and ſo buried, as we may ſo ſay, in the bowels of ſome wilde beaſts, Gen. 37. 35. So Jonas calleth the belly of the fiſh, that had taken him in, and ſwallowed him down, the belly of Sheol, Jon.2.1,2. becauſe it was like the grave to him, and was like to be the place of his diſſolution. So when Hezekiah ſaith, Sheol cannot praiſe thee, chap.38.18. He means any dead, without diſtinction, whoſe bodies are now diſpoſed in their places of diſſolution, of what kind, or ſort ſoever. That which Job calleth, the general meeting houſe appointed for all that live, Job 30.23. and of which Solomon ſaith, that all go to one place, Eccl. 3. 20. which of the grave of mans handy-work cannot be ſaid, Jer.22.19.

her ſelf] Heb. its ſoul; ſoul for ſelf, as chap.3. verſ. 9. Jer. chap. 51. 6.

and opened her mouth without meaſure] A very rhetorical and emphatical expreſſion, intimating the numberleſs multitude of thoſe, that by hunger and thirſt, and other like judgments were ſwept away; as if there were ſcarce room enough any where, either under-ground, or above-ground, to receive them. See Jer.7.32,33.

opened] Or, widened. Men are ſaid to open their mouthes to ſpeak, Pſal.78.2. Matth.5.2. to widen their mouthes, when they gape wider then ordinary, to draw in breath, as Pſal.119. 131. or to receive, and take ſomewhat into the mouth, that they greedily deſire. So Job ſaith, that men waited for him, (that is, for his words, that dropped upon them) as for rain, and opened their mouthes wide, (there is the word here uſed) as for the latter rain; that is, as the earth uſeth to gape for rain in the time of Summers drought: as alſo men are ſaid ſometime ſo to do in way of mockage, Job 16.10. where the word is tranſlated gape: as another neer to it of the like ſence and uſe, is rendered, make a wide mouth, chap. 57. verſ. 4. The word would therefore be here tranſlated, hath widened, or, doth widen, as before; gapes wide, as one that is to take in ſome more then ordinary great morſel, or much at once.

her mouth] Or, with her mouth, as Job 16.10. (the particle wanting, as Pſal.17.14. with ver.7.) as being no leſs deſirous to take them in, and ſwallow them down; as it did Dathan and Abiram with all theirs, Num.16.32,33. Pſal.106. 17. (whereunto David alludes, Pſal.55.15. & 69.15.) then they were greedy to ſieze on the poſſeſſions of others, Mic. 2.2. A mouth is aſcribed to the grave, as to the earth, Gen.4. 11. Num.17.32. and the throat of wicked ones, whoſe mouthes are employed in traducing of innocent perſons, is ſaid to be an open Sepulchre, Pſal.5.9. as being ready to ſwallow men down quick, like the grave, or the pit, Prov.1.12.

without meaſure] Heb. unto no meaſure; or, appointment: or, proportion; or, ordinance: as the word ordinarily ſignifies, Gen.47.22. Exod.15.25. Joſh. 24. 25. beyond all ordinary proportion, or wont. The grave is as unmeaſurable, and unſatiable, in ſurprizing and devouring of them, as they were, in ſiezing on the poſſeſſions of their poor neighbours, and taking them to themſelves, ver.18. chap.3.14.

and their glory, &c.] Or, that their glory, &c. may deſcend, &c. as noting the end for which the grave gaped ſo wide; becauſe it had ſuch an huge number of corpſes to receive, that ſhe might ſwallow them down ſuddenly, without ſtop, or ſtay, at once. See that uſe of the particle, v.5.

their glory] Heb. her excellency; or, the excellency of her: as the word is rendred, chap.35.2. where it is alſo diſtinguiſhed from glory. See alſo chap.3.10. & 53.2. excellency, as moſt take it (though ſome, ſimply, for excellency it ſelf, as Ezek.16. 4.) for, men of excellency: as glory before, for men of glory, v. 13. thoſe that were of moſt State, and eſteem, among them.

of her] That is, of the city of Jeruſalem, as ſome: or the State of Judah, as others; for the affix is not maſculine here, as before, v.13. but feminine; and hath therefore nothing elſe in the text, whereunto it may be referred. See ver. 3, 7.

and their multitude] Heb. her multitude; as her excellency. Her, as in the former branch: and multitude, as in the verſe next before-going: the mainy, or, as we uſe to ſpeak, the meany, thoſe of the meaner ſort, which are the greater number by much, every where. And ſo moſt here take it. Howbeit a late Author, as ver. 13; So here, rendreth it rather abundance. Which ſorteth not amiſs here, with what followeth. See chap.16.14.

and their pomp] Or, noiſe; or, tumult: as it is rendred, ch. 37.29. their tumultuous noyſe, or, ſhouting; as ch. 16.10. for ſo the word properly ſignifies, ch. 13.4. & 66. 6. ſuch as is uſual in warlike conflicts, ch.25.25. Hoſ.10.14. Amos 2. 2. as the like alſo in diſorderly feaſting, and revellings, eſpecially where wine hath got the upper hand, ch.24.8. Jer. 48. 45. & 51.38,39.

and] Some, with: as Exod.1.5. and Joſeph, for, with Joſeph: and Neh. 10.42. and Jeremiah, for, with Jeremiah; as it is there well rendred; their tumultuous ſhoutings ſhall ceaſe, or dye, and be buried with them, ch.24.8. & 25.5.

their] Heb. her. As before.

pomp] Or, noyſe; or, tumult; or, ſhout: as ſome, for, thoſe that make ſuch noyſe, tumult, or ſhout: called the ſons, or children of ſhouting, Jer. 48.45. as glory before, v. 13. and excellency in this.

and he that rejoyceth] Or, and him. To wit, and with him, as before.

that rejoyceth] Or, revelleth rather: As the city of Jeruſalem is called a revelling city, chap.22.2. the houſes thereof, houſes of diſport, or, meriment, ch.32.13. The word properly ſignifies to skip, or leap for joy. The word uſed of John Baptiſt, anſwering to it, where it is ſaid, that he leaped (or ſprang rather) for joy, being as yet in his mothers womb, Luk.1. 44. and it is taken in a middle ſence, ſometime for ſuch expreſſion of joy, either honeſt, and lawful, on good and juſt ground; or a degree of joy more then ordinary, albeit no ſuch expreſſion be therein uſed, as chap. 13.3. Pſal. 28.7. & 60.6. & 68.3. Hab. 3. 18. Otherwhiles, for looſe and diſorderly skipping and frisking, out of lightneſs and wantonneſs; and other the like motions and geſtures, expreſſions of immoderate and inordinate delight, Jer. 51.39. and ſo here; he, or him, that rejoyceth and revelleth, taken collectively, for the whole crew of them. See chap. 1. 3. ver. 15.

ſhall deſcend] Or, may deſcend; taking the copulative for the finitive; and, for, that: as was before ſaid, that there may deſcend, to wit, into the grave, the glory, or excellency, &c. for ſo the words lye, that they may all, and all ſorts of them, go down into the grave. So Job 21.12,13.

into it] To wit, the grave before ſpoken of, according to our verſion; and ſo is the particle uſed, Ezra 9.7. chap.10. 21. but the trajection is too great to admit here that ſence. For the word of deſcending, ſtandeth here in the front of the ſentence, and not in the cloſe of it, as our verſion placeth it. And it ought therefore to be rendred, he, or him that revelleth in her, or the reveller in her; as before, her excellency, her multitude, her ſhouting. Of which, ſee before.

V. 15. And the mean man ſhall be brought down, and the mighty man ſhall be humbled] Men of all ſorts (as before, ver. 14. ſave that the greater, and of higher degree and ſtate, are firſt ſpoken of there; the meaner condition is firſt mentioned here) ſhall alike be laid low, being brought down to the grave, that makes no diſtinction of ſtates, Job 3.13,19. See chap. 2.9. where the words being the ſame, this is at large opened.

and the eyes of the haughty ſhall be humbled] See chap. 2.11.

ſhall be humbled] Their countenance, or big look, ſhall then be caſt down, Gen.4.6. Lam.2.10.

V. 16. But] Heb. And. Which may well ſtand here.

ſhall be exalted in judgment] He ſhall, by his juſt judgment executed on thoſe wicked wretches, who ſet ſo light by him before, manifeſt and magnifie, as well his power, as his purity, Pſal.9.6. See ch.2.11.

and God that is holy] Heb. the God, the holy One. The moſt holy God; ſo holy, as none holy as he, 1 Sam.2.2. as none good in regard of him, Matth.19.17. none wiſe, in way of collation with him, 1 Cor.3.19. 1 Tim.1.17. So none holy, in ſuch manner as he is. They that are holy, and wiſe, and good, in ſome kind, by participation from him, are neither holy, nor wiſe, nor good, when they come into compariſon with him, Job 4.17,18. & 9.2. & 15.15. & 25.5,6. See ch. 1.4. & 6.3.

ſhall be ſanctified] His holineſs, and hatred of ſin ſhall appear, and he religiouſly acknowledged, by his puniſhing of it in obſtinate ſinners, Levit.10.2,3. Ezek.20.41. & 28.22,26. the ſparing and forbearing of whom, for a time, cauſeth wicked wretches oft-times, to call in queſtion his holineſs, Pſal.50.21. Mal.2.17.

in righteouſneſs, by his righteouſneſſe ſhewed in thoſe his judgments. For it is not to be underſtood, as if he were to be exalted by judgment, and not by righteouſneſs; or ſanctified by righteouſneſs, and not by judgment. But it is a rhetoricall illuſtration, amplifying and dilating both the act and the effect: and deſcribing the act by two ſeveral arguments: the ſubject, judgment; the adjunct, juſtice: the effect or event by two branches of it, the manifeſting and magnifying, partly of Gods greatneſſe, and partly of his goodneſſe; the one applyed to the ſubject, the other to the adjunct; though both common to either. So alſo ver. 15. See of judgment and juſtice, chap. 1.27. & ver. 7. Of the manner of ſpeech, ver. 13.

V. 17. Then ſhall the lambs feed after their manner] Heb. And. for, Then, as Gen.28.21. or 22 rather, (for the condition of the vow there is in the 21. verſe, the matter of it in the 22.) Levit.4.3. & 6.4.

Then] When by the judgments before threatned, being put in execution, the unjuſt poſſeſſors of thoſe houſes and lands before ſpoken of, being either ſlain, or expelled; they ſhall either lye waſte, or return again to thoſe unto whom they formerly belonged.

the lambs ſhall feed after their manner] Some expound it literally, and ſimply, without any figure, or allegory; of cattle, grazing freely, without reſtraint, in thoſe places, whence before, by incloſures, they had been excluded, after the paſtures came into thoſe great mens hands: yea, upon thoſe places, now lying waſte, where their either dwellings, or farm-houſes, had before ſtood, as chap. 7. 25. & 17. 2. But it ſeems rather, as the moſt and beſt, to be underſtood of the godly poor; who either being left in the land, during the time of the captivity, ſhould enjoy thoſe places, and receive the fruits thereof, which by the deſtruction, or deportation of their Oppreſſors, were now vacant, Jer.52.13. Zeph. 3. 12. (ſee chap. 7. 21, 22.) or returning out of captivity, ſhould quietly enjoy their lands and means again, whence by cruel and injurious courſes of the mightier ſort they had formerly been expelled, Ezek.34.14,15.

the lambs] Gods people are in Scripture termed his ſheep; in regard of the care that he hath of them, as their ſhepheard, Pſal.77.20. & 80.1. Ezek.34.15. Joh. 10.10,16,27,28. & 21. 16,17. and his paſture ſheep, in regard of the plentiful proviſion he makes for them, Pſal.23.1,2. & 100.3. Ezek. 34. 31. and his lambs, in regard of his tender affection towards them, ch. 40.11. Joh. 21.15.

after their manner] The word here uſed, is but twice found in Scripture; here, and Mic.2.12. For the one of theſe Prophets hath much from the other; (ſee chap. 2. 2.) Now in Micah it is apparent, that it ſignifies a fold, whereinto ſheep are gathered, for their better ſecurity, therein to be folded; alluded unto by our Saviour, Joh.10.16. and ſo ſome take it in this place, thus rendring the words, they ſhall feed beſide their wonted fold, or folds. But the particle is ſeldome, if ever, found uſed, for beſide. Others therefore, and ſo the moſt, take it according to another word that comes very neer it, uſed, Pſal.110.4. compared with Heb.6.20. & 7.17. Eccl.3.18. For order, or, manner; they ſhall feed freely and quietly, as they had wont to do, before their diſturbance and expulſion, Jer. 23.3,4. & 30.10. & 46.27. Ezek.34. 25,28. See chap. 7.25. Others, according to their conduct, or leading: as their ſhepheard ſhall lead them, after the manner of thoſe parts, ch.40.11. becauſe the verb it cometh from, is in the Chaldee ſo commonly uſed.

and the waſte places of the fat ones, ſhall the ſtrangers eat] This ſome underſtand of ſtrangers, by Gods juſt judgment, devouring what was found left in the places where they had expelled thoſe great ones before mentioned: and ſo it ſhould be the ſame with that, chap.1.7. ſtrangers devour your land, &c. Others, of the expulſion of thoſe great ones out of thoſe places, whence they had expelled the right owners before, and driving them out into the waſte Wilderneſs, to ſeek relief and harbour there: and theſe render the words, and the fat ones, as ſtrangers (to wit, from God) ſhall feed on the waſtes of the land: and ſo it ſhould be as that, Pſal.68.6. the rebellious ſhall dwell in a dry land. But this ſeems to offer over-much violence to the text. Others therefore underſtand it of the poor oppreſſed, as before, returning again to thoſe places, to which they had been for a long time as ſtrangers, after their freedome from captivity, Jer.12.14,15.

the waſte places] Or, waſtes: as Ezek. chap. 33.24. and 36. 33.

of the fat ones] The word whereof this comes, ſignifies marrow, Job 21.24. Hence this word is uſed for fat beaſts, or, fatlings, Pſal.66.15. and another not unlike it, for the ſame, ch.25.6. becauſe the bones of fat ones, men, or beaſts, are uſually full of marow, Job 21.24. Some therefore underſtand here, the paſtures, the now waſtes, where fat beaſts, that they fed on, and feaſtd with, (ch. 22.13.) did formerly feed. Others, where thoſe fat ones, that is, rich ones, did themſelves formerly abide. Fat, for, rich, or, great, for their ſtore of wealth, or high feeding, or both; (as Luk.16.19. ſo ſtyled, as Pſal.22.29. & 78.31. ch.34.6,7.

V. 18. Wo unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and ſin, as it were, with a cartrope] The third ſort of abominable fruits that Gods vineyard produced, is the obſtinacy and eagerneſs of wicked ones in the purſuit of ſin and wickedneſs, together with a profeſſed contempt of God and his judgments, v.19.

that draw iniquity] Some underſtand this, of drawing others to ſin: of men, that are not content to ſin and do evil themſelves; but intice, perſwade, urge, and force others thereunto: the Devils trade, Gen. 3. 2,4. called therefore the Tempter, Matth.4.1,3. Joh.13.2. 1 Cor.7.5. 1 Theſſ.3.5. Rev. 12.9. & 13.14. & 20.8,10. Of ſuch, ſee Gen. 39. 7, 10, 12. 2 Sam.13.3,11,14. & 16.21. Hab.2.15. Matth. 29.15. and they ſuppoſe, that the metaphor uſed, doth very pregnantly expreſs it, wherein the perſons themſelves are compared to beaſts, that draw in a cart, or a wain; the vain, and falſe perſwaſions, and arguments, wherewith they draw them on unto evil, to traces, or cart-ropes: and the parties ſo drawn on by them, to wains, or carts, drawn by beaſts. Underſtanding by iniquity and ſin, after an Hebraiſm not unuſual, men of iniquity, and men of ſin, as the word iniquity ſeems taken, Pſal. 49.5. & 65.3. & 119.133. Of which phraſe, ſee alſo ver.13, 14. But the place ſeems rather to moſt others, to be meant of ſuch, as being deſperately bent, and abandoned to ſin, do not lengthen only, and draw out their ſinful courſe and tenour of life, as a man draweth out a line, or a cord, either in the unfolding, or in the ſpinning and framing of it; (for the word ſometime ſignifies to continue, or protract, Pſal. 36. 11.) but by all means, that they can deviſe, draw ſin unto themſelves, where there is hardly any matter of profit, pleaſures, gain, delight, perſwaſion by others, enforcement from others; or other like temptations that are wont to lead aſide, and carry men on to evil. So that, whereas others are drawn by ſuch motives unto ſin, they draw ſin unto themſelves; whereas, ſin is by ſuch inducements preſſed and enforced upon others, they preſs and enforce it upon themſelves: they draw ſin to them, as a beaſt draws a cart, or wain, after it, Deut.21. 3. Howbeit, ſome by ſin, and iniquity, here conceive to be meant, the penalties or puniſhments due unto either. And ſo indeed the words are not ſeldome uſed, Gen. 4. 13. Levit. 20.17. Num.9.13. according to which interpretation, the meaning ſhould be; ſuch as labour to draw on Gods judgements upon themſelvesby their continuance in impenitency, and adding ſin to ſin, and thereby provoking God, to come the more ſpeedily in judgment againſt them, Rom.2.4,5. and this indeed would well ſuit with what follows, v. 19. But I ſuppoſe rather the genuine meaning to be; ſuch as by all means, and with all their might, apply themſelves to the practice of evil, toiling and tiring themſelves in it, as a beaſt tugging at the plow, or drawing in the cart, as Jer.9.5. See Job 4.8. Prov. 3.29. & 21.4. where the like metaphor is uſed.

that draw iniquity] Heb. the drawers of iniquity: as the early riſers, v.11. See there.

with cords of vanity] By cords of vanity, Some underſtand here ſuch vain excuſes, and pretences, as wicked ones uſe ordinarily to cover, or colour, to ſmooth, or ſmother their vile practices with, 1 Sam.15.13,15,20,21. But that is not the manner of ſuch deſperately profeſſed prophane ones, as are here ſpoken of; but with open face, and bare fore-head rather, to avow, blaze abroad, and boaſt of their evil doings, Pſal.52.1. chap.3.9. By cords of vanity, therefore, I rather underſtand thoſe fetches and devices, toilſome courſes and employments, wherein men bent to wickedneſs, and ſet wholly thereupon, do labour and toyl, and take pains inceſſantly, for the compaſſing of their intended evil practices, and the bringing about of their wicked deſigns, Pſal.36.4. Mic.1.2.

with cart-ropes] Heb. the thick rope of a wain, or cart. For the word properly ſignifieth a thick cord, or rope; ſuch as thoſe are uſually, wherewith carts or wains are drawn, and whereof traces are made for the beaſts, that draw in them: and hereby is intimated the ſtrength of thoſe plots, that they make uſe of, for the accompliſhment of their wicked purpoſes, that they may not fail, and miſcarry before they come to full effect, Pſal.64.5,6.

V. 19. That ſay, Let him make ſpeed, &c.] That ſcoff at Gods menaces, and jeſt at his judgments; neither crediting the one, nor expecting the other: yea, not only, not conſidering them, or thinking at all on them: as thoſe before wholly drowned in ſenſuality, and carnal delights, v.12. but in moſt impious manner jeering at them, and the Prophets that denounced them, as if their words were but winde, and the the matter it ſelf a meer mockery; ſuch, as it were a moſt fond thing for any man to fear, Jer. 5.11,12.

Let him make ſpeed, and haſten his work, that we may ſee it] Or rather, Let him make ſpeed; let him haſten his work, or, make haſte with his work. For the copulative is not in the text, and the inſerting of it makes the ſpeech leſs emphatical. The words they are of theſe deſperate Athieſts; as if they had ſaid, we have heard much, and long, of what God, you ſay, intends to do, we would fain ſee it once done. So Jer.17.15. Ezek. 12.23. Amo[illegible].18. 2 Pet.3.3. they ſpeak, as if they thought it long a coming; but will think that it comes too ſoon, when it doth come, Matth.8.29.

let the counſel] That is, the matter, as by counſel ſet down, and reſolved upon, Pſal.3,11. ch.19.17.

of the holy One of Iſrael] So in mockage they ſpeak of God, as thoſe, Job 21.15. Of the ſtyle, ſee ch.1.4.

draw near and come, that we may know it] Heb. know. A defect of the particle, denoting the object, or thing to be known: either know it to be true, and you to be true Prophets, [illegible] now tell us of it, Ezek.2.5. & 6.10. or know it, by [illegible], yea, or feeling, what we now hear, finding that fulfilled, that is now ſaid, Jer.30.24.

V. 20. Wo unto them that call evill, good; and good, evill] Some would have this reſtrained to matter of judicature; and ſo it would be in effect, the ſame with that which followeth, v.23. But it ſeems more general, and to deſcribe the perverſe diſpoſition of thoſe who do not only confound the names and natures of things, and take away all diſtinction between good, and bad; honeſt, and diſhoneſt; as ſome here expound it, (which yet were a moſt horrible depravation and obliteration of natural reaſon, and of the remainder of Gods image, in mans corrupt heart) as miſ-place them in a croſs and perverſe courſe and manner, (like thoſe that turn night into day; and day into night) transferring the one into the room of the other, and ſubſtituting the one in the place of the other; not only confounding vice with vertue, and evill with good, making both alike, either allowable, or diſ-allowable, and ſuch as may alike be either rejected or received: but going further then ſo, hating that, and rejecting it that ought to be loved, and embraced; and embracing that, and approving it, that ought to be rejected, and abhorred, Amos 5.10. Mic.3.2. that which is the higheſt degree, if it be done out of judgment, of that reprobate mind, or, unſound judgment, that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, which ſome heathen were given up unto, Rom.1.28. or if againſt judgment and knowledg, out of a meer wilfulneſs and perverſneſs of ſpirit; is not far from that oppoſition, which our Saviour Chriſt terms blaſphemy againſt the Spirit of God; and ſaith, ſhall never be remitted, Matth.12.32. And this is the fourth evil fruit, or crime, that ſome part, at leaſt, of this people, are here charged with.

call evill, good; and good, evill] Heb. ſay of evill, it is good; and of good, it is evill: as Mal.1.8. Prov.20.14. that ſo do, either out of unſoundneſs of judgment, or baſe calumny, or groſs flattery, or meer malice. See Prov.24.24. of evill, or concerning evill; and, of good, or concerning good: as the particle is uſed, Pſal.91.11. Eſth.3.2.

that put darkneſs for light; and light for darkneſs; that put bitter for ſweet; and ſweet for bitter] Heb. put darkneſs into light, that is, into the room of light; and ſo of the reſt. In theſe words, is a metaphoricall amplification of the thing before ſpoken, illuſtrating the practice and carriage of the perſons therein taxed, by two ſimilitudes, taken from natural objects; thereby intimating, that this their ſentencing of good and evill, proceeded not meerly from a natural ignorance; or from ſome infirmity, or weakneſs: ſince that theſe that are corporally blind, albeit they cannot diſtinguiſh between night and day; and they may therefore ſuppoſe it to be night, when indeed it is day: yet can they not take darkneſs it ſelf for day-light, or deem day-light to be darkneſs; as alſo theſe that have their mouthes or pallats, by ſome diſtemper or diſeaſe out of taſte: although they do apprehend things of themſelves ſweet, as bitter: yet do they not apprehend things bitter, as ſweet. But by theſe metaphorical illuſtrations, the Prophet implyes, that this their croſs carriage, in paſſing ſuch doom on good and evil, and not diſplacing only, but miſplacing of either; proceeded rather from a wilful and inordinate love of whatſoever was evil, and repugnant to grace and goodneſs; and an inveterate hatred of whatſoever was good; or had any reliſh of grace and goodneſs in it, Job 20.12,13. & 24.13,17. Pſal.36.2,4. Joh.3.20.

darkneſs for light] Grace and goodneſs is commonly termed light in Scripture, Act.26.18. Rom. 13.12. Eph.5.4. 1 Theſſ. 5.5. becauſe it proceeds from God, the Father of light, Jam. 1.17. from his irradiation ſhining into mens ſouls, 2 Cor.4. 6. Heb.10.32. It makes men lightſome inwardly, that is, pure, and ſincere, Phil.1.10. therein like unto God, 1 Joh. 1.5. and able to diſcern aright of things that differ, Rom. 2. 18,20. Phil.1.10. it makes them ſhine forth brightly in their life and converſation, Matth.5.14,16. Phil.2.15. Rev. 19.8, 14. it is ſuch as can endure the light, Joh.3.21. it aſſures of the light of Gods favour here, Pſal. 36.9. & 89.15,16. by tranſlating men into the kingdom of light, Col.1.12. and fitteth them for that everlaſting light, whereof alſo it is a pledge, 1 Tim.6.16. Rev.21.23. As on the other ſide, ſin and evill, or the evil of ſin, is commonly compared to darkneſs; and is ſo uſually ſtiled, Joh.3.19. Rom.13.12. Eph. 4.8. 1 Theſſ. 5. 4,5. 1 Joh.1.6. & 2.11. becauſe it darkens the mind, Eph.4. 18. it affects darkneſs, Eph.5.11,12. 1 Theſſ.5.7. it is ſuch as cannot endure the light of Gods word, Joh.3.19,20. Eph. 5. 13. it is the ſervice of Satan, the Prince of darkneſs, Eph. 6. 12. Col.1.12. and makes men like unto him, Joh.6.70. 1 Joh. 3.10. it makes men liable to the gloomineſs of Gods wrath, and cloudeth his countenance toward them here; and if perſiſted in, will bring unto utter and eternal darkneſs hereafter, Matth.8.12. & 22.13. & 25.30.

bitter for ſweet, &c.] Gods Word, and Gods wayes, are of themſelves ſweet and comfortable: and ſuch is his favour following all thoſe that are guided by the one, and walk in the other, Pſal. 4.6,7. & 19.10. & 34.8. & 37.7,8. & 119. 103. Prov. 3.17. and on the other ſide, ſin, and ſinful courſes, though they may ſeem pleaſant for the preſent, yet have no true, or ſound delight in them; they produce bitter fruits, and will prove bitter in the end, Prov.5.3,4. & 9.17,18. & 14.13. & 23.32. Jer.2.19. Act.8.23. Gal.5.19,21. Eph.4.31. and yet is mans corrupt heart over-apt to conceive, that there is no ſweetneſs, or deſireableneſs at all in the former; no ſweetneſs, or deſireableneſs at all, but in the latter, Job 20.12,13. & 21. 14,15.

V. 21. Wo unto them that are wiſe in their own eyes] The firſt wo, denounced againſt thoſe that are puffed up with ſelf-conceit; and a vain opinion of their own wiſdom. This moſt of our Interpreters underſtand, of ſuch an opinion and eſteem of themſelves, that men commonly are poſſeſſed of, in regard of their own knowledg, that they think ſcorn to be adviſed and taught by others, and refuſe therefore, to hear ought that Gods Miniſters ſpeak to them, as being fitter to teach them, then to be taught by them. And true it is, that ſuch ſelf-conceit, is a great hinderance to proficiency in any knowledg, either humane, or Divine. Neither can wine, or other liquor, enter into a blown bladder, untill the wind be voided, and the bladder quit of it. And the Apoſtle therefore ſaith, that the man that thinks himſelf wiſe, muſt become a fool, that he may be wiſe, 1 Cor.3.19. and Solomon, that there is more hope of a fool, then of him that is wiſe in his own conceit, Prov. 26. 12. But I ſuppoſe that the vice, or crime, that the Prophet here aimeth at, is the vain confidence that many of thoſe times, had in their own wiſdom; by means whereof, not a few, great Stateſmen eſpecially, imagined, that they could deviſe and contrive ſuch wayes and courſes, as ſhould be able wholly to avert thoſe evils and judgments, as were either threatned, or expected; and ſo to ſecure well enough, both the State, and themſelves; that which made them not to regard at all, any the ſpeeches of Gods Prophets, ſee chap.30.1,3, & 31.1,3. And by help whereof, others of them made account, that they ſhould be able to ſecure themſelves at leaſt, and to procure their own indemnity, howſoever matters ſhould go, and whatſoever ſhould befall the State; that which made them alſo ſet light by whatſoever was denounced, as being furniſhed with armour of proof before-hand, againſt all that might come; and ſure to ſhift for themſelves, however it might fare with others. See chap.28.15. & 29.14,16. Such kinde of ſelf-confidence in this; which Solomon oppoſeth to truſting with the whole heart in God, Prov.3.5.

in their own eyes] That is, in their own opinion, conceit, judgment; or, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, with themſelves, Rom.12.16. So Prov.3.7. & 12.15. & 16.2. and 21.20. & 26.5,16. & 28.11. & 30.12.

and prudent] Some would diſtinguiſh this from the former; referring wiſe, to matters concerning God: prudent, to things concerning the world. But the words are in Scripture uſed promiſcuouſly: and the ſame thing ſeems (as with this our Prophet is very frequent) in divers words repeated; implying, that none of their prudence, or policy, wiſdome, or underſtanding, term it what, or how they pleaſed, ſhould be able to prevail againſt God, or to ſecure them from his wrath, Prov. 21.30.

prudent] Heb. underſtanding. So Jer.4.22. where ſuch are oppoſed to fools, or ſottiſh ones. The term coming from it, is uſed, Prov.3.5. where Solomon admoniſheth his ſon, not to lean upon, or truſt unto, his own underſtanding.

in their own ſight] Heb. before their own face. The ſame in effect with that before, in their own eyes. Becauſe what ſtands, or lyes before a mans face, is in his ſight, or in his eyes. So, before the eyes of God, Pſal.18.24. and before the face of God, Lam.3.35. are one and the ſame.

V. 22. Wo unto them that are mighty to drink wine] The ſixth wo is thundered out againſt thoſe that gloried in their ability to take in much liquor, and go away with it. This ſome think to be the ſame, in ſubſtance, with what was before dealt with, v. 11, 12. Suppoſing this chapter to be made up of parcels collected out of ſeveral Sermons of this Prophet; and ſo repeating the ſame things, as they were found in thoſe ſeverall Sermons oft delivered. And ſo indeed our Saviour on ſeveral occaſions at ſeveral times, taught ſometime the ſame thing; as Matth.5.29,30. compared with Matth. 18. 8,9. Matth. 7. 16,18. with Matth. 12.35. Matth.10.38,39. with Matth.16. 24,25. as alſo, that the Apoſtles out of their former Epiſtles ſometime repeat ſome things, 1 Cor.5.9. Phil.3.1. But little probability is there, that this chapter ſhould be ſo pieced out, and not be an entire diſcourſe and context, framed out of the ſum and ſubſtance, at leaſt, of one particular Prophecie. Others, though they deny not this to be the ſame with the former: yet they ſuppoſe, that the ſame vice, or crime, might well be more then once reproved, and dealt with in one and the ſame Sermon; as ſome things are more then once inculcated, ſometime in the ſame Epiſtle, 1 Cor. 1. 10, 12. & 3.1,4. & 11.18. Phil.2.1,2. & 4.2. Phil.3.1. & 4.4. And that indeed is not unuſual in the writings both of the Prophets and Apoſtles; howbeit there ſeems here ſome difference between the former paſſage and this. That which ſome ſuppoſe to conſiſt in the perſons dealt with; the Nobles and Courtiers being principally aimed at there; the Commanders, Soldiers, and men of armes, here: and it is not unlikely, by ſome terms here uſed, but that they are ſpecially glanced at among others. But I conceive, that the courſes and vices mentioned, and darted at, in either paſſage, are diſtinct. There was taxed their ſenſuality, and their unſeaſonable immoderacy in mirth, muſick, drinking, and all manner of delights: here the extream vanity and vileneſs of thoſe that gloried in this, as matter of much honor and valour, that they were able to take and pour in more liquor, then many others could do. A practice, that many, who live as looſely and as luxuriouſly as any, yet cannot, or do not, or deſire not to do; much leſs are ordinarily faulty in. Of which we may well ſay with the Apoſtle, that the glory of ſuch is their ſhame, Phil.3.19. it being rather the commendation of a tun, then of a man, (for a beaſt will ſcarce abide it) to be able to take in and contain much liquor.

and men of ſtrength] It is not unlikely, that in this expreſſion, the Prophet indeed to touch their military men. For ſuch in Scripture are commonly ſo ſtiled, by the tearm here uſed, men of arms, and armies; or of might and valour, (for the word imports either) Judg.3.29. 1 Sam.[illegible]. and 31.12. 2 Sam. 24.9. It is therefore, as if he had ſaid of them, They are ſtiled men of valour: and they are valorous, but at board, not in field; not to fight, but to drink. For that is it, onely, wherein they deſire to ſhew their valour.

to mingle] So indeed the word here uſed, primarily, ſignifies, Pſalm 102. 11. where the afflicted perſon complains, that he mingled his drink with his tears. Now becauſe it was uſuall in thoſe parts to mingle, and temper their wine, when they drank, ordinarily, with water, thereby to allay the heat and ſtrength of it; hence came it to paſs, that the word, which properly ſignifies to mingle, or temper, is both in hebrew, greek, and latine, uſed for to prepare, pour out, ſtrow, reach, or pour in wine, or other liquor. So Prov.9.2. wiſdom is ſaid not to have mingled (for her wine is not mingled ſtuff, like that, chap.1.22. but pure, and ſincere, as her milk, 1 Pet.2.2; but to have prepared, that is, drawn out of the veſſel, poured out into cups, and made ready to be ſerved out) her wine. And hence, thoſe that ſerved and attended at feaſts, are ſaid to mingle, that is, to ſerve out wine to the gueſts, and that then, when they ſerved it to them without any mixture of ought. Yea, hence mixture is uſed for wine in generall, either mixt, or unmixt. So God is ſaid to have in his hand a cup full of mixture, that is, a cup full of wine, Pſal.75.8. of which it is ſaid more fully, and expreſly, Rev. 14. 10. that it is the unmixt, or pure wine of wrath mingled, that is, poured in to be ſerved out, in the cup of his anger. And the drunkard is ſaid, Prov.23. 30. to ſeek for mixture, that is, for wine, or full cups of it; not mingled wine, as it is amiſs rendred; it is not ſuch that they ſeek after. And here therefore it would be rendred, not to mingle, but to pour in, or pour down. Nor will it help, for the ſalving the tranſlation, to ſay, that it may be they uſed to mingle their wine, or drink, with ſome drugs, or ſpices, as we ſometime do, to improve thereby the heat and ſtrength of it, and ſo make it the more heady; for this could not be their, but the taking of it in rather, wherein they ſhould ſhew their ſtrength; That had been matter of art, and skill rather, then of might and valour, as they eſteemed it.

ſtrong drink] Some render it drunkenneſs, and expound it of making others drunk by tempering, and tendring of wine and ſtrong drink to them, untill they make them drunk; as God is is ſaid to have mingled, that is, poured out upon, or into the Egyptians, a perverſneſs of ſpirit, that made them ſtagger like a man in drink, chap.19.14. Nor is it improbable, but that ſuch as the Prophet here ſpeaks of, were forward and frequent enough in ſuch practices, and accounted it no ſmall glory to be able to lay ſo many men under the board; as too many among us, do, Hab.2.15. But the word here uſed, is no where taken for drunkenneſs, (there is another word for that, though of the ſame ſtock with this, Ezek.23. 33. & 39. 19.) but alwayes for ſtrong drink. See v. 11.

V. 23. Which juſtifie the wicked for reward] Or, Wo alſo be to them, which juſtifie, &c. This is to be ſupplyed, becauſe this is a new crime, and diſtinct from the former, as well in regard of the matter of it, as of the perſons alſo ordinarily therein offending. For the former reached the generality; men of all ſorts and ſtates; and if it touched any more ſpecially, it was their military men: whereas the preſent concerns thoſe, only, that are in place of judicature; howſoever ſome of them alſo might be in the former kind faulty: but [illegible] hath more ſpecially relation to them, as in ſuch place and [illegible]. And the crime for which a wo is denounced againſt them, is their iniquity and perverſe judgment, together with the root of it, their covetouſneſs. That for filthy lucre, being by wicked men bribed, they would not ſtick to acquit the guilty, and condemn the guiltleſs: both which are pronounced to be moſt abominable in Gods ſight, Prov.17.15.

which juſtifie] To juſtifie, is not to pardon, as ſome would expound it in the doctrine of the Goſpel; for the word is never found ſo uſed, either in the Hebrew, or Greek Writers, ſacred, or prophane, nor in our common ſpeech; nor as it is a law term, doth it ever ſignifie, to make juſt: ſave as we uſe to ſay, you make me a knave, or a thief, when ſome charge us with that which may ſeem to infer, or imply, as much of us: and when John ſaith of ſome, that they make God a liar, 1 Joh. 1.10. & 5.10. that is, they carry themſelves ſo toward God, as if they accounted him ſo to be; or, as we uſe to ſay, of one, whoſe honeſty and integrity ſome ſtrive to maintain, when we deem otherwiſe of him, you would make him an honeſt man. But to juſtifie in a legal way, doth alwayes ſignifie to defend, or to doom as juſt and guiltleſs; free from the offence, wherewith the party called in queſtion is charged; to defend as juſt: and ſo it is the office of an advocate, to doom as juſt, and conſequently aſſoil from guilt; and ſo it is the part of a Judge: and it is therefore oppoſed ſometime to crimination, in regard of the former; ſometime to condemnation, in regard of the latter, Deut.25.1. Matth.12.37. Rom.8.33,34. and ſo it is conſtantly uſed in caſes of this kind, Exod.23.7. 1 King. 8.32. 2 Chr. 6.23. Job 13.18. Pſal.82.3. chap.50.8. Yea, ſo it is ſaid, that wiſdom is juſtified of her children, Matth.11.19. that is, her children, as advocates, plead for her, and maintain the equity of her cauſe and courſes, againſt thoſe that traduce her and them. As alſo in private carriages, men are ſaid to juſtifie others, when they plead for them, and avow their integrity and honeſty, againſt thoſe that queſtion it, Job 27.5. & 33.32. and to juſtifie, or ſtand in juſtification of themſelves, when they maintain their innocency, and freeneſs from that which they are ſuſpected of, or charged with, Gen.44.16. Job 9.20. & 32.2. Luk.16.15. Here therefore the word juſtifie, ſignifies, as ever in matter of judicature, ſo far forth as it importeth the act of a Judge, to doom, acquit, or aſſoil, as guiltleſs, or as free from the offence charged on the party queſtioned. And this conſtant uſe of the word, in ſuch caſes, well weighed, would much conduce to the clearing of the doctrine of juſtification of a ſinner in Gods ſight. Concerning which, ſee further, on chap.53.11.

the wicked] The guilty. Whom they [illegible] pronounce guilty, or condemn, Deut. 25. 1. where [illegible] uſed, ſignifies properly to guiltifie, or to make wicked. [illegible] is, to paſs a doom, or ſentence upon one, as ſuch, Prov. 17. 15. 1 King. 8. 32. 2 Chr. 6. 23. Now in ſome caſes, and for ſome ſpecial reſpects, it may ſometimes be lawful for thoſe that are in authority, to ſpare or pardon an offendor. And yet if men do it, there where God requires juſtice to be ſtrictly executed, they muſt look, with Ahab, to pay with their own ſouls, for the ſparing of ſuch as he demands unto death, 1 King. 20. 42. As in the caſe of wilful murther; God will have no ſatisfaction to be admitted, Numb 34. 31. and the like. But for perſons placed in office of judicature, for hire, or favour, not to ſpare, or pardon, or connive at onely; but to juſtifie, and aſſoil thoſe as guiltleſs, whom they ſhould ſentence for guilty, is ſuch a crime, as is not abominable onely in Gods eye, but moſt odious alſo with men, Prov. 17. 15. and 24. 24.

for reward] Or, as ſome, for hire of reward, or gift. That is, for gifts given in way of hire: but we need not here ſo to force the text, when the words of themſelves yield a plain and full ſence, without tranſpoſition, or ſupply. Since the former word is oft uſed, ſimply, to ſignifie, for, Gen. 22. 18. & 26. 5. 2 Sam. 12. 6, 10. Now for Judges to make ſale of juſtice, ſo as not to do juſtice, unleſs hired, is vile; and to take gifts from any that have cauſes before them, is forbidden, Exod. 23. 8. Deut. 16. 19. But to receive hire on purpoſe to do injuſtice, is a far greater offence, Mic. 3. 11. Again, to deny juſtice to the wronged, and to acquit the wrong doer, is a point of much injuſtice, ch. 1. 23. Jer. 5. 28. Ezek. 22. 12. But to condemn them as guilty, that are utterly guiltleſs, and to be hired ſo to do, is yet a further crime of a more tranſcendent nature, Ezek. 22. 12. and ſuch as hath a ſolemn curſe ſet upon it, Deut. 27. 25.

and take away the righteouſneſs of the righteous from him] That is, which for hire, or favour, or other ſiniſter reſpects, (for the one of them is here mentioned, as the moſt common; the other alſo not excluded) do condemn, and paſs ſentence on them, as guilty; as Pſal. 94. 21. They make wicked, or condemn as guilty, the innocent, the guiltleſs; not that any man can take another mans righteouſneſs, or innocency from him, and ſo make him really unrighteous: but then they are ſaid ſo to do, when they pronounce them to be ſuch; and ſo cauſe them to be deemed, and to ſuffer as ſuch: That men are ſaid to do, which they endeavour to do, and as far as in them lyeth, effect. Compare Levit. 24. 17, 21. with Deut. 19. 16, 21.

take away] Or, remove; as Job of himſelf; I will never remove mine integrity from me: I will hold faſt my righteouſneſs, and not let it go, Job. 27. 5, 6. Not meaning, that he would not give over his upright carriage (though that, no queſtion, he was alſo reſolved on) but that he would not give over the juſtifying of himſelf; he would never condemn himſelf, as guilty of thoſe things which they unjuſtly charged him with.

the righteouſneſs] The guiltleſneſs; as Pſal. 7. 8.

of the righteous] Or, righteous ones. Of perſons guiltleſs; not faulty in that whereof they were accuſed, whether good, or bad, otherwiſe. So Deut. 25. 1.

from him] That is, from any of them, or each of them. For the noun is plural, the pronoun ſingular; and implies ſuch a common courſe of corrupt carriage in this kinde, that they made no conſcience of ſparing any, whatſoever they were, whom, by any one they might be hired to condemn. See of the manner of ſpeech, ch. 2. 20. ver. 26.

V. 24. Therefore] Hence followeth a general denunciation of an utter deſtruction, that God would for theſe crimes, ſo rife and common among them, bring, and that ſuddenly, upon the main body of his people. For thoſe things that follow, as inferred upon the former, do not refer unto the branch laſt before mentioned, alone, but to the whole body of the charge.

as the fire devoureth the ſtubble, and the flame conſumeth the chaff; ſo their root ſhall be rottenneſs, and their bloſſom ſhall go up as duſt] He returneth to, and alludes to the allegory of a vine, or a vineyard, which he began with at firſt, verſ. 1. Becauſe this vine, my people, which I had been at ſo much charge with, and taken ſo much pains about, brings forth ſuch vile and abominable fruits, as have been before mentioned; therefore will I without further delay, proceed in judgement againſt it, and even ſuddenly conſume it, Pſal. 81. 16.

as the fire] Heb. the tongue of fire. The flame of fire; or fire, the flame whereof running out in length, reſembleth a tongue; and that, like a tongue, doth lick up, and conſume, either liquor, or dry and light combuſtible matter. So 1 King. 18. 38. it is ſaid, The fire that fell from the Lord, conſumed the burnt-offering, and the wood, and the ſtones, and the duſt; and licked up the water that was in the trench. The phraſe is uſed, of a thing that is ſuddenly done; of ought, ſuddenly deſtroyed, as licked up, and without farther adoe, ſwallowed down in an inſtant. So Balak of the Iſraelites, encamping near him in the wilderneſs; This company will now lick up all round about us, as oxen lick up the graſs of the field, Numb. 22. 4. devoureth the chaff] Heb. eateth up. So fire that eateth up, ch. 9. 4. & 30. 30. A mouth is given to the fire, as well as to the ſword, ch. 1. 20.

the ſtubble] Light matter, ſoon conſumed. An uſual emblem of deſtruction, ſuddenly conſummated. As dry ſtubble, being fired at one end of a land, doth in the turning of a hand, run over the whole field, Exod. 15. 7. Joel 2. 5. Obad. 18. Nah. 1. 10. Mal. 4. 1.

and] A defect of the particle, making the ſentence the quicker, anſwerable to the matter contained in it. So chap. 3. 24.

the flame conſumeth the chaff] Heb. the chaff faileth, with, or from the flame; ſo the verb ſignifies, Judg. 19. 9. where the day is ſaid to fail towards the evening. The particle noting the efficient, is wanting; as Pſal. 17. 13, 14.

their root] The root of them; before ſpoken of. By root, ſome underſtand ſtrong ones well rooted, Job 21. 7. Jer. 12. 2. By bloſſoms, weak ones, eaſily blown away, Pſal. 103. 15, 16. ch. 40. 7. Others by root, the perſons themſelves; by bloſſoms, their iſſue; as if it were ſaid, That they, and their iſſue, ſhould both be deſtroyed, Hoſ. 9. 16. Others, their whole might, as well inward, as outward. Which preciſe interpretations, and applications of each term, to ſeveral ſet ſubjects, if it be deemed here requiſite, and by the Prophet himſelf intended; I ſhould rather ſuppoſe, that by root, or ſtem; as ch. 11. 1. were underſtood, ſtrength, and power; by bloſſoms, pomp and glory; as ch. 28. 1. & 40. 6. But the words ſeem onely to import an utter deſtruction of that State, as of a plant, which ſo long as the root is ſound, though cut and cropt, yea hewen down to the ground, yet may ſprout up and ſhoot forth, and recover its wonted beauty again, Job 14. 7, 9. Dan. 4. 14, 15. But when the root is rotten, all periſheth together with it; not the bloſſomes alone, though here only mentioned, as a goodly part and ornament of it; but fruit, ſlips, twigs, branches, and whatſoever elſe ſprings from it, and appertaineth to it, Job 18. 16. Jer. 11. 19. Amos 2. 9. See chap. 9. 14.

rottenneſs] Or, as rottenneſs. That is, it ſhall moulder away, as a thing that is rotten. The word was uſed before, ch. 3. 24. in ſomewhat another notion; but both alluding to the nature of things putrified: the word whereof it comes, ſignifies properly to rot, Zach. 14. 12. their fleſh ſhall rot, while they ſtand upon their feet, (not above-ground while they live) and their eyes ſhall rot in their holes; and their tongues ſhall rot in their mouthes. The puniſhment, as of the enemies of Gods people there; ſo of his people, that carried themſelves as enemies to God, here.

and their bloſſome ſhall go up, as duſt] Their bloſſome ſhall never grow to, or yield any fruit; but ſhall alſo, as rotten things are wont to do, mouldring to duſt, flye up into the air, and being there diſperſt, come to nought, Pſal. 22. 15. chap. 9. 18.

becauſe they have caſt away the Law of the Lord of hoſts] This is by ſome Interpreters, ſuppoſed to be added, as the main ground and cauſe of all the fore-mentioned exceſſes. And indeed, where men have once ſhaken off that yoke, and caſt off that curb, it is no marvel, if they run forth into all exceſs of ſin, Jer. 8. 6. But it may as well be underſtood to be mentioned as an effect of them; to wit, that by theſe wicked and rebellious courſes, they do, as it were, profeſſedly caſt off Gods Law, and refuſe to yield any obedience unto him; and give him therefore, thereby, juſt cauſe to reject them, and to inflict the heavy judgments here denounced, upon them, as he had before threatned, Levit. 26. 43.

caſt away] Or, rejected with contempt. For ſo the word uſually ſignifies, Jer. 8. 9. Ezek. 20. 13, 16, 24.

Lord of hoſts] See ch. 1. 9, 24.

and deſpiſed the word of the holy One of Iſrael] The ſame thing in effect for further amplification repeated; that which is very frequent with this Prophet.

deſpiſed] See ch. 1. 4.

the word] Or, command: as Pſal. 119. 67, 158. and the like word, Eſth. 1. 15. & 2. 20.

the holy One of Iſrael] One, as moſt mighty, and therefore able to puniſh: ſo moſt holy, and one therefore that cannot endure ſuch abominable courſes, or ſuffer them to paſs unpuniſhed. See ch.1.4.

V. 25. Therefore is the anger of the Lord kindled againſt his people] Or, Therefore hath the anger of the Lord been kindled againſt his people. For he ſpeaketh here of judgements formerly inflicted, for theſe, and the like exceſſes; as ſome think, in the reigns of Joaſh, by the Syrians, 2 Chr. 24. 23,25. and of Amaziah, by the Iſraelites, 2 Chr.25.22,24. But I rather conceive them to be afflictions of latter times under Ahaz, partly, by the Iſraelites, and partly, by forreign nations, the Edomites, the Philiſtims, the Syrians; and the Aſſyrians themſelves, whom he called in for aſſiſtance againſt them, 2 Chro. 28. 5, 8, 17, 20. See ch. 1.7,9. For I cannot accord with them, that underſtand theſe words as ſpoken of evils to come, and not yet inflicted, but as ſure to come, as if already inflicted, and therefore delivered in the time preſent and paſt. Which though it be uſual in prophecies, as before hath been obſerved, ch.3. 1. Yet the courſe of the context here will not bear it. He mindeth them of judgements lately paſt, and yet freſh in memory; partly, to ſhew what God can further do; contrary to their impious conceits, and ſcoffing ſpeeches of him, verſ. 19. and partly, to intimate their extream obſtinacy in evil, being not at all amended by thoſe heavy afflictions, that already had befallen them; as the words following imply.

the anger] Heb. face; becauſe anger appears in the face, or the countenance, Pſal.34.16. Or, noſe; becauſe anger expreſſeth it ſelf, in ſome creatures, more eſpecially, in their noſtrils, Pſal. 18. 8. So ch. 13. 9. & 30. 30.

is kindled] hath been incenſed: or, hath waxed hot. Becauſe anger heateth; ſo Numb. 11. 33. Hoſ. 8. 5. See on chap. 51. 17.

againſt his people] Whom he had moſt cauſe to be angry with, having carried themſelves ſo to him, who had done ſo much for them, ch. 1. 3. Amos 3. 2.

and he hath ſtretched out his hand againſt them] He hath not onely been angry with them; but proceeded to manifeſt his anger, by the diſmal effects of it. He ſpeaks of God, after the manner of men, who having conceived diſpleaſure inwardly, diſcover it firſt in their looks, geſture, and ſpeech; and when that will not ſerve to affect, and move thoſe with whom they are offended, to uſe means of pacification; are wont then to proceed to blows, and ſtripes, Prov. 29. 19. & 26.3.

ſtretched out his hand] The hand is ſaid to be ſtretched out, ſometime to help, aſſiſt, or relieve, Pſal.136. 12. Prov. 31. 20. Sometime to hurt and ſmite, Pſal. 55.20. & 138. 7. ch. 31.3. Jer. 6. 12. Sometime for, and ſometime againſt one. That hand therefore, that is, that power and providence, which had formerly been ſtretched out; that is, exerciſed, and employed in their behalf, againſt their enemies, for their good; had, of latter times, been turned againſt them, and employed contrarily for their evil. See Judg. 2. 15. As he had threatned it ſhould be, when they ſhould rebel againſt him, Levit. 26. 21, 24, 28.

and hath ſmitten them] As men in anger are wont to do, ch. 57.17. Jer. 30. 14. See ch. 1. 5.

and the hills did tremble] The ſtroke was ſo terrible, the judgement ſo dreadful, that the very ſenſeleſs creatures, the hills themſelves, might ſeem to be ſenſible of it, Pſal. 68. 8. ch. 64. 1,2. Jer.4. 24. Joel 2. 10. Though his people (which manifeſts their ſtupidity, and extream obſtinacy) were not, ver. 12. ch. 42. 24, 25.

and their carcaſes were torn in the midſt of the ſtreets] Implying, both the multitude of ſuch as were ſlain, and the hideous, and gaſtly ſight of the dead corps, which either for want of people to bury them, or for fear of the enemy, not ſuffering them to be interred, lay unburied in the ſtreets, Pſal. 79. 3. Jer. 8. 2. Of the havock of men, made under Achas, in Judea, ſee 2 Chr.28.6. where it is ſaid, that by Pekah, one hundred and twenty thouſand were ſlain in one day.

their carcaſes] Heb. carcaſe, taken collectively; as Pſal. 79. 2. Jer.7.33.

were torn in the midſt of the ſtreets] Heb. as ſome, were cut off; deriving it from a word that ſignifies to cut off, or cut down. Uſed, Pſal. 80. 16. and ch. 33. 12. and ſo taken, it would be rendred, Being cut off lay in the ſtreets. Of which kinde of phraſe, or form of ſpeech, ſee ch. 1. 4. & 14.12. and 38. 14,17. Or as others, were as duſt, or, dung in the ſtreets; ſuppoſing it to be of the ſame notion with another very like it, that ſignifieth ſuch dirt, or other filth, that from the pavement is wont to be ſcraped, or ſwept away. See Lam. 3. 45. which I conceive to be the genuine ſence of the word, having the note of ſimilitude prefixed to it, in this place. See Pſalm 83. 10. Jer. 9. 21. & 16. 4.

for all this his anger is not turned away] Albeit the Lord hath ſo grievouſly ſmitten, and plagued his people, that his wrath may ſeem to have been ſatisfied; yet he is not as yet pacified, nor turned [illegible] fierce anger; but hath further judgements to [illegible] them. So he threatned before, that when they offended, [illegible] they would not be reclaimed, and amended, by leſs and lighter judgements, further, and fiercer then the former ſhould follow, Levit. 26. 21, 24,28. The ſame is repeated again, and again, ch. 9.12,17,21. & 10. 4.

for all this] Heb. in, or, with; as ch. 7.20. or, for; as Gen. 18. 28. Which ſome would refer, not ſo much to the judgement here denounced; as to the ſins before recited, ver. 24.

but] Heb. and. The copulative, for the adverſative; as ver. 5.

his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] To ſmite ſtill, and further; as before; So Joſh.8.18, 26.

V. 26. And he will lift up, &c.] Or, For he will lift up, &c. as ch. 9.12. The copulative particle, in a declarative notion. For he proceeds now to relate, more particularly, what further judgments ſhould be inflicted upon them, (becauſe they had not profited by the former) by other forraign people, breaking in upon them, and waſting their land, far more then the former had done.

lift up an enſign] The uſe of an enſign in times of war, is either to call people together to come in, that they may be liſted, and their names entred for ſervice; or to admoniſh thoſe that be ſo liſted, to be in a readineſs to march: or to fit themſelves, where they are, in the field, for fight, and to fall upon the adverſe party. Unto the firſt of theſe, the Prophet ſeems to have reſpect in this place; when he ſaith, God will, as ſome great Commander, ſet up his Standard, to call thoſe together, whom he intends to employ in this ſervice againſt his people; thereby intimating, that he will by a ſecret work of his, cauſe them to come together, levy forces, and undertake this ſervice; as if by ſome potent Prince, that had erected his ſignall for that purpoſe, under whoſe power they lived, and at whoſe command they were, they had been enjoyned ſo to do. See further, chap. 11.12. & 13.2. & 18.3.

to the nations] Or, for the nations. Some would have it read to, or, for a nation. Suppoſing, that by a ſlip of the pen, a letter might be added to this word, from the begining of the next; becauſe the words following, run in the ſingular number. But hereof there is no neceſſity, as ſhall be afterward ſhewed. Of what nation, or nations, this is ſpoken, Interpreters differ. Some expound it of the Aſſyrians under Sennacherib, in the time of Hezekiah, that waſted moſt of Judea, and ſtraitned, but took not Jeruſalem. Some, of the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, in the reign of Zedekiah, who both waſted the land, and ſacked the city, and fired the Temple, which yet after ſome ſpace of time, were in leſs then [illegible] hundred years reſtored, and raiſed up again. Others, of the Romanes, under Titus Veſpaſian, who ſo ruined the Jewiſh State, that it could never be reſtored; ſo razed the Temple, that it could never be re-edified, for ſixteen hundred years, and upward, unto this day. Theſe Nations, as the principal, together with thoſe of other Nations that were aſſiſtant to, as ſundry were, and ſerved under each of them. Of theſe three, few hold with the laſt; and it is indeed the leaſt probable of the three: moſt go with the ſecond. I incline rather to the firſt: becauſe, as notable, ſo neerer at hand; and it is not likely, would be overſlipt; and when it came, was ſuch, as would meet with thoſe to the purpoſe; and mar all their mirth, that gave themſelves wholly to jollity; and ſuppoſing it would never be, wiſhed it, in mockery, once come, ver. 11,12,19. Beſides that, the like things are ſpoken, to what here enſues, concerning the deſolation that ſhould, by the Aſſyrian invaſion, be effected, ch.7.17,25.

from far off] Not lift up; or ſet up an enſign afar off; as ſome; though the word be ſo uſed, Exod. 20.21. where it is ſaid, The people ſtood afar off: but to, or, for Nations, that are afar off, or ſhall come from far off; as ch. 43. 6. Bring my ſons from far; and theſe ſhall come from far, chap. 49. 12. This had God threatned before, Deut.28.49. and would now make good by the Aſſyrians, that were remote from them, and their confederates; as after by the Chaldeans, of whom the ſame is ſaid, Hab. 1. 8. The leſs favour to be looked for from people, ſo unacquainted with, and whoſe language not underſtanding, the leſs able they ſhould be to apply themſelves unto, and to ſue to them for mercy, Deut.28. 49. ch. 28. 11. Jer. 5. 15. and the leſs hope of releaſe, or return, for thoſe that ſhould be carried away captive by them, ch. 22. 18.

and will hiſs unto them] Or, will whiſtle to them. For the word, though it be well rendred to hiſs, when it hath a notion of contempt; as 1 King. 9.8. Lam. 2. 15, 16. Yet where it implies a mean of calling to any for acceſs, it would rather be rendred to whiſtle. So here; and ſo chap. 7. 18. Zach. 10. 8. And it ſeems to allude to the manner of thoſe, that whiſtle to thoſe that are out of ſight in the houſe; and uncertain where, or how far off, or that, being abroad, though in ſight, yet further off, then that their voice can well reach unto.

Or rather, and more eſpecially, unto the uſual manner of ſhepherds, that with their whiſtle, are wont to call their ſheep together, when they ſtraggle further then they ſhould, or is ſafe for them. That which our Saviour alludeth to, Joh. 10. 4,5. God will not onely ſet up his enſign, for thoſe neer at hand, within the ſight of it; but he will whiſtle alſo to thoſe that are more remote, whereſoever: and his bare whiſtle will ſufficient to bring them together. For the word implies a readineſs in thoſe that are whiſtled unto, to come at the call of him that whiſtleth.

unto them] Heb. unto him; or, unto it, in the ſingular number; and ſo after, he, or it ſhall come, &c. as if he had ſpoken but of one nation before. The pronoun therefore is to be taken, either diſtributively, it, or him; that is, each of them; as ver. 23. Or collectively, as carcaſe, for, carcaſes, ver. 25. but withal implying, that they ſhould meet together, and come along; not as a rude, confuſed multitude, Act. 19. 32. but as united together, or making up one main body, under one Commander in chief; as Joel 2. 7, 8. 11.

from the end of the earth] That is, from the utmoſt places, known to the moſt of them, in thoſe parts, as the whole world; for the whole world, commonly known; and that was under the Romane juriſdiction, who had, at that time, command of the greateſt part thereof, Luk. 2. 1. and every nation under heaven; to wit, with whom the Jews had ordinary commerce; or among whom they had Proſelytes, Act. 2. 5. Or from places ſo remote, that they might be deemed to come from the worlds end. So ch. 42. 10. & 43. 6. Jer. 10. 13. & 12. 12. Matt. 12. 42. Or as ſome, (which I miſlike not) from the lands end; as Pſal. 51. 3. & 72. 8. that is, from thoſe remote places, where the land is bounded, either with the ſea; or other great water, river of note, large lake, and the like. See chap. 7. verſ. 18.

and behold] Look for it; be ſure of it, as ſtrange, and unlikely as you think it, yet it ſhall undoubtedly come to paſſe. See ch. 1. 21.

they ſhall come] They ſhall come as readily, as the ſheep at the Shepherds whiſtle: nor ſhall any remoteneſſe of place, hinder them from hearing of Gods whiſtle; or any length of way, or journey to be performed by them, deter them from undertaking Gods ſervice, in the preſent expedition, chap. 7. 19.

with ſpeed] Or, with haſte; Jer. 48. 16. The particle is in both places wanting; but to be ſupplyed, and found expreſſed, Eccl. 4. 12. with ſpeed; or, haſte; that is, ſpeedily, quickly, haſtily; ſooner then you think: ſpoken here, in way of anſwer to what they had ſaid before; Let him make ſpeed; Let him haſten his work, ver. 19. what you ſeem ſo much to deſire, ſhall be done.

ſwiftly] Heb. lightly. As ch. 19. 1. Jer. 4. 24. Becauſe lightneſſe of body, is a ſpecial help to ſwiftneſs. See Deut. 28. 49. Hoſ. 8. 1.

V. 27. None ſhall be weary] There ſhall none of them be wearied out, with the length of the journey.

nor ſtumble amongſt them] Stumble at ought in the way; (which in rough, or ſtony waies, oft falleth out) as Pſal. 91. 12. ch. 63. 13. Jer. 31. 9. Or, one againſt another; (which in tumult, and haſte, oft comes to paſs, Jer. 48. 6, 19.) So Joel 2. 7, 8. They ſhall meet with no impediments, that ſhall hinder, or retard them in their journey; but ſhall march on, in an orderly manner, without let, or impediment, either from without, or from among themſelves.

none ſhall ſlumber, or ſleep] That is, none ſhall ſlumber, much leſs ſleep: Becauſe, to ſlumber, is ſomewhat leſs then to ſleep. So Pſal. 121. 4. & 132. 4. Not that they ſhould not reſt and ſleep, at due times, by the way; but they ſhould not be ſleepy, and ſlothful, Prov. 6. 9. & 19. 24. ch. 56. 16. but lively, and watchful, and attentive to their buſineſs, Prov. 6. 4. Or, as ſome, they ſhall ſpend as well night, as day, in beſieging, and aſſaulting the city; as Jer. 6. 5. But the Prophet ſeems to ſpeak here, rather of their expedition by the way; then of their employment at their work, when come to their waies end.

neither ſhall the girdle of their loynes be looſed] That is, as ſome, they ſhall not be weak; the looſing, or want of a girdle, being an argument of weakneſs; as the girdle, and girding with it, an emblem of ſtrength, Pſal. 18. 32, 39. ch. 23. 10. & 45. 5. Or, they ſhall not be faint-hearted: noted by the looſing of the loines, Dan. 5. 6. But the meaning ſeems rather, that they ſhould not diſarm, lay their weapons aſide; but go alwaies with their ſwords girt to them, hanging at their belt, or girdle upon their thigh, Pſal. 45. 3. Cant. 3. 8. Or alwaies ready for journey, or action; as men that go girt, not ungirt; as men are wont to be, when they ſit ſtill in the houſe, or lay themſelves down to reſt, 1 King. 18. 46. 2 King. 9. 1. Prov. 31. 17. Luk. 12. 35.

nor the latchets of their ſhoes be broken] That is, as ſome, they ſhall not be buſie about any other work. Which I ſee not how the words will bear. Others therefore expound it of their ſucceſſe and ſafety in fight, that they ſhould not ſuſtain hurt or loſs of ought, not ſo much as of a ſhoo-latchet. See Gen. 14. 23. But the meaning ſeems rather to be, (for he ſpeaks of them as yet in journey) that they ſhould have nothing befall them, not ſo much as the breaking of a ſhoo-latchet, that might cauſe them to ſlacken their pace, or to ſtay them on the way for the mending of it. The ſum of all is, that they ſhould be hearty, lively, ready, and well appointed; and meet with no difficulties, or ſuch common occaſions, as might retard them in their way. An elegant, and artificial deſcription of a journey, or a march rather, with rare expedition, and without any notable impediments diſpatched.

V. 28. Whoſe arrowes are ſharp, &c.] He proceeds to relate with what arms they come furniſhed. And he begins with their bowe, and arrowes; becauſe that was a principal part of their artillery in thoſe times, Gen. 48. 22. Pſal. 78. 9. Deut. 32. 23, 42. 2 Sam. 1. 22.

arrowes ſharp] Or, ſharpened. For ſo the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 120. 4. & 140. 3. Prov. 25. 18. ſharpened, that is, poliſhed, and well kept, to wound the deeper; as ch. 49. 2. Jer. 51. 11. So Pſal. 45. 5.

and all their bowes bent] Heb. trodden. As ch. 21. 15. So to tread the bowe, for, to bend it, Jer. 50. 14. becauſe they made uſe of the foot in the bending of the bowe. They have all things continually in a readineſs for fight, Pſal. 7. 12. & 11. 2. & 37. 14.

their horſes hoofs ſhall be counted as flint] Or, rock; as ch. 2. 10. Ezek. 3. 9. For firmneſs, as an hoof of braſs, or ſteel, Mic. 4. 13.

and their wheels a whirlewind] The wheels of their chariots, much uſed then in war, and fight, Exod. 14. 7, 25. Judg. 4. 3 & 5. 28. Pſal 20. 7. & 76. 6. a whirlewind, for ſwiftneſſe. So ch. 66. 15.

V. 29. Their roaring ſhall be like a lion] Like the roaring of a lion; as Dan. 4. 33. His hairs were grown like the eagles, and his nails like the birds. That is, like the feathers of eagles, the one; and the nails of birds, the other; for length, both of them. See ch. 13. 4.

their roaring] The dreadful ſhout, that in joyning fight, or in ſtorming places of ſtrength they ſhall make, to the terrour, and amazement of all that hear it, Pſal. 74. 4. See Jer. 25. 30. For he paſſeth now to ſpeake of their fierceneſs, in fight, and aſſault.

like a lion] Whoſe voice is, of any living creature, the moſt dreadful, Amos 3. 8. To which therefore, both the wrath of a King, Prov. 19. 12. and 20. 2. and Gods indignation alſo, is likened, Hoſ. 11. 10. Joel 3. 16. Amos 1. 2.

they ſhall roar like young lions] Heb. he ſhall roar (as before) like young lions; that is, like a company of young lions; or, like ſome young lion; (becauſe a lion in the former branch) as beſide ſtreams of water. That is, ſome ſtream of water, Pſal. 1. 3. like young lions, which are wont to be more fierce, and to have a ſtronger voice, as being in the vigour of their age; and their might and fierceneſſe nothing yet abated, or allaied. So chap. 31. 4. Jer. 2. 15. Of the ſeveral names of lions, in Scripture diſtinguiſhed, according to their ages, or qualities, See on Job 4. 10.

yea, they ſhall roar, and lay hold of the prey] Or, they ſhall both roar, and take hold of the prey; and, for both, as Pſal. 76. 6. Jer. 6. 24. & 17. 26. or, they ſhall roar, I ſay, in taking the prey, or, when they take it; or, ſeize on it: and, for when, as Pſal. 37. 23. the ſteps of a man are eſtabliſhed by the Lord, when he delighteth in his way: as the Lion is ſaid to roar, when he wants prey; but that in a more lamentable tune, as if he prayed for it, Pſal. 104. 21. So is he ſaid alſo to roar over his prey, when he hath got it: but that is in another-gates manner, in a more terrible tone, as inſulting and ſhouting over it, chap. 31. 4. and ſo we may reconcile the Pſalmiſt, and the Prophet. The one affirming, that he roares when he wants prey; the other, that he roares not, to wit, in ſuch manner, till he have it, Amos 3. 4. See Ezek. 22. 25. and the word here uſed, imports ſuch an hideous roaring, as wherewith much indignation is expreſſed, Prov. 20. 2. & 28. 15.

and ſhall carry it away] The word here uſed, ſignifies, in general, to take, and carry away by force, ought from thoſe that detain it, and are unwilling to part with it. And it is therefore very frequently uſed, for the reſcuing, recovering, ſaving, and delivering of one from, or out of the hands of thoſe, that are either ready to ſeize on him, and to miſchief him; or, that having ſeized on him, detain him in captivity and thraldom. So Pſal. 17. 13. & 18. 2, 49. & 22. 4, 8. Onely in this place it is uſed, for the violent ſnatching from a man, and going away with what he was quietly, and legally poſſeſſed of before. In oppoſition whereunto, as it is here ſaid by Iſaiah, of the Aſſyrians, that they ſhould lay hold of the prey, and carry it away: ſo by Micah, who lived in the ſame time with Iſaiah, of the Jews, by them invaded, that they ſhould lay hold, (on what they deſired to keep back, and ſave from the enemy) but ſhould not be able to deliver it: Uſing the very ſame word there, that Iſaiah doth here, Mic. 6. 14. So that the one ſhould carry away, whatever he laid hands on; the other, ſhould not be able to ſecure, or withhold what he had a deſire, and endeavoured to keep.

and none ſhall deliver it] Or, becauſe none can deliver it. They ſhall ſeize upon, and carry away what they pleaſe, becauſe none ſhall be able to make head againſt them, or hinder them; much leſs to reſcue ought out of their hands. There is no meeting of a lion, when he is ranging about to ſeek prey; nor reſcuing from him what he hath once ſeized on; unleſs by ſome extraordinary power, and help from God; as in Sampſons caſe, Judg. 14. 5, 6. and in Davids, 1 Sam. 17. 34, 36. alluded to by Paul, 2 Tim. 4. 17. See Pſal. 17. 11. ch. 31. 4. But theſe came armed with Gods commiſſion: and there was no ſaving therefore of ought fiem them, chap. 10. 5, 6.

none ſhall deliver] Or, none ſhall be able to deliver. For the indicative, is oft uſed potentially. So Pſalm 50. 22. Mic. 6. 14.

V. 30. And in that day they ſhall roar againſt them] Or, as the words lye in hebrew, They ſhall roar, I ſay, againſt them; (for he repeateth again, what he had formerly ſaid, with addition of a new ſimilitude, exceeding the former) then, or, at that time; as ch. 2. 20.

they ſhall roar] They ſhall make a moſt hideous noiſe. It is the latter word uſed, ver. 29.

againſt them] Heb. he ſhall roar againſt him. That is, the Aſſyrian army, againſt the Jewiſh people; againſt whom all the foregoing menaces were denounced.

like the roaring of the ſea] With ſuch an hideous noiſe, as the waves, and waters of the ſea, make; where having born down, or ſurrounded its banks, with much violence and fury, it breaks in upon the land, and carries all away before it. For to ſuch inundations are hoſtile invaſions oft compared in Scripture, Pſal. 93. 3, 4. chap. 8. 7, 8. & 17. 12, 13. & 59. 19. Jer. 50. 44. & 51. 42, 55. Lam. 2. 13.

and if one look, &c.] This laſt paſſage is, by Interpreters, very variouſly rendred. Yet ſo, that herein they all agree, that therein is related the forlorn-condition of the Jewiſh people, by the irruption of ſo powerful and prevalent an adverſary, ſo perplexed; that turn they, and caſt their eye which way ſoever they could, no hope of help, or relief, ſhould appear. This is deſcribed by a metaphor of one ſo ſurprized, and environed with a thick miſt, or fog, on every ſide, that no glimps of light, can from any part be deſcried. See the like concerning the ſtate of this people, upon the Aſſyrian invaſion, cloſing up the prediction thereof, as here, ſo there, chap. 8. 21, 22.

and if one look into the land] Or, when he ſhall look unto the land; or, down to the earth, or the ground. Whether a man look downward, or upward. When, rather then if; as not queſtioning whether they will ſo do; but making no doubt, but that they will ſo do. And, for, when, as before, and Pſal. 37. 23. there cited. See ch. 8. 22.

one look] Or, he ſhall look. To wit, the people, before implyed, in thoſe words, againſt him. The ſingular number, but collectively taken, or him, for any of them; and it may here alſo be ſo rendred, they; or, as ſome other, he; that is, the enemy ſhall look into the land, &c. As if this his very look (ſo terrible it ſhould be) would ſo damp them, that the whole country ſhould ſeem over-ſpread with ſuch hideous darkneſs, as Egypt was, Exod. 10. 22, 23. But the former ſence ſeems more probable, becauſe more agreeable to that, ch. 8. 21. 22. Again, ſome read it, we ſhall look; as if the Prophet ſpake in his own perſon, including himſelf among the reſt of them, as a member of the ſame body with the reſt; as he doth, chap. 1. 9. & 64. 6. But the points, that ſerve for vowels, and the analogy of the verb, in the original, will not admit it. into the land] To wit, of Judah; toward any part of it; or, down to the earth; as ch. 8. 21: oppoſed, as there, ſo, as moſt ſuppoſe, here, to the heaven, or skie, after-mentioned.

behold darkneſs] When men ſhall look any way down, either about them, or abroad, (Pſal. 142. 4.) they ſhall ſee nothing on every ſide, but darkneſs, over-ſpreading the whole face of the earth; chap. 60. 2.) all involved in the ſame miſeries, and calamities, with themſelves. Darkneſs, for affliction, and diſtreſs, ch. 50. 10. Joel 2. 10. Amos 2. 10. & 8. 9. As one the contrary part; light, for joy, and comfort, Eſth. 8. 16. Pſal. 18. 28. & 97. 11. & 112. 4.

and ſorrow] Or, rather, of ſorrow; or, of tribulation, of affliction, of diſtreſs. For the word properly ſignifies a ſtreight, Job 7. 11. Pſal. 18. 6. & 66. 4. ch. 63. 9. Yet ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors would have it here ſignifie the Sun; and the word tranſlated aright the light, in the next branch (unto which they joyn this) the Moon, a name given indifferently, both to Moon, and Sun, Gen. 1. 16. Pſal. 136. 7, 9. And ſo the ſence ſhould be, both Sun and Moon ſhall be darkned; no glimpſe of light from either. Which, though it expreſs as much as the text intendeth; and the like manner of ſpeech may be oft found elſewhere, chap. 24. 13. Exek. 32. 7. Joel 2. 10, 31. & 3. 15. Matt. 24. 29. Rev. 6. 12. Yet cannot here be received, becauſe we never finde the Sun elſewhere ſo tearmed, nor doth ought in the text, neceſſarily here require it: and other of their own, therefore, herein controll them, and render the words, as we have here done. The pauſes in the text here make it very difficult; for the words rendred according to their ordinary acception, run thus; Behold darkneſs; ſtreights (or, diſtreſs) and light; which a late learned writer therefore rendreth; diſtreſs and light are together; or, diſtreſs with light; diſtreſs continueth even when it is light. See the next clauſe.

and the light is darkened] Some read the words with a twofold ſupply out of the former branch; And he ſhall look (as before) to the light, (upward to the heavens, from whence light cometh) and behold (as above) it is darkened. Others, taking into this branch the laſt words of the former, and repeating again the next before it; the darkneſs of diſtreſs; ſo ſoon, as he (that is, the enemy) ſhall enlighten all: (making of the noun, a verb) and ſo the ſence ſhould be, that the glory and luſtre of his army, ſo ſoon as it ſhewed it ſelf, ſhould damp and darken all with them. Not unlike that, he ſhall deſtroy him, with the brightneſs of his appearance, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. Others again, the light it ſelf ſhall be affliction; (that is, the hope it ſelf, that they had conceived of ſome help and relief, ſhall vex them) when it ſhall be darkened, that is, be defeated, and prove helpleſs. Theſe ſeveral verſions and interpretations I relate, becauſe they have authors of great note abetting them; but ſeem much to force and tear the text: and I adhere therefore here, rather, to our own verſion, as flowing moſt naturally from the words of the text. It is, as if he had ſaid; when they ſhall look up towards heaven, as in miſery men are wont to do, chap. 8. 21. he ſhall ſee no more light, hope of help and relief from above, then from below.

in the heavens thereof] That is, in the land of Judah, before ſpoken of; in the heavens, that cover that part of the earth, wherein that people dwell. The heaven, or skie, is in Scripture, as alſo in other prophane writings, ſaid to be darkened to men, when they are in ſuch grief, or fear, that they have no joy of the light, becauſe dark and gloomy dayes work much upon mens ſpirits, Job 24. 13, 17. Amos 8. 9. as on the contrary, the heavenly bodies are ſaid to give light, and to ſhine forth with more then ordinary brightneſs to men, when they have much matter of mirth and rejoycing afforded them, Pſal. 112. 4. chap. 30. 26. becauſe the ſight of light is cheerful, Eccl. 11. 7.

the heavens thereof] The heavens. So called, of a word that ſignifies to drop, Deut. 32. 2. becauſe the rain and dew drops down from thence, Deut. 33. 28. and his heavens, there; as, her heavens, here. And ſome therefore render it, in its diſtillations, or rains, that it, to wit, the light, is wont to diſperſe, and drop, or dart upon the earth. But the word, light, is maſculine, the pronoun here feminine. Others read it, in the deſtructions thereof, or, its ruines, to wit, of the land. Becauſe the ſame verb, ſometime, ſignifies alſo to deſtroy, Hoſ. 10. 2 the verb is but once found in this ſence, twice in the former: the noun in this place alone. Which, therefore, the forementioned learned Writer deriveth from the Ethiopick language, wherein it hath a notion of reſt, Matth. 11. 28, 29. & 26. 45. and thus rendreth the text, Behold darkneſs; diſtreſs, or, anguiſh with light; (anguiſh continuing even when it is light, or light is looked for) it groweth dark in its reſts; that is, they meet with darkneſs there, where they might promiſe themſelves reſt. But of this let others deem.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. IN the year that Uzziah dyed] Here beginneth the fourth Viſion, or Sermon, of this our Prophet, recorded in this Book. Or, according to ſome, the ſecond book of his Prophecies, which they ſuppoſe to have been digeſted, according to the reigns of thoſe four Kings under whom he propheſied, ch. 1. 1. So that all the three fore-going Sermons, or Prophecies, ſhould be delivered in the reign of Uzziah; this only, in the beginning of Jothams reign: the next, ch. 7. 8, &c. under Ahaz: ſome other under Hezekiah. But of this, ſee more on v. 8.

that Uzziah] Of this King and his acts, written by this our Prophet, ſee ch. 1. 1.

Uzziah dyed] It is the manner of thoſe that write Hiſtories, or ſome remarkeable relations, to conſign or date them by ſome ſpecial note of thoſe times, whereat they begin their relations, or, in which the things related were done: as the year of ſuch a Kings reign, or ſuch an ones birth or death; or ſome other memorable accident: as Amos, by the earthquake that fell out in this Kings dayes, Amos 1. 1. and Iſaiah here by his death. Concerning which, yet there is ſome variety of opinions. For ſome would have the apparition here ſpoken of, to have been exhibited and ſeen in Uzziah's reign, but in the laſt year of it, before his deceaſe; as Amos his was, before the earthquake: otherwiſe, ſay they, why ſhould he not rather ſay, in the firſt year of Jothams reign; then, in the year that Uzziah dyed. But unto others this ſeems not ſo probable; who therefore ſay, that the death of Uzziah is mentioned, to fix the time of it more certainly, and to avoid all ambiguity; becauſe of Jothams reign, there might be a two-fold reckoning: the one, from the time that he governed the Kingdom, and exerciſed Royal authority, as next heir to the Crown, after that Uzziah was ſmitten with leproſie, and lived ſequeſtred, as a Leper, 2 Chr. 26. 21. The other, from the time of Uzziah's deceaſe; when he ſucceeded him in the Throne, for whom before he ſate on it, 2 Chr. 26. 23. & 27.1. Nor want there thoſe among the Jewiſh Doctors, who ſuppoſe, that by Uzziah's death is here meant; not his natural deceaſe, but his civil death; ſuch as the lepers eſtate was eſteemed, Num. 12.12. and as David accounted his, when in likelihood, under Saul, he was debarred from acceſs to Gods houſe, and free commerce with Gods people, Pſal. 31.12. and 84.2, 9, 10. with 1 Sam. 26, 19. and Heman deemed his in ſome depth of affliction, Pſal. 88. 3. But this ſeems not ſo ſound: And when the text taken properly, affords a fit ſence; nor doth ought appear in the context, or other places collated, that may croſs it; it is not ſafe running out into metaphorical ſences.

I ſaw alſo] As if this had reference to ſome fore-going diviſion. The Hebrew is, And I ſaw; and it is true, the copulative is uſed ſometime, for alſo, as Jer. 1.3. but it is uſed alſo, to begin a relation, without any dependence upon former diſcourſe, or matter; as ch. 2.2. and it may well here be rendred, then I ſaw, with reference to the time of the occurrent here expreſſed. For ſo is the copulative uſed, Levit. 4.3. & 6.4.

I ſaw, &c.] The preſent chapter conſiſts of two parts; a relation of a moſt glorious apparition, ver. 1, 7. and a narration of a moſt dreadful Meſſage, that the Prophet was ſent to deliver unto his people, v. 8, 13.

I ſaw] I ſaw in a ſpiritual extaſie, and a ſymbolical apparition, as Ezek. 1.1. Joh. 12.41. Act. 10.10, 11. & 22.17. 2 Cor. 12. 2. Rev. 1.12. See ch. 1.1. & 2.1.

the Lord] The word here uſed, is not Jehovah, (which is yet commonly ſo rendred) but Adonai, which properly ſo ſignifies; and is given unto Chriſt, Pſal. 110. 1. from which place Chriſt averreth his deity, Matth. 22.42, 45. Whence ſome infer, that it was the ſecond Perſon, the eternal Son of God, who is here ſaid to ſit, as King, on the Throne: or the Spirit, or third Perſon, that ſpake unto the Prophet, ver. 9. And it is true indeed, that the Evangeliſt John, ſaith of Chriſt, that Iſaiah in this Viſion, beheld his glory, Joh. 12.41. as alſo, that the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, that by the Holy Ghoſt Iſaiah ſpake unto their Fathers. The words here enjoyned him, by him that ſate on the Throne, v. 9. Act. 22.25. and ſo, queſtionleſſe, did he ſpeak alſo, whatſoever, as from God, he delivered to his people. But to exclude the Perſon of the Father, from ſitting on the Throne in ſuch apparitions, is not ſafe. The rather, for that in ſuch apparitions wherein the Perſons are diſtinguiſhed, the Father is ſtill ſaid to ſit on the Throne, and the Son to be preſented unto him, Dan. 7.9, 13. or the Son, and the Spirit, to be before the Throne; not on the Throne, Rev. 4.2, 3. & 5.6. & 6.16. & 1.4. & 4.5. But in this apparition, no ſuch diſtinction of perſons appearing, I ſuppoſe it ſafeſt to ſay, that one God Jehovah, ver. 3, 5. the only true God, Deut. 6.4. who is alſo called Adonai, or Lord; as the only Soveraign Lord of all, Joh. 3.11. Mic. 4.13. Mal. 1.6. in three diſtinct Perſons, as the allegations above-mentioned ſhew: and that plural term alſo uſed, v. 8. Who ſhall go for us? (not unlike thoſe, our image, Gen. 1.26. and one of us, Gen. 3.22.) ſeemeth to imply. If it be demanded, how the Prophet could ſee God, when as it is in Scripture ſaid, that No man hath ſeen God at any time, Joh. 1. 18. 1 Joh. 4. 12. and whom no man hath either ſeen, or can ſee, 1 Tim. 6.16. The anſwer is eaſie, that no man can ſee him in his Eſſence, as he is in himſelf; ſince that he is a Spirit, Joh. 4. 34. and a Spirit cannot with corporal eyes be ſeen, Luk. 24. 38, 39. nor can he be ſeen in the Infinite excellency of his Majeſty, Exod. 33. 20. 1 Tim. 6.16. but yet in ſuch viſible modules of glory, as he is pleaſed to repreſent himſelf unto the view of the creature, ſo he may, and hath oft been ſeen, Exod. 24. 9, 10, 11. Amos 9.1. and in ſuch manner Iſaiah here ſaw him. In regard whereof, inſtead of what the Prophet ſaith of himſelf here, I ſaw the Lord: the Evangeliſt ſaith of him, he ſaw his glory, Joh. 12.41.

ſitting upon a Throne] As a Royal Soveraign, 1 King. 3.22. in his Temple, (which by the words following, appears, v. 4, 6.) as in his Court, or Palace, here upon earth. See ch. 14.13. or, as a Judge on the bench, ready to execute judgment, as Dan. 7.9, 11. Joel 3.12. Rev. 6.16. & 20.11, 12. See ch. 3.13, 14.

high, and lifted up] That is, exceeding high, and ſtately: as, men lofty, and lifted up, ch. 2.12. and cedars high, and lifted up, ch. 2.13. or, high, in regard of the frame, and making of it: lifted up, or ſet aloft, in regard of ſcituation, and place, (ſuch in ſome ſort, as Solomons was; ſtately to ſight, and lofty for ſcite, 1 King. 10.18, 20.) as high, in likelihood, as the Porch, before Solomons Temple; ſaid to be 120 cubits high, 2 Chr. 3.4. As we ſee with us in ſtately ſtructures, the portall, or gatehouſe, (as we commonly term it) far higher, many times, then the main body of the whole fabrick beſides. See further on ver. 2. above it.

and his train filled the Temple] He appeared, as ſitting on a ſtately throne; ſo clad alſo in his royal robes, Pſal. 93.1.

his train] Or, as ſome render it, the train thereof, to wit, of his Throne; ſuppoſing the utmoſt part of that chair of State which he ſate on, to be thereby meant. But we finde not the word, whereby this is here expreſſed, to be any where ſo uſed. It is applyed ever to apparel; and ſignifies the skirts, that is, ſuch parts of it as hang down to the ground: or being longer, and of more worth then is fit to be trailed along upon the ground, are with perſons of State born up by others: and it is not amiſs, therefore, rendred here, his train, or, his skirts. For the word here is plural; nor is it ever read otherwiſe: that is, the train, or skirts of his robes. As her skirts, Lam. 1.9. and thy skirts, Jer. 13.22, 26. that is, the skirts of their garments.

filled the Temple] Or, Palace. For, that the word moſt properly ſignifies, Pſal. 45.8. Prov. 30.28. Dan. 4.4. & 6.18. and ſo it would be rendred, Pſal. 11.4. There is a queſtion moved among Interpreters, where the Throne here mentioned, was ſcituate, whether within the Temple, or without it; Which I ſuppoſe, may not amiſs be thus reconciled. The Temple, taken in a large ſence, comprehendeth the whole Fabrick, conſiſting both of the houſe, which was all over covered; and the two Courts alſo before it, which were (beſides the cloyſters about, and within them) uncovered; as the like, before great mens houſes, are alſo with us. So is the word, Temple, taken, Jer. 7.10. & 26.10. See chap. 1.12. Secondly, it is taken ſometime for the houſe only, 1 King. 6.9. divided into three parts; the porch, or portall; the Palace, and the Oracle, 1 King. 6.3, 5. Now it ſeems to me, that the throne, or chair of State, was ſo ſcituate in the porch, or portall of the Temple, (the height whereof, you had before; and which comes within the compaſs of that appellation) that the train hanging down from it, though ſeated far above the door of the Temple, entred into the main body of it, and filled the whole Palace. Being ſo ſcituate then, it ſtood in ſome ſort without the Temple, becauſe, not within the Palace, moſt ſtrictly ſo termed; and yet within the Temple to; becauſe the porch, or portall, was a part of it. This, the rather I incline to, becauſe God is generally deemed to appear here, as ſitting in, or unto judgment. Now the manner of the Kings in thoſe times, was to ſit for judicature, in the ports, or gates, (which doubtleſs were not without porches) either of their palaces, or of the city. See 1 King. 7.7. Jer. 26.10. & 37.13. & 38. 10. Beſides that, the quick coal taken from the altar, implyes as much; the altar on which the fire was perpetually burning, being ſcituate in the inner court, againſt the front of the houſe, 1 King. 8.22. Ezek. 40.47. But ſee further, on v. 6.

filled the Temple] As, when the cloud covered the Tent of the Congregation, the glory of God filled the Tabernacle; in Moſes his time, at the dedication of the Tabernacle, Exo. 40.34. and, the cloud filled the houſe, at Solomons dedication of the Temple, in ſo glorious a manner, that the Prieſts could not enter to do ought there, 1 King. 8.10, 11.

V. 2. Above it ſtood the Seraphims] After the deſcription of Gods majeſtical ſeſſion upon his Throne, is related his attendance, correſpondent to his State; as Princes, and Potentates are not wont to ſit in State alone; but with their Nobles, and chief Officers attending upon them: ſo hath God, here, his glorious Miniſters attending upon him; and ſo Dan. 7.10.

Above it] Or, as ſome, About the upper part of it; to wit, the Throne. To clear this, ſome tell us, that whereas there were three rowes of chambers built on either ſide the body of the Temple, one over another, 1 King. 5.6. the footſtool, as Exod. 24.10. or loweſt part of the Throne, was eaven with the pavement of the ſecond chamber; and the uppermoſt part of it, about which the Seraphim attended; eaven with the floor of the third: above which, the reſt of that ſhape of a man, wherein the Lord manifeſted himſelf, reached unto the roof of that row. But I gueſs rather, that the Lord appeared in a far more ſtately and lofty manner; his head and upper parts above the Throne, reaching from it well neer to the roof of the porch: the Throne he ſate on, reaching from thence downward, unto the top of the doors of the Temple, by which the train of his Majeſtical robes, filled the whole houſe. So that the Seraphs might well ſtand attending him, above the Throne, as the text expreſly ſaith, the bodily ſhape of humane nature, wherein he appeared, ſo far exceeding the Throne, whereon he ſate. For, as for thoſe, that render the word above him, they ſeem not to conſider how incongruous a thing it is, for the ſervant to ſtand over his Maſter, on whom he attends. See v. 1. lifted up. The celeſtial Spirits ſtand above, neer the upper part of Gods Throne; the faithful on earth, as attending at his foot-ſtool, ch. 66. 1. Pſal. 99. 5.

ſtood] Sate not, as he did; but ſtood attending on him: the uſuall poſture of ſervants attending on their maſters; of Officers, on their Lords, 1 King. 1. 2. & 10. 12. & 17. 1. 2 King. 25. 19. Prov. 22. 29. as ready to go and come at command, about whatſoever they ſhall enjoyn them, Matth. 8. 9. applyed to the Angels, both here, and elſewhere, Dan. 7. 10. Luk. 1. 19. as miniſtring Spirits, ready to be ſent abroad, to execute what God pleaſeth to enjoyn, either in mercy, or in wrath, Pſal. 103. 20, 21. ch. 37. 36. Heb. 1. 14.

the Seraphims] Or, Seraphs. A counterfeit Author of pretended antiquity, whom our Popiſh Writers follow, makes theſe Seraphs, the firſt of thoſe nine orders of bleſſed Spirits, as he reckons them; and he affirms them to be ſeven degrees above the Arch-angels, (being, according to his account, the eighth) and never to ſtir out of the glorious preſence of God, as ſtanding here about his Throne. So, that, as he ſtates the rank, thoſe Seraphs are the higheſt; and the Angels the loweſt. True it is, that ſome diſtinction of degrees among thoſe glorious creatures, ſeems to be intimated by a place in Daniel, chap. 11. 13. where Michael is ſaid to be one, (as moſt) the firſt (as ſome) of the chief Princes. Which can hardly be underſtood other, then Angels. For, whether verſion we admit, a chiefty of ſome, in regard of others, ſeems to be intimated. But to ſet out certain ſeveral and diſtinct ranks of them, aſſign them their ſtations; deſign them their offices, and cut them out their work, is a preſumptuous attempt of ignorance and arrogance, joyning together, for the producing of a groundleſs and frivolous conceit. Nor is that leſs ridiculous, which ſome of them tell us, that Seraphin, and ſo Cherubin, with n, ſignifies the order; but Seraphim, and ſo Cherubim, with m, ſignifies the ſpirits of each order. Whereas the one is but the Chaldee, or Syrian rather, plural termination; the other, the Hebrew. But to leave them to their idle and frivolous fancies, the Seraphim, or Seraphs, rather then Seraphims, (as Cherubs, Cherubim, or Cherubin, rather then Cherubims, or Cherubins; and Baal, or Baalim, not Baalims, Jer. 2. 23. becauſe im, is the plural termination in Hebrew; as is es, or s, with us in Engliſh: and the one therefore is ſuperfluous) are glorious Spirits: ſo termed from a word that ſignifies to fire, or to burn: as ſome think, becauſe they are of a fiery nature, or ſubſtance; fire being the moſt ſubtile of the elements: as purer then the ayr, or the pureſt part of the ayr: and coming neereſt therefore to the nature of ſpirits. Others, in regard of their fervency of love unto God. And others again, in regard of their agility: the like unto that, which appears in fire, or of their ſplendor and brightneſs, Rev. 10. 1. It is ſaid indeed, that God maketh the winds his meſſengers, (as he did in fetching back his fugitive ſervant Jonas, Jon. 1. 4.) and the flame of fire, or, flaming fire, his miniſter; which the Apoſtle by way of Inverſion, applying to the Angels, ſaith, He maketh his Angels Spirits; and his miniſters, a flame of fire, Heb. 1. 7. (whence ſome fondly gather a diſtinction of Angels, that ſome of them are of a airy ſubſtance, therefore called Spirits: ſome of a fiery, therefore termed Saraphs.) And we read of Angels appearing in the likeneſs of horſemen and chariots of fire, 2 King. 6. 17. and of the Cherubs, or ſome one of them, with flaming ſword, or, ſwords; ſet at the entrance into Paradiſe, to keep man out, Gen. 3. 24. and it may well be, that theſe did likewiſe (though having the ſhape of men, as thoſe other of horſemen, and with thoſe Cherubs, the figure of a blade; yet) appear, as all of a flaming fire; and thereof were ſo termed: but of the reaſon of the name, here, and no where elſe given to theſe ſpiritual attendants, we have nothing more then meer conjecture. Yet becauſe the word is the ſame with that, whereby thoſe fiery ſerpents are deſigned, that were ſent to ſting with fiery torment and inflammation, thoſe mutinous and rebellious ones in the Wilderneſs, Num. 21. 6. Some thence ſuppoſe, they are here ſo called, becauſe, to be executioners of Gods fiery wrath on theſe obſtinate and refractory wretches; againſt whom an heavy doom is here in the words following denounced. And we read of an Angel, that had power over the fire; and to ſcorch men with fire, Rev. 14. 18. & 16. 8. But of this alſo, as of the former. Concerning the number of them that appeared here, is ſome doubt alſo made. The moſt affirm them to have been two only; anſwerable to thoſe two ſmall Cherubs in the Tabernacle, on the lid of the Ark, Exod. 37. 7, 10. and to thoſe two large ones in the Temple, that reached with their wings ſtretched out from wall to wall, in the Holy of Holies, 1 King. 6. 27. againſt which ſome object, that the word is not dual, but plural: and howſoever that exception be but weak; for the plural is oft uſed, as well of two, as of more, Levit. 5. 11. & 14. 22. yet the aſſertion is uncertain; ſince that we finde four ſuch in an apparition, Ezek. 1. 5. and myriades, yea millions of them, Pſal. 68. 17. Dan. 7. 10. nor is it neceſſary, that the number of the Seraphs, ſhould here anſwer the number of the Cherubs, either in the Tabernacle, or in the Temple, more then the like elſewhere. How many therefore there were of them, cannot certainly be determined: but hereof, ſee more, v. 3, 4. The deſcription of them, in what ſhape they appeared, here followeth.

each one had ſix wings] Heb. ſix wings, ſix wings, (the reduplication uſed by way of diſtribution; as morning, morning, for every morning, ch. 28. 19. & 50. 4.) were to one, one, for each one; as Ezek. 1. 6. & 10. 14, 21. in which laſt place alſo, it is ſaid, four, four, to one; for, four, to each one: as ſix, ſix, here. And herein theſe differed from the form of thoſe two Cherubs, in the inner part of the Temple, and thoſe alſo that appeared in a viſion to Ezekiel; that thoſe in the Temple had but one pair of wings, 1 King. 6. 27. thoſe in Ezekiel two pair a peice, Ezek. 1. 6. & 10. 21. theſe had three pair, ſix a peice; (as thoſe four living wights had, Rev. 4. 8. one pair on their ſhoulders, wherewith they flew; another, as may be deemed, on either ſide of their breaſts, which being caſt upward, might cover their faces: and the third about their hips, which falling a croſs, might cover their lower parts. For ſuch was the uſe of them, deſcribed in the words next enſuing.

with twain he covered his face] With one pair of them, to wit, thoſe on either ſide the breaſt, each of them covered (not Gods face, as many Interpreters would have it; thence extracting myſteries of not ſeeing Gods face, Exo. 33. 20. as implying an inhibition, of prying curiouſly into Gods ſecret counſels, and hidden myſteries, Deut. 29. 29. Prov. 25. 2. Act. 1. 7.) but his own face, as not enduring to behold the reſplendent brightneſs of Gods glory and Majeſty; no more then mortal creatures are, with open eye, able to behold the Sun ſhining forth in his full ſtrength. Howbeit, I dare not avow, as ſome have done, that the Angels thus are ſaid to cover their faces, in Gods preſence; becauſe they appear before God in their own righteouſneſs: but that chriſtian men need not ſo to do; they may look on him with their faces uncovered; becauſe they appear before him in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 5. 21. For neither are Chriſtian men, while they live here, ſo pure, in regard of freedome from the taint of ſin; as the Angels are, who never had, nor have any the leaſt ſpot or ſpeck of it: nor doth that righteouſneſs, which by imputation accreweth to them from Chriſt, further, in this regard, avail, then to cauſe them to be reputed as perfectly conformable to Gods Law, which by vertue of their own inherent righteouſneſs, theſe bleſſed and glorious Spirits, both now are, and ever were. Nor did the Apoſtle, in the place mentioned, intend any ſuch matter, as to make any compariſon in this kind, between Chriſtian men and Angels; but between the faithful before Chriſts coming, and thoſe ſince his revelation in the fleſh; and, that, not in regard of righteouſneſs imputed to them; for, and from Chriſt: (wherein there is no difference at all between thoſe faithful of former times, and thoſe that now live and believe) but in regard of the clearer manifeſtation of the myſteries of the Goſpel unto the one above the other; as elſe-where, he makes uſe of ſomewhat the like phraſe, in comparing the ſcanter light and ſight of God, which the faithful attain here, with the fuller and clearer light, and ſight of God, and the things of God that they are to enjoy hereafter, 1 Cor. 13. 12. as by the whole tenour of his diſcourſe there, may evidently appear. But that men in Chriſt, and partakers of righteouſneſs, as well imparted from him, as imputed for him, have been ſmitten with ſuch a reverend dread of Gods Majeſty, as hath cauſed them in like manner to cover their faces in Gods preſence; as the Angels here are ſaid to do; and that upon far leſs glorious apparitions then this was; is apparent by the practice both of Moſes, Exod. 3. 6. and of Elias, 1 King. 19. 13.

and with twain he covered his feet] A ſecond uſe which the Seraphs made of another pair of their wings; to wit, the nethermoſt of them; about the hips, rather, then as ſome would have it, about the feet: that as with the middlemoſt of them, (both being under, or within compaſs of their arms) they cover their faces; ſo with theſe lowermoſt, their feet: not Gods feet, as ſome fondly; as of his face, the like before; (thereby, ſay they, intimating, that neither Gods face, or his upper parts; that is, things done before the world began: nor his feet, nor his lower parts, that is, things after the worlds end, are to be curiouſly enquired into) but their own: where by feet, moſt underſtand that part of the body that is properly and uſually ſo termed, wherewith we tread upon the ground: which being in that regard more ſubject to ſoyl; much waſhing of feet was therefore uſed in thoſe parts, Gen. 19.2. & 24.32. Judg.19.21. 1 Sam.25.4. Luk.7.44. Joh.13. 10. might ſeem to be no unfit emblem of ſome defilement. But I ſuppoſe rather, with ſome other, that by feet, (as in the Hebrew tongue frequently) by a modeſt form of ſpeech, are underſtood thoſe ſecret parts, which the Apoſtle terms uncomely, 1 Cor.12.23,24. and which nature hath taught many, even ſavage people, to cover, who yet go with all, or moſt of the body beſide, ſtark naked. So is the word, without queſtion, or contradiction of any, uſed by this our Prophet, chap.7.20. ſo it is by moſt Interpreters taken, Gen.49.10. Deut.28.57. and Ezek.16.25. And the Jews call urine, the water of the feet; ſo reading the text, 2 King.18.27.& ch.36 12. where Rabſhakeh uſed (as they ſuppoſe, and it may well ſo be) a broader and more unſeemly term. The bleſſed Angels therefore appearing in humane ſhape, did with one pair of their wings, the one of them croſſing the other, veil and cover thoſe parts, which, as deeming them to have ſome uncomelineſs in them, both our firſt parents, and their poſterity moſt of them, are careful to conceal and keep out of ſight, Gen.3.7. and which wilfully to diſcover, is generally deemed a note of impudency; of ſhame, and miſery, to have againſt the will, diſcovered unto, or by others, Gen.9.21,27. Hab.2.15,16. See ch.3. 17. Now this they do, not in regard of any taint of ſin, as of ſpiritual filth in them; (no more, then in regard of any guilt of ſin, they are ſaid to have hid their faces) though in that regard, our firſt parents ſometime ſo did, Gen. 3. 7. but as they veiled their faces, as having their eyes dazled with the exceeding brightneſs of his glorious appearance; the light whereof, with open face, they could not endure: ſo they cover their feet (take the word which way you will) as abaſhed, in the apprehenſion of their own infirmity and imperfection, in compariſon of Gods incomparable and incomprehenſible perfections: to which purpoſe, ſome apply thoſe paſſages in the book of Job, chap. 4.18, & 15. 15. which yet ſeem rather to have reference to the fall of the apoſtaticall Spirits. But certain it is, that the neerer the creature makes his approaches to God; and in the more glorious manner God manifeſteth himſelf unto him; the more apprehenſive he is of his own meanneſs, baſeneſs, vileneſs, nothingneſs, in regard of Gods infinite greatneſs, ch. 40.17. See Gen. 18. 27. Job 38.1. & 40.4. & 42.5,6. The like importeth that, Ezek. 1.11. where the Cherubs are ſaid, with one pair of their wings, to have covered their bodies. Nor can I conceive, why the covering of the body there, or feet here, ſhould denote their unſpotted purity, as ſome great ones would have it.

and with twain he did flie] The uppermoſt pair at their ſhoulders were made uſe of, for flight: not that they were then flying to and fro, or, at preſent in flight; but that with them they uſed to flie, and had them ſtretched out, as ready preſt for that employment; like thoſe of the Cherubs, 1 King. 6.27. & Ezek.1.11. Whereas the other two pair were clapped cloſe to their bodies: whereby is intimated, their prompneſs to, and ſwiftneſs in, the execution of Gods Will and Work, whenſoever he ſhould appoint them any ſervice, whatſoever, Pſal.109.20. Matth. 6.10. Hence it is ſaid, that one of them flew unto the Prophet, v. 6. and of the Angel Gabriel, that he came flying, ſwiftly, to Daniel, Dan.9.21.

V. 3. And one cryed to another] Their ſhape was before, and the uſe of ſome parts of them, to wit, their wings: now followes their preſent exerciſe; ſuch as is ſaid to be the conſtant employment of thoſe four Wights, that attended before the Throne, Rev.4.8.

one cryed to another] Heb. this to this: as Exod.14.20. Pſal. 75.7. not, one with another, as ſinging in a conſort joyntly together; and yet is the word alſo ſometime found ſo uſed. Of which, ſee Lam.3.40. but, one to another; as by courſe ſinging out the praiſes of him, on whom they attended; in ſuch manner, as the men and women did, anſwering one another, upon the delivery of them at the red Sea, Exod. 15. 1, 21. and the Levites, at the laying of the foundation of the ſecond Temple, Ezr. 3.11. And hence ſome gather, that there were but two of them. See further, v.4.

and ſaid, holy, holy, holy,] A three-fold repetition, as ſome would have it, intimating the Trinity of Perſons, in the Unity of the Deity; as ſome alſo, that of Jehovah, God, and Jehovah again, Deut. 6.4. But there is no great likelihood of that here: and in the latter place much leſs. Others rather ſuppoſe, ſuch repetition to denote the ſuperlative eminency of Gods holineſs; as if they had ſaid, holy, yea, thrice holy; or infinitely holy: ſo Rev.4.8. and we ſhall find the like repetition uſed, for more vehemency, Jer.7.4. & 22. 29. Ezek. 21. 9,14,27. For that of the Jewiſh Rabbins, concerning the three worlds, for the creation whereof, God ſhould be pronounced thrice holy; holy, in creating the ſupercaeleſtial world, the Angels; holy, in creating the celeſtial world, the heavens: and holy, in creating the ſubceleſtial world, the creatures all beneath the heavens: as alſo, that of ſome others, that this threefold repetition, ſhould have reference to the three-fold diſtribution of time, into paſt, preſent, and future; and ſo intimate the eternity of Gods holineſs, Rev. 1. 4. ſeem both, though true, yet not at all to the mind or intention of the text.

is the Lord of hoſts] Or, be the Lord of hoſts; that is, as he is moſt holy in himſelf; and none holy like him, 1 Sam.2.2. ſo let him be acknowledged of all creatures, to be ſuch, the ſum and ſubſtance of the ſecond Petition, Matth.6.9. Hallowed be thy Name; or, as ſome, ſhall be: as approving Gods holineſs, and the juſtneſs of his judgment hereafter denounced, ver.9, 11. and ſhortly to be executed on that obſtinate people; according to that of the Pſalmiſt, The Lord is righteous in all his wayes, and holy in all his works, Pſal.145.17. Of the title here given to him, ſee ch.1.2.

the whole earth is full of his glory] Heb. the fulneſs of his glory, (as, the fulneſs of the earth, Pſal.24.1.) is, ſhall be, or let be, the whole earth; or, as ſome, this whole land. Theſe expound what is here ſpoken of the land of Judea, wherein God made his more ſpecial abode, and did in more ſpecial manner manifeſt his glory, and make known himſelf, Levit. 26. 12. Pſal.76.1. and in more peculiar manner alſo yet, in regard of his Temple, which was filled with his glory at the firſt dedication of it, 1 King.8.11. Pſal.29.9. and which ſhould be filled with his glory, by the execution of his juſtice, as Num.14.21. Others extend it to the wide world, ſpoken, as in way of enunciation, that all the world, and whatſoever therein is, doth manifeſt, and ſet forth Gods glory; according to that of the Pſalmiſt, How excellent is thy name in all the earth! that is, throughout the whole world, Pſal. 8.1,9. or by way of exhortation, inciting all men to take notice of it, and to acknowledg it; according to that, Pſal.99.3. Let them praiſe thy great and dreadful name; for it is holy: and, Let the whole earth be filled with his glory, Pſal.72.19. or, laſtly, by way of prediction, as foretelling, that in ſucceeding ages, not that land of Jury only; but the whole world ſhould behold, and partake of that glory of God, which the Jews in more ſpecial manner alone then enjoyed: according to thoſe Prophecies, All people ſhall ſee his glory, Pſal. 97. 6. And the glory of the Lord ſhall be revealed; and all fleſh ſhall together ſee it, chap.40.5. The firſt of theſe ſeems moſt probable. For the phraſe, ſee the very like, chap.8.8.

V. 4. And the poſts, &c.] Here followeth the dreadful effects, that enſued upon the crying, or loud ſinging of thoſe bleſſed and glorious creatures, implying matter of much wrath, already conceived, and ready to be manifeſted, and put in execution. The Temple doors, and poſts ſhaken; and the body of the Temple, filled with ſmoak.

the poſts] That ſtood on either ſide of the door. The word is no where elſe read in Scripture. Yet, becauſe it differeth in one point, or vowel only, from that which ſignifies cubits; ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors ſo expound it here: hence conceiving the poſts, or the tranſomes removed, ſome cubits, two or three, from the place where they formerly were fixed.

of the door] Heb. of the tranſomes; or, the threſholds; as Amos 9.1. to wit, the upper, and the lower, whereunto thoſe poſts were faſtned; the upper reſting on them at the top; the lower, at the bottom, bearing them up; and the doors between the poſts ſo large, and ſo weighty; as Joſephus informeth us, that twenty men could hardly open, or ſhut them; being on either ſide, both below, and above, with great round ſockets of braſs, deeply entred into mortaiſes, made proportionably in either, that they might by the help thereof, turn to and fro. In regard whereof, thoſe tranſomes, or threſholds, are here rendred the door; becauſe, either put for the door; or becauſe the doors and they are deemed to have moved here together, the one with the other. The word is ſometime rendred poſt, Exod. ch. 21. ver.6. and poſts, Amos 9. 1. but the threſholds, or tranſomes, and poſts, are diſtinguiſhed, Ezek. 43. 8.

moved] Or, ſhook; or, trembled: as ch.7.2. & 19.1. & 24. 19. & Amos 9.1. where the like is ſaid of them, preſaging ſuch a commotion as ſhould be in the State, chap. 24. ver. 19.

at the voice of him that cryed] That is, as ſome, at the voice of one of the Angels; not crying, or ſinging aloud altogether: but in courſe, one by one, either of them in his turn. Whence alſo they conclude them to have been two onely. But others render it, at the voice that cryed; that is, of the voyce, whether of one alone, or of all of them joyntly. Howbeit the words may well be rendred, (and ſo I ſuppoſe they ſhould be) at the voice that cryed; or, of one that cryed: as ch.40.3. to wit, of God himſelf; whoſe voice is ſaid to have ſhaken the earth, Heb.12.26. See Pſal.29.3,9. & 104.7. This implyeth the terribleneſs of the voice of an angry God, making the very ſenceleſs creatures, and thoſe of them that ſeem firmeſt, ſtrongeſt, and beſt ſetled, to ſhake again; as with a blow given at his command, Amos 9.1. ſo with a noyſe onely made here. For whether it were by a voice coming immediately from him; or upon the voice of thoſe celeſtial Spirits ſinging his praiſes; the power whereby this was effected, was not theirs, but his; as that power whereby Jericho was diſmantled, upon the ſound of the rams horns, Joſh. 6.20.

and the houſe] That is, the Temple, or, the palace; diſtinguiſhed, both from the Courts without, and from the Oracle within, 1 King.6.2,5,17. 2 Chr.8.9.

was filled with ſmoak] It is ſaid, ſometime, to have been filled with a cloud, in token of Gods acceptation, Exod.40.34. 1 King.8.10. but here, with ſmoak, as a token of his indignation, as a ſmoak is ſaid to have gone out of his noſtrils, when he was angry, Pſal.18.8. See alſo Deut. 29. 20. And hence further, ſome gather an argument, to prove, that the Throne was ſcituate within the houſe, at the upper end of it; and that this ſmoak came from his face there ſitting. See further hereof, on v.6.

V. 5. Then ſaid I, wo is me, &c.] The Prophet here proceeds, to ſhew how himſelf was affected with the ſight of this glorious appearance, together with that terrible voyce, and the dreadful effects of it. He was exceedingly amazed, abaſhed, and confounded in himſelf, in conſideration of his own wants, weakneſſe, inward remainders of corruption; and by reaſon thereof, unworthineſs to appear in the preſence of ſo glorious a Majeſty; and unfitneſs to praiſe him, ſo as thoſe bleſſed Spirits did, Job 42.6. Pſal.50.16. and withal, (it may well be) laying to heart thoſe ſad ſigns of Gods heavy diſpleaſure, as Hab.3.16. See the like dread that the faithful have been ſmitten with, upon the appearance either of God himſelf, or of Meſſengers from him, Dan.8.17,18. & 10.7, 15,16. Luke 1.12. Heb.12.21.

Then] Heb. And. So ch.5.17. or, as ſome, wherefore; as ch. 3.17. the one, as intimating the time; the other, the cauſe.

wo is me] As, wo to us, Lam. 5.10. See ch.1.4.

for I am undone] Heb. cut off. As the word is moſt commonly uſed, ſo ch.15.1. Hoſ.10.7,15. I am a forlorn man, ſure to periſh. Others render it, for I thought within my ſelf, as followeth: and ſo the word ſignifieth, 2 Sam.23.5. & Pſal.50.21. But it is there in an active; here, in a paſſive form. Others again, and they not a few, following the old Latine, Becauſe I have been ſilent; as if that were the thing that ſo much troubled the Prophet, that he had been ſilent, and ſo faulty, in forbearing to reprove the ſins, and exceſſes, as well of Prince, as of People. So a word indeed neer unto it ſignifies; whence our Engliſh, dumb, ch. 23.2. Amos 5.13. and this alſo ſignifies ſometime, but in another form, to ceaſe, or forbear, Jer.14.16. Lam.3.49. though, in this alſo, ſome take it, in the ſame form, Pſal.49.12,13,20. reading there, the beaſts that are dumb. Others laſtly, becauſe the word is paſſive, I was ſilenced, or, brought to ſilence; as they alſo render the word, ch. 15.1. that is, I was ſo aſtoniſhed, that I could not ſpeak, as Pſal.77.4. I was as one ſtricken ſtark dumb, Luk. 1. 20. but the firſt ſeems to be the genuine ſence of the place, and is the uſual ſignification of the word. So Judg.13.23. we are undone, we ſhall dye. For conſidering the words of God, to Moſes, Exod.33.20. no man ſhall ſee me and live; and by the Angels cry underſtanding whom it was that he ſaw, he began to deem himſelf, as they themſelves, neer unto death.

becauſe I am a man of unclean lips] unclean lips; as uncircumciſed lips, Exod.16.12,30. For, unclean, and uncircumciſed, are both joyned together, ch.52.1. oppoſed to a pure, or, a purified lip, Zeph.3.9. the uncleanneſs of the lip; that is, of tongue, or language, as Gen.11.1,6,7,9. put for all manner of pollution, remainders whereof abide ſtill, ſo long as they make abode here, in the beſt, Matth.7.11. Rom.7.17,20,24. 2 Cor.7.1. becauſe faultineſs in this kind, is moſt frequent, and not without much difficulty avoided, Jam.3.2,7,8. and, as it pollutes the whole man, Jam.3.6. ſo it diſcovereth alſo that pollution that lyeth hidden in the heart, Matth. 12. 34, 35,36. & 15.20. Eph.5.29. The conſideration therefore of his inward corruption, tainting the tongue, as well as other parts, and making men unfit to appear before God; who is of ſo pure eyes, that he cannot endure the ſight of ſin, Hab.1.13. and a devouring fire, ready to faſten on ſuch fuel, Deut.4.24. Heb.12.29. and that of the lips eſpecially, rendring men unmeet, to ſpeak either to God, or from God; and withal, as ſome ſuppoſe, the apprehenſion of ſome defects and failings, in the delivery of Gods Meſſages, and the diſcharge of his miniſterial duty, may juſtly ſeem to have made him cry out in this manner, as a forlorn creature. So Peter, Luk. 5. 8. Lord, depart from me, for I am a ſinful man.

and I dwell in the midſt of a people of unclean lips] Intimating, as ſome think, a conciouſneſs of ſome guilt, in forbearing to reprove thoſe, whom he ſaw and knew to be ſuch; and ſo cloſely rendring a reaſon of his former words, wo is me, that I have been ſilent. But of that before: as others, rather implying, that living among ſuch, he had attracted ſome contagion and taint, from them; it being a matter of much difficulty, for men to be as fiſh, that live in the Sea, and yet not taſte of the Salt; to converſe with defiled ones, and yet not be defiled, Pſal.1.1. & 26.4,6. & 106.35. & 119.115.

dwell] Heb. ſit: as ch.5.8. Pſal.26.3.

in the midſt] Or, among; as Jer.40.5,6.

for mine eyes have ſeen the King, the Lord of hoſts] So Manoah, to his wife, we ſhall dye, becauſe we have ſeen the Lord, Judg. 13.23.

the King] the King of all the earth, Pſal.47.7,8. yea, of heaven and earth, Pſal.103.19. that great King, Mal. 1. 14. at, or on whoſe foot-ſtool, all the Kings of the world ſit, holding from him, Prov. 8.15. Dan. 4. 21,34,35. and commanding ſome ſmall piece, or pittance of it, chap. 66. 1. But more ſpecially, the King of his people, the Subjects of his Kingdom; not of might only, but of grace, Pſal.44.4. & 47.6. & 74.12. ch.33.17,22.

have ſeen] Hence, ſome ſay, alleadging for it a Rabbinical Tradition, that Manaſſes ſhould cauſe Iſaiah to be ſawen in ſunder, (to which they apply that, Heb. 11. 37.) as guilty of blaſphemy, in ſaying, that he had ſeen the Lord of hoſts. But little heed is to be given to ſuch Jewiſh relations. See of the kings, under whom he propheſied, chap. 1. 1. Of his ſight of God, ver. 1. Of the ſtile here given to God, chap. 1. ver. 9.

V. 6. Then flew one of the Seraphims unto me] The courſe followeth, that God took to quiet and pacifie the troubled mind of the Prophet; and as to free him from his diſtracting fears; ſo to confirm him in his miniſtry, and to encourage him to a further exerciſe of it.

Then] Heb. And. as ver. 5. or, as ſome, But. As chap. 29. 13.

flew] See v. 2. Dan.9.21.

Seraphims] Or, Seraphs. See v.2.

unto me] By God appointed ſo to do, whoſe commands they ſtood ready preſt to put in execution, v.2. and that by Commiſſion from him, the Seraph did what he did, and in his name, appears by his ſpeech to the Prophet.

having a live coal in his hand] Or, with a live coal in his hand. Heb. and. As ch.13.5. Ezek.9.1.

a live coal] The word properly ſignifies a quick coal, or, a coal of fire: as it is more fully expreſſed, Cant. 8.6. that is, fiery, or fiered; (for it is another word, and ſomewhat more general, that is uſed, Pſal.18.8,12.) Hence the ſparks, called the ſons, or children of ſuch a coal, Job 5.7. the rather may the Prophet ſeem to have uſed this term, becauſe of the vicinity of Seraph, and Reſheph. With which manner of alluſions, he ſeems to have been much delighted. See chap.5.7. The quick coal here, is a note of purification, and expiation of ſin, becauſe the nature of fire is to ſever and conſume droſs. See chap.1.25. Matth.3.10.

in his hand] For they had hands under their upper wings, Ezek. 1. 8. & 8. 3. & 10. 2.

which he had taken] Or, took. A defect of the relative; as Gen. 39. 4. 1 King. 18. 12. had taken, or, took; as Gen. 12. 1.

with the tongs] The word, here uſed, is by our Tranſlator diverſly rendred. Sometime, as here, tongs: ſo Exod. 25. 38. Numb.9.4. 1 King. 7. 49. 2 Chr. 4. 21. Sometime ſnuffers; as Exod. 37. 23. Which place yet anſwers to that, Exod. 25. 38. It hath a dual form, as our Engliſh a plural; becauſe conſiſting of two branches, or joynts: and may well comprehend either, to wit, both tongs, and ſnuffers. It comes from a word, here uſed, that ſignifies to take: as if he had ſaid, He took with the taking inſtruments, or the takers. There is another name of an inſtrument, uſed alſo about the lamps in the Temple, as well as the former; Derived from a word that ſignifies to prune, trim, cut, or, pare; tranſlated ſnuffers, 1 King.7.50. 2 Chro. 4. 22. The one might ſeem to have been of uſe for the raiſing of the wick, the other, for the toping of it; thoſe, of either kinds, uſed about the lamps, were of gold, Exod.25.38. 1 King. 7. 49,50. Thoſe employed about the altar, as theſe here of braſs, Jer. 52. 18. The Seraph is here ſaid to take one coal onely with the tongs, becauſe for a moderate, and gracious uſe, about the Prophet: but another is ſaid, with his bare hand, to take, and ſcatter of them, by whole handfuls, in way of wrath, and judgment, upon the people, Ezek. 10. 2,6,7.

from off the altar] To wit, the brazen altar of burnt-offerings, that ſtood in the inner court before the front of the Temple, or palace, Exod. 40. 6. 1 King. 8. 64 having fire continually burning upon it, Levit.6.12,13. So that there are probabilities for conjectures on either ſide. See on verſ. 1. & 4.

V. 7. And he laid it upon my mouth] Or, which he laid upon my mouth:

mouth: either and for which. See ch. 4. 6: or a defect of the affix, as chap. 5. 29. Heb. made it touch my mouth. The uſe he made of the coal, to expiate, and purifie the Prophets lips with it.

and ſaid] Informing the Prophet, what, by that act of his he meant, and intended unto him; who might, otherwiſe, have been thereby more diſmaid, then before; miſtaking, or miſconſtruing it, as an argument of wrath: as a thing done, not to purge, but to ſear his lips. See Pſal. 120. 3, 4.

Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy ſin purged] This touching of thy lips, (not with ſtrange fire, as Levit. 10. 1. but) with fire from Gods altar; (a type of that altar, that is both ſanctified, and ſanctifies all that is offered on it, Heb. 13. 10. & 9. 21, 22, 23. Matt. 23. 19.) may aſſure thee from God, (for in his perſon he ſpeaks, who alone is able, both to purge away the ſoyl of ſin, ch. 1. 15. Ezek. 36. 25. and to aſſoil from the guilt of it, Mar. 2. 7. 1 Joh. 1. 7, 9.) that the guilt of thy ſin, is all utterly removed from thee, 2 Sam. 12. 13. Pſal. 103. 12. and thou alſo, in ſome farther meaſure, ſanctified, and renewed, then before, Deut 30. 6. Zeph. 3. 9. For that which ſome ſuppoſe, that the ſpirit of Prophecie, and infallibility, was now conferred on him, which before he had not; is not certain, nor very likely. See ch. 1. 1. & ver. 1.

taken away] Heb. is departed; is gone. We are ſaid to depart from ſin, when we ſurceaſe the practice of it, Pſal. 34. 14. ſin to depart; or be removed from us, when the guilt of it is remitted, Pſal. 32. 1. & 103. 12. So Nathan to David, The Lord hath taken away thy ſin, thou ſhalt not dye, 2 Sam. 12. 13.

purged] Heb. expiated. Which is then moſt properly ſaid to be done, when propitiation and atonement is obtained, Levit. 1. 4. ch. 22. 14. Rom. 3. 25. Yet the other of purifying, may here be joyntly underſtood.

V. 8. Alſo I heard the voyce of the Lord, ſaying] Alſo; Heb. And; as Jer. 1. 3. or, Then; as ver. 6. After that he had thus heartned me, and prepared me for ſuch employment, as pleaſed.

I heard the voice] As did our firſt parents, but they with dread, which made them flye from it, Gen. 3. 8. Iſaiah with refreſhing, which made him rather to approach it.

of the Lord] Heb. Adonai. Him that ſate on the throne, ver. 1. Not ſpeaking to him now by a Seraph, as before, but immediately from himſelf.

Whom ſhall I ſend?] To wit, on my errand to this people. Not as doubting, or deliberating, as uncertain whom to ſend; but implying, that the errand that he ſhould ſend on, required ſome party well accompliſhed. See Jer. 49. 19. & 50. 44.

and who will go for us?] Who is willing to undertake the office? or, who ſhall go for us? Whom ſhall we deſign, and appoint unto this work? as before. Some make it the ſpeech of God the Father, ſpeaking unto the Son and Holy Ghoſt. Certain it is, that it was the voice of the one and onely true God, in three Perſons diſtinct, (though inſeperable, as well in operations towards the creatures, as in Nature and Eſſence) as conſulting among themſelves: and ſpeaking therefore, firſt in the ſingular number; to note the unity, and ſingularity of the Godhead, or Divine nature; then in the plural, noting the plurality of the Perſons in the Godhead: not that God uſeth any ſuch like conſultations; as for want of perfect underſtanding of affairs, and events, men are enforced oft to make uſe of; Princes, with their Peers, and men one with another; but that hereby, ſpeaking after the manner of men (See chap. 3. 3.) the orderly and prudent carriage of God, who is ſaid to do, effect, and bring all things about, according to the counſel of his own will, Eph. 1. 11. may thereby be deſigned. See the like, Gen. 1. 26. & 3. 22. & 11. 7. 1 King. 22. 20. See alſo ch. 1. 1.

for us] A paſſage, both of inſtruction to inform him, in whoſe name, and for whom he ſhould deal, 2 Cor. 4. 5. & 11. 2. and of confirmation, to encourage him unto, and ſupport him in the execution of his miniſtry, going for, and from God; who would be ſure to be with, and protect him in the faithful performance thereof, Exod. 3. 12. & 4. 12. Jer. 1. 17, 19. Matt. 28. 18, 20. Act. 18. 10.

Then I ſaid] Heb. And, as before. Then being comforted, and encouraged, by the former aſſurance of favour confirmed and ſealed to me, with ſo ſolemn a myſtery, I offered my ſelf willingly to be imployed in Gods work, and to go on his errand.

Here am I] Heb. behold me. Or, Lo I; as Gen. 22. 1. ch. 59. 9. Ready preſt for whatſoever it ſhall pleaſe thee to imploy me in. So 1 Sam. 3. 4, 6, 8. Pſalm 40. 7, 8. Matt. 21. 29, 30.

ſend me] A great promptneſs, and forwardneſs, not to obey onely, but to offer himſelf unto Gods ſervice; like the Nethins, or Nethinim, Ezr. 2. 43, 58. And thoſe, of whom the Apoſtle, that they had freely of their own accord, ſet themſelves apart to the miniſtry of the Saints, 1 Cor. 16. 15. Contrary to that backwardneſs, and tergiverſation, which upon Gods call hath ſometime appeared in ſome others, Exod. 3. 11. & 4. 10. Jer. 1. 6. See Pſal. 110. 3. Yet what ſome would hence gather, that this ſhould be Iſaiahs firſt miſſion, as not entred into Prophetical office before, doth not, neceſſarily, hence follow; nor is it very probable; for it is affirmed, ch. 1. 1. that he propheſied under Uzziah, whereas this viſion ſeems to have appeared after his deceaſe; See ver. 1. Nor doth this appear to be, ſo much a general miſſion, as a ſpecial commiſſion, for a particular meſſage, or errand, that he was at this time to deliver, from God to his people. So Ezek. 8. 1, 2, &c. & 11. 1, 4.

V. 9. And he ſaid, Go] He is not ſo forward to be ſent, but God is as willing to ſend him on his errand. So 1 King. 22. 22. Though to divers parties, and of divers natures and qualities; yet both to be imployed in his work of wrath; by execution, the one; by denunciation, the other.

and tell this people] Heb. and thou ſhalt ſay. Or, do thou ſay to, &c. as chap. 38. 28. Act. 28. 26. But here the rather ſo to be rendred, becauſe he ſeems to ſpeak rather by way of permiſſion, and dereliction, then by way of prediction.

this people] Not my people; (as unworthy to bear his name, or to be owned by him) but this people: as thoſe that he now made no reckoning of, whatſoever formerly he had done. So ver. 10. ch. 29. 13. Jer. 7. 16, 23. and ſo, this fellow, in ſcorn, and contempt, as one not worthy to be named, Matth. 26. 61. Luk. 23. 2. and this man, Act. 24. 5.

Hear ye indeed, but underſtand not; and ſee ye indeed, but perceive not] A moſt dreadful judgment denounced againſt this people, to wit, of giving them up wholly to the ſtubborneſſe and obſtinacy of their own perverſe hearts, and rebellious wills. As if he had ſaid, ſince that you will needs wilfully ſtop your ears againſt thoſe things that you hear; that you will not conceive them, though they be never ſo plainly delivered unto you, never ſo powerfully preſſed upon you, again and again, ch. 28. 9, 12. Zach. 7. 11, 12. Act. 7. 37. and ſhut your eyes, that ye may not ſee, nor perceive and take notice of ſuch things as are ſo evidently ſet before you, that ye cannot ſhun the ſight of them, ch. 26. 11. & 42. 18, 20: Since that, I ſay, you are thus ſtiffly reſolved, and deſperately bent, that you refuſe to regard, or to be wrought upon by ought that is ſpoken in your hearing, or done in your ſight; go on ſtill in your obſtinacy, never once thinking of return, till deſtruction over-take you. It is like that in the Pſalm, My people would not hear me; Iſrael would not obey me: Therefore gave I them up unto their own hearts luſts, to walk after their own counſels, Pſal. 81. 11, 12. and, go, and ſerve, each of you his own dungy (or, dung-hill) idols, (for ſo the word properly ſignifies, the vileſt and baſeſt of them, that are) both now and hereafter, ſince you will not hearken unto me; and be ruled by me, Ezek. 20. 39. and, fulfill ye the meaſure of your fathers iniquity. Go on to do, as they have done before you; you ſhall not want of Gods meſſengers (I will ſend you Prophets, and Wiſe-men,) enough for you to murther, Matth. 23. 32, 34. and that in the Revelation, Let him that is unjuſt, continue unjuſt ſtill; or, grow more unjuſt yet, then before he was: and let him that is filthy, be filthy ſtill; or, Let him be yet more filthy, (for the words may bear either) Rev. 22. 11. This I take to be the genuine meaning of the words. Howbeit, I reject not the ſence that many learned and religious Writers give, conceiving it to be delivered, as by conceſſion, and prenunciation. As if the Lord had ſaid, Prophets indeed ye ſhall not want, nor ſhall ſigns and miracles fail with you; ye ſhall have enough to ſee and hear of either: but ye ſhall receive no more fruit, or benefit by them, then as if ye had never, either heard ought of the one, or ſeen ought of the other, Pſal. 78. 32. & 106. 7. Joh. 12. 37. God in juſt judgment for their former exceſſes, and obſtinacy, denying a bleſſing unto the means; and either withdrawing, or withholding the efficacy of his Spirit, whereby it might have become beneficial to them, for their ſpiritual good, Deut. 29. 2, 4. Ezek. 2. 5, 7. & 3. 7. whether way you take it, it comes much in effect to one.

Hear ye indeed] Or, as ſome, hear inceſſantly; as others, plainly. Heb. in hearing, hear, as ch. 55. 2. the Greek, with whom ſome of the Evangeliſts concur, read it in the future, Hearing, you ſhall hear, &c. Matth. 13. 14. Act. 28. 26. which Mark, alſo, ſeems to have followed, Mar. 4. 12. but the future is not unuſually put for the imperative; as in the precepts, Exod. 20. 13. 17. But according to that verſion, rendring both branches in the future, the former ſeems ſpoken, in way of conceſſion; ye ſhall ſee; ye ſhall hear: the latter, in way of commination; ye ſhall not underſtand, ye ſhall not perceive: the reduplication adds much emphaſis to it.

but underſtand not] Heb. and. And ſo Mark 4. 12. as ch. 29. 13. for, underſtand not, Matt. 13. 14. ye ſhall not underſtand. See there alſo, ver. 13. & 19.

and ſee ye indeed] Heb. in ſeeing ſee. And ſo Matt. 13. 14. ſeeing ye ſhall ſee.

but perceive not] As before. An heavy judgement that befel this people, as in Iſaiah's dayes; ſo in Chriſts time, Matt. 13. 14. and continues on them to this day. 2 Cor. 3. 14, 15. And it is indeed a juſt thing with God, when men wilfully wink, and ſhut their eies againſt the light, to ſtrike them ſtark blinde, as he did the Aſſyrians, 2 King. 6. 18. the Sodomites, Gen. 19. 11. and Elimas the Sorcerer, Act. 13. 11. to daſh out their eyes, Deut. 28. 28. Pſal. 69. 23. Rom. 1. 21, 22, 26, 28. and 11. 8, 10. Howbeit, by the words of underſtanding, and perceiving, is implyed, that it is not a corporal, but a ſpiritual deafneſs, and blindeneſs, that to this people, by the Prophet, God here ſpeakes of. See ch. 29. 18. & 35. 5. & 42. 18.

V. 10. Make the heart of this people fat] Before God directed his ſpeech to the people: he turns it now to the Prophet. Not as enjoyning him to do, deſire, endeavour, or intend to do, that that is here ſpoken; (though the words are delivered, as by of injunction, and precept) but as foretelling him what the fruit, and iſſue of his preaching would be, and ſhould be; (which yet he muſt not therefore forbear) not of its own nature; bur by means of mans corruption, and obſtinate diſpoſition, riſing againſt it, Rom. 7. 23. and boiling again with it, as quick lime with water caſt on it, Rom. 7. 13. Rev. 16. 9, 11. And through the juſt judgement of God, giving them up to themſelves, and ſuffering his word to have ſuch a direful effect on them, as to harden their hearts, and make them grow worſe, and worſe, until they attain unto that height of impenitency, that becomes irrecoverable. See chap. 28. 13. & 29. 10. Rom. 2. 4, 5. & 11. 8, 10. 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. 2 Tim. 3. 13. Heb. 6. 4, 6, 7.

make fat] This the moſt, both of ours, and the Jewiſh Doctors, read in the imperative form, expounding it of ſomething to be done by the Prophet, but no otherwiſe then by his preaching; alleadging, ſome of them, the like of Jeremiah, Jer. 1. 10. But that is ſomewhat of another kinde; being not ſo much the effect of his preaching, as the matter of his prophecie; whereas this here ſpoken of, reſpects not ſo much the ſubject matter of Iſaiah's Sermons, as the effect, and work that his words were to have on the hearts of his hearers. A ſtrange thing, that that word of God, whoſe genuine work is to clear the underſtanding, and enlighten the minde, Pſal. 19. 7, 8. & 119. 99, 104, 105, 130. Prov. 6. 23. ſhould, eſpecially, in the mouth of ſo powerful a Prophet, become a means to make men more ſtupid and ſenſleſs, more brutiſh then before. Yet ſome, both of the one and the other, take the word to be of the infinitive mood, and ſo to make up the ſence, ſupply a prepoſition, implying the ground of the former doom; for that, the heart of thuſs people is fatted; or, for that, this people have made their heart fat. And to the ſame purpoſe, the Greek, and the Evangeliſts, Matt. 13. 14. & Act. 28. 27. following the Greek, For the heart of this people is waxed groſs: Which though reteined by the Pen-men of Scripture, regarding more, oftentimes, the ſence and intent of the text, then the preciſe terms, where the one ſwerves not much from the other; and what is in the words ſo read, implyed, is of undoubted truth: Yet the context in the original, is nothing ſo plain in the latter verſion, as in the former; nor will the words, without ſome ſtraining, yeeld it. Howbeit, the Evangeliſt John, may ſeem to depart here, from either party; as well the former, as the latter: for he neither reads it, as a charge given to the Prophet; nor as a fault committed and contracted by the people; but as an act of God himſelf. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts, Joh. 12. 40. But neither doth John cite the entire text, nor tye himſelf to the preciſe words of the place, nor obſerve ſtrictly the order of them, as they lye in the text; but picks onely out of them, ſo much as might ſerve for his preſent purpoſe, which in quotation of places, is ſufficient. Nor is there any jar, either between the Prophets relation, and his allegation; or between the writings of the other, his co-evangeliſts, and his. What the Prophet is willed to do, God, by his juſt judgement, alſo did, ch. 29. 10. and what was in this kinde done, they had before themſelves begun, in hardning their hearts, both againſt the word, and works of God, ch. 5. 11, 12, 18, 19, 24. And thereby juſtly deſerved, that God ſhould further ſo deal with them. So Pharaoh firſt hardned himſelf, his own heart, Exod. 7. 13, 14, 42. & 8. 15, 19, 32. & 9. 9, 34, 35. and God after hardned Pharaohs heart, Exod. 9. 12. & 10. 1, 20, 27. & 11. 9, 10. and that deſervedly, even unto his deſtruction, Exod. 14. 4.

the heart fat] The heart, not of the body; but of the ſoul. The heart, in Hebrew, being very frequently put for the ſoul, Pſal. 14. 1. Jer. 5. 23. & 17. 9. Matth. 12. 35. & 15. 18, 19. an heart, fat, or groſs; that is, dull, or, ſtupid: alluding to the heart in the body, overgrown, and oppreſſed with fat. See Luk. 21. 34. becauſe ſuch fatneſs, or groſneſs about the heart, ſeems to imply ſtupidity and dulneſs, Pſal. 119. 70. though that place may be deemed rather to look another way, and to intimate either a full body, or fat eſtate; as Deut. 32. 15. Pſal. 17. 10, 14. & 73. 4, 7. Jer. 5. 28. & 12. 2, 3. or, by a fat heart, may be underſtood an heavy, or ponderous heart; as the Hebrew phraſe is, for an hard, or, a ſtiff heart: alluding to the ſtiffneſs of ſuet, when it is once throughly cold; at what time it grows ſtiffer and harder, then other fat, or tallow is wont to do; or, beauſe heavy and ponderous bodies are not eaſily moved, or ſtirred: as things ſtiff, and hard alſo, are not eaſily wrought on. Hence an heavy heart, Exo. 7. 14. and an hard heart, Ezek. 3. 7. are all one: and God is ſaid in the forementioned place, ſometime to make Pharaohs heart heavy, Exod. 7. 13. and ſometime, to make it hard, Exod. 7. 3. the term that John uſeth, in citing this place, Joh. 12. 40. So that by fatneſs of heart, here may well be underſtood, ſuch a diſpoſition of mind, or ſpirit, as makes not dull only, and unteachable; but ſtiff and untractable: unfit any way to be wrought upon, or to be dealt with.

and make their ears heavy] heavineſs is ſometime applyed to the heart; and ſo it imports dulneſs, and ſtiffneſs, as was before ſhewed, ſometime to the ear; and then it imports deafneſs, or thickneſs of hearing, as we ſpeak, ch. 59. 1. ſo, they made heavy their ear, Zach. 7. 11. By an heavy ear, applyed to the ſoul, (whereof it is ſo oft ſaid, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear, Matth. 11. 15, 43. Luk. 8. 8. & 14. 35. Rev. 2. 7, 11, 17, 29. & 3. 6, 13, 22. & 13. 9.) is meant ſuch an ear, as is elſe termed an ear uncircumciſed, Act. 7. 51. ſuch an one as cannot endure to hear Gods Word, or ought that is ſpiritually good, Jer. 6. 10.

and ſhut their eyes] cloſe them, as ſome; or daub them up with plaiſter, or other like matter. For ſo chap. 44. 18. he hath daubed up, or, daubed over their eyes, and their hearts. Others, dimme them, or, make them dimme. For the word here uſed is not elſewhere found, thus uſed; ſave in another form once, chap. 32. 3. where it is expounded by dimneſs. The eyes intended, are the eyes of the mind; of which, Pſal. 119. 18. Act. 26. 18. Eph. 1. 18. The Evangeliſts, together with the Greek, render it, and their eyes have they cloſed, Matth. 13. 14. Act. 28. 27. as pointing to the originall of this dreadfull evil, their own wilfull obſtinacy.

leſt they ſhould ſee with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and underſtand with their hearts] Or, a little more plainly, that they may not ſee, &c. nor hear, &c. nor underſtand, &c. that they may be like meer images, or ſtatues, that have eyes, but ſee not; ears, but hear not, &c. Pſal. 115. 5, 6. & 135. 16, 17. ſottiſh, blockiſh, and ſenſeleſs creatures, idol-hearers; like thoſe idol ſhepherds, Zach. 11. 17. profiting not at all, by what they either ſee, or hear, chap. 42. 18, 19. & 44. 18. Jer. 5. 21. 2 Tim. 3. 7.

with their eyes, and with their ears, and with their hearts] Not that without theſe, or with any other inſtrument but theſe, men can ſee, hear, or underſtand: but the expreſſion of them, adds a kind of emphaſis, and weight, to the ſentence; and makes the ſpeech the more affectionate, that men ſhould have ſuch organs, or inſtruments, and yet have no uſe of them, no benefit at all by them. See the like manner of ſpeech, Gen. 45. 12. Job 42. 5. Ezek. 3. 10.

and convert] Or, turn. That they may not return from their wicked courſes, but be hardened in them more and more, according to their own deſire: My people love to have it ſo, Jer. 5. 31. and it is a juſt thing with God, to let them have what they love; to afford them what themſelves deſire, Pſal. 81. 12.

and be healed] Or, as ſome, and health; or, healing come to them, as if it were a noun; but none ſuch is: or, healing come to them; as that of coming, being included in the verb: but the verb is active, not paſſive; as appears, ch. 19. 22. & 57. 19. Jer. 33. 6. Hoſ. 11. 3. It is, word for word, and he heal him; that is, taken imperſonally, or indefinitely, one heal him; or, he be healed. For by the paſſive, yet, are ſuch phraſes oft expreſſed. See chap. 2. 19, 20. The Evangeliſts, as the Greek verſion before them, render it, and I ſhould heal them; to wit, as by pardoning their ſins upon their repentance: (as Mark expreſly gives it, Mar. 4. 12.) ſo by reſtoring of ſafety and proſperity unto them, and repairing the breaches of their State: For by healing, is that, alſo, oft-times expreſſed, Pſal. 60. 2. chap. 19. 22. & 57. 18. Jer. 30. 17. See chap. 1. 6. & 3. 7.

V. 11. Then ſaid I, Lord how long?] An abrupt and imperfect ſpeech, as interrupted, and cut ſhort, through exceſs of paſſion. Like that of the Pſalmiſt, But thou, O Lord, how long? Pſal. 6. 3. and How long, O Lord? Pſal. 13. 1. How long ſhall this ſad condition laſt? How long ſhall I, and other thy Prophets, preach thus, without fruit, and this people perſiſt in this their wonted obſtinacy? Jer. 4. 14. & 13. 27.

And he anſwered, untill the Cities be waſted, &c.] Gods anſwer to the Prophets demand, propounded by way of complaint; as much affected with this deſperate condition of his people, with whom God had ſo long born, that he could no longer forbear, 2 Chron. 36. 16. Jer. 15. 6. & 44. 22. Ezek. 21. 27.

untill] Heb. if. As ch.30.17.

the cities] Of Juda, chap.1.7.

be waſted] By the incurſions of forraign forces. The Syrians, ch.9.12. the Aſſyrians, ch. 36. 1. the Babylonians, Jer.34.1. & 52.7. Yea, though ſome reſtrain what is here ſpoken to Sennacheribs invaſion; yet ſome other extend it, unto the ſacking of their chief City, and overthrow of their State by the Romanes, under Veſpaſian firſt, and afterward, by Hadrian.

waſted without Inhabitant] That is, waſted, and left without Inhabitants: as, burnt, without Inhabitants; that is, burnt, and left without them, Jer.2.15. and laid waſte, without Inhabitants; that is, laid waſte, and left without them, Jer.4.7. A defective, or comprehenſive ſpeech, wrapping up two notions in one term; the like whereunto, ſee ch.38.17,21.

without Inhabitant] Becauſe emptied of them. See chap. 3. 26.

inhabitant] Put collectively, for inhabitants; as ch. 5.3. or diviſively, for any one, as 1 Sam. 27.9.

and the houſes] As well within, as without the cities, ch. 5. 9. Amos 3.15.

without man] That is, either men, as ch.5.3. or any man; as Jer.4.25.

and the land be utterly deſolate] Heb. country, or tilled land, (as ch. 1.7.) be waſted with deſolation. See ſuch an utter deſolation deſcribed, Jer.4.23,26. & Zeph. 1.2, 3. and of the phraſe, ſee chap. 22.17, 18. Mic. 2. 10. Howbeit, we are not ſo to conceive the words, as if the whole country ſhould be utterly diſpeopled, or the people, all, without exception, deſtroyed. For there is mention of a reſerve, verſ. 13. but that the devaſtation ſhould be very general, and a great part, both of cities and houſes, wholly emptied of inhabitants, many of them utterly deſtroyed. See Jer. 39. 8, 9. & 52. 13, 15.

V. 12, And the Lord have removed men far away] Some read the words, as rendring a reaſon of the fore-mentioned deſolation. For the Lord ſhall remove men far away. But that needs not; becauſe the words run well on, in a clear tenor, without any ſuch alteration. Further onely declaring the principal author of this judgement; whoſoever they were that ſhould be the inſtruments, and executioners in it. See chap. 7. 17, 20. & 10. 5.

removed men] By cauſing them to be carried away captive, chap. 26. 15.

far away] Into Aſſyria, and Chaldea, countries far remote from Judea, ch. 5. 26.

and there be a great forſaking] Or, leaving. Not of people, left in the land, but of people leaving it; not a voluntary, but an enforced dereliction of lands and houſes; with ſuch other commodities that men therein had enjoyed, but ſhould then be conſtrained to abandon, being either driven away out of them, or carried away from them, Jer. 9. 19. For it ſeems not ſo natural, to expound it of Gods forſaking them and their land: though it be true, that the enemy could not have prevailed ſo againſt them, if God had not forſaken them, and given them up into the enemies hand, Deut. 32. 30. Jer. 12. 7.

in the midſt of the land] That is, in the land; as chap. 5. 8. & 7. 22.

V. 13. But yet in it ſhall be a tenth] In this laſt verſe, the foregoing ſad prophecie is yet ſhut up with ſome matter of comfort, to wit, that notwithſtanding this great and general devaſtation of the land, and diſſipation of the State; yet all ſhould not be utterly ruined, and rooted out; a ſmall remnant ſhould be reſerved: and that remnant, though it ſhould be cropt again, and again; yet ſhould never be ſo cut off, or conſumed, but that there ſhould continue ſtill, a ſeed of Saints, to uphold and perpetuate the race. So he concluded his firſt, and ſecond Sermon, with gracious promiſes of mercy, and reſtitution, ch. 1. & 4.

But yet] Heb. And yet; ch. 1. 28. as ſpoken in way of mitigation of the fore-going ſentence. Yet ſome read, And until there be but a tenth left in it; as in way of continuation of the former doom, and of the ſtint of time therein deſigned. But I finde not the word that is here, any where ſo uſed; though the word that ſignifies until, come neer it.

ſhall be a tenth] A ſmall number, one of ten ſhall be reſerved; as ch. 1. 9. & 10. 21, 22. Either remaining ſtill in the land, as many of the poorer ſort did, 2 King. 25. 21, 22. or preſerved in the captivity; and reſtored again to their land, after it had been long waſte, ch. 7. 3. & 61.4. The word here uſed, is no where elſe found; and being formed, like thoſe proper names, Azaniah, Neh. 10. 9. Azaziah, 1 Chro. 15. 21. and Azariah, 2 King. 14. 21. It may not improbably be deemed to ſignifie as thoſe, Gods hearing, ſtrength, and help; ſo this, Gods tenth; as a portion dedicated to him, and reſerved for him; as the tenths were, Levit. 27. 30. And that the rather, not unfitly ſo termed, in regard of the holy ſeed wrapped up in it. See ch. 19.24. Gods third. Howbeit, we are not to conceive, that ſuch a preciſe number was to be preſerved, either from captivity, or under the captivity; to wit, juſt one of ten; but a certain number is put, as oft for an uncertain: So this number of ten, Gen. 31. 41. Numb. 14. 22. Rev.2.10. And ſo ſome other numbers in this argument; as two or three on the top; three or four on the ſide-boughs, chap. 17. 6. And one of a city, and two of a family, Jer. 3.14. Some of thoſe writers that refer and reſtrain this to the ſpoil and waſte that Sennacherib made in Judea, under King Ezekiah, underſtand by this tenth, the city of Jeruſalem, which was preſerved at that time, when the whole land was over-run, ch.36. 1. & 37. 35: and which may well, ſay they, go for the tenth part of the whole land beſide. But the terms uſed, both here, and in the reſt of this verſe; as alſo in other places where the ſame ſubject is handled, do ſeem rather to point at perſons, then places. But divers of the Jewiſh Doctors, and ſome of ours concurring with them therein, underſtand, by the tenth, here, a Decade of Kings, that ſhould immediately ſucceed one another, before this waſte of the land, and havock of the inhabitants ſhould be. For God, ſay they, to comfort the Prophet, and alleviate his grief, concerning this ſad meſſage enjoyned him to go with; and to meet with ſuch thoughts and doubts, as he might have, as if the ſame were to fall out, and be executed in his dayes, informs him, that this doom was not to be put in execution, before the end of ten Kings of Judah their ſucceſſive reigns. And indeed there were juſt ten of them, that reigned ſucceſſively in that State; to wit Jotham, Ahaz, Ezekiah, Manaſſes, Amon, Joſiah, Jehoahaz, Jehojakim, Jeconiah, Zedekiah; before that heavy downfall of it, by the Chaldeans, fell out. But this ſeems a meer Rabbinical conceit: nor doth it fit ſo well with the text.

and it ſhall return, and ſhall be eaten] Heb. and it ſhall return; and be to depaſture; as the word is taken, Numb. 24. 22. and chap. 5. 5. That is, it ſhall again be cropped, or eaten down: ſo is the word of returning frequently uſed, Gen. 26. 18. He returned and digged; for, he digged again, Pſal. 78. 41. they returned, and tempted; for they tempted again: it ſhall return, and be built, for, it ſhall again be built, Dan. 9. 21. And this ſeems to have been fulfilled, in the ſeveral renewed deportations, as gleanings of the people, by Nebuzaradan, after that, in the firſt ſurprizal of the city, Jer. 52. 28, 30. Or, as ſome, in thoſe remains, that after the murther of Gedaliah fled into Egypt, and there periſhed, Jer. 41. 16, 17. & 42. 22. Yet ſome refer the words to the return of the people from captivity, rendring them either, and it ſhall return, having been conſumed; or when it ſhall return and have been conſumed: not a tenth part of thoſe that were carried away captive to Babylon, returning in ſafety home again. And again read them, It ſhall, after its return again, be burnt up, or removed; that is, utterly aboliſhed; underſtanding it as ſpoken of the laſt deſtruction of the Jews, and their State, by the Romanes. And it is true indeed, that the word here uſed, ſignifies both theſe; ſometime, to burn, ſometime alſo to remove; as was formerly ſhewed, on ch. 4. 4. But neither doth either of thoſe ſences fit well here with the context: nor doth this prophecy ſeem to reach ſo low, as thoſe times, in the primary, and peculiar intendment of it. The firſt expoſition ſeems the moſt probable. For as for that which a learned late writer hath, who taketh the latter word in an active notion, thus rendring the text; it ſhall return, to wit, from captivity, and ſhall be to burn; that is, ſhall deſtroy and burn up its enemies; as Zach. 12. 6. Obad. 18. I propound it only, and leave it to the judgment of the learned.

as a Teil-tree, &c.] Or, howbeit, as, &c. For the better connexion of this branch, with the former; wherein God by the Prophet declareth, for the comfort of his people, that albeit there ſhould be but as a tenth reſerved, and that tenth, in a manner, tithed again; yet ſhould, in that ſmall reſerve, ſo much impeached and impaired, be ſuch a ſeed of Saints, as ſhould keep the people in a ſubſiſtence, and not ſuffer them utterly to be razed out, Jer. 33. 25, 26. And this he illuſtrates by ſimilitude, as moſt take it of a tree, that having caſt her leaves in winter, ch. 1. 30: or having been brouzed upon by cattel, ch. 5. 5: or cut and mangled, yea, lopt, and hewen down, yet retains ſome ſap; by vertue whereof, it maintains life, and in due time ſprouts forth, and ſprings up again, Job 14. 7, 9: or, as others take it, of certain trees planted on the ſide of ſome bank, or cauſey, that by the roots thereof piercing in it, help to keep the earth, that would otherwiſe be crumbling, and mouldring awry.

a Teil-tree] Or, a Lime-tree. A tree of goodly leaves, and ſpreading branches, fit to make bowers of. And this, and the oak, as ſome ſuppoſe, are here made choice of; becauſe the one, in regard of its fairneſs, the other, in regard of its firmneſs, might be unlikely to loſe their goodly verdure, in winter;

appliable in that regard, unto the Jewiſh eſtate; yet whether the hebrew word ſignifie that kinde of tree, is uncertain. Some render it, an Elm; ſome, an Holm; ſome, a firr, or, Turpentine-tree, (ſo the Greek;) Our tranſlators render it, an Oak, chap. 1.30. and ſo oft elſewhere: as alſo do moſt other tranſlators of note. Nor conceive I any reaſon why it ſhould be rendred otherwiſe here, then there: the teil, or lime, having no affinity at all with an oak.

and an oak] This word is likewiſe ſo rendred, chap. 2. 13. Yet ſome of the Rabbins tell us, that it ſignifies a pine. Others of them, a cheſtnut; which by the Arabians is tearmed the King of oaks. As a name, not unlike thereunto, is by the Greeks, and Latines, given to the walnut. The former word, and this differ, not much in the original: in regard whereof, they are deemed to be trees of a neer kinde, both oaks, but of divers ſorts, as of oaks there be many: for which both the Greeks, and Latines, have diſtinct names, though we in engliſh have not. And ſome of our more exact tranſlators, therefore render them in Latine, both here, and elſewhere: The former, by the word, quercus; the latter, by the word, robur. The firſt words of this paſſage, then very variouſly, both tranſlated, and underſtood, may thus be rendred; As an oak, either of the one, or the other kinde; this oak, and that oak; for this, or that: as father, and mother; for father, or mother, Exod. 21.15. and lion, and bear; for lion, or bear, 1 Sam. 17. 34. Or, as the oak of either kinde; as deſigning trees, that grow in a certain well known place: oak, and oak; for oaks of this kinde, and oaks of that kinde: as ox, and aſs; for oxen, and aſſes, ch. 1. 3.

whoſe ſubſtance is in them, when they caſt their leaves] This ſence moſt Interpreters, as well Jews as ours, here follow. But this ſeems not ſo agreeable to the words in the original; where in the former branch, it runs thus; which (not whoſe) ſupport (rather then ſubſtance) is in them; which in them: by a redundancy, very frequent, and familiar in the hebrew: for in which, or, wherein. So Gen. 1. 30. which in it is life; for, in which, or, wherein is life: and Job. 3. 2. which I was born in it, for, on which, or, wherein I was born. And I render the word rather, ſupport. then ſubſtance; becauſe, in propriety of ſpeech, it ſignifies a pillar; being uſed of the pillar placed on Rachels ſepulchre, Gen. 35. 20. As alſo of that, which Abſolom erected for himſelf, in the kings dale, 2 Sam. 18. 18. put here for ſupport, becauſe pillars, are means of ſupport, Judg. 16. 26. And for the latter clauſe, when they caſt their leaves; that of their leaves, is not in the text. Some other therefore of either, render it, in the dejection, or depaction: that is, as they underſtand it, the thruſting, or driving, and faſtning down into the ground of the trees themſelves, before ſpoken of; as if it were ſaid, as in theſe trees, when they are thruſt, and driven down into the ground: But howſoever, unto ſtakes and piles driven for ſupport into the ground, the tearm here uſed, may not altogether unfitly be applyed; yet of trees ſet in the ground, and planted for that purpoſe; it ſeems not ſo proper; nor do I ſuppoſe, that the word can be found ſo uſed of either. Others take the word, Shallecheth, here uſed, for the proper name of a place; to wit, of a gate of the Temple: ſo called, as ſome, becauſe by it, they uſed to caſt out, or carry out the aſhes, which the altar of burnt-offerings yeelded; together with the ſweepings, and other ſoil of the Temple; which yet ſeems to be no very probable conjecture, becauſe it opened upon a principal paſſage to the kings palace, as appears, 1 Chro. 26. 16. compared with 1 King. 10. 5. Or as others, rather ſo called, from the paſſage it ſelf, on which it opened, ſo tearmed, in regard of the earth that was caſt in to make it up, by raiſing the ground that lay, formerly, too low. Nor is it needful to put into the text, as ſome do, the gate; it being ſufficient to ſay, the trees wherein the ſupport, at Shallecheth conſiſts. For the better clearing whereof, it is to be obſerved, that toward the Weſt-ſide of the Temple, there was a cauſey, or a terrace, 1 Chro. 26. 16. that reached from the temple unto the kings palace; and by it the king uſed to go up unto Gods houſe, 2 Chro. 9. 4. Now on either ſide of this cauſey, or terrace, it is ſuppoſed, that there was a goodly row of trees, as to beautifie the paſſage, (which made the Queen of Saba, among other things that ſhe ſaw in Solomons court, to admire it, 1 King. 10. 5.) ſo to keep up the earth, that it might not moulder away, and ſo the cauſey come, in time, to decay. Unto theſe trees, therefore, are the faithful, among Gods people, compared: as thoſe, for whoſe ſake the nation was yet kept in being, and not brought to utter ruine.

ſo the holy ſeed ſhall be the ſubſtance thereof] The application of the former ſimilitude. The ſmall number of the truly godly, ſhall be to their land, or State, as thoſe trees are to the cauſey, whoſe banks they bear up; as ſupports, and ſhores to ſuſtain it from being utterly brought to nought. See Somewhat the like, Job 22. 30. and according to ſome, Prov. 10. 25.

ſo] The note of ſimilitude is concealed; as Prov. 26. 11.

the holy ſeed] Not the holy ſeed, in regard of profeſſion only, and external ſanctification, being taken into league and covenant with God, as Ezr. 9. 2. But the ſeed truly, and ſincerely holy, in heart and life, anſwerable to what they profeſſed, ch. 4. 3. & 62. 12. Heb. a ſeed of holineſs; for an holy ſeed: as an hill of holineſs; for an holy hill, Pſal. 15. 1. a ſeed of God; for a godly, or precious ſeed, Mal. 2. 15: thoſe choice ones, which God reſerves as ſeed to propagate his Church, Rom. 11. 15. Thoſe that reſtrain this to Sennacheribs invaſion, do hereby underſtand thoſe few godly in Jeruſalem; for whoſe ſake God then ſaved the city: But that ſeems too narrow.

ſhall be the ſubſtance] Or, ſupport; as before: or as a ſupport; as a pillar ſupporting: the note of ſimilitude (as Pſalm 11. 1.) wanting.

thereof] Either of the land, before ſpoken of, ver. 12. or of the tenth, mentioned in the beginning of this verſe.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. AND it came paſs, &c.] Here beginneth the firſt Sermon of Iſaiah recorded in this book; which he makes entrance into, by relating the occaſion of it; to wit, the fear that Ahaz king of Judah was ſurprized with, upon tidings brought him, that the kings of Iſrael and Aram, were entred into a league and confederacy againſt him; whereupon the Prophet is ſent, by God, unto him, partly, to ſtay his heart, by aſſuring him, both of the vain attempt, and ſpeedy deceaſe ſhortly to enſue, of thoſe two kings that made account to divide his kingdom between them; and partly, to foretel him of what evil ſhould befal his land, from the king of Aſſyria, whom he truſted too much unto. Withal Interlacing, by the way, that remarkable prophecy concerning the Meſſias, to be born of a virgin; the onely ſure ſtay for men to reſt and relye on, in all difficulties and diſtreſſes.

And it came to paſs] Or, Now it came to paſs. For this diſcourſe hath no connexion at all, with, or dependance upon the viſion, or prophecy, next before going: They being of divers dates, and delivered in ſeveral kings reigns; that of Jotham, this of Ahaz; as in the front of either is expreſſed. Heb. And it was: of which, ſee ch. 22.

in the dayes of Ahaz] See ch. 1. 1. dayes, and Ahaz. This is the third king, under whom Iſaiah propheſied; who, though a moſt wicked king, yet had he more then one, and thoſe alſo very comfortable prophecies under him; for the ſupport of the faithful that lived in thoſe bad times. So that Iſaiah ſeemed to have been under Ahaz, as Elias under Ahab.

the ſon of Jotham the ſon of Uzziah king of Judah] The Jewiſh Doctors move a queſtion here, Why ſo wicked a king ſhould have his genealogy thus expreſſed? and they tell us, it is in regard of the piety of his two progenitors, therein ſpecified; to intimate, that it was not for his, but for their ſakes, that the enemy could not prevail then againſt him. But this is one of their groundleſs conjectures. We know well, that it is a thing not unuſual in Scripture, to genealogize, as well bad as good, Jer. 22. 18. & 26. 1. & 27. 1. And it may well be, that the Prophet mentioneth theſe, becauſe he had under theſe, and theſe onely hitherto propheſied.

that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the ſon of Remaliah, went up, &c.] Concerning the time of this expedition, there is ſome doubt made; which to remove, we are, out of the ſacred Story, to obſerve a twofold expedition of theſe two kings, and their forces, againſt Judah, under Ahaz. The former, in the very beginning of his reign; having made ſome attempt before to that purpoſe, towards the latter end of Jothams reign, 2 King. 15. 37. But that done by them ſeverally; the Syrians by themſelves, and the Iſraelites by themſelves: and then they mightily prevailed, 2 Chro. 28. 5, 8. The latter, ſometime after, when having ſeverally found ſuch ſucceſs before; they made full account, now joyning their forces together, to make a full conqueſt of them; eſpecially, being ſo low brought by their ſeveral invaſions before. But in this they prevailed not, 2 King. 16. 5. And this, not the other, is that which is here mentioned: and ſeems to have been in the third, or at the furtheſt, about the beginning of the fourth year of king Ahaz; for within the fourth of his reign was Pekah ſlain; that is, in the twentieth, from the beginning of Jothams reign, who reigned but ſixteen, 2 King. 15. 30, 33.

Rezin] See of him, 2 King. 15. 37.

Syria] Heb. Aram. As alſo it is found tearmed by ancient Greek writers. See Strabo, lib. 1. & 13. & 16. The country confining on the land of Judah, Eaſtward, ch. 9. 11. Was ſo called, from Aram; one of Shems ſons, whoſe poſterity ſometime poſſeſſed it. Gen. 10. 22. It was divided into divers Regions, Hence Padan-Aram, Gen. 25. 20: and Aram Naharajim, or Meſopotamia, Gen. 24. 10. Aram Zoba, Pſal. 60.

title, 2 Sam. 8.3. & 10.6. And to paſs by others, Aram of Damaſcus: that is, whereof Damaſcus was the head-city, 2 Sam.8.6. And of this Aram of Damaſcus, was Rezin king; of the other parts of it, how far, is uncertain. See ver. 8. & ch. 9. 12. Syria, it is by ſome ſuppoſed ſo to have been called from Shur, mentioned, Gen. 25. 18. Though ſome other rather think, from the famous haven-Town, Tyre, in hebrew tearmed, Tſor, in Syriak, Tſur; and thence the whole country, Suria, and Syria; for they mould two countries into one, that ſuppoſe it called Syria, for Aſſyria; as Spania, ſometime, for Hiſpania. See ch. 23. 1.

Pekah king of Iſrael] King of the ten tribes, after their revolt from Davids houſe, under Rehoboam, commonly called Iſrael, as diſtinct from Judah. See ch. 1. 1. Judah. Of Pekah, ſee 2 King. 15. 27, &c.

went up] Some conceive this tearm here uſed, either becauſe the land of Judah was a mountainous country, and ſo higher then that from whence they advanced; or becauſe Jeruſalem was ſcituate on an hill; (though it were rather on a knob, in a plain, Jer. 17.3. and environed with hills, Pſal. 121. 1. & 125. 2.) and that therefore it is ſaid, thither the tribes go up, Pſal. 122. 4. Though that is, but as we are ſaid to go up to London, from all parts of the land; becauſe that is our chief city. But beſides that, the words of aſcending, and deſcending, are in the hebrew tongue, frequently uſed for going forth or forward, ſimply, without any reference to the ſcituation for height, or lowneſs of the places, towards which men advance. Of which, ſee chap. 38. 8. & Jer. 34. 20. & 37. 5. where the Chaldeans are ſaid to go up, that is, to go away, or depart from Jeruſalem. It is, beſides this, a peculiar phraſe in that language, to ſay of Kings, or Commanders; that they aſcend, or go up, when they go forth upon any expedition, when they go out unto war: ſo Horam went up to help Lachiſh, Joſh. 18. 33. and Joſhua with all Iſrael, went up to aſſault Hebron, Joſh. 10. 36. And as here the Syrian is ſaid to go up, againſt Judah; ſo is Ahab ſaid to go up againſt the Syrian, Go up and proſper, 1 King. 22. 6, 12.

towards Jeruſalem] Or, againſt Jeruſalem. The prepoſition is wanting; as 1 King. 3. 13. Of Jeruſalem, ſee ch. 1. 1.

to war againſt it] Or, unto war with it. Becauſe of the war he had with it, or againſt it: ſo it is the noun, not the verb, that is here uſed. So Jer. 46. 3.

but could not prevail againſt it] The Lord not permitting it, but inhibiting them from ſo doing. Heb. could not war: the noun was before; the verb is here. And it is uſed, ſometime by a trope, eſpecially with the particle here ſubjoyned, not barely for to war; but in warring to prevail. So Num. 22.11. Deut. 20. 19. Jer. 21. 2. And ſo 2 King. 16.5. They beſieged Ahaz, but could not war; that is, prevail by ſurprizing him, or his city.

could not] Heb. he could not. Where the Jewiſh Doctors make a needleſs debate, why the Prophet ſhould ſpeak in the ſingular number, when as there were two of them, Rezin, and Pekah: and the reaſon, in general, they give, is, becauſe the one of them commanded in chief; (which ſome would have to be Rezin; others of them to be Pekah) and the other was but as adjutant, and ſubſervient to him. But there is no need to flye unto ſuch nicities, and uncertainties; the verb ſingular is uſed, as the other of going up, before, in a way not uſual, where an action wherein two have a joynt hand, is by a verb ſingular attributed unto either. He could not; that is, neither of them could. And ſo 2 King. 16. 5. in the plural, they could not; as alſo the Greek, and Latine, have both here.

V. 2. And it was told the houſe of David, ſaying] Thus was the preparation of theſe two Kings: now followeth the effect, that the tydings of it, brought to Achaz his Court, had with him.

the houſe of David] The Jewiſh Doctors move a queſtion, why he ſaith not to Achaz, but to the houſe of David? and they ſay, that he is not named, becauſe he was a moſt ungodly man. Davids houſe is named, in regard of the promiſes made to him, and his houſe, 2 Sam. 7.25. But it is enough for this manner of ſpeech, that Ahaz, how wicked ſoever, was of the lineage of David; and his Court, therefore, is termed Davids houſe: as the Throne he ſate on, is termed Davids Throne; even then, when the worſt Kings ſate in it; as well as when better, Jer. 13.13. & 22.2. and the rather, he ſaith, the houſe of David here, as alſo v. 13. becauſe, as he ſpeaks there; ſo the news was brought here, not to the King alone, but to his Princes alſo, and to other the officers of his houſe. So Jer. 21. 12.

Syria is confederate with Ephraim] The Syrians and the Iſraelites are entred into a league and confederacy againſt you.

Syria] The King of Syria, and his Kingdom.

is confederate with] Heb. reſteth upon; relyeth upon him for aſſiſtance. For men are ſaid to reſt, or rely upon thoſe, whom they truſt to, as chap. 10. 20. Others render it, is ſet down with him. He hath joyned his camp with his: and ſo is the word of reſting uſed, v. 19. and the particle here uſed, ſometime ſignifies with, as Exod. 35. 22. or, is ſet down in his country. For the ſame particle alſo, ſignifies in, as ch. 38. 20. yet ſome conceive the word, which we tranſlate, reſteth, to be of another root, that ſignifies, to lead; and ſo render it, hath led, or brought his Army to Ephraim. And ſome would have the letters tranſpoſed, to make it ſignifie, hath pitched his camp. But that is not ſo improbable; but this is as preſumptuous. Such ſupplies, where needleſs; and changes, where groundleſs, are not to be admitted. The ſence is apparent, flowing, not unfitly, from either of the former, that they had entred into a mutual confederacy, and joyned their forces together; and that Rezin having got Pekah to joyn with him, made no doubt now, but to make an abſolute conqueſt of Judah.

Ephraim] Iſrael. Or, the ten Tribes; whereof Ephraim being a chief one, Gen. 48.29. doth oft-times give the denomination to that whole State. So ch. 28.1. Hoſ. 12. 1. Beſides, that the firſt King that reigned over the ten Tribes, after their revolt from Davids houſe, was an Ephramite, 1 King. 11. 26. and the chief ſeat of that Kingdome, to wit, Samaria, was ſcituate in that Tribe, 1 King. 16. 24. verſ. 9.

and his heart was moved, and the hearts of his people] Their hearts ſhook, or were ſhaken. For the word ſignifies ſuch a motion, or concuſſion, as in liveleſs bodies is cauſed by ſome over-powring force, or violence uſed to them. We had it before uſed of the poſts, or tranſomes of the Temple, chap. 6. verſ. 4.

as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind] Heb. from the face of the wind. That is, by the blaſt, or force of it. So Pſal. 68. 1, 2. & 83. 13. their hearts quaked, and quivered, as we ſay, lik an aſpen leaf, within them. An elegant expreſſion of the extremity and baſeneſs of their fear, arguing no ſpirit, or courage at all in them. Though I ſuppoſe it over-nice, which the Jewiſh Doctors here obſerve, that therefore Achaz his trembling is compared, rather to the trees of the wood, then any other; becauſe fruitleſs trees make more noyſe then ſuch as bear fruit: rather, becauſe thoſe that ſtand in the wood, or on the waſt, whether fruitful, or fruitleſs; are more expoſed to the force of wind and ſtorm, then ſuch as are planted in places of ſome ſhelter. Now the ground of this their exceſſive fear, ſeems to have been, from what they had felt, and ſuffered before: for having been ſo beaten, and ſuch havock lately made of them, by either of theſe, ſeverally invading them, they ſuppoſed it could not be avoided, but that they would make an utter conqueſt of them, having joyned both their forces together, (ſee ſomewhat the like, 2 King. 10.4.) and in regard hereof, they were inſtantly upon diſpatching of meſſengers, for ayd, unto the King of Aſſyria; which God ſends here to diſſwade them from, 2 King. 16. 5, 7.

V. 3. Then ſaid the Lord unto Iſaiah] In this their conſternation, God ſends his Prophet to Ahaz, as another, ſometime, to Ahab, in the like perplexity, 1 King. 20.13. (though both very wicked men) to ſtay, and ſtrengthen him and his, by giving aſſurance of deliverance, from what they ſo much feared; the ſubverſion of their State, and ſurprizal of their city.

unto Iſaiah] For, unto me, who write this. The noun for the pronoun; as ch. 2.1. & 13.1.

Go forth now to meet Ahaz] God ſends the Prophet to him, though he neither ſeek to God, nor ſend to the Prophet; which Jehoſaphat, and Hezekiah, in the like caſe did, 2 Chr. 20.3. ch. 37.2. Thus doth he prevent, even the wicked ofttimes, with mercies, beyond, not their deſerts only, but their expectations and deſires.

go forth] Not out of thine houſe only, but out of the city. For the place where he was to meet Ahaz, was without the city.

to meet Ahaz] To him, eſpecially, he is ſent, becauſe he was moſt ſtricken with fear; and the buſineſs moſt concerned him and his ſafety.

thou, and Shear-jaſhub thy ſon] He is willed to take his ſon with him, not as ſome would have it, to be as a witneſs of the delivery of his meſſage, or to add ſome authority thereto, as ch. 8. 2. (for what could ſo young a childs preſence in that kind do?) but, becauſe he was to make uſe of him in his ſpeech to Ahaz, as a ſign to aſſure him of that deliverance, which from God he brought him tydings of, ver. 16. His name was given him, in a Prophetical way, by Gods ſpeciall appointment; as was alſo the name of our Prophets other ſon, ch. 8. 3. and the names of Hoſhea's children, Hoſ. 1. 4, 6, 9. It ſignifies, a remnant ſhall return; as foretelling a reſerve of ſome portion of people, that ſhould, as ſome, return to their own homes, after the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Sennacherib, broken up, having fled thither for ſuccour and ſafety before. Or, as others, that ſhould return to their land again, from the Chaldean captivity: or, as others again, that in all times, even of the heavieſt calamities, ſome ſhould be reſerved, to riſe and return again to their former condition, as a ſeed preſerved for the perpetuating of Gods people, ch.6.13. Yet ſome render it, the remnant ſhall be converted; ſhall return to the Lord, being purged and purified by their foregoing calamities; and reformed, and reclaimed from their former aberrations: and ſo we find it applyed, ch.10.20,21. and was to be verified alſo in thoſe gracious reſerves. See chap. 6. 13. They pull the text aſſunder, that would read it, Jaſhub thy ſon, that is left, (for ſo the Greek and Latine render it) ſo called, ſay ſome of them, becauſe he was ſaved, when ſo many thouſands were ſlain in one day, 2 Chr. 28.6. or, becauſe he ſtaid with his Father the Prophet, when Rabſhakeh his other ſon, (a Jewiſh tale) revolted to the Aſſyrians in diſcontent; and they force it no leſs, who would enforce it to ſpeak, with the Chaldee, not of any natural ſon of the Prophet; but of ſome of his Diſciples, whom he had (as Paul ſaith of Oneſimus, Philem. 10.) begotten to God by his Miniſtery, and brought to repentance, and which continued ſtill ſtedfaſt with him, when many other had fallen from him.

at the end of the conduit of the upper pool] The place where Ahaz at that time was, as ſome think, haſting unto the City, upon the news brought him of the intended invaſion, while he was ſome-where elſe abroad; as other ſuppoſe, being thereupon come out of the City, to view the places neer about it, and conſider what was fit to be done with them; eſpecially ſuch places, as afforded any great quantity of water, either to make them uſeful for himſelf; or to hinder the enemy from help or relief by them, as expecting a ſiege. And this is the more likely, for that we read the like courſe taken by Hezekiah on the like occaſion, 2 Chr. 32. 3, 4. chap. 22. 9. Yet ſome think, that he was only walking there upon pleaſure, being a place, though without the City, yet not far from his Palace: and there, therefore, Rabſhakeh made a ſtand, when he came to ſummon Hezekiah in his Maſters name, to ſurrender to him the city, chap. 36.2. 2 King.18.17. But it is not probable, that Ahaz amidſt ſo great fears, ſhould have much luſt to make walks out on pleaſure. Yet it is ſomewhat obſerveable, that God ſhould ſend the Prophet to encourage Ahaz, and aſſure him of deliverance from God, in that very place, in which he was afterwards by that blaſphemous wretch ſo railed on and reviled, and deſtruction, in ſpight of him and what he could do, threatned to the city.

the conduit] The word in Hebrew, ſignifies a going up, or aſcent; and it is uſed ſometime for a trench, made to receive water, 1 King.18.32,35. Sometime for a water-courſe, Ezek. 31.4. and it is here taken, not for a conduit, (ſuch as ours are) to receive water derived from the pool; (though ſome ſo expound it) but for that paſſage, by which the water was from the ſpring-head conveyed unto the pool. As the word of aſcending, is uſed oft for to paſs, Numb. 19. 26, 27. 1 Sam. 6. 20.

of the pool] The word is commonly deemed to have a notion of bleſſing in it. Whereupon our Jewiſh Doctors take liberty here to deſcant upon it; and to tell us, that this pool was ſo termed, becauſe the water that fed it, came from a bleſſed place. But, beſide that the name is common to all pools, in general; though the more common opinion be, that pools are in Hebrew ſo termed, either becauſe that fiſh multiply in them, by vertue of that primordial bleſſing, Gen. 1. 22. or becauſe they are fed and increaſed with the bleſſings of rain from above, (whence the various readings, by reaſon of the ambiguity of the word, Pſal.84.6. the rain fills the pools, or, the rain of bleſſings; that is, large, and liberal ſhowres, Ezek. 34.26. covereth them) or, becauſes watry places, being ordinarily more fertile, are deemed therefore to be accompanied with a bleſſing, ch. 32.20. Judg.1.15. (in which place, there is hence alſo a diverſe reading, give me a pool; or, give me a bleſſing:) Yet others ſuppoſe them to be ſo called, from the depreſſion, or lowneſs of the ground, where they are uſually ſcituate. The root from whence the word comes, ſignifying as well to ſtoop low; as to bleſs.

the upper pool] A place incloſed on the South-ſide of the city, to receive and retain of the water that iſſued from the fountain of Gihon, which the Chaldee, and ſome other, make to be the ſame with Siloah; in regard whereof, it is alſo termed, the pool of Siloah, Neh.3.15.. Joh.9.8. and the Kings pool, Neh.2.14. and it is here called the upper; becauſe it was ſcituate beſide the upper city, on the South, neer the Kings garden, Neh.3.15. to diſtinguiſh it from the lower pool, ch. 22. 9. that lay beſide the lower city on the Weſt, 2 Chr.32. 30. & 33.14. Neh.3.16.

in the high-way] Heb. in the cauſey, or caſt-way. As ch. 11. 16. & 19.22. oppoſed to a way that is not caſt up, where no cauſey is, Jer.18.15. that which beareth ſomewhat another ſence, then the term of high-way, doth with us. See ch. 35. 8. & 40. 3.

of the fullers field] That is, that leadeth to it. It ſeems there was a cauſey that reached from this pool to a field not far diſtant from it, where the Fullers uſed to dreſs and dry their cloth, having their dwellings neer adjoyning to it, and making choyce of that place, for that purpoſe, in regard of the pool affording plenty of water, which they had much uſe of. And this is more probable, then what ſome others have, that the cauſey here mentioned, ſhould be a cauſey ſcituate between the two pools, the upper, and the lower, reaching from the one, to the other.

V. 4. And ſay unto him] Heb. Thou ſhalt ſay; as chap. 6. 9.

Take heed, and be quiet] The meſſage that God ſends the King by the Prophet; the ſum whereof is, that he ſhould not be ſo diſturbed and diſquieted, as he was.

Take heed, and be quiet] The Jewiſh Doctors are ſomewhat curious here about the former word; which, in regard that the word ſignifies lees of wine, (of which, ſee ch.25.6.) comes from the verb here uſed, they will not have it rendred here, as elſe-where generally, take heed; but, reſt on thy lees: according to that of Moab, Jer. 48. 11. he is ſetled on his lees; that is, ſay they, reſt content with ſuch power as thou haſt of thine own, without ſeeking of ayds from Aſſyria, or any other abroad. And it is true indeed, that in the latter term, (which ſome render, be ſilent: Others rather, be quiet, as the word is moſt commonly uſed) as much is implyed, ch. 30. 15. where in quietneſs, and confidence, is their ſafety ſaid to conſiſt; that is, in forbearing to ſeek to and fro for ſuccours abroad, and relying on Gods aſſiſtance: but there is no need here to ſtrain the word to ſuch a far-fetcht notion, from that which it generally ſignifies, and doth exceeding well fit the place. Nor are there wanting of ours, who, though not ſo ſtraining the word, yet in the expoſition of it, ſwerve from the intendment of the Prophet; ſome underſtanding it, as an admonition given the King, to be more wary; and not to venture his perſon ſo abroad: which were rather to diſcourage, then to encourage him, contrary to the end that he was ſent for. Others, as an advice, to ſet Sentinels, and keep watch and ward diligently; as implying, that God, though he gave aſſurance of ſafety, yet would not have induſtry neglected. But that had been but to ſpur on a running horſe. There needed no inciting of him, unto that which he was forward enough unto of himſelf; and in likelihood, looking after at that very time when the Prophet came to him. See on v. 3. The former word hath reference to the latter. And it is no more then as if he had ſaid, take heed how thou beeſt thus unquiet, and reſtleſs. Or, ſee by any means, that thou keep quiet: be not diſturbed and diſtracted, but quiet thy mind; and look not out for forreign helps; but reſt on that ayd, that God ſhall by thine own forces aſſiſting them, or otherwiſe working for thee, afford thee. Like Moſes his ſpeech to the Iſraelites, purſued by Pharaoh, Exod.14.13. and Jahaziels to Jehoſhaphat, and his people, 2 Chr.20.15,17. Take heed, and be quiet, for, take heed thou be quiet: as, take heed, ſee my face no more; for, take heed thou ſee my face no more, Exod. 10.28. Take heed of him, and obey his voice; for, take heed that thou do obey his voice, Exod.23.21. Take heed, regard not iniquity, for, take heed that thou regard not iniquity, Job 36.21.

fear not, neither be faint-hearted] The ſame in effect, in other terms repeated, to put the more courage into him, and the better to ſettle his unſetled thoughts. Heb. let not thine heart be tender; be not ſoft-hearted. Softneſs being oppoſed to firmneſs, becauſe ſoft things are ready to yeeld, and give in, upon the leaſt force or touch, and to receive impreſſion from every approaching object. See the like phraſe, Deut. 28.3. Jer. 51. 46. a ſoft heart, therefore, is put for ſuch a weak, faint, tender, timorous, childiſh, or effeminate diſpoſition, as hath no courage, or manlineſs at all in it, 2 Chr. 13. 8. as faith or confidence makes the heart firm, Heb.11.27. ſo diſtruſt and diffidence, makes it to faint and flutter, Luk. 12. 29.

for the two tails of theſe ſmoaking fire-brands] Thus the Prophet ſpeaks in way of contempt of thoſe two Kings, and their forces, which were ſo formidable to this King and his people, and came on with ſuch fury and fierceneſs, as if with fire and ſword they were reſolved to deſtroy all before them; and made full account ſo without reſiſtance to carry it. He calls them, in deriſion, not two fire-brands, which yet were not much to be feared, unleſs it were in ſome very light matter, Zach.12.6. but two tails; that is, two ends of ſuch brands, in which fire is uſually kept, and thoſe two ends, not flaming, and burning, as thoſe of Sampſons between the foxes tails, Judg.15.4. (which yet ſome ſuppoſe, here alluded unto) but ſmoaking, as ch.42.3. So that though they may make ſome ſmother, yet have little fire, or force to do much hurt, in them, and are ready to go out, Pſal.118.12.

fire-brands] Which being taken off the hearth, remain not fire long, but after a while smoak only, and so at length go out. So Amos 4.11. Zech. 3.2. though there made use of another way. Howbeit, the Jewish Doctors, whom some of ours also here follow, affirm by the word here used, to be meant, not a fire-brand, but a rake-staff, or, stock; such as they use to stir the fire to and fro with in the oven; which when it is burnt so neer to the end, that it cannot longer be held in the hand safely, or further use made of it, is thrown away, and lyeth smoaking on the ground, till it go out. No unfit resemblance to illustrate that that is by the Prophet here intended. But the use of the word in those other places, carries it rather the former way. for the fierce anger] Heb. in the fierce anger: and so it is well rendred, Exod. 11. 8. 1 Sam. 20. 34. But so is the same particle also used, as it is here rendred, Neh. 5. 3. Esth. 4. 7. Psal. 150. 2.

fierce anger] Word for word, heat of nose. Because anger discovereth it self in the nose, Psalm 18. 8. So also ch. 13.9, 13. As if he had said, all their fiercenesſ, and fierinesſ of their fury, though they fume at the nose never so much, shall prove nothing but smoke.

of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah] The two brands ends before mentioned.

with Syria] Heb. and Syria. But so elsewhere, chap. 5. 14. The taber with pipe: and Neh. 12. 42. The singers sang with Jezrahiah their over-seer. So that, the King of Syria, with Syria; That is, all his Syrian forces put together, make but one brands end.

the son of Remaliah] So he calleth him in contempt, rather then by his proper name, Pekah; because his father Remaliah was but an obscure private person: and his son Pekah, might the rather therefore go for the tail of a brand. See ch. 9. 14.

Remaliah] Heb. Remalijahu; as Jeshajahu, ch. 1. 1. So constantly, ch. 8. 6.

V. 5. Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying] The words in the hebrew run thus, Because Syria hath consulted against thee evil; Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, saying. An elegancy of speech, not unusual in hebrew, in this Prophet especially: whereby divers acts, or attributes, are to divers subjects, as in way of distribution, severally applyed; whereas they are to be joyntly understood of either party; and alike appertain to either. See chap. 5. 13. For we are not to conceive it thus spoken; as if the one party had propounded, or contrived, and counselled; and the other concluded, and resolved: but they laid both their heads together, and agreed both joyntly upon the issue; as those Psal. 83. 3, 5.

Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah] God will scarce vouchsafe to give them their names.

Syria] Or, the Syrian, in contempt; For Rezin the King of Syria. See ver. 1, 4.

Ephraim] Israel, the ten tribes. See ver. 2.

the son of Remaliah] For, Pekah King of Israel. See ver. 4.

have taken evil counsel] Heb. have consulted evil; or, an evil thing: (for the Hebrews use the feminine for the neuter) Or, have upon consultation resolved evil; as 2 Chr. 25. 16. Jer. 49. 20, 30. See 6, 7.

V. 6. Let us go up against Judah, and vex it] The result of their fore-mentioned consultation to make war joyntly upon Judah.

go up] Of this phrase, see on ver. 1.

against Judah] That is, the kingdom of Judah, say some: the head, or head city of it, Jerusalem, say others: it may well comprehend both, and the land it self with them.

vex it] That is, weary them out; and so compell them to yeeld up to us, both themselves, and their city. Some other render the word, let us awake them, or, rouse them up: as if they lived securely, and expected no hostile Invasion; which is not so probable, having smarted so much, and that so lately also already. See on ver. 1. Or, as some others, let us make some disturbance among them, let us set them among themselves together by the ears; a ready course to make way for a forreign enemy to enter. But the translation we have is right, and confirmed by that which is objected against it. For whereas it is alleadged by some, that the verb in the form here expressed is not used, but for to awake, that is, to stir up, and to raise out of sleep; the contrary is true, that the word where it hath reference unto sleep, in that form, out of which, in such use, it is never read, though the form be usually active, yet hath alwayes a passive notion; and signifies, not to awake, or make one to awake, (to which purpose another word is ordinarily used, Cant. 2. 7. & 3. 5. & 8. 4.) but to be awaked, or to awake of ones self: as 2 King. 4. 31. Psal. 3. 5. & 44. 23. & 73. 20. and constantly elsewhere. And the sence here rendred, is further confirmed by the use of the same word in another form, with reference to these very words; ver. 16.

and let us make a breach therein for us] That is, as some; let us violently break in upon it, or, through it: as the word is used, 2 Sam. 23. 16. & 2 King. 3. 26. and as some expound that, Amos 1. 13. so it is said of the Arabians, that they brake into Judah, 2 Chr. 21. 17. and of Jerusalem, the city was broken up, Jer. 39. 2. Others, let us make a breach in it, to wit, among the people, which may be for us; that is, for our advantage, whereby the more readily to surprize it. Others, let us tear it away from the King thereof, and adjoyn, or annex it to our own territories, to our selves. Others, let us cut, or, divide it to our selves; that is, having parted it in twain, (as dividing the spoyl, before the field fought, or victory gotten, and making no doubt of a general conquest) let us share it between us, and take either his moity of it. And such complexive phrases in Scripture are oft found. See on ch. 6. 11. Howbeit, because the same form is used, where no such partition is; to wit, 2 Chr. 32. 1. where Sennacherib is said to have entred into Judah, and encamped against the fenced Cities thereof, to break, or, divide; or, by breaking, or, dividing, to wit, or to gain them, to, or, for himself: (wherein also, that complexive form of speaking is found) I suppose there is nothing more here intended, then that by a forcible surprisal of the land and Kingdom of Judah, they intended to make it theirs.

and set a King in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeel] Some read this clause by way of disjunction; or set a King in the midst of it. Let us either part it between us, or, if we cannot accord upon the partition, let us set up such an one for a King over it, that may be under our protection, and hold from us both. And it is not improbable, that their intent was to set up such a King, as might be in a kind of vassalage to them both; such as the Syrian sometime challenged the King of Israel to be to him, 2 King. 20. 2, 6. as also true it is, that the copulative is used oft, as a disjunctive, Gen. 2. 6. Exod. 21. 19. But of that there is no necessity here; because no such partition before necessarily implyed.

in the midst of it] In Jerusalem, the head city, or the center of it; or, in it, therein, simply, by a frequent Hebraism: as ch. 6. 12. ver. 22.

set a King —— even the son of Tabeel] Heb. let us make to reign in it as King, or, for King, the son of Tabeel. So 2 King. 8. 20. & 2 Chr. 21. 8. the Edomites made to reign over them a King. Who this son of Tabeel should be, there is much dispute and debate. Some Syrian, say some; for Tabeel, say they, is a Syrian name: as Tabrimon, 1 King. 15. 18. signifying a worshipper of the God Rimmon, 2 King. 5. 18. others, some Israelite; and as some of them conjecture, that Zichri the Ephramite, that slew the Kings son, and the chief about him; for the good service he then did, 2 Chr. 28. 7. The Jewish Rabbines, some of them by a trick of theirs, which they call Albam, make of Tabeel, Remala; but whether thereby they understand Remaliah, or no, they tell us not. But their device is this; they write the letters of the Hebrew in two lines, the one half thus, under the other.

Then they take them, as they stand in order, the upper, for the lower; and the lower for the upper: and so of טבאל they make רמלא. Another crotchet they have, which they call Athbash. Of which, see on Jer. 25, 26. Others, of them, whom some of ours also accord with, would have it no proper name; but to signifie such an one, as should seem good to us, or such an one as shall not be good for them. But neither will the word, with any reaching, well afford such a sence; nor is it probable, but that some certain person is designed, whose parent bare that name; though, who, and what he was, be uncertain, because no where else named: Yet of the same name we finde one, but of far later times, Ezr. 4. 7. whereby it appears to have been a name not unusual.

V. 7. Thus saith the Lord God] Gods sentence followeth concerning this their resolution; which they made no doubt but to bring about.

It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass] It, that is, this their counsel, or resolution, inclosed in the word, have consulted, ver. 5.

not stand] Things are said, in hebrew, to stand, when they take effect, Psal. 33. 11. The counsel, or purpose of the Lord shall stand: or are confirmed, and established, Numb. 30. 4, 7, 9. Deut. 19. 15. and on the other side, not to stand, but to fall to the ground, when they take not effect, but are frustrate, Numb. 30. 12. 1 Sam. 3. 19.

neither shall it come to pass] Heb. nor shall it be; chap. 8. 10. And this hath a further emphasis in it; for things may be produced into act, and so have an existence, and yet not be eſtabliſhed, nor continue; but this reſult of theirs ſhall never have any exiſtence; it ſhall go no further then words, it ſhall never come into act. Thus the Lord bringeth the counſel of nations to nought; and makes peoples devices of none effect, Pſal. 33. 11. thereby ſhewing, that there is no counſel againſt God, Prov. 21. 39.

V. 8. For the head of Syria is Damaſcus, and the head of Damaſcus is Rezin] Or, as ſome other, But the head of Syria ſhall Damaſcus be; and the head of Damaſcus ſhall Rezin be: that is, he ſhall continue that which he now is: to be, for, to continue: as Dan. 1. 21. So the meaning ſhould be; I have ſet theſe Kingdoms their limits, Act. 17. 26. and they ſhall not paſs the bounds that I have aſſigned them. As Damaſcus ſhall continue ſtill the head city of that part of Syria, 2 Sam. 8. 5. 2 Chr. 28. 5. ſo ſhall Rezin continue, while he lives, king of Damaſcus; and ſhall not be, as he makes account to be, King of Jeruſalem: nor ſhall Jeruſalem have any relation to Syria, but continue the mother-City of Judah, ſtill, as it is. This they; howbeit another reading may well be admitted, that neither forceth the text, and ſeems better to ſuit with that which enſueth; nor requireth any ſuch ſupply as this doth, to make the ſentence entire. And though, (for ſo the particle is frequently uſed, Joſh. 17. 18. Pſal. 23. 4. ch. 12. 1.) or, For though, (for one particle ſometime includes two: See on ch. 18. 5.) Damaſcus be the head of Syria, and Rezin the head of Damaſcus. Yet (ſo is the copulative oft taken, ch. 8. 9, 10. & 17. 6. & 49. 5. within ſixty and five years ſhall Ephraim be broken, —— and Samaria with her head, Remaliahs ſon, ſhall likewiſe be broken: as if he had ſaid, although the houſe of Iſrael carry it ſelf ſo high, relying on their confederacy with Rezin, who being King of Damaſcus, the head city of Syria, and by reaſon thereof, hath the greateſt part of that country at command; yet that ſhall not hinder: but that within the term of time here deſigned, the State of Iſrael ſhall be diſſolved, and Remaliahs ſon ſhortly ruined. And this I ſuppoſe to be the genuine ſence of the place. See v. 9.

and within threeſcore and five years ſhall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people] Concerning this prediction, and the ſtint of time mentioned in it, there is no ſmall difficulty. Since that, from the time of this Prophecy, about the third or fourth of Ahaz, as was formerly ſhewed, (ſee on v. 1.) unto the time that the ten tribes by Salmaneſer king of Aſſyria were removed out of their native ſoyl, and tranſported into other parts of his Dominions; nor had now any ſetled State, which was in the ſixth year of Hezekiah, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. cannot be above twenty three, or twenty four years at moſt; yea, there want not, that reduce them to a far narrower compaſs, to the ſpace of eleven years, two of Pekah, ch. 8. 4. and nine of Hoſhea, 2 King. 17. 6. which difference we ſhall not now ſtand to reconcile, becauſe it concerneth not this place. This knot ſome finding not how to untye, fall to cut it aſſunder. And pretending the original copies to be corrupted, would have ſix read for ſixty; as if the Prophet had ſaid, within ſix, and five, (that is, eleven,) years; ſhall Ephraim be broken from being a people: and juſt ſo many, ſay they, are reckoned from the time of this Prophecy, unto the ruine of Samaria, 2 King. 17. 6. But this, becauſe it ſeemeth over-bold with the text, and introduceth a ſtrange and unuſual kind of computation, we let paſs. The moſt generally received ſolution, given both by Jewiſh Doctors, and Chriſtian Writers, is, that the head of this account is to be fetched, not from the time that Iſaiah ſpake theſe words; but from the time when this diſſolution of the Iſraelitiſh State, was by the Prophet Amos fore-told. This they reckon two waies, Some make up their account by the reigns of the kings of Judah. Amos, ſay they, propheſied in the dayes of Uzziah, two years before the earthquake, Amos 1. 1. which was in his reign, Zach. 14. 5. And fell out, (as the Jewiſh tradition hath it) juſt at that time, when he preſſed into the temple to burn incenſe, and was ſmitten with the leproſie, 2 Chr. 26. 16, 20. This they preſume to have been in the twenty and ſeventh of his reign, two years before which Amos began to propheſie; to wit, in his twenty and fifth. Nor do they much ſwerve from this way of computation, who would have the number of years reckoned from that year, or the next after it, wherein Uzziah was ſo ſmitten: becauſe, ſay they, the Syrians then began (taking occaſion by the kings diſability) to make inroads on his land, 2 King. 15. 37. Though that ſeem rather to have been in Jothams reign; and, in likelihood, toward the latter end of it. But however that be; theſe agree with the former, in that, albeit they make Uzziah's irruption into the temple, two years ſooner then they: Yet both begin their computation from the ſame year, to wit, the twenty and fifth of Uzziah; and ſo caſt twenty and ſeven years of his reign (being, in all, two and fifty, 2 King. 15. 2.) into this account; unto which, if we add his ſon Jothams ſixteen, 2 King. 15. 23. Ahaz his ſixteen, 2 King. 16. 2: and ſix of Ezekiah's, (for in the ſixth of his reign was Samaria taken, and that State ruined by Salmaneſer, 2 King. 18. 10.) we have the juſt ſum of ſixty and five years. But againſt this computation, we have divers weighty exceptions. Firſt, there is nothing more then uncertain tradition, to aſſert the truth of that terrible earthquakes co-incidence, with that inconſiderate act of Uzziah. Secondly, it is not onely improbable, but undoubtedly untrue, that Uzziah was ſmitten with leproſie, either in the twenty and fifth, or in the twenty and ſeventh year of his reign. For his ſon, and ſucceſſour Jotham, was twenty and five years old at his fathers deceaſe, 2 Chr. 27. 1: and was conſequently born in the twenty and ſeventh of his reign, which ſhould be the very ſame year that he became a leper, according to the one; two year after that ſad occurrent, according to the other. Neither of which is agreeable to truth; The ſacred ſtory informing us, that Jotham was not either unborn, or an infant, when his father was ſo ſmitten: but of thoſe years that he was able, both to mannage the private affairs of the royal family, and to ſway the State. For ſo it is ſaid, that his father being ſequeſtred upon that occaſion, Jotham his ſon, was over the houſe, judging the people of the land, 2 King. 15. 5. Laſtly, it is objected, that Amos his prophecy, which is made the head of this account, was as well in Jeroboams, as in Uzziah's reign, whereas the year of Uzziah, which is here fixed on, was ſome ſpace of time, after Jeroboams deceaſe. For Uzziah began to reign in Jeroboams twenty and ſeventh year, 2 King. 15. 1: and Jeroboam reigning but fourty and one, 2 King. 14. 23. His laſt muſt fall in with the fourteenth of Uzziah's, ſome ten, or eleven ſhort of Uzziah's twenty fifth, the firſt year of their account. Others therefore to ſhun theſe difficulties, make their reckoning by the reigns of the Kings of Iſrael, and carry up their account to the ſeventeenth, or eighteenth of Jeroboam. From whoſe reign, taking either twenty and four years; and ſo not regarding the reigns of Zachary, and Shallum, his next ſucceſſors, that made up but ſeven moneths between them, 2 King. 15. 8, 13. or twenty and three years, reckoning one year for them: and thereunto adding Menahems ten years, 2 King. 15. 17. Pekahiahs two years, 2 King. 15. 23. Pekahs twenty, 2 King. 15. 27. and Hoſheahs nine, 2 King. 17. 6: they make the ſum, without any overplus, compleat. But we meet in Scripture again with that which diſturbs alſo this courſe of account: For we read there, that Zachery, Jeroboams ſon, began his reign in the thirty and eighth year of Uzziah, 2 King. 15. 8. Now his fathers laſt falling in with the fourteenth of Uzziah; there muſt of neceſſity be an interval of, at leaſt two, or three and twenty years, between the deceaſe of the father, and the ſhort reign of the ſon; ſuppoſed to have fallen out by the infancy of the ſon, at his fathers deceaſe; neglected therefore, and not regarded, while others governed, until that coming to ſome maturity of years, he gat the reins into his hand, but held them not long. Now theſe years, taken in, will make the product ariſe far above the ſum, mentioned here in the text. Nor doth it add any ſtrength, therefore, to either of theſe computations, to tell us, as ſome of prime note do, and that very confidently, though without any colour of ground for it; that this number of years was formerly defined by Amos, and paſſing by tradition, from one to another, was common in mens mouths, and therefore mentioned thus by the Prophet; nor what ſome other obſerve, that in Scripture computations are ſometime made, not from the time of any matter in preſent diſcourſe, but from ſome other fore-paſt: and not there, or then, at all mentioned. To which purpoſe they produce that of Abſolom, who having obtained liberty of acceſs to Court again, is ſaid, after fourty years, to have entred into a conſpiracy, 2 Sam. 15. 7. Which years are not to be reckoned, either from his return from exilement, or his repair again to Court; but from ſome other remakable team of time, no more expreſſed, then this in the text. For as the former is a meer preſumption: ſo this latter, is but a miſapplication of matters incomplient; the tenor of the ſpeech, running far diverſly, in the one, and the other. At the end of fourty years, ſuch a thing was done, ſaith the one: and yet ſixty and five years, and ſuch a thing ſhall be done, ſaith the other. But all theſe difficulties may be eaſily cut off, if we underſtand the words, as one would have them; not to intend any ſet ſtint of the ſtanding, or fall of that State: but of the time onely, at which the fall of it was fore-told: for on this wiſe he gives us the ſence of them. Samaria ſhall fall, as was ſixty an five years ago fore-told by Amos. Which being preſumed to be the minde of the Prophet, the account may ſoon be made up. For begin we at the ſixth year of Uzziah, concurring with the thirty and third of Jeroboam; there will remain fourty and ſix of Uzziah's reign: unto which, adding the ſixteen of Jothams, and the three firſt of Ahaz's; we have what we deſire. But this Author muſt firſt ſhew us, how this notion of his can be made up, by any grammatical conſtruction out of the words of the text; which indeed he doth not, nor can it be done. Thus then having conſidered the computations of thoſe who fetch the head of the account backward, from before the time of Iſaiah's delivery of this prophecy; and either ending it, ſome ſpace of time after, or ſetting no period or ſtint of it at all: We do not meet with in them any ſatisfactory ſolution of the doubt, concerning it, moved. And undoubtedly the words ſeem evidently to carry it on entire to the future. Now, as in the former, the main queſtion was concerning the head of the reckoning; ſo the difference here is moſt about the other tearm, the end of it. The moſt ſuppoſe it, to end at the taking of Samaria by Salmaneſer the king of Aſſyria, in the ninth year of Hoſheahs reign; and the ſixth of Ezekiahs, 2 King. 18. 9, 10. But that account falling (as hath been ſhewed) at leaſt fourty years ſhort; ſince that taking the riſe of it from Ahaz his firſt; (which is earlier, in likelihood, by two, or three year, more then ſhould be) and adding to his ſixteen, 2 King. 17. 1, 2. Ezekiahs ſix; the moſt that can be produced, is but twenty two years; fourty and three ſhort of ſixty five. To ſalve this, ſome take hold of the Hebrew, that it is not ſaid, Yet, barely; as Jon. 3. 4. Yet forty dayes, and Nineveh ſhall be deſtroyed; but word for word, as Jer. 28. 3. in yet, that is, within ſixty and five year, &c. which is truly accompliſhed, if at any time within that compaſs, though never ſo many years before the expiration thereof, it be fulfilled. And this is true indeed. But neither is God wont to ſet ſuch large ſtints of time, concerning matters to be concluded within a far ſcanter compaſs; and much leſs to cut out computations ſo preciſely, not in ſome one, whole, and entire; but in broken numbers, as here, ſixty and five, where an exact account is not punctually intended. Nor had it been agreeable to what God himſelf, and the Prophet herein propounded; to wit, the encouraging of Ahaz againſt the fear of theſe his enemies, to enlarge the limit of their appointed fall, in the acquainting of him with it; ſo far beyond the ſet point of time, in Gods ſecret purpoſe aſſigned thereunto. It had been far greater matter of encouragement to him, to tell him, that within ſome twenty five, then within ſixty five year Ephraim ſhould ceaſe to be a State. This courſe therefore of ſalving the account of thoſe, that reckon from Ahaz his, though firſt, to Hoſheahs laſt, carrying little colour of probability with it; ſome try to help it another way, of as little likelihood as the former. The ſum, ſay they, here mentioned, is the tearm that God, by his Prophet, prefixed for continuance of that State; but for the exceſs of their ſins, God haſtned their overthrow, and cut the ſum a great deal ſhorter; brought it down, from ſixty five, to twenty five, or ſomewhat lower. It is true indeed, that in Scripture we finde reverſions of Gods, both promiſes and menaces, upon mans worſe, or better carriages; and himſelf aquaints us with his courſes, either way, in that kinde, Jer. 18. 7, 10. But that God hath, at any time, cut ſhort any preciſe term of time, peremptorily ſet, for the execution of a judgment, I ſuppoſe no example can be produced; and there is little reaſon to admit that here, which we have no preſident of elſewhere. In the laſt place therefore, ſome late writers conclude this account, not at Salmaneſers ſurprizal of Samaria, and deportation of the main body of the ten tribes; but at a far later, utter removal of them by Eſarhaddon; who ſucceeded Senacherib his father, in the kingdom of Aſſyria, ch. 37. 38. This they gather from Ezr. 4. 2. where thoſe, whom the Jews upon their return from Babylon, found inhabiting in thoſe parts; affirm that they were brought thither by Eſar-haddon; and had continued there ever ſince. That which they deem to have been done, when that king of Aſſyria, by his Captains invading Judah, took Manaſſes priſoner, whom he kept ſome ſpace of time alſo, in bonds, at Babel, 2 Chro. 33. 11: and withal ſwept away the remainder of thoſe that Salmaneſer had left; in the room whereof he placed thoſe mentioned in Ezra. From the third then, or fourth of Achas, at what time this was by Iſaiah delivered, (of which, ſee on ver. 1.) unto the twenty and third, or fourth year of Manaſſes, about which time he is preſumed to have been captived, and the reſidue of the ten tribes taken away; taking in the latter twelve, or thirteen, of Ahaz his reign, and the twenty nine of Ezekiahs, 2 Chr. 29. 1. the whole product will be, juſt ſixty and five years. And this ſeems the moſt probable computation of this ſum, and expoſition of the place.

ſhall Ephraim be broken] As ch. 14. 25. Or, deſtroyed; as Jer. 48. 4. Or, broken in pieces; as Jer. 50. 2.

that it be not a people] Heb. from a people; or from being a people, Jer. 33. 10. & 48. 42. So ch. 17. 1.

V. 9. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria; and the head of Samaria, is Remaliahs ſon] Or as others, And the head of Ephraim ſhall be Samaria; and the head of Samaria, ſhall Remaliahs ſon be: as before of Damaſcus, and Rezin, verſ. 8. Samaria ſhall continue ſtill the head city of Pekahs kingdom; and Pekah for that ſhort time that he hath to reign, and live, the king of it; and not of Jeruſalem, which he ſhall have no power to diſpoſe of. Howbeit, ſome would rather knit theſe words with the verſe next before going; and render them together thus; For the head of Syria, Damaſcus, and the head of Damaſcus, Rezin; (ſhall be broken in pieces; which is ſupplyed from the next branch) Thus after ſixty and five years ſhall Ephraim be broken from being a people; together with the head of Ephraim, Samaria; and the head of Samaria, Remaliahs ſon. To which purpoſe alſo ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, do in the former verſe, the latter clauſe, inſert, Aram, with Ephraim; reading the words, Aram, and Ephraim ſhall be broken in pieces. Elſe, ſay they, nothing ſhould here be ſpoken of the evil that ſhould befall Rezin and Syria; whereas the fall of both kingdoms are uſually joyned together in this prophecy, chap. 8. 4. & 17. 3. See verſ. 16. But theſe readings make over-bold with the text; and diſmember it over-much. I rather therefore chooſe to adhere to that reading, which was pointed to on ver. 8. And both the head of Ephraim, Samaria; and the head of Samaria, Remaliahs ſon, ſhall likewiſe be broken. This onely in the end, being ſupplyed from the former verſe. Then which manner of ſupply, nothing is more common in Scripture, Gen. 1. 16. 2 Chr. 10. 11. Job 3. 20, 23. & 9. 14. & 14. 5. & 16. 21. & 24. 19.

If ye will not believe, ſurely ye ſhall not be eſtabliſhed] If ye will not give credit to this meſſage which I bring you from God, and reſt on his gracious promiſes, whereby he engageth himſelf to you; if ye will rely on him, and not ſeek out to the Aſſyrians for aid and ſupport, to fruſtrate all the deſigns and attempts of theſe your adverſaries, whom you ſtand ſo much in fear of; and to protect you againſt them; ye will never proſper, nor be firmly ſetled, either in your State, or in your minds. It comes home to that, and drives to the ſame end, which that of Jehoſhaphat, to his people, doth, 2 Chron. 20. 20. Truſt on the Lord, ſo ſhall ye be eſtabliſhed: truſt to his Prophets, ſo ſhall ye proſper. The ſame thing, in effect, is in both places intended: the onely difference is, that it is propounded negatively, as by way of commination, in the one, with an intimation of ſome doubt made, not undeſervedly, of what they would do; it is laid down affirmatively, as by way of confident and comfortable aſſurance, in the other; and as with ſome hopeful expectation of that to be done by them, that was required of them. There is in either place an elegancy in the ſound of the words, which our Engliſh cannot expreſs. Some other readings there are here. To paſs by ſuch as have no footing in the words of the text: ſome render them thus; If ye believe not me, nor are ye faithful to God; according to that, Luk. 10. 16. Others, Do ye not believe? it is becauſe ye are not eſtabliſhed; but continue ſtill in your diffident fear and diſtruſt. Others, laſtly, Do you not believe, becauſe you are not confirmed? Becauſe that which I tell you, is not by ſome ſign confirmed to you? And ſo they ſuppoſe, way is made for the ſubſequent ſign. But the reading we have, ſeems moſt plain and proper; and to flow moſt naturally from the text.

ſurely] So is the particle here found, oft uſed, Gen. 3. 1. Exod. 3. 12. chap. 5. 7. Some ſuppoſe an ellipſis, in ſuch uſe of it; as if it were entire: truth it is, that it ſhall ſo be, or not be. Howbeit, we need not conceive ſuch a defect here, or make ſuch a ſupply, as ſome would enforce, as if it were of neceſſity thus to be read, it is a ſign that ye ſhall not be eſtabliſhed. Since that the particle is oft uſed, as a note of aſſeveration, where the word, ſign, admitted, will make no good ſence; as Pſal. 44. 21. Job 8. 6. & 20. 20. and 38. 1.

V. 10. Moreover, the Lord ſpake again unto Ahaz, ſaying] The Prophet, by Gods appointment, proceeds further to confirm Ahaz, whom he perceived ſtill to ſtagger, and doubt of what he had ſaid to him, by making him offer of a ſign.

Moreover] Heb. And. as chap. 3. 16. and ſo rather; then therefore, as ſome. Which though elſewhere it doth not amiſs, as Neh. 2. 20. & 5. 2. yet fitteth not here.

the Lord] God himſelf, ſay ſome, immediately. For, when Ahaz, ſay they, ſtood mute, and returned no anſwer to the Prophet, by his ſilence bewraying his diſtruſt, and incredulity of what the Prophet had delivered; the better to encourage and confirm him, God himſelf undertakes him, as he did Job ſometime, Job 38. 1. But the whole tenour of the context enſuing, ſhews the contrary, to wit, that God ſpake unto him ſtill by the Prophet.

ſpake again] Heb. added to ſpeak. An uſual Hebraiſm; of which, ſee ch. 1. 5. & 8. 5. Yet ſome would place an emphaſis in it, as implying, that though Ahaz continued in his wonted impiety and infidelity; yet God perſiſted in mercy and goodneſs to him.

V. 11. Ask thee a ſign of the Lord thy God] For the further confirmation of thy faith, and aſſurance of the truth of the word from him, told thee by me.

Ask thee] An uſual and elegant redundancy of phraſe, or manner of ſpeech, in moſt languages: it is in Scripture very riſe, Gen.12.1. 1 Chr.21.10. yet it is here deemed to have ſome weight to thee, or, for thee; that is, for thy behoof, for thy good, as Gen.13.11. 1 Sam.13.2. 1 King.3.5. 2 King. 4.3.

a ſign] Somewhat to be done, not ordinary, unuſual; ſuch as God is oft wont to annex to his promiſes, or threats, either to ſtrengthen mans infirmity concerning the one; or to meet with his obſtinacy concerning the other. See Judg.6.36, 40. chap.37.30. & 38.7,8. Jer.19.1,10. and 27.2. and 51.63.

of the Lord] Heb. from with Jehovah; or, from Jehovah: as Jer.11.1. From him, whoſe word it is; and who by ſuch means is alone able to give further aſſurance of it.

thy God] Whoſe people thou art king of, and whom thou profeſſeſt to ſerve, and oughteſt ſo to do. For the Scripture oft ſpeaks of things according to what ſhould be done; though it be not ever done accordingly, (ſo Prov.16.13. & 22.11. & 28.23.) or, according to what men do profeſs; though their practice concur not with their Profeſſion, chap.48.2. & 58.2.

ask it either in the depth, or in the height above] God putteth him to his choyce, for what ſign he will have, a great favor, and honour; had this wicked wretch had grace to make a right uſe of it. So did he ſometime alſo with Hezekiah, 2 King.20.8,9,10.

as in the depth] Heb. make deep petition; or, go deep in asking. So the moſt, agreeing in ſence; but differing in Grammar. For ſome of them would have the word of asking, here, a noun; and to ſignifie a petition, or requeſt. So it ſhould be, make deep requeſt, as chap.30.6. they have made deep revolt; but becauſe no noun ſo ſignifying, is found of that form: Others will have it a verb; and the moſt of them, an infinitive. So it ſhould be, make deep to ask; as Jer.49. 5,30. make deep, to dwell. But then there muſt be a ſupply underſtood, at leaſt, of a particle in this latter place, and ſo in moſt, if not all, where the like phraſe is found. But ſome, and ſo the Jewiſh Doctors, an imperative; which, though ſome of thoſe that mention it, reject, and the places by the Rabbines alleadged for it, are not ſo fit; Yet is it moſt conſonant to the uſual phraſe of the language; where both verbs ſo compoſed without that particle, are wont to be of the ſame mould. So Hoſ.9.9. they have made deep, have corrupted; for, they have deeply corrupted: and ſo here, make deep ask, for, ask deep. In like manner are the Hebrew Doctors divided; ſome going the one way, and ſome the other, about that, Pſal.51.2. multiply to waſh, or, multiply waſh me; for, waſh me oft, or, much, over and over, again and again; as if he could never be waſhed enough. The ſimple ſence of this clauſe, then, is no more then, ask deep. Howbeit, many both of the Greek, and Latine Interpreters, whom, ſome latter ones alſo adhere to, render the word more largely, make deep, (to wit, the ſign, that you would have) to hell; or, to the grave, to the depth of the earth; make it as deep as the earth, or hell it ſelf is, Jer.31.37. (of the word, and its ſignification, having its name of asking, or, craving; becauſe it is never ſatisfied, Prov.30.15,16. ſee on ch.5.14.) and this they labour from the next clauſe to confirm, where it is ſaid, make it high, or lift it up aloft; that is, ſay they, fetch it from heaven, unto which ſomewhat ſhould be here correſpondent; but of that there is no neceſſity: and, as the word is diverſe from that, that ſignifies a ſuit, ſo it is, as much, if not more, diſcrepant from that which ſignifies the grave, or hell.

or in the height above] Heb. make high, or, heighten; or, lift up aloft: that is, as by inſtances the Jewiſh Doctors illuſtrate it, ask ſome ſign, below; as the moving, or cleaving of the earth, Numb.16.30,32. 1 Sam.14,15. or, ſome ſign above, as the eclipſing of the light of the Sun, or the like, Joel 2.30,31. Luk.21.25. The meaning may be ſimply this, let the ſign that thou askeſt, be high, or low, a matter of greater, or meaner concernment, ſuch an one, as thy ſelf pleaſeſt; God gives thee thy choyce.

V. 12. But Ahaz ſaid] Heb. And. As ch.5.12,25.

I will not ask] To wit, any ſign, one, or other. And he refuſeth to ask a ſign; not out of any reverend and religious reſpect to God, as loath to tempt him, or ſtint him, like thoſe in the Wilderneſs, Pſal.78.41. though he made that his pretence; but out of diffidence and diſtruſt; either becauſe he believed nothing of that the Prophet ſpake; but that all was vain, and frivolous; or, becauſe he was reſolved to go on another way, then the Prophet adviſed, to ſeek help from the Aſſyrian, and not to rely upon God, from whom therefore to ask a ſign, would be to no purpoſe. See 2 King.16.17.

neither will I tempt the Lord] Some would have the words rendred, I will not exalt the Lord; as if he ſhould ſay, that he would not do the Lord ſo much honour, as to give glory to him, by craving a ſign of him. But albeit, a word of ſound and letters ſomewhat neer this, ſignifies, to lift up an enſigne; yet is this word and this form, no where found ſo uſed; but the ſame word is uſed in the like ſence, though in the better part, and on the like occaſion by Gideon, I will try, or prove; or, let me try, or prove, this once, Judg.6.30. nor is it to be imagined, that Ahaz ſhould ſpeak ſo blaſphemouſly to the Prophet: but it was rather ſpoken by him hypocritically, as reſpecting that Prohibition, Deut.6.16. (alledged alſo by our Saviour, to the Tempter, tempting him to tempt God, Matth. 4.7. Luk.4.12.) Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God; as if a man ſhould, or could tempt God, by doing that which he is enjoyned, or invited by God himſelf to do. And they therefore alſo ſeem to ſtrain here too far, who expound Ahaz his words; as if he ſhould ſay, that he intended not to try what God would do for him in the preſent war, and in the danger thence imminent; but take ſuch courſe, as he deemed, would moſt conduce to his own ſafety and indempnity. As alſo thoſe do, who ſurmiſe that therefore Ahaz ſhould not ſay, the Lord my God, as the Prophet had before ſaid, the Lord thy God, v.11. but the Lord, only, as refuſing to own him, as his God: for although it be true, that for ſuch tryal, the word is ſometime uſed, 1 Sam.17.40. Dan.1.12,14. not much otherwiſe in that, Judg.6.39. and that Ahaz was a wicked man, and one that in heart was wholly departed from his God, having reſolved to rely on an arm of fleſh, Jer.17.5. yet, it is not likely, that he was as yet grown up unto ſuch an height of profeſſed impiety, as openly to renounce God, and dependance upon him.

V. 13. And he ſaid] Or, Then. (as ch.6.5.) ſaid he, to wit, the Prophet.

Hear ye now, O houſe of David] This compellation the Prophet uſeth, as a preface, to ſtirr up, not the King alone, but the reſt of them then preſent, to attend unto that, as a matter of no ſmall concernment, which he was to ſpeak to them. See the like, ch.28.14,23. & 48.1.

O houſe of David] Some ask here, why he ſaith, O houſe of David, rather, then, O Ahaz, when as he intended him only? To which, ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors anſwer, That it was done in way of diſgrace and reproach to the King, as one unworthy to be named; as Saul to Ahimelech, Hear, now, O ſon of Ahitub, 2 Sam.22.12. and Moſes to Corah, and his aſſociates, Hear, now, O ſons of Levi, Numb.16.8. But the Prophet doth not direct his ſpeech unto Ahaz alone; but to the reſt of his family, together with him, as faulty alſo in the ſame kind with him. And the verb therefore is plural, though the noun be ſingular; becauſe taken collectively, as ch.2.5. Howbeit, true it is, that in way of reproach, the Prophet ſeems ſo to term them, as much degenerating from him, of whoſe family they profeſſed themſelves to be, and eſteemed it no ſmall grace and glory to them. So ch.48.1,2. Matth.3.9. Joh.8.33,37,39. And ſo Saul to his followers, Hear, now, O ſons of Jemini, Will the ſon of Jeſſe give you lands, &c. that ye conſpire with him againſt me. He calls him in ſcorn the ſon of Jeſſe, as a man of mean birth; them by way of reproach, the ſons of Jemini, Benjamites, (ch.9.1.) as forgetting their own family, and taking part with one, that ſought to deveſt it of its royalty. See v.4.

Is it a ſmall thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God alſo] The crime he chargeth them with, is their wearying and grieving, not ſo much Gods Miniſters and meſſengers, as God himſelf, whom they ſerve, and by whom they are ſent, in refuſing to rely on him, and accept of his gracious offers, and chooſing rather to ſeek after, and rely on other means, for their ſafety. See v.4,8.

Is it a ſmall thing] Some would have it read by way of enunciation; This is a ſmall thing. But the particle prefixed, is conſtantly an interrogative, in this manner of ſpeech, as Gen.30.15. Num.16.9,13. Joſh.22.17. Ezek.16. 20. & 34.18. and it is a form of ſpeech uſually favouring of much indignation and exprobration, with inference of ſome further and greater, then former, or ordinary guilt; as by view of the places pointed to, may appear.

to weary men] To vex, and moleſt, (as Job 4.2. ſhall we not grieve, or be troubleſome to thee) men; either in general, and thoſe whom by your tyrannies and violences, you wrong and oppreſs; or rather, more ſpecially Gods Prophets, whom ye ſet light by, and give no credit to; but repute as vain pratlers, and buſie bodies, that feed you with fancies and fables, 2 King.9.11. 2 Chr.25.16. Jer.5.13. wherein the crime would be the leſs heynous, did it reach no further then their own perſons, as they are men, and did it not redound to God himſelf, 1 Sam.2.25. as it doth, Exod.16.7. Num.16.11. 1 Sam. 8.7. Jer.5.12. Luk.10.16. Joh.3.20. 1 Theſſ.4.8.

but will ye] Or, but that ye will. Making it one continued ſentence.

weary God] In diſtruſting him, and refuſing to rely on him. Or, as ſome, in reputing him unable to do what he promiſeth, and undertakes to effect. So they ſuppoſe the word ſometime to ſignifie, as Gen.19.11. they could not, or, were not able to find the door; and chap.1.14. I cannot, or, am not able to bear: and ſo here, to make God impotent, or, unable to do ought; as men are wont to be, when they are tired, and ſpent, which God never is, ch. 40.28,29. The ſence is good, and ſound; (for ſuch conceit of God, is one uſual ground of diſtruſt, Pſal.78.19,20,22. Rom.4.20,21.) but the conſtruction is too coact.

my God] Whom in ſpecial manner, and office, I belong unto, as 1 King.17.1. & 18.10,15. Rom. 1. 8,9. in regard whereof alſo, the wrong done, in diſregarding the meſſage that I now bring thee from him, reflects upon him, and doth chiefly reſpect him, being not my meſſage, but his, 2 Cor. 5. 20. & 13.3. 1 Theſſ.2.13. Yet ſome obſerve, that he ſaith not now, as before, thy God, ver.11. but my God; becauſe he had ſeemed not to own him, himſelf, v. 12. But of that, ſee there.

V. 14. Therefore the Lord himſelf ſhall give you a ſign] Though by your refuſal of Gods gracious offer, you make your ſelf utterly unworthy of any ſuch favour to be ſhewed you; yet will God vouchſafe, of his own free accord, to afford you a ſign.

Therefore] Or, Notwithſtanding, rather. Notwithſtanding your wearying of God, and being ſo troubleſome to him by your croſs, perverſe, and diſtruſtful carriage, yet will he do this for you. The particle here uſed, is, as well a diſcretive, as a cauſative; and it is ſo found uſed, chap.30.16. Jer.16.14. & 30.16. Ezek.39.25. Hoſ.2.14. which being not obſerved in ſome of thoſe places, hath enforced the Expoſitors to introduce harſh and needleſs trajections, and bred much difficulty in the text.

the Lord] Of this name, (for it is not Jehovah; but Adonai, which the Jews commonly read in the room of that) ſee on chap. 6. 1.

himſelf] Not by himſelf, as ſome; (for he doth it here by the Prophet) but of himſelf, of his own accord, unasked; as ch. 65. 1. For they minde not the uſe of the language, that tranſlate the pronoun here, this; as if the ſence were, The Lord will give you this for a ſign.

ſhall give] Or, will give. The better, and fitter to expreſs Gods own ſpontaneous act; as The Lord will give ſtrength; and The Lord will bleſs his people with peace, Pſal. 29. 11.

give] Not exhibite; as ſome would have it; to wit, hereafter; but ſet: for ſo in Scripture, to give a ſign, is to aſſign, or, ſet a ſign, Exod. 13. 2. Joſh. 2. 12. So Matt.12.39. No other ſign ſhall be given them, (that is, ſet, or aſſigned them) ſave the ſign of the Prophet Jonas. See the note on the place, being a place much miſtaken by many.

you] Not thoſe to come, their poſterity, in whoſe dayes the ſign here mentioned, was to be exhibited, as ſome ſtrain it; but thoſe to whom he then ſpake. Nor need we reſtrain it to the better ſort of that people, (with ſome other;) whereof ſome, at leaſt, might be among the reſt there: for the promiſe of the Meſſias was made to the whole body of that people, Rom. 9. 4. and the Prophet here ſpeaks to none other, then thoſe, whom in the former words he tartly taxed.

a ſign] A ſign indeed; a ſign of ſigns; ſuch a ſign, as never was before it, or ſince. A ſign, both from above, and from beneath; wherein heaven and earth, God and man, were conjoyned in one, Joh. 1. 14. Phil.2.6,7. But here is a queſtion moved, how this miraculous birth, being a matter to fall out many years, yea, ages after, could conduce as a ſign unto thoſe that then lived, concerning the deliverance of them, and their head city, from the ſurprizal of thoſe two kings that were coming with joynt forces againſt them, and it. Unto which we anſwer.

1. That Things not preſent onely, or paſt; but long after to enſue, are ſometime given for ſigns; and are not ſeldom of much force, and efficacie to raiſe mens minds to an hopeful expectation of ſuch events, as are thereby enſured. So Exod. 3. 12. This is by God given, or ſet unto Moſes, for a ſign to aſſure him of the delivery of the people of Iſrael out of Egypt, by him; that after their coming out from thence, they ſhould ſerve God upon that mountain, on which God then ſpake to him: which yet was not to be, until the deliverance was effected. So chap. 37. 30. It was aſſigned to Ezekiah and his people, for a ſign of their deliverance, and indemnity from Sennacherib, that they ſhould for one year eat of that which came up of it ſelf; and another year on that which ſprang from it, and the third year have free liberty to ſow, and plant, reap, and pluck without diſturbance, or interruption, at pleaſure. All which was not to be, until after the departure of him, upon the deſtruction of his forces, when their delivery was now over. So the ſtones that Jeremiah was willed to take, and hide in Pharoahs brick-kiln, at Tahpanhes among the clay, for Nebuchadnezar to ſpread his pavilion over, when he ſhould ſurprize Egypt, Jer.43.9,10. was to be a ſign to thoſe perfidious Jews, who had fled into Egypt, (though the event were not yet in being, nor to take effect till ſome time after) of that dreadful judgement, by the Prophet then denounced, both againſt Egypt and them. For it was not ſo much the diſpoſing of them there, as the Chaldean king, pitching of his Pavilion in that place, that was to confirm the truth of that Prophecy, whether they lived, in whoſe ſight thoſe were there laid, to ſee it, or no. To which we may add, that other ſtone, and the book with it, caſt into the midſt of the river Euphrates at Babylon, thereby to aſſure Gods people, in captivity, there; yea, and thoſe that were to come thither after them: of their delivery thence, by, and upon the deſtruction of Babylon, by that typified, but fore-told, and ſo prefigured to give aſſurance of deliverance thereby unto them; whom it had been but cold comfort to, had they been to periſh likewiſe, together with it, Jer. 51. 63, 64. Nor was the ſtone and book caſt into the river ſo much, as the irrecoverable downfal of Babel, therein deſigned, that which was to give the Jewiſh captives aſſurance of ſuch deliverance, as was promiſed them in that book. And yet were many years to paſs over their heads; yea, and multitudes of them, (whereof no ſmall number alſo, not yet captived) in continuance of time, worn out, and laid up in their graves, before that ruine of the Chaldean eſtate, the future ſign of that their freedom.

2. The ground and end of the ſign given, or aſſigned here, is to be obſerved. The ground was Ahaz his diſtruſt of Gods power, as doubting, whether he were able to do that which the Prophet would have him to believe, and rely on him for, to wit, to protect, and ſafegard him and his State, againſt two ſuch potent adverſaries, without aſſiſtance of ſome forreign forces. The end is to aſſure Ahaz, that God can do as much; yea, and much more then this amounts to; he can do things more incredible, more impoſſible then this. This was no more then God, at divers times, had formerly done, as ſtories ſhew, Gen 14. 9, 15, 16. Joſh.10. 5, 10. 2 King. 10. 4. 2 Chron. 14. 9, 11, 12. & 20. 1, 25. But the ſign here propounded, was of ſuch a thing as never the like was, either before or ſince, the birth of a Virgin. So that it is, as if he had ſaid unto Ahaz, Thou doubteſt whether God can deliver thee from the forces of theſe two kings, without help of ſome other humane aids. I ſhall tell thee of a far greater, and more unlikely matter, that he both can do, and will do: he can, and will, cauſe a Virgin to be conceived, and delivered of a child, without the knowledg, or help of man.

3. It is the uſual manner of the Prophets, in their prophecies and predictions of reſtitutions, or deliverances of Gods people, to make mention of the Meſſias, and to point unto him, on whom all thoſe promiſes of ſpecial mercies and favours, made to that people, were founded; and for whoſe ſake deliverances were oft afforded, even unto thoſe, who were altogether unworthy of them. In regard whereof, it is not without ſome good probability, deemed by ſome, that the Prophet, therefore, inſtead of ſetting Ahaz any other ſign, directeth him unto the Meſſias (whoſe miraculous birth, was the moſt ſufficient ſign that could be, both of Gods power for, and love to his people) by conſideration of him, if he had any faith at all in him, to entertain ſome hopeful aſſurance of Gods word to be made good to him, in the particular now propounded. To which may be added, that it is not unlikely, that from that prediction in Moſes, Gen. 3. 15. of the ſeed of the woman, that ſhould bruiſe the head of the ſerpent; which the Jewiſh Doctors alſo expound of the Meſſias, ſome hint, in thoſe times might be had of a woman (ſo the Apoſtle alſo ſtileth the mother of our Saviour, Gal.4.4.) that ſhould have ſeed, or iſſue, without knowledg of man; that which ſome other prophecies alſo are, by the ancients, deemed to glance at; as Gen. 49. 10. Pſal. 132.11. beſides, Dan. 2.34: and ſo the Prophet might ſpeak unto Ahaz herein, of that which might be already received, or not unheard of, at leaſt, among them.

4. Albeit, this concerning the Meſſias be mentioned; yet another ſign ſeems to be further, withal, thereunto annexed, taken from that child of the Prophets, whom for that end he was commanded, by God, to take along with him, verſ. 3. as we ſhall hereafter ſhew on ver.15,16. Both of them joyntly concurring to confirm Ahaz his diſtruſtful heart, if it might have been, in that, whereof the Prophet, from God, endeavoured to aſſure him.

Behold] A note of ſedulous attention, and ſerious conſideration, duly, and deſervedly prefixed, before the relation and prediction of a matter ſo ſtrange, ſo far beyond, and above the courſe and power of nature, and of ſo weighty concernment; the incarnation, and birth of the Lord, and King Meſſias, the Saviour of mankinde, Matt.1.22,23: and that as pointing unto it with the finger; as John ſometime at Chriſt, now incarnate, Joh. 1.29,36: as a thing in Gods decree and purpoſe, already preſent, and, even then, to be ſeen with the eye of faith; as, of Abraham, it had been many ages before, Joh. 8. 56. Of the uſe of the particle, ſee ch.3. 1.

a Virgin] So the evangeliſt, Matt. 1. 23: and ſo before him,the ancient Greek verſion,received and allowed among the Jews themſelves, and read publikely in their Synagogues, with ſuch of them as made uſe of the greek: nor could it therefore be ſo rendred by the authors of that verſion,in favour of Jeſus, the ſon of Mary, not yet born; or of the chriſtian profeſſion, not yet in being: yet the latter Jewiſh Doctors,ſince the birth of our Saviour,out of hatred to him, in whom the ſame is fulfilled, would have the word, Almah,here to ſignifie any young woman,whether Virgin, or other; married,or unmarried; known by man, or unknown of man; and to be a name, not of integrity, but of age, or youth onely. Againſt whom,firſt, we object the notation of the word, in regard whereof it ſignifies, properly,an hidden, a concealed, a reſerved one; one kept out of ordinary ſight and view. One hidden from man; that is, one unknown of man. For to be hidden, is not to be known; as 1 King.10.3. Secondly, we reaſon from the conſtant uſe of it in the whole body of Scripture, in which it is, beſides this place, ſix times onely uſed; thrice in the ſingular number; thrice in the plural. The firſt place,is, Gen. 24. 43. in the prayer of Abrahams ſteward,mentioning ſuch a wife, as for his young maſter he deſired; which could be no other intended by him, then a pure Virgin; ſuch an one as Rebekah is avowed to have been there,ver. 16. Though they miſtake, who ſay, it is there uſed of her: for of her, another tearm more large, (See Joel 1. 8. where it is ill tranſlated, a Virgin) is in that latter place uſed,but with ſuch reſtriction, as makes it equivalent unto this; which is, by the old Jewiſh-Greek, there alſo rendred, as here. The ſecond place, is, Exod. 2. 8. where it is uſed of that other Mary, ſiſter to Moſes and Aaron, then very young, and a Virgin, in all likelihood, all her life long. The third place, is Pſal. 68. 25. where, amidſt the holy train, are the Virgins beating the tabers. The uſual imployment of ſuch,in their triumphant ſolemnities, Exod. 15. 20,21. Judg. 11. 34. 1 Sam. 18. 6. A fourth, and fift place, are in the Canticles; where the Virgins are ſaid to love the Spouſes Beloved, ch.1.3. Nor were her aſſociates, or attendants, I ſuppoſe, preſumed to be other: and where the Virgins numberleſs attending on him, are mentioned with diſtinction, from both queens and concubines, chap. 6. 8; ſuch, to wit, as thoſe that attend on the Lamb, Rev. 14. 4. The laſt place is, Prov. 30. 19. where among other things that Agur reckoneth up, as not eaſie to be deſcried, one is ſaid to be the way of a man with a Virgin,or a Maid; for that is alſo,uſually, a name of integrity with us. And this is the place, that the latter Jewiſh Doctors ſo much inſiſt upon, and triumph in, as if they had found where the word were uſed,for one that were no Virgin,no Maid. For vindication whereof,to let paſs the forced expoſitions of thoſe, who ſo wring the Text, as if they meant to preſs blood, or cruſh mattier, rather then to fetch milk out of it: Nor to inſiſt upon thoſe two more ſpecious interpretations, that are generally moſt received of thoſe, who ſuppoſe the word to be taken,not according to the truth of the thing,but according to ſhew and ſemblance onely; or repute, and eſteem; and ſo the party there ſpoken of, to be tearmed a Maid, or Virgin; not as being ſuch indeed, but as deemed, and pretended ſo to be. Which they ſeek to confirm by what followeth, verſ. 20. of the whoriſh wife, who yet pretends to be honeſt. Or that other, which yet many ſeem to be much taken with, of thoſe that expound it myſteriouſly, as the ſame, in effect, with this of Iſaiah; or that, at leaſt, of Jeremiah; A woman ſhall compaſs a man, Jer. 31. 22. But to omit that, the whole tenor of Agurs diſcourſe runs conſtantly in another ſtrain: That very addition of the adulterous ſtrumpet is ſufficient to overthrow this: For, undoubtedly, the Spirit of God would never yoke the baſe carriage of ſo vile,and abominable a creature,with that ſacred myſtery of the incarnation of the Son of God, never to be without much reverence mentioned, or minded. To leave theſe therefore to their ſeveral authors, fautors,and abetters; The place, to me, ſeems not plain onely, but very pregnant for that ſence of the word, which,as genuine, and general,we avow. For the ſcope of the place is clearly this, to ſhew, how cloſely, and cunningly, perſons, either men or women, can carry themſelves, in contriving, and compaſſing their plots and practices, for the ſatisfying of their deſires, when they are lewdly diſpoſed. And the ſence, conſequently, apparent; that a Virgin can hardly be ſo ſtrictly watch'd, and kept,but that a man,ſo affected,will by one way or other, procure acceſs to her,and that ſo covertly, that no notice, for the preſent, ſhall be taken by any, that he hath been with her; as of Amnon, Abſolom to Tamar,2 Sam. 13. 20: in whoſe caſe alſo, nothing would have been ſuſpected other then well, had not the parties themſelves, by their own after-carriages, bewrayed it. And the like is added, to make the obſervation compleat, of a married woman, diſhoneſtly minded; who yet can carry on her diſloyal practices, ſo ſmoothly, and ſecretly, that no note of diſhoneſty ſhall appear with her. And thus this text cleared, and the Jewiſh Doctors onely inſtance being removed,our reaſon againſt them, as well from the conſtant uſe, as from the negative ſence of the word, ſtands firm againſt them, that the tearm here ſignifies a woman untoucht,in Solomons phraſe, and the Apoſtles, Prov. 6. 29. 1 Cor. 7. 1. Whereunto we might further add that which puzzles them,not a little; what ſtrange matter it ſhould import, for a young woman to beat a child. And here our great Maſters in Iſrael are at a ſtand; one ſuppoſing the ſign to conſiſt herein, that the child, this young woman went with, ſhould prove a ſon; another, this to be the ſtrangeneſs of the matter; that this Man-child,as ſoon as ever he was born, ſhould be able to diſcern between bad meat, and good: another, that he ſhould eat butter and honey, as ſoon as he was born,inſtead of ſucking in his mothers milk. Theſe,& the like ſorry ſhifts and ſurmiſes,are they enforced to flye unto, while they ſtrive,by all means, to ſuppreſs that light,that from this Scripture flaſheth ful in their faces. Howbeit ſomewhat,by the way, hath dropped from one of them, that ſeems to give an inckling of ſomewhat muttered, in his time, among them, affording teſtimony to the truth: He ſaith,ſome underſtand it of ſuch a Maid, or Damoſel, as had not been ſeen to bear a childe. Neither doth he paſs any doom,at all,upon that their opinion: And what manner of Maid, or Damoſel, but a Virgin,ſhould ſuch be? As little agreement is there among them, in determining who this mother, or this childe ſhould be. Some would have the woman,to be king Ahaz his wife, and the childe, Ezekiah, his, and her ſon. But herein, others of their own coat, controll them; ſhewing, by juſt computation, that Ezekiah was born divers years before this prophecy was delivered: for he was five and twenty year old, at his fathers deceaſe,2 King. 18. 2: who reigned but ſixteen in all, 2 King. 16. 2; and was born,therefore before his father was king. Others of them, would have the mother to be the Prophets wife, and the childe their ſon; for the Prophet,ſay they, had three ſons,having,by Gods appointment, names impoſed on them,importing ſome Prophetical matter. Immanuel, promiſing Gods aſſiſtance of them, againſt the Iſraelites,and the Syrians, chap. 8. 10. Maher-ſhalal-hasbaſh, implying the Aſſyrians ſpeedy plundering of thoſe two people, ch.8.3,4. And Shear-jaſhub, fore-telling the return of a reſidue, chap. 7. 3. & 10. 21. But, howſoever for the other two we make no doubt, becauſe they give us good ground from Gods word; yet for this their aſſertion, concerning ſuch a ſon of the Prophets, as ſhould be here meant, and ſo ſtiled, we have nothing from them, but their own conjectures. Againſt which, to omit what we might object, that the land of Judah, is called the land of this Immanuel; as having a peculiar right to it,and dominion over it, chap. 8.8. which will not agree to any of the Prophets iſſue, or any other private perſon; this I ſay, to let paſs; this we perſiſt to oppoſe,that neither any ſon of the king, or of the Prophet, can be the party here ſpoken of, unleſs he can be avowed to have been born of a Virgin. Upon which ground alſo we deſervedly reject, what ſome of our own writers, in part, therein complying with the Jewiſh Doctors, have ſuggeſted, to wit, that this might, in ſome ſort, be ſpoken and meant of ſome childe then born, whether to the King, or the Prophet, or any other,which might be a type of Chriſt. They pitch moſt upon the Prophets ſon,mentioned in the next Chapter. The Prophet, ſay they, joyned himſelf ſolemnly to a Virgin, who was alſo a Propheteſs; by her he had a childe, which had a twofold name, this here foretold, and that other there expreſſed. And this childe, ſo born of one being a Virgin,until the time that he was begotten on her, might be a type of him,who in a ſupereminent and miraculous manner, was to be conceived in, and born of a Virgin, ſtill continuing ſo to be. To this purpoſe they alleadg divers predictions, that were verified, ſome lower, or meaner way in the type; but ſome other far more excellent way,fulfilled in the truth, further by that type intended. But although it be true, that in ſundry complexed prophecies, the thing propounded, or promiſed,is found exhibited, and made good in the type or ſhadow, corporally; in the truth or ſubſtance, thereby typified, or delineated, ſpiritually; as in this prophecie, is frequently ſhewed: Or, though corporally in both, yet not in the very ſelf ſame manner; but analogically, by a kinde of proportion, that the one beareth with the other, of which, ſee Jer. 31. 15. Yet this cannot hold here. Firſt, becauſe it takes away the ſtrangeneſs intimated in the thing it ſelf, here propounded; and which is, by this ſuggeſtion, pretended to be the type. And ſecondly, becauſe it may juſtly be deemed to enervate the authority of the Evangeliſt Matthew, expounding the Prophets words, as ſpoken by him, of a babe to be born, not of one that had been a Virgin, until in marriage he was begotten of her; but of one, who was a Virgin, even then when ſhe was already conceived of him in her womb; as the words preciſely, both with the Evangeliſts, and with the Prophet here, import; not a Virgin ſhall conceive; as if the meaning were one, that is, now a Virgin, ſhall hereafter conceive; but word for word; a Virgin ſhall go great, or, be with child; as ſpeaking of a Virgin, that ſo continuing, ſhould be in that condition; of which, more anon. And as that place therefore of the Pſalmiſt, Thou wilt not leave my ſoul, that is, me (as Pſalm 3. 2. & 7. 2. & 119. 25. with 44. 25.) to ſee corruption in the grave, Pſal. 16. 10: may not be expounded, one way of David, though in ſome things, a type of Chriſt, and ſpeaking in the perſon of Chriſt; and another way of Chriſt himſelf; but of Chriſt onely; whoſe fleſh, though laid in the grave, yet was not there corrupted; as the Apoſtle argues, Act. 2. 25, 34. So what is ſpoken of the Meſſias, to be born of a Virgin, is not applyable in any other way, to any other; not born of a Virgin, in that manner, as he was; and as it is certain, that none ever, but he, was. And we ſhall not a little infringe and abate the force and weight of thoſe two principal, and pregnant teſtimonies, the one concerning our Saviour, his myſterious Incarnation; the other, concerning his miraculous Reſurrection; if we ſhall thus, as ſome have done with either, pick out the main pith of them, to make them applyable to any other. The Mother, therefore, of the childe here mentioned, is a Virgin; and no other then that ever bleſſed Virgin, the Mother of the Meſſias, continuing a Virgin, notwithſtanding a Mother, Matth. 1. 18, 23. Luk. 1. 27, 35.

ſhall conceive] Heb. great; or, with childe. For the word here uſed, is not a verb, as ſome, who render it, ſhall conceive; nor a participle, as other, who require it to be read, conceiving; but a verbal, ſignifying one with childe; as it is well rendred, Exod. 21. 22. 1 Sam. 4. 19: or, one great with childe, ch. 26. 17. Jer. 31. 8: as of other creatures, we uſe to ſay, great with young. Nor indeed doth the verb, whereof it comes, properly ſignifie to conceive: Nor is the word therefore drawn from it, rightly rendred, conception, Gen. 3. 16: where the words would rather be thus read, I will greatly multiply thy pain, even the pain; or, the pain I mean (for the copulative is there, as oft elſewhere, exegetical) of thy childe-bearing, or, thy going with child. By childe-bearing underſtanding, that interval of time, between conception and birth; during which time, teeming women, as we tearm them, while they bereed, and go great, are ſubject to many infirmities, and bear a continual burthen, for a great part of it, about them. And that is it, indeed, that the word here uſed, intimates; the affinity in the hebrew tongue being ſo neer, between the woman going great with what ſhe bears in her wombe; and an hill, or mountain ſwelling higher then the ordinary ſurface of the earth; that in ſome Scriptures it is ſomewhat ambiguous, whether of the twain is meant, Amos 1. 13: the very ſame word in the plural form, feminine, ſignifying as well the one, as the other, Exod. 14. 2. It is therefore, word for word, as if the Prophet ſpeaking of a thing preſent, not to the eye, but to the faith, ſhould ſay, Behold a Virgin with childe, or, great with childe: As the Angel to Hagar, Gen 16. 11. Behold, thou art with childe. Howbeit it is, though for evidence, and certainty of truth, ſo delivered, to be underſtood in the future, as the ſequel of the context ſhews; one of the Jewiſh Doctors, well obſerveth, paralleling it with that of the Angel to Manoahs wife; Behold, thou ſhalt be with child: for ſo the words are, Judg. 13. 5. To be noted the rather, to meet with the vain cavil of thoſe of them, who tax the Evangeliſt, as warping from the Prophets words, in rendring them by the future, Behold, a Virgin ſhall have in her womb; as the Greek hath it; that is, as we rightly render it, ſhall be with childe, Matt. 1. 23. And indeed, ſo would the words be here alſo rendred, Behold, a Virgin ſhall be with childe: which yet is not to be underſtood, as that other place in this Prophet, The childe ſhall dye an hundred year old: That is, he that is now a childe, ſhall be an hundred year old ere he dye, chap. 65. 20: So a Virgin ſhall be with childe: That is, ſhe that is now a Virgin, ſhall hereafter be with childe; becauſe the nature of the bleſſing promiſed carrieth it ſo there; whereas the ſtrangeneſs of the buſineſs propounded, carries it, neceſſarily, another way here: Nor may the Prophets words be otherwiſe taken, then as the Evangeliſt expounds and applyes them; unleſs we will ſay, that the Prophet fore-told one thing to be done, and the Evangeliſt relateth another thing as done. Whereas the one onely reports, as exhibited, what the other had before ſaid, ſhould be. For as for that quaint deſcant of a late writer, upon the word fulfilled, uſed by the Evangeliſt, Matth. 1. 22; that it is a teann of art, taken from the practice of picture-drawers, who having firſt made a type, or rude draught of their work intended, are wont, after, to fill it up with other materials, and with variety of colours; as if thereby were implyed, that to what the Prophet had delivered typically, the Evangeliſt had added ſomewhat; or intimated, at leaſt, that ſomething had been further added, to make up the full truth, of what was but in part fore-told. It may well ſeem ſubtile; but it is nothing ſolid: for the meaning is plain, and obvious to any weak apprehenſion, that then any prediction is ſaid to be fulfilled, when the thing is done that was fore-told. I muſt crave pardon, that I have been ſomewhat prolix, in endeavouring to clear this place, containing matter of ſo great conſequence, and concernment.

and bear] Or, bring forth; as it is more fitly, and fully rendred, Matth. 1. 23. Heb. and bearing: or, bringing forth; as Gen. 16. 11. & 17. 19. Judg. 13. 5. Spoken, as before was obſerved, as in the preſent time, but to be underſtood, as in the places pointed to, and as all here grant, in the future. And the word Virgin, reacheth as well to this, as to the former. A virgin with childe; and yet ſtill a virgin. And a virgin bringing forth; and yet, for all that, ſtill a virgin. For it is not the opening of the womb by birth, but the knowledg of man onely, that procureth, or produceth any imminution of virginity. She brought forth, ſay the Evangeliſts of the Virgin Mary, Mat. 1. 25. Luk. 2. 7. Nor are we to give heed unto thoſe frivolous fancies, deviſed by the Patrons of Popery, to caſt ſome colour upon their prodigious dotage of Tranſubſtantion, of the Virgin Maries miraculous delivery of our Saviour, without opening of the womb; whereas the Scripture expreſly telleth us, that therefore he was preſented in the Temple, as by vertue of a ſpecial ordinance, holy to God; becauſe the male, that by birth had opened the womb of her that bare him, Luk. 2. 22, 23. Nor do we therefore, as thoſe of that faction charge us, hereby any whit infringe the continued virginity of the Mother of our Saviour; they rather themſelves infringe it, in denying that to be conſiſtent with pure, and entire virginity, which the Holy Ghoſt, by the Evangeliſt, affirms to have been with her. The conception of our Saviour, we read to have been extraordinary, and miraculous, Luk. 1. 35: we read no ſuch thing of his birth: That a virgin ſhould be with childe; that is it wherein the miracle, principally, yea, peculiarly, doth conſiſt: being a matter, not onely beyond the ordinary courſe, but far above all power of nature. But that, being conceived of a childe, ſhe ſhould, at the wonted time, when her dayes were accompliſhed, be delivered of that ſhe went with, Luk. 2. 6. was agreeable to the ordinary courſe of nature: yet is joyned with the former, in relation of the miracle; becauſe, not onely a conſequent, but an evidence of it, a manifeſtation of that, to open view, that before lay hid, and might otherwiſe have been deemed, but ſome meer deluſion.

a ſon] So the Angel to Mary, Thou ſhalt bring forth a ſon, Luk. 1. 31: and to Joſeph likewiſe, She ſhall bring forth a ſon, Mat. 1. 21. and accordingly it is ſaid of her, She brought forth her firſt born ſon, Mat. 1. 25. Luk. 2. 7: not a daughter, but a ſon. Though the Meſſias came of a woman, Gal. 4. 4. yet was he to be a male, a man. A man, though of a woman; that both ſexes might have intereſt in him. For neither is the man without the woman, nor the woman without the man, in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 11. 11. in whom there is no difference of male, or female, Gal. 3. 28. But a man, more eſpecially, in regard of the eminency of the ſex, 1 Cor. 11. 7, 9. & 14. 34. 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12: and in regard of the offices he was to ſuſtain, being deſigned to be a Prince, ch. 9. 6, 7. Luk. 1. 31, 32. a Prieſt, Pſal. 110. 4. Hebr. 4. 14. & 5. 6. and a Prophet, Deut. 28. 18, 19. Act. 3. 22, 23. A Son, that the ſame Perſon might be the Son of God, in regard of his humanity; who, from all eternity, had been the Son of God, in regard of his Diety, Prov. 8. 24, 25. Pſal. 2. 7. Luk. 1. 35. Hebr. 1. 5, 6, 8: and that the Son of God, becoming alſo, the ſon of man, Matth. 16. 13, 16: might make thoſe, who were the ſons of men, to become the ſons of God, Gal. 4. 4, 5.

and ſhall call] So the moſt, yet with ſome difference; for ſome would have the word here uſed, a verbal, or a participle; the like whereunto they ſuppoſe to have found, Exod. 5. 16; but that place is queſtionable: and theſe read the words, as running on in one continued tenor, Behold a virgin, going with childe, and bringing forth a ſon, and calling his name Immanuel. But others, rather, conceive it to be a verb: and the greater part go this way, reading it in the third perſon, and ſhe ſhal call. Which reading they ſtrengthen, by producing a place out of Deut. 31. 29: where the ſame word is found in the ſame form, though in a different ſignification, (the reaſon whereof, is well known to thoſe that are skilful in that language) in thoſe words, And evil ſhall meet with you: it being there a feminine of the third perſon, as they ſuppoſe it here to be. Howbeit others read it in the ſecond perſon, as the margent of our Bibles alſo repreſents it; Thou ſhalt call: Not, as if the Prophet ſpake unto Ahaz: for the word is feminine; but as directing his ſpeech unto the Virgin, of whom he ſpake; Thou, O Virgin, ſhalt call. So the old Greek renders it, and the vulgar Latine; howſoever many of the ancient Greek copies are reported to have it, They ſhall call; which is as much in effect, according to the Hebrew idiotiſm, as if it were ſaid, He ſhall be called. The like whereunto, ſee chap. 60. 14. & 62. 12: and ſo divers alſo of the ancient writers, in their allegations of this place, read it. But with our marginal reading, the Evangeliſt concurs; albeit, in ſome other words, he doth not preciſely follow the old greek. And albeit the difference be not material; yet unto this latter, this may, for the further ſtrengthning of it, be added. That this our Prophet is found to have uſed the very ſame word, in the ſame form, and in the ſame ſence, chap. 60. 18; in thoſe words, And thou ſhalt call thy walls ſalvation, or, ſafety. As alſo, that ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors (though for no good end I ſuppoſe) atteſt hereunto; affirming it to be ſpoken, in way of conjunction, or command, in ſuch manner, as legal precepts are wont to be conceived, Exod. 20. 5. & 23. 15. And ſo the Angel to Hagar, of the childe ſhe went with, Gen. 16. 11. Thou ſhalt call his name Iſmael; whether way we take it, as ſpoken in way of prediction, or in way of injunction, as of her, or to her; apparent it is, that the nomination of the childe is attributed to her. That which the hebrew writers obſerve, to be, according to the uſual cuſtome of their nation, with whom the mother, ordinarily, named the childe. And indeed we finde it ſo, very frequently, in the ſacred Records. For ſo it ſeems, that Eve named her firſt born Cain, Gen. 4. 1. and his brother, Seth, Gen. 4. 25: and Jacobs two wives are reported, to have named both their own children, and their handmaids, which they reputed as their own, Gen. 29. 32, 33, 34, 35. & 30. 3, 6, 8, 11, 13, 18, 20, 21, 24. So Hannah named her ſon Samuel, 1 Sam. 1. 20. And of divers other, the like is found recorded, Gen. 38. 4, 5. 1 Chr. 4. 9. & 7. 16. But our Writers render a further reaſon hereof: The right of nomination, ſay they, is in the father; becauſe impoſition of names, in behalf of the party naming, argues a ſpecial right in the dominion, or authority over the party named; as appears in Adam, impoſing names, as on the other living creatures, by God made ſubject to him, Gen. 1. 28. & 2. 19, 20: ſo on the firſt of that other ſex, a woman, made for him, and to be aſſiſtant unto him, both as a woman, Gen. 2. 18, 23; and as his wife, Gen. 3. 16, 20. And in great perſonages, giving new names unto thoſe, whom they take into their protection, or ſervice, 2 King. 23. 34. & 24. 17. Dan. 1. 7. The prime right of denomination, therefore, reſides in the father, as having the more principal intereſt in, and power over the childe; of whoſe practice, in this kinde alſo, may many preſidents be produced out of Scripture: Gen. 5. 29. & 38. 3. & 41. 51, 52. 2 Sam. 12. 24, 25. 1 Chro. 7. 23: and the mothers right of nomination is from the other; Parents, either conceſſion, or conſent deemed hence to appear, in that when they differ, the fathers voice carries it; as when Jacob and Rachel, upon the birth of the ſon of whom ſhe dyed, gave the childe ſeveral names, that which the father impoſed, ſtood firm, Gen. 35. 18: and Zacharies hand, confirmed Elizabeths vote concerning their ſons name, Luk. 1. 60, 63. But the Virgin, ſay they, here hath the ſole, and entire power of naming her childe, committed to her; becauſe there was no father on earth, either to claim it from her, or to ſhare in it with her. The Meſſias, her ſon, being, as God, without mother; as Man, without father, Heb. 7. 3. Without father, I ſay, here on earth. For God was Father to Chriſt, Joh. 8. 19, 54: not as God onely, but as man alſo, Luk. 1. 35. And yet unto Joſeph his father in law, as ſome expound the word, uſed, Luk. 3. 23. in regard of his mothers eſpouſal to him; it is ſaid by an Angel, at one time; as well as to the Virgin, his mother, at another time; Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, Matth. 1. 21. Luk. 1. 31. Yea, of Joſeph, it is ſaid expreſly, that he called his name Jeſus, Matth. 1. 25: and afterward indefinitely, that at the time of his circumciſion, His name was called Jeſus, as he was named by the Angel, before he was conceived, Luk. 2. 21. This therefore ſeems be a nicety, more ſubtile, then ſound.

call his name Immanuel] As, call his name Jeſus, Matth. 1. 21: and called his name Jabez, 1 Chro. 4. 9. That is, call him Immanuel; as Gen. 25. 18. She called his name Benoni; but his father called him Benjamin; Gave him that name: wherein queſtion may be, how this was fulfilled, when as neither the Virgin his mother, impoſed that name on him; nor was he, that we read of, commonly ſo called. Whereunto, the anſwer is ready at hand; that names, in Scripture, are oft given to perſons, or ſaid to be given them; not thereby meaning, or intending, that the perſons unto whom thoſe names are attributed, either were, or ſhould ordinarily be ſo uſed. But that, that which thoſe names imported, and was thereby ſignified, ſhould be ſo verified of them, or in them; that the name it ſelf might, as juſtly and deſervedly be given unto them, and uſed of them, as if it were their proper, and peculiar appellation. So it is ſaid of Solomon, that David his father, called him, Jedidiah; becauſe the Lord loved him: and by Nathan ſignified ſo much to him, 2 Sam. 12. 25, 26; alluded alſo to, Neh. 13. 26. Yet read we not where David, elſewhere, ſo ſtileth him; or that he was uſually, ſo called. So Jeremiah tells Paſhur, The Lord hath not called thy name Paſhur; but Magormiſſabib; meaning, that ſuch ſtraits and terrors, ſhould purſue, and ſurprize him, that that might, juſtly be deemed his name, Jer. 20. 3, 4. So it is ſaid of Ezekiel, that the name of the reſtored city, formerly called, Jeruſalem; ſhall thenceforth be, Jehovah-ſhammah, Ezek. 48. 35: thereby intimating, that God ſhould, in ſo conſpicuous manner, manifeſt his preſence among his people, and his abode with them there: that the city might well be named, The Lord is there. Yea, ſo of Chriſt himſelf alſo; (as the moſt) the Prophet Jeremiah telleth us, that this is the name whereby he ſhould be called, Jehovah-tſidkenu, Jer. 23. 6. & 33. 16. His meaning being not there, no more then Iſaiah's here, that our bleſſed Saviour ſhould be commonly known, and called by that, as his proper name; but, that what that tearm imported, ſhould of him be moſt truly affirmed, and acknowledged to be fully made good in him. And the ſame is to be ſaid of the name here given: as alſo of that high, and lofty ſtile, conſiſting of ſo many eminent titles, and attributes, wherewith he is dignified, ch. 9. 6. and yet is the name, here ſpecified, given again afterward to this Virgins birth, ch. 8. 8.

Immanuel] The initial letter being loſt, or left out, (in regard of the uncertainty of the ſound of it in the Hebrew; or the difficulty of expreſſing it by any ſpecial character, in other tongues) as in Amos, Obadiah, Jacob, and other the like; ſo in this. Or, Emmanuel; according to the Greek, Matth. 1. 23. which our language is more prone to follow; as in Eve, Abel, Moſes, Jeſus, Mary, and others. The word ſignifies, God with us; as it is expreſly expounded, both by the Prophet, ch. 8. 8, 10. and by the Evangeliſt, Matth. 1. 23. A fit name for the Meſſias, and fulfilled in him; who being God, from all eternity, became one with us in time, Joh. 1. 1, 14: to bring God, and us together, whom ſin had before ſevered, Rom. 5. 10. Col. 1. 20. 1 Pet. 3. 18: and who coming as a Mediator between God and us, 1 Tim. 2. 5. became both our ſurety to God, ch. 53. 7. (See the note there) and Gods ſurety to us, Rom. 8. 32. 2 Cor. 1. 20. Heb. 7. 22: and ſo made a perfect reconcilement, between God and us, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Eph. 2. 14, 18. Heb. 10. 14. Unto Jeſus Chriſt therefore doth this name moſt aptly, moſt exactly agree in the ſubſtance of it, or what it importeth. Howbeit, I dare not ſay, as ſome do, that it is a name incompatible to any other. For as the name Jeſus, ſignifying a Saviour, though it be, in a peculiar manner, proper to Chriſt, Matth. 1. 21: Yet was in time paſt, not unuſually among Gods people, impoſed alſo on others; Zach. 3. 1. Heb. 4. 8. Act. 7. 45. & 13. 6. Col. 4. 11. and may as well ſignifie one ſaved, as ſaving. So the name Emmanuel, though, in a ſingular manner, it appertain unto Chriſt; as it is conceived to import, that inconceivable union of the Divine Nature with our fleſh, in one perſonal ſubſiſtance; yet as it may alſo have reference to Gods gracious acceptance of, and preſence with his reconciled ones in Chriſt; to aſſiſt them, and protect them, upon all occaſions, at all times, Gen. 28. 15. Pſal. 73. 22. Matth. 28. 20. Act. 18. 10. Heb. 13. 5. So is it applyable to any of the faithful; and ſo the Prophet himſelf, having before attributed it to the Meſſias, doth, ſpeaking in their perſon, afterward apply it alſo unto them, ch. 8. 8, 10. It is, in this regard, with the name Emmanuel, ſignifying, God with us; as it is with the name Ithiel, ſignifying God with me, Prov. 30. 1. which, though ſome ſuppoſe, to intend there the Meſſias; yet ſeems rather to be the name of ſome ordinary man, either ſon, or diſciple of Agur. Either name is, in ſome regard, peculiar to Chriſt: but, in other reſpects, may be communicable to others. Nevertheleſs conſidering, that in that ſpecial, or ſingular notion, rather the names Jeſus, and Emmanuel, (for of Ithiel, I ſay nothing) have been appropriated unto Chriſt: I ſuppoſe it neither fit, nor ſafe, to impoſe either of them on any other; ſince that, by ſuch common and promiſcuous uſe of them, they may be liable to much prophane and irreverent uſage.

V. 15. Butter and hony ſhall he eate] This verſe ſome underſtand of the Prophets ſon, Shear-jaſhub; whom he was commanded by God, to take along with him when he went to meet Ahaz, ver. 3. and they conceive them to be ſpoken to this end, to aſſure Ahaz, that the city of Jeruſalem ſhould not endure any ſuch great hardſhip and ſtraits, by the invaſion, and ſiege of thoſe two kings, as he expected, and ſo much feared; ſince that the childe, he had there with him, ſhould be brought up, fed, and maintained, in as free and full manner as children, and thoſe of the better ſort, are wont to be, in times of greateſt peace and plenty. But this expoſition, to the moſt, ſeems too much ſtrained; becauſe it fetcheth in the word, childe here, out of the verſe following; without which the relative, in the next clauſe, hath nothing to relate to. They underſtand it therefore of the Virgins birth, before ſpoken of; and annexed to the former relation; to ſhew, that the childe ſhe ſhould bear, and be delivered of, ſhould not be any fantaſtical appearance, or meer imaginary matter, (as ſome wicked Hereticks have, of Chriſts humanity, affirmed) but a very man-childe, conſiſting of a true humane nature; as being fed, and brought up with ſuch food, as other children, in thoſe parts eſpecally, are ordinarily wont to be. For, as for thoſe conceits of the Jewiſh Rabbines, that the meaning ſhould be, that the childe, ſpoken of before, either Ahaz's, or Iſaiah's, ſhould, as ſoon as he was born, be able to eate hony and butter, inſtead of his mothers milk, which other children cannot do; and ſhould take theſe, being offered him; and refuſe any other meat of unpleaſing taſte; and that herein the ſtrangeneſs of the ſign given, ſhould conſiſt: they are but frivolous fancies of their own brains; there is nothing in the text, that implyes any ſuch feeding of the childe, whoever it be, in that manner, ſo ſoon as it is born; but of the bringing of him up ſo afterward, when he is capable of ſuch food, until he come to years of diſcretion. Nor doth that therefore ſeem probable, which one of prime note hath; that the Jews uſe to this day, to give their new-born babes butter and milk, in the firſt place, before ever they taſte of their mothers milk: which as it makes nothing to the Prophets minde; ſo it conſiſts not with that, which for matter of fact, the Rabbins affirm, therein, rather denying, then acknowledging any ſuch wont with them.

butter and honey] Meates that young children affect, and (where plenty of either is) are uſually much fed with. Butter, with us, and ſome neighbour nations, is the common food of ſuch. Honey, not ſo, becauſe not ſo rife in theſe parts: But in thoſe regions very plentiful, as well as butter, or milk; the material of it, ſee Gen. 43. 11. Deut. 8. 8. & 32. 13, 14. 1 Sam. 14.25,28. 2 Sam. 17.29. 2 Chr. 31. 5. Pſal. 81. 17. verſ.22. Jer. 41. 8. Ezek. 16. 13. Matth. 3. 4. Luk. 24. 42: whereunto, add the uſual commendation of that country in Scripture; A land flowing with milk and honey, Exod. 3. 8. & 13. 5. Levit. 20.24. Numb. 13.28. & 14.8. Deut. 6.3. & 26. 9. Joſh. 5.6. Jer. 11. 5. Ezek. 20. 6, 15. Whence alſo ſome gather, that hereby is intimated, the nation, both of the mother, and the childe; that ſhe ſhould be a Jewiſh woman, and the childe of Jewiſh breed; implyed in the manner of his education, peculiar to that nation; as many people, ſay they, are wont to be deſcribed, by the manner of their food and diet. That which to inſtance in, (ſeemed it much material) were not uneaſie.

ſhall be eat] Not, ſhall he make us to eat; as ſome; underſtanding it of Emmanuel; who ſhould keep them in peace, and plenty, Deut. 32. 13, 14. Pſal. 81. 17: but the Hebrew will not bear it.

that he may know to refuſe the evil, and chooſe the good] Heb. that he know, &c. Hence ſome would collect, that butter, and honey, are a food of ſingular uſe for children, to make them ripe-witted, and of quick apprehenſion. Which, to ſhift off, others would have the words read, not, that he may know; but, until he know. But of that uſe of the particle, they bring no fit example: that of 2 Sam. 13. 2. reacheth it not. Nor need we to uſe any ſuch refuge, the meaning is plain; that he may grow up, and attain to years of diſcretion, deſcribed here, by ability to diſtinguiſh between good and bad; as elſewhere by ability of diſtinguiſhing between the right hand, and the left, Jon. 4. 10. It is a defective, or complexive ſpeech, that he may know; for, that growing up, he may know; or, that he may grow up to know, &c. which, but by feeding, cannot, in courſe of nature, be attained. See the like manner of ſpeech, ch. 6. 11. ver. 1, 6. ch. 38. 14, 17, 21. fulfilled in our Saviour, who, as man, had his growth in either, Luk. 2. 52.

to refuſe the evil, and chooſe the good] This many expound of diſtinguiſhing of meats offered him, ſo as to refuſe what is bitter, and unpleaſant of taſte, and receive what is ſweet and pleaſant, Job 34. 3: and it is true, that the words, good, and bad, are ſometime ſo uſed, Gen. 3. 6. Prov. 25. 13. Cant. 4. 10. Eccl. 12. 1. But it ſeems here, rather, to be underſtood of good, and evil, morally ſo tearmed. For that ability children have, even from the womb, while they ſuck, at leaſt; as alſo the young of other creatures, to diſcern the taſte of what is offered them, and to refuſe things of unpleaſant ſavour; yet neither do I conceive, that any extraordinary knowledg of, or judgement in, matters of that nature, is, by the Prophet, here intended; but ſuch apprehenſion, and notice of good and evil as children uſually have, when the uſe of Reaſon and underſtanding begins firſt to put out, and exerciſe it ſelf; which is uſually about the fourth, or fifth year. So the very ſame terms, almoſt, are uſed by Moſes; Your children, which in that day knew not good, or evil; that is, had no ability to diſcern the one, or the other, Deut. 1. 39.

V. 16. For before the childe ſhall know to refuſe the evil, and chooſe the good] There is again much diverſity of judgement among Interpreters, concerning the childe here mentioned. The Jewiſh Writers would have it meant of their Emmanuel, the ſon of Ahaz, or Iſaiah; or, I know not who elſe, that then lived; but unleſs they be able to give us aſſurance of ſuch an one, in thoſe dayes, born of a virgin; he cannot be the Emmanuel, ſpoken of by the Prophet. Some of our Writers expound it of the true Emmanuel, the Lord Jeſus; long before whoſe conception and birth, and much more, education and growth, that ſhould be effected, that is here foretold. But little comfort could this afford to Ahaz, or ſtay of minde againſt his fears, to tell him, that before ſuch an one were grown up to years of ſome diſcretion, as was to be born divers hundred of years after his deceaſe, his two principal adverſaries ſhould be cut off. The moſt therefore, and the beſt, underſtand it, not of Emmanuel, the virgins birth, before mentioned; but of ſome other, or any other young childe, that then was; and here they conceive the ſign, to be directly and expreſly delivered, that God had of himſelf, voluntarily offered to give Ahaz; to wit, that in ſo ſhort a time, as ſuch a childe could be able to diſcern good and evil, thoſe two, that he ſo much feared, ſhould both of them be deſtroyed.

for] Or, And certainly, or ſurely; aſſuredly. As this particle is uſed, ch. 5. 7. and before here, verſ. 9. Or, yea; as adding a further matter to what he had propounded: and ſo it is taken, 2 King. 18. 34. chap. 36. 19. Pſal. 7. 4. Prov. 2. 3. For having before given Ahaz aſſurance of Gods power, what he was able to do, by an inſtance of a far more incredible matter, verſ. 14. he now paſſeth to the relation of that, which had he faith to believe it, might have given him aſſurance, that according to his gracious promiſe, he would do it; and might be an effectual ſign to him of the ſame.

before the childe] As ſome, a childe; as Numb. 11. 27. where the article alſo is uſed. And as a virgin, verſ. 14. Any one that is now a childe. But as others rather, this childe; as pointing to, or ſingling out one, then in preſence; as Gen. 21. 12. & 44. 31, 32. No other, in all likelihood, then Shear-jaſhub, the Prophets childe, whom, to this purpoſe, God had commanded him to take along with him, verſ. 3: for no other uſe appears of his preſence there, with his father, but this alone. See ch. 8. 4.

ſhall know to refuſe the evil, and chooſe the good] Of the meaning of this phraſe, ſee on ver. 15. Nor doth it follow, that therefore the ſame childe is here ſpoken of, that was there intended: becauſe the ſame thing, in the ſame phraſe, is related of either. For it is an uſuſal thing in Scripture, with our Prophet eſpecially, by way of alluſion, to apply the ſame words and phraſes, unto divers ſubjects, where occaſion is to ſpeak of them together. See on ch. 2. 8, 9. & 66. 3, 4.

the land] The land of Iſrael. Or, as ſome, both of Iſrael, and of Syria, taken collectively. But the former ſeems the plainer.

that thou abhorreſt] In regard of the evil and miſchief that it intendeth againſt thee. Or rather, by which thou art vexed. For the ſame verb that was uſed in the active form, Let us vex her, ver. 6. (which this manifeſtly relates unto) is here uſed in a neuter form, but of a paſſive ſignification. So Exod. 1. 12. The Egyptians were vexed, becauſe of the children of Iſrael: And, Moab was vexed, becauſe of the children of Iſrael, Numb. 22. 3. whom he feared alſo exceedingly; as Ahaz did the like here, verſ. 2. And ſo it is ſaid of Rezon, 1 King. 11. 25. that he was vexed at Iſrael, or had a ſpite at Iſrael, while he reigned in Syria: for ſo would the words there be rendred. Of another reading, ſee the next note.

ſhall be left of both her Kings] Not that the land of Iſrael had two Kings, then reigning in her, at once; but Pekah, and Rezin are called her Kings; the one, as her native; the other, as in confederacy with her. And ſhe is ſaid to be left of them, not as voluntarily relinquiſhing her; but as taken away before they could effect, what by their confederacy they intended. Pekah, being taken captive by Tiglath-Pileſer, King of Aſſyria: and not long after, ſlain by Hoſhea, 2 King. 15. 29, 30: and Rezin alſo taken, and ſlain by the ſame Aſſyrian King, 2 King. 26. 9. Howbeit ſome refer this clauſe of the two kings, not to the word, left, but to the word, vexed. Rendring the whole branch, (as alſo the words lye in the original) the land ſhall be left, (to wit, of her inhabitants; of which phraſe, ſee ch. 6. 12.) by whoſe two kings thou thou art vexed. That which fitly anſwers the ſpeech of thoſe two kings, in conſultation together; let us vex her, ver. 6. and that, not thoſe two Kings onely were cut off, ſo as was before mentioned; but their lands alſo much diſpeopled by the Aſſyrian invaſion, the Iſraelitiſh eſpecially, appears by the ſtory, 2 King. 15. 29, & 16. 9. All which was effected within a year, or two, at the moſt, after the prophecy, as may appear, by comparing the years of Pekah's reign, with thoſe of Ahaz, who began to reign in Pekah's ſeventeenth year, Pekah not ſurviving full four more, 2 King. 15. 27, 30. & 16. 1. So that ſuppoſing Shear-jaſhub, to be one, or two years old, as that time, the event here foretold might well be ſaid to fall out, before the childe had attained to any notable meaſure of being able to diſcern between good and evil. See more hereof, ch. 8. 4.

of both her kings] Or, by whoſe two kings, as above. Heb. from the face of whoſe two kings. The like phraſe is, Exod. 1. 12. Pſal. 38. 3. ch. 21. 15. & 31. 8.

V. 17. The Lord ſhall bring upon thee, &c.] Hitherto the Prophet had endeavoured to comfort Ahaz, and ſtrengthen him againſt his exceſſive feares, by foretelling him, and aſſuring him of the ſpeedy deſtruction of thoſe Kings, whom he ſo much feared. Now he proceeds to foretel him what evil, for his hypocriſie, and impieties, relinquiſhing of God, and making fleſh his arm, ſhould befal him, his people, and poſterity, from thoſe, to wit, the Aſſyrians, whom he ſo much relyed on, as his chief, if not onely ſtay, 2 King. 16. 7, 8. 2 Chr. 28. 16, 21. It is, as if he had ſaid, a far worſe evil, then that thou now feareſt, ſhall befal thee and thine, from thoſe whom thou leaſt ſuſpecteſt.

The Lord ſhall bring] As 2 Chr. 36. 17. God brought upon them the King of the Chaldees. The Aſſyrian ſhall come with commiſſion from God. God will ſend him, ch. 10. 5, 6: and ſo indeed he profeſſed, and pretended to be ſent, chap. 36. 10: though the truth is, he neither knew, nor intended any ſuch ſervice, ch. 10. 7, 11.

bring] Heb. cauſe to come. Make ſuch dayes to come upon thee and thine, as the like have not come: that the elegancy of the phraſe may be retained, and expreſſed in the one member, anſwering to the other.

upon thee] For even in his life time, the evil here threatned, began. So the holy Story telleth us, 2 Chro. 28. 20, 21, 22. that Tiglath-Pilneſer, (called, elſewhere, Tiglath-Pileſer, 2 King. 16. 10.) King of Aſſyria, came to him and diſtreſſed him; but ſtrengthened him not. Though (ſo the word ſhould be rendred; as Joſh. 17. 18.) Ahaz had taken a portion out of the houſe of the Lord, &c. to give to the King of Aſſyria. Of which alſo, 2 King. 16. 8.

and upon thy people] Who ſuffer commonly, yea, of neceſſity, with their Princes, invaded by foreign forces; as they had already, under Ahaz, 2 Chro. 28. 6, 8. and did afterward, from the Aſſyrians much more, chap. 36. 1, 12. Jer. 39. 9.

and upon thy fathers houſe] Thy poſterity. For the greateſt, and heavieſt ſhock of this ſtorm, lighted upon the King, and his ſucceſſors, 2 King. 18. 13. 2 Chr. 33. 11. & 36. 6, 10, 17. ch. 39. 6, 7: and the repetition of the word, upon, and upon, and upon, is very emphatical, and of much force to make the deeper impreſſion, (the like thereunto, ſee Joſh. 7. 11.) it began with him in his life time; for he was in diſtreſs, not from Syria, and Iſrael onely; but from Aſſyria, 2 Chr. 28. 20, 22. It was grievous on the people, principally, under Ezekiah, ch. 36. 1, 12: and at laſt, it fell exceeding heavy on the royal iſſue, under Manaſſes, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, 2 Chr. 33. 11. & 36. Jer. 39. 6, 7. & 52. 10, 11.

dayes that have not come] Dayes, that is, times; the maner of the Scripture, to reckon by dayes. See chap. 1. 1. ſuch times of affliction, as have not formerly befallen them. Evill dayes, Eccl. 12. 1. Eph. 5. 16. and evill times, Eccl. 9. 12. Amos 5. 13. not, that the dayes, or the times, themſelves, are evil; but are ſo called, in regard of the evils that befall men in them.

from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah] Since the time, that the ten Tribes revolted from the houſe of David, and divided themſelves from the tribe of Judah: the greateſt affliction that ever befell that family, and that tribe; either before that time, or to this preſent day; and was the ground of continual wars, and grievous calamities, from time to time, unto this people.

even the King of Aſſyria] So ſome read the words, as by way of appoſition, joyned with the word, dayes; and expounding what is by them meant: as ver. 20. but this conſtruction ſeems here ſomewhat harſh. Others therefore render it, with the King of Aſſyria, as the particle indeed very frequently ſignifies; but they expound it here, with him, that is, by him, taking the word inſtrumentally, as in our language we oft uſe it. Others, laſtly, ſupplying the defect of a particle requiſite to make the ſence entire, render it, from the King of Aſſyria; as Eve, Gen. 4. 1. I have gotten a man (that is, a man-child, as Joh. 16. 21.) from the Lord; and Pſal. 81. 5. when he (Joſeph, that is, the Iſraelites, Pſal. 80. 1.) went out from of Egypt. See v. 20.

the King of Aſſyria] Whom thou ſo much relyeſt upon; and doſt unadviſedly call in, to aſſiſt thee; God will make him, whom thou makeſt thy ſtay, to be a ſore ſcourge, both to thee and thine, chap. 10. 5. Thus it fell out with Ahaz, reſting on the King of Aſſyria, as with Aſa, reſting on the King of Syria, 2 Chr. 16. 7, 9. Now, by the King of Aſſyria, divers Interpreters underſtand, ſome one King only; ſome Tiglath-Pileſer, that diſtreſſed Ahaz, 2 Chr. 28. 20. Some, Sennacherib, that put Hezekiah to ſtraits, chap. 37. 3. Some, Nebuchadnezzar, who had Aſſyria alſo ſubject to him; and ſwept all away before him. See v. 20. I rather concur with thoſe, who take the word, as uſed collectively, and take them in all (together with Eſar-haddon, that captivated Manaſſes, 2 Chr. 33. 11.) ſucceſſively; King, for a ſucceſſion of Kings: as Dan. 2. 37, 38. thou King, art this golden head; that is, thou, and thy Succeſſors in the preſent Monarchy, Dan. 8. 21. The rough goat is the King, (that is, the Kingdome of Greece, and the great horn, between his eyes, the firſt King. The Kings of Syria are mentioned, as the principal vexers and waſters, in thoſe latter times, of Gods people, Neh. 9. 22. (as the Kings of Syria had formerly been, 1 King. 11. 25. & 15. 20. & 20. 1. 2 King. 5. 2. & 6. 24 & 8. 12. & 12. 17. & 13. 22. & 15. 37. and 16. 6. 2 Chr. 24. 23, 25. & 28. 5.) who having been at firſt called in to help againſt others; and thereby taking ſome taſte of a fertile ſoyl, and wealthy State, were not afterward long at reſt; but were from time to time, making incurſions into it, and pillaging of it, untill at length, they made themſelves abſolute Maſters of it, ruined the State, and carried wealth, and people away together, Jer. 50. 17. God gave all into their hands, 2 Chr. 36. 17.

V. 18. And it ſhall come to paſs, in that day, that] Of this manner of ſpeech, ſee on chap. 2. 2. & 3. 24. & 4. 1, 2, 3. He proceeds to deſcribe, both the inſtruments, by whom God would inflict theſe judgments upon them; and the calamities that the land and State ſhould ſuſtain in thoſe times. For, the word, day, is of large extent, as by the places pointed to, may appear: and ſo v. 20. 21, 23.

the Lord will hiſs for] Or, rather, whiſtle [illegible]; will call for them: as men whiſtle, ſometime, to perſons that are afar of; or, as the ſhepherd calleth in his ſheep with his whiſtle. See chap. 5. 26.

for the flye that is in the uttermoſt part of the rivers of Egypt; and for the bee that is in the land of Aſſyria] A deſcription of thoſe people, by whom chiefly, the land of Judah ſhould be ſo grievouſly afflicted; or of whom thoſe forces ſhould joyntly conſiſt, by which that Kingdom and State ſhould be ruined.

the fly that is in the uttermoſt part of the rivers of Egypt] Fly, taken collectively, for flies; as bee, afterward, for bees; and ox, and aſſe; for oxen, and aſſes, chap. 1. 3. the verb plurall in the next verſe ſheweth it. Howbeit, there may be ſome emphaſis in it; as if it intimated, that God would do all that is here threatned, with a flie, and a bee. By this fly, ſome underſtand the Egyptians themſelves; by whom the land of Judah was invaded, under the conduct of Pharao Necho, after the death of Joſiah; who ſubdued it, and made it tributary, 2 King. 23. 33, 35. And they ſuppoſe the Egyptians to be termed flyes; as for the great multitude of them, that ſhould come like ſwarms of flies, Exod. 8. 21, 23, 24. So, in alluſion to the condition of their land, which lying lowe, and abounding in ponds, ditches, and water-courſes, cut out from the river, chap. 10. 7, 8, 10. was much peſtered with flyes. Others underſtand by it, not the Egyptians themſelves; but ſome other Nations, as the Moabites, Edomites, Lybians, and Ethiopians, that bordered upon them, chap. 18. 1. the rather, becauſe it is not ſaid, that is in Egypt; but, that is in the uttermoſt parts of the rivers of Egypt, that is, of Nilus, which brancheth it ſelf out into divers channels, where it runneth into the Sea, chap. 11. 15. or, which is cut out into many ſtreams, toward the upper part, where it entreth upon Egypt; which they ſuppoſe to be principally here intended. Nor is it improbable, but that the Aſſyrian king, having made conqueſt, both of Egypt it ſelf, and thoſe adjacent parts, did from thence bring many that ſerved under him, when he invaded the land of Judah, 2 King. 24. 2, 7. ch. 20. 4, 6. of whetherſoever it be meant, the flye here mentioned, may well be deemed, to have ſome reference to the fleſh-flye, as to the people, in regard of its uſual practice of ſucking; as theirs, of ſhedding blood. Other reſemblances between them, Interpreters give; which I paſs by, becauſe they ſeem beſides the Prophets intention, and ſomewhat too farr fetch'd.

and for the bee that is in Aſſyria] The Aſſyrians are compared to bees, as for the numerouſneſſe of them, wherein they agree with flyes; ſo withal, for their fierceneſs, and eagerneſs, wherein theſe go beyond them, being armed with ſtings, which they want; and, as able, in that regard, to do the more hurt, ſo much fiercer alſo, then flyes, Deut. 1. 44. Pſal. 118. 12. and of the fierceneſs and cruelty of the Chaldeans, who go alſo under that name, as Subjects to one Soveraign; of which before, on ver. 17. See 2 Chr. 36. 17. Jer. 8. 17. ch. 5. 29, 30. Jer. 5. 15, 16. where it is ſaid of them, that their quiver is an open Sepulchre; alluding to their ſhafts, (whereof, ſee ch. 5. 28.) which, together with their darts, and javelins, lins, might well be reſembled by the ſtings of thoſe creatures; by whoſe name, alſo, it is ſuppoſed that they are here ſtyled, becauſe the land of Aſſyria, being a wooddy country, as much abounded with bees, as Egypt with flyes. See Jer. chap. 51. 14, 27.

V. 19. And they ſhall come] Thoſe flyes and bees ſhall come at Gods whiſtle, without ſtay, or delay; and enter upon the land of Judah, ch.5.26.

and ſhall reſt] What they ſhall do, when they are come: they ſhall reſt, that is, ſet down; as ſome, pitch their camp: for ſo they would have it expounded, both before, v. 2. and here. But that ſeems neither right there, nor ſo fit or full here. The meaning of the Prophet ſeems to be, proceeding in the ſame metaphor which he had before uſed; that theſe forreign forces, ſhould, having entred the Country, poſſeſſe themſelves of all places therein; as the flyes did in Egypt, Exod.8.21,24. Pſal.78.45. & 105.31. and make ſpoyl and havock of all, where they came; as, beſide the flyes, the locuſts alſo there did, Exod.10.4,5,6,14,15. (where the word of reſting, here found, is likewiſe uſed) Pſal. 78. 46. & 105. 34, 35.

all of them] The number of them being not waſted, or diminiſhed by the length of their march, or by any oppoſition in their way, ch.5.27. as ch.34.16. not one ſhall fail: none ſhall hang back, ſtay behind, or be miſſing, of thoſe that God hath thus called and deſigned to this ſervice, in the deſolate valleys] Heb. valleys of deſolations, or waſtneſſes. The word is no where elſe uſed, but here, and before, ch.5.6. This ſome underſtand of the Towns, or Cities ſcituate in the vale, neer the brook; as the next branch of the ſtrong cities, and forts, ſeated aloft, on the rocky and craggy hills; as implying, that all places, high, and low, ſhould be ſeized by them. But it may well be underſtood, as the moſt, of thoſe valleys, that having bin before, rich and fertile; had bin depopulated, and ſpoiled, by the foregoing warres; as implying, that there ſhould be no place left ſo bare, but that it would be taken up by them to quarter in, (ſo numerous they ſhould be) and further ſtript of what was left. An alluſion there is, in the words, to the manner of flies, muskeetoes, and gnats, that are uſually moſt buſie in low watry places, being there bred by the moiſture of the ſoyl. The word firſt and properly, ſignifies a brook; and thence, in the ſecond place, a valley, or lower ſlip of ground, wherein ſuch uſe to run between the hills, Pſal.104.10. chap. 57. 5, 6. Hence, the valley of Kedron, as ſome; and the brook of Kedron, as others render it, 1 King.15.13. 2 King.23.4,6.

and in the holes of the rocks] Alluding to the manner of bees, that in ſuch places are wont to harbour. Whence that phraſe, not ſo commonly aright underſtood, of honey out of the rock, Pſal.81.16. and of ſucking honey out of the rock, and oyl out of the hard ſtone; or, flint of the rock, Deut. 32, 13. meant, of drawing honey from the bees that hive in the one; and oyl from the olive trees that grow on the other. The meaning here ſeems to be, that no place ſhould be found ſo ſecure, or ſecret, that this people would not pierce into. See ch. 2.10, 19,21. & Jer.9 21. & 16.16.

and upon all thornes] Or, buſhes, or ſhrubs. It appears to be the name of ſome baſe plant; in that, chap. 55. 13. (and, ſave here and there, the word is not read) it is ſaid, that inſtead of it, the firre ſhall ſpring up. Some render it cotages: and ſuch may in the trope be intended. But the proper ſignification of the word is ſuch, as hath been ſaid; and it ſuits well with the former metaphor; for the flies and gnats uſe to gather about ſuch, and that in ſuch abundance, ſometime, that the buſhes and ſhrubs ſeem to be covered all over with them: buſhes and thickets are places alſo of ſhelter, Gen. 3. 8. 2 Chr. 33.11. but ſhould not ſhelter ought, or any from them.

and upon all buſhes] So many of our Interpreters render it; taking their riſe from ſome of the Rabbines, who tell us (as other of them do, upon better ground, of the former) that the word ſignifies trees, mean, or baſe, of no reckoning, or worth. And theſe derive it from a word, which though, properly, it ſignifie to praiſe, commend, extoll, glory in, bragg of; Yet by antiphraſis, ſay they, ſignifies baſe, ignominious, unworthy of any praiſe. But I finde not, nor do they produce any place, where either the noun, or the verb, is ſo uſed. It is true, that in one form, the verb ſignifies to be mad. Eccl.2.2. and to make mad, ch.44. 25. and to make as if one were mad, 1 Sam.21.14. yet, not by antiphraſis neither, but by exceſſe rather; becauſe in exceſſe of glorying and vaunting, men either become ſo ſometime, or carry themſelves as ſuch: nor doth it ſtand with reaſon, to deduce a term rather from that, (were it found ſometime ſo uſed) that a word by ſuch an impropriety of ſpeech, and contrariety, ſometime doth ſignifie, then, from that which it natively and properly imports; unleſſe there were ſomewhat elſe, either to enforce, or induce thereunto; whereof neither here appears. The word therefore, whence this deſcends, ſignifying ſometime to praiſe, or, glory in; and ſometime alſo to ſhine, and be bright, ch. 13.10. whereof the morning-ſtar hath its name, chap.14.12. Hence, others rather render it, goodly, fair, beautiful, commendable trees, and the oppoſition alſo, ſeems to carry it this way. Some indeed, ſuppoſe it to ſignifie goodly buildings, or ſtately Palaces; as the former, cottages. And the Chaldee ſeems to go this way. So it is ſaid of the flies in Egypt, that they filled Pharaoh's houſe, and the houſes of his ſervants, as well as of other his Subjects, Exod.8. 21, 24. and houſes of both ſorts may well be typified by the plants, or trees, here mentioned; but theſe in the firſt place. Nor is it unuſuall for flyes to ſwarm, as well about fair and tall trees, as about low and ſorry ſhrubs. Others yet underſtand hereby, men of ſtate, or ſtature; in compariſon of whom, others ſeem but as ſhrubs. See ch.2.13. But the Prophet ſeems here to ſpeak not ſo much of perſons, as of places: his intent being to ſhew how theſe flyes and bees ſhould ranſack all places, and make prey and ſpoyl of all that there they met with, (ſee Jer. 5. 17. & 8.16.) that which, by another very lively reſemblance, is in the next verſe further ſet forth. The word here uſed, is no where elſe read; and by miſtake of a letter, is both in the old Latine, and ancient Greek, rendred holes, or clefts. Which were ſpoken of here before.

V. 20. In the ſame day] Or, at that time; as v.18.

ſhall the Lord] He that, before, called in the fly, and the bee, with his whiſtle, v.18.

ſhave] Not cut, ſimply, as ch. 15.2. nor clip, as Jer. 48. 37. nor ſhear, as Act.18.18. 1 Cor.11.6. or poll, as Ezek.44. 20. but ſhave, Ezek.44.20. 1 Cor.11.6. For it is one thing to cut, or poll, or trim, which was neglected by them commonly in times of grief; as Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. 19.24. and is uſually done with ſciſſers, or the like; and another thing to ſhave, or to cut cloſe to the skin, as with the cleanſed leper, Levit.14.9. which is not done, but with the razour, Pſal.52.2. and was wont to be done in times of extreameſt grief, and heavieſt mourning, Jer.41. 5. And unto this ſhaving of themſelves, upon ſuch occaſions, of which, ſee on ch.3.17,24. Some ſuppoſe that the Prophet ſhould here have an eye; as if the meaning were, that ſo great miſeries, and grievous calamities ſhould befall them, that for extreamity of grief, they ſhould even ſhave themſelves. But the ſhaving here mentioned, (as that alſo done, in a type, at Gods command, by the Prophet, Ezek. 5.1.) ſeems to look another way, and to be of another nature. For, that done, in ſuch caſes, was voluntary, and performed oft, by themſelves, Job 1. 20. this enforced, and executed by the hand of another, as acting the part of a barber. That was the taking off the hair of ſome one part of the body, the head only, Job 1.20. or the beard, Jer. 41.5. This is a ſhaving off all the hair of the whole body, (which on ſuch occaſions was never heard of) as by the enumeration of the ſeveral parts, whereon hair ordinarily grows, appeareth; and may rather be deemed, to allude to the ſhaving of the leper, Levit.13. 8,9. or the Levites, Numb. 8,7. who at the time of their purification, had their fleſh ſhaved all over: and ſignifieth an utter ſtripping of them of all that was ought worth.

with a razor] A ſharp barbers razor, Ezek. 5. 1. So is the enemy, Gods inſtrument, here ſtyled; as being in Gods hand, as the razor in the barbers hand, which cutteth as deep, and as far as He pleaſeth; but cannot cut deeper, or further then He will. See ch.10.5,15.

that is hired] The Greek, by miſtake of a point or two, render it; that is made drunk: which ſome of ours ſeem not to diſallow; becauſe it is ſaid, My ſword ſhall be made drunk, ch. 34.5. But the word, that ſignifieth drunk, 1 Sam. 1. 14. though coming neer this, yet differeth from it, not in the ſound of the initial letter alone, as Shibboleth, and Sibboleth, Judg.12.6. but in the doubling alſo of the middle conſonant, and the change of its annexed vowel. The word ſignifies a mercinary, or hired one. Which ſome underſtand by a trope, ſo termed, as one that God would make uſe of to the purpoſe; becauſe men are wont to uſe things hired more freely, not regarding what they put them to. But we need not ſtep out of the way, to fetch in ſuch tropes, when we have a plainer ſence at hand. The queſtion is, only, how, or by whom, this razor is ſaid to be, or have been hired; for the words will bear either. Some ſay, by God, who, with hope of obtaining a large booty, as with a bait, enticed this great king, to invade that wealthy kingdom: and this they build on thoſe words of God, in Ezekiel, concerning Nebuchadnezzar, I cauſed his Army to ſerve a great ſervice againſt Tyre; yet neither he, nor his Army, had any wages for it. I will therefore give him the land of Egypt; and that ſhall be the wages for his Army, Ezek.29.18,19. But others rather underſtand it, of Ahaz his hiring of Tiglath-Pileſer the Aſſyrian king, to come in to his ſuccour, againſt Pekah and Rezin; Iſrael and Syria, 2 King. 16.7,8. 2 Chr. 28.16,21. and this ſuits well with the main drift of the Prophets diſcourſe here; which is to let Ahaz underſtand, what an unadviſed courſe he had taken, in betaking himſelf to the king of Aſſyria; and feeing him to come in to his aſſiſtance, he had in ſo doing but hired a razor to ſhave him and his State, of whatſoever was of any worth or uſe in it; as the event ſhould hereafter ſhew: It is an alluſion to the uſe of Barbers, whom men uſually hire to barb and trim them.

namely] Or, to wit, or, even, annexed by appoſition to the former; but the particle exegetical omitted. See v.17.

by them beyond the river] Heb. by the paſſages, (as ſome render it, Jer. 22.20.) or, by the ſides, (as Jer.48.28. & 49. 32.) of the river; that is, by thoſe that abide and inhabite about it; and he ſaith, in the paſſages; as ſome ſuppoſe, becauſe the river ſpoken of, running not ſtrait on, in a direct current; but with many windings and turnings, had therefore many places of paſſage upon it; but of this there is no neceſſity: for that, the word is frequently uſed, for ſides, or borders, Exod. 32.15. 1 King.4.24. and may well ſigniſie thoſe, that bordered in any place upon it.

the river] This river ſome would have to be Nilus, the river of Egypt, ch.11.25. & 19.5. becauſe mention was made of it before, v. 18. but the moſt rather underſtand it of the river Euphrates, that divideth Syria and Aſſyria; called the river, Pſal. 72. 8. Jer. 2. 18. where both of them are mentioned.

by the King of Aſſyria] This ſhaving was begun by Tiglath-Pileſer, 2 King.16.8. 2 Chr.28.21. continued by Sennacherib, and Eſar-haddon, 2 King.18.13,16. 2 Chr. 33.11. conſummated by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 24.13,16. & 25.9, 17. ch.39.6. whom ſome ſuppoſe, principally, here intended; and to be the rather termed here, king of Aſſyria, then of Chaldea; though Lord of both: partly, becauſe the Monarchy then bare that name, ch.36.4. and partly, to intimate Gods retaliation of Ahaz his ſin, in waſting his land by him, whom, refuſing to truſt unto God, he had wickedly relyed upon.

the head] Not by cutting off the head it ſelf, or ſlaying, as the Rabbines moſt of them, upon the place, do moſt ridiculouſly expound it; applying it to the deſtruction of Sennacheribs forces by the Angel, ch.37.36. to which may be added, that ridiculous tale, reported out of ſome other of them, of the Angels ſhaving his head and his beard. But as it is ſaid of the Nazarite, he ſhall ſhave his head; that is, the hair of his head, Num.6.9. and that, not ſome few locks of it, as Judg.16. 19. but all the hair of the whole head. The hair whereof is matter, not of ornament only, but of muniment alſo, eſpecially in thoſe times, wherein they had wont to go bare-head; which was the uſual manner of the ancient, both Greeks and Romanes: (as by ſtories and monuments of Antiquity doth appear: and the Apoſtle may ſeem to have reſpected, 1 Cor. 11.4,7.) only, when need was, in rain, or the like, covering their heads with ſome part of their gown, or upper garment: and may be conjectured to have been alſo the common guiſe of the Jewiſh people; for that covering of the head, is mentioned, upon occaſion of mourning, as a matter otherwiſe unuſual. 2 Sam.15.30. Howbeit, ſee Ezek.24.17. which place requires further conſideration.

and the hair of the feet] That is, of the ſecret, or lower parts of the body, Ezek. 16. 7,25. See on ch. 6.2. concerning which, the Hebrew Doctors expreſly obſerve, that they were alſo ſhaved in the lepers, and in the Levites, at the purifying of either, Levit.14.8,9. Num.8.7. It is, as if he had ſaid, they ſhall make all bare, from top to toe.

And it] To wit, this razor that is here attributed to the inſtrument, that was before aſcribed to the chief actor; to God, that made uſe of it. They ſtrain too far, that render it, it ſhall end with the beard.

ſhall alſo conſume the beard] Not take off ſome part of it, as Hanun did Davids Meſſengers, ſhaving away only the one half, 2 Sam.10.4. but conſume it, make an utter riddance of it, take away the whole beard, the hair whereof is deemed, not an ornament only, but an argument of virility; which God therefore would not have defaced, Levit. 19. 27. and it was deemed therefore a contumelious uſage of Davids ſervants, whom that Ammonite ſo disfigured, 2 Sam.10.5. Now here by the head, ſome underſtand the King and his Princes, ch. 9. 15. by the beard, the Prieſts, Pſal.133.2. by the feet, the common ſort of people, Judg.4.10. & 8.5. And howſoever this may ſeem ſomewhat curious: yet certain it is, that an utter ſtripping off the whole body of that State; and of all Eſtates among them, of whatſoever was, or might be, of uſe, honour, or ornament with them, is by this ſhaving of head, beard, and feet intended. It is a ſpeech parallel to that proverbial form, not an hair of your head ſhall periſh, Luk.21.18. Act.27.34. for, as an abſolute indemnity is implyed in the one, that they ſhould not ſuſtain ſo much as an hair-worth loſſe: ſo an utter devaſtation is imported in the other; that not ſo much as an hair-worth of ought ſhould be left. As the Rabbines ſay of the leper that is to be cleanſed, the Prieſt that ſhaveth him, muſt not leave an hair; if he do leave an hair or two, all is nothing: they ſhould ſtrip all ſorts of them, of all that was ought worth. So it is ſaid, Lam.1.10. The adverſary ſeized on all her deſireable, or, delectable things: and Jer.8.16. They have devoured the land, and all that is in it: and chap. 39. 6. There ſhall nothing be left.

V. 21. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that, &c.] As ver. 18. From hence, the Prophet relateth the condition of thoſe that ſhould be left in the land, after Sennacheribs Invaſion, as ſome; or rather, as others, after the Babylonian deportation: and in what ſtate the whole land ſhould be, after this ſhaving. For they ſeem to ſhoot wide, that turn this to a ſpiritual notion of Gods gracious proviſion, and abundant ſupply of all neceſſaries, for his, in times of publike calamity.

a man ſhall nouriſh a young cow, and two ſheep] In theſe words is noted, the great penury of thoſe that ſhould remain in the land, after it had been ſo plundered by the enemy. Thoſe that had kept great herds before, ſhould have ſcarce a cow, or a young heifer left; and thoſe that were poſſeſſed of a numerous flock, not above one or two ſheep.

a man] One, ſay ſome, of the better rank; and ſo, indeed, ſometime it is taken, where oppoſed to, or diſtinguiſhed from Adam. But, here, I ſuppoſe, as elſewhere, more generally, and indefinitely, for any man whatſoever. See ch.2.9.

nouriſh] Heb. quicken, that is, keep alive: as Pſal. 22. 29. which ſome underſtand, of ſaving; as Deut.20.16. when the reſt were deſtroyed and conſumed by the enemy, Deut.28.31. but it ſeems rather to be taken here, as 2 Sam. 12. 3. for to keep, or nouriſh; or, if you will, to keep for food; which is, hence, ſo termed, Gen.45.5. Judg.6.4. not to plow, or till with. Few, for fear of ſome new Invaſion, having any mind of giving themſelves yet to tillage, and wanting cattle alſo to till withal.

a young cow] Heb. a calf, or, heifer, of the ox, or, herd; as Gen.12.16. & 26.14. Exod.9.3. Deut. 12.21. See the ſame phraſe, Deut.21.3. 1 Sam.16.2.

and two ſheep] Or, two of the leſſer cattle, ſheep or goates: For in way of diſtinction from the former, it comprehends both; as in the places before pointed to, and Levit.ch.1.2,10.

V. 22. And it ſhall come to paſs, for the abundance of milk, that they ſhall give, he ſhall eat butter] Or, that he ſhall eat butter. For the particle would be here ſupplyed, as well, as ver.21. & 23. This ſome underſtand of the great plenty that God would bleſſe the land withal; after the raiſing of the Aſſyrian ſiege under Sennacherib, and the departure of his forces, notwithſtanding the great havock that had been made by them, ch.37.30,31. But others rather, with more probability, underſtand it, as an argument of depopulation, and a great paucity of Inhabitants left behind in it, when the main body of them was carried away captive by the Chaldeans; the families left, being ſo ſmall, that the milk of a few cattle, would be ſufficient, both to feed them for the preſent, and to afford alſo ſome over-plus, to make butter of for future proviſion; and thoſe few milch cattle, yeeld the more, becauſe they ſhould have paſtures at large to feed the more freely in; being not now reſtrained by the incloſures of thoſe that joyned field to field before, ch.5.8,17.

for the abundance of milk that they ſhall give] Heb. from the abundance of making milk: to make milk, for, to yeeld milk: as to make fruit, for, to yeeld fruit: and, to make wine, for, to yeeld wine. See ch.5.2,10.

he ſhall eat butter] Having but few in family, and none to take it of him.

for butter, and honey, ſhall every one eat, that is left in the land] To wit, of Judah. Heb. in the midſt of the land: as ch. 5.8. & 6.12. This ſome ſuppoſe to imply great plenty of victuals, through Gods bleſſing, as above: and by butter, and honey, to be intimated more delicate dyet, as before, ver. 15. Others rather, take it for ordinary, frugal, country fare: as milk, cheeſe, and butter commonly are: and for honey, the woods affording ſtore of it, it may ſeem by the ſtory of John the Baptiſt, to have been no extraordinary food, Matth. 3. 4. Mar. 1.6. on ſuch food therefore, for ſcarcity, and want of fleſh, corn, fruits, and other variety of food, ſhould the poorer ſort, left in the land (2 King.25.12. Jer. 39. 10.) feed; and that alſo the more freely and fully, having none (of the richer ſort eſpecially; being either conſumed, or captivated, chap. 5.13,14. & 6.11,12.) either to deprive them of it, or to utter it unto.

V. 23. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that, &c.] As ver. 21.

every place ſhall be, where there were a thouſand vines, at a thouſand ſilverlings, it ſhall even be for bryars and thornes] This, and what followeth, ſome take, as if it were ſaid, that ſuch places as had been fertile and fruitfull before, ſhould then lye waſte and deſolate; and on the other ſide, ſuch as had been waſte and barren before, ſhould then become fertile and fruitfull, ver. 25. To which interpretation, they add ſpiritual ſences, of Gods raiſing the weak and lowly; and pulling the haughty great ones down, 1 Sam. 2.4,5,8. Pſal. 107. 40, 41. & 114. 7,8. Luk. 1.51,53. See chap. 29. 17. Others take it in a plainer and more familiar ſence, as importing only the great deſolation of the land, in regard of the fruits of it. Such as is deſcribed, ch. 1.7. Jer. 4.23,26. & 8.16. as before, the depopulation of it, in regard of its Inhabitants, v. 22. to wit, that the richeſt and fruitfulleſt places, for want of husbanding and manuring, ſhould be overgrown with uſeleſſe and harmfull traſh, v. 24. ch. 5.6.

a thouſand vines] Heb. a thouſand vine: as we uſe to ſay; a thouſand horſe. So 2 Sam. 10.6: a thouſand man, for, a thouſand men: and vine, for, vines; as bryar and thorn, for, bryars and thorns, hereafter: and ver. 24,25.

a thouſand] That is, many. A certain number, for, an uncertain; as Pſal. 50.10. chap. 3.17. Mic. 6.6. Amos 5.3.

at a thouſand ſilverlings] Heb. a thouſand of ſilver. That is, ſo many ſhekels. For that is uſually underſtood, where the coyn or weight is not expreſſed; as 2 Sam. 18. 11, 12. Matth. 26.15. The ſhekel, then being in weight and value, about our half crown: the ſum that ſuch vineyards, being of the beſt ſort, were yearly let for, came to about one hundred and twenty and five pounds. See Cant. 8.11: for they ſeem to ſhoot wide, who expound it of the ſmall quantity of wine, and money for it, that vines ſhould, in thoſe times, yeeld; as if it were ſaid, that the vines having not been pruned and dreſſed, as formerly, for fear of the enemy, ſhould yeeld ſo little wine, that no man would give above a ſhekel for the wine that any one of them ſhould yield. See ch. 5. 10. The verſe following carrieth it the other way. And thoſe Rabbines are yet wider, who refer this to Ezekiahs times, after Sennacheribs overthrow, when men by that good Kings perſwaſions, giving themſelves to the ſtudy of the law, and drinking but little wine, ſhould neglect the dreſſing of their vines.

ſhall be briars and thorns] Heb. for briars, and for thorns. A redundancy of ſpeech. The like whereunto, ſee ver. 17. ſee alſo ver. 24. & 25. not that they ſhould be ſet apart for ſuch traſh, as fields are, ſome for corn, ſome for pulſe, and the like, chap. 28. 25. being places appointed for them; but that through neglect, they ſhould be ſo overſpread with them, as if they were for no other uſe, Prov. 24. 31. See ch. 5.6.

V. 24. with arrows, and with bows ſhall they come thither] Heb. with arrows, and with bow (that is, with bow, and arrows. For it is a redundancy, ſuch, as ver. 23.) ſhall he come thither: that is, ſhall men come thither; as chap. 2.19. or ſhall one come thither: (for the verb is ſingular) So, ſhe bare, for, one bare; or, was born, 2 Sam. 21.8. thither: they ſhall go thither ſo weaponed, ſay ſome, becauſe of the thickneſſe and greatneſs of thoſe thorny ſhrubs, to make their paſſage through, free without hurt or annoyance, 2 Sam. 23. 6,7. but a bill, or wood-hook, were for that purpoſe fitter, then either bowe, or ſhaft. To hunt, ſay others, ſuch beaſts as uſe to haunt places of that nature, for covert: and the bow indeed is one of the huntſmans chief weapons, Gen. 27.3. But this ſorts not ſo well with the Prophets ſcope. Others ſay, they went ſo weaponed, for fear of the enemy, by reaſon whereof, they durſt not ſtir abroad to viſit their grounds, or look after their cattle; they went abroad, as thoſe wrought, Neh. 4. 17,18. See Lam. 5.9. but neither doth this ſeem here ſo probable. Others therefore ſay, to defend themſelves againſt ſuch, either wilde beaſts, ſerpents, or other harmful creatures, as they might meet with lurking there; and this, the very next clauſe leads us to.

becauſe all the land ſhall become bryars and thorns] The land ſhall be generally over grown with them, chap. 32.13. as it is ſaid of the ſlothful perſon, the whole ſurface of his field was overſpread with the like, Prov. 24. 31. and conſequently, would be over-run alſo with wilde beaſts, and other harmfull creatures; as is uſual with places, by Inhabitants abandoned, and over-grown in ſuch manner, Exod. 23.29. chap. 13. 21. & 34. 14. See the comminations, Gen. 3. 18. Levit. 26. 22.

bryars and thorns] Heb. bryar, and thorn; as vine, v. 23. So ver. 23,25.

V. 25. And on all hills, that ſhall be digged with a mattock, there ſhall not come thither, the fear of bryars and thorns] Some read the words, far otherwiſe, on this manner, As for all the hills, that were digged with the mattock, thou ſhalt not come thither, for fear of bryars and thorns. A want of the prepoſition, as Mal. 2.5. and they conceive the Prophets meaning to be, that thoſe hilly places, which had been before curiouſly kept, and digged for vineyards, orchards, or gardens, 1 King. 21. 2. Luk. 13.8. ſhould likewiſe be ſo over-grown with brambles, and bryars, that no man ſhould dare to enter upon them. But this agreeth not with the latter part of the verſe; for how ſhould their cattle then be turned in thither? The moſt therefore follow the more received reading. But ſome underſtand it, of a change for the better; that the barren places on the hills, that before would yeeld nothing, without a great deal of hard labour and toyl, ſhould be free from thoſe obſtructions, and over-ſpreading of ſuch noxious ſhrubs, as infeſted other places; and becoming fertile, afford their cattle good paſture. And the Hebrew Doctors run moſt this way. See before, on ver. 23. But this ſeems to croſſe the fore-going diſcourſe, and the main ſcope of the Prophets ſpeech. Others ſuppoſe it to have relation to thoſe that were before ſaid, not to venture out unweaponed, for fear of the enemy; that they ſhould betake themſelves to the mountains, that were likewiſe overgrown with buſhes, and bryars; as to places of more ſecurity: the enemies fear, over-ſwaying the fear of any hurt, that from thoſe thorny ſhrubs might accrue unto them, and by the hard labour of their hands, there, help themſelves. Others again would have the meaning to be, that no place ſhall be ſhunned for fear of bryars and brambles; albeit they ſhould require never ſo much pains to rid them. Others, that men having betaken themſelves thither, ſhould ſo diligently grub up thoſe hilly places, that there ſhould be no fear of bryar or bramble there; but that their cattle might ſafely go at large, and feed there, which for fear of the enemy, they durſt not truſt on the plain, Lam. 5. 9. unto whoſe footing alſo, ſome attribute this immunity from bryars and thorns, as tredding them down, as faſt as they came up. Others laſtly, which ſeems to come neereſt the Prophets minde, underſtand the words of ſuch places on the hills, which the rich had fenced in for pleaſure, or profit; that ſuch fences being now caſt down, and made away, they ſhould lye open to cattle, as well great, as ſmall.

And on all hills] Or, And as for all thoſe hills. The nominative put abſolutely, as Pſal. 11.4. & 18. 30. or, And all hills. See further below.

that ſhall be digged] As Luk. 13. 18. or, houghed; which beſt anſwereth the Latine, here; both old, and latter; and ſeems moſt agreeable to the Hebrew. See ch. 5. 6. not ploughed, as the Greek renders it. For into ſuch places was not the plow brought, nor there uſed, that the beaſts might not trample on the looſe earth, or the tender plants, with their footing.

that ſhall be] Or, that ſhould be; or, had wont ſo to be: as Mal. 1.6. a ſon will honour his father; that is, ſhould, or is wont ſo to do. That uſed not to be ploughed for grain, but to be digged, for planting of vines, or of trees, either for ſight, or fruit; or, for the ſetting, and ſowing of herbs and flowers, 1 King. 21.2. (to which purpoſe alſo, the hilly parts were much uſed, Jer. 3.2,13. & 31.5.) and to be kept in due order afterward, from time to time, by weeding and houghing.

with the mattock] Or, ſpade, or hough; an inſtrument uſed, for weeding, and banking, and looſening the earth.

there ſhall not come thither, the fear of bryars and thorns] That which was before ſaid, is underſtood by ſome, not of bryars and thorns, growing up in them, as v. 24. but of ſuch thorny buſhes, as had formerly ſerved for hedg and fence about them, Pſal. 62.3. chap. 5.2. Hoſ. 2.6. to keep cattle from breaking in to depaſture the ground, and crop or bruiſe upon the vines, and other plants therein; which being now broken down, there ſhould be no fear of them, to hinder beaſts from free entrance, to feed there at pleaſure, chap. 5.6. Hoſ. 2.12. But the moſt expound them of the former, as v. 24. yet much differing in expoſition of the place, one from another; whereunto, I ſhall add, and leave it to be conſidered of by the learned; whether the words ſo taken, the text may not be thus read; And on the hills, that had wont to be digged with mattock, or ſpade, that no fear of bryar or thorn might come thither, ſhall a place alſo be for ſending in of oxen, and the treading of leſſer cattle. All the difficulty here lyes in the defect of the particle, that; importing the end, or iſſue: the want whereof, both in that language, is not unuſual, as Pſal. 10.4. chap. 5.11. & 10.2. Hoſ. 1.6. as alſo in the Greek of the New Teſtament. Rom. 8.29. 1 Cor. 1.8. Jam. 2.5.

but they ſhall be for the ſending forth of oxen, &c.] They ſhall all lye open for cattle of all ſorts to graze upon, and trample down at pleaſure.

but they ſhall be] Heb. and it ſhall be: and, for, but; as ch. 6.13. & 29. 13. or, ſhall alſo be, as Jer. 1. 3. to wit, a place, which, though wanting, as 2 Sam. 7.1. 1 King. 18.12. Some alſo put here into the text: or, without any ſuch inſertion; And thoſe hills, &c. (that were ſo carefully fenced, and kept before, that no cattle, little or great, could have acceſſe to them, nor bryar or thorn appear in them; but it was preſently weeded out) ſhall each of them be, for, &c. a frame of ſpeech, like that, ch. 6.10. of which, ſee there.

of oxen] Heb. ox, as ch.1.3. ver.21. and ſo afterward here the like.

of leſſer cattle] Of ſheep, or goats. For the word comprehends either, Exod.3.5. They ſhall range and graze freely, after their wonted manner, in thoſe places; from whence they and their owners had formerly been ejected and excluded, by the violent oppreſſions, and undue encloſures of the richer and greater ſort, ch.5.17.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. M*Oreover the Lord ſaid*,&c.] Here beginneth the ſixth Sermon, or Prophecy, of Iſaiah, in this book recorded; contained in the five chapters next enſuing, which make all, but one continued diſcourſe: and that of the ſame nature, and ſubject matter, for the moſt part, with that next before going, ch.7. for it conſiſts partly, of denunciation of judgments againſt Aram and Iſraël; and partly of a prediction of ſuch evils and calamities, as ſhould befall Judah by Aſſur, together with a mixture of ſuch matter of comfort, as might ſupport the faithful under the ſame, and give them ground of hopeful expectation of a gracious iſſue of them: but the former directed unto Ahaz, and his Courtiers; this, directed, and in writing therefore publikely expoſed, to the people.

Moreover] Heb. And. But ſo alſo rendred, Jer. 3.1. & 33. 1. by ſome other here, For; as ch.9.11. & 64.4,5. But becauſe it is no proſecution of any former narration, but a relation of a new, after-revelation, or viſion: I ſuppoſe it ſhould rather be rendred, Again: as Ezek.16.1.

the Lord ſaid] Or, as ſome, hath ſaid; as if it were a ſpeech delivered at one and the ſame time with the former: but of that there is no likelihood.

unto me] In a viſion, or by ſpecial revelation. See chap. 1. ver. 1.

Take thee] As Gen.6.21. & 14.21. So, Go thee, Gen. 12.1. and, Ask thee, ch. 7.11. ſee there.

a roll] Or, a velome; that is, ſuch a parcel of velome, or paper: as being fitted for writing, and written in, might be rolled up, and unrolled, as occaſion was to make uſe of it. See of ſuch rolles, Jer.36.2,23. Rev.6.14. Howbeit, when I ſay velome, or paper, my meaning is not, that the roll, which the Prophet made uſe of, was either of velome, that is, ſome kind of parchment, ſuch as we now uſe; or of paper, ſuch as we now commonly ſo tearm; for the invention of either of theſe, ſeemeth to be far later then Iſaiah's dayes; before which, the moſt common and general uſe for ſuch purpoſes, as we now uſe thoſe, was the ſtrip of an Egyptian cane, or reed, which the Greeks and Latines call papyre, from whence our Engliſh word, paper; though our paper be of another matter and manner of making, then that was. See on chap. 19.7. by theſe terms therefore, I here mean, ſuch materials then in uſe, as were correſpondent to thoſe now in uſe with us. Howbeit, the word here uſed, is by ſome queſtioned; whether it ſignifieth ſuch a roll, or no. And ſome would have it rendred, not a roll, but a pattent, in alluſion to that of the open inſtrument, Jer.32.11. or, a page, becauſe the Talmudiſts ſo term the margine of any writing, that is pure and unwritten: the reaſon is, ſay they, becauſe the word here uſed, comes not from the word, that ſignifies, to roll up, as that doth, Jer. 36.2. but from one that ſignifies, to reveal, or, lay open: of which, ſee more on ch. 3.23. but the Hebrew Doctors go the former way, and derive it from the ſame root with that other; from which, although it doth not ſo regularly deſcend; yet it ſo falleth out in that language, that oft-times words retain the ſignification, not of their own proper root, but of ſome other neer to it, in ſound rather, then in ſence. Nor doth it hinder, but that it may well be ſtyled, a roll; albeit, the word have no ſuch proper notation, the uſe of ſuch rolls being ſo common in thoſe times, Pſal. 40.7. Ezek. 2.9,10. Others chooſe rather to render it, a table, chap. 30.8. Hab. 2.2. and their reaſon is, becauſe he is willed to write, or engrave on it, with a ſtyle; which, ſay they, on parchment, or paper, is not done; but with a pen, or quill. And they ſuppoſe it therefore to have been a table of marble-ſtone; or of braſs, or lead; or the like, Exod.34.1. Job 19.24. Jer.17.1. but the word may as well ſignifie, a writers pen, as a gravers tool, as hereafter ſhall be ſhewed: and the word, write, not engrave, carries it rather to a book, or roll; then ſuch a table as theſe talk of. Nor do we read, that the Prophets did any of them engrave their Sermons on ſuch; nor do thoſe places produced, prove it. See on ch.30.8.

a great roll] Becauſe much matter to be written in it, and that in a fair and large letter. For this Prophecy to be therein engroſſed, was longer then ordinary: as that alſo which Jeremy by Baruchs hand, wrote in a great roll; being a draught of all his former Prophecies, Jer.36.2.

and write] That being ſo written, and expoſed to publike view, it may the better be weighed, and the more ſeriouſly conſidered; as ſuch things are generally deemed to be weighty, which are ſolemnly engroſſed; as alſo, that being by means thereof, commonly read and known, the truth of the Prophecie, upon the event thereof, might the more fully be cleared and confirmed; the Prophet having, as it were, pawned his credit thereupon, Deut. 18. 21,22. Jer. 28. 29: And laſtly, that it might, as upon record, remain unto poſterity, Deut. 31. 19. Job. 19. 23. ch. 30. 8. Jer. 32.10,11,14. Hab. 2. 2,3.

in it] Heb. upon it; as we uſe to ſay, write upon parchment, or paper. Yet the phraſe is elſewhere, to write in a roll, or a book, Job 19. 23. Pſal.40.7. But the former particle is here rather uſed; becauſe the latter followeth prefixed unto the next word, taken inſtrumentally; as Job 19. 24. Jerem. 17. 1.

with a pen] Either of quil, cane, or reed. For ſuch alſo were the pens anciently in uſe. The word here is no where elſe found: but another word that anſwers it, ſignifies as well a Scriveners, or Writers pen, Pſal.46. 1. Jer. 8. 8; as a graver, or carvers tool, Exod. 32. 4. Jer. 17. 1. So may the word alſo, here found, be uſed for either. And here the rather for the former, for the reaſon above rendred.

a mans pen] By this ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors underſtand to be meant onely a material pen; ſo tearmed, in oppoſition to that imaginary pen, that he ſaw in the viſion, like that razor that Ezekiel ſaw in the ſame manner, Ezek. 5.1. which was not a mans razor, no more then this a mans pen. But this is a meer groundleſs fancy. For it appears not, that either Iſaiah, or Ezekiel had any ſuch apparition repreſenting that, as in ſome viſible or imaginary form, that is here or there mentioned, but by a ſecret ſuggeſtion, or inſtinct, which was ſufficient, an injunction to do the ſame: as when a man would have a Scribe, or Notary, to draw ſome inſtrument for him, he need not ſhew him a pen, or paper, but give him inſtruction onely, what he would have him to write. Others therefore underſtand it, not ſo much of the pen it ſelf, as of the letter, or the ſtyle, as we alſo tearm it. Some of the letter, that it ſhould not be written in ſome ſtrange character, that few could read, as that doom paſſed upon Baltaſar, Dan. 5. 8,15; but in a plain familiar letter, in an ordinary hand; ſuch as any one might eaſily read; and that alſo ſo fair, and large, that it might be read aloof off, and without any long ſtay, Hab. 2.2. Some again of the ſtyle, to wit, that it ſhould be conceived and delivered, not in an obſcure, and dark enigmatical, or ſymbolical manner; as that few capacities ſhould reach it; that part of it eſpecially, concerning the matter of Ahaz his fear, the overthrow of his two potent adverſaries, by the king of Aſſyria, and the ſcourging of him and his, afterward with the ſame rod. For they deſerve no regard, who would have it meant to be ſo written, that no brutiſh party, but a man indeed, a man of wiſdom and underſtanding, Pſal.37.17,22. & 92.6. Prov.30.2. Mic.6.9. ſhould be able to conceive it; as the number of a man, Rev. 13. 18. The word Enoſh, here uſed, (of which, ſee on ch. 2. 9.) will not bear it. Nor doth that ſeem ſo ſound, which ſome have, who would underſtand it, neither of the letter, nor of the frame of ſpeech, but of the ſubject matter of Gods injunction; that it ſhould be tranſacted, not according to the ſtyle of the Court of heaven, where there needs no more, then Gods own will, for the paſſing of ought, Pſal. 115. 3. & 135. 6. Dan. 4. 35. Eph. 1.11. but according to the ſtyle, or manner of proceeding in humane courts, wherein witneſſes are wont to be produced; and nothing done is firm, or of force, without them, Deut. 19.15. 2 Cor. 13. 1: and ſo the Prophet alſo carried the buſineſs, by God enjoyned him, verſ.2. But that phraſe of the ſtyle, of this, or that Court, is of too late an edition; nor hath it age enough to give authority to ſuch an expoſition.

concerning Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] Or, for Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; as Ezek.37. 16. for Judah, and for Joſeph. Or, as others, without either, onely Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; becauſe the particle here uſed, is not afterward repeated, verſ.3. This latter way many, yea, the moſt run; ſuppoſing that there was nothing more written in this great roll, but theſe four words. Which, becauſe it ſeems very improbable; they add, ſome of them, that it is called, a great roll, not from the bigneſs, or largeneſs of the volume; but becauſe it was to contain great myſteries: and others of them, that Princes pattents, though never ſo ſhort, are wont to be engroſſed in large paper, or parchment, and great letters. But not to inſiſt on the forced conſtruction of the one, and the unuſualneſs of ſuch brevity in the other: beſide the improbability of the thing it ſelf; it would not reach the main intent, and purpoſe of this divulging it in writing, when as ſcarce any one, the Prophet himſelf excepted, would be able to underſtand what were thereby meant. The former, therefore, that render the particle, concerning, or, for; ſuppoſe this whole Sermon, or Prophecy, was to be engroſſed in it; and that, as they conceive, after the uſual manner of the Prophets; who uſed to put their Sermons in writing; and having ſo done, to affix them on ſome gate of the Temple; whence, after they had hung there certain dayes, the Prieſts took them down, and ſo laid them up; if they were by them approved; and ſo they were laid up, and came to be preſerved for poſterity. Now what they ſay concerning this particular prophecy, is acknowledged. But what is affirmed concerning an ordinary cuſtom herein, is groundleſs, and nothing probable. It appears not, that the Prophets uſed commonly, by writing, and affixing them in any publike place, for the view of all, ſo to divulge them. The very places that they produce for proof of it; this, and ch. 30.8. & Hab. 2.2. rather intimate the contrary. For what need was there to give order for ſome ſpecial prophecies in this kinde, if that were the ordinary dealing with all. Neither is it to be beleeved, that if moſt of the prophecies, both of Jeremies, and divers others, had been ſo affixed, the Prieſts, that then were, would have taken them in, and had ſuch care of them; and not rather have pulled them down, and torn them in pieces; eſpecially, having ſo maliciouſly and eagerly perſecuted the Prophets, as falſe Prophets, for delivering them by word of mouth, Jer. 20. 1, 2. & 26. 8, 11. & 29. 26. This prophecy therefore, as ſome few other, was by a ſpecial command of God, thus written, and divulged; which, with other, the like, was not uſual.

concerning Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] That is, concerning thy ſon Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; ſo to be named: for, as yet he was not; but is by that name, here ſo ſtiled, in way of anticipation; of which there are many the like examples in Scripture. See Gen 12. 18. with Gen. 28. 19. & 13. 10. with 9. 22. & 33. 17. Exod. 16. 3. Joſh. 7. 24, 26. Judg. 15. 19. The particle is uſed for of, or concerning, Gen. 20. 13. Pſalm 91. 11. Howbeit a late learned writer would have it rendred here, as it moſt uſually ſignifies, to him, or for him; as if the diſcourſe written, were to be inſcribed, and dedicated to him.

Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] Theſe words are very variouſly rendred. Some in making ſpeed to the ſpoil, he haſtneth the prey. Some, to make ſpeed to ſpoil; (as Exod. 12. 33.) and haſte to prey. Some, to the ſpeedy ſpoyler; make haſte to prey. Some, a ſpeedy robber; an haſty ſpoyler; or, a ſpeedy ſpoiler; and one that haſtneth to the prey. Some, make ſpeed to ſpoil; haſten to prey. And they are as diverſly underſtood. For (to let paſs all other) ſome take them as a name intended, not for the Prophets ſon; but as the name Emmanuel, in the fore-going prophecy; for Chriſt, who at his coming in the fleſh, ſeized on the ſtrong man, that held poſſeſſion of mens hearts before, and prevailing againſt him, as one ſtronger then he, 1 Joh. 4, 4. diſpoſſeſſed him, diſarmed him, diſpoiled him, and divided his ſpoyls, Luk 11. 21. Eph. 4. 8. Col. 2. 15: and they would have them to be the words of God the Father, ſpeaking unto the Son, as encouraging him thereunto. Somewhat like unto thoſe, Pſal. 2. 8, 7. And this way, as by ſholes, run the ancient Fathers, and moſt Popiſh writers; and ſome few others alſo of no ſmall note. But others, and ſo the moſt and the ſoundeſt, underſtand it, as having reference to the King of Aſſyria; as intimating what he ſhould ſpeedily do unto Iſrael and Syria: that which both the ſubject matter of the fore going chapter, and ſo the ſequel of the context here leads us unto, verſ. 3, 4. Howbeit, I cannot ſubſcribe to the curious nicety of thoſe of them, that would divide the words into two branches; the one containing the inſcription of an Epiſtle, that the Prophet ſhould be enjoyned to write unto the King of Aſſyria; as John to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, Revel. 1. 11: the other of them, the Epiſtle it ſelf. To the ſpeedy ſpoyler; there is the inſcription. Make haſt to prey; there the Epiſtle it ſelf. Nor to thoſe that would make them to be diſtinct names; Maher-ſhalal, the one; and Haſh-baz, the other.

V. 2. And took unto me faithful witneſſes to record] Or, Then; as Gen. 18. 10. & 32. 21, 22. Or, wherefore; as Neh. 2. 2. Jer. 1. 17. & 6. 11. & 7. 16. Heb. I will cauſe to atteſt to me witneſſes: the future for the preterimperfect; as Pſal. 18. 36, 37.

to record] Or, bear witneſs. Both of the name that the Prophet impoſed on his childe, (which was uſually done, at the time of circumciſion, Luk 1. 59. & 2. 21.) either being lately born; as ſome; or, as yet unborn; as others. (for ſo alſo before birth, ſome have been named, 1 King. 13. 2. chap. 45. 1. Mat. 1. 21. Luk 1. 13.) And of the reaſon why that name was, by God, enjoyned to be given him, ſee verſ. 3. Though ſome ſo underſtand it, as if theſe men were called in to be preſent, at the Prophets affixing of the draught of his Prophecy on the door of the Temple; or in ſome other publike place, to bear witneſs of the ſame: which needed not, when, as his name, without queſtion, was in that writing expreſſed, and annexed thereunto.

Uriah the Prieſt] Here ſome move a queſtion, how this Uriah ſhould be termed, a faithful witneſs; when as he was a man unfaithful to God in his place, and complyed with the King, in his idolatrous courſes, 2 King. 16. 10, 11, 15, 16. But to this is anſwered. Firſt, that a man may be a good witneſs, though he be not a good man. He may be firm to man, though he be not faithful to God. Secondly, that the word firm, or faithful, is not uſed to imply the approved goodneſs, or piety of the party mentioned; but their fitneſs for ſuch a buſineſs, in regard of their eſteem with man. Thirdly, that Uriah, for ought appears, might not, as yet, carry himſelf otherwiſe, then was befitting his place and profeſſion; albeit, that afterward he revolted. Fourthly, ſome ſay, which yet I make ſome doubt of, that the Prophet of purpoſe, knowing what manner of man he was, made choice of him for the one; becauſe he would have witneſſes of both ſorts; thereby to intimate, that his prophecy was ſuch, as neither good, nor bad ſhould be able to contradict. Fiftly, that whether he were good or bad, or bare a ſhew of that which indeed he was not; he might be very fit for this buſineſs, in regard of his intereſt with Ahaz, whom the ſame did ſo neerly concern.

and Zachariah the ſon of Jeberechiah] Who this Zachariah ſhould be, is uncertain. The Jewiſh Doctors, according to their idle dotages, (whom yet ſome of ours alſo, herein, follow) tell us, as of Uriah, that propheſied under Jehojakim, Jer. 26. 20. So of thoſe two Zacharies, the one that propheſied under Joaſh, 2 Ch. 24. 20; the other, that propheſied after the return from the captivity, Ezr. 5. 1. Zach. 1. 1. And that theſe are mentioned, as witneſſes, becauſe their Prophecies, for the matter of them, agreed much with this of Iſaiah. And if it be objected, that the one of theſe was dead long before, 2 Chr. 24. 21: the other two were, as yet, unborn. They would put this off, by affirming that all this was done but in a viſion; and nothing therefore hinders, but that ſuch might be induced as witneſſes, who, at that time, were not in being. And thoſe of ours, that herein concur with them; alleadg Moſes, and Elias appearing with our Saviour, at his transfiguration; as if that alſo were but ſome imaginary matter, Matth. 17. 4. But leaving theſe frivolous ſurmiſes to their authors; there is no doubt to be made, but that this Zachariah, as well as the former Uriah, was one that then lived. And it is deemed by many, (nor is it altogether improbable) that it was that Zachariah, whoſe daughter, Abi, or Abijah, was wife to Ahaz, who, by her, had Ezekiah, 2 King. 18. 2. 2 Chr. 29. 1. And this Zachariah, they ſuppoſe to be joyned with Uriah; that by two of principal note, the one in the Eccleſiaſtical, the other in the civil State, this weighty matter might be atteſted. Others deem it to have been that Zachariah the Prophet, that propheſied under Uzziah, a great part of his time; and is ſaid to have been a man of underſtanding in the viſions of God, 2 Chr. 26. 5: and ſo the two witneſſes might be a Prieſt, and a Prophet. But this I ſuppoſe to be the leſs probable; for that the holy ſtory ſeems to imply, that this Zachariah deceaſed before the fall of Uzziah. Nor is there any ground for that, which others gueſs, of one Zachariah, a Levite, of ſome note, in Ezekiahs dayes, 2 Chr. 29. 13: ſave that he lived in thoſe times.

Zechariah] Heb. Zechajahu. For which the Greek, uſually, hath Zacharias, Luk 1. 5. We in Engliſh, commonly, Zachary. See ch. 1. 1.

the ſon of Jeberechiah] Heb. Jeberechjahu; as before, inſtead whereof, the Greek and old Latine read, Barachias: The latter, in likelyhood, the rather, becauſe they found Zachary the ſon of Barachias, mentioned, Matth. 23. 35. However the names differ little; and with divers others, both father and ſon, might have the ſame names; as Joſeph the ſon of Jacob, Gen. 30. 25: and Matth. 1. 16: and Zorobabel the ſon of Salathiel, Matth. 1. 12. & Luk 3. 27: for they ſeem not to be the ſame.

V. 3. And I went unto, &c.] From hence ſome of our chief freely, as in places lying open, and unkept; for cattle to graze on, (as, for bryars and thorns, ver. 23.) as not reſerved for any other uſe.

of oxen] Heb. ox, as ch.1.3. ver.21. and ſo afterward here the like.

of leſſer cattle] Of ſheep, or goats. For the word comprehends either, Exod.3.5. They ſhall range and graze freely, after their wonted manner, in thoſe places; from whence they and their owners had formerly been ejected and excluded, by the violent oppreſſions, and undue encloſures of the richer and greater ſort, ch.5.17.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. M*Oreover the Lord ſaid,*&c.] Here beginneth the ſixth Sermon, or Prophecy, of Iſaiah, in this book recorded; contained in the five chapters next enſuing, which make all, but one continued diſcourſe: and that of the ſame nature, and ſubject matter, for the moſt part, with that next before going, ch.7. for it conſiſts partly, of denunciation of judgments againſt Aram and Iſraël; and partly of a prediction of ſuch evils and calamities, as ſhould befall Judah by Aſſur, together with a mixture of ſuch matter of comfort, as might ſupport the faithful under the ſame, and give them ground of hopeful expectation of a gracious iſſue of them: but the former directed unto Ahaz, and his Courtiers; this, directed, and in writing therefore publikely expoſed, to the people.

Moreover] Heb. And. But ſo alſo rendred, Jer. 3.1. & 33. 1. by ſome other here, For; as ch.9.11. & 64.4,5. But becauſe it is no proſecution of any former narration, but a relation of a new, after-revelation, or viſion: I ſuppoſe it ſhould rather be rendred, Again: as Ezek.16.1.

the Lord ſaid] Or, as ſome, hath ſaid; as if it were a ſpeech delivered at one and the ſame time with the former: but of that there is no likelihood.

Take thee] As Gen.6.21. & 14.21. So, Go thee, Gen. 12.1. and, Ask thee, ch. 7.11. ſee there.

a roll] Or, a velome; that is, ſuch a parcel of velome, or paper: as being fitted for writing, and written in, might be rolled up, and unrolled, as occaſion was to make uſe of it. See of ſuch rolles, Jer.36.2,23. Rev.6.14. Howbeit, when I ſay velome, or paper, my meaning is not, that the roll, which the Prophet made uſe of, was either of velome, that is, ſome kind of parchment, ſuch as we now uſe; or of paper, ſuch as we now commonly ſo tearm; for the invention of either of theſe, ſeemeth to be far later then Iſaiah's dayes; before which, the moſt common and general uſe for ſuch purpoſes, as we now uſe thoſe, was the ſtrip of an Egyptian cane, or reed, which the Greeks and Latines call papyre, from whence our Engliſh word, paper; though our paper be of another matter and manner of making, then that was. See on chap. 19. 7. by theſe terms therefore, I here mean, ſuch materials then in uſe, as were correſpondent to thoſe now in uſe with us. Howbeit, the word here uſed, is by ſome queſtioned; whether it ſignifieth ſuch a roll, or no. And ſome would have it rendred, not a roll, but a pattent, in alluſion to that of the open inſtrument, Jer.32.11. or, a page, becauſe the Talmudiſts ſo term the margine of any writing, that is pure and unwritten: the reaſon is, ſay they, becauſe the word here uſed, comes not from the word, that ſignifies, to roll up, as that doth, Jer. 36.2. but from one that ſignifies, to reveal, or, lay open: of which, ſee more on ch. 3.23. but the Hebrew Doctors go the former way, and derive it from the ſame root with that other; from which, although it doth not ſo regularly deſcend; yet it ſo falleth out in that language, that oft-times words retain the ſignification, not of their own proper root, but of ſome other neer to it, in ſound rather, then in ſence. Nor doth it hinder, but that it may well be ſtyled, a roll; albeit, the word have no ſuch proper notation, the uſe of ſuch rolls being ſo common in thoſe times, Pſal. 40. 7. Ezek. 2. 9. 10. Others chooſe rather to render it, a table, chap. 30.8. Hab. 2. 2. and their reaſon is, becauſe he is willed to write, or engrave on it, with a ſtyle; which, ſay they, on parchment, or paper, is not done; but with a pen, or quill. And they ſuppoſe it therefore to have been a table of marble-ſtone; or of braſs, or lead: or the like, Exod.34.1. Job 19.24. Jer.17.1. but the word may as well ſignifie, a writers pen, as a gravers tool, as hereafter ſhall be ſhewed: and the word, write, not engrave, carries it rather to a book, or roll; then ſuch a table as theſe talk of. Nor do we read, that the Prophets did any of them engrave their Sermons on ſuch; nor do thoſe places produced, prove it. See on ch.30.8.

in it] Heb. upon it; as we uſe to ſay, write upon parchment, or paper. Yet the phraſe is elſewhere, to write in a roll, or a book, Job 19. 23. Pſal.40.7. But the former particle is here rather uſed; becauſe the latter followeth prefixed unto the next word, taken inſtrumentally; as Job 19. 24. Jerem. 17. 1.

with a pen] Either of quil, cane, or reed. For ſuch alſo were the pens, anciently in uſe. The word here is no where elſe found: but another word that anſwers it, ſignifies as well a Scriveners, or Writers pen, Pſal.46. 1. Jer. 8. 8; as a graver, or carvers tool, Exod. 32. 4. Jer. 17. 1. So may the word alſo, here found, be uſed for either. And here the rather for the former, for the reaſon above rendred.

Some of the letter, that it ſhould not be written in ſome ſtrange character, that few could read, as that doom paſſed upon Baltaſar, Dan. 5. 8,15; but in a plain familiar letter, in an ordinary hand; ſuch as any one might eaſily read; and that alſo ſo fair, and large, that it might be read aloof off, and without any long ſtay, Hab. 2.2. Some again of the ſtyle, to wit, that it ſhould be conceived and delivered, not in an obſcure, and dark enigmatical, or ſymbolical manner; as that few capacities ſhould reach it; that part of it eſpecially, concerning the matter of Ahaz his fear, the overthrow of his two potent adverſaries, by the king of Aſſyria, and the ſcourging of him and his, afterward with the ſame rod. For they deſerve no regard, who would have it meant to be ſo written, that no brutiſh party, but a man indeed, a man of wiſdom and underſtanding, Pſal.37.17,22. & 92.6. Prov.30.2. Mic.6.9. ſhould be able to conceive it; as the number of a man, Rev. 13. 18. The word Enoſh, here uſed, (of which, ſee on ch. 2. 9.) will not bear it. Nor doth that ſeem ſo ſound, which ſome have, who would underſtand it, neither of the letter, nor of the frame of ſpeech, but of the ſubject matter of Gods injunction; that it ſhould be tranſacted, not according to the ſtyle of the Court of heaven, where there needs no more, then Gods own will, for the paſſing of ought, Pſal. 115. 3. & 135. 6. Dan. 4. 35. Eph. 1.11. but according to the ſtyle, or manner of proceeding in humane courts, wherein witneſſes are wont to be produced; and nothing done is firm, or of force, without them, Deut. 19.15. 2 Cor. 13. 1: and ſo the Prophet alſo carried the buſineſs, by God enjoyned him, verſ.2. But that phraſe of the ſtyle, of this, or that Court, is of too late an edition; nor hath it age enough to give authority to ſuch an expoſition.

concerning Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] Or, for Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; as Ezek. 37. 16. for Judah, and for Joſeph. Or, as others, without either, onely Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; becauſe the particle here uſed, is not afterward repeated, verſ. 3. This latter way many, yea, the moſt run; ſuppoſing that there was nothing more written in this great roll, but theſe four words. Which, becauſe it ſeems very improbable; they add, ſome of them, that it is called, a great roll, not from the bigneſs, or largeneſs of the volume; but becauſe it was to contain great myſteries: and others of them, that Princes pattents, though never ſo ſhort, are wont to be engroſſed in large paper, or parchment, and great letters. But not to inſiſt on the forced conſtruction of the one, and the unuſuallneſs of ſuch brevity in the other: beſide the improbability of the thing it ſelf; it would not reach the main intent, and purpoſe of this divulging it in writing, when as ſcarce any one, the Prophet himſelf excepted, would be able to underſtand what were thereby meant. The former, therefore, that render the particle, concerning, or, for; ſuppoſe this whole Sermon, or Prophecy, was to be engroſſed in it; and that, as they conceive, after the uſual manner of the Prophets; who uſed to put their Sermons in writing; and having ſo done, to affix them on ſome gate of the Temple; whence, after they had hung there certain dayes, the Prieſts took them down, and ſo laid them up; if they were by them approved; and ſo they were laid up, and came to be preſerved for poſterity. Now what they ſay concerning this particular prophecy, is acknowledged. But what is affirmed concerning an ordinary cuſtom herein, is groundleſs, and nothing probable. It appears not, that the Prophets uſed commonly, by writing, and affixing them in any publike place, for the view of all, ſo to divulge them. The very places that they produce for proof of it; this, and ch. 30.8. & Hab. 2.2. rather intimate the contrary. For what need was there to give order for ſome ſpecial prophecies in this kinde, if that were the ordinary dealing with all. Neither is it to be beleeved, that if moſt of the prophecies, both of Jeremies, and divers others, had been ſo affixed, the Prieſts, that then were, would have taken them in, and had ſuch care of them; and not rather have pulled them down, and torn them in pieces; eſpecially, having ſo maliciouſly and eagerly perſecuted the Prophets, as falſe Prophets, for delivering them by word of mouth, Jer. 20. 1, 2. & 26. 8, 11. & 29. 26. This prophecy therefore, as ſome few other, was by a ſpecial command of God, thus written, and divulged; which, with other, the like, was not uſual.

concerning Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] That is, concerning thy ſon Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz; ſo to be named: for, as yet he was not; but is by that name, here ſo ſtiled, in way of anticipation; of which there are many the like examples in Scripture. See Gen 12. 18. with Gen. 28. 19. & 13. 10. with 9. 22. & 33. 17. Exod. 16. 3. Joſh. 7. 24, 26. Judg. 15. 19. The particle is uſed for of, or concerning, Gen. 20. 13. Pſalm 91. 11. Howbeit a late learned writer would have it rendred here, as it moſt uſually ſignifies, to him, or for him; as if the diſcourſe written, were to be inſcribed, and dedicated to him.

Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] Theſe words are very variouſly rendred. Some in making ſpeed to the ſpoil, he haſtneth the prey. Some, to make ſpeed to ſpoil; (as Exod. 12. 33.) and haſte to prey. Some, to the ſpeedy ſpoyler; make haſte to prey. Some, a ſpeedy robber; an haſty ſpoyler; or, a ſpeedy ſpoiler; and one that haſtneth to the prey. Some, make ſpeed to ſpoil; haſten to prey. And they are as diverſly underſtood. For (to let paſs all other) ſome take them as a name intended, not for the Prophets ſon; but as the name Emmanuel, in the fore-going prophecy; for Chriſt, who at his coming in the fleſh, ſeized on the ſtrong man, that held poſſeſſion of mens hearts before, and prevailing againſt him, as one ſtronger then he, 1 Joh. 4. 4. diſpoſſeſſed him, diſarmed him, diſpoiled him, and divided his ſpoyls, Luk 11. 21. Eph. 4. 8. Col. 2. 15: and they would have them to be the words of God the Father, ſpeaking unto the Son, as encouraging him thereunto. Somewhat like unto thoſe, Pſal. 2. 8, 7. And this way, as by ſholes, run the ancient Fathers, and moſt Popiſh writers; and ſome few others alſo of no ſmall note. But others, and ſo the moſt and the ſoundeſt, underſtand it, as having reference to the King of Aſſyria; as intimating what he ſhould ſpeedily do unto Iſrael and Syria: that which both the ſubject matter of the fore going chapter, and ſo the ſequel of the context here leads us unto, verſ. 3, 4. Howbeit, I cannot ſubſcribe to the curious nicety of thoſe of them, that would divide the words into two branches; the one containing the inſcription of an Epiſtle, that the Prophet ſhould be enjoyned to write unto the King of Aſſyria; as John to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, Revel. 1. 11: the other of them, the Epiſtle it ſelf. To the ſpeedy ſpoyler; there is the inſcription. Make haſt to prey; there the Epiſtle it ſelf. Nor to thoſe that would make them to be diſtinct names; Maher-ſhalal, the one; and Haſh-baz, the other.

V. 2. And took unto me faithful witneſſes to record] Or, Then; as Gen. 18. 10. & 32. 21, 22. Or, wherefore; as Neh. 2. 2. Jer. 1. 17. & 6. 11. & 7. 16. Heb. I will cauſe to atteſt to me witneſſes: the future for the preterimperfect; as Pſal. 18. 36, 37.

faithful witneſſes] That which ſome comment here, concerning witneſſes, uſed in marriage contracts, as if the Prophet were about taking him a new wife, is nothing to the purpoſe. And further yet do they ſtray, that would hence infer, that all here ſpoken, as thoſe things alſo related, Hoſ. 1. 2, 3. & 3. 1. were done onely in viſion; as if the perſons here mentioned, were intended to be witneſſes of the Prophets companying with his wife. Witneſſes were uſed by him, becauſe the matter was of much importance, 2 Cor. 13. 1; and faithful, or, firm witneſſes; that is, perſons of credit, in regard of their place and authority, and ſuch, as no exception could be taken againſt; as if they ſhould herein collude with the Prophet.

to record] Or, bear witneſs. Both of the name that the Prophet impoſed on his childe, (which was uſually done, at the time of circumciſion, Luk 1. 59. & 2. 21.) either being lately born; as ſome; or, as yet unborn; as others. (for ſo alſo before birth, ſome have been named, 1 King. 13. 2. chap. 45. 1. Mat. 1. 21. Luk 1. 13.) And of the reaſon why that name was, by God, enjoyned to be given him, ſee verſ. 3. Though ſome ſo underſtand it, as if theſe men were called in to be preſent, at the Prophets affixing of the draught of his Prophecy on the door of the Temple; or in ſome other publike place, to bear witneſs of the ſame: which needed not, when, as his name, without queſtion, was in that writing expreſſed, and annexed thereunto.

Uriah the Prieſt] Here ſome move a queſtion, how this Uriah ſhould be termed, a faithful witneſs; when as he was a man unfaithful to God in his place, and complyed with the King, in his idolatrous courſes, 2 King. 16. 10, 11, 15, 16. But to this is anſwered. Firſt, that a man may be a good witneſs, though he be not a good man. He may be firm to man, though he be not faithful to God. Secondly, that the word firm, or faithful, is not uſed to imply the approved goodneſs, or piety of the party mentioned; but their fitneſs for ſuch a buſineſs, in regard of their eſteem with man. Thirdly, that Uriah, for ought appears, might not, as yet, carry himſelf otherwiſe, then was befitting his place and profeſſion; albeit, that afterward he revolted. Fourthly, ſome ſay, which yet I make ſome doubt of, that the Prophet of purpoſe, knowing what manner of man he was, made choice of him for the one; becauſe he would have witneſſes of both ſorts; thereby to intimate, that his prophecy was ſuch, as neither good, nor bad ſhould be able to contradict. Fiftly, that whether he were good or bad, or bare a ſhew of that which indeed he was not; he might be very fit for this buſineſs, in regard of his intereſt with Ahaz, whom the ſame did ſo neerly concern.

and Zachariah the ſon of Jeberechiah] Who this Zachariah ſhould be, is uncertain. The Jewiſh Doctors, according to their idle dotages, (whom yet ſome of ours alſo, herein, follow) tell us, as of Uriah, that propheſied under Jehojakim, Jer. 26. 20. So of thoſe two Zacharies, the one that propheſied under Joaſh, 2 Ch. 24. 20; the other, that propheſied after the return from the captivity, Ezr. 5. 1. Zach. 1. 1. And that theſe are mentioned, as witneſſes, becauſe their Prophecies, for the matter of them, agreed much with this of Iſaiah. And if it be objected, that the one of theſe was dead long before, 2 Chr. 24. 21: the other two were, as yet, unborn. They would put this off, by affirming that all this was done but in a viſion; and nothing therefore hinders, but that ſuch might be induced as witneſſes, who, at that time, were not in being. And thoſe of ours, that herein concur with them; alleadg Moſes, and Elias appearing with our Saviour, at his transfiguration; as if that alſo were but ſome imaginary matter, Matth. 17. 4. But leaving theſe frivolous ſurmiſes to their authors; there is no doubt to be made, but that this Zachariah, as well as the former Uriah, was one that then lived. And it is deemed by many, (nor is it altogether improbable) that it was that Zachariah, whoſe daughter, Abi, or Abijah, was wife to Ahaz, who, by her, had Ezekiah, 2 King. 18. 2. 2 Chr. 29. 1. And this Zachariah, they ſuppoſe to be joyned with Uriah; that by two of principal note, the one in the Eccleſiaſtical, the other in the civil State, this weighty matter might be atteſted. Others deem it to have been that Zachariah the Prophet, that propheſied under Uzziah, a great part of his time; and is ſaid to have been a man of underſtanding in the viſions of God, 2 Chr. 26. 5: and ſo the two witneſſes might be a Prieſt, and a Prophet. But this I ſuppoſe to be the leſs probable; for that the holy ſtory ſeems to imply, that this Zachariah deceaſed before the fall of Uzziah. Nor is there any ground for that, which others gueſs, of one Zachariah, a Levite, of ſome note, in Ezekiahs dayes, 2 Chr. 29. 13: ſave that he lived in thoſe times.

the ſon of Jeberechiah] Heb. Jeberechjahu; as before, inſtead whereof, the Greek and old Latine read, Barachias: The latter, in likelyhood, the rather, becauſe they found Zachary the ſon of Barachias, mentioned, Matth. 23. 35. However the names differ little; and with divers others, both father and ſon, might have the ſame names; as Joſeph the ſon of Jacob, Gen. 30. 25: and Matth. 1. 16: and Zorobabel the ſon of Salathiel, Matth. 1. 12. & Luk 3. 27: for they ſeem not to be the ſame.

V. 3. And I went unto, &c.] From hence ſome of our chief Interpreters collect, and are ſomewhat ſtiff in it; that all that is here mentioned, was done in a viſion. And ſome doubts and difficulties, indeed, ariſe from the words thus read; though not ſuch, as may neceſſarily enforce any ſuch matter. But they may all be cut off, by reading the words thus, (which the Hebrew will well admit) For I had gone into, &c. As rendring a reaſon, or relating the occaſion wherefore, or whereupon God ſhould give him this charge, concerning his childe that was to be named, to wit, becauſe his wife was lately delivered of a ſon. So both the verb, and particle, are in conſtruction alike uſed, Gen. 12. 1. For the Lord had ſaid unto Abraham.

went unto] Or, had gone in to; as ſome render it. A modeſt form of ſpeech, expreſſing the marriage duty, very frequent in Scripture, Gen. 6. 4. & 29. 29: and the ſame more fully, as opening the ground of the phraſe, Judg. 15. 1. I will go to my wife, into the chamber; to wit, where man and wife uſe to be private. But the Hebrew word here uſed, ſignifies properly to approach; I approached, or, had approached unto, &c. and ſo it is uſed, Gen. 20. 4. Lev. 18. 6. 14. Ezek. 18. 6.

the Propheteſs] That is, a virgin, ſay ſome, endued with the gift of prophecie, as Mary, Deborah, and Huldah are ſaid to have been Propheteſſes, Exod. 15. 22. Judg. 4. 4. 2 King. 22. 14: groundleſly dreaming, that the Prophet ſhould wed him a new wife: and that this ſhould be that virgin, the mother of Emmanuel, before mentioned, ch. 7. 14. But the Propheteſs here, is no other then the Prophets wife: the ſame, in likelihood, by whom he had Shear-jaſhub before, ch. 7. 3. So it is obſerved, that in divers languages, the wives are ſtiled by their husbands offices, and dignities; as Duke, Dutcheſs; Count, Counteſs; Mayor, Mayoreſs, &c.

and ſhee conceived] Or, had conceived: or, was with childe. See on ch. 7. 14.

and bare a ſon] Or, had born a ſon. Was now delivered of a male-childe, to wit, before ever he received this viſion from God, or the charge was given him concerning the naming of the childe; and the engroſſing of the prophecy, intimated, in that name, together with it.

a ſon] The ſame, ſay ſome, mentioned, ch. 7. 14. A fond conceit, better befitting Jews then Chriſtians.

Then ſaid the Lord to me] That is, after the Propheteſs was delivered of the childe. Heb. And: but ſo it is rendred, alſo, ver. 2. And ſo alſo Neh. 2. 2. Job 13. 22. & 40. 3. Hoſ. 1. 9. Yet it may be retained here, in this firſt and proper ſence; as in the like, Hoſ. 1. 4, 6.

ſaid] As ver. 1.

Call his name] Call him; as chap. 7. 14. Let this be the name whereby he ſhall be called; as Jer. 23. 6. and 33. 16.

Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz] The Hebrews uſed oft-times to give names, as well to perſons, as to places, conſiſting of divers words. So Gen. 16. 13, 14. & 22. 14. & 35. 28. Judg. 6. 32. 1 Chr. 1. 20. & 3. 19, 20. & 4. 30, 31. Jer. 20. 3. of the ſignification of this name, ſee on v. 1. Of the reaſon of impoſing it, ſee ver. 4. Howbeit, they ſwerve far from the truth, and the intent of the Prophet, that would have one and the ſame childe have two names; Emmanuel, to intimate Gods aſſiſtance of them, againſt thoſe their two enemies, Rezin, and Pekah, ch. 7. 1, 5. ver. 10. and Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz, to ſignifie the rifling and ruinating of them; and that ſpeedily, by the king of Aſſyria, ver. 4. The name conſiſts of two parts, both in divers words, but of the ſame ſence, implying the ſame thing; and that by reduplication thereof, to intimate the infallibility of it, and the nearneſſe of its approach: as Gen. 41. 32.

V. 4. For before the childe ſhall have knowledg, to cry, My Father, and My Mother, &c.] In this verſe is the reaſon given, why God would have the childe ſo called, to wit, thereby to intimate, the ſpeedy direption and deſtruction of thoſe two kings, and their chief cities, by the Forces and followers of the king of Aſſyria.

the childe] This childe, that is lately now born, and ſo named: not Chriſt, as ſome; nor a childe, that is any childe indefinitely, as others. See chap. 7. 16.

ſhall have knowledg] Heb. ſhall know; or, ſhall be able. So is the word of knowing, oft taken: as chap. 56. 11. Jer. 6. 15.

to cry] Or, to call, as v. 3.

My father, and my mother] Or, My father, or my mother: either of both, as Exod. 21. 15. He that ſmites his father, and his mother, for, father, or mother: and children begin, uſually, to call mother firſt; becauſe moſt frequent about them in that age: and the children therefore moſt familiar with them. The meaning is, before the childe ſhall be able to ſpeak, and to diſtinguiſh his parents from ſtrangers. And this ſeems a ſhorter time, then that, chap. 7. 16. before the childe know to refuſe evil, and chooſe good. For children are ſooner of ability to ſpeak ſome few familiar words; then of diſcretion, to underſtand what belongeth to good and evil: and the reaſon of the divers form of ſpeech uſed, concerning either, is; becauſe the one, to wit, Shear-jaſhub, might then be ſome two, or three year old: whereas Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz, was but newly now born; and yet might be as ſoon able to ſpeak, as the other might be to conceive difference between good and evill. See further, on chap. 7. 16.

the riches of Damaſcus, and the ſpoyl of Samaria ſhall be taken away] The two Kingdomes of Iſrael and Syria, ſhall be ſtript and ſpoyled of their wealth, and treaſure, by the King of Aſſyria.

the riches of Damaſcus] The head City of Syria, chap. 7. 8. and a place of great wealth: or, as others, the power of Damaſcus. The word ſignifieth either: and riches are one principal thing, wherein the ſtrength of a State conſiſts.

and the ſpoyl of Samaria] The head City of Iſrael, ch. 7. 9.

the ſpoyl] Not the people. For he ſpeaks of a direption, in the childs name intimated, done by Tiglath-Pileſer, under Pekah, 2 King. 15. 29. then of an utter depopulation, made by Salmaneſer, under Hoſhea, 2 King. 17. 6, 14. though ſome people alſo were in that former Invaſion captived.

ſhall be taken away] Heb. he ſhall take away, or, one ſhall take away. The verb being taken indefinitely, or imperſonally, (the form of ſpeech, ſee on chap. 2. 19.) and therefore well here rendred.

before the King of Aſſyria] As Conquerors are wont to ſend their rich ſpoyles, oft-times, into their own Country before them, to give notice of their victories and ſurprizals, to their people; or to cauſe them, as the uſual manner of the Romanes was, to be carried before their ſtately chariots in tryumph: Yet ſome would have it to be a defective ſpeech, and render the words thus; he that is, or ſtands, before the King of Aſſyria: that is, his Officers, Miniſters, or attendants, (for ſo are men ſaid to be, or to ſtand before the face of them whom they ſerve, or attend on, 1 Sam. 16. 16. 1 King. 1. 2. & 10. 8. & 17. 1.) ſhall carry away. But the former ſeems the more familiar.

V. 5. The Lork ſpake, alſo, unto me again, ſaying] Heb. And the Lord further added to ſpeak unto me, as chap. 7. 10. Here beginneth a ſecond part of this Chapter. Whererein, as in the latter part of the former, from ver. 17. he foretelleth what evills ſhould befall the land, both of Iſrael and Judah; from the king of Aſſyria, on the one, for their ſcorn, and contempt of their brethren, and confederating with the Aſſyrians, to work their overthrow: on the other, for their diſtruſting of God, and relying upon the Aſſyrians, by whom they ſhould alſo ſuffer; withal, admoniſhing the godly among them, to be cautious, and to reſt upon God alone, and his Word, who had promiſed to ſecure them, in thoſe calamitous times.

V. 6. Foraſmuch as this people, &c.] Who the people here ſpoken of, ſhould be, is very doubtful. Some underſtand thereby, the people of Judah, or a great part of them, who conſidering how low their State was brought, and diſtruſting thoſe weak proviſions, as they eſteemed them, that their chief City had to maintain a ſiege againſt two ſuch Potent Princes, as were combined together againſt them, deſired to have one of thoſe two to govern them; or that Son of Tabeel before mentioned, chap. 7. 6. to be ſet over them, and had under-hand, ſome treacherous compliance with them, to that purpoſe. So the Hebrew Doctors, whom alſo many of ours follow. But of this we finde little ground, either in the ſacred ſtory, or elſe-where, in this Prophecy. Others therefore, rather ſuppoſe the people mentioned, to be the people of Iſrael; who ſlighted, and ſet light by the kingdom of Judah, as having been by the Incurſions both of the Syrians and themſelves, ſo exceedingly impaired, and by Rezin and Pekah now joyned in one, made full account to make full conqueſt of it, chap 76. For, as for thoſe that interpret it, of the Jewiſh people in general, that not contenting themſelves with Gods promiſed protection, reſted upon the Aſſyrian: they are enforced, for the making good of this their interpretation (wherein, few, or none follow them) to offer over-much force to the text.

this people] Spoken, as in contempt of them, who ſo ſcorned and contemned Gods people, as not deſiring once to name them. See the like of the other, ch. 6. 9.

refuſe] Or, rather, deſpiſe, contemn. For in that, or the like ſence, is the word here uſed, conſtantly taken. The word of refuſing, though coming neer to it, doth in a letter differ from it.

the waters of Shiloah] A fountain called alſo Gihon, 1 King. 1. 33. iſſuing forth from the foot of Mount Sion; and yeelding a rivolet, that watered the lower City, Pſal. 46. 4. Neh. 3. 15. Joh. 9. 7. See chap. 7. 2. put here, as ſome, for the houſe of David, now at a low ebb; or rather, for ſuch defence, as Jeruſalem, and the State of Judah then had. Which they ſlighted and ſcorned, as if they had nothing, but ſuch a ſorry rivolet, as that was, to ſtrengthen and ſecure their head City; not conſidering the power of God, by ſuch weak means, though no other were able to protect it. See chap. 33. 21. albeit, I ſuppoſe they wander wide, that would have Siloah here put for Gods protection it ſelf.

that run ſoftly] Spoken, in way of oppoſition, to great Rivers, that run with a ſtrong torrent, and ſtiff ſtream. This rivolet, or the waters iſſuing from this fountain, are therefore deemed to run ſlowly, or ſoftly, partly, becauſe the current was not great; and partly, becauſe in its own courſe it went not ſtreight forward, but with many windings to and fro, in manner of a Serpent, that moves ſlowly, and ſlily, creeping and crooking, chap.27.1. ſuppoſed therefore by ſome, to be termed, the dragons well, Neh.2.13.

and rejoyce in Rezin, and Remaliahs ſon] This ſome expound of thoſe male-contents, in the Jewiſh State, that deſired, and would gladly be under another government, either Rezins, [illegible] Pekak's, or, of both joyntly. Others, of thoſe, to the Jews ill affected in Iſrael, that vaunted much of, and promiſed themſelves great matters from the conjunction of thoſe two Kings, ch.7.1. and rejoyced greatly in their ſucceſſes. The Hebrew, word for word, runs thus; and joy is with Rezin, and the ſon of Remaliah, or Remalijahu: as alſo, chap. 7. 4. which ſome fill up, as if it were a defective ſpeech, on this manner; and joy, is to them, of fighting with Rezin, &c. as if he had ſaid, they rejoyce, or would fain be fighting with Rezin, and Pekah; relying on the ayd they looked for, from the king of Aſſyria: by whoſe help they doubted not, but to be able to bicker with, and beat them both. But this expoſition, as before was ſaid, offers too much violence to the context. The meaning therefore is, rather, that Rezin and Pekah, as they joyned together againſt Judah; ſo it was matter of much joy to them, to ſee it ſo weakned: as thereby conceiving undoubted hope, to prevail, at pleaſure, againſt it. See ch.7.7,8. And this expoſition is moſt agreeable to the tenor both of this, and the former Chapter.

rejoyce] Or, joy is. The noun ſeems rather to be uſed, then the verb, to make it ſound like the former word of contempt. For with ſuch ſimilitude and neerneſſe of ſounds, in terms eſpecially of divers, or adverſe notions, our Prophet ſeems to have been much delighted; and they have an elegancy in them. See ch.3.24. & 5.7.

Remaliahs ſon] So ſtill the Prophet in contempt ſtyles him, as one unworthy to be named, or termed king of Iſrael, being ſprung from baſe parentage, and having by murther got the Crown. See ch.7.4.

V. 7. Now therefore] Heb. And as therefore; or, in like manner. For a retaliation is implyed; as they intend, and deſire, to be eft-ſoon doing with Judah: ſo by a ſtronger one, then either Judah, or themſelves, ſhall they be dealt with.

behold] Look for it, and that ſoon, and ſuddenly; though you neither expect, nor will eaſily believe it; yet it ſhall both ſurely, and ſpeedily be accompliſhed. See chap. 3. 1. and 5. 26.

the Lord bringeth up] Heb. is making to aſcend, or, bringing as Jer. 3.7. and, as taking away, chap.3.1. he is even about to do it; it will, out of hand, begin to be done. See v. 4.

bringeth up] Spoken, ſay ſome, of the Jewiſh Doctors eſpecially, who would have their land to be the navel of the whole earth, (abuſing to that purpoſe, a paſſage, in Pſal. 72. 12. Ezek.38.12. and the higheſt land in the world) in regard of the ſcituation of the Country of Aſſyria, in relation to the holy land, as lying far lower then it. See ch.7.1. but it ſeems rather, to have reſpect to the riſing of ſome great river, ſurrounding the lower grounds. See on Jer.49.19.

upon them] Or, over them. The people before ſpoken of, ver. 6. not thoſe of Judah, (for of them afterwards, ver. 8.) but of Iſrael, on whom this ſtorm firſt fell; and were in the firſt place over-whelmed with it, 2 King.15.29. & 17.3. See ch. 7.20. It is here oppoſed to Shiloah, a ſmall rivolet, runing quietly, without much noyſe, or ſtrong ſtream, ver. 6. which they therefore ſet light by, as unable either to do any hurt to their land, or to impeach them in their paſſage and approaches to Jeruſalem: inſtead whereof, God would ſend in upon them a great river, ſuch an one as had water ſtore, and ran with a ſwift, and a ſtrong current, which uſed to break through, or ſwell over his banks, and ſo ſurround the land neer unto it.

even the king of Aſſyria] See chap.7.17. The king of Aſſyria ſhall break in upon them; not like the waters of Shiloah; but like the ſtreams of Euphrates, his own Country river. So are mighty Commanders with their forces invading of ſome land, reſembled oft to rivers breaking in upon the lower grounds. See chap. 28. 2. & 59. 19. Jer. 50. 44. Dan. 11. 22.

and all his glory] Or, with all his glory; as chap. 5.14. His armies, or forces, conſiſting of valiant Souldiers: and led by brave Captains and Commanders, ch. 10.16. in whom, he much gloried, and of whom he ſo much vaunted, ch.10.8. & 36.9. & 37.23. and that made a glorious ſhew generally, in the eyes of the people; becauſe by them, he ſubdued ſo many Countries, chap. 10.9,10,13,14. and 30.18,20. & 37. 11,12, 13, 18.

and he ſhall] That is, the King of Aſſyria ſhall; or, as others, it ſhall, to wit, the river before mentioned, the Aſſyrians followers, and forces: becauſe in that metaphor the Prophet proceeds.

ſhall come up] As before; the Lord is bringing up. See there.

over all his channels] Whereby moſt underſtand all the valleys, or lower parts of the land, invaded by the Aſſyrian, and over-run by him. But whether they take the word to ſignifie channels, as ſome; or ſtreams, or rivers, or, ſtreams of rivers, as others; from Pſal.18. 15. & 42. 1. & 126. 4. It ſeems no very fit, or handſome expreſſion, to repreſent the direption, or deſtruction of a land, or ſtate, by over-flowing, or (if I may ſo ſay) drowning of ſtreams, or rivers: (which may rather be deemed an increaſing, and enlarging of them) or, of channels, and water-courſes, which is rather a filling them, and ſupplying them, if they were empty, of what they wanted before. Some few other therefore underſtand it, of the great River Euphrates its own channels; for it divided it ſelf into divers branches, and ran conſequently in many channels, or ſtreams. But then to ſay, that a river ſhould come up over his own chanels, ſeems as improper a phraſe, as a reſemblance of the former. The reading therefore would be altered; and the words rendred, either, with all his ſtreams, as the particle is uſed, Exod.35.22. where the words are, the men with the women: and Job 38 32. Arcturus with his ſons: or, from off all his channels: With ſupply of a particle, ſometime deficient, and left to be ſupplyed, as Gen.4.1. I have gotten a ſon from the Lord: and Pſal.81.5. when he went forth from off the land of Egypt. The defective form of ſpeech, the Prophet ſeems the rather here to have uſed; that there might be the more exact correſpondence between the two members of this latter clauſe. The meaning is, that the king of Aſhur ſhould bring all the forces he could make, along with him; as before it was ſaid, he ſhould come with all his glory: or, rather, ſhould take people, (compared to waters, Rev. 17.15.) to ſerve him in this expedition, out of all parts of his dominion, which branched it ſelf out into many countries; as Euphrates it ſelf alſo into many channels and ſtreams.

over all his banks] His own banks, as Joſh.3.15. & 4.18. & 12. 15. to wit, thoſe of the river before mentioned. For they ſeem much miſtaken, who apply this alſo, as the former, to the land, whether of Iſrael, or Judah, invaded; and by banks, underſtand high places, fortreſſes, and fenced Cities, that ſhould no more eſcape the Aſſyrian forces, then lower, leſſer, and leſſe fortified places, 2 King.15.29. & 17. 16. & 18. 10, 13. nor do they ſeem to underſtand the Prophet aright, who by ſurrounding of banks, ſuppoſe breach of oaths and covenants, to be meant; though that be true in the ſtory, 2 King. 18.14,17. ch 33.7. but it ſeems not ſo fit here.

V. 8. And he ſhall paſs through Judah] Or, It (to wit, this flood, v. 8.) ſhall paſs through alſo (as ver. 5.) unto, or, into Judah: as Num.16.21. The king of Aſſyria having ſubdued Iſrael, the ten Tribes, ſhall make his way by them ſo ſubdued, and pierce through, as a ſtiff torrent, with full ſtream, into the land of Judah. See 2 King. 18. 10, 11, 13. and of the Chaldees, Hab.1.11.

he ſhall over-flow, and go over] Heb. it over-floweth, and paſſeth over, or, through. It ſwelleth, and goeth on, carrying all away before it, and riſing higher and higher. See the ſame form of ſpeech, ch.28.15,18. Dan.11. 10, 40. Some would have the former word of paſſing, and this here, though divers terms, to intend the ſame thing. Others diſtinguiſh them over-nicely. The difference, I ſuppoſe, in the uſe of them, is no other then this, that the one denoteth the enemies paſſage to, and entrance into Judea; the other his progreſſe, in the conqueſt of it.

he ſhall reach even to the neck] Or, it ſhall; to wit, the inundation. So ch. 38.28. an over-flowing ſtream, reaching to the midſt of the neck: And the like, Hab.3.13. It is a metaphor, ſay ſome, taken from thoſe that go into the water by degrees, firſt up to the knees, then to the waſte, and ſo on, till they have gone up to the neck. But it is rather taken from thoſe, whom, waters breaking in upon, in a deluge, riſe and ſwell ſo high with them, that they can hardly keep head above water. The meaning is, that all Judah ſhould be in danger of being utterly loſt: as the whole body is in danger to be drowned, when the water comes up ſo neer the head. Thus it was under Ezekiah; when Sennacherib having ſurrounded the whole land almoſt, even to the wall of Jeruſalem, their head City, (ſee Jer. 34. 1.) and ſurprized the moſt of their cities, did much diſtreſſe it, and had, queſtionleſſe, carried it, had not God vouchſafed them an unexpected, and extraordinary deliverance, chap. 36. 1,2,12. & 37. 3,35,36.

and the ſtretching out of his wings ſhall fill the breadth of thy land] Or, as ſome, and it ſhall be, that the extenſions of his wings ſhall fill the breadth of thy land. So they render it, becauſe the verb is ſingular, the noun plural. But the Hebrew will well bear another conſtruction; to wit, The fulneſſe of the breadth of thy land, ſhall be the extenſion of his wings; as ch.6.3. the fulneſſe of the whole land, or, earth, is, or ſhall be, his glory; or, inſerting one particle, which the former place alſo will well admit. The fulneſſe of the breadth (that is, the full breadth) of thy land, ſhall be for the ſtretchings out of his wings. The meaning is, that the Aſſyrian Troops ſhould over-ſpread the whole land, from the one ſide to the other; like a mighty river, or vaſte Sea, that not breaking in, at ſome gap, or narrow breach, in the Sea-walls, or damms, but with full breaſt, all along at once, ſurrounding its whole banks, doth with a joynt ſtream ruſh on, as it paſſeth forward, over-whelming the whole breadth of the Country before it. See chap. 9. 15. & 11.14. and of the Chaldee forces the like, Hab.1.6.

the ſtretchings out of his wings] Some ſuppoſe that the Prophet here paſſeth to a new ſimilitude, whereby he deſcribeth further, the Aſſyrian Invaſion, as reſembling the king of Aſſyria by ſome mighty Eagle, that ſpreadeth his wings over the prey, that he either intends to ſeize on, or hath already ſurprized. And it is true, that great Kings going forth with great Armies, are oft compared to ſuch, Jer.48.40. & 49. 22. Ezek.17.3,7. and it is likewiſe acknowledged, that military Troops, or Companies, as well of foot, as of horſe, are here termed wings, in alluſion to the wings of fowles, the larger ſort of them eſpecially, which in ſome ſort, they reſemble; though the word be otherwiſe taken in that other place, ch. 18.1. which ſome of them here produce for it. But it followeth not thence, that the Prophets intent here is, to compare the Aſſyrian king, to ſome mighty fowl of prey, becauſe he calleth his troops, wings; no more then Daniel had to decipher Antiochus, as ſome vaſt Gyant, when he calleth the forces, that ſtood on his ſide, and fought for him, armes, Dan. 11. 31. They only expreſs the Companies of either, by a common figurative term, whereby ſuch are wont to be deſigned.

O Immanuel] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to Chriſt, whoſe land the Country of Judah is ſaid to be, becauſe he had a more ſpecial intereſt in it, as being not to be born only in it, but to ſit on Davids Throne, ſometime king of it, Jer. 30.9. Ezek.34.23. & 37. 29. Luk. 1. 32. & 2. 11. as alſo wherein he had the royal ſeat of his Kingdom, his Church at preſent, Pſal.2.6. which by his power therefore was to be protected, relieved under, and delivered out of this great danger and grievous diſtreſſe, ver. 10, 14. Of the name it ſelf, and the perſon ſo named, together with the notation of it, and reaſon thereof rendred, See ch. 7. 14.

V. 9. Aſſociate your ſelves, O ye people] Having made mention of Emmanuel, now as confident of his aſſiſtance, he heartens, and encourageth the faithful to depend upon him, with hopeful expectation of ſecurity and protection from him, amidſt thoſe common calamities; and a comfortable iſſue of them in his due time. To which purpoſe, alſo, he makes entrance into this part of his Sermon, by turning his ſpeech to their adverſaries, that conſpired, and plotted together againſt them, willing them, as in way of deriſion, to proceed, as unanimouſly, as politickly, and as powerfully, in their combinations, conſultations, and preparations, as they could; but withal, aſſuring them, that all their aſſociations ſhould be diſſolved, their counſels fruſtrate, and their attempts returned back upon themſelves, to their own ruine and confuſion. See the like, Pſal.37.12,15. Mic.4.11,13. ch. 45.11, 12. & 54.15,17.

Aſſociate your ſelves] So the Chaldee, and ſome of the Jewiſh Teachers, and ſo the old Latine, For the Greek trod awry, by miſtake of a letter, wherein oft they have ſlipped. Yet moſt of the Hebrew Doctors render it, either break, or, Break your ſelves, Be broken. Whom ſome of ours alſo follow, becauſe it is of the ſame form with that, Pſal.2.9. chap.24.19. But it is well known, that verbs of neer affinity for letters and ſound, though divers in notion, do in the holy language oft enterchange forms. And ſo it is here, for the word that ſignifieth to aſſociate, Prov.24.21. & 19.3. having ſome affinity in ſound, with that which ſignifies, to break in ſunder; as may appear, where they are both found together, Prov.13.20. doth ſometime borrow forms from this, which are not regularly its own. That, which they that ſtumble hereat, might have found, not here alone, but elſewhere, Prov. 18. 24. Thoſe, the Prophet intends, as well, that had now combined themſelves, under thoſe two kings of Iſrael and Syria, ch. 7. 1, 2, as alſo, that joyned themſelves unto Sennacherib, in the Invaſion of Judah, ch.36.1,2. & 10.8.

O ye People] Heb. Peoples, in the plural, as chap.10.13,14. & 11.10. For there were two peoples, that conſpired together, Syrians, and Iſraelites, againſt Judah under Ahaz, ch.7. 2. and the Army conſiſted of divers Nations, that Sennacherib led againſt them under Ezekiah, ch. 7. 18.

and] Or, but; as ch. 7.12.

and ye ſhall be broken in pieces] As Jer, 50. 2. Heb. and be broken in pieces. So, and live; and dwell. For, and you, or, ye, ſhall live, and dwell, Gen.42.18. Pſal. 37. 27. Jer. 25. 5. for the imperative is oft put for the future: as on the other ſide, the future for the imperative, chap.6.9. Deut. 5. 17, 20. All ſhall turn to your ruine. See this fulfilled, chap. 37. 36, 37.

and give ear all ye of far Countries] Heb. all the remote perſons, or, parts, of the earth. Let all, far, and neer, take notice of what I ſay, ch.33.13. as giving warning to thoſe forreign people afar off, to take heed what they did, in adjoyning themſelves to thoſe that invaded Gods people, leſt they periſhed together with them: though ſome underſtand it, as the former, ſpoken in way of deriſion; like that, to the youngſters, Eccl.11.9. as if the Prophet ſhould ſay, hearken to the King of Aſſyria, inviting you to joyn with him; and prepare your ſelves ſo to do, if you deſire your own deſtruction.

gird your ſelves] Arm your ſelves; fit, and addreſs your ſelves, for warlike expedition, as Ezek.38.7. alluding to the uſe of the military belt; of which, ſee, as chap. 5. 27; So 2 Sam.22.40. 1 King.20.11. Pſal.18.32. ch. 45.5.

and you ſhall be broken in pieces] Heb. and be broken in pieces, as before. And there is an emphaſis in that form of ſpeech, implying, that the one would inſtantly and inevitably follow upon the other. Yea, that by doing the one, they ſhould be ſure to bring upon themſelves the other.

gird your ſelves, and ye ſhall be broken in pieces] It is thrice repeated, to work it the deeper into the minds and hearts of thoſe that ſhould hear, or read it, and to give the ſtronger aſſurance of it. See ver. 4. chap. 7.17. So Pſal. 96.13. and 98. 7.

V. 10. Take counſel together] Heb. conſult a conſultation; to wit, about invading Judah, and ſurprizing Jeruſalem, as they did, ch 7.5,6. So Pſal.83.3.

and it ſhall come to nought] God bringeth to nought the counſel of the nations, Pſal.33.10. and the devices of the crafty, Job 5. 12.

ſpeak a word] Conclude ſomewhat, determine a thing, reſolve upon ought, what you pleaſe; a word, for, a thing: as Job 22.28. thou ſhalt decree a word, or, a thing, and it ſhall ſtand: but contrariwiſe here.

and] Or, but; as ver.9.

it ſhall not ſtand] See ch.7.7. Ye ſhall not be able, by all the power ye can make, or policy ye can uſe, to prevail againſt thoſe whom God protects, Pſal.62.3,4. & 64.5,8.

for God is with us] And if God be with us, and for us, what need we care, who be againſt us? yea, who can ſo oppoſe us, as to prevail againſt us? Rom. 8, 31. they muſt prevail firſt againſt him, before they can prevail againſt us, 2 King. 6.17. & 2 Chron. 32. 7,8. Zach.2.5. 1 Joh.4.4. he alludeth to the name of Emmanuel, ch 7.14. and declareth in part, what it imports; and promiſeth, in regard of Gods people, Gods conſtant preſence with them, to aſſiſt and protect them againſt all oppoſitions and aſſaults, Pſal. 125.1,2. Yet I cannot aſſent to thoſe, that render it, becauſe Emmanuels land it is; though that be ſaid, ver. 8. But it is not neceſſarily therefore repeated here.

V. 11. For the Lord ſpake thus to me] The Prophet proceeds to confirm the godly party, againſt ſuch groundleſſe fears, as the diſtruſtful ſort of them were ſurprized with; and dehorteth them, from taking ſuch courſes, as they did; and that by relating to them, what charge God, in a more ſerious and ſolemn manner, then ordinary, had to this purpoſe, delivered to him.

For] A confirmation of what he had before delivered, concerning the iſſue of thoſe counſels and courſes, that the adverſaries of Gods people ſhould take againſt them, verſ. 9, 10.

with a ſtrong hand] The neer ſhape of two letters in the Hebrew, hath as elſe-where oft, ſo here, bred a divers reading; but ſuch, as alters not the ſence. Some reading the text, as with; ſome without that note of ſimilitude. Where, by hand, the Jewiſh Doctors, whom moſt of ours follow, underſtand the Spirit of Prophecy, according to that, the hand of God was upon me, Ezek. 1.3. & 3.14,22. as if he had ſaid, the hand of God made a ſtrong impreſſion upon me, what time he gave this in charge. Added, here, both to give fuller aſſurance of what he was to deliver from God to them; and to make his words carry the more weight with them. The words are in the Hebrew, with ſtrength of hand, as Dan.11.2. or, as ſome render it, by apprehenſion of hand. That is, taking and holding me by the hand, to confirm and ſtrengthen me, as and inſtructed me] Or, when he inſtructed me; and, for, when: as ch.43.12. Jer.34.1.

1 Sam.23.16. ch. 45.1. & 51.18. Pſal.73.23. Or, taking me by the hand, to cauſe me to mark what he ſhould ſay to me; or, taking me by the hand, and drawing me neer to him; as men uſe to do thoſe, whom they have ſome ſecret to impart unto, or are to have ſome ſpecial conference with, Act. 23. 19. or laying hand on me, as a School-maſter on his Scholler, that would fain be gone from him, and by force, as it were, (as Ezek.34.4.) detaining me with him, and reſtraining me from ſuch courſes, as the people of theſe times commonly took: according to which laſt, there ſhould be a trajection in the words, thus to be read; and, or, when, with a ſtrong hand, he curbed me; or, kept me in. And of ſuch trajections we have indeed ſome examples in Scripture, 2 King.2.14. Job 23.12. Prov.23.24. & 24.27. but it fitteth not ſo well here; and the pauſes oppoſe it.

inſtructed me] The word ſignifieth properly, to chaſtiſe; as Pſal.118.18. and becauſe the end of correction is inſtruction, Pſal.35.11. & 94.12. Prov.29.15. in the next place, to inſtruct, Prov.31.1. ch.28.26. here, as ſome would have it, to couch, or keep within compaſs. I ſhould rather render it, by inſtructing warned me. A form of ſpeech, not unlike thoſe, noted on ch. 1.4. alienated backward. The meaning is, by informing me of the iſſue of ſuch courſes, he warned me, both to refrain them my ſelf, and to teach others ſo to do.

that I ſhould not walk in the way of this people, ſaying] Hebr. from walking; as 1 Sam. 30. 21. 2 Chr. 25. 13. Lam. 4. 18. That I ſhould not take ſuch courſes, as they did, concerning the ſafe guarding, and ſecuring of themſelves againſt thoſe two Kings that came to invade them. See Jer.10.2.

this people] The people of Jeruſalem, ſo affected, as was Ahaz their Soveraign, ch. 7. 2, 12, 13.

V. 12. Say ye not, a confederacy, to all them to whom this people ſhall ſay, a confederacy] He declares here more expreſly, what the peoples way was, that he would have them to avoid. Do not thou, nor the other faithful that follow thee, enter into any ſuch confederacy with the Aſſyrian, or any other forreign force, as the main body of this people, therein following their heads, do, for the ſecuring of your ſelves. Such confederacies never proved ſucceſsful to Gods people, 2 Chr. 16. 2, 3, 9. & 28.16, 20. ch. 29. 6. & 30. 4, 5. Jer. 2. 33, 37. Yet ſome of note expound this of the confederacy of Iſrael, and Syria, againſt them, the fear whereof ſo much poſſeſſed their minds, that there was nothing elſe in their mouths, but a conſpiracy, a conſpiracy. Two great and powerful Kings and States have conſpired together againſt us; and they will utterly ruine us: and this they ſuppoſe confirmed, by the words next enſuing. But neither do the words of the text it ſelf ſo well bear this expoſition; nor thoſe following neceſſarily infer it.

Say ye not a confederacy] Heb. Ye ſhall not ſay: as, This ſhall ye ſay, for, thus ſay, chap.30.4. & 37. 10. Say not a confederacy; that is, Think not on a confederacy: as Exo.2.14. doſt thou ſay (that is, think) to ſlay me? and 2 Sam.21.16. he ſaid (that is, thought) to ſmite David; or, Say not a confederacy, for, make no confederacy: as Pſal.35.3. ſay to my ſoul, (or, to me, as Pſal.3.2.) I am thy ſalvation, that is, ſave me, and, ſay to wiſdome, Thou art my ſiſter, for, make wiſdome thy ſiſter, Prov.7.4. and, ſaying to a ſtock, Thou art my father, for, making a ſtock thy father, Jer.2.27.

to all them] to whomſoever; as Pſal.145.18. Joel 2.32. Rom. 10.13. as if he had ſaid, do not follow this people in their unſetled courſes, ſeeking to link themſelves in league, one while with one, and another while with another, Jer.2.18, 36. make not a confederacy with ſo many as they do; or rather, to any of them: as Job 1.11. touch any thing, or, ought, that he hath; and Ezek.18. 13. hath done any of theſe. For ſo thoſe places would both be rendred; make no ſuch league with any of thoſe, Aſſyrian, Syrian, Egyptian, or other, whom this people combine with.

to them] Or, concerning them: and ſo, to whom, concerning whom; as Pſal.91.11. Eſth.3.2.

to whom] Intending, ſay ſome, the Syrians and Iſraelites, whom they moſt exceedingly feared, and many deſired to joyn with, (ſee on ver.6.) or, the Aſſyrians rather principally, (though not waving any other, that they might look after) whom, for fear of thoſe ſo combined, they ſought to for ſuccour, 2 King.16.7.

neither fear ye their fear] Fear not thoſe, whom they fear. Stand not in ſuch fear of thoſe two kings, as they do, ch.7.2. Jer.10.2.

their fear] Taken here ſubjectively, for the fear, wherewith they fear: but by the Apoſtle Peter alluding unto this place, effectively, for that fear, wherewith they affright, 1 Pet. 3. 14.

nor be afraid] Be not frighted, or terrified. The word ſignifies ſuch a fright, as cauſeth a concuſſion, makes one ſo to ſhake and quake, every joynt of him, as if he ſhould fall aſunder. The word is uſed, chap.2.19, 21. See a pattern of it, Dan.5.6. and in this people, ch.7.2. the words are doubled, the more to hearten and encourage; as Deut.1.29. Joſh. 1.9. 1 Pet.4.14. chap.7.4. And becauſe this latter ſeems to import more then the former; ſome would have it rendred, not, nor, as moſt verſions have it, but much leſſe be ſo affrighted, as this people are, ch.7.2.

V. 13. Sanctifie the Lord of hoſts himſelf] Heb. the Lord of hoſts him ſanctifie. It is a ſpeech redundant; but yet not without ſome emphaſis: like that of our Saviour in the like caſe, Luk.12.5. fear him, that hath power to caſt into hell; fear him; as our Saviour there, and Matth.10.28. So the Prophet here having ſhewed, whom they ſhould not fear, doth now further adviſe, and admoniſh them, whom they ſhould fear.

ſanctifie] Glorifie him, give honour to him, by fearing him, and not man, againſt whom he promiſeth to ſecure you, by truſting in him, and not ſeeking to ſuch for ſafety, as are not able to help or ſave you, Pſal. 69. 11. by yeelding your ſelves wholly into his hands, to be ſwayed and diſpoſed of, as he ſhall ſee good. So Levit.10.3. Num.20.11. & 27.14. Deut, 32.51. Ezek. 20. 40, 41. & 36.23, 27.

ſanctifie] As magnifie, Pſal.34.3. not to make holy, or great; but to acknowledg, or make known, that we deem and eſteem ſuch. So 1 Pet.3.15.

the Lord of hoſts] See ch. 1.9. Some here more ſpecially apply it to Emmanuel, or Chriſt, called the Prince, that is, principal Captain, or Commander in chief of the Lords hoſt, Joſh. 5. 14.

and let him be your fear] He ſhews more particularly, how they ſhould ſanctifie God; by fearing God, and not man: or God, rather then man, ch. 51.12, 13. by fearing none ſo, as God; nothing in compariſon of God: by making him ever the chief, in ſome kind, the only object of their fear: by fearing nothing, that he forbids them to fear, when the fear of him drowns all other fears. Fear not theſe two great kings; but fear him that is above them both. See 2 King. 6.16. 2 Chr. 32. 7, 8.

your fear] The object of your fear, the party whom ye fear; and ſo in the next branch; thus: Jacob ſware by the fear of his father Iſaac; that is, by that God, whom his father Iſaac feared, Gen.31.53.

and let him be your dread] The word anſwers that other, ver. 12. and ſignifies properly, one that terrifieth, or affrighteth: and the ſentence is repeated, for the more emphaſis and ſtronger encouragement, as there; ſo ver.3, 9, 10.

V. 14. And he ſhall be for a Sanctuary] The iſſue of this their fear of God, and their confidence in him.

And] Or, Then, as ver.3. and ſo the Greek expreſſeth it, if ye truſt in him.

he ſhall be] To wit, unto you. A defect of the pronoun; as ch. 1. 15. & 3. 10.

for a Sanctuary] The word here uſed, ſay ſome, ſignifies, both ſanctification, and ſanctuary. And they render it here, therefore, following the Greek, in the former way, as they do another alſo neer of kin to it, Pſal. 124. 2. Judah was his ſanctification. So here, He will be for ſanctification to you, or, He will be your ſanctification; as he ſaith elſewhere, that He will honour them, that honour him, 1 Sam. 2. 30: ſo he will ſanctifie them, if they ſanctifie him. But albeit, that word uſed in the Pſalm, ſignifie as well ſanctification, or holineſs rather; as a ſanctuary, or holy place; And in this latter way alſo, ſome render that in the Pſalm, Judah was his Sanctuary: Yet the word here uſed, never ſignifies other, then as our Engliſh renders it, He will be for a Sanctuary; that is, a ſacred and inviolable place of retreat, and refuge, whereunto they may freely reſort, and wherein they may ſafely, and quietly repoſe themſelves amidſt all commotions and combuſtions whatſoever, and have therefore no cauſe of fear. So Ezek. 11.16. I will be as a little Sanctuary to them, in the countries where they come. See ch. 4. 5, 6. Pſal. 46. 1, 2. Prov. 18.10. See alſo chap. 63. 18. where both words, above mentioned, are found together. Howbeit, true it is, that a Sanctuary implyes, as well ſanctification, as ſalvation; as well ſanctity, as ſafety. Nor are theſe ever ſevered the one from the other, Rom.6. 22. 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. Rev. 20. 6. See chap. 4. 3, 5, 6. & 6. 13.

but for a ſtone of ſtumbling, and for a rock of offence] Having ſhewed what God will be to the godly, to wit, a Sanctuary, ſtrong houſe, or Temple of ſtone; ſurely founded upon a rock; which who ſo truſteth to, need not fear, ch. 28. 16. he now proceeds to ſhew what he will be to the wicked and ungodly, both in Judah and Iſrael, that refuſe to be ruled by him, and to rely on him; he will be as a ſtone in their way, for them to ſtumble at, to their miſchief and overthrow; as a ſnare to catch them, to their deſtruction.

but] Heb. and; as verſ. 9, 10.

for a ſtone] That is, as a ſtone: or, like a ſtone: or, ſimply, a ſtone; as Ezek. 44. 12. They were for a ſtumbling block: inſtead whereof, chap. 7. 29. It was a ſtumbling block. So afterward, for a ſnare; as Joſh. 23. 13. They ſhall be for a ſnare: inſtead whereof, Hoſ. 5. 1. Ye have been a ſnare.

a ſtone of ſtumbling] Heb. a ſtone of ſtriking, ſmiting. Such as lying in the way, the foot may ſmite or ſtrike againſt, and a man receive ſome hurt and harm, ſome maim or miſchief thereby, Pſal. 91. 12. Prov. 3. 23: forbidden therefore to be laid in the blinde mans way, Levit. 19. 14. and commanded to be removed out of the way of Gods people, ch. 57. 14. See Jer. 6. 21.

a rock of offence] Not a bare ſtumbling ſtone, or block; only ſuch an one, as a man, yet diſcovering, may make ſome ſhift, either to ſhun, or to get over; or, though he chance to ſtumble at, yet he may but fall forward, it may but caſt him upon his face, ſo as, without much hurt, he may yet riſe, and recover himſelf again; but a rock of offence; ſuch as coming in a mans way, he cannot poſſibly avoid, no more then he is able to remove a rock out of his way; which if a man, or ſhip run upon, or ruſh violently againſt, it will caſt the man down backward, ch. 28. 13. and lay him on his back; as our Saviours words did thoſe that came to apprehend him, Joh. 19. 6. and the tidings of the Ark taken did old Eli, 1 Sam. 4. 18. It will ſplit in ſunder, and drown the one, batter in pieces, and deſtroy the other, Matth. 21. 44. This is applyed in the Goſpel to our Saviour, whoſe mean condition, to outward appearance, made many to refuſe and reject him, to their own ruine; as did this people here, the means of ſafety that God offered them; but they refuſed to reſt in, and rely upon, Matth. 21. 42, 44. Luk 2. 34. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 3. 8.

to both the houſes of Iſrael] Heb. to the two houſes of Iſrael. Theſe tearms ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors refer, as to be underſtood by way diſtribution; partly, unto the former branch of the words, before-going, concerning a ſanctuary; and partly, unto the latter branch, concerning a ſtumbling ſtone, and a rock of offence. They ſuppoſe two ſorts of men in the kingdom of Judah to be meant by theſe two houſes; the one, of thoſe that truſted in God, and were faithful to the houſe of David: the other of thoſe that were treacherous, and did under-hand complot with Pekah, and the Syrians now; or with the Aſſyrians in Ezekiahs time: of which ſort, ſay they, were Shebna, and ſome others: and that God herē promiſeth to be a ſanctuary to the former; but threatens to be a ſtumbling ſtone, and rock of offence to the latter. The want of the pronoun, denoting thoſe whom the Prophet ſpake unto, not obſerved in the firſt member of the verſe; led thoſe Doctors aſide, and made them much to miſtake the Prophets minde: wherein few therefore follow them. The moſt, as well of theirs, as ours, underſtand by the two houſes of Iſrael; thoſe two kingdoms, which the whole body of the people of Iſrael, the twelve tribes, were divided into, under Rehoboam; ten falling off from him, and two onely cleaving to him; when as before, under David and Solomon, they made but one State, as one houſe, acknowledging but one head, 2 Sam. 5. 3, 5. & 8. 15. 1 King. 2. 12. & 11. 42. & 12. 16, 17, 21. The main body of both which, being grown very corrupt, unfaithful, and diſobedient, God threatens them both to bring theſe heavy judgements upon them; though he would withal ſecure, and ſave thoſe that were godly, and faithful among them, Pſal. 125. 1, 5. 2 Pet. 2. 5, 7, 9. Of Iſrael, ſee chap. 1. 1, 3.

for a gin, and for a ſnare, unto the inhabitants of Jeruſalem] One of the Jewiſh Doctors, whom the Greek alſo, and ſome of the Latines, in part, concur with, conceives theſe words, not as intimating what God would be to Jeruſalem, but what others ſhould be to them, and what God would be to ſuch, as were ſo to them. For thus doth the great Rabbine joyn this branch to the former; God will be a ſtumbling ſtone, and a rock of offence unto thoſe two houſes of Iſrael, that come to be a gin, and a ſnare to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem; that is, to Pekah, and Shebna, with their conſorts, ſaith he; to the Iſraelites, and the Syrians confederate with them, ſay others; both which laid trains for the taking of Jeruſalem. But theſe are over-bold in filling up the text, with ſtuff of their own. The meaning is plain, that God would be as a gin, or a ſnare to them alſo; implying, that it was not either the royal ſeat, or Gods own Sanctuary there, that ſhould ſecure them; but that they alſo, for their iniquity, ſhould ſuffer with the reſt. See Lam. 3. 47. He altereth the ſimilitude, paſſing from the former, to another, taken from the practice of Fowlers and Hunters, that ſet gins, and ſnares to catch birds and beaſts: (the like whereunto, ſee Pſal. 35. 7. & 91. 3. & 119. 110. & 140. 5. & 141. 9. & 142. 3. chap. 24. 17, 18. Hoſ. 5. 1. & 9. 8.) as ſome ſuppoſe, in way of mitigation, as intending a milder manner of dealing with them, then with the reſt; and intimating, that though they ſhould be caught in a ſnare, yet the ſnare ſhould be broken, and they eſcape out of it, Pſalm 124. 7. But the words enſuing, verſ. 15. ſhew, evidently, the ſame thing to be intended in either. See verſ. 19. chap. 5. 13. And others therefore, would have it to intimate rather, that neither by might, nor ſlight, they ſhould be able to go beyond God, or to eſcape his vengeance; he would meet with them in either kinde, Job 5. 13. 1 Cor. 3. 19.

V. 15. And many among them ſhall ſtumble, and fall, and be broken] The iſſue of the judgement before threatned, deſcribed in tearms ſuitable to the two former ſimilitudes, wherein it was denounced and laid down, ver. 14.

And many ſhall] Or, That many may; as Job 5. 11. Pſal. 78. 11. Mal. 1. 9. noting either, the iſſue, or the end. See Jer. 6. 21.

many] Not all. For God wil ever reſerve a remnant, ch. 1. 9. & 4. 2. & 6. 13. But the moſt are ſtill the worſt, Jer. 5. 1.

among them] Of both houſes, before mentioned, verſ. 14. Hoſ. 5. 5. Others read it, againſt them; or, at them, to wit, the ſtone, and rock, before mentioned: But that conſtruction is more harſh.

ſhall ſtumble, and fall, and be broken] Theſe reſpect the former ſimilitude of a ſtone, and a rock.

ſtumble, and fall] A man may trip at a ſtone, or ſtumble either, and yet not fall. But thoſe that light on theſe ſtones, ſhall ſo ſtumble, that they ſhall not eſcape a fall. So Pſalm 27. 2. They ſtumbled, and fell, chap. 31. 3. & 46. 6. & 50. 32. See ch. 3. 8.

and be broken] As running upon, or ruſhing againſt a rock, ch. 28. 13. Matth. 21. 44. Luk 20. 18.

and be ſnared, and be taken] As beaſts, or fowl are taken in a net, or ſnare, Eccl. 9. 12. Luk 21. 35. This anſwers the latter branch of the fore-going verſe, concerning a gin, or a ſnare. So ch. 28. 13. & 42. 22.

V. 16. Binde up the Teſtimony] The words of God, as all agree; as ſome, more ſpecially of Chriſt, to the Prophet, informing him further what he ſhould do, both concerning the viſions of God, and the ſacred myſteries therein revealed unto him, and concerning the doctrine of Gods word in general.

Binde up the Teſtimony, ſeal the Law among my Diſciples] Theſe two branches, ſome conceive to have reſpect unto two ſort of perſons; as if the Prophet were enjoyned to binde up the Teſtimony, in regard of the one; to ſeal the Law, in regard of the other. They ſuppoſe, that the Prophet ſtood, hitherto, before Ahaz and his people, (which yet appears not) with that roll, mentioned, ver. 1. unfolded, and ſpread abroad in his hand, out of which he read, and withal expounded to them, what was therein contained; therefore called here the teſtimony, or conteſtation, becauſe ſolemnly entred, and engroſſed before witneſſes, verſ. 2. But conſidering that neither king, nor people regarded what he ſaid, God now bad him roll it up again, and faſten it; that they might hear no more of the matters contained in it. Alluding to the manner of ſuch volums, as being ſo rolled up, nothing written in them, can be ſeen, or read, Rev. 6. 14. Yet withal, that he ſhould open them, and confirm the truth of them, in private, to the faithful, his followers, that were capable of ſuch myſteries, and ready to receive them, Prov. 23. 9. Matth. 7. 6. 1 Cor. 2. 6. in the word of ſealing, having reſpect to ſuch things, as for ſecrecy are wont to be ſealed up, that they may be kept from common, either uſe, or view, Cant. 4. 12. Rev. 5. 1, 3. Others ſuppoſe them to concern both the ſame perſons. Some, the Prophet himſelf, principally; that though few regarded his miniſtery, yet he ſhould continue conſtant in the execution and exerciſe of it. Both by careful keeping in minde, and obſerving of it himſelf; and giving aſſurance of it alſo unto others; and confirming them in the truth of it; an alluſion, as ſome of them ſuppoſe, to ſuch ligatures, as men uſe for the memorial of ought, that they may not forget it, Deut. 6. 8. Prov. 3. 1, 3. As others to wares, that merchants do firſt wrap up, and binde about with cord, and then ſeale alſo for more ſecurity: As others again, to letters that are firſt bound about with thread, and afterward ſealed; to which God ſhould compare his word delivered unto the Prophet, as matter of authentick truth, having Gods ſeal ſtamped on it, Eſth. 3. 12. & 8. 8. Others deem it to have ſpecial regard to the Prophets ſcholars and followers; that by diligent inſtruction he ſhould prepare, faſhion, and frame their hearts, to be fit tables for the receit of the divine teſtimony, the truth of God to be written in them; and both to be ſealed up to them, and to be ſealed unto by them, Jer. 31. 35. 2 Cor. 1. 23. & 3. 2, 3. Eph. 1. 13. & 4. 30. Heb. 8. 10. in which places, they ſuppoſe, the Jewiſh manner alluded to, of taking depoſitions; a draught whereof being made, under the hands of thoſe that were depoſed, was after ſigned alſo by thoſe that took them. Others, laſtly, ſuppoſe the words only to intimate, that theſe myſteries, eſpecially concerning the Meſſias, ſhould be, as recorded; ſo ſhut, and ſealed up, to be reſerved for poſterity, unto whom, in future ages, they ſhould more clearly be revealed, chap. 30. 8. Dan. 12. 4, 9. Rev. 10. 4. Or that they ſhould be like letters cloſed, and ſealed: neither read, received nor conceived by any, but ſuch onely, as were inwardly enlightned, chap. 28. 11, 12. The meaning ſeems to be no more, but that God would not have the Prophet to deal further, in this kinde, with theſe faithleſs and prophane Scoffers; but reſerve ſuch ſacred myſteries to be imparted to the faithful; who would with due reverence religiouſly receive them.

Binde up] As Deut. 14. 25. 1 Sam. 25. 29. Or, faſhion, frame; as Exod. 32. 4. Or, keep; as Prov. 3. 21, & 6. 20, 21. The firſt here ſeems fitteſt.

the teſtimony] So is the word of God, in general, oft ſtyled in Scripture; twenty times, at leaſt, in one Pſalm, Pſal. 119. and it is ſo tearmed, becauſe thereby, God not onely maketh known his will to us; but by a ſolemn, and ſevere ſanction alſo, doth atteſt thereunto, 2 King. 17. 15. Neh. 9. 34. And ſo alſo is the word taken hereafter, verſ. 20. but in this place it ſeems rather to note that ſpecial word of God, that God by the Prophet had not, without ſuch like ſanction, not delivered onely to them, but even preſſed upon them at preſent. Nor doth it hinder, but that it may well be taken ſo here; albeit, that it be uſed more largely there.

ſeal] For immunity, as Dan 6.17. or ſafe cuſtody, as Matth. 27.66. or ſecrecy, as Cant. 4.12. or aſſurance and certainty, as Joh. 3.33. & 6. 27. Rom. 4. 11. Eph. 4. 30. of either of theſe two latter, the term may well here be taken.

the Law] Either the Word of God in general; as Pſal. 19. 7. & 119. 97. or the law of rites and precepts, the law of Moſes, Mal. 4. 4. Matth. 11. 13. Joh. 1. 17. or that particular meſſage, or doctrine, that Iſaiah had at this time delivered, or was, further, [illegible]deliver to the faithful: and thus it ſeems to be here taken, as alſo ch. 1. 10.

among my Diſciples] As ver. 15. among them, or, with my Diſciples, as Ezr. 10. 17. or, for my Diſciples, as Neh. 13. 14. for their behoof; reſerve it, to be imparted to them, for the ſtay and ſupport of them in theſe calamitous times.

my Diſciples] Or, my taught, or learned ones. Such as have been taught of God, as the Prophet ſpeaks, chap. 54. 13. (where the ſame word is uſed) ſuch, as have learned Chriſt, and been taught of Chriſt; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph. 4. 20, 21. But ye not ſo; ye have learned Chriſt, if ſo be ye have heard him, and have been taught of him: (for ſo the words would there be read) The word doth not properly ſignifie, a Diſciple, a Scholar; (ſave, as we uſe to ſay, a Scholar, for one skilful, or learned,) or, a learner. Though a term neer unto it, denote ſuch an one; and is therefore well rendred, a ſcholar, 1 Chr. 25. 8. but that word is of an active form; this is of a paſſive; and ſignifies properly, not a learner, but one learned: one, that hath been taught, hath learned, and by learning, is become skilful, and learned; as the word is well rendred, ch. 50. 4. See more hereof there.

V. 17. And I will wait upon the Lord] The Prophets words, profeſſing his reſolution of conſtant depending, and patient attending upon God; notwithſtanding the preſent tokens of his wrath and diſpleaſure towards his People: and notwithſtanding the diſcouragements that he received from them, by no part of his Miniſtry prevailing with them, for their good. For, to me, they ſeem to ſtrain the text unreaſonably, who make them the words of Chriſt ſpeaking to the Prophet; and by his own example, encouraging him to conſtancy and perſeverance in his miniſtry, with patience; as he doth his Diſciples, Joh. 15. 20. Heb. 12. 1, 2.

And] Or, Yet, rather, as Jer. 2. 32, 35. Some render it, Then I waited; as if he had ſaid, being thus confirmed, v. 11. I reſolved to wait, and ſo did. But the uſe of the particle, altering the preſent to the future, carrieth it rather the other way.

I will wait upon the Lord] Word for word, I will ſtay for the Lord. For ſo the word properly ſignifies, 2 King. 7. 9. & 9. 3. Job 32. 4. I will ſtay his time. So Pſal. 33. 20. & 106. 13. ch. 30. 18. Hab. 2. 3. Zeph. 3. 8.

that hideth his face] That ſheweth himſelf to be diſpleaſed with his people, by theſe heavy judgments, partly inflicted, and partly further menaced; and as ſome alſo, by commanding the roll to be wrapped up and concealed, ver. 16. It is a metaphor taken from the practice of men, who being diſpleaſed with a party, with-draw themſelves from him, and will not be ſeen of him, nor ſpoken to by him, 2 Sam. 14. 24. See the like, Pſal. 10. 1. & 27. 9. ch. 45. 15. & 54. 8. & 57. 17. and 64. 7.

from the houſe of Jacob] See ch. 2. 5, 6. ver. 14.

and I will look for him] I will with patience and hopefull expectation, depend on him, both for ſupport amidſt theſe ſad occurrents, and a comfortable iſſue of them in his due time. So Job 13. 15. & 14. 14. Pſal. 40. 1. ch. 25. 9. Jer. 14. 22. Mic. 7. 7.

V. 18. Behold, I, and the children, &c.] Theſe words alſo, many would have to be, not the Prophets words, ſpeaking at all of himſelf, but Chriſts ſpeaking to the Prophet, and relating to him, what his own condition would be; and the condition of his followers, when he ſhould appear and live, here below, in the fleſh; and the reaſon they build upon, is, becauſe the Apoſtle produceth theſe words, as ſpoken, either of, or by Chriſt, Heb. 2. 14. But the conſequence is not neceſſary. For to inſtance in the like: It followeth not, that thoſe words, 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be his Father, and he ſhall be my ſon, were not ſpoken by God, to David, of Solomon; as David himſelf telleth him, 1 Chr. 22. 10. becauſe the Apoſtle applyeth them to Chriſt, Heb. 1. 5. or that thoſe words in the Apoſtle, the very next before theſe, I will truſt in him; whether they be taken out of Pſal. 18. 2. as ſome of theſe would have it; who are herein the ſtiffeſt; or, whether they be drawn from the Greek of this Prophet, ver. 17. which I rather incline to; were not ſpoken either by David, or by Iſaiah, of themſelves; becauſe they are by the Apoſtle, in the ſame place, carried up unto Chriſt. Many ſpeeches of the Prophets, concerning themſelves; and many Prophecies concerning Cyrus, and others, who were types of Chriſt, are in the New Teſtament applyed unto Chriſt: being one way, and in one manner verified of them; and another way, and in another manner alſo, many times, fulfilled in him. Of himſelf then, there need no doubt be made, but that the Prophet ſpeaks in this place; albeit the thing ſpoken of him, be alſo verified and fulfilled in Chriſt; and that in another ſort, then with Iſaiah it was. And others therefore, not a few, take them to be the Prophets own words, and thoſe, firſt, and primarily affirmed, concerning himſelf, and his own, either children, or diſciples; either complaining of the peoples vile eſtimation of them; or the ineffectualneſs of that ſervice, whereunto God had aſſigned both him and them, or both; and yet withal, profeſſing a readineſſe to undergo either.

Behold] Spoken, as thoſe who make the words following Chriſts; as in way of admiration, that he and his ſhould be ſo reputed, and that by his own people, Joh. 1. 11. So in way alſo of inſtigation, to ſtir the Prophet up ſeriouſly, to conſider it, that he might with more content of mind endure, and undergo the like. See the like, Jer. 25. 29. & 45. 5. Or, as thoſe that conceive them to be the Prophets, as in way of Lamentation and complaint, that it ſhould be ſo with him, and his; or that ſo little good was done by what they ſuſtained; as Jer. 17. 15. Ezek. 33. 32. ſo withal, in way of profeſſion, or proteſtation of a willingneſſe to do and endure whatſoever, in this, or any other kind, God ſhould pleaſe to call them to, or to employ them in, or exerciſe them with, as ch. 6. 8. or by way of exhortation to Gods faithful people, inciting them to look on him, and his children; and to conſider his conſtancy, and undaunted reſolution, and what the myſterious names, impoſed on them, did import, and might aſſure them of.

I, and the children] By children, ſome underſtand diſciples; whether Chriſts, or Iſaiah's, ſuch as were before mentioned, v. 16. that is, either ſuch as were termed the children of the Prophets, becauſe the Prophets their Inſtructers, were as fathers to them, 1 Sam. 10. 12. & 19. 20. 2 King. 2. 3, 5. Amos 7. 14. or, ſuch, as by his miniſtery he had begotten unto God, 1 Cor. 4. 15. 1 Tim. 1. 2. Tit. 1. 4. Philem. 10. But others rather underſtand the Prophets natural children, born to him in wedlock by his lawful wife; whereof mention alſo was made before, ch. 7. 3. ver. 3. that, which muſt be in another manner underſtood, when applyed unto Chriſt, Heb. 2. 14. as Solomons being Gods Son, Heb. 1. 5.

whom the Lord hath given me] When applyed to Chriſt, whom the Father hath, for life eternal, given to him, Joh. 6. 37, 39, 65. When to Iſaiah, whom God had made him the means to convert; or whom, by his bleſſing on the marriage-bed, God had beſtowed on him: They are the children, ſaith Jacob, that God hath given me, Gen. 33. 5. & 48. 9. and, I, ſaith God, gave Iſaac unto Abraham; and unto Iſaac, Jacob and Eſau; Joſh. 24. 3, 4.

are for ſigns and wonders in Iſrael] I, and my followers, are accounted as monſters, and are matter of wonderment, as ſuch manner of creatures are wont to be, among this people. David of himſelf, I am as a monſter unto many, Pſal. 71. 9. and, Thou Joſhua, and thy fellows, that ſit before thee, are men of wonder, or, men wondred at, Zach. 3. 8. or, I, and my children, are propounded by God for ſtrange and unuſual ſigns to this people; and indeed, ſo they were: the Prophet himſelf is expreſly ſaid, ſo to be, ch. 20. 2, 3. See the note on the place; and ſo were his children: as hath been ſhewed on ch. 7. 16. & ver. 3, 4. and this alſo, no doubt, together with the names thereupon given them, did expoſe them to the ſcoffs, and pointings at, of the prophane multitude: There goes Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz, and the like.

from the Lord of hoſts] Heb. from with the Lord. That is, by his appointment; That which ſeems to carry this branch the latter way, v.3. ch. 20.2. for, Lord of hoſts. See on ch.1.9.

who dwelleth in Mount-Sion] Where his Temple, his principal place of ſpecial reſidence on earth, and amongſt his people, is, Pſal.76.2. & 132.13,14. See ch.2.2,3.

V. 19. And when they ſhall ſay unto you] To let paſſe the great variety of ſtrange and ſtrained connexions, and coherences, that ſundry Interpreters give of this paſſage, with the former context. The occaſion of this caution here inſerted, ſeems to be this. The example of Saul, and others, ſheweth how prone people are in times of ſtreights and difficulties, to ſeek unto Sorcerers, by ſuch, hoping to receive information of what is like to be, and advice what courſe to take for their own ſafety, 1 Sam.28.7,15. 2 King.1.2. This way, therefore, it is not unlikely that many were looking after, in theſe troubleſome times, (eſpecially, being otherwiſe much addicted thereunto, ch. 2.8.) and inciting others alſo thereunto. Againſt whoſe enticements, the Prophet therefore endeavours to arme the faithful; partly, by diſcovering the vanity and impiety of ſuch courſes; and partly, by directing them, unto whom upon all ſuch occaſions, they ought, for advice, to reſort.

when they ſhall ſay] when any ſhall ſay; or, when it ſhall be ſaid. For the verb is here put indefinitely, or impersonally, without deſignation of, or reference unto, any ſpecial, or particular perſon, or perſons; as Matth. 24.16. though it may be preſumed, that none but the unfaithful ſort of people, would ſo ſpeak.

Seek unto them that have familiar ſpirits] Or, Enquire of them (as Deut.18.11. 1 Sam.28.7. 1 Chr.10. 13,14.) for advice and help.

that have familiar ſpirits] The term here uſed, comes from a word, that ſignifies, a bottle, Job 32.19. and the word is put, ſometime, for the familiar ſpirit it ſelf, as the text in our verſion here ſpeaks: as where the witch of Endor is termed, the owner of ſuch an one, (for ſo the original hath it, 1 Sam. 28. 7,8.) that is, one, that had ſuch an one at hand, to make uſe of. Where the witch, and the ſpirit, or familiar, are diſtinguiſhed the one from the other; as alſo they are, Act. 16.16. but ſometime it is put for the witch, him, or her ſelf, one that hath, or is poſſeſſed of ſuch an one: as where it is ſaid, that Saul had put away, and cut off the witches, 1 Sam.28.3,10. and ſo is the word alſo uſed in this place. And theſe witches are deemed ſo to have been at firſt termed, becauſe the evill ſpirits, that poſſeſſed them, when they gave anſwers by them, uſed to ſwell and blow up their bodies, their breaſts and bellies eſpecially, like a bladder, or a bottle; as of the Pythian Propheteſſes, or witches rather, is recorded; and to caſt them withal into a kind of frenzy: during which alſo, they delivered the oracles by them, with an hoarſe, or hollow voyce, as if they ſpake out of their bellies, (whence another name is in Greek given them) or out of a bottle. Howbeit, the ſpirit, or familiar, which the Witch of Endor made uſe of, ſeems to have been raiſed by her, but not to have ſpoken in her, or through her. The word is uſed again, ch.19.3. & 29.4.

and] Or, or. as ch.10.14.

unto wizzards] Or, cunning men, as ſome call them; the word is not amiſſe ſo rendred. For it comes of a word, that ſignifies, to know, to have skill, or cunning; as 1 Sam. 16. 16, 18. one that knoweth, that is, hath skill, or cunning to handle the harp, and ch. 29.11,12. one that knoweth a book, for, one that hath skill in it: and, one that knoweth not a book, for, one that hath no skill in reading. So theſe men were termed wizzards, or, skilful, cunning men; becauſe they pretended much skill and cunning, in diſcloſing of hidden matters, and foretelling future events. For, as for what the Jewiſh Doctors tell us, of a ſtrange bird, as ſome, or beaſt, as others, whereof theſe ſhould have their name, they ſeem to be meerly fabulous. The two words here uſed, are found commonly joyned together in Scripture, as well in hiſtorical relations, as in legal prohibitions, Levit.19.31. & 20.27. Deut.18.11. 1 Sam. 28.3,9. 2 King.21.10. & 23.24. 2 Chr.33.6.

that peep] Or, chatter; as it is rendred, ch. 38. 14. The word properly ſignifies, ſuch a puling voyce, as foul, in general, ch. 10. 14. ſmall, or great, ſuch as ſwallows, and cranes, ch.38.14. are wont to make: and it ſeems, that theſe familiars uſed, in ſuch a broken, and ſcarce articulate ſound; or in ſuch an hollow, low, whiſpering manner, to give out their anſwers: that thoſe by whom they ſpake, or that made uſe of them, were to relate them more plainly, and expound them unto thoſe that conſulted them. See ch.29.1.

and that mutter] This word ſeems to import a more doleful and mournful tone, or a more dreadful and hideous grumbling, then the former. For it is uſed, ſometime for that bemoaning kind of noyſe, that Doves uſe to make, ch.38 14. & 59.11. ſometime, for that grunting, or grumbling, rather, then roaring noyſe, that a Lion is wont to make over his prey. when he is poſſeſſed of it, chap. 31.4. And ſuch ſuch noyſes, it is not unlikely, that theſe impoſters alſo ſometime made; to ſtrike a kind of awe and dread of them, into thoſe that repaired to them. Though others alſo, and ſo the old Latine, underſtand it of ſuch muttering, and murmuring, or mumbling, as their inchanters, or charmers, in their ſpells and charms uſed; and are not unuſual with them, at this day. Some of the Rabbines affirm them to be ſo called, becauſe they uſed to ſet men a muſing. And the verb indeed ſignifies commonly, to muſe, or, to meditate: and although the notation ſeem ſomewhat far fetch'd; yet if the original of the word Magi, uſed both by the Greeks, and Latines, be not Perſian; (as is moſt probable) but Hebrew; and be derived, as many deem, from the word here uſed; I ſhould ſuppoſe, that they are ſo termed, not as mutterers, which ſome have imagined; (for it is not likely, that they ſhould ſtyle themſelves, by a title of diſgrace) but as muſers, a more honourable appellation: nor was the name anciently otherwiſe eſteemed, Matth. 2.1. But to leave this, I cannot concur with thoſe, who would have the word of peeping here, to be referred to the witches; the word of muttering, to the wizards: as if the one peeped, but muttered not; the other muttered, but peeped not: whereas the words ſeem joyntly and indifferently to have relation to either. See ver. 14,15. and ch.5.13,15.

ſhould not a people ſeek unto their God?] The Prophet here, enforms the faithful, what anſwer they ſhould return to thoſe, that endeavored thus to ſeduce them: and there would therefore, for more perſpicuity, theſe words be inſerted, Say ye, or, the like: as Pſal.115.15. & 132.14. where the defect is in the latter branch; as the like in the former, Pſal.27.8. Jer.10.11.

ſhould not, &c.] Heb. ſhall not; Or, will not. Whence ſome render the words thus, Will not any people ſeek unto (or, enquire of, as before) their own God? as convincing them, by the general practice of all people, like that, Jer. 2. 11. Hath any Nation changed their gods? and that, Mic. 4. 5. All people will walk, each in the name of his God. But we need not alter our reading; the future is frequently uſed, to ſignifie, not what will, or ſhall; but what would, or ſhould, be done. So 2 King.3.27. He ſacrificed his ſon, that ſhall reign (for, that ſhould reign, or, ſhould have reigned) in his ſtead: Mal.1.6. A ſon will (that is, ſhould) honour his father. And the Prophet ſeems to argue, rather, from matter of right, and due, then of fact: from office, and duty; then from practice: And it agreeth better ſo, alſo, with the next branch. It is a thing agreeable both to reaſon and religion, that whom people profeſs to be their God, him they ſhould, for advice and direction, reſort to. So Elias, to the Iſraelites; If Jehovah be God, follow him, 1 King.18.21. and to Ahaziah's Meſſengers; Is it not becauſe ye have no God in Iſrael, that ye go to enquire after the god of Ekron? 1 King.1.3.

for the living to the dead] Or, as others render it, from the living to the dead; either way the ſpeech is defective, to be from the former branch thus ſupplyed. Should men go to enquire, for, or from the living to the dead? And according to the latter reading the meaning ſhould be; Should men go from the living God, and his Prophets, to ſeek for advice unto the dead, either idols, or idolaters? Hoſ. 3. 12. or, to men deceaſed, whom theſe Sorcerers, therefore called Necromancers, have dealing with, Deut.18.11,15. 1 Sam. 28. 8, 12. But I finde not where the particle here uſed, is found in that ſence. I know ſome alleadg; Gen.26.8. He looked out from a window. And, He fell down from a lattice, 2 King.1.1. But it would rather be rendred, at a window, in the one place; and through a lattice, in the other: as Joel.2.9. they ſhall enter in at, or, through the windows. The former reading therefore, which our laſt tranſlation hath, ſeems the ſurer; becauſe the particle is frequently found uſed in that ſence, to ſignifie, for, or, in behalf of, as 1 Sam.7.9. & 12.23. 2 Sam. 12. 16. 1 King. 13. 6. Jer.11.14. and oft elſewhere. And ſo it is, as if the Prophet had ſaid, Should men go to ſeek help and advice in the behalf of the living, and for their ſafety, from the dead, who neither have any notice of them, nor are able to afford them any ſuccour? Job 14.21. ch.63.16. Howſoever, the oppoſition is principally between living, and dead; as Eccl. 9. 4,5. Nor will the text therefore admit the expoſition of ſome; though of prime note: who would have the words rendred, from the living to the dead: as depending on the foregoing branch, without any ſupply; and as a parallel phraſe to that, Gen.6 7. from man to beaſt; implying, that God alone is alſufficient both for quick and dead; as he is ſaid to be, Lord of quick and dead, Rom. 14. 9. and, Judge of quick, and dead, 2 Tim.4.1. for neither are the particles in either form the ſame; nor hath either of the particles here read, ever that uſe: nor was there occaſion here, of enquiring ought, concerning the dead; but concerning the living only.

V. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony] Let them ſeek; or, At the Law, and at the Teſtimony, let them enquire. For that is to be ſupplyed out of the verſe fore-going; as there, alſo, in the latter branch, out of the former. He ſheweth now, whom, for ayd and advice, they ſhould repair unto: as before, to whom they ſhould not. By the Law, and the Teſtimony, ſome would here underſtand that doctrine only, and thoſe particular predictions and directions, that the Prophet had from God at preſent imparted to them. Of which before, ver. 16. But theſe ſeem to ſtraiten the words over-much. Others therefore, underſtand by theſe two terms, the Word of God, in general, either contained in the ſacred Volumes already written, and then extant, or delivered to them by word of mouth, through the miniſtry of his Prophets, as 2 Chr.20.20. & 34. 21,22. not excluding thoſe precepts, predictions, or promiſes, that the Prophet had delivered unto them at preſent. So Abraham ſends them, in the parable, To Moſes, and the Prophets, Luk.16.29. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe, they go over-nicely to work, who by the Law, here conceive to be meant, the writings of Moſes; and by the Teſtimony, the Prophetical Revelations; as if the former were not Gods Teſtimony, as well as the latter: when as, indeed, the name of Teſtimony, was firſt, and primarily, given unto the Law, written in the two Tables; in regard whereof alſo, was the Ark called, the Ark of the Teſtimony; becauſe thoſe Tables were laid up in it, Exod. 25.16. & 40.20. 1 King. 8.6,9. by either term therefore, is underſtood, Gods Word in general; as our Prophets manner is oft, to expreſſe, in divers terms, the ſame thing. See on ch. 5.13,15. and on ver.14,15. And, as I ſuppoſe, the Law, and the Teſtimony, is no other then Gods Word, which is his Teſtimony; as cloud, and ſmoke, for, ſmoky cloud: ſtorm, and rain, for, rainy ſtorm, ch.4.5,6. See ver.16.

if they ſpeak not according to this word, it is, becauſe there is no light in them] The Jewiſh Doctors are here moſt ridiculous; who, becauſe oaths are in this form commonly conceived, If this, or that, be not; (of which, ſee ch.5.9.) deem therefore, or dream rather, that the Prophet ſhould here ſwear by the Law, and the Teſtimony, that the people would ſpeak no otherwiſe, then as he had before ſaid they would, v. 19. and ſo it ſhould be like that of Elias, 1 King. 17. 1. But to leave them to their dreams and dotages, wherein yet they have followers: our own Interpreters are much divided about the meaning of theſe words. Some read them, as a continued ſentence, by way of interrogation, thus; Do they not ſpeak againſt the Law, and the Teſtimony, in this manner? or, Do they not ſpeak on this wiſe, (adviſing reſort to witches and wizards) that have no light (that is, no true knowledge of God, 1 Cor.15.34.) in them? That which, yet, excepting that frivolous conceit of an oath, is, in effect, the ſame with that before of the Rabbine. Whereunto may be added, what another of his fellows hath; Do they not ſpeak in this manner of the Law, and the Teſtimony, that there is no morning light in it? It is a night, without morning, like that of the falſe Prophets, Mic.3:6. Others, thus divide them, If not, (if they refuſe to liſten to Gods Law, and to take advice of him, and his word) let them ſpeak according to that word, that hath no light in it; neither of truth, nor of comfort: as if he had ſaid, let them even go on in their wilful and obſtinate blindneſſe; or, as others, they ſhall ſpeak according to ſuch a word, as hath no light at all in it: no light of ſound truth being in any word, that agreeth not with Gods Word, of which our Saviour, Thy Word is the Truth, Joh.17.17. Others coming neerer to our verſion, and ſo the old Latine, (for the Greek here, by miſtake of letters ſomewhat alike, is exceedingly miſled) If they ſpeak not according to this word, no morning light ſhall be to them; That is, if this people be otherwiſe minded, then from God they have been adviſed, and will reſolve to run after witches and wizards, there ſhall no day-light of proſperity befall them; but all darkneſſe of affliction and miſery, ſhall betide them. A very fit expoſition, and well ſuiting with what followes, ver.21,22. if the words of the text will bear it, which we ſhall further anon diſcuſs. Others laſtly, coming full home, in effect, to our laſt Verſion, though a little differing in ſome expreſſions: Our former Engliſh, If they ſpeak not according to this word, there is no light in them: or, as others, becauſe there is a particle omitted; It is a ſign, or it is certain, that (ſo the relative is uſed, Neh.2.7,8.) there is no light in them: or as ours here hath it; It is (the like defect whereunto, ſome would have, ch. 7.9.) becauſe (ſo the relative is rendred, 1 King.15.13. Pſal.119.158.) there is no light in them. According to theſe laſt, the meaning ſhould be: If any (for the verb is here indefinite, as before, ver.19.) ſhall ſpeak otherwiſe, then according to Gods Word, and to that, which I have now from him delivered, it is an evident ſign, that there is no light of truth in ſuch an one; or the reaſon, why ſuch ſo ſpeak, is, becauſe there is no truth in them. Not unlike that of Paul, Gal.1.7,4. and that of John, 1 Joh. 1. 6, 8,18. Howbeit, that of the old Latine, may be well fitted to the original; either by the like ſupplement, that theſe latter verſions make uſe of; or, by omitting the particle, as the old Engliſh doth, which is oftentimes redundant; as 2 Sam. 1. 4. Pſal.2.6. Zach.8.9,17. and thereunto I moſt incline, in regard of what enſueth: thus reading it; If they ſhall not ſpeak, according to this word, it ſhall be, that morning light ſhall not be to them; or, morning light then ſhall not be unto them. They ſhall enjoy no morning light; no light of comfort, or relief, ſhall ſhine forth unto them; as otherwiſe there would have done, had they kept cloſe to God, and been content to follow the directions of his Word. See Sauls caſe confirming this, 1 Sam. 28. 18, 20. 1 Chron. 10. 13, 14.

there is] Or, ſhall be; as Pſal.37.10. Iſaiah.19.7. For the negative here uſed, admits as well time future, as paſt, or preſent.

no light] Heb. no morning, or, no dawning. For the word properly ſignifies day-break, or, the dawning of the day, Job 38.12. put here for the light, that then appears; as ch. 58. 8. Hoſ. 6.3. Joel 2.2. Amos 4.13. as if he had ſaid in Jobs language, the eye-lids of the morning, or, day dawning, they ſhall never ſee. They ſhall be purſued with perpetual affliction and calamity, without any glympſe of comfort: light, for joy and comfort, Eſth.8.17. Pſal. 97.11. & 112.4. morning light, more ſpecially, for ſuch as comes, upon ſome foregoing, more then ordinary affliction, or diſtreſs; as the morning ſucceeds the night, Job 11.17. See ch.21.12.

in them] Heb. unto him, or unto them. For the number is oft changed, as ch.2.20. & 3.8,10. and the ſingular number is uſed collectively, as having reference to the body of a people. So ch.5.26,30. & 6.9,10. where the pronouns are all ſingular, though rendred not amiſs (as ſome of the verbs alſo are) plural.

V. 21. And they ſhall paſſe through it] The evill followeth more largely deſcribed, that ſhall betide theſe deſerters of God, and his ayd graciouſly offered them, betaking themſelves unto other evil and abominable courſes; to wit, that they ſhall in their diſtreſſes flit to and fro; but meeting with no means of ſuccour or relief, either from above, or below, they ſhall be at their wits end, like thoſe at Sea in a ſtorm unavoidable and unſupportable, Pſal.107.26,27. So Jer.14.18.

And] Or, For; as Pſal.108.12.

they ſhall paſſe] Heb. he ſhall paſſe. Which ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors underſtand of the King of Aſſyria, paſſing with his Army, through the land of Judah. But the expoſition we may well let paſſe; and ſo may we as well theirs alſo, of the morning light, before ſpoken, that it ſhould paſſe away from them, and not abide with them. It is meant, of the wicked Jewiſh people, either, as ſome, compelled to paſſe out of their land, which they made full account to dwell in for ever; as God had promiſed they ſhould, ſo long as they continued loyal to him, Jer.25.5. or, as others rather, conſtrained to flit to and fro in the land, where they had quietly dwelt before, to ſeek ſuccour in their diſtreſs, by occaſion of forraign foes, and their forces breaking in upon them, and hunting them from place to place, Jer.16.16. it is in the ſingular number, becauſe ſpoken of the people, as one body; and withal, to ſhew how it ſhould be, with each one of thoſe wicked ones. See ver.20.

through it] Or, to and fro in it; the land of Judah, as ch. 9.1. & Gen.48.9. in this, to wit, land, or place. For they ſeem to fetch it too far, that render it, for this; as implying the cauſe, for which they thus ſuffered; their impiety, mentioned, ver.19.

hardly beſtead] As the word is uſed, Gen. 35.16,17. where it is ſaid of Rachel, that ſhe had hard labour; or, word for word, was hardly beſtead in her child-bearing: and Job 30. 25. where Job ſaith, he wept for the man, that had an hard day, or time, of it, that was at any time hardly beſtead. They render it amiſſe, that tranſlate it, hardened. Underſtanding it of men either hardened in ſin, or grown ſenſeleſs of the evills they ſuſtained: The one ſuites not with its yoke-fellow, hunger, a corporal evil; the other croſſeth the main courſe of the context, deſcribing men exceeding ſenſible of their calamitous condition.

and hungry] Deſtitute, as of all neceſſaries; ſo eſpecially of food, Pſal.107.5. See ch.5.13. & 9.20. This ſome refer to Hezekiah's time, ch.36.12. ſome to Zedekiahs, Jer. 38.9. & 52. 6.

that when they ſhall be hungry, they ſhall fret themſelves] Heb. when he ſhall be hungry; and he ſhall fret himſelf, for, that he ſhall fret himſelf, as Amos 9.1. Mal.1,9. They ſhall grow extreamly impatient in their neceſſity and diſtreſs. It hath a metaphor in it, taken from a pot, that boyleth with the heat of the fire under it, and caſts up its ſkum and filth, ch. 64. 2, Jer.1.13. Ezek.24.3,5. Rev,16.9,10,11. It runs on ſtill in the ſingular number, as before.

and curſe their King] They run far from the text, that would have it meant (as ſome Jewiſh Maſters) of the Aſſyrian Souldiers, that ſhould curſe their king, for want of proviſions; the contrary whereunto, ſee ch. 37, 25. It is ſpoken of the Jews, as before; that ſhould in heat of impatience curſe, not the King of Egypt: as ſome of the Jewiſh Writers, for not helping them, ch. 30.3,5,7. nor of Aſſyria, as others, for breaking covenants with them, ch.33.4. called their King, becauſe they had linked themſelves to him: but their own king, for not protecting, or relieving them; or imputing to him, the cauſe of thoſe their calamities, which they ſuffered from the Aſſyrian, either, by calling him in, or rebelling againſt him, or not compounding with him, 2 King.16.7,8. & 18.7,31. & 24. 20. 2 Chr. 28.16,20. & 36.13. See ch.7.20.

and their God] Either the true God, who deſervedly brought theſe plagues upon them, and by his Prophets foretold, what would befall them; as thoſe, deſperately wicked wretches under the beaſt, Rev.16.10. Or, his Gods, (as it is ſaid of the Philiſtine, that he curſed David, by his gods, 1 Sam. 17.43.) that is, his Idols, whom they now find unable to help them, and falſe in that, which by their wizards they had put them in hope of. See ch. 7.20.

and look upward] The Jewiſh Doctors, whom ſome of ours alſo here follow, run moſt in a track; ſuppoſing this to be ſpoken of men, returning to God, and reſting on him, when they perceive all other means to fail; as Pſal. 107.5,6,12,13, 18,19,27,28. ch. 10. 20. & 17.7,8. But it is rather a deſcription of one, in a forlorn, diſtracted, and deſperate condition; at his wits end, looking one while upward, and another while downward: now this way, now that way: and it might more fitly be rendred, when they look upward, to wit, either toward the Kings houſe; or towards heaven: and, for, when; as ch.43.12. Jer.34.1.

V. 22. And they ſhall look to the earth] Which way ſoever they caſt their eye, or whitherſoever they betake themſelves, they ſhall meet with nothing, but matter of anguiſh, and much diſcontent.

they ſhall look to the earth, and behold] Or, when they look to the earth, behold, &c. as ch.5.30. So Zach.1.18.& 2.1. I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold, for, when I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, behold, Rev.5.6. I beheld, and behold; that is, when I beheld, behold.

to the earth] Downward, 2 Chr.20.18. as before, upward, to heaven-ward, ver.21. ch.40.26. or, abroad, into the land, as ch.5.30. though ſome of the Rabbines underſtand it of the land of Egypt, whence they looked for ſome relief, 2 King. 17.4. & 18.21. ch.20.5,6. & 30.1. & 31.1. Jer. 37.5,7.

behold] What they leaſt looked for; as ch. 5.4,7. & 8.7. Jer.3.16.

trouble, and darkneſs] the darkneſs of trouble: as ch. 4.5,6. As light, is put for joy and comfort, ver. 20: ſo darkneſſe, for affliction, diſtreſs, and diſcomfort, Pſal.112.4. ch.5.30. & 9.1. & 50.10. Jer.13.16. Mic.7.8.

dimneſſe of anguiſh] The ſame thing, in other terms. So ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors; though others ſuppoſe it to be in a new form; dimmed, or darkened with diſtreſs. See ch. 9.1. and ſo it would be tranſlated; and he is, or, they are (for the want of the copulative, the Rabbines alſo obſerve) dimmed, or, darkened with diſtreſs.

dimneſs] So for variety. Otherwiſe the word ſeems to import, utter, or extream darkneſs: for ſo his fellows of the ſame family, Job 10.22. Amos. 4. 13. And ſo Job 11.17. where the words would be rendred, though thou ſhalt have been never ſo much darkned, thou ſhalt be as the morning: directly contrary to what is there read. For as for thoſe, who harping upon another ſignification of the root, whence the word ariſeth, would have it underſtood, calamities flying ſwiftly to them, and encreaſing with them, they ſwerve much from the tenour of the Prophets ſpeech, and detract much from the elegancy of it.

and they ſhall be driven to diſtreſs] Heb. and a miſt driven; as ſome one affliction following on the tail of another, and purſuing them whitherſoever they go: but the Genders agree not; which yet ſome would ſalve; as the like Amos, 9. 14. by deeming it to have reſpect to the ſame word, in a maſculine form. But others rather, and driven into a miſt; or driven on in a miſt. For a miſt, or fog, the word properly ſignifies, Exod. 10. 22. and conſequently, the dark, Prov. 4. 18. & 7.9: this and the former, are both joyned together, Job 10. 22. So the ſence is, they ſhall be driven on into further miſeries and extreamities, as men in a miſt, either forced into it, or driven on in it; as Job 18.18. He ſhall be driven out of the light into the miſt, or the dark. And Jer. 23. 12. They ſhall be driven on in the dark. See alſo, Pſal. 35.5. Many words of the ſame notion are heaped up; as Job 10. 22. to expreſs the great extreamity of their diſtreſſes.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. NEvertheleſs] The firſt words of this verſe, which way ſoever they be taken, do evidently ſhew, that this chapter hath dependance upon that before-going; and is a continuation of the Prophets diſcourſe, concerning the minde and meſſage of God therein delivered. It containeth, for the ſupport of the faithful, a gracious promiſe, both concerning a comfortable iſſue to them of the forementioned calamities; and concerning the reſtauration of the Church by Chriſt: yet concluding with a renewed denunciation of ſad, and diſmal occurrents againſt the obſtinate wicked, becauſe not amended by what was paſt, v.8.&c.

Nevertheleſs, &c.] This verſe, or ſome part of it, ſome joyn to the former chapter, as a confirmation of the ſad and forlorn eſtate of the perſons there ſpoken of; and they render the particle here, for; as Pſal.12.1. Others, make it an entrance into a new relation, importing ſome allay of the calamitous condition there mentioned; and they render it, as ours here: or, Yet; as Job 5. 7.

the dimneſs ſhall not be ſuch, as was in her vexation] Some, conceiving the word tranſlated dimneſs, to have a notion, rather, of flight in it; as before, chap. 8. 22. read the words, according to the old Latine, in part, thus, No flight, or eſcape ſhall be to him, that is ſurprized therewith; as rendring a reaſon of the perplexity that the perſons ſhould be in, that were ſpoken of before. But there is no doubt to be made, but that the word uſed here hath reference to that which was made uſe of there; whereof enough hath been ſaid already. And the Prophet may well be deemed to have retained the ſame word, the rather, becauſe it ſounds ſweetly with another here alſo uſed: the elegancy whereof cannot, in our language be expreſſed. On which ground alſo, comes not unjuſtly to be rejected, the interpretation of ſome other, who read the words thus; For no defatigation ſhall be to him that ſtreightens, or afflicteth them: That is, ſay they, (and they are ſome of the Jewiſh writers) the Aſſyrian king, who is to afflict the land, ſhall never be weary, or give over vexing; but ſhall be invading them, again, and again. See ch. 29. 2, 7, 8. Or, as ſome other, and thoſe of ours; Yet defatigation ſhall not be to thoſe that are in ſtraits: That is, thoſe that ſhall be ſtraitly beſieged, to wit, by Sennacherib, yet ſhall not be tired out, and ſo conſtrained to give up. Theſe ſuppoſe the word to be a noun, or verb, (which yet is not likely) coming from a root, that ſignifies to be weary. For though verbs of thoſe forms, do oft enterchange, as elſewhere hath been obſerved, ch.8.1. Yet regard muſt be had to the tenour of the context, in words that are ambiguous, and not extant elſewhere: and that obſerved, will not eaſily admit that ſence in this place. The moſt therefore, both Jewiſh, and ours, read the words much after the ſame manner, as our verſion exhibites them. And in the Hebrew it runs thus: It ſhall not be darkned unto her, whom, or with whom it ſhall be ſtreightned: That is, the land (for that all acknowledg is meant, and agree to be ſupplyed, as before, ch. 8. 21.) that ſhall be in ſuch ſtraits, as hath been ſaid, ſhall not be ſo darkened, as in ſome former times, hereafter mentioned; that which is by divers diverſly; yea, two contrary waies underſtood. For ſome take it, as ſpoken in way of aggravation; as if it were ſaid, No marvel, if people ſhall be in ſuch perplexity, as hath been deſcribed; for this affliction, when it comes, ſhall darken the land otherwiſe, in a far more grievous manner, then was done in the former invaſions, or inroads made into it. Others deem it to be delivered in way of mitigation, and allay of the former dreadful denunciation; that though it ſhould go hard with the land of Iſrael, or Judah, and the inhabitants thereof, in the judgement here threatned; yet it ſhould not be ſo grievouſly afflicted, as in thoſe former invaſions it had been. Which to me ſeems, well weighing both the tearms, uſed here, of thoſe former incurſions, the one of them eſpecially; and the tenour of the Text; not ſo probable to be the meaning of the Prophet in this place. I rather adhere therefore to the former ſence. See chap. 7. 17. For as for thoſe that would read the words, I ſhall not utterly, or totally be darkened; as they force that into the Text, which they finde not there: ſo they are met with in that which immediatly follows, as, when at firſt, &c. unleſs they will grant, that it was utterly darkened in thoſe times forepaſſed, which the Prophet here points to.

dimneſs ſhall not be] Or, it ſhall not be dimmed, or darkened. For ſome make it a Noun, and ſome a Verb. See on ch. 8. 22.

in her vexation] Or rather, unto her, or, it; that is, or ſhall be ſo vexed, or ſtraitned. Heb. unto whom it is ſtraitned to her, or to it. Or, to whom diſtreſs, or ſtraits, is, or ſhall be. Taking the word, as ſome do, for a Noun; unto whom; to her, or to it. A redundancy in that language, very familiar; as Gen. 1. 30. Pſal.1. 4. That the word land is underſtood, all grant; but ſome underſtand by it, the land of Judah, ſtrictly ſo tearmed; and conceive the affliction, here fore-told, to be meant of the invaſion made by Sennacherib, under Ezekiah, (which ſeems moſt probable) or by Nebuchadnezar, under Zedikiah, which not a few hold. Others ſuppoſe it to be the land of Iſrael, or the ten tribes, becauſe mention is made of ſome parts thereof, in the words enſuing. I ſee not why they may not be both included, ſince that greater troubles were to befal either of them, then as yet there had: nor was there fit acceſs for the Aſſyrian, to the one, but through the other.

vexation] The vexation (or ſtraits, rather, or diſtreſs) here intimated, hath reference to that ſpoken of, chap. 8. 22. and there rendred anguiſh: and is not to be carried on, as our Engliſh doth it, to the next branch where mention is made of fore-paſſed times and troubles. For the Prophet layes not the compariſon between the vexation, or diſtreſs; but between the dimneſs, or darkneſs, that had in former times been, and that then ſhould be. And the dimneſs, or darkneſs, and vexation, or diſtreſs, may amount much to one; yet for the right rendring of the Text, and keeping cloſe to the context of the Prophets diſcourſe; they are here to be diſtinguiſhed: and the reading to be, not, the land ſhall not be ſo vexed, or diſtreſſed, but ſhall not be in that manner, dimmed, or darkned, as formerly it had been. See v. 2.

as—when at the firſt he lightly afflicted] Heb. as in, or at the firſt time he made light; or, according to that firſt time, wherein, or when he made light; (for there is a want of the relative; as Gen. 34. 4. chap. 42. 5.) or dealt lightly with; which ſome expound fondly, of lightning the land of its inhabitants, by carrying them away captive, 2 King. 15. 25; as the ſhip is ſaid to be lightned by caſting out the wares, Jon. 1. 5. but this, (to ſay no more of it) is by the oppoſite branch of aggravation, ſufficiently refuted. By making light, therefore is meant, lightly viſiting, or afflicting, or dealing more lightly with them; as the falſe Prophets are ſaid to have cured the hurt of Gods people; as if they were but lightly hurt, Jer. 6. 14.

when he lightly afflicted the land] That is, when God lightly afflicted, or viſited it. Or taking the word indefinitely, and imperſonally, when the land was lightly afflicted, or viſited, See on ch. 2. 19. When this firſt lighter viſitation, or affliction was, and by whom inflicted, is not ſo clear. Some expound it of the invaſion made by Tiglath-Pileſer, under Pekah king o[illegible]ael, and Ahaz king of Judah, 2 King. 15. 29. Which to help out, ſome of them tell us, of a twofold inroad made into the land, by this king. But I rather, with one of the Jewiſh Teachers, underſtand it of a former invaſion, which he points to, though miſtaken in the time, made by Pul king of Aſſyria, in the reign of Menachem, or Manes king of Iſrael, and Uzziah king of Judah, 2 King. 15. 19. 1 Chron. 5. 26. ſaid here to be but a light affliction, to ſpeak of, becauſe the king of Iſrael, having, with a great ſum of money, compounded with him; he ſtayed not long in the land, 2 King. 15. 20.

the land of Zebulun, and the land of Napthali] In which it is probable, that Pul quartered his forces, when he invaded Iſrael.

and afterward did more grievouſly afflict her] Heb. and, or, or (rather, as Gen. 2. 6. ch. 19. 15.) in the after time (ſupplyed from the former branch) when (as before) he aggravated, or made heavy (as ch. 36. 2.) That is, dealt more grievouſly with her, or it; to wit, the land, as before; which ſome therefore put into the Text. This is generally underſtood of the deportation of the ten Tribes, by Salmaneſer, who coming after Tiglath-Pileſer, (as Tiglath-Pileſer after Pul) in the reign of Hoſhea over Iſrael, and Ezekiah over Judah, twice entred the land of Iſrael, and at the firſt time only made Hoſhea Tributary; but in the latter impriſoned him; and having ſurprized, and ſacked Samaria, ſwept all away before him, 2 King. 17. 3, 6: then which, what could be more grievous? But it is more probable, that the Prophet ſpeaks here, not of any invaſion ſo long after, but of ſome neerer at hand, if not wholly paſt; yet already begun, and in a manner, in being. (See ch. 8. 4.) And I conceive it therefore to be meant of Tiglath-Pileſer, who, about this very time, invited by Ahaz, made an inroad into the land of Iſrael; took, beſides divers ſtrong Towns, in ſundry other Tribes, all Neptali and Galile, the Roubenites, Gaddites, and the half Tribe of Manaſſeh, that dwelt on the other ſide of Jordan; and carried the people of them into Aſſyria, 2 King. 15. 29. 1 Chro. 5. 26. That which, in no reaſon, could be eſteemed to be but as a light, or ſlight touch of that State. Albeit, that one of the Jewiſh Doctors tells us, that they counted not their land darkned by Tiglath-Pileſers invaſion of thoſe two Tribes, (and ſo expounds the Prophets words, not of the thing it ſelf, but of the peoples account) until Sennacherib came, and ſeized on all the reſt of them; of whom, he alone, that I light on, expounds this latter, and heavier viſitation, then the former. A learned late writer, of ſpecial note, walketh here alone, (as oft elſwhere) thus rendring the Text, As at the firſt he expoſed to ignominy, or contempt, toward the land of Zabulon, and toward the land of Naphtali; ſo at laſt he will give glory, by the way of the ſea, beyond Jordan, in the confine of the Nations. This he will do, by the light that ſhould there appear. He taketh the word rendred, alleviated, or lightly afflicted; for, to contemn, ſet light by, expoſe to contempt; as 2 Sam. 19. 43. Ezek. 22. 7. which was done, by the Aſſyrians invaſions, and direptions of thoſe parts before mentioned: and the word in the latter branch, rendred, aggravated, or, aggrieved; for to honour, and make glorious; as Jer 30. 19. Let others conſider of it; I approve rather the other reading.

by the way of the ſea] Some read the word, at, or in the way to the ſea, whereby men travel, and wares are conveyed thither: and by the ſea, they underſtand that part of the midland ſea, called the great ſea, Joſh. 1. 4. that lyes againſt the coaſt of the promiſed land. But the moſt, rather take the ſea, here mentioned, to be the ſea of Cinnereth, Joſh. 13. 27. called alſo, the Lake of Geneſareth, Luk. 5. 1: and the ſea of Galile, Matth. 4. 18: and by a later name, the ſea of Tiberias, Joh. 21. 1. for the Hebrews call great lakes, as well as the branches of the main ſea, ſeas, Numb. 34. 11, 12. Joſh. 12. 3.) So denominated from the country adjacent, and towns therein, Joſh. 19. 35. Mar. 1. 28. & 6. 53.

beyond Jordan] Or, beſide Jordan. For the country of Galile, coaſted all along upon Jordan, not on the further ſide, or beyond it, in regard of the land of Judah, and Jeruſalem; but on the neerer ſide to them, of it; & the hebrew word ſignifieth, at large, either on the one ſide, or, on the other, 1 Sam. 14. 4: and is to be underſtood, either on this, or on that ſide; behither, or beyond; according to the reſpective ſcituation of the places, where, and whereof ought is ſpoken, ſee Deut. 1. 1, 5. & 3. 8, 20. & 4. 49. Nor need we therefore, for the ſalving, either of the Prophets, or the Evangeliſts chorography, to flye to that ſhift, as ſome do, as to ſay, that this tract of land, is called Galile, beyond Jordan, becauſe it had been ſo tearmed by the Iſraelites, before they paſſed over that river, and were as yet on the other ſide of it; as France is by the Spaniard, tearmed the Tranſalpine Gall-land, becauſe, by the Romans, it had been formerly ſo ſtiled. For the very ſame word is, by Moſes, uſed, before they paſſed Jordan, as well of the places on that ſide, where they then were, as of the places ſcituate on the other ſide of it: as by the Scriptures above cited appears.

in Galile of the Gentiles] The particle in is wanting; as Hoſ. 6. 9. Mic. 6. 11: not unfitly here ſupplyed, as in the former. The whole Region of Galile was divided into two parts, the upper and the lower, ſo tearmed, in regard of their neerneſs to, or remoteneſs from the head of the river Jordan, on whoſe ſtream, and the lake it made and fed, they coaſted. The upper, was in the tribe of Naphtali; the lower, in the tribe of Zabulon. Some underſtand this of the lower Galile, which they will have to be tearmed Galile of the Nations; as a populous place, in regard of the fertility of the ſoyl; for which they alleadg Moſes his words, in the bleſſing of Naphtali, Deut. 33. 13: not obſerving that the lower Galile was not in Naphtali, but in Zabulon. Others ſuppoſe that the upper Galile is here intended; called, as they deem, Galile of the Gentiles: Becauſe it was much repleniſhed with heathen people, and divers ſorts of them mixed with the Iſraelites in it; partly, in regard of ſome cities in it, made over, by Solomon, to Hiram, 1 King. 9. 11: And partly alſo, becauſe it lay, ſome part of it, neer upon the confines of Tyre and Sidon, Matth. 15. 21. Mar. 7. 31: and had therefore by reaſon of their vicinity, much commerce with them. And ſo is Harozeth, called Harozeth of the Nations, or Gentiles, Judg. 4. 1. in regard of the remainder of the Canaanites there. And Tidal, King of Nations, Gen. 14. 1: As alſo another King likewiſe, ſo ſtyled, Joſh. 12. 23. in regard of a mixture of divers Nations in their cities, or territories; and ſo under their command. Nor doth the Evangeliſts relation of our Saviour Chriſts preaching, and converſing much about the Sea of Tiberias, where he took up for his followers, ſome of thoſe that exerciſed fiſhing there, Matth. 4. 18. 22: or his abode at Nazareth, ſcituate in the lower Galile, Matth. 2. 23. & 3. 13. any whit croſs, or contradict this, as ſome imagine. For it is ſaid expreſly, that upon the report of Johns commitment, he departed into Galile, and leaving Nazareth (where he had formerly made his abode) he repaired to Capernaum a city ſcituate in the confines of Zabulon, and Naphtali, Matth. 4. 12, 13. and conſequently of the upper, and lower Galile, ſo ſcituate, as was before ſaid, and lying within the limits of the tribe of Naphthali, is juſtly therefore eſteemed to belong, rather to the upper, then to the lower Galile. Beſides, it is ſaid further, that our Saviour went preaching about all Galile, Matth. 4. 18: That is, as well the upper, as the lower; and as well that, as this, becauſe it is added, that thereupon the fame of him went throughout Syria, Matth. 4. 24. which confines upon the upper Galile. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe they are miſtaken, who ſuppoſe the whole circuit of the holy land, here deſcribed; as having its Weſtern-bound, the midland ſea; its Eaſtern, Jordan; its Northern, the upper Galile: But of the ſea before. And though that were admitted, yet a fourth, at leaſt, wants. Nor can I accord with thoſe, that rent this latter part of the verſe from the reſt, and annex it to the next; reading the words without any dependance upon the former; as beginning a new period, on this manner. The way of the ſea, (that is, thoſe that live by the ſea ſide, the Naphtalites, and Zabulonites eſpecially, Gen. 49. 13.) beſide Jordan, (thoſe that dwell on either ſide of the river) Galile of the Gentiles; (the inhabitants of the upper Galile, neer to the heatheniſh country) people that had walked in darkneſs, have ſeen great a light, &c. And this tearing of the text aſſunder, they build upon the Evangeliſts citation of this prophetical paſſage, Matth. 4.15, 16. But the Evangeliſt gives no warrant for any ſuch, either divulſion of this branch from the former, or agglutination of it to the next. For firſt, in his allegation, they are ſorted, and ſevered, juſt as they are here. Secondly, we may as well upon the ſame ground, tear off theſe words, the land of Naphtali, and the land of Zabulon, from the former branch, (which yet none do, nor with any colour of reaſon can do) as theſe words from this latter; ſince that the Evangeliſt joyns thoſe alſo with theſe. The Evangeliſt picks out onely ſo much of the Prophecy, as might concern his preſent diſcourſe, to apply it thereunto. And mentioneth therefore theſe two tribes, and thoſe parts of them eſpecially, pointed to by the Prophet, to intimate, that in thoſe places, on which the darkneſs of affliction had firſt ſeized, in thoſe times; there the ſpiritual light of joy, and life, had, by our Saviours preaching, firſt ſprung forth, Mat. 4. 13, 14.

V. 2. The people that walked in darkneſſe have ſeen a great light] Here, I ſuppoſe, beginneth the comfortable part of this diſcourſe, promiſing light (notwithſtanding the formerly denounced darkneſs) to the godly and faithful; partly by a good and comfortable iſſue of their preſent troubles, and deliverance out of their incumbent diſtreſſes; and partly, by that ſpiritual deliverance from the thraldome of ſin and Satan, by the promiſed Meſſias: and the abundance of joy and comfort, that ſhould accrue unto them from thence: whereof that other was a type.

The people that walked in darkneſs] Heb. The people that were walking. The noun is ſingular; the participle plural: becauſe the noun is collective. See ver. 9. By the people here mentioned, ſome underſtand the Tribes, who were to ſuffer more grievous things, then formerly they had done; partly by Salmanceſer, 2 King. 17. 3, 6. and partly by Eſarhaddon, Ezr. 4. 2. becauſe mention is made of them, ver. 1. See ch. 8. 7, 8. Others, and thoſe moſt of the Jewiſh Doctors, whom many of ours alſo concur with, underſtand them of the Jews, and the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, firſt ſtraitned by Sennacherib, ch. 7. 17, 20. & 8. 8. afterward ſurprized, ſacked, and depopulated by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 18. 17. & 19. 1, 3. & 25. 1, 21. ch. 36. & 37. Jer. 5. 39. & 52. I ſuppoſe we may well underſtand both houſes, (ſee ch. 8. 14, 15.) in regard of the ſtory, and acts of thoſe times, and the calamities that befell either; which did typically reſemble the ſad and forlorn eſtate of perſons, continuing in that utter want of all light of grace, and that ſlavery of ſin and Satan, wherein by nature they are, untill they be effectually illightened, and converted by Chriſt, Eph. 2. 1. & 5. 8. 1 Joh. 2. 9, 11.

walked in darkneſs] ſate in darkneſs, Matth. 4. 16. and ſo afterward here, that is, lived, and abode in it; becauſe in places, where they abide, men ſometime walk, and ſometime ſit, at home; as of mutual converſing one with another, (without any ſuch myſteries, as ſome here, and there make) Pſal. 1. 1. & 26. 4, 5. Yet it may well have reference to walking in the dark, without uſe or help of light, as both diſcomfortable and dangerous, Joh. 11. 9, 10. & 12. 35. 1 Joh. 2. 11.

darkneſs] For diſtreſs and diſcomfort, ch. 8. 22. & 50. 10.

hath ſeen a great light] This was in part fulfilled to the Jewiſh people, in thoſe and the enſuing times; firſt, at the defeat given to Sennacherib, and the breaking up of his ſiege, ch. 30. 31, 32. & 37. 36, 37. and afterward, at the overthrow of Babylon, and the deliverance of them out of the Chaldean captivity, Pſal. 126. 2. ch. 14. 3. & 52. 9. Jer. 31. 4, 5, 7. & 33. 7, 11. & 50. 4. & 51. 48. But moſt fully, and principally, by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, whereby people are delivered from that ſpiritual blindneſs, and darkneſs, wherein formerly they abode, Matth. 4. 13, 16. Luk. 1. 78, 79. & 2. 32. Joh. 12. 35. Act. 26. 18. Eph. 5. 8. and reſcued out of the ſervitude of ſin and Satan, whereof that Babylonian bondage was a type, Joh. 8. 32, 34, 36. Rom. 6. 6, 7, 14, 22. & 8. 21. Col. 1. 13. 2 Tim. 2. 26. Heb. 2. 14, 15.

hath ſeen] He ſpeaketh in prophetical manner, of things to come, as already effected. See ch. 3. 1. & 9. 8.

ſeen] That is enjoyed, been poſſeſſed of; as Pſal. 34. 12. Joh. 3. 3, 5, 36. See Eccl. 11. 7.

great light] Much joy and comfort; for light, is put for joy and comfort; as Job 18. 5, 6. & 30. 26. & 38. 15. Eſth. 8. 16. Pſal. 18. 28. & 79. 11. & 112. 4. & for ſpiritual grace alſo, Joh. 12. 35, 36. Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Eph. 5. 14. 1 Theſſ. 5. 4, 5. 1 Joh. 1. 5, 7. & 2. 8, 10. as the ground of all true joy and ſound comfort, Matth. 13. 44. Luk. 10. 20. Act. 8. 8, 39. & 16. 34. Rom. 5. 2, 3. & 14. 17. 2 Cor. 6. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

they that dwell in the land of the ſhadow of death] The ſame is repeated; only with ſome amplification: as ch. 8. 9, 10, 14, 15, 22.

dwell] Heb. ſit. And ſo the Evangeliſt hath it, Matth. 4. 16. as alſo Zachery, Luk. 1. 79. but ſitting, is put commonly, for dwelling, ſtaying, or, abiding, Pſal. 23. 6. Jer. 39. 14. & 40. 5. to abide, and dwell in a place, is more then to paſs, or walk through it; as Pſal. 24. 4. & 66. 12. So Joh. 12. 46. abideth not in darkneſſe, and 1 Joh. 3. 14. abides in death, and Gods wrath abides on him, Joh. 3. 36.

in the land of the ſhadow of death] Matth. 4. 16. in the region, and ſhadow of death. Of which phraſe, ſee on ch. 4 5.

ſhadow of death] As before, ſo Job 24. 17. Pſal. 44. 19. & 107. 10. for deadly ſhade: as, body of death, Rom. 7. 24. for, dead body. Extremity of diſtreſs, and miſery, compared to ſuch a dreadful ſhade, or darkneſs, as with the horror of it, may ſtrike a man even ſtark dead, Matth. 28. 4. or that ſhadow and darkneſſe, that is ſaid to be in the grave, with thoſe that are laid up in the bowels of the earth, and are lodged in the chambers of death, Job 10. 21, 22. Pſal. 88. 6, 12. and to men dead and buried, are thoſe uſually compared, that are in a calamitous and hopeleſſe condition, Pſal. 88. 4, 6. ch. 26. 19. Ezek. 37. 11, 12. Dan. 12. 2. See further of this phraſe, on Jer. 2. 6.

upon them hath the light ſhined] They are, or, ſhall be (for it is ſpoken in way of prediction) in as comfortable a condition, as thoſe, unto whom, after a dark, or tempeſtuous night or ſeaſon, of ſome continuance, at Sea eſpecially; or at land, in ſome hazardous, and harbourleſſe place, the clear daylight, or bright Sun-ſhine, at length, ſuddenly ſhews forth it ſelf, Act. 27. 20, 29. So Pſal. 37. 6. & 112. 4. See ch. 60. 1, 2. Mal. 4. 2.

V. 3. Thou haſt multiplyed the nation, and not encreaſed the joy] Theſe words, as ſome, are by an apoſtrophe directed unto Sennacherib, who came with a vaſt army to beſiege Jeruſalem; but was fruſtrated of his purpoſe, and retired back with ſhame: As if the Prophet had ſaid to him; Thou haſt multiplyed thy forces indeed; but ſhalt have little joy of them at laſt. See ch. 26. & 27. But this ſeems not ſo ſuitable unto that that follows. The moſt therefore are of opinion, that the words are ſpoken unto God: but in expoſition of them, they are much divided. Some refer the words to what was paſt: And of theſe, ſome underſtand them of the Gentiles, ſtrangers from the Common-wealth of Iſrael. That howſoever God had multiplyed them, as he did Iſrael, and his ſeed, Gen. 17. 20. yet had not imparted that his grace to them, that is the only ground of all true and ſound joy, Eph. 2. 12. Others rather apply them to the Jewiſh people: and of theſe, again, ſome read them on this wiſe; Thou haſt indeed multiplyed this people, (the Jewiſh Nation, according to thy promiſe unto Abraham, Gen. 15. 5. & 22. 17.) or, thou haſt magnified them, (becauſe the word ſignifies, as well great, and mighty, as many, Pſal. 25. 11, 20. and the verb to magnifie, or to make great, as to multiply, Gen. 3. 16. to wit, by many benefits and bleſſings beſtowed on them, victories atchieved, and miracles wrought for them) but yet thou haſt not made their joy ſo great; that is, haſt not given them ſo great cauſe of joy, as thou wilt do hereafter, in the deliverance of them from the Babylonian captivity, Pſal. 126. 1, 2. but eſpecially in the ſpirituall deliverance by Chriſt, ch. 35. 10. Others, Never ſince thou multiplyedſt this people, didſt thou give them ſuch matter of joy; or, in multiplying of them, thou gaveſt them no ſuch occaſion of joy; as hereafter thou intendeſt to do. Thus thoſe of them that refer them wholly to the time paſt; excepting only, what they annex to them themſelves. Thoſe that underſtand them of the future, either in whole, or in part; do, ſome of them, apply them to the Jews, thus. Thou haſt multiplyed this people, or, Thou wilt multiply them, at Chriſts coming, yet little, or no joy will there be of it; becauſe, either ſo few will receive him, and believe in him, ch. 53. 1. Joh. 1. 11. & 12. 37, 38. or, becauſe, though at firſt many flocked to him, and followed him, Matth. 15. 30, 32, 33. Luk. 12. 1. Joh. 4. 1. & 11. 48. & 12. 19. yet afterward they fell as faſt away from him, Joh. 6. 26, 66. Matth. 21. 9. with 27. 23, 24. Others to the Gentiles, Thou haſt multiplyed this Nation, by acceſſion of the Gentiles called in to them, by the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, ch. 54. 1, 3. Gal. 4. 27. Rev. 7. 9. but thou haſt not thereby encreaſed their joy; becauſe this vexed and troubled the Jews, Act. 11. 2, 3. & 13. 45, 50. & 22. 21, 22. 1 Theſſ. 2. 15, 16. and becauſe upon the coming in of the Gentiles, they were rejected, Rom. 11. 8, 12, 19, 20. Others, again, both to Jews and Gentiles, indifferently, that though God be pleaſed to multiply, or magnifie the body of the faithful, conſiſting of both Nations incorporate into one, Gal. 3. 16. Eph. 2. 14, 16. & 3. 6. yet, he will not afford them any great meaſure of ſuch joy, as the world affords, Joh. 14. 25. & 16. 2, 33. or, as worldly men here enjoy, Pſal. 4. 6, 7. & 17. 14. Thus ye ſee how many ſeveral wayes this Scripture is writhed, (and yet divers ſences given it, omitted) and how many fillings are inſerted, to make out theſe notions. The main difficulty ariſeth from the negative particle; which to ſalve, therefore, ſome would have the words read by way of interrogation; by which manner of reading, ſome Scripture-ſcruples, are ſometime by ſome deemed, to be happily removed; as Job 14.14. Pſal.105.28. Hoſ.4.14. Mic.5.2. Eph.4,26. and ſo here they ſuppoſe, that the words being thus read, Haſt thou not encreaſed their joy? all the difficulties will be diſſolved. The denying interrogative being equivalent to an affirming enunciative. For the ſence, I concur with them; but I raiſe it from another ground. The Hebrew Criticks, commonly called Maſorets, have obſerved divers readings in ſundry places of Scripture, about no one word ſo many, as about the word, Lo, which in Hebrew, according to a diverſe writing in that language, ſignifieth one while, Not, another while, To him. This diverſity concerning it, is found, as Exod.21.8. Levit.11.21. & 25.30. 1 Sam.2.3. 2 King. 8. 10. 1 Chr.11.20. Ezr.4.2. Job 13.15. Pſal. 100. 3. ch. 49. 5. & 63.9. ſo in this place: the reading therefore being doubtful, whether not, or, to him, or, it; I follow rather this latter; though by ours ſo generally renounced: not becauſe thoſe Jewiſh Criticks prefer it; but becauſe it ſuites better both with the ſcope of the place, and with the ſequel of the context: and read the words thus; Thou wilt multiply this Nation; thou wilt encreaſe their joy. The main exception which one of prime note taketh to it, is this, that the pronoun in the Hebrew is wont to follow the verb; whereas here thus read, it leadeth. But ſo it doth alſo, Job 13.15. where yet moſt go with the keri, the ſame with this here. And he that takes this exception, yet approveth the ſence; only readeth the words in an interrogative tone, wherein the negative affirmeth.

Thou haſt multiplyed] Or, Thou wilt multiply. For the Prophet runs all along here, in a prophetical ſtrain; ſpeaking of things future, as preſent, or paſt.

the nation] Or, this nation. For the particle is dictical; as ch. 26.15. Thou haſt added to the Nation, to this people, the Jewiſh. Thou wilt cauſe them to multiply, and thrive again, when they ſeem to be almoſt worn out, after the ſpoyl of them, made by Sennacherib, ch.37.31. after their return from the Chaldean captivity, Jer.31.27. Zach.2.4. in the dayes of the Meſſias, by confluence of people out of all parts, that ſhall joyn themſelves unto them, Pſal. 47.1,9. ch. 2. 3. Mic. 4. 2. Zach.8.20,23.

and not encreaſed the joy] If ſo read, it ſhould rather be rendred, but, then and: for it is a diſcretive, at leaſt, if not an adverſative. But for not, I read, to it, or, to them: the word, nation, whereunto it refers, being a collective: as ch. 5. 25. & 6. 9.

encreaſed] Heb. magnified; as Gen. 19.19. encreaſed the joy, or, joy to them; that is, their joy. Thou wilt give them abundant matter of joy, in delivering them from the Aſſyrian ſiege, when they ſhall be unable to hold out, ch. 37. 3, 36, 37. in bringing them back from the Babylonian captivity, when they ſhall ſeem to be paſt all hope of recovery, Ezek.37. 11, 12. and principally, in ſending the Meſſias unto them; the fore-ſight of whoſe day, ſo long before, ſo much rejoyced Abraham, Joh.8.56. and whom all the faithful of former times had ſo earneſtly expected, ſo inſtantly longed for, Matth.13. 16,17. Luk.2.25,30,37,38. to deliver them from the thraldom of ſin and Satan, Luk. 1. 69,70. & 2. 10, 11. whereof thoſe former deliverances were but ſhadowy reſemblances; and were alſo exhibited to them, both by him, ch. 63. 9. and for him, in whom all Gods promiſes, are yea, and amen, 2 Cor.1.20. See ver. 6.

they joy before thee] As thou wilt give them occaſion of much joy, ſo will they take notice of it, lay it to heart, and in way of thankful acknowledgment thereof, rejoyce in thy preſence. Ye ſee how naturally this floweth from the former branch; and what ſtrength is hence given to the interpretation thereof before delivered. So Pſal.9.2,3. & 20.5. & 21.1. & 35.9. ch. 12.3.

they joy] Heb. have rejoyced, or, ſhall rejoyce: as before.

before thee] That is, ſay ſome, inwardly, ſincerely, in thy ſight; and ſo the phraſe indeed is ſometime uſed, ch. 38. 3. Luk.1.6. to diſtinguiſh, as they would have it, this inward and ſpiritual joy, from that external, worldly, and carnal joy, that worldly mens hearts are ſo much taken, and taken up with, Pſal.4.6,7. denyed to them in the former branch, Luk. 6.21, 23,25. but of that branch, and the reference that this hath to it, ſufficiently hath before been ſpoken. The meaning of the words here, rather is, in thy preſence, in thy Sanctuary, in the Aſſembly of thy people, the place of thy face, or ſpeciall preſence; as it is termed, Pſal. 42. 2. in reference to that place, where ſometime God appeared to Jacob, and he therefore named it Peniel, Gen.32.30. So the phraſe is uſed, Deut. 16. 11,14. Pſal. 68.3.

according to] By two ſimilitudes is the greatneſſe of this their joy further amplified; the one taken from one of the greateſt ordinary occaſions of joy, in times of peace; the other in times of war.

the joy in harveſt] The joy, not ſo much of hirelings, that reap for others; but of the owners of the grounds, and the grain thereon growing, whether the richer ſort, whoſe revenues conſiſt much in the fruits of the earth, Gen.16.12. & 27. 28. Pſal.4.6,7. or, thoſe of the meaner rank, the husbandmen, that having taken much pains about the tilling of their grounds, whereupon the livelihood of them and theirs depends; and with long patience and much ſollicitude, expected the return and receit of it, Jam. 5.7. are exceedingly rejoyced, when they ſee their labours ſeconded, and their expectation anſwered with a plentiful crop, and a ſeaſonable harveſt, Pſal.125.5,6. and are wont therefore with much ſolemnity, and jollity, to bring in their grain, as the principal ſupport of their life, Gen.47.15,19,25. See ch.16.9,10. Yea, by Gods appointment, were ſolemn feaſts of rejoycing, upon the bringing in of the fruits of the earth, firſt, and laſt, Levit. 23. 10,16,17,39,41. Deut.16.9,11,13,14.

and as men rejoyce when they divide the ſpoyl] Heb. as they rejoyce (the word put imperſonally, as ch. 2,19.) in their dividing the ſpoyl: as no greater joy, in times of peace, then when harveſt comes well in; ſo, nor in war, then when victory, after an hazardous fight, eſpecially, is archieved; and rich ſpoyles and booties withal obtained, to be ſhared among thoſe that were in the fight: as Numb.31.9,27. Judg.5.30. 1 Sam. 30.16,19,20,22,23. 2 Chr.20.25,28. Pſal. 68.12. See Pſal. 119. 162.

V. 4. For thou haſt broken, &c.] Having declared the greatneſſe of their joy, he proceeds to ſhew the ground of it; their deliverance, and freedom, from the ſtraits and thraldome of their enemies, as well corporal, as ſpiritual. Some read the words, when (as Job 3. 22.) thou ſhalt have broken. But we need not alter the received reading.

thou haſt broken the yoke of his burden] This ſome underſtand of the breaking up of that ſiege, wherewith Sennacherib begirt Jeruſalem, ch.36. & 37. and of the further deliverance from future vexations and oppreſſions, from that State then declining, ch.38.6. See Nah.1.13. Others, of the diſſolution of the Babylonian captivity, Ezr.1.1,2. it may well include both; but both ſtill, as looking, further, to the redemption wrought by Chriſt; of whom, ver.6.

broken the yoke] Thou haſt ſet them free. For when the yoke is taken off, Hoſ.11.4. or broken aſſunder, Jer.5.5. the beaſt is at liberty. So Jer.28.2,11. & 30.8. I will break this yoke from off thy neck.

the yoke of his burden] That is, his yoke which is a burden; as the ſign of circumciſion; that is, circumciſion, which is a ſign, Rom.4.11. or rather, his yoke of burden; that is, his burdenſome yoke: as, the hill of his holineſs, for, his holy hill, Pſal.15.1. and, his idols of gold, for, his golden idols, ch.2.20. the ſyntax is in either place alike: a yoke, is in Scripture, put for any grievous or heavy preſſure of what kind ſoever; becauſe a yoke, both reſtrains a beaſt of his will; and lyes heavy alſo on his neck, Deut.28.48. 1 King.12.4,9,11,14. Lam.1.14. more eſpecially, for ſervitude, and thraldom; becauſe the beaſt by it is conſtrained to do man ſervice, Jer.27.2,3,6,7. & 31.18.

of his burden] Not which he laid on others; as thy fathers yoke, 1 King.12.4,9. but which was by others laid on him, and wherewith he was burdened: as our yoke, 2 King.12.4,10. See ch.3.14.

and the ſtaff of his ſhoulder] Or, ſhoulders. So ver. 6. the ſtaff, wherewith God formerly ſmote them, and laid them, as it were, over the ſhoulders, ch.10.5,24. & 14.29. a metaphor from the manner of ſome hard and cruel maſter, that ſtands over his ſervants with a ſtaff, or a cudgel, ready ever and anon to be laying them on: but this ſtaff, it is ſaid, God hath broken; as ch.14.5. The Lord hath broken the ſtaff of the wicked, thereby intimating, that now his people ſhould not be any longer, as ſlaves, under the ſtaff of ſuch, as formerly they had been.

the rod of his oppreſſor] Heb. the rod, or ſcepter of him that exacted on him. Or, as ſome render it, from him; as Ezek.43. 18. So Job 3.18. chap. 3.12. The word, properly, ſignifies, either a taskmaſter, that impoſeth a task of work; and requires, accordingly, a ſtrict account of it, Exod. 5.6, 8. chap. 68. 3. (whence alſo it is ſometime put for a driver, Job 39.7.) Or an exacter of tolls and tributes, 2 King. 23. 35: and ſuch burdens did forreign Princes, the Aſſyrians, and Babylonians, eſpecially, impoſe on, and exact from Gods people, 2 King. 16.0,8. & 18. 14,15. Hence, in ſome verſions, gold-thirſty-Babel, chap. 14. 4. but now it is promiſed, that the rod, or ſcepter, that is, the power, or authority; as Pſal. 2. 9. & 45. 6. & 110. 2. of theſe exactors, ſhall be broken, that Gods people may no more be ſubject to ſuch their exactions, or oppreſſions. To which purpoſe it is ſaid, that the exactor ſhall ceaſe; and that they ſhall exact from thoſe, who exacted before from them, ch. 13. 3,4. See Zach. 9. 8. & 10. 4.

as in the day of Midian] What time (as ch. 3. 18. & 4. 1.) God, by Gideon, overthrew the Midianites, Judg. 7. 22. chap. 10. 26. who had been grievous oppreſſors of Gods people, Judg. 6. 2, 6. Unto which overthrow, the Prophet is, by ſome, thought to liken the deſtruction of Sennacheribs army; becauſe it was not effected by the force and valour of thoſe that went forth againſt them, but by a ſudden fright in the night, Judg. 7. 19, 22. all was of God, nothing of man, in either. Others ſuppoſe, that Chriſts ſpiritual conqueſt is thereunto compared, in regard of the trumpets, and the lamps in earthen-pitchers, Judg. 7. 16. reſembling the trumpet of the Goſpel in the mouth of Gods Meſſengers, chap. 58. 1. Joh. 5. 24, 25. 28. and the miniſters, or meſſengers themſelves, though ſhining, as lamps, in their miniſtery, Joh. 3. 35. Luk. 12. 35. whereby they hold out the light of Gods word, Phil. 2. 15, 16. Yet carrying this precious and powerful light, in earthen veſſels onely, that the efficacy of it may appear to be of God alone, not of them, 2 Cor. 4. 7. But theſe things ſeem a little too curious.

the day of Midian] Day, for, time; as chap. 3.18. & 4. 1. But in more ſpecial manner, the day of ſuch an one, is uſed, for that time, wherein ſome more remarkable thing befalleth ſuch a perſon, or people; either for evil, or for good. So the day of Jeruſalem, Pſal. 137. 7. the time when ſhe was beſieged, ſurprized, and ſacked. The day of Gibea, Hoſ. 9. 9. when for their abominable wickedneſs, and obſtinacy therein, they were deſtroyed. In the day of thy brother; that is, of his calamity, diſtreſs, captivity, deſtruction, as it is there expounded, Obad. 12. 13. And ſo here, the day of Midian; that is, of his overthrow.

V. 5. For every battle of the warriour is with confuſed noyſe, and garments rolled in blood; but this ſhall be with burning, and fuel of fire] So moſt read this verſe, both of the Hebrews, and ours; as conſiſting of two members, oppoſed the one to the other. And ſome of them underſtand it of the overthrow given to Sennacheribs army at the ſiege of Ieruſalem: that whereas, in other battels, victory is not wont to be atchieved, and the enemy over-thrown, without much tumult and noiſe, and uſe of arms, and blood-ſhed on both ſides. Or beſmeering, at leaſt, of mens bodies, and their apparrel with blood, Pſal. 68. 23. chap. 63. 2, 3. Here ſhould be no ſuch matter, but they ſhould be ſuddenly ſmitten, as with a blaſt of lightning, in the dead of the night, without any noiſe, or uſe of ſouldiers, or arms. See chap. 10. 16. Others underſtand it of Chriſts ſpiritual ſouldiery, and his conqueſts, which are carried on and atchieved, not with ſuch weapons and conflicts, as others are, 2 Cor. 10. 3, 5. but with the fire of his Word and Spirit, whereby he both ſubdueth the hearts of men, to himſelf, unto their ſalvation, chap. 1. 25. & 4. 4. Jer. 20. 9. & 23. 29. Matth. 1. 11. 1 Cor. 3. 13, 15. and will one day alſo deſtroy his obſtinate enemies, to their eternal confuſion, Pſal. 50. 3. & 97. 3. ch. 11. 4. & 26. 11. Jer. 5. 14. Matth. 3. 12. 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. & 2. 8. Rev. 1. 16. & 19. 15. Another going much the ſame way, but thus rendring the words, For all the conflict of the confligent was, indeed, with noiſe, and rayment defiled with blood; and yet was it to combuſtion, to meat for the fire; That is, although the enemies of Gods people, did with much fury and rage aſſault them, and bedewed their garments with the blood of thoſe whom they ſlew of them; as ch. 63. 2, 3. Rev. 12. 11, 17. & 13. 7: yet in fine he ſhall fail of his conqueſt, being himſelf, and together with his rayment ſo ſtained with the blood of Gods people, become matter for the fire, chap. 26. 11. Rev. 17. 6, 16. & 20. 9, 10. And thus they, that divided the words of the Text into two diſtinct axioms. But others read the whole verſe, as one continued ſence; at leaſt, as ſpeaking of one, and the ſelf-ſame matter. And among theſe, ſome of the manner of the overthrow given the Midianites, and their complices, with that which followed thereupon. And they render the words on this wiſe; When the whole conflict of thoſe that conflicted, or that fought either with other, was with concuſſion, or tumult; and garments were rolled in blood; and it became, or ended in burning, even, fewel for the fire. All which they underſtand of the tumult, or combuſtion that was in the Midianites camp; and the ſlaughter that they made one of another; ſo great, and ſuch abundance of blood thereby ſpilt, that both the bodies of men, that lay weltring in their own blood, and their garments therewith, polluted and ſpoiled, were fain to be burnt together, the one with the other. See ch. 14. 19. Others underſtand it of the proceedings of Chriſt, come in the fleſh; as rendring a reaſon, why his deliverance of his Church was ſaid to be like that, in Gideons time, of the Iſraelites from the Midianites; to wit, becauſe of the preaching, and light of the Goſpel, like the lights, and trumpets then uſed, Judg. 7. 20. The enemies thereof ſhould be frighted and flighted, Rev. 6. 15, 16. The world filled with war and blood-ſhed, Mat. 24. 6. 7. Rev. 6. 4. and all, at laſt, conſumed with fire, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. 2 Pet. 3. 7, 10, 12. But as the latter reading ſeems more plain and ſuitable, both to the frame of the Text, and to the courſe of the context, then the former; ſo the former expoſition of the latter reading, ſeems to me more agreeable to either; as more familiar alſo then the latter.

For] Or, when; as Pſal. 75. 2.

every] Or, the whole. See the like ambiguity, ch. 1. 5. battel of the warriour] They are both words of the ſame root; as if ye ſhould ſay, war of the warriour, or fight of the fighter. The word is no where elſe found, in regard whereof, ſome other far-fetched notions, are, by ſome given to it, but with ſmall probability.

with confuſed noiſe] Heb. ruſhing, or, ruſtling, Ezek. 11. 12. & 37. 7. or, commotion, or, concuſſion, 1 King. 11, 12. chap. 29. 6. Jer. 10. 22. Ezek. 38. 19.

garments] Heb. garment. The ſingular taken collectively; as chap. 3. 6, 7. and, as before; warriour, for warriours; and man, for men, ch. 2. 20. Some would have the word ſignifie, properly, a cloak, or mantle; ſo tearmed, becauſe the skirt of it uſed to be caſt over the left ſhoulder, that the right hand, and arm might be at more liberty. But it is uſed for apparrel, in general.

rolled] As of Amaſa, 2 Sam. 20. 12.

in blood] Heb. bloods. Gore blood, blood ſhed in fight, or by other violent means, ch. 1. 15. & 4. 4.

but] Heb. and.

but this ſhall be] Or, and it was, or, became: or, which became; to wit, the rayment ſo polluted. For the copulative, is ſometime put for the relative. See ch. 3, 6. & 5. 4.

with burning] So the particle is rendred, Pſal. 147. 20: and may well be, Job 17. 5: or, for, or, unto burning; as, for, or, unto deſolation, Joel 3. 19. See Gen. 11. 3.

fuel] Heb. meat, or, food; as ch. 10. 26. Put, by oppoſition to burning; or having reference to the verb-ſubſtantive. The whole verſe may thus be rendred; When the whole battel of thoſe that were in battel, was with claſhing o[illegible]rms; and rayment rolled in gore-blood; which, by burning became food for the fire; That is, was made fuel. For, fuel for the fire, is a meer tautology.

V. 6. For unto us a childe is born] That theſe deliverances of Gods people, and the ſubduing and pulling down of ſuch mighty Potentates, whether ſecular, or ſpiritual, may not ſeem impoſſible and incredible; the Prophet now proceedeth to declare, who it is, and what manner of perſon, by whom all that hath been ſaid, ſhall be effected: even the Meſſias, the Eternal Son of the Eternal Father; whom God ſhall raiſe up to be the King and Governour of his Church. This paſſage of Scripture, howſoever the ancienter of the Jewiſh Doctors, whom the Chaldee Paraphraſt alſo follows, (as thoſe alſo teſtifie, that have been verſed in the monuments of that Nation) acknowledg to concern the Meſſias; yet their later Writers, by all means, labour to darken the light of ſo clear and pregnant a prophecy, by endeavouring to divert it, and to turn it over to Ezekiah. Whom albeit, we deny not, in ſome things to have been a type of Chriſt; (of which, ſee chap. 32. 1.) yet the names given unto the party here deſcribed, are, ſome of them, ſuch as cannot agree, either unto Ezekiah, or unto any other meer man; as we ſhall afterward ſee. The words may well be rendred; (as before verſ. 5. as having reference to the deliverance, mentioned, ver. 4.) a childe is born to us. Not, that ſuch deliverance was not, in part, before exhibited; but becauſe it was then more fully compleated; and he manifeſted in the fleſh, by whom, and for whom, all had been done that was formerly effected.

a childe] Not Ezekiah, as our new Rabbines would have it, who was born ſome good ſpace of time before the date of this prophecy, yea, before his father came to the throne; for he was five and twenty year old at his fathers death, who reigned but ſixteen, 2 King. 16. 2. & 18. 2: but Emmanuel, the Virgins Son, not as yet born; but to be born, chap. 7. 14. though in Gods purpoſe, as born already. A childe, at his birth, in regard of his humane nature, Mat. 2. 11. Luk. 2. 11, 21. 34. though the ſon of God, from eternity, in regard of his Deity, Pſal. 2. 7. Prov. 8. 24, 25. & 30. 4.

is born] For, is to be born, in the prophetical ſtyle; as verſ. 4. ch. 7. 14.

unto us] Not among us, onely, Matth. 2. 1. but, unto us; unto our benefit, and behoof, Luk. 2. 11.

us] Jews, the ſeed of Abraham, as well according to the faith, as according to the fleſh, Luk. 2. 10, 11. Rom. 2. 28, 29. Gal. 3. 8, 13, 16. 1 Joh. 2. 2.

unto us a ſon is given] A ſecond branch concerning the ſame childe, adding ſome emphaſis to the former.

a ſon] As noting his ſex, Luk. 2. 7: and ſo pointing at his twofold Nature; being both Son of man, and Son of God, alſo, in one and the ſame Perſon, Mat. 16. 13, 16.

is given] Not paied, or returned to us, in way of payment; (for who hath given ought to him, that he ſhould be repayed? Rom. 11. 35.) nor ſold to us, in conſideration of ought to be pay'd by us; (for what can we return to God, that is not his own already, Gen. 32. 10. 1 Chro. 29. 11, 12. Rom. 11. 36.) but given, freely beſtowed, without any reſpect of ought in us, that might invite, or induce him thereunto, Rom. 5. 6, 8, 10. Tit. 3. 5. without expectation of ought from us, that might be beneficial unto himſelf, Job 22. 2, 3. & 35. 5—8. Pſal. 16. 2. Again, not given, onely, as Iſaac was given to Abraham, Joſh. 24. 3. but in a far more eminent manner; in regard whereof, he is, in way of excellency, and in a peculiar manner, teamed Gods gift, Joh. 4. 10. and ſaid to be given by the Father, Joh. 3. 16. & 6. 32, 33. See chap. 49. 6, 8.

unto us] Both unto us; and for us; to effect our ſalvation, Rom. 8. 52. See ch. 3. 6, 11.

and the Government ſhall be upon his ſhoulders] Not the power and authority, onely, of ruling, and governing Gods people, is by God his Father, whoſe Son he is, devolved wholly unto him, Pſal. 2. 7, 8. Mat. 11. 6. & 28. 18. Joh. 5. 21, 22, 26, 27. Act. 2. 36. & 13. 22, 23, 32, 33. But the whole care, and charge of protecting his Church, and procuring of all things neceſſary for the ſafety of it, either corporal, or ſpiritual, temporal, or eternal, is undertaken of him, and born, and ſuſtained by him, chap. 11. 4. & 40. 11. & 42. 1, 3. & 49. 5, 6. & 63. 1, 5, 6. & 35. 15, 16.

Government] Heb. Principality, or, Princedom: and ſo verſ. 7. It denotes here, that place of authority, whereby Chriſt is made, as Viceroy to God his Father, and his Lievtenant-General, Pſal. 110. 1, 2. 1 Cor. 15. 25, 27. Col. 1. 18, 19: eſpecially, in regard to, and behalf of, his Church, for the ſafety and welfare of it, Matth. 28. 18, 20. Epheſ. 1. 20, 22.

ſhall be] So, not amiſs; yet the Hebrew Syntax requires rather, is, or, hath been; and ſo both the Greek, and Latine render it; but the form is prophetical, as in the reſidue; wherein, either the one expreſſed, or the other intended, would, without ſhift, or change, be conſtantly obſerved.

upon his ſhoulder There ſeems ſome alluſion here, to what was before ſaid of the burden, and the ſtaff on the ſhoulder, ver. 4. though the Jewiſh Maſters make no very good uſe of it; who to prove this meant of Hezekiah, ſay, the rod, and the ſtaff (they might have ſaid, the yoke, the burden too) were on Ahaz his ſhoulders; becauſe he was but a tributary to the Aſſyrian, 2 King. 16. 8. 2 Chr. 28. 20, 21. whereas Hezekiah his ſon ſhook off the Aſſyrian yoke, and refuſed to be as his vaſſal, which his father before him had been, 2 King. 18. 7. but it is not enough, for the faſtning of this Prophecy upon Hezekiah, to pick out ſome piece of it, that may be applyed to him: and another manner of regiment is here intimated, as appears, ver. 7. then Hezekiah's ever was. But that we may the better underſtand the phraſe here uſed, we are to conſider, that the ſhoulder is the ordinary part of the body uſed, for the bearing, of heavy eſpecially, and weighty burdens, Gen. 21. 14. & 24. 15. Exod. 12. 34. Joſh. 4. 5. Judg. 9. 48. Ezek. 12. 6, 11. Now there is a two-fold burden: there is a baſe burden of ſervitude, Gen. 49. 14, 15. Exod. 2. 11. and this burden Chriſt takes off from the ſhoulders of his, Pſal. 81. 7. ch. 14. 25. and there is an honourable burden of care and charge, which attendeth on, and belongeth unto thoſe that are in place of authority; in regard whereof, the ſame word in divers languages, that ſignifies honour, is of neer affinity with that which denoteth burden: and government is therefore by the wiſer and better ſort, juſtly deemed no other, then a more honourable kind of ſervice, 1 King. 12. 7. Nor indeed is this a light or ſmall; but a great and weighty burden, if it be well weighed; conſiſting in a conſtant care, ſollicitude, and ſedulity, of procuring and providing for the ſafety and welfare of thoſe that live under their charge, ch. 32. 1, 2, 1 Cor. 11. 28, 29. that which, howſoever Princes and great Perſonages, oft-times neglect, and regard not, contenting themſelves with the State, ſervice, and revenues, which they receive, and perceive from their people, without regard of their good: yet Chriſt doth not ſo: but as he taketh the burden of ſervitude from off their ſhoulders; (though not the burden of free ſervice neither from off their ſhoulders,) Zeph. 3. 9. no more then the yoke of willing obedience from off their neck, Matth. 11. 29.) ſo he takes the burden of care and charge for the providing for them; ſuſtaining of them, and accommodating them with all neceſſaries, both concerning this life, and a better, and layeth it upon his own ſhoulders, Pſal. 37. 5. & 55. 22. & 84. 11. Heb. 13. 5, 6. 1 Pet. 5. 7. See ver. 7. in regard whereof, alſo, he is called, not Gods ſervant only, ch. 42. 1. & 53. 11; but a ſervant unto Gods people too, Matth. 20. 28. Luk. 22. 27. Rom. 15. 8. Phil. 2. 7. What ſome report of a key carried on the ſhoulder of ſome Officers in Court, as here alluded unto, ſhall be further conſidered, on ch. 22. 22. For the alluſion that ſome ſuppoſe here, unto Chriſts carrying his croſſe, Joh. 19. 17. (not unlike that, which others have, of Iſaac's carrying the wood, for the ſacrificing of himſelf, Gen. 22. 6. as a type of the ſame) to more ſerious Authors, ſeems too light.

and his name ſhall be called] That is, he ſhall be called, or, this ſhall be his name; to wit, that which followeth; not that he ſhould be ſo commonly ſtyled; but that he ſhould be known, and acknowledged to be ſuch, as theſe titles all of them import. So ch. 7. 14. Jer. 23. 6. Ezek. 48. 35. Heb. he ſhall call; as Mal. 1. 4. they ſhall call them. The active taken very frequently, in an imperſonal manner, moſt aptly expreſſed by the paſſive; He ſhall be called, they ſhall be called. Howbeit, the Jewiſh Doctors, ſome of them, take occaſion hereby, moſt miſerably to rent, and tear aſunder the text; that they might, if it were poſſible, by force or ſlight, wring it out of our hands: yea, and the hands of their predeceſſors, by applying it to Hezekiah. But they do but as the Madianites, one croſs and cut another: and no other weapon needs to refute what one offereth, then what is lent us by another. The verb, ſome of them will by no means have to be imperſonal. For God, ſay they, is expreſly ſaid thus to have called Ezekiah: and this to juſtifie, they read, or rend, rather, the words, on this wiſe; He who is wonderful in counſel, and the mighty God; and the Father of Eternity ſhall call his name (to wit, Ezekiah's) the prince of peace; becauſe it is ſaid, yet ſhall peace be in my dayes, ch. 39. 8. But another of them obſerving, that in ſuch ſpeech of calling ones name, thus, or thus; the nominative, or the name-giver, never followeth; but where it is expreſſed, goeth ever before the verb; & the accuſative referring to the perſon named, and containing the name given, doth alwayes follow next after: he runs a croſſe, and hunts counter to his fellow Doctors. And the right is, ſaith he, that all that is ſubjoyned, belongs to the party named, to wit, Ezekiah; he ſhall ſo name Ezekiah. Then to make this good, he pulleth the terms, whereof both the whole entire ſtyle, and each title contained in it, doth conſiſt: and ſo tireth himſelf in ſtrugling againſt the bright ſun-ſhine, to ſhew how they may all be applyed to, and verified of Ezekiah. That, wherein the former do directly contradict him, in affirming them to be, as indeed they are, the peculiar attributes (ſome at leaſt among them) of God: and not applyable therefore to any other, then to him, that is God. But hereof more, in diſcuſſing of the ſeverall titles.

Wonderful, Counſellour,] Theſe as two diſtinct titles, thoſe of the Jewiſh Doctors divide; who apply them to Ezekiah: and they ſay, that he is termed wonderful; in regard of that ſtrange wonder of the Suns going backward, wrought in his dayes, and at his requeſt, 2 King. 2. 6—11. and Counſellour, in regard of the counſel, which he took with his Princes, concerning the ſervice of God, and the ſafety of his City, and the good counſel he gave in either, 2 Chr. 29. 4—11. & 30. 1-9. & 31. 3—8. Many alſo, yea, the moſt of ours, herein concur with them, though not in applying of them to Ezekiah, (which others, alſo, of their own, diſlike and reject,) yet in disjoyning them, and making them two ſeveral titles. And true it is, that they may be ſeverally applyed unto Chriſt, and are verified in him. For how can he but be deemed exceedingly wonderful, with whom God and Man, the Divine and humane nature, do in one perſon ſo myſteriouſly and miraculouſly concur, that the very Angels themſelves, who do therefore adore him, do among other things, admire this in him, as a myſtery, even, beyond their reach? 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 1. 6. Eph. 3. 10, 11. 1 Pet. 1. 12. or, how can the title of Counſellour be denyed unto him, who is the moſt inward of privy-Counſel with God his Father; and imparts unto his, of them, from him, whatſoever is neceſſary to be known of them? Joh. 1. 14, 18. & 3. 13. & 5. 20. & 15. 15. But thoſe other Jewiſh Writers, that expound them of God, joyn them together, as making up joyntly, one title: and ſo do divers of ours, alſo, who apply them unto Chriſt. And indeed to me it ſeems, that they ought to go together, as the other three following, go alſo by pairs. For the meaning of them; The word rendred Wonderfull, is not an epithet; but a ſubject, or ſubſtantive: and it ſignifies properly, a miracle, or a wonder; ſuch, as being beyond, or above, the courſe of nature, and the power of the creature, God alone is able to effect, Pſal. 136. 4. ſo that to render it, word for word, it is as if one ſhould ſay, a wonder, or, miracle of a Counſellour; that is, a moſt wonderful, or miraculous Counſellour; as we uſe to ſay, a mirrour and a miracle, or, a wonder of woman-kind, for, a moſt remarkable, wondrous, and even miraculous woman: and a miracle of man, or, a monſter of man, for, a monſtrous, or miraculous man: and it is the uſual manner of the Hebrews, in way of amplification, to put the abſtract for the concrete: as deſolation, for moſt deſolate, ch. 1. 7. abomination, for moſt abominable, Deut. 18. 12. pride, for, extream proud, Jer. 50. 31. Our bleſſed Saviour therefore, is not unfitly here ſo ſtyled; as one ſo exceedingly ſtrange and wonderful, in all his counſels, and courſes, eſpecially for his, both in ſecuring them, and in defeating the deſigns and attempts of others againſt them; as no ordinary phraſe, or form of ſpeech, is able fitly, much leſs ſufficiently, to expreſſe it: but what is ſpoken of Chriſt here, in the noun abſtract, that we may the better underſtand whom the Attribute belongs to, is by this our Prophet, afterward delivered of God the Lord Jehovah, in the verb active; He that maketh counſel wonderful; or, doth wonderfully in counſel, ch. 28.28. which place, as it helps to cleer this; ſo it ſeems to add ſtrength to this latter reading, that joyns the two terms together. And indeed, if we take Counſellour alone, without Miracle, or, Wonder, here, as Mighty, alone, without God in the next, the Title would not ſeem to contain any ſuch extraordinary, or remarkable matter, as were ſuiteable to the reſt.

The mighty God] Or, A mighty God: (for there is no article prefixed to any of the Titles) Theſe two terms thoſe Jewiſh teachers pull aſunder, that apply them to Ezekiah. Howbeit, they would have them to ſignifie one and the ſame thing: as if we ſhould ſay, Mighty, ſtrong, as Ezek. 32.21. the ſtrong of, or, among, the mighty; and ſo, ſay they, was Ezekiah: and his name importeth as much, ſignifying, the ſtrength of God, or, ſtrong, and mighty, from, or through God: as David, Pſal. 18.1. But againſt this we object, not only the accent in the Hebrew, that carrieth on the voyce without ſtop, or ſtay; and inhibites the disjunction of the one from the other: but beſides that, which they cannot be ignorant of, that the word, el, howſoever in the plural number, ſome once or twice, it may ſignifie great ones: as Job 41.25. Exod. 15.9. Pſal. 89.6. (which two latter places, being in ſubſtance the ſame, are alſo queſtionable, and may intend Gods, as well as great ones) yet in the ſingular number it is never uſed, but for God; and it is both repeated, ch. 10.21. and in three other places found with the ſelf-ſame adjection; the great, and mighty God, Deut. 10.17. Neh. 9.32. Jer. 32.18. And the Title fitteth well to Chriſt, who hath all the Names of the Deity, given to him, in Scripture: Adonai, Pſal. 110.1. Matth. 22.44. Heb. 1.13. Elohim, Pſal. 45.6. Heb. 1.8. Jehovah, Jer. 23.6. & 33.16. Mal. 3.1. Matth. 11.10. Pſal. 83.18. Luk. 1.76. God, Joh. 1.1, 14. the true God, or very God, 1 Joh. 5.20. the great God, Tit. 2.13. the ſame in effect, with The mighty God, here, as joyned together, elſe-where: and, God above all, to be bleſſed for ever, Rom. 9.5. Nor can I paſſe by the wrong done, both to Chriſt, and this Scripture, by a profeſſed Chriſtian, but too much addicted to Jewiſh fancies; who to help out the Rabbines in turning this over to Ezekiah, teareth one term away from the former title, and glewing it to this, would have the words read; The Counſellour of, or, conſulter with the mighty God. Thus he dares do that, which none of them durſt attempt; The ſtop that ſtayed them, was no bar to him. But the reaſon that he gives, why this ſtyle, or Title, ſhould be given to Ezekiah; to wit, becauſe he ſhould in all his affairs, conſult with God, and ask counſel of him, by his Prophets, 2 Chr. 29.25, 25. ch. 37.2. may well ſtop his own mouth. For the word in the Hebrew here uſed, (which we agreeably, both to the Greek, and Latine, render Counſellours; he, becauſe that Latine term is more ambiguous, conſulter,) doth never ſignifie throughout the whole Scripture, one that takes counſel of another; but one that giveth Counſel to another: and ſo to ſtyle Ezekiah, or any meer man, Gods Counſellour, is blaſphemous. See ch. 40.13, 14.

The Everlaſting Father] They that would have it meant of Ezekiah, render it; ſome, the Father of an age, or, a long time: and would have him ſo ſtyled, becauſe his life was prolonged, when he was at deaths door, ch. 38.5. Others, the Father of a generation; becauſe, ſay they, he had an ample poſterity. But as for the former, if this Title ſhould have had reſpect to any ſuch thing; he ſhould rather have been termed in Scripture phraſe, the Son of a long time, then the Father of it. For ſo ſpeaks the Scripture conſtantly, ſuch an one was the Son of ſo many years, Gen. 5.3, 6, &c. And as for the latter, neither can it be ſhewed, where the phraſe, or term, is ſo uſed. Nor if it were found ſo uſed, would it be any peculiar character of Ezekiah, more then of any other, that had a continued line of iſſue, after him: yea, of him the leſſe, becauſe, for ought we finde upon record, he left behind him only one Son. The Hebrew hath it (as is not denyed by thoſe of their Writers, that expound it, either of the Meſſias; as the Ancienter of them: or, of God, as thoſe latter ones, that ſay, he names Ezekiah, here) much to the ſame effect, as we render it; A Father of Eternity: as the word is alwayes taken where applyed to God, and his Word, and his Reign, Exod. 15.18. Pſal. 111.7, 8. ch. 26.4. & 57.15. Chriſt then is called the Father of Eternity; not as the ſame in Perſon with the Father: For though they be one in nature and eſſence, Joh. 10.30. Yet are they diſtinct in Perſon, Matth. 28.19. 1 Joh. 5.7. nor ſo much, in regard of that kind and tender affection, that he bears unto his, and fatherly care he hath of them, Joh. 13.1. & 14.18. & 17.12. & 18.8, 9. but more eſpecially and principally, becauſe he is the Author of eternity, that is, of life everlaſting, begun in this world, and to be conſummate in the next, unto all thoſe that believe on him, and have intereſt in him, Joh. 6.39, 40, 47, 51. & 8.51. & 10.28. & 11.25, 26. Heb. 5.9. & 7.25.

The Prince of Peace] Of this Title applyed to Ezekiah, we ſpake before; and though the fore-part, and latter part of his reign, were proſperous, and peaceable, 2 King. 18.7, 8. & 20.19. yet the mid-part was very calamitous and unquiet, 2 King. 18.13—17. ch. 36.1. But unleſs the whole ſtyle, contained in, and conſiſting of, all theſe four Titles, will ſuit with him, as well as this, in part, and in ſome ſence, may; all their ſtrife to carry this Prophecy over to him, is but frivolous. But unto our Saviour, as all the reſt; ſo this alſo, well ſuits. As his Father is termed the God of Peace, Rom. 16.20. Phil. 4.9. ſo is he fitly ſtyled, A Prince of peace. For he is our peace, Mic. 5.5. Eph. 2.14. and he makes our peace with God, ch. 53.5. & 57.19. Eph. 2.17. Col. 1.20. and his Goſpel is a Goſpel of peace; and his Miniſters, and Meſſengers, are Embaſſadours of peace, ch. 52.7. Rom. 10.15. 2 Cor. 5.19, 20. Eph. 6.15. and he gives unto all his peace outward, inward, temporal, eternal, Mic. 5.5. Zach. 9.10. Joh. 14.27. & 16.33. Rom. 5.1. & 8.16. & 14.17. 2 Theſſ. 3.17. See ch. 2.4. & ver. 7.

V. 7. Of the encreaſe of his Government, and peace there ſhall be no end] From the laſt Title given to the Meſſias, whoſe birth he foretold, he takes occaſion to relate, both the amplitude, and the continuance of his principality, and the proſperity accompanying it. All which, how the later Jewiſh Expoſitors, and ſome other, treading in their ſteps, ſtrain their wits to apply unto Ezekiah, will be needleſſe to waſte more words.

of the encreaſe] Or, unto the amplitude. See ver. 3. of the large extent of Chriſts Kingdom, into all parts of the world; ſee thoſe predictions, Pſal. 2.8. & 72.8—11. ch. 2.2, 3. Dan. 2.35. & 7.27. Matth. 24.14. Rom. 10.18. In the word of Increaſe, (no where elſe found, as a noun; but fitted here to the term of Government) there is a cloſe m in the middle, where an open one is wont to be; and on the other ſide an open one is found, in the end of a word, Neh. 2.13. where a cloſe one ought to have been. Whence, divers, both Jewiſh, and others, pick out hidden myſteries. Some, that the cloſe and ſquare letter ſignifies firmneſſe and entireneſſe, in the one place; as the cleft or open one, a breach, or rupture in the walls of Jeruſalem, in the other place, Neh. 1.3. & 2.13. others, that Chriſt ſhould be encloſed in the womb of a Virgin, ch. 7.14. See Jer. 31.22. Others, that his Dominion ſhould extend it ſelf to the four corners of the world, Matth. 24.31. See ch. 66.19. Others, that by this letter, is deſigned, the year of Chriſts incarnation to be 600. year after the delivery of this Prophecy; but they miſſe 100. year at leaſt, in their Chronography. Yea, ſome would hence fiſh out, the name of his Mother. But ſuch frivolous toyes of wanton wits, the more ſerious and ſober-minded reject and deteſt. The negligent Scribe, in likelihood, forgat to cloſe up his letter, in the one place; and to leave a cleft in the other: which your Jewiſh curious Criticks, when they found in ſome Copies, that they followed, being ſuperſtitious of changing ought, retained ſtill, as many other ſlips of the Scribes Pen, only giving a note of it in the margine, or over the word in the text: it is no more, then, as if with us, an ſ or an s ſhould be in the middle of a word; and an S or an ſ in the end.

of his Government] Heb. Principality, or, Princedome; as ver. 6. anſwering to the word Prince, alſo, there uſed.

and Peace] Heb. and to, or, of the peace. For the particle is again, for the more emphaſis, expreſſed. The word, peace, is taken from the cloſe of the former verſe: and it includes, as there, ſo here alſo, not peace, barely; but all proſperity, ch. 48.18. the meaning is, that all abundance of peace ſhould accompany Chriſts Government in all places, whither it ſhould be extended, and where entertained, Pſal. 72.7. & 119.165. ch. 54.3.

no end] The phraſe here uſed, in this place, implyes, not continuance, or length of time; but largeneſſe rather, or extent: as ch. 2.7. Matth. 2.10. & 3.3, 9.

upon the throne of David] A defective ſpeech, which the Latine ſupplies, putting in, he ſhall ſit, Luk. 1.32. God ſhall give him the throne of his father David: He ſhall, as heir to David, of whom he came, Matth. 1.1. Luk. 2.4. Rom. 1.3. Sit upon that throne, whereof Davids was a type, Act. 2.30. & 13.23, 32, 33. in regard whereof, alſo, he is called by the name of David, Ezek. 34.23. & 37.24.

and upon his kingdom] Or, and he ſhall be over his kingdom; as Gen. 41.60. The Church of God conſiſting of Jew and Gentile, whereof Davids kingdom was a type, Pſal. 2.6. Ezek. 37.22. Luk. 1.33.

to order it] Or, diſpoſe it. To ſettle it, and the government of it, 1 Cor. 12.28. Eph. 1.22. & 4.11, 12: as David, and other religious Kings, types of him, according to their places, had formerly done, 1 Chr. 23—26. 2 Chr. 29. & 30. & 34. & 35. 2 King. 23.

and to eſtabliſh it] Or, ſupport it, Or, uphold it. So the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 94.18. & 119.116, 117. Prov. 20.28.

20.28. Other Princes are upheld by their people: Chriſts people are upheld by him, ch. 28. 16. Mat. 16. 18.

with judgment, and with juſtice] Theſe two are thoſe, whereby every State, is both aright ordered and upheld. Of David it is ſaid, That he ſate executing judgment and juſtice, 2 Sam. 8.15. 1 Chr. 18. 14. and juſtice, and judgment, are ſaid to be the habitation of Gods throne, Pſal. 92. 2. Judgment, in taking vengeance on the enemies of his Church, Pſal. 76. 8, 9: and on obſtinate ſinners, Pſal. 68.21. Luk.19.27: and in chaſtizing of his own people alſo, when they do amiſs, Jer. 10.24. & 30. 11. 1 Cor. 11. 3–32. Juſtice, in righting the wrongs of his people, and rewarding them for their wel-doing, 2 Theſſ. 1.6. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Heb. 6. 10. For that which ſome have here of righteouſneſs imputed, and imparted; I ſuppoſe, belongeth not unto this place. See ch. 1. 27. & 16. 5.

from henceforth even for ever] Heb. from now, and for ever. Unto all eternity; for, the Lord ſhall reign, as King for ever; and of his kingdom ſhall be no end, Pſal. 9. 7, 8. & 145. 13. & 146. 10. Dan. 2. 44. & 4. 34. & 7. 27. Zach. 9. 10. Heb. 12. 27.

The zeal of the Lord of Hoſts will perform this] The eager reſpect that he hath to his own honour, chap. 42. 8. & 48. 11. Ezek 36. 22, 23. & 39. 25. and the tender care, and affection that he beareth unto his people, ſhall cauſe him to effect, what hath here been fore-told, ch. 48. 9, 10. & 49 15. Joel. 2. 18. Zach. 1. 14. & 2. 6, 8. & 8. 2. So alſo, ch. 37. 22. Of the Lord of Hoſts. See ch. 1. 9.

V. 8. The Lord ſent a word into Jacob] After theſe comfortable promiſes interlaced, for the ſtay of the faithful; the Prophet here returns, again, to relate the calamities that ſhould, for their exceſs of ſin, and obſtinacy therein, befal the people of Iſrael, and the Syrian king their confederate.

ſent] Or, hath ſent; as a man ſends a meſſage by ſome ſervant, or officer; as Neh. 6. 8. So Zach. 7. 12. ſent by Iſaiah himſelf, as ſome; by Amos, as others. The word ſignifieth alſo, to caſt, as a man doth ſeed, Eccl. 11. 1. Or to ſhoot; as a man doth a ſhaft, 2 Sam. 22. 15. which ſome think, here alluded to, in regard of what followeth.

a word] Of prophecy, concerning evils to betide them, chap. 7. 8, 16. & 8. 4. The Greek renders it a plague: and with other points or vowels, the word ſignifies, either with two ſhort ees, a plague; with two long aas, a word: which latter reading, there is no cauſe to wave for them, whoſe verſion is ſo full of groſs miſtakes.

into Jacob] Or, unto; as ch. 8. 8. & 10. 20. Jacob, the ten tribes, diſtinct from Judah; as Hoſ. 10. 11. See ch. 2. 5.

and it hath lighted upon Iſrael] Heb. and it ſhall fall upon Iſrael. For the copulative turns the form, into the future; as ch. 31. 3. and ſo ver. 9. It ſhall fall, as grain, not light, that may be blown away with the winde, ere it come to the ground; but weighty, that falls into the furrow, and there takes, Matth. 13. 8. Or, as the ſnow, or hail, or rain, that falls on the heads of thoſe that are abroad in it; or, on the ground, not without ſome effect, one way or other, Joſh. 10. 11. Pſal. 11. 6. chap. 24. 18. & 35. 10, 11. Jer. 30. 23, 24. Or, as the ſhaft of a skilful archer that miſſeth not, but lights full on the place deſigned; hits the mark that it aymed at, Judg. 20. 16. 2 Sam. 1. 22. The arrow of Gods word, lights ever there whither it is ſent, and never fails, ch. 55. 9. What God hath denounced, againſt perſon, or people, they ſhall never be able to ſhift off, or avoid, ch. 14. 27.

Iſrael] The ſame with Jacob. The Prophets manner is, in divers tearms, for variety, to deliver the ſame things. So Pſal. 78. 71. See ch. 1. 3.

V. 9. And] And whatſoever they now conceive of it; and make account, either to ſhift it off, or overcome it, and do well enough with it; they ſhall all of them, by woful experience, feeling the ſmart of it, finde my words to be truer, then they now imagine.

all the people ſhall know] Heb. and they ſhall know this people, or, this people ſhall know. (for the Verb is plural; becauſe the Noun a collective; as ch. 49. 26.) All of them, or, all of it.

the people] Or, this people. For the article doth here ſingle out, and ſpecifie a particular people. It points us, as by the finger, to the people, beforementioned, ver. 8.

ſhall know] know it. A defect of the Affix, or pronoun; as chap. 1. 3, 15. & 3. 9. Rev. 1. 1. They ſhall know the word to be true, which they will not now believe. They ſhall know it to be no vain word, whatſoever they now think of it, Deut. 32. 46, 47. Ezek. 5. 13. & 6. 10. Or, they ſhall know it experimentally; that is, feel it; feel it, that is, the evils continued, and threatned in it. So, to know evil; for, to have experience of evil; whence the Tree of knowledg had its name, Gen. 2. 16, 17. and to know evil; for, to ſuffer evil, Eccleſ. 8. 5. and to know ſin; for to have ſin, 2 Cor. 5. 20. See Jer. 23. 19, 20.

all] Heb. all of it The whole people: or, all of them; as ch. 8. 21, 22. all places with them, verſ. 12. and all ſorts among them, 14. 15. even the proudeſt, and the ſtouteſt of them, chap. 3. 9, 11, 12, 17. & 5. 15.

even Ephraim] The royal tribe. That which was of chief preeminence with them; and denominating, therefore, oft the whole. See ch. 7. 2. and the inhabitant] For, inhabitants; as ch. 5. 3.

of Samaria] The royal ſeat, and chief city of that kingdom. See ch. 7. 9. No place ſo ſtrong with them, that ſhould be able to hold out, ch. 8. 4. 2 King. 17. 5, 6.

that ſay in the pride and ſtoutneſs of heart] That out of their proud and ſtout ſtomacks, make full account, eaſily to repair whatſoever damage, or detriment they have ſuſtained, or may hereafter ſuſtain, from the incurſions made by the Aſſyrians, into their country, and their tribes; and raiſe themſelves up again, to a fairer, and more ſtately condition then before. See the like of the Edomites, with the like ſucceſs, Mal. 1. 4.

in the pride] Heb. in pride. Or, out of pride; as Mat. 12. 34. out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeakes. So Pſal. 10. 2. The wicked out of pride, oppreſſeth the poor: or, with pride; proudly; that ſpeak with pride; or, proudly, Pſal. 31. 18. Either, pride, without the: or, their pride, with a defect ſupplyed, as before.

and ſtoutneſs] Heb. and in greatneſs; as ch. 10. 9.

ſay] Intend, purpoſe, make full account; as Gen. 27. 41. Pſal. 30. 6. chap. 47. 7. Heb. ſaying, ſay. See the like defect, Jer. 3. 1. Howbeit a learned late Annotator referreth this, not to the Iſraelites, as ſimply relating their ſpeech, but to God, as relating the word ſent by him, verſ. 8. which they well knew; and checking them for what they ſay; and would turn the words read by way of interrogation, Should it be thus ſaid of you? Or, is it meet for you, ſo to ſay? But this, to me, ſeems an over-ſtrained Syntax.

V. 10. The bricks are fallen down; but we will build with hewen ſtone] Whatſoever the enemy hath ruined, we will repair, and re-edifie in firmer, and fairer manner then before. As it is ſaid of one of the Romane Emperors, that he found Rome, a brick-city, but he made it a marble one.

bricks] Of which their ordinary buildings were, Gen. 11. 3. bricks for houſes built of brick; as bricks for altars built of brick, ch. 65. 3.

are fallen down] Not decayed of themſelves; but overthrown by the enemy, Amos 3. 15.

but] Heb. and; as ch. 8. 9, 10.

build] Them; (a defect of the Pronoun; as verſ. 9.) or, others in room of them, Mal. 1. 4.

with hewen ſtones] Heb. cutting, or hewing; for ſtones of hewing, or cutting; as it is more fully expreſſed, 1 Chro. 22. 2. Ezek. 40. 42. that is, hewen ſtones. Such were the great mens houſes, in Samaria, built with, Amos 5. 11. and ſuch they built with, both for ſtrength, Lam. 3. 9. and for beauty, 1 King. 7. 9, 11.

the Sycomores are cut down] The Sycomore, a kinde of wild fig-tree, Luk. 19. 4. as the fruit, Amos 7. 14. So the timber whereof was of ſmall reckoning; and it is ſaid therefore of Solomon, that he made Cedars to be as Sycomers, for the abundance of them in his dayes, 1 King. 10. 27. put here, not for the trees themſelves; the felling whereof had been no ſuch great loſs; but for the houſes built with the timber of them; (as Cedars; for houſes built with Cedar, Jer. 22. 13, 15. Zach 11. 1.) which the enemy had, or might deſtroy. Yet ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, underſtand it of the trees themſelves, and the ſpoil made, in the country, of them, by the enemy; (like that by the ſtorm in Egypt, Pſal. 78. 47.) as the former branch of the havock, made, of their houſes, in the city. But that which follows, of putting Cedars in room of Sycomores, croſſeth this conceit: Cedars growing, commonly, on the hils, 1 King. 5. 6: and Sycomores on the plains, 1 King. 10. 27. Howbeit, being, both this, and the former, proverbial forms, it is no great matter whether way we take; though the former ſence be the more probable.

but] Heb. and; as before: and as Mal. 1. 4.

we will change them into Cedars] Heb. we will change Cedars for them. Or, by change ſubſtitute Cedars in the room of them. A defective form of ſpeech, like thoſe, chap. 38. 17, 20, 22. See there: inſtead of Sycomore-timber, that our houſes were formerly built with, we will now build them with Cedar; the choiceſt timber for building in thoſe parts, in thoſe times; wherewith Solomon built, both Gods Temple, and his own Palace, 1 King. 6. 9. & 7. 2, 3, 7, &c.

V. 11. Therefore] Heb. And; as chap. 3. 17: as denoting the cauſe of the judgment following their inſolency, mentioned, ver. 9, 10. Or, For, as ver. 13. ch. 64. 5. as declaring the means and manner, how the judgement, before denounced, ſhould be inflicted; from whom, and in what ſort it ſhould light on them; as he had ſaid, ver. 8: and ſo further confirming what was before delivered, verſ. 8, 9.

the Lord ſhall ſet up the adverſaries of Rezin, againſt him] Or, the Lord will ſet up, &c.

ſet up] Raiſe up, ſtrengthen, proſper, and make to prevail, as Pſal.20.21. & 59.1. & 69.29. & 90.14. & 107.41.

the adverſaries of Rezin] The Aſſyrians, who invaded Syria, the Kingdom of Rezin, ſubdued it, and ſlew him, 2 King. 16.9. the rather mentioned here, becauſe the Iſraelites were in confederacy with him, and truſted much to his ſtrength, ch. 7.1,2,5,6.

againſt him] To wit, Rezin. Who being deſtroyed before them, they might well expect to fare as he did; or, againſt them, the people before ſpoken of: for of them, the pronoun runs ſtill in the ſingular number: as ver. 9. God will bring in upon them; and cauſe to prevail againſt them, the Aſſyrians, who having ſeized upon Syria, ſhall not long after do the like with Iſrael, 2 King.15.29. & 17.3--6.

and joyn his enemies together] Heb. and will mingle his enemies. The word is but twice found in Scripture; and uſed in either place, to a diverſe purpoſe: in the one place, to mingle men together in fight, and conflict one with another; as in the Heb. proud, and contentious people, are ſaid to mingle ſtrife, Prov.15.18. & 28.25. & 29.22. and we uſe to ſay, that ſouldiers joyn in battle: and plaintiffe, and defendant are ſaid to joyn iſſue in Law: and ſo the word is uſed, ch. 19.2. and ſo would ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors alſo have it taken in this place. But they ſtrain the text too much; here it ſignifies rather, to mingle men together in league, confederacy, and agreement. God will make their adverſaries, though bearing little love or good will one to another; yet to conſpire and joyn together in one againſt them.

his enemies] Or, their enemies. Not Rezins; (for ſome of them were his people) but Iſraels: Which confirms the expoſition before given, of the words, againſt them. Theſe enemies are the Syrians, and Philiſtims, ver. 12.

V. 12. The Syrians before] The Syrians, on whom they ſo much relyed; being now ſubdued by the Aſſyrian, and become his Subjects, ſhall come under his conduct, mingled among his forces, to help to ſurprize and ſubdue them. Heb. Aram. See ch.7.1.

before] Heb. from the Eaſt; or, Eaſtward. See chap. 2.6. 2 King.13.17.

and the Philiſtins behind] Heb. from behind; or, from the Weſt, Weſt-ward. For ſo the Hebrews term Eaſt, and Weſt: the one, the fore; the other, the back part of the skie, or the world: the South, the right ſide; the North, the left, Deut.11. 24. Job 23.8,9. Now the Philiſtines lay on the Weſt to Iſrael; as the Syrians on the Eaſt. See ch.2.6. & 11.14. both being ancient enemies to Gods people, were ready upon any occaſion, to infeſt them, and to be uſed as inſtruments againſt them.

and they ſhall devour Iſrael with open mouth] The land of Iſrael ſhall on either ſide be ſo beſet by them, that there ſhall be no way for them to eſcape; but they muſt of neceſſity fall into the hands, or, into the mouth rather of the one, or the other.

devour with open mouth] Heb. with whole mouth. A metaphorical ſpeech, taken from ravenous beaſts, lyons, bears, and the like; that open their mouthes as wide as they can, to take in, and ſwallow down their prey, Pſal. 124.3,6. See ver. 16.

for all this his wrath is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] So ch.5.25. See the notes there. The firſt words, are repeated here from the cloſe of the former branch, though our Engliſh expreſſe it not: as if he had ſaid, though with all mouth they devour Iſrael; yet with all this is not Gods wrath ſatisfied; an utter riddance muſt be made of them: the Aſſyrian muſt ſweep away whatſoever they leave. See 2 King. 17.

V. 13. For the People turneth not unto him, that ſmiteth him] The reaſon, why Gods wrath is not pacified, notwithſtanding the forementioned judgment sinflicted, but further, & greater, are threatned; becauſe the former have not that work on them, for which God ſent them, to wit, to reclaim, and bring them home to him. That, which is ſo much complained of, about the ſame time, both by Hoſhea, Hoſ.7.10,14,16. and by Amos Amos 4.6--11.

For] Or, Becauſe. Heb. And: as ver.11. ch.64.5.

the people] To wit, of Iſrael, ver.9.

turneth not] By repentance, and reformation, Prov. 1. 23. ch. 55.7. Act.13.19. Gods wrath is not turned from them; becauſe they turn not unto him, Jer.5.3.

unto him, that ſmiteth them] Heb. him. As ver. 11. unto God, that ſmiteth by theſe, who were but as the Aſſyrians, his rod, and his cudgel, ch.10.5.

neither do they ſeek the Lord of hoſts] They ſeek not, by prayer and ſupplication for remiſſion of ſin, and removal of evils thereby procured, unto him alone, who is able to relieve them, ch.55.6. Zeph.2.2. but ſeek abroad for ſuccour to ſuch ſorry helps, as cannot ſtand them in any ſtead, Hoſh.5.13. & 7.14. Aſa's fault, 2 Chr.16.12. and Judahs too, ch.22.11. Of the title given God here, ſee ch.1.9.

V. 14. Therefore the Lord will cut off from Iſrael, head, and tail, branch, and ruſh in one day] He will make an utter riddance of them; and of all ſorts among them. head and tayl; branch and ruſh, ſeem proverbial forms of ſpeech: not unlike that, the tree with the fruit; or, the ſtalk with the grain, Jer.11. 19. See the ſame again, ch.19.15.

Therefore] Heb. And. But ſo rendred, ver. 11. chap.3.17. yet, it may be retained in his native notion, here; as in the like place, ch.5.26. reading the words in a continued ſeries, from ver.12. His hand is ſtretched out ſtill; becauſe the people turneth not, &c. ver.13. (incloſed in a parentheſis) And the Lord will cut off, &c.

branch] The word is found only in this Prophet; and Job 15.32. and the plural, with change of a vowel, Levit.23.40. put here in likelihood for iſſue, or children, that are as branches, ſpringing from their parents, as from a ſtock; ſo Pſal. 128.3. See ver.17. or, for thoſe of better faſhion, that beautifie a State, as branches do a tree, ch.10.33. & 18.5. Ezek. 17. 8,23. and being of more might, ſeem to be the ſtrength and ſupport of it. See ch.3.1,2. as branches of trees, afford ſtaves to ſtay men up; Zach.8.4. and Scepters to rule with, Ezek. 19.11,14.

and ruſh] So called of the pools, or ſtanding water, wherein it is found; put here for the poorer, meaner, and baſer ſort of people, becauſe it grows commonly, in the mire, or mud, and is therewith fed, Job 8.11. and is a matter of no ſtrength or worth, Job 41.2. ch.58.5. And we read indeed, that in the deportation of Judah, the poorer and meaner ſort were many, if not moſt of them, left to till and manure the ground, 2 King.25.11,12. but in the depopulation of Samaria, there is no mention of any ſuch reſerve, of any one ſort more then another: but the main body is ſaid to have been carried away; and other from forreign parts, placed in their room, 2 King. 17.6,23,24.

in one day] Heb. one day. Not on ſome one day, or other; but, in one day. The particle is wanting, as Pſal.56.3. but to be ſupplyed: as ch.10.18. that is, at one and the ſame time; together one with another: day, for, time; as ch.7.24.

V. 15. The ancient, and honourable, he is the head] The application of the former proverbial ſpeech.

ancient, and honourable] Heb. eminent of countenance: as ch.3.3. men of account, for age, or office. See ch.3.2,3.

he is the head] Or, without he, is the head. For the pronoun is in Hebrew oft uſed for the verb ſubſtantive, Pſal.44.4. Eccl. 1.5,10. & 5.9. ch.10.5. is the head: is meant by the head; reſembled thereby. So Gen. 41.26,27. and ſo, This is my body, Matth.26.26. Nor do the Hebrews ſpeak otherwiſe.

and the Prophet that teacheth lyes, he is the tayl] Heb. that teacheth a lye, (as ch. 32.7.) he, or, is the tayl: as before, the falſe Prophets are ſo termed; partly, in regard of their baſe and abject condition; (for ſuch, it is likely, many of them, as well as their Prieſts, were, 1 King.12.31. 2 Chr.13.9. Jer. 23.11,25.) and partly, in regard of their vile and baſe flatteries, whereby, as dogs with their tayls, they fawned upon the great ones, eſpecially, for their own behoof, and ſoothed them up in their ſins, ch.56.10,11. Jer.8.10,11, & 23. 14,17. Mic. 3.5. ſo rather, then, as ſome that ſuppoſe, an alluſion to a ſerpent, that gliding toward a man, as in kind manner, getteth within him, and then ſtingeth him; or, to ſuch dogs, as come fawning toward men, as playing with them, untill they have faſtned upon them, and then worry them. Nor do I think, that the Prophets intention was to compare the body of that State, as, ſome hence infer, to a beaſt; becauſe he mentions a tayl, as well as an head; no more, then, where he uſeth the ſame phraſe of the Egyptian State, ch.19.15. it being a common proverbial ſpeech. See ch.8.8.

V. 16. For the leaders of this people cauſe them to erre] Heb. And the leaders of this people, or, thoſe that bleſs this people, (as alluding to the falſe Prophets, that ſoothed them up in their ſins, v.15.) have been miſleaders; ſuch as have led them out of the way, and made them go aſtray, See ch. 3.12. Some read it, as a prediction, ſhall be ſeducers, that is, ſay they, ſhall appear to be ſuch. But that ſeems ſomewhat too coact.

For] Or, becauſe; as ver.13. as rendring a reaſon, why God would cut off, head and tayl, &c. ver.14. becauſe the people, by their bad leaders, had been led into ſuch by-paths of error, and bad life; as muſt needs end in deſtruction.

and they that are led of them] Or, bleſſed by them; that is, pronounced to be in an happy and bleſſed condition, as Mal. 3. 15. Jam.5.11. whom they ſooth up in their ſins, Ezek.13.22. but I rather approve the former.

are deſtroyed] Heb. are ſwallowed up, as Lam. 2.2,5. a metaphor, from ravenous beaſts, or great fiſhes, that ſwallow down the bodies of thoſe creatures, which they prey upon, Jer.51.44. See ver. 12.

V. 17. Therefore the Lord ſhall have no joy in their young men] The Lord will ſpare no ſort of them; he will have no regard of ſex, age, or State, ver.9,14. Deut.32.25. 2 Chr.36.17. Jer. 6.11.

have no joy in] As ch.57.6. what comfort can I have in ſuch? he will take no delight in them, as he is wont to do in his people, Pſal.147.10,11. ch.62.7. & 65.19. and having no joy in them, taking no delight in them, will take no care of them, have no regard to them, his affection being disjoynted and disjoyned from them, Jer. 6.8. or, ſhall have no joy in them, by a phraſe of diminution; for he will deteſt, and abhor them, as ch. 2.6. ſo, ſhall have no joy, for, ſhall have much grief, Prov.17.21. and, if any love not the Lord Jeſus, for, be maliciouſly affected towards him; or, out of meer malice ſet himſelf againſt him, 1 Cor.16.22. a place, much miſtaken, and by too many miſapplyed, to the wounding of many weak ones: and ſo, can I have comfort in them? No, they are as ſmoke in my noſe, very troubleſome to me, ch.65.5.

their young men] Heb. choyce young men; or, choyce ones; as ch. 40.30. young men; as ſome, becauſe ſuch lovely, Ruth. 3.11. as others, becauſe ſuch cheerful, Eccl.11.9. Lam.5.14. Zach.9.17. and God is wont to delight in the proſperity of his ſervants; as a father or maſter, to ſee thoſe of his family cheerful and merry, when they do well, Pſal.35.27. or, young men, & ſuch young men; becauſe ſuch are the ſtrength and ſtay of a State; and the goodly, and beautiful branches before ſpoken of: which God there threatned to cut off, and hew down, ver. 14.

neither ſhall have mercy, on their fatherleſs and widows] I ſuppoſe it would more fitly be rendred, nor will have mercy, &c. and ſo before: as [illegible]ſe of the branches, the ſtrong ones; ſo theſe of the ruſhes, the weak ones, ver. 14. He will have no compaſſion on any of them whatſoever, ch. 27.11. ſuch as theſe, being the moſt uſual and eminent objects of pity and compaſſion, both with God and man, Deut.16.11,14. & 24.19,20. Pſal.68.7. & 82.3. ch.10.2. He that commands, and pleads pity for them; will himſelf have no pity on them; becauſe they are all alike extreamly wicked. So ch.1.4. & 2.6—9.

becauſe every one is an hypocrite, and an evil doer] They are all exceeding faulty, and corrupt in their carriage, both towards God and man.

every one] Heb. all of him, or, whole he; that is, the whole people, the whole body of them; as ver. 9. high and low; great and ſmall; mighty and feeble ones: the exceſs of ſin is general.

an hypocrite] So ſome of the Rabbines; one inwardly evil; and outwardly good: and the main, if not whole ſtream of our tranſlators, and Expoſitors, runs in this track; but it is not likely, that any profeſſion of piety and true devotion, about which hypocriſie is moſt converſant, ch. 48.1,2. and 58. 2. 2 Tim.3.5. ſhould be ſo riſe, among thoſe that were generally idolaters, and worſhippers of the calves and other idols, 2 King.17.7—12. the word doth properly ſignifie prophaneneſs; as the verb from whence it cometh, to pollute, or prophane, Num.35.33. Pſal.106.38. ch. 24.5. Jer.3.1,2,3,9. & 23.11. Mic.4.11. Dan.11.32. nor is it ever uſed otherwiſe. So would, therefore, the noun epithet alſo be accordingly rendred, prophane, Job 8.13. & 13.16. & 15.34. & 17.8. & 20.8. & 27.8. & 34.30. & 36.13. as alſo ch.13.14. and in this place; for there is no reaſon in any of theſe places, to force the word from his native notion; cleer reaſon requiring it to be ſo rendred, Pſal.35.16. and the noun ſubſtantive thence deduced, prophaneneſs, ch.32.6. as it is alſo rendred, Jer. 23.15. And this being the genuine notion of the term uſed, it is here put for all abuſive, and diſhonourable carriage towards God, his Sacred Majeſty, and holy rites, or ought conſecrate unto him, and his ſervice.

an evill doer] As ch.1.4. a race of evill doers, or, is doing evil; as making it their practice to do miſchief and evill to others, Prov.17.4. Some would have it, a maker to do evill; one, that not only is evil himſelf, but incites others thereunto; like Joram, 2 Chr.21.11. but I finde not the word ſo uſed. It here comprehendeth all injurious and noxious dealings with, and carriages towards man; as the other, all contumelious and irreligious demeanour towards God. The evill in either kind, is ſo univerſal, that the whole body of the people may ſeem to be, as one prophane perſon; as one evil doer: the manner of ſpeech implyes as much.

and every mouth ſpeaketh folly] Or, villany; as it is rendred, ch.32.6. & Jer.29.21. lyes, ſaith the Chaldee. But the word is of larger extent, and includes all vile and ſhameful wickedneſſes, Gen.34.7,13,31. Deut.22.21. it is taken from flowers, fruits, leaves, or branches of plants, or trees; that being fallen, ſhed, and withered, do not only grow uſeleſſe, and of no worth; but do putrifie and rot, ch.5.24. & 14.19. & 64. 16. ſuch vile and rotten ſtuff, is all their talk, Eph.4.29.

for all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] As before, ver.12.

V. 18. For wickedneſſe burneth as the fire] Or, Becauſe wickedneſſe burneth as a fire. So ſome read it, as rendring a reaſon, why Gods anger is not yet pacified, but continueth ſtill incenſed againſt them; to wit, becauſe they continue ſtill in ſin, and wickedneſſe groweth with them more and more, as a fire, that ſpreadeth, and ariſeth higher and higher; as it meeteth with combuſtible matter. Others, rather, For wickedneſſe ſhall burn as a fire; that is, your wickedneſſe ſhall kindle ſuch a fire among you, as ſhall conſume and burn up all before it, as confirming what was ſaid before, of the continuance of wrath. So ch.24.6.

wickedneſs] By wickedneſs, ſome ſeem to underſtand wicked ones; as the rod of wickedneſs, Pſal. 125.3. others, the puniſhment of wickedneſs, as Prov. 13.6. wickedneſs overthrowes the ſinner: and, indeed, ſin is oft uſed in Scripture for puniſhment, as Gen.4.13. Levit.20.17. but we need not go from the propriety of the word: wickedneſs is ſaid to burn as fire; as the ruſt of their gold and ſilver, is ſaid, to eat the fleſh of covetous perſons, and cruel Oppreſſors, as fire, Jam.5.3. becauſe it kindleth Gods wrath upon them, that ſhall torment and conſume them as fire, Num.11.1,3. Pſal.37.20. & 106.18.

as fire] Grievous judgments, are commonly compared to fire, that waſteth, as we ſay, without mercy, Deut. 32.22. Pſal. 97.3. ch.10.16.

it ſhall devour the bryars and thorns] Or, it may be read and rendred, with reference to the former words, as fire which devoureth, &c. for the omiſſion of the relative is very frequent. See ch.10.1. The dreadful wrath of God, procured by their wickedneſſe, is here reſembled by ſuch a fire, as either by lightning from heaven, or by ſome negligence, or caſualty, or of ſet purpoſe, being kindled, in a great wood, or forreſt of large extent; firſt takes hold of the under-woods, the low buſhes, and ſhrubs: after that, ſeizeth on the great timber trees, where they grow thickeſt together, and having now ſurprized them, mounteth up aloft, and over-ſpreads all, with a thick cloud of ſmoke. So Pſal.83.14. ch.10.17,18.

devour] Heb. eat up, as Pſal.56.3. ch.26.11. hence, a tongue of fire, ch.5.24.

bryars and thorns] The under-woods, the meaner and weaker ſort, compared before to ruſhes, ver.14. which in ſuch invaſions and calamities, as are here intimated, do uſually ſuffer firſt: bryars and thorns, indeed, are wicked men compared to, 2 Sam.23.6. ch.27.4. Ezek.28.24. and ſo ſome underſtand them here. But they are here taken, in another notion; as oppoſed to the thicket after-mentioned. See ch. 10.17.

and it ſhall kindle in the thickets of the forreſt] Or, and kindleth, or, burns upon the thickets, &c. that from the lower ſhrubs, gets up to the taller trees, eſpecially, where they grow thick together, and their boughs are entangled one with another; and do the more readily therefore, take fire one from another. The great ones, by ſuch branches reſembled, ver.14. See ch. 10.34. the judgment thus deciphered, will take hold of the ſtouteſt, and loftieſt of them, ver.9.

and they ſhall mount up, like the lifting up of ſmoke] Or, ſo that they mount up, or, go rolling up, with a pillar of ſmoke. For he goes on in the compariſon he began with, comparing their Country to a forreſt ſo fired, that nothing can, aloof off eſpecially, be ſeen for ſmoke, or but ſmoke, mounting up from it, as Joſh.8.20,21. Judg.20 40.

and they] Or, ſo that they, to wit, the thickets: and, for, that; or, ſo that: as Pſal.78.7. Jer.14.19.

ſhall mount up] Or, do mount up; or, they go rolling up. The word is no where elſe read; but it hath neer affinity, with a word, that ſignifies to wreſtle, Gen.32.24,25. whence, ſome take it, to ſignifie, a going up with rolling together; as the limbs, armes, and legs, of thoſe that wreſtle, are in a confuſed manner twiſted together. Others, becauſe a word, that ſignifies ſmall duſt, ſuch as men in wreſtling raiſe, and wraſtlers anciently made uſe of, comes from the ſame root, Deut. 28.24. Exod.9 9. ch.29 5. Nah.1.3. render it, go to duſt, or, flye up into duſt. See ch.5.24. but the former ſuits better with the Prophets compariſon.

like the lifting up of ſmoke] So moſt read it, and the Hebrew Commenter obſerves a defect, of the ſimilitudinary particle, which is not unuſual, Pſal. 11.1. ch. 21.8. but it needs not here; it is in the Hebrew, pride of ſmoke, as Pſal. 89.9. the pride of the Sea; where we ſay, the raging of the Sea: in which place it denotes, not barely a lifting up of the Sea-water; but a lifting of it, as with State, in great abundance, and with much force and might: ſo pride of ſmoke, implyes not barely, a lifting up of ſmoke, a ſmall pillar of ſmoke, aſcending up from ſome Town, or Forreſt fired, that mounts up amain, rolling to and fro, as it riſeth, and over-ſpreading all the ayr about and above the place, whence it riſeth; ſo that it darkeneth the skie, and prevails againſt the day-light: ſuch a ſmoke, as roſe from that bottomleſſe pit, Rev. 9. 2. and it may well therefore be rendred, with a vaſt pillar of ſmoke. See ver. 19.

V. 19. Through the wrath of the Lord of hoſts is the land darkned] Or, ſhall the land be darkened. But the ſtyle is prophetical, ſpeaking of things future, as already, in being. For he proceeds in purſuit of the calamitous condition, that ſhould betide this people, together with the ground of it.

Through the wrath of the Lord] Incenſed by their wickedneſs, ver. 18.

the land] Of Iſrael, the ten tribes, ver. 2,8. ch. 8.22.

darkened] The Chaldee rendreth it, deſolated; or, as others read it, burnt up; as Joel 2.3. but the Hebrew Doctors from the Arabick, expound it, darkned, as we do: darkned, that is, over-ſpread, and over-whelmed with calamities and afflictions, as ch. 8.22. & ver. 1. the effects of the fire, and ſmoke, mentioned, ver. 18. which he hath here an eye unto. For what divers Divines of note have here, of the darkneſſe of ſin and ignorance, and the like ſpiritual evils, ſeems to be wholly beſides the drift and ſence of the place.

and the people ſhall be as fuel of the fire] Heb. as meat, for it; as ver. 9. the people of the land ſo darkened, ſhall be conſumed by that fire of Divine wrath and vengeance, before mentioned, ver. 18.

no man ſhall ſpare his brother] Or, they ſhall not ſpare one another. For ſo the Hebrew phraſe is very commonly uſed, without reſpect to kindred, alliance, or any other the like relations, Gen. 26.31. Exod. 16.15. Numb. 14.4. Ezek. 47. 14. they ſhall, as men that are in the dark, and as it falleth out in a tumult, when an houſe, or city is on fire, and all is full of ſmoke, fall foul one upon another; and as if they wanted enemies from without, fall out among themſelves at home; or plunder one another; prey one upon another; devour and conſume one another, Gal. 5.25. See Jer. 13, 14. Yet, there may well be an emphaſis here in the word, brother, implying, that the neereſt bonds of nature ſhould not reſtrain men from wronging any, or preying upon any, in thoſe civil combuſtions among themſelves, or, in the times of difficulty and diſtreſſe otherwiſe. See ver. 19. The inteſtine broyls here deſcribed, ſome ſuppoſe to have been in thoſe concuſſions of the State, by the change of their Kings murthered ſucceſſively one by another, Shallum by Menahem, Pekajah by Pekah, and Pekah by Hoſhea, 2 King. 14.16,25,30. Of the laſt whereof, it may be not improbable. Of the reſt it cannot be, becauſe they were before the time of this Prophecy, which was delivered in Pekah's reign, and began to take effect ſhortly after, not long before his death. See ch. 8.4.

V. 20. And he ſhall ſnatch on the right hand, and be hungry; and he ſhall eat on the left hand, and they ſhall not be ſatisfied] They ſhall plunder and ſpoyl one another on every ſide; and yet never have enough; like men ſick of that diſeaſe, which they call the doggiſh deſire, who though they eat never ſo much, yet are no leſſe hungry, then as if they had fed, but in a dream, ch. 29.8. & 56. 11. Prov. 30. 15, 16. Howbeit, there want not, that expound it of extreamity of famine, that ſhould be in the land. So that as it is ſaid of thoſe, in time of ſcarcity, they did eat, but were not ſatisfied, having not ſufficient to free them from hunger, Hag. 1.5. So theſe perſons, with all that they could rap and rend from others, yet ſhould not get enough to anſwer natures neceſſity, But this ſeems beſide the ſence of the place.

And] Or, but: as ver. 10.

ſnatch] Heb. cut, or, cut away, or cut off; as ch. 53.5. rend, or take away by force, as Hab. 3.16. or, as ſome, knaw; becauſe of eating the ſpeech off.

on the right hand] right, and left; for this ſide, and that ſide; either ſide, or, any ſide, indifferently, Gen. 13.9. Pſal. 91. 7. Prov. 4.27.

hungry] Unſatisfied, in regard of their greedy deſire of more: they ſhall be in their rapines inſatiable, Eccleſ. 5.10.

eat] Spoyl, waſte, conſume, as we ſay, eat upon one. So Jer. 50.17. Aſhur ate upon him; made a ſpoyl, and prey of him.

they ſhall not be ſatisfied] A change of the number; as ver. 13. becauſe the former was ſpoken collectively.

they ſhall eat every man the fleſh of his own arme] That is, ſay ſome, for extream famine, they ſhall eat their own fleſh; as ch. 49.26. But rather, as before, they ſhall prey upon thoſe that are neereſt unto them, and whom they have moſt need of, untill they have even conſumed them. The like in another kind. See Jer. 19.9.

every man] Heb. man, only; for, each one, or every one: as ch. 14.18.

eat the fleſh] Devour the ſubſtance, conſume their means; as Mic. 3.3. they eat the fleſh of my people.

his own arm] His brethren, or neer kindred; as ver. 19. See Jer. 19.9. brethren, as arms, that belong to, and ſpread out from the ſame body; or, arms, thoſe, that might be means of ſtrength, and ſupport unto them; a mans ſtrength lying moſt in his arms: So an arm of fleſh, 2 Chr. 32.8. and, that makes fleſh his arm, Jer. 17.5. But the former ſeems moſt probable.

V. 21. Manaſſe Ephraim; and Ephraim Manaſſeh] The ſpeech being deficient, muſt be ſupplyed from the former. Manaſſeh ſhall eat, or devour Ephraim; and Ephraim ſhall eat, or devour Manaſſeh. The poſterity of theſe two, though brethren, the ſons of Joſeph, Gen. 41. 51,52. yet ſhall one help to ſpoyl and conſume another, being divided into Factions among themſelves, either ſtanding ſome for one head, and ſome for another; (as it falleth out uſually, when by treachery, or other evil courſes, thoſe aſpire to a crown, that have no right thereunto, 1 King. 16. 21, 22. and ſuch an one was Hoſhea, who ſlew, and ſucceeded Pekah, 2 King. 15.30.) or, ſome complying with the enemy, whom others oppoſe. See ch. 8.6.

and they together ſhall be againſt Judah] Or, as ſome read it; though they together be againſt Judah; or, though both of them riſe up together againſt Judah: whoſe brethren alſo they were, Gen. 49.8. the word, riſe up, is ſupplyed: as chap. 3.5. though they were divided among themſelves, yet ready enough to combine together againſt Judah; as thoſe, that were otherwiſe at enmity among themſelves, againſt Chriſt and his Church, Pſal. 2.2. & 83.5–8. ch. 7.2,5. Luk. 23.7, 8,11,12. Act. 4.27.

for all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] As before, ch. 5.25. ver. 12,17.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. WO unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, &c.] The firſt four verſes of this chapter would have been joyned to the former; as ſome report, that anciently they were. For they contain matter concerning the houſe of Iſrael, or the ten Tribes: and deliver in a charge, with a denunciation annexed unto it, againſt them, wherein they are attainted of oppreſſion, and wrong, in matter of judicature, as one of the reigning, and crying ſins among them, for which Gods hand was, and would ſtill be ſo heavy upon them. Yet ſome ſuppoſe them to concern the kingdome of Judah, which to me ſeems not ſo probable.

wo unto them] Some of the Jewiſh Commenters, and of ours alſo, read the words, as ſpoken by way of compellation: Ho they that, &c. (Ho they, for, O you: as o he, for, O thou, Job 18.4.) and ſo carry it on to thoſe words, ver. 3. what will ye do? the Syntax, ſo conceived, is very like that in Job. See ver. 5. & ch. 18.1.

that decree] Or, draw up. For the word ſignifies, properly, to portray, Ezek. 4.1. or paint, Ezek. 23.4. or, engrave, ch. 22. 16. or, write, ch. 30.8. or, delineate, circumſcribe, as with a compaſs; ſet, or limit out, as by line and level, Prov. 8.27,29. hence it is tranſlated to matter of judicature, Prov. 8. 15. and Some tranſlate it here, preſcribe: becauſe, judiciary ſentences, are not only wont to be drawn up and deſcribed, or engroſſed, but to preſcribe alſo what men are to do, or to endure; and circumſcribe them, or, keep them within compaſs. The charge therefore is againſt ſuch wicked Rulers and Judges, (for to thoſe in authority is this title given, in regard of their legiſlative, or ſentencing power, Gen. 49.10. Numb. 21.18. Jud. 5.9.) as enact injurious and cruel decrees, or ordinances; or deliver dooms and ſentence of that nature, to the grievous affliction and vexation of poor people, Pſal. 58. 1, 2. unrighteous decrees] Heb. decrees of iniquity, or, wrong; as Pſal. 36. 12. Or, of vexation, or, affliction; as Job. 5. 6. & 15,35. ch. 58. 9. & 59. 4. Such as wrongfully vex, moleſt, and afflict.

and that write grievouſneſs, which they have preſcribed] Or, and to the writers, that write grievous things. Or, unto thoſe, that writing write ſuch things: or, and to thoſe, that make to be written grievous things which they have preſcribed; that is, of their own preſcription. Or laſtly, to thoſe that write grievous things; which they, that is, the Judges have preſcribed, or appointed to be written. For, all theſe waies is this clauſe rendred.

and that write] Theſe, moſt Interpreters, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian, diſtinguiſh from the former, according to thoſe divers readings, before ſpecified. And ſome would have them to be the Scribes, or Regiſters, ſuch under-officers, as ſate, ſay they, at the Judges feet; (Gen. 49. 10. though that place, neither imports any ſuch thing, nor would make for them, if it did) drew up their ſentences, and entred them, Jer. 8. 8. Others, take them to be ſuch Scribes and Lawyers, as expounded the law to the people; or to thoſe in authority, when called upon for their advice, Mat. 2.4. Luk. 11.44–46. But it ſeems to me, to be no other, then a repetition of the former; in tearms every way equivalent, the one to the other: ſave, that a little more emphaſis may be in this latter branch; as if he had ſaid, that do not enact them onely, but enter them; cauſe them to be entred, that they may not be reverſed; but duely, and ſtraitly executed, Dan. 6. 8,9.

grievouſneſs] That is, decrees, or acts of grievance; as juſtice, for decrees, or acts of juſtice; juſt ones, Prov. 8.15. and ſo here grievance, for grievous ones. This word, and the former, as they are oft joyned together, Numb. 23.21. Job 4. 8. & 5.6. & 15. 35. Pſal. 7. 14. & 10.7. 55. 10. & 90.9. chap. 59. 4. Hab. 1. 3,13. ſo they are in effect and ſubſtance, the ſame. The Pſalmiſts words, rightly rendred, afford a pregnant parallel of this place, Pſal. 94. 20. Shall the judgement ſeat of vexations, have fellowſhip with thee? or, He that frames grievance, inſtead of an ordinance.

which they have preſcribed] The defect of the relative is, in Hebrew, very frequent, verſ. 3. Gen. 39.4. Exod. 13. 8. Pſal. 71. 18. ch. 42. 5. Yet I ſuppoſe, there is no neceſſity of ſupplying it here. Since that the words may be rendred well enough, as was, among the reſt, above hinted, and that writing, write grievous decrees. That are not affraid, or aſhamed to cauſe their cruel and injurious decrees to be entred, that they may remain, as a publike monument of their injuſtice and oppreſſion, upon record. There is a double emphaſis, both in the doubling of the middle letter, (in which form the verb is no where elſe found) and in the doubling of the word.

V. 2. To turn away the needy from judgement] Some read the words, To pervert the judgement ſeat, or the judgement of the needy. And ſomewhat the like phraſe of ſpeech is found, Prov. 17.23. where it is ſaid, that a wicked man draws a bribe out of his boſom, to pervert the way of judgement. And other places of the ſame nature might be produced; whereof, ſee on chap. 29. 21. Howbeit, ſince that concerning the word that they here render judgement-ſeat, or judgement, no other place yet appeareth, where it is ſo uſed, nor any ſuch like form produced; I leave it to the conſideration and judgement of the learned. Others yield it, To make to decline the needy from judgement. And indeed, the word ſignifies, in its firſt form, to decline or turn aſide: uſed of Balaams aſs, Numb. 22. 23. and applyed to matter of judicature, Exod. 23.2. In his next form, to make to decline, or turn aſide; uſed of Balaams cauſing his aſs to decline, or turn aſide, back again, in the ſame place. So that to turn aſide the needy from judgement, or from their ſuit, or cauſe, (for that the word primarily ſignifieth, Jer. 30.15.) is to ſtop them from proceeding in their cauſe, or bringing it to any good iſſue; as we uſe to ſay, to put them beſide it. The righteous, ſaith Solomon, knows (the meaning is not, takes notice of, or conſidereth the caſe or condition; as Pſal. 31. 7. & 41. 1. but hears, takes cognizance of) the cauſe, or ſuit of the needy, (the very words, here uſed,) but the wicked knows it not. He refuſeth to give them hearing, or to take cognizance of their cauſe, ch. 1. 23. Which if it be a wicked part in a Judge; how much more, upon hearing, to turn them away without relief; or, by an unjuſt doom, to force them from their right, as it is in the next branch more fully expreſſed. Howbeit it is well obſerved, by ſome, that the words may well be rendred, not, To turn aſide, &c. as denoting the end of that they were ſaid to do, verſ. 1. but in turning aſide. And ſo in the next branch, In taking away: as importing the manner how, and matter wherein, the vexation and grievance, before mentioned, was committed, and did conſiſt. See of the like uſe of this form, ch. 3. 8. Deut. 22. 21. & 28. 63. 1 Sam. 12. 17.

the needy] Heb. the attenuated, or, thin ones. See ch. 17.4. and to take away the right from the poor of my people] The ſame thing, in effect, repeated in other tearms; as the manner of our Prophet is; but with ſome emphaſis added to it.

take away] The word ſignifies, to ſnatch, pull, or tear away by force. As a mans cattle, or chattles are by an hoſtile hand, Deut. 28.31. Or the fleſh, or skin of a beaſt is torn away, or pulled off, by Beaſt, or Butcher, Mic. 3. 2.

the right] Heb. judgement. That which of right, ſhould, by judgment, have been aſſigned them. So Pſal. 9.4.

from the poor.] The word properly ſignifies afflicted; and is diſtinguiſhed from poor, Pſal. 35. 10. & 94. 21.

of my people] Hence, ſome would infer, that this prophecy ſhould not concern Iſrael, but Judah; becauſe the Prophet tearmeth them, his people. But the Prophet ſeems to ſpeak, rather, here in Gods perſon, then in his own; as chap. 3, 12,15: and God had his people, no doubt, as well in Iſrael, as in Judah, 1 King. 19.18. Nor doth God forbear, notwithſtanding their revolt from him, which made them, deſervedly, not to be deemed his people, Hoſ. 1. 9: Yet, in regard of his right of intereſt in them, their former profeſſion, and preſent duty, to ſtyle them ſtill his people, Hoſ. 4.6,12.

that widows may be a prey; and that they may rob the fatherleſs] He ſhews here, who the needy, and poor, or thin, and afflicted ones were, that he ſpake of before, as oppreſſed by them, in matters of judicature; the widows, and the fatherleſs. Fit objects, rather of mercy, ordinarily, in regard of their miſery, and want of help; and whom God, therefore, had given them ſpecial charge to ſee righted and relived; when they ſhould be wronged and oppreſſed, by others. See ch. 1. 17,23.

widows] That is, the houſes, lands, and livelyhood of ſuch.

their prey] Eſteeming what they ſtrip them of, as lawful purchaſe; like prey taken from an enemy in War, Ezek. 38. 12.

and that] A defect of the particle, intimating the end. See chap. 5. 11. & 7. 25.

rob] Make a ſpoil and prey of them; a warlike tearm, as the former; both joyned together, chap. 8. 1, 3. verſ. 6. The Aſſyrian was to do to them, what they did to their own people, ch. 8. 4.

V. 3. And what will ye do, &c.] Their wickedneſs went before; their puniſhment now follows. Thoſe that read the firſt words of the chapter, as uttered, in way of compellation; render theſe, Now what will ye do? &c. Of which uſe of the copulative, ſee on ch. 8. 1.

What will ye do in the day of viſitation?] How think ye to eſcape the juſt judgement of God? as Matth. 23. 33. Rom. 2. 3. Or, what courſe will ye take, when he comes to reckon with you? as Job 31. 14,23.

day of viſitation] Viſitation, and day of viſitation, is twofold; in mercy, or offers of mercy, Ruth. 1. 6. Luk. 1. 68. & 19. 44. And in wrath and judgement, Jer. 10.15. & 11. 23. Ezek. 10. 1. Hoſ. 9. 7. the latter is here meant; and therefore follows.

and in the deſolation, which ſhall come from far] Which ſhall be effected by a people that comes from a country, far remote: That is, by the Aſſyrian, ch. 7.17. & 8.7. & 9. 11. ver. 5,6. whoſe country lay far from the land of Iſrael, chap. 5. 26. & 7.18. a defect of the relative; as ver. 1. ch. 9. 18.

to whom will ye flee for help?] Ye ſhall be more helpleſs; then thoſe are, that in vain ſeek for help and relief, unto you. They have God to help them, Pſal. 9.9. & 10.14. & 68.5. but none ſhall be able to help you, againſt him, Hoſ. 5.13. & 7.11.

and where will ye leave your glory] Where will ye finde any place of ſecurity; where you may with ſafety, diſpoſe of your wealth, and your bravery, wherein ye now ſo much glory; chap. 28. 15. Amos 6. 13. But neither ſhall ye know then, where to beſtow it, nor ſhall it be able to ſtand you in any ſtead, Prov. 11.4. Ezek. 7.19. Jer. 22. 23. See chap. 15. 7. His expoſition is ſcarce worth the mentioning, who would have the words rendred, where will ye quarter your vaunting ſouldiers then? and requires the former paſſages to be underſtood, not of judiciary abuſes; but of wrongs done by enquartering of ſouldiers, and their Commanders; the ſence of thoſe calamities that thence accrued to his own countrymen, and many, at preſent, are ſenſible of with us; did ſo much tranſport him, that he is ſo bold, as confidently to avouch, that they do all wreſt the text beſides its genuine ſence, who interpret it otherwiſe. Of whom, notwithſtanding, I muſt needs acknowledg my ſelf one, till I ſee better ground for his expoſition thereof, then I yet do.

V. 4. Without me, they ſhall bow down under the priſoners, and they ſhall fall under the ſlain] This paſſage hath undergone many interpretations, which, in part, ariſe from an ambiguity in the firſt word of the verſe: That ſome ſuppoſe to conclude in it a pronoun, as our verſion renders it, and as ſometime it doth; as Hoſ. 13. 4. And theſe two waies expound it. Some, But for me: that is, If I did not ſupport them, they would come to extream miſery, either be murthered, or captived. Others, Without me; that is, becauſe they have left me, and I have withdrawn my ſelf from them, they will come unto ruine, Hoſ. 5.6. & 7.13. Or, without me; that is, any fault of mine, it is, that theſe evils befal them; their deſtruction is of themſelves, Hoſ. 13. 9. But the greater part of Interpreters, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian, conceive the negative, or exceptive particle, to be ſimple and ſingle, without the pronoun affixed to it; and ſo indeed it is moſt frequently uſed: and herein theſe agree; but in expoſition are much divided. To paſs by the reſt, and to point at ſome one, or two, that are deemed to carry more probability with them, then the reſt. Some would have it to be in nature of an oath; as if God did, in a defective kinde of ſpeech, declare, that no other way, or courſe, ſhould ſerve the turn with them, but to be either bound, or ſlain. But I finde not any oath in Scripture, conceived in the form, here uſed. Others render the words, But that ye bow down below the bound, and fall below the ſlain: That is, ſay they, there will be no way for you to ſave your ſelves, ſave by the moſt baſe ſubmiſſion to the enemy, that can be imagined; deſcribed here in an hyperbolical ſpeech, of bowing lower then men in bonds, and falling lower then the dead; not unlike that, ch. 57. 9. Thou didſt debaſe thy ſelf, even to hell: (which yet, ſome other, to allay, render it, As if they were bound; as if they were dead.) And they underſtand it of Ezekiahs ſubmiſs ſeeking to Sennacherib by his meſſengers, 2 King. 18. 14. But we need have no recourſe to ſuch rank exceſſes, where the letter will endure a familiar ſence. Nor doth the text ſeem to be ſo fitly applyed. Others therefore, retaining the ſame reading, underſtand it, not of any means of eſcape, or attempts to ſave themſelves; but that there will be nothing for them to do, or to endure; but as high and great as they now are, to ſtoop under their fellow-priſoners, thruſt, and crowded together; and to lye under ſlain, heaped, and piled one upon another. Laſtly, the ancient Greek, and old Latine, referring it to the two firſt branches of the verſe, next before-going, (the former whereof, ſome here repeat) render the words, That ye may not be bowed under bonds, or fall among the ſlain: As if it were ſaid, What will ye do then? or to whom will ye flee for help? &c. That ye may not be either taken priſoners, or put to the ſword? As much as to ſay, as, ye ſhall by no ſhift of your own, or help from others, be able to eſcape, either the one, or the other. And this to me ſeems to be the plaineſt ſence of the place, and moſt agreeable to the tenour of the context. Only, for under bonds, would rather be among the bound, or priſoners; as after among the ſlain: or, to come more neerly, and exactly home to the proper ſenſe of the particle; in the place of the bound; in the place of the ſlain; as, Am I in place of God? Gen. 30. 2. & 50. 19 See verſ. 16.

they ſhall bow down] Heb. he ſhall bow down. Indefinitely, uſed for one, or any one, or each one of them, bow down, as ch. 2. 20. & 6. 2.

priſoners] Heb. priſoner. Collectively, as ch. 24. 22. & 42. 7.

and] Or, or: As Exod. 21. 15. Some of them ſhall be carried away captive, ſome killed.

fall] To the ground; as the blood, and bodies of men are wont to do, 1 Sam. 26. 20. & 31. 1. 2 Sam. 1. 19, 25. & 3. 34, 38. Judg. 3. 25.

ſlain] By the enemy.

For all this, his anger is not turned away, but his hand is ſtretched out ſtill] The cloſe of the denunciation againſt Iſrael begun ch. 9. 8. and continued hitherto; where it is ſhut up with a commination of further wrath, again repeated. Of which, ſee before, on ch. 5. 25. & 9. 12.

V. 5. O Aſſyrian] Becauſe the Aſſyrian king, had been formerly declared, to be the inſtrument that God would uſe, as well for the ſcourging of Judah, chap. 7. 17, 20. as for the ſweeping away of Iſrael, ch. 9. 11, 14. God, therefore, by the Prophet, for the ſupport and comfort of his faithful ones, thoſe of Judah eſpecially, inſerts here a denunciation of deſtruction to befal that king, when God had done his work by him; and a gracious promiſe of deliverance of his people from him, and from thoſe evils, that either by him they had ſuſtained; or were likely further to ſuſtain.

O Aſſyrian] Or, Ho Aſſyrian; as ſpoken by way of compellation, c. 55. 1. as calling upon him, to come, and take his Commiſſion; and undertake his charge, ver. 2. And ſo moſt of the Jewiſh Commenters. Others, and ſo ſome of them, Ah, or, Alas, as delivered in way of commiſeration. God, thereby, expreſſing his grief for thoſe calamities, that, by the Aſſyrian, were to be inflicted on his people; ch. 1. 4, 5, 24. Others, by way of denunciation; as v. 1. Wo to the Aſſyrian. See ch. 18. 1.

Aſſyrian] Heb. Aſhur. The name of Shems ſecond ſon, Gen. 10. 22. from him was ſo named, the country he lived in, Gen. 10. 11. and his iſſue, Pſal. 83. 8. It is here put for the king of that people, and country: and more ſpecially for Sennacherib, together with his forces: as ver. 24. Ezek. 31. 3.

the rod of mine anger] Or, my rod of anger. The rod, or inſtrument, that God is wont to make uſe of, for the chaſtizing, and puniſhing of thoſe with whom he is angry, chap. 30. 31. ſo his rod of wrath, or, wrathful rod, Lam. 3. 1.

and the ſtaff in their hand, is mine indignation] That is, as ſome expound it, all the power they have to ſmite, and afflict, is mine indignation, wherewith they come armed. Staff, for power; as Pſal. 110, 2. chap. 14. 5. Others read it, though, or albeit the ſtaff in their hand be mine indignation. The copulative, for the diſcretive; as Hoſ. 5. 2. That is, albeit I make uſe of him; yet wo be to him, verſ. 12. Others again, For the ſtaff, which is in their hand, is my wrath: as rendring a reaſon of the former branch: the copulative, for the cauſative: as Pſal. 60. 11. Our two ancient verſions ſeem to have come neereſt the right. They render the whole verſe thus, O Aſhur, which art, or wo alſo to Aſhur, which is the ſtaff of my wrath; and in whoſe hand is the rod of my indignation, or my puniſhment. Which verſion is alſo backed with the authority of ſome of the Jewiſh writers; and with a ſmall ſupply, will thus, I ſuppoſe, exactly come home to the original. Wo to the Aſſyrian, who is the rod of mine anger, or my rod of anger: and the ſtaff in their hand, (that is, in the hand of him, and his forces) is the ſtaff of mine indignation, or my ſtaff of indignation. The relative, is wanting; as verſ. 1. the pronoun put for the verb ſubſtantive; as ch. 9. 15. the word ſtaff is ſupplyed, in the latter member, as is uſual in the like form, Dan. 4. 33. his hairs were grown like eagles; (for feathers of eagles) and his nails, like birds: that is, as nails, or claws (for the ſame word, in Hebrew, ſignifies either) of birds. See the like alſo, verſ. 10. I ſhall add what one of the Jewiſh writers hath, becauſe I finde it followed, and approved by ſome of ours. He thus renders it, The ſtaff that is ſent, or that is to be ſent (ſuppplyed from verſ. 6.) into their place, that is, into the land of the Iſraelites) in mine indignation. It is true that the word ſignifying an hand, is in Hebrew, ſometime uſed for a place, Deut. 23. 12. Jer. 6. 3. but that ſeems not to have place here. The ſame thing is related again in the latter branch, that was mentioned in the former; as verſ. 1. but with ſome aggravation. For the ſtaff ſeems an heavier, and ſorer inſtrument of correction then a rod, which may be but a twig: And indignation a degree above anger, chap. 30. 30. Mal. 1. 4. There is a ſtaff to ſtay, ſee ch. 3. 1. and a ſtaff to ſtrike with, Numb. 22. 27. and this latter, is the ſtaff here alluded to. See ch. 9. 4.

V. 6. I will ſend him] The commiſſion, wherewith God would furniſh the Aſſyrian king to go up, and proceed with, againſt his own people for their ſins and exceſſes. Not that God did intimate any ſuch matter unto him; (albeit he pretended as much, ch. 36. 10) but that God would by his ſecret, & unſearchable providence, ſo diſpoſe things, that he ſhould, though upon other grounds, and for other ends, invade that people, ver. So 2 King. 17. 25. & 24. 2. 2 Chr. 33. 11. & 36. 17.

againſt an hypocritical nation] Or, rather, a prophane nation, or, a polluted people. See ch. 9. 17.

and againſt the people of my wrath] Which, by their wickedneſſe, are become liable to wrath, and with whom, for the ſame, I am highly diſpleaſed, ch. 47. 6. & 57. 17.

will I give him a charge] By a ſecret inſtinct; and an unſeen, yea, unperceived, but efficacious diſpoſal, Jer. 34. 22. & 49. 14. & 50. 21. 2 Sam. 16. 10.

to take the ſpoyl, and to take the prey] Heb. to ſpoyl the ſpoyl, and prey on the prey: as Ezek. 38. 12. that is, to ſpoyl, and plunder to the purpoſe. For ſuch repetitions, either in the ſame term, or, in words of the ſame notion, are wont to amplifie, and exaggerate: as Pſal. 76. 5. they ſlept their ſleep; that is, were caſt into a deep ſleep: and 1 King. 1. 40. they rejoyced with great joy, that is, exceeding great joy: and Jer. 33. 11. the voyce of joy, and the voyce of gladneſs; that is, of much rejoycing. See ver. 16. And we have here an interpretation of the name, given to the Prophets ſon, Maher-ſhalal-haſh-baz, ch. 8. 3. and a juſt retaliation of judgment, on thoſe wicked wretches reproved, and threatned before, ver. 2. a ſpoyling of them by ſtrangers, who had ſpoyled their own brethren. The ſpoyls that they had taken, together with the reſt of their ſubſtance, being ſurprized, and carried away by the enemy: and that fulfilled, that is afterward threatned, to thoſe alſo, that now ſpoyl them; Wo to thee, that ſpoyledſt, when thou waſt not ſpoyled; when thou ceaſeſt to ſpoyl, (being interrupted by the enemy) thou ſhalt then be ſpoyled thy ſelf, ch. 33. 1.

and to tred them down like mire in the ſtreet] Heb. to lay him (to wit, the people before mentioned) as the mire, or, dirt of the ſtreets. So Pſal. 18. 42. ch. 41. 21. Mic. 7. 10 not to make havock of their goods only; but to ſeize on their perſons, and to uſe them in moſt cruel and deſpightful manner; to beat them down, and trample on them, and even batter them to pieces, ch. 28. 3, 18. 2 King. 9. 33. Dan. 7. 7. & 8. 7. which barbarous cruelty, though God approved not in them; yet was he pleaſed to make uſe of, for the puniſhing of this prophane and wicked people, Lam. 3. 34--39.

V. 7. Howbeit he meaneth not ſo, neither doth his heart think ſo] He intendeth nothing leſs, whatſoever he pretend, ch. 36. 7, 19. then the doing of my work, and the fulfilling of my will.

Howbeit] Or, Yet. Heb. And: as ver. 4. Hoſh. 1. 10.

meaneth not] Heb. imagineth not. For it ſignifieth properly, to conceive an image, ſimilitude, or likeneſſe of a thing in the imaginative faculty: A term, taken from artificers, painters, limners, gravers, or builders, that are wont to draw models of thoſe works, that they intend to ſhew their skill in. See ch, 14. 24. & ch. 40. 18, 25.

neither doth, &c.] The ſame thing conceived, and expreſſed in other terms.

but it is in his heart to deſtroy, and cut off Nations, not a few] His intent and purpoſe is, only, to ſatisfie his cruel, enormous, and ambitious deſires, by conqueſt of Countries, and making havock of people. Which yet God is ſaid to cut off by him, ch. 9. 14.

it is in his heart] That is, it is his purpoſe: as 1 Sam. 2. 35. 1 Chr. 28. 2.

V. 8. For he ſaith] In his heart, or, to his people, ſay the Rabbines; as Lamech to his wives, Gen. 4. 23. but the former rather; He thinks with himſelf: as, the fool ſaith in his heart, Pſal. 14. 1. and, I ſaid in my proſperity, Pſal. 30. 6. For, to God the heart ſpeaks; and the thought of it he hears, Matth. 9.3,4. Heb.4.12,13.

Are not my Princes altogether Kings] A vaunting ſpeech, attributed to the Aſſyrian King, expreſſing his inward inſolency, arrogancy, and impiety; much of it in effect related again, as delivered from Sennacherib by his Meſſengers to Ezekiah, ch.36.9,15,18–20. & 37.10–13,24,25. whereby it appears, that Sennacherib and the Invaſion made by him, into the land of Judah, even unto Jeruſalem, is here principally pointed at, ch.36.1,2. His meaning in this branch ſeems to be, that they held now of him, as their Soveraign; and ſerved under him, as their Commander, who had before been abſolute Kings; but having been ſubdued by him, were now but as his Princes. And he might well be termed a King of Kings, as Nebuchadnezzar is ſtyled, Ezek.26.7. Dan.3.37. or, that his Princes and Favourites, were for place, power, and authority, as good, and as great, as Kings; ſo Rabſhakeh vaunts of them, as the meaneſt of thoſe, that took charge under him, being Compeers with Ezekiah, ch.36.9. who at every word, therefore, in mention of him, names him, The great King, chap.36. 4, 13.

V. 9. Is not Calno as Carchemiſh?] Have not I ſubdued all theſe kingdomes, and places, as well one, as another?

Calno] Called Calneh, Gen.10.10. & Amos 6. 2. one of Nimrods great Cities. Some have ſuppoſed it to be the ſame with Caliniſum, a city mentioned by Ammiane, l. 23. ſcituate upon Euphrates: but that ſeems to have been by a ſlip of ſome Scribes pen, Calliniſum, for Callinicum, as in other Authors it is found termed. It is rather therefore deemed to have been that which was in later times, termed, Cteſiphon, ſometime the head city of the Parthian kingdom, ſituate upon Tigris; the region thereabout from the ancient name of it, being commonly called Chalonitis, Strabo, l.11. & 16. & Plinie, l.6. c.26.27.

Carchemiſh] Of it, ſee 2 Chr. 39. 20. a City ſcituate upon Euphrates, Jer. 46.2. called in later times, Cercuſium.

is not Hamath] This ſome take to be Amathus in Arabia, mentioned by Herodotus, l. 2. & 3. But others, rather, take it for a Town, belonging to Syria, and ſcituate not far from ſome of the others, here mentioned; all neer upon Euphrates, 1 Chr.18.3,9. thence the Hamathites, deriving their pedigree from Canaan, Gen.10.18. 1 Chr. 1.16. it is mentioned, as a boundarie of the land of promiſe, Numb. 34.8. Joſh. 13. 5. 1 King.8.65. 1 Chr.13.5. and as Joſeph the Jew witneſſeth in his Antiquities, l.1. c.7. it retained this name with the Natives unto his times; though by the Greeks and Macedonians, termed Epiphania, from Antiochus Epiphanes, the re-edifier of it. See ch.63.19.

as Arpad] Of this place, are the Arvadites ſuppoſed to have been; joyned with the Amathites, both of the poſterity of Cham and Canaan, Gen. 10.18. called by Ptolemy Arodites, and placed in Syria: See ch.36. 19. & 37. 13. It is by Joſeph the Jew, termed Arphas; by Iſidore, Arſa, and in the Regiſter of the Roman Empire, Areſa.

is not Samaria as Damaſcus?] Of theſe, ſee chap. 7. 8,9. & 8. 4.

V. 10. As my hand hath found the Kingdoms of the idols] He promiſeth himſelf conqueſt of Judah and Jeruſalem, in ſpight of God himſelf, from the ſucceſſe that he attained againſt other kingdoms, cities, and countries, maugre all the power of their tutelary gods, ch.36.15.20. & 37.10–12.

my hand] My power, my might; as Deut. 8.17. Judg. 7.2. See ver. 13.

hath found] Hath reached, gotten, taken, ſubdued; as Levit. 12. 8. & 14. 21. Numb. 32. 23. Prov. 1. 13. So verſ. 14.

idols] Heb. idol, collectively. See ch.2.18. ſo he accounteth the gods that other Kingdoms and Nations worſhipped, becauſe they were not able to protect their people againſt him and his forces, ch.46.7.

and whoſe graven images] Heb. and their graven images, for, and thoſe, whoſe graven images. A defect of the antecedent: as Ruth 1.16,17. 2 Chr.1.4. or, though their graven images; and, for, though: as Gen.8.21. See on ver.5.

did excell them of Jeruſalem and Samaria] Heb. were before Jeruſalem, and Samaria: before, for, better, more excellent; as Prov.22.1. Eccl.7.1. Heb.12.24. Jeruſalem, and Samaria, for, the idols of Jeruſalem, and Samaria. Of which manner of defective ſpeech, ſee on ver.5. Thus this blaſphemous beaſt, not only ranketh and rangeth God among idols; as ver. 11. 2 Chr. 32.19. but preferreth the baſe idols of other people before him, who is the only true God, Jer.10. 3–7,8–10.

V. 11. Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria, and her idols; ſo do to Jeruſalem, and her idols?] Or, May I not? I will aſſuredly do it: or, who can hinder me from doing it? why ſhould I not do the one, as well as the other? Of the ſucceſs of his predeceſſors Tiglath-Pileſer, and Shalman-eſer, againſt Samaria, ſee 2 King.15.19. & 17.5,6. for what was done by them, he takes to himſelf, as ſucceeding them in their power, and having no leſſe then they had. All he eſteems idols, in reſpect of his god Mithras, the Sun, whom the Aſſyrians worſhipped.

her idols] The latter term here uſed, comes of a word, that ſignifies to put to pain, and grief. Whence Jabez had his name, 1 Chr.4.9. and idols, or falſe gods, are deſervedly ſo called; not only becauſe God is vexed, and grieved by them, with thoſe that leave him, to adore them, and adhere to them, Pſal.78.58. ch.63.10. Ezek.6.9. but, alſo, becauſe they put thoſe that ſerve them, and truſt in them, to much pain; but can do them no good, Pſal. 16. 4. ſo he made account God would do with Jeruſalem, ch.36.12,15. but the iſſue proved otherwiſe, ch. 37.35,36. and he ſpeaks of God, as if he were the God of that Nation alone, who in power, and right, is God, and Lord of the whole world, Pſal.47.2,7,8.

V. 12. Wherefore it ſhall come to paſſe, that] Heb. And it ſhall be: as ch.3.24.

Wherefore] Heb. And. The copulative for the illative; as ch.3.17. & 9.11. as connecting together his pride, and his fall; as the cauſe, and effect, the one of the other, Prov. 11. 2. & 16.18. & 18.12. or, But, the copulative for the adverſative, as Pſal.64.7. as croſſing his preſumptuous expectation, with prediction of a ſad and unexpected iſſue: or, For, as ſome; the copulative for the cauſative: as ch.9.13. as having reference to ver.1. and rendring a reaſon, to the wo there denounced againſt Aſhur.

when the Lord hath performed his whole work upon Mount Sion] When he hath ſufficiently chaſtiſed his own people, (for with them, he uſually beginneth, Jer.25.18. 1 Pet. 4. 17.) he will proceed to reckon with him, and burn the rod, wherewith he chaſtiſed them, Jer.30.11,16,21,23. Lam.2.17. & 4.21.

the Lord hath] For, I have. For it is the Lord that ſpeaks it, the noun for the pronoun: as ch.2.1. with ch.6.1. ch.7.3. 2 Tim.1.18.

performed] Heb. perfected, or, finiſhed, Lam. 2.17. Zach. 4. ver. 9.

his whole work] All that he intends to do, for the chaſtiſing of his people, ch.28.21. & 40.2.

upon mount Sion, and on Jeruſalem] As ch.1.27. in the ſtrait ſiege of her by Sennacheribs forces for ſome time, and the ſpoyl made of the Country round about her, chap. 36. 1, 2. & 37. 3.

I will puniſh the fruit of the ſtout heart of the King of Aſſyria] I will puniſh him, for this his impious, and preſumptuous boaſting; and his attempts againſt my people, chap. 37. 23, 29.

puniſh] Heb. viſit upon them. Puniſh him for them: as Exod. 20.5. ch.26.14. Jer.50.18. the phraſe implyeth, that God neither chaſtiſeth, nor puniſheth; but with due conſideration, and full cogniſance of the crime, or fault, for which he doth either, Gen.11.5. & 18. 21. and would have men to do the like, Deut.13.14.

the fruit of the heart] For, from the heart, iſſueth, what comes forth at the mouth, Matth.12.34.35. & 15.18,19. See ch.59.13.

ſtout heart] Heb. greatneſſe of heart, ch.9.9.

King] Sennacherib, ch.36.1. & 37.36–38.

and the glory of his high looks] Heb. the bravery, (ch.3.18. that is, the pride; becauſe bravery both breeds, and bewrays pride) of the loftineſs of his eyes, wherein pride alſo appears, ch. 2.11,12.

V. 13. For he ſaith] Heb. Becauſe he hath ſaid.

by the ſtrength of my hand] See ver.10.

I have done it] A defect of the pronoun: as ch.5.29.

and by my wiſdome] What God had done by him, and his Anteceſſors, as his inſtruments, ch. 37.26,27. that, he arrogates to himſelf, and aſcribes to his own power, and policy. That, which every mans heart is by nature, over-prone to, Deut.8.17. Amos 6.13. Hab.1.16.

for I am prudent] Heb. I underſtanding. I am one of wiſdome, and underſtanding, (Gen.41.33.) as well as of power, able to diſpoſe mine affaires, to the beſt advantage for my ſelf. See the like vaunting of wiſdome, ch. 19.11. Jer. 8. 8. but eſpecially, Ezek.28.3.

and I have removed the bounds of the people] and, or, therefore; as ch.9.11. ver.12. By my prudent, and politike carriage, and managing of my deſigns, I have enlarged my dominions, and took away thoſe bounds, wherewith other kingdoms and territories were before liſted and limited, as therewith ſevered one from another; and excluding others from encroaching and entring in, upon them, Act. 17.26. they are ſaid to remove the bound, that encroach upon the poſſeſſions of others, Prov.22.28. Hoſ.5.10.

and have robbed their treaſures] As the enlargement of his territories, by the ſubduing of other Countries, and adjoyning them, to his own; ſo the increaſe of his wealth, by finding out, and making ſeizure of their hidden treaſures, reſerved for future uſes, he aſcribes as well to his policy, as his power. So Ezek.38.4,5.

robbed] So is the word rendred, 1 Sam. 23. 1. but in this place it would, rather, be ſome other-wayes rendred; becauſe the Aſſyrian king is perſonated, as relating his own acts, and atchievements: I have ſeized, or, ſpoyled, or preyed upon; made a ſpoyl of their treaſures. So it is rendred, Judg. 2. 14. ſpoylers, that ſpoyled them: and ch.17.14. that ſpoyl us: and Hoſ. 13.15. he ſhall ſpoyl the treaſure.

treaſures] Heb. preparations, or prepared things. For the word it comes of, ſignifies to prepare, and the Hebrews uſe the feminine, commonly for the neuter: and it imports therefore ſuch matters of ſpecial uſe and worth, as are wont to be treaſured up and reſerved, againſt times of neceſſary uſe and employment; ſuch as the hidden treaſures, that God promiſed, to make Cyrus maſter of, ch. 45. 3. But becauſe the word is no where elſe found in this form; and the Jewiſh Criticks, the Maſorets, obſerve ſome miſreading, or miſ-writing rather, in one letter of it; and yet whether letter we take, the ſence will be the ſame; one that taketh upon him to be a great Critick, would inſtead of this feminine ſubſtitute a maſculine form, that ſignifieth, as he ſaith, rams, or bel-weathers; but indeed, rather, great he-goats, Jer. 50. 8. diſtinguiſhed from rams, as oft, Num.7. So Jer.51.40. put here, ſaith he, for Princes and Potentates: and ſo oft-times they are, chap.34.6. Zach.10.3. and again, becauſe one letter in the other word rendred commonly, robbing, or, ſpoyling, is of an ambiguous ſound, like that of Sibboleth, and Shibboleth, Judg.12.6. according to the pointing of it; nor is the word read elſe-where with that ambiguous character; he takes occaſion thereby, to ſollicite the reading, and to bring it home, by aſpiring the ſecond letter, to another word much more ambiguous, uſed Ezek.39.2. which, becauſe ſome render there perſwade, he would have this here alſo ſo to ſignifie, & ſo this branch of the Aſſyrians ſpeech, to have reference to his policy, as the next to his power: as if he had ſaid, by my wiles I have perſwaded great Potentates to yeeld to me; and by my might, I have pulled them down from their Thrones. But not to inſiſt on the improbability of the ſence here intended, as coming from the mouth of one that ſtood ſo much upon his valour and power; and whoſe prudence and policy, would ſeem to look another way: it is overmuch boldneſſe thus to mangle the text, and to force in ſuch ſences, as the words will not admit.

and I have put down the Inhabitants] put down, or, pulled, or, thrown down. Heb. made to deſcend, or, come down, Jer.49.16. Obad.4. or, as a learned man of late, ſtricken down: as beaſts, the great ſort of them, eſpecially, are wont to be by the butcher or ſlaughter-man; and conſequently ſlain. So Jer. 51. 40. to which purpoſe they are ſaid to deſcend, or come down to the ſlaughter, chap. 34. 6. Jer. 48. 15. & 50. 27. Hag. 2. 22.

the Inhabitants] Heb. the ſitters: thoſe that ſit, or, inhabit, as ch.5.3,9. I have made havock of the Countries ſubdued by me. Howbeit, here, by ſitters, ſome ſuppoſe, may be underſtood, ſuch, as ſit aloft, as ch.6.1. & 9.7. and ſo the meaning ſhould be, ſuch as ſit on the Throne of State. See ch. 13.20. I have pulled them down from their regal power, and made them my vaſſels, ver.8.

as a valiant man] Here alſo the Jewiſh Criticks obſerve ſome diverſity about the text. For inſtead of that which our printed copies hold out, they with detraction of one letter, put in the margine, as ſo to be read, cabbir; which word ſignifies either ſtrong, and mighty, as moſt take it; or copious, and much; as ſome other render that word. This reading, the Jewiſh Commenters following, and of ours, alſo, not a few, refer the word here, to Inhabitants, and expound it; Some, thoſe, that ſit, or dwell in a ſtrong place: and ſo the meaning ſhould be; I will pull, or throw down thoſe that dwell, or ſit moſt firmly, that have the ſtrongeſt, or ſureſt ſeats, or places of abode. Others, many Inhabitants, as the word is uſed, ch.16.14. and whereas it might be objected that the word is ſingular, whereas that which it is joyned unto, is plural; and that the adjective is ſeldome ſet before its ſubſtantive; it is anſwered, in defence of this verſion, that the word may be taken here ſubſtantively; as the word of contrary ſignification, for the moſt part, is; and this alſo, Job 31.25. and ſo it may here be rendred, a multitude of Inhabitants, or ſitters: to which might be added; that ſometime, though ſeldome, the adjective leadeth. See on ch.9.6. Wonderful. Thus, they that follow the reading, as they term it; others follow the writing, as it is expreſſed in the text; and render it (not without the authority alſo of a Rabbine of great note) in the ſame manner, that our Bibles do, and the old Latine: as a mighty, or, a valiant man. Yea, ſome of the Jewiſh Interpreters, would make a medly of both expreſſions, imagining the term here uſed, to be compoſed of two words, cabbir, and abbir: which both they conceive to ſignifie in ſubſtance the ſame; and to import a man of extraordinary might. But this expoſition of that, which the text holds out, is controlled by the forementioned Author. Who upon a general ſurvey of all the places, where the word abbir is found, ſhews, that it is, if not for the moſt part, yet very frequently, taken, ſubſtantively: and that it is oftentimes uſed, for a great bull, or, an ox, it is apparent by theſe places, Pſal.22.12. & 50.13. & 68.30. ch.34.7. in which ſence, he ſuppoſeth it to be here uſed; as if he ſhould ſay, I have ſtricken down, and laid along the people of thoſe places, which with my forces I entred upon, like a company of oxen, or great bulls. The word is ſingular, but taken collectively; as oxe, ch.1.3.

V. 14. And my hand hath found] Hath gotten, or ſeized on. See before, v. 11,13. Yet there ſeems ſome emphaſis here in the word, in comparing the treaſures of the lands, ſurprized by him, to a birds neſt, or eggs in a neſt, that are taken, without pains; all the labour is but to find them.

as a neſt] Or, as in a neſt; as birds, or eggs in a neſt, Deut. 22.6,7. a defect of the particle: as Job 1.13.

the riches] Or, wealth. The word ſignifies primarily, ſtrength, whence, men of might; able to bear arms, Gen.47.6. Deut.3.18. Joſh.10.7. in the next place wealth, Ruth. 2. 1. Job 20.15. becauſe that is eſteemed the ſtrength and ſupport of an eſtate, either publike, or private: they ſeem to ſtrain the text needleſly, who read it, as a birds neſt, the neſt of their riches: the particle is obſerved to be divers times uſed, as a note of the accuſative. So 2 Sam.2.30. Jer.40.2.

of the people] Heb. peoples. Of many people: as chap. 2. 3. and as one gathering eggs, that are left] To wit, by the dam; forſaking them for fear.

have I gathered all the earth] I have conquered the greateſt part of the world, commonly known, and brought it under my command; ſo moſt Interpreters. But the ſpeech is here of ſeizing of wealth, and gathering of treaſure; and that with as much eaſe and ſmall difficulty, as a man would take eggs out of a birds-neſt. I ſhould therefore rather chooſe to read it, have I gathered the wealth of all the land: the whole country whereſoever I come; or, (as in a vaunting manner, ſuch a vain-glorious boaſter might ſpeak) of all the earth, of the whole world. The like defect, and ſupply, from the foregoing words, See Gen. 1.16. Job 31.3. & 36.32.

and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped] None, that did ſo; that is, none, that durſt ſo do. There was none that durſt ſtir, in way of oppoſition, againſt my forces, when I ſent them to ſurprize and take away their treaſures, 1 King.20.5,6.

move the wing] He perſiſts in his former ſimilitude from birds, that are wont to ſtrike with the wing, at thoſe, that offer to diſturb them in their ſitting, and to meddle with their eggs, or young under them; or, when they are driven off their neſt, yet hover and flutter to and fro about thoſe that take them away; and in a mournful manner, cry and make a noyſe after them.

moved] did move, or, wag, for, durſt move, or, wag: as, did lift up head, for, durſt lift up head, Zach. 1.21.

the wing] For, with the wing. So ſome of the Jewiſh Criticks, becauſe the verb is not tranſitive; or, as ſome therefore, no wing that wagged. Yet other of ſome ſay, that theſe neutrals have ſometime a tranſitive notion: as the like to this, chap. 1.30.

or] Heb. and, as ch.8.19.

opened the mouth] See the like expreſſions, Exod.11.7. Joſh. 10. 21.

or peeped] Spoken not of the young, as ſome would have it; but of the dam, bemoaning them. See chap. 8. 19. and 38. 14.

V. 15. Shall the ax boaſt it ſelf againſt him, that heweth therewith?] Hitherto were the Aſſyrian kings inſolent and arrogant boaſtings. Which, in theſe words, the Prophet controlleth, ſhewing the unreaſonableneſſe, yea the abſurdity and ſenceleſneſſe of them. Is it equall, or fit, that thoſe, who are but Gods inſtruments, (as all, even the wicked themſelves are, ver. 5. Jer.51.20.) and have not their action only from him, (as the ax, or ſaw, from the workman; the rod, or ſtaff, from him that ſmites with it) but their power alſo to act; and fitneſſe for ſuch uſe, as they are applyed unto, and employed in; ſhould ſuch advance themſelves againſt him, whoſe inſtruments, and ſuch inſtruments, they are, as can do nothing without him; and without ſuch power as they have received from him? Joh.19.11.

againſt him] Or, as Some, above him. The word will bear either: againſt him, by threatning to deal with him, as with the idols of other people, ver.11. above him, by arrogating to himſelf what God hath done by him, ver.13.

or ſhall the ſaw magnifie it ſelf againſt him that ſhaketh it?] Or, moveth it. The ſawyer, that ſaweth with it. An inſtance of the like ſtamp with the former.

as if the rod ſhould ſhake it ſelf, againſt them that lift it up]

Or, according to ſome, as if the rod moved him, that lifted it up; or, (to paſſe by many other verſions) as ſome others, when one ſhaketh the rod, (that is, when the rod is ſhaken) ſhould it boaſt, or magnifie it ſelf, againſt thoſe that lift it up? a ſupply from the former branches, neither unuſual, nor unfit. See ver. 14. Some of the Jewiſh Doctors make it, an application unto God, and the king of Aſſyria; as he being the rod, ver. 5. and God the perſon, that ſmote by him: but by way of excellency, ſpoken of in the plural number: as Joſh. 24. 19. Eccl. 5. 8. and the ground of the action, proceeding not from the rod, but from the hand that ſmites with it.

as if the ſtaff ſhould lift up it ſelf, as if it were no wood] Or, as if the ſtaff ſhould lift up it ſelf, as it it were not wood: and this verſion might peradventure receive ſome ſtrength from that of the Eſtrich in Job, Job 39. 16. She hardeneth her ſelf towards her young ones, as if they were not hers; or, as to not hers; ſave that there is a particle in the original there, which is not here. But ſee ch. 40. 24. where the Syntax ſeemeth the ſame with this here. The Hebrew hath no more but this; as lifting up a ſtaff, or, when one lifteth up a ſtaff, not wood: which ſome render, as if the ſtaff did lift up (either it ſelf, or him, that held it) and were not wood; or, as if the ſtaff, becauſe it is lift up, were not wood: or, as if the ſtaff ſhould lift up it ſelf, againſt not wood; that is, againſt him, who is not wood; but able to move, and ſtir of himſelf. The Jewiſh Writers, when the ſtaff is lift up, it is not the wood; to wit, that lifteth it up; but the man that holdeth it. Some of ours; when the ſtaff is lift up, the wood is nothing: no regard is had of it, be it wood, or ought elſe; but of him that ſmiteth with it. Others laſtly, or, when the rod is lift up, is it not wood? doth it not ſtill remain, as it was before, a ſorry piece of wood, unable to ſtirr, or, to act ought of it ſelf? and this laſt, without any ſtrain at all flowes moſt fitly from the text. So the heathen idols are vilified, that they are no better, many of them, then a parcell of ſearwood, ch. 44. 13—20. Jer. 2. 27. Hoſ. 4. 12. in like manner, the king of Aſſyria, though raiſed up by God, and uſed as a baſtinado, to cudgel his own people and others with, yet is ſtill a poor, ſorry, mortal, corruptible creature, ſuch another piece of fleſh, as before he was, Pſal. 82. 6, 7. & 146. 3, 4. Eccleſ. 6. 10. ch. 2. 22. Ezek. 28. 9. But all theſe expoſitions and readings alſo, a late Writer of great note controlleth, conceiving them all to be miſtaken in the word, harrim, which they take for a verb, ſignifying, to lift up; when as indeed it is a noun, that ſignifieth mountains; and renders the words, as if the ſtaff were mountains, (applyed uſually to men haughty and high-minded) not wood. I ſhall, having propounded it, leave it to the judgment of others.

V. 16. Therefore ſhall the Lord, the Lord of hoſts, &c.] His folly convinced, and laid forth; his doom from God follows: to wit, the ſudden, and unexpected deſtruction of the main body of his forces: wherein he ſo much confided; and whereof he ſo much boaſted. Of the titles here given God, ſee ch. 3. 1. Howbeit, it is by ſome of the Jewiſh Writers well obſerved, that the ſtyle is for more ſpecial end, here given unto God, to wit, to intimate, that the ſucceſſes, which the Aſſyrian kings, as well as others, had in the field, was not from themſelves; but from him, who is their Lord, and the Lord of hoſts: and from him therefore, both ſafety, and victory in fight is, Pſal. 24. 8. & 33. 16, 17. & 44. 3, 5, 6. & 60. 11, 12. & 144. 10. Prov 21. 30, 31.

ſend among his fat ones leanneſs] The Lord wil waſte his great forces, wherein he ſo much gloried, ver. 8. ch. 36. 9. as the body of man, or beaſt, is by a conſumption waſted, and brought to extream leanneſſe. So ch. 17. 4. Zeph. 2. 11.

among his fat ones] Heb. upon his fatneſſes, his fat ones; the chief, and choyce ones in his army, ſay all Interpreters generally: as Judg. 3. 29. Pſal. 78. 31. compared with Pſal. 106. 15. So they; from whom I muſt crave leave here to diſſent. The word here uſed, is an abſtract, not a concrete. It is word for word, his fatneſſes; as ch. 17. 4. the fat, or, the fatneſs of his fleſh, and, the fatneſſes of the earth, Gen. 27. 28, 39. and, of the Province, Dan. 11. 24. by his fatneſſes, therefore I here underſtand, not ſo much his fat ones, as his great and vaſt army, likened to the body of ſome creature overgrown with fleſh, and fat, which God threatens here, to abate, and take down, by caſting it into a conſumption, by ſending that upon it, that ſhould make it thin and ſpare. The complement hereof, ſee ch. 37. 36.

leanneſſe] That is, death, ſaith the Jewiſh Doctor, from that latter place of the Pſalmiſt before mentioned. But, the leanneſſe, here mentioned, is not ſo much appliable to the bodies of the particular perſons deſtroyed, as to the body of the army conſiſting of them, as limbs and members; which by the loſſe of ſo many thouſands, could not but be much waſted and reduced to a very poor and thin ſcantling.

and under his glory he will kindle a burning, as the burning of a fire] The ſame thing repeated, under a new notion, and expreſſed by another ſimilitude. He will waſte his forces, as with a conſumption, and conſume them, as with fire; [illegible] and ſudden devaſtations and deſtructions, are in Scripture, commonly compared to great fires, Pſal. 21. 9. & 50. 3. [illegible] & 29. 6. & 26. 11. Jer. 17. 27. Ezek. 20. 47. Amos 7. 4. Zech. 11. 1.

under his glory] That is, ſaith one of the Jewiſh Writers, in the place of his glory, or, glorying, where he glorified himſelf. Of which uſe of the prepoſition. See ver. 3. But there ſeems rather to be an alluſion to the manner of thoſe, that burn dead bodies, which was the cuſtome in old time, both of the Greeks, and the Romans, their common uſe being not to bury as we do, the bodies of the deceaſed; but to burn them with a pile of wood kindled under them, and having ſo done, to gather their aſhes and bones, if any remained of them, into an urne, and ſo lay them up in their places of Sepulture. That which was done with a great deal of coſt, huge piles of wood; yea, and curious fabricks of timber, together with abundance of odoriferous ſpices, at the funeral rites of great perſons, as well women, as men. Somewhat like whereunto, was alſo uſed among the Jews, about their kings, 2 Chr. 21. 19. and with them alſo, bodies of men were burnt, when they dyed, or were ſlain, in ſuch multitudes that danger of infection might ariſe from them lying above ground, and the burying of them over-troubleſome, ch. 66. 24. Amos 6. 10. Ezek. 39. 9, 10. See ch. 30. 33. or if reſpect be had, as it may be, and is afterward, to the burning of a wood, or forreſt, as Pſal. 83. 14. under his glory; may be, under his great timber trees: as the fire that takes firſt in the lower ſhrubs, and the under-woods; and from them, ſetteth the whole wood or forreſt on fire. See ver. 17, 18. yet the former ſeems to me the more probable: and of this paſſage, more anon.

his glory] The ſame with his fatneſſe, or abundance of fat before mentioned; not as Some would have it, his arms and his bravery: but his army; wherein he glories. See ch. 17. 4. where both theſe terms are likewiſe uſed, as parallel.

he will kindle a burning] Heb. burning it ſhall burn; or, there ſhall a burning burn: or, it ſhall burn with a burning. For whether it be a noun, or verb infinite, is queſtionable. A great burning ſhall be. For theſe reduplications amplifie. See ver. 6.

as the burning of a fire] Or, as fire burneth; or, like the burning of fire: ſuch a burning, as though it have no material fire uſed in it, yet ſhould have the deſtroying force and efficacy of fire: and it may well be, that it was done by ſuch a kind of blaſting, as Aarons ſons were ſmitten with; who though they were ſtricken ſtark dead, yet neither were their bodies conſumed, nor their garments, Levit. 10. 2, 5. or, wherewith the people were ſo many of them taken away in Taberah, Num. 11. 2, 3. and there are of the Jewiſh Writers, who affirm, grounding in part upon this place, that by the ſtroke of the Angel ſent to do execution on the Aſſyrian Army, the bodies of thoſe that were ſmitten, were ſo blaſted and burnt, that they were diſſolved into aſhes. Which was done, ſay they, that ſo many thouſands lying dead on the ground, might not breed ſome contagion, eſpecially being ſo neer to the City: and they add hereunto, that though their bodies were diſſolved, yet their garments were not burnt, that Gods people might have the ſpoyl of them, as thoſe had 2 Chr. 20. 25. to which purpoſe alſo, ſome of them expound thoſe words, under his glory; that is, under their goodly gorgeous apparel, ſuch, as the Aſſyrians uſually wore, Ezek. 23. 12. and that men are wont much to glory in, called therefore their glory, Pſal. 93. 1. Matth. 6. 29. But theſe things are of no certainty.

V. 17. And the light of Iſrael ſhall be for a fire] Or, For, &c. as ch. 8. 21. & 9. 11. God who is a light to his people, and will be ſo at this time, and upon this occaſion, by giving them occaſion of much joy upon their deliverance; as Eſth. 8. 16. Pſal. 84. 11. chap. 9. 2. & 60. 1, 2, 20. Mic. 7. 8. ſhall be a conſuming fire to deſtroy his, and their adverſaries; as was intimated, ver. 16. So Deut. 4. 24. & 6. 15. Pſal. 97. 3. chap. 26. 11. & 30. 30. See the like divers, yea, contrary uſe of that pillar, that conducted the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, Exod. 14. 20, 24. See alſo Zach 2. 5. The Jewiſh Doctors here dote, who would have by the light of Iſrael, to be underſtood, either the deſtroying Angel, or king Hezekiah; as ſo called from his conſtant ſtudy of Gods Law, Prov. 6. 23.

and his Holy One for a flame] The ſame thing, is in other terms repeated, but, as uſually, with ſome amplification. For flame, is ſomewhat more then fire, ch. 29. 6. & 30. 30. See the like, ch. 9, 10, 20. verſ. 1, 7, 14, 16. There ſhall need no other fire, or fuel, to deſtroy and conſume them, ſave God himſelf. See chap. 30. 27, 28. Of the title Holy One See chap. 1. 4. and it ſhall burn] To wit, that flame before ſpoken of.

and devour] Heb. eat up, as ch. 9. 18.

his thornes, and his briars] By theſe the Jewiſh Doctors, ſome of them underſtood the great ones in the Aſſyrian army;

becauſe,ſuch are wont moſt to be,as pricking thorns, to vex and grieve others. Which ſome of ours alſo approve; ſuppoſing that the ſlaughter might begin at them. But the ſlaughter, it is evident, was ſudden, and executed in an inſtant,as that in Egypt, Exod. 12, 29. with that expedition, that little notice could be taken, nor regard needed be had, with whom it ſhould begin. Rather, according to the ſimilitude which the Prophet ſtill purſues of a fire; and here of a fire taking in wood, thorns, and briars, may have reference to the under-woods, where the fire is wont firſt to take, oppoſed to the tall timber-trees,verſ.18: and ſhould therefore, rather reſemble the meaner ſort of his ſouldiers, See chap. 9. 18. Howbeit,thereby may be ſignified his whole army in general, and thoſe in groſs of whom it conſiſted, being all,as thorns and briars; to annoy Gods people, againſt whom they lay in ſiege; and whom they had before done much miſchief to, in all parts of the land, chap. 36.1. See the like, Joſh. 23. 13. Ezek. 28. 24.

in one day] In an inſtant; at one and the ſame time; together, at once, 1 Sam. 2. 34. chap. 47. 9. Zach.3.9. Or, in one night,chap.37.36. being part of the natural day, Gen. 1.5. Levit.23.32. Luk.24. 29,33,36. compared with Joh. 20. 19. his great army, that required, no ſmall time, for the gathering, framing, fitting, and furniſhing of it, deſtroyed in an inſtant. So ch. 15.5.

V. 18. And it ſhall conſume the glory of his Forreſt, and of his fruitful field] Heb. Carmel. The proper name of a place; of which name,were two mountains,the one in Judah; of which Joſh. 15. 55. where about Nabals dwelling was, 1 Sam. 25. 2. the other ſituated in the confines of Aſher, and Iſſachar,Joſh. 19. 26 where Elias ſlew Baals Prophets, 1 King. 18. 19, 20. and it was neer to the ſea,1 King.18.42,43. Jer. 46. 18. Now theſe mountains did not lye open, forreſt like, or run wilde, as Lebanon; but were encloſed, manured, tilled, and eared, or planted with great variety of fruitful trees, vines, olives, figs, and the like; and had much fat, and fertile ſoyl, and arable ground, (whence a green ear of corn, alſo is ſo called, Levit. 2. 14. & 23. 14.) both upon them, and about them; whence it came to paſs, that from the one, or both of them, the word Carmel was uſed, for any fertile, and fruitful place indifferently, whether higher,or lower ground, mountain, or plain; as chap. 16. 10. where mention is made of Moabs Carmel: and ch. 29. 17. where Lebanon and Carmel, are oppoſed; and ſo it ſeems to be here taken. Hence therefore, ſome would infer,that by the Forreſt,as a wild place, ſhould be underſtood the meaner ſort of Sennacheribs ſouldiery; by the Carmel, his chief Commanders. Others imagin, that the deſolation, or deſtruction of his State, and country is threatned; and as of perſons of all ranks; high and low, rich and poor: ſo of places of all ſorts. But this ſeems to divert too much from the Prophets preſent ſcope. I ſuppoſe rather, with others, that by his Forreſt, and his Carmel; is meant the main body of his army, that ſeemed to reſemble ſome great forreſt, or mountain, whether wilde,or manured, bethwacked with trees, whether for timber, fruit, or fuel, as thick as they can ſtand one by another: and by the glory thereof, the choice perſons of command in it: as by his glory, verſ. 16. was meant his glorious army,or his army wherein he gloried: ſo here, by the glory of that his glory; thoſe that were the more glorious part of it, or of the more eminency in it, his ſtout and valiant Warriers, and his rich and ſtately Princes; which ſome alſo ſuppoſe to be reſpectively meant; by the Forreſt, the one; by Carmel,the other. See Jer. 46. 22,23. Some conceive that there is mention here of Forreſt, and Carmel; in regard that his army, being of large extent, was encamped, ſome in the higher, and wilder places; ſome in the lower, and better manured. I ſhould rather think, but that it comes after, (and yet why might not the Lord have an eye to that, that in his perſon himſelf would afterward ſpeak?) that ſome reſpect might in theſe tearms, be had to Sennacheribs brags of ſurprizing Lebanon and Carmel chap. 37. 24. as intimating, that his own Lebanon and Carmel, ſhould be deſtroyed, before he ſhould come to effect, what he threatned them with.

both ſoul and body] Heb. from the ſoul, and unto the fleſh; as Jer.9.10. from the fowl, and unto the beaſt; for, both fowl, and beaſt; and Jer. 50. 3. from man, and unto beaſt; for, both man and beaſt. Some would have the meaning to be, that they ſhould be deſtroyed, both body and ſoul. Others, that they ſhould be ſo ſmitten inwardly, that the evil yet ſhould not ſtay there; but proceed alſo to the conſumption of the outward parts of the body, becauſe the ſoul is ſet firſt; contrary to the manner of material fire; which, in burning of bodies,ſeizeth firſt upon the fleſh, or outward parts, and from them pierceth to the inward. The meaning is,rather, as one of the Rabbins well obſerveth, that it ſhould ſo ſeize on them, that it ſhould,as fire is wont to do, with living creatures that are burnt; or perſons condemned to the fire, not conſume their fleſh onely,but take life away too,Levit. 20. 14. & 21.9. The ſoul is commonly taken for the life, Gen. 9. 4, 5. Levit. 17. 11,14. It is a proverbial ſpeech intimating a total deſtruction of his army; not unlike thoſe of head and tail, branch and ruſh, chap. 9. 14. for the Prophet returns here to the former ſimilitude of a body, verſ. 16. but he purſues it with a further amplification. It was leanneſs, or a conſumption of fleſh, that was there menaced; as ch. 17. 4. which may yet be without loſs, or danger of life: but here vitals, and all are waſted and conſumed, as with fire: the very ſoul, and ſpirit of this vaſt body, together with the fat and fleſh of it, is utterly gone.

and they ſhall be, as when a ſtandard-bearer fainteth] Heb. and he, or, it ſhall be; or, it ſhall be with him, (as ch. 29.7, 8.) as when a ſtandard-bearer melteth: as alluding to the ſimilitude before uſed. This ſome expound of the Aſſyrian king himſelf: He ſhall be like ſuch a ſtandard-bearer, whoſe heart melting within him: (as Pſal. 22. 14. Nah. 2. 11.) when he ſeeth his colours forſaken, he caſts away his ſtandard, and betakes himſelf to flight. So did Sennacherib, chap. 31. 8. & 37. 37. But ſome go further, adding, that he ſhall not be able to recover himſelf, or raiſe a new army again, no more then an army is able to recollect it ſelf, when the Standard-bearers are overthrown. Some ſuch aſſurance ſeems to be given by God to Ezekiah, ch.38.6. Others, rather, underſtand it of his army, or the remainders thereof: it ſhall be with his forces,as with an army, whoſe Standard-bearer fainting, and failing, the whole company is, together with him, quailed and quelled. Or, as when he having caſt away his colours, the whole regiment is diſordered, and ſoon routed by the adverſe party: and ſo it was with Sennacheribs great hoſte, they were ſuddenly, a great part of them, utterly deſtroyed; and the reſidue of them that ſurvived, when in the morning they ſaw their camp full of dead corpſes, chap. 37. 36. their hearts alſo melted within them, and they fled away with their Lord. Of the army, the ſame tearme is uſed, that it melted away, chap. 31. 8.

V. 19. And the reſt of the trees of his forreſt ſhall be few] Very few ſhall remain of that his vaſt army, that ſeemed formerly, to be innumerable.

the trees] The ſeveral ſouldiers in his army, of all ſorts; the greater among them, as well as the meaner. Heb. tree. But the word is here collective; as Ezek. 15. 6.

his forreſt] His forces compared to a forreſt, ver. 18.

few] Heb. a number. That is, a few. For, though with us, a number, be uſed, to ſignifie a multitude: yet, in the Hebrew phraſe,it importeth fewneſs: ſo it is uſed, Deut.33. 6. Let his men be,or, (out of the foregoing branch, ſupplying the negative) not be a number: that is, few. And, dayes of a number; for, a few dayes, Numb.9.20. Contrary to which, is, Jer. 2. 32. dayes without number: And Job 16. 22. years of a number, for few years: So men of a number, for, few in number, Gen. 34.30. Deut.4. 27. Pſal.105.12. Jer.44.28. Ezek. 12.16. And the reaſon of the phraſe is, becauſe a ſmall company may be eaſily numbred; a ſmall number ſoon counted. In oppoſition therefore, whereunto, is that form, without number, commonly uſed, Job.25. 3. Pſal. 40. 12. & 104. 25. & 105. 34. Joel 1.6. Yet there ſeems to be a kinde of defective ſpeech, as in that of Moſes, His men a number, for, his men, men of a number. So here, the tree, or, trees of his forreſt a number, for the trees of his forreſt, trees of a number: a very ſmall company that may ſoon be told. See ch. 21. 17.

that a childe may write them] That is, as ſome, count them, and in counting point them out, deſcribe them. Or, rather, as others, take a tale, or make a liſt of them: for he ſeems to allude to the Clerk of of a Band, or a muſter-maſter, whoſe office is, to take a liſt of thoſe, that are to be enrolled for ſervice. It is as if he ſhould ſay, there ſhall not need any Officer to make a book of them; they ſhall be ſo few, that any child, that hath but learned to make his letters, may ſoon ſet them down, either the number of them, or their names. Hence our Jewiſh Doctors, or doaters rather, gather, that of Sennacheribs army there were but ten left; becauſe the letter jod, that ſtands for ten in Hebrew, as it doth alſo in Greek, is the leaſt letter in the alphabet, which children therefore are firſt taught to write: and again, becauſe children are ſeldome able to tell beyond ten; and ſo far they can count upon their fingers ends. But theſe niceties we leave to ſuch, whoſe lips ſuit with ſuch lettice. Heb. and a childe ſhall write them; the copulative for the finitive: as Job 5. 11. & 7. 15,19. Jer. 14.19. and the future for the potential, as ch. 33.23. Job 9. 3. Jer.2.23. & 13.23. Matth.12.25. with Mark 3. 24. for ſo I take it to be, rather then an ellipſis, as ſome would have it.

V. 20. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that, &c.] Hitherto of Gods judgment, that ſhould be inflicted upon the Aſſyrian king, for his pride, inſolency, and arrogancy. When God had finiſhed the work, that he intended to bring about by him. Now followeth both of the diſtreſs that God brought the whole land into by him, and his forces, and of the deliverance of ſome ſmall parcel of them, by the judgment executed upon him and his army, to wit, the deſtruction of many wicked ones among them, and the reformation of the reſidue. See the like, ch.1.24,25. Of the phraſe, or manner of ſpeech, ſee ch.4.1,2,3.

the remnant of Iſrael, and ſuch as are eſcaped of the houſe of Jacob] Thoſe of them, that ſhall eſcape and ſurvive the Aſſyrian Invaſion: to wit, principally, the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and ſuch as for ſuccour had reſorted thither, ch.37.35. as alſo, ſome other, in other parts of the land, though ſurprized and over-run by him, ch.36.1. for Iſrael, here, is put for the people of Judah, as ch.1.3. and the houſe of Jacob, the ſame with Iſrael: as ch.2.5. Howſoever, ſome would over-curiouſly diſtinguiſh them, and by Iſrael, underſtand Judah, that held ſtill the faith of Iſrael: by the houſe of Jacob, the ten tribes, that fell from it, and were of Jacobs family; but not of Iſraels faith, were not right, and true Iſraelites, Joh. 1.47. Rom.9.6. but this ſeems not ſound. See verſ. 21, 22.

ſuch as are eſcaped] Heb. the eſcapement, or, eſcaping: as chap. 4. 2.

ſhall no more again ſtay upon him, that ſmote them] Being amended by the hand of God thus upon them, and better adviſed then before, by their late ſufferings, they ſhall not ſeek to, or rely upon the Aſſyrians, for ſuccour and ſupport, as in former times they had wont to do, 2 King. 16.7. Hoſh.5.13. & 14.3.

no more again ſtay] Heb. no more add to ſtay: as chap. 7. 10. Jer. 2. 4.

ſtay] As a man ſtayes and upholds himſelf, by leaning on a ſtaff, ch.36.6. & 50.10. See ch.3.1.

him that ſmote them] The King of Aſſyria, (not Egypt, as ſome of the Jewiſh Teachers) by whom God had ſmote them, ch.9.12. uſing him, as a rod, or ſtaff, wherewith to chaſtiſe and correct them, ver.5,24.

but ſhall ſtay upon the Lord] This being the end of Gods ſmiting them, not to drive them from him; but to reclaim and draw them home unto him, ch.9.11,12. and by diſcovering to them the vanity of all other ſhores and ſupports; and their folly in relying on them, to their own hurt and ruine; to cauſe them to rely and reſt now on him alone, chap. 17. ver. 7,8.

the holy one of Iſrael] See chap.1.4.

in truth] In ſincerity, as Pſal.145.18. (ſo Jer. 24. 7.) not fainedly, as thoſe, Pſal.78.34,37. Jer.3.10.

V. 21. The remnant ſhall return] Or, A remnant ſhall return. Alluding to the name of the Prophets ſon, Shear-jaſhub, ch.7.3. and ſhewing what was therein intimated: a remnant; denoting the paucity of thoſe, that ſhould eſcape and ſurvive, in compariſon of the whole, ver.22.

even the remnant] Or, but a remnant. a remnant onely, ver.22. as before: otherwiſe the remnant might import ſo many as eſcaped, were they fewer or more. So a ſmall remnant, ch.1.9. and a ſeed, Rom.9.29.

of Jacob] Of the main body of the people, called the houſe of Jacob, ver. 20.

unto the mighty God] The name given to the Meſſias, as part of his ſtately ſtyle, ch.9.6. they ſhall return after the ſiege of Jeruſalem, broken up upon the ſlaughter made by night in the Aſſyrian Camp, ch.37.36,37. not to their poſſeſſions and wonted places of abode only, out of which they had formerly by the Aſſyrian forces, been forced, or whence for fear of them, they had fled; but unto God alſo, whom formerly they had diſregarded, and were fallen from: but now upon ſo pregnant proof and experience, had, and exhibited of his gracious goodneſſe towards them, and powerful protection of them, they ſhould more carefully ſeek after, more faithfully cleave to, and more firmly depend upon, Pſal.81.17,18. Jer. 32.40. See ch.1.27.

V. 22. For though thy people Iſrael be as the ſand of the Sea, yet, a remnant of them ſhall return] As of Sennacheribs vaſt and numerous hoſt, but a ſmall number eſcaped, upon the judgment by God inflicted on it, ver.19: ſo of the innumerable multitude of the Jewiſh people, but a ſmall remnant in compariſon, was to eſcape, and ſo did in that heavy judgment by the hand of Sennacherib, inflicted on them from him.

though] Heb. if: and ſo Rom.9.27. for, though, as Job 14. 7,8. & 16.6.

thy people Iſrael] Either, thy people, to wit, Iſrael: as God ſpeaking to the Prophet: or, rather, thy people, that is, thy poſterity, O Iſrael, as turning his ſpeech to their Progenitor Jacob.

as the ſand of the Sea] As was promiſed unto Abraham, that his ſeed ſhould be, Gen. 22. 17. fulfilled accordingly, Heb.11.12. an hyperbolical phraſe, and proverbial form of ſpeech, uſed commonly, to ſignifie an innumerable multitude, Judg.7.12. ch.48.19.

Yet a remnant of them ſhall return] Or, but a remnant in them, or, among them, ſhall return: (for Shear-jaſhubs name is again alluded unto) that is, ſhall be ſaved, as the Apoſtle renders it, Rom.9.27. that remnant ſo delivered, and temporally ſaved, from the ſword of the Aſſyrian; being a type of Gods Elect among that people, to be ſaved by Chriſt: See Rom.9.27,29. & 11.5.

the conſumption decreed ſhall over-flow with righteouſneſs] The reaſon is here rendred, why he ſaid, but a remnant: becauſe God had determined in his juſt judgment, to bring in upon them a general inundation, that ſhould ſweep away the greater part of them. This ſome of the Rabbines underſtand of the ten Tribes carried captive by Salmanaſer, 2 King.17.6. in regard of whom the other two were but as a remnant. But the courſe of the context ſeems to carry it another way.

the conſumption] Or, a conſumption: there ſhall be a conſumption among the Jewiſh people, before that conſumption in Sennacheribs army, ver.18. So ch.28.22.

decreed] Heb. decided, determined, 1 King.20.40. or, preciſely, cut out, Job 14.8. as infallibly, and unfaileably, or irrecoverably decreed; ſo exactly limited how far forth it ſhall proceed. So Dan.11.36.

ſhall over-flow] Heb. ſhall be over-flowing. He compares the Aſſyrians invaſion of the land, with his over-ſpreading army, to a great inundation, overflowing the whole Country. See ch.8.7,8.

with righteouſneſs] Or, in righteouſneſs; as the Apoſtle renders it, Rom.9.28. that is, through the juſt judgment of God; as noting out the ground of Gods both determining to inflict, and inflicting thoſe judgments on them: as Pſal.9. 8. and vindicating of him from all aſperſion of injuſtice in ſo doing, Neh.9.33. Lam. 1. 18. Dan.9. 7, 14. or, as Some other, with judgments, and puniſhments, the effects of his juſtice; as ch.5.16. Howbeit the main ſtream of Interpreters runs here another way; expounding the place; Some of the ſuperabundant benefits, that God would heap upon them, after that he had brought them thus low. For righteouſneſs, is put ſometime for beneficence, Pſal. 112. 3,9. chap. 66. 12. Others, of that righteouſneſs, and holineſs, that ſhould abound in the remainder of Gods people, now reclaimed and refined in the furnace of affliction, ch.48. 10. wherewith the land ſhould now flow, and that ſo as to fill the whole world, ch. 33. 6. ſo, that by the conſumption cut out, they would, many of them, have to be underſtood the remnant left, which ſhould cauſe righteouſneſs to overflow. But beſides that, the conſtruction ſeems overharſh: the Apoſtle referreth theſe words, in righteouſneſs, to Gods finiſhing, and cutting out, or, cutting ſhort: and I adhere therefore to our verſion, and the ſenſe of it firſt given.

V. 23. For the Lord God of hoſts ſhall make a conſumption, even determined in the midſt of all the land] The ſame thing is repeated, with the Author of it expreſſed, and ſome further amplification from the extent of it. For the ſtyle here given God, ſee on ch.1.9. See alſo ver.16.

ſhall make] Or, will ſhortly make. Heb. is making: as ch.5. 5. & 43.19. See ch.3.1.

a conſumption] Another word of the ſame notion and family with the former, ver.22.

even determined] Or, and that determined; as it is rendred, Dan.9.27. See the like ſyntax, Mic. 2.10. Heb. cut out, as before; for both words are from one root. Yet ſome would have this word to be a ſubſtantive, as well as the word conſumption: but ſo, as that the ſenſe ſhould not much vary; conſumption, and determination, for, a determinate conſumption; as ch. 1.14. iniquity, and congregation, for, a wicked congregation: or, rather, as ch.4.5. a cloud and ſmoke, for, a ſmoky cloud. But I ſuppoſe it rather an adjective, as both the form of it ſheweth, and the uſe of it alſo, Dan. 9. 26. in thoſe words, a determinate deſolation; the ſame phraſe is again found, ch.28.22. Now, becauſe inſtead hereof the Apoſtle hath, retaining the Greek verſion, a word, or, ſpeech, abbreviated, or abridged; as they commonly render it: hence moſt of our ancient Interpreters, and many later ones, Popiſh Writers eſpecially, do hence pick out much myſterious matter. Some of the Meſſias, the Word contracted, and made fleſh, Joh.1.14. Some, of the doctrine of ſalvation, drawn into a narrow compaſs, in the Goſpel, Mark.1.15. Joh.3.16. Rom.10. 9. Some of one thing; ſome of another. All which to recite, is both needleſs, and would alſo be too tedious. Only, concerning the Apoſtles Greek, the term by him uſed, as that Hebrew one, which it anſwers, ſignifies as well Work, as Word, (which in Latine alſo, is held to come from the other in Greek; opus, from [illegible]; or, rather, from the Greek word ſignifying either, as the verb whence it comes, ſignifies either, both to ſpeak, and to work;) and as well matter, as ſpeech, (as the Hebrew term alſo doth, ch.2.1. Dan.10.1. Luk.1.37. and in Latine, res, held to come from the Greek [illegible]) beſides the word uſed by the Apoſtle, and thoſe ancient Greeks, ſignifies, as well an account, or a reckoning, as any of theſe two before mentioned, Matth.18.23. & 25.19. Luk. 16.2. Phil. 4.17. and the Apoſtles words may well therefore be thus rendred; The Lord will make ſhort work, or, a ſhort matter of it. He will make a ſoon, and ſudden conſumption. It will neither be long before it comes; nor long in doing, when it comes: Or to come more neerly, and fully to the Prophets intendment: The Lord will make a ſhort reckoning; alluding to a reckoning, where the matter is clear, the account is ſoon made: or to a bill of receits and disburſements; which though it be long, yet being aright, and ballanced, the foot of the account, or the remainder of the reckoning, may prove a very ſmall ſum: and ſo it would be, yea and fell out ſo here, when God had finiſhed his work, and done his reckoning with his people, ver. 12. And thus much by the way for the clearing of that phraſe, though not found in the text.

in the midſt of all the land] Heb. earth. Which ſome taking hold of; apply all this (as was in part, alſo, before hinted) unto Chriſt: of whom alſo they expound that in the Pſalm, of working ſalvation in the midſt of the earth, Pſal.74.12. Others refer it to the contracted number of the remaining, and returning faithful, ver.21. or, the Apoſtles and others by them typified; who by their righteouſneſs in preaching, and practice, ſhould overflow, and fill the whole world with goodneſs and godlineſs, Dan.12.3. Mat.28.19. Mark. 16. 15. Joh. 7.38,39. & 15.16. Rom.10.18. But the word here uſed, as the Greek alſo anſwering it, ſignifies, as well land, as earth; and is commonly uſed of, and applyed unto, particular coaſts, and countries, ch.9.1. Matth.2.6. & 4.15. and in the midſt of the land, is no more, then ſimply, in the land: as ch.5. 8. and ſo the Apoſtle here renders it, Rom. 9. 28. in the midſt of all the land; no more, then throughout the whole land, ch. 8. 8. & 28.2,15.

V. 24. Therefore thus ſaith the Lord God of hoſts] Upon this dreadful prediction of the great conſumption to be made among the Jewiſh people; the Prophet in Gods name, and by meſſage from him, comforteth thoſe few faithful ones, whom God had ſpecial care of among them, againſt thoſe fears and diſtreſſes that might befall them, by occaſion of the Aſſyrian Invaſion and ſurprizal of the greateſt part of their cities; and that by giving them further aſſurance of a gracious deliverance from him; and of the ſpeedy deſtruction of him, that had put them into ſuch frights, and brought them into ſuch diſtreſs. See the like, ch. 30. 18--33. of the ſtyle given to God here, look back to ver, 16.

O my people, that dwelleſt in Sion] He directs his ſpeech to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem; (for Sion, is here, put for Jeruſalem; as ch. 1. 8,27. & 27. 22.) partly, becauſe thither had a great party of the better ſort fled for ſuccour and protection: and partly, becauſe they were to be in no ſmall diſtreſs there, ch.37.3.

be not afraid of the Aſſyrian] Of Sennacherib; for all his proud menaces and vaunts of his forces, ch.37.6.

he ſhall ſmite thee with a rod] He ſhall lightly afflict thee; God uſing him, as a rod, wherewith to chaſtiſe his people, ver.5. not as a ſword, to cut them off. He will not handle thee by him, ſo roughly as he did the ten tribes, 2 King. 17.6, 27. & 18.10,11. Howbeit, the Jewiſh Writers are divided about the ſenſe of theſe words. Some ſay, that they are to be underſtood of his purpoſes and menaces only: Others, of matter of fact alſo, and ſomewhat done by him; and theſe diſtinguiſh not amiſs between ſmiting, and ſlaying: and true it is, that though no violent irruption, nor forcible aſſault, was made into, or againſt Jeruſalem, ch.37.33. Yet were many of her inferiour Cities, yea, the moſt of them, taken, ch.36.1. the country round about her ſpoyled; as muſt needs be, by ſuch an Army lying about it, ch.36.2. and the city it ſelf, with thoſe ſhut up in it, put to many difficulties, and reduced to much diſtreſs, ch.36.12. & 37.3.

and ſhall lift up his ſtaff againſt thee] So the moſt render it. He ſhall not ſtrike thee, ſay ſome, but hold up the ſtaff over thee: as after, he ſhall ſhake his hand at thee, ver. 32. he ſhall ſhake the ſtaff at thee; but not hurt thee with it. Others, he ſhall lay heavy taxes and tributes upon thee; and ſo he did indeed, 2 King.18.14,15. both ſuppoſe a reference here, as to the rod, ſo to the ſtaff mentioned, ver.5. Howbeit, ſome render the words otherwiſe; to wit, but he ſhall lift up his ſtaff for thee: but, the copulative, in an adverſative notion: as ch. 5.12. & 7.12. he ſhall lift up, or, one (to wit, God) ſhall lift up his ſtaffe; his ſtaff ſhall be lift up (ſee chap.14.30.) for thee. So is the particle uſed, 1 Chr.6.49. Thus the meaning ſhould be; the King of Aſſyria ſhall ſmite thee with a rod; but the Lord thy God, who is the Lord of hoſts, will lift up his ſtaff, an heavier inſtrument, and more grievous, againſt him, that ſhall bring deliverance to thee, and deſtruction to him; as did the ſtaff, that Moſes lift up at the red-Sea, Exod.14.26,27. See ver.26.

after the manner of Egypt] Heb. in the way. Which ſome Jewiſh Writers taking hold of, expound of Sennacheribs way, either toward Egypt, when he went thitherward to meet with Taracha, or when he returned from bickering with him; what time again he ſent meſſengers in menacing manner to Jeruſalem, chap.37.9. Others, of Ezekiah's and his peoples way, in ſending to Egypt for help againſt the Aſſyrian, ch.30.4. which occaſioned the Invaſion, partly through the offence, that the Aſſyrian took at it, ch.36.6. and partly through Gods juſt indignation againſt them, for doing therein out of diffidence, againſt his command, ch. 30.1. & 31,1. And this expoſition, the former way of it eſpecially, ſome of ours follow; the rather, ſay they, becauſe it ſorts well with the ſtory: and for the particle here uſed, it is not that which ſignifies according to; but in. But neither of theſe reaſons ſeem valid enough, to put by the received reading. For neither doth either of them ſuit ſo well with the context; nor is the uſe of the particle in the ſignification here given it in this form of ſpeech unuſual. For, ſo Ezek.20.30. in the way of your fathers, is found, for according to the manner of your fathers: and theſe very words again in this form reiterated, ver.26. do abundantly confirm it. Here therefore, in the way of Egypt, is, after, or, according to the manner of Egypt; that is, as thoſe who underſtand it of the Aſſyrian and his dealing with Gods people; either he ſhall inflict grievous things on you, as Pharaoh did on your Anceſtors in Egypt, Exod.1.11--14. or, he ſhall purſue you, with a purpoſe to deſtroy you, as Pharaoh did the Iſraelites, after they were gotten out of Egypt, Exod. 14.5--9. & 15.9. but ſhall not prevail againſt you, no more then he then did. But as thoſe, that underſtand it, of Gods dealing with their enemy, the Aſſyrian; the ſame perſon that then lift up his ſtaff againſt Pharaoh, for the ſafety of his people, will now lift up his ſtaff againſt the Aſſyrian, to his confuſion, and your deliverance, ver.26. I will deſtroy the Aſſyrian, as I did the Egyptians, Exod.14. 26,27. & 15. 6. and this I concur with.

V. 25. For yet a very little while, and mine indignation ſhall ceaſe, and mine anger in their deſtruction] As in the former verſe, were two grounds of comfort to the godly: Firſt, the lightneſs, in compariſon of the chaſtiſement, a rod; and ſecondly, the gracious iſſue of it; in the defeat of the enemies intended purpoſe: ſo here are two more added; Firſt, the ſhortneſs of it, Gods wrath againſt his people ſhall not laſt long; and ſecondly, the diverſion of it, it ſhall be turned upon their Oppreſſors. See ver.12.

a very little] Heb. a little little; or, a ſmall little: or, a little of a little. A very ſhort time: as ch.29.17. So Pſal. 30. 5. but a moment laſts his anger: and, for a moment, a ſmall moment, ch.54.7,8.

mine indignation ſhall ceaſe] To wit, toward my people. I will no longer be angry, ch.27.4. & 54.9. Ezek. 16. 42. See Dan.11.36.

and mine anger in their deſtruction] This latter branch is diverſly expounded, both by the Jewiſh Doctors, and our Writers. Some underſtand it of the Jewiſh people, and expound it of Gods anger againſt them, for their ſins and exceſſes: for their deteſtable enormities, ſaith one; ſuppoſing the word to have the ſame notion with one in ſound neer unto it, that ſignifies beaſtiality, Levit.18.23. & 20.12. or, inveterate evils, as coming from a word, which in all likelihood it doth, that ſignifies to wax old. The works, ſaith one, of the old Adam, Rom.6.6. Eph.4.22. But others rather underſtand it of the Aſſyrian. Mine indignation ſhall ceaſe (ſupplyed from the former branch) upon their deſtruction; or, ſhall have its end with them. Or, as others, mine indignation ſhall be ſet upon the conſumption of them. For the root, whence it ſprings, hath a notion in it; as of oldneſs, ſo of decay, and conſumption, which oldneſs brings with it, Heb.8.13. So Pſal.32.2. & 49. 14. Lam.3.4. the meaning is, that Gods anger being appeaſed and pacified towards his people, ſhould be now turned againſt the Aſſyrians their adverſaries, to deſtroy and conſume them, as Pſal.81.14. The word is no where elſe found. For, as for thoſe that would read taclith, for tablith; though it might come home to the ſame ſenſe, this latter word iſſuing from the ſame ſpring, with thoſe other two before uſed, verſ. 22,23. and ſeem to be alſo uſed in the ſame ſenſe: as Job 26. 10. yet they go againſt the general ſtream of the original copies, which are reported in all approved editions to repreſent the other term. The change of the number from the ſingular to the plural, as from the king to his forces, is ſo frequent, that it need not be inſiſted on here.

V. 26. And the Lord of hoſts] Or, For, chap. 9. 11. Of Lord of hoſts. See ch.1.9. ver.16. one greater then his hoſts; and that hath other manner of hoſts at command, Pſal. 103. 20.

ſhall ſtir up a ſcourge for him] Or, will raiſe up a ſcourge againſt him] This ſcourge is one of his hoſt above, of his Angels, ch.37.36. termed Gods hoſts, Gen.32.1,2. Pſal.103.21. here called a ſcourge, to anſwer the word rod, ver.24. the king of Aſſyria hath a rod for Gods people; but God hath a ſcourge in ſtore for him; to whip him away from them, when he hath by him, as with a rod, chaſtiſed them for their folly, ver.5,12. See ch.28.15,18.

according to the ſlaughter of Midian] Heb. ſtroke; as ch.27.7. God will ſmite him, as he ſmote the Midianites, and made a ſlaughter of them, in a ſtrange and ſudden manner, in the night, when nothing leſs was looked for. See ch.9.4. and the ſtory, Judg.7.22.

at the rock of Oreb] So called of Oreb, a chief Prince of Midian; who after the diſcomfiture of his army, was in fight taken, and there ſlain, Judg.7.26. Pſal.83.9,11. as was Sennacherib alſo, after the defeat of his forces, in the Temple of his idol, ch.37.37,38.

and as his rod was upon the Sea; ſo ſhall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt] Or, and according to his ſtaff lift over the Sea; (for ſo the Hebrew runs in way of connexion to the former clauſe: nor is the word rod; but ſtaff) ſo (Heb. and: as ch.53.9.) ſhall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt, (Heb. in the way of Egypt; as ver.24.) at the time of their paſſage out of Egypt, as ſome; or rather, to deſtroy the Aſſyrians now, as he did the Egyptians then. He alludes to Moſes his ſtaff held up, over the red-Sea, Exod.14.16. For there ſeems no ground for that expoſition, that ſome give, applying this wholly to the Aſſyrians expedition, to wit, that his ſtaff; that is, his power, or, his army; and he with it, going againſt the Ethiopian, ſhould paſs the red Sea into Egypt: and in his way from Egypt, ſhould return again to Jeruſalem; for neither do the relations ſeem probable; nor doth the expoſition well cohere with the tenour of the text. See on ver.24.

V. 27. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that] As ver. 20.

his burden ſhall be taken away from off thy ſhoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck; and the yoke ſhall be deſtroyed] Thou ſhalt not only be freed from thoſe heavy exactions, that the the Aſſyrian laid upon thee, and delivered out of the preſent diſtractions and diſtreſſes, that he put thee to by his forcible invaſion and ſiege; but his might ſhall be ſo quelled, and his power impaired, that he ſhall not be able to afflict thee again in like manner. See ver.12,16–19. & ch.28.6. A type of the deliverance of Gods people in that manner from the tyranny of ſin and Satan, that they never come to recover that power again, that they had in them, and over them before, Rom.6.6–14. 1 Joh.3.8,9. See ch.9.4.

his burden] The Aſſyrians; by him impoſed, chap.14.25. burden for all manner of affliction, and oppreſſion, Exod. 2.11.

ſhall be taken away] Heb. ſhall remove, Pſal.81.6.

thy ſhoulder] The part of mans body ordinarily employed for bearing of burdens. See ch.9.6.

his yoke] Uſed in the ſame notion with burden, but put more ſpecially for ſervitude and bondage, Deut.28.48. See chap.9.4.

the yoke ſhall be deſtroyed] Or, corrupted, as the Greek: as a thing putrified and rotten, Job 17.1. and ſo the old Latine renders it; not barely taken off; for it might then come on again: nor broken only; for it might then be repaired; and being made up again, might afterward again be uſed as before. But deſtroyed; ſo corrupted, and ſpoyled, as diſabled from recovery of the like ſtrength, or made uſe of to the like purpoſe again, to yoke and vex any, as before it had done; fulfilled in Sennacherib and his forces, ch.37.36–38. See ch.14.25.

becauſe of the anoynting] Heb. from the face of, or, before; (as Gen.36.6,7. Exod.9.11. ch.7.3,16.) the oyl, or ointment; as Eccleſ.7.1. ch.57.9. this ſome refer to the Aſſyrian yoke, which ſay they, was corrupted and ſpoyled, with exceſſive fatneſs: bodies, ſay they, overgrown with fat, become unweldy, and purſie, and therefore blow much, and many times are ſuddenly ſtifled. Which they apply to the Aſſyrian, clogged with wealth, Hab.2.6. puft up with pride, ver.13. breathing out blaſphemies, ver.11,15. 2 Chron.32.19. and ſuddenly brought to nought, ver.16,17. But this ſeems many bows wide from the ſcope of the Prophet in this place. The Jewiſh Writers generally carry it home, as the Chaldee alſo doth, to the Meſſias; but underſtanding by Meſſias, not the Saviour to come, but Ezekiah, partaker of that holy oyl, wherewith David, his Progenitor, and other the Kings of Judah, had been anoynted, Pſal.89.20. Nor do ſome of ours diſallow it, acknowledging, that God, at Ezekiahs ſuit, and out of ſpeciall favour to him, vouchſafed them this deliverance, 2 Chr.32.20,21. adding further, ſome of them, that God had therein alſo regard to his people, his Saints, his anointed ones, among them; and to that precious oyl of ſpiritual grace, wherewith they are all, in ſome meaſure anoynted, Pſal.105.15. 2 Cor.1.21,22. 1 Joh.2.20,27. But unto Chriſt principally, of whom Ezekiah here in was a type, the true Meſſias, the anoynted of God, in a peculiar and ſingular manner, far above and beyond all other, Pſal.2.2. & 45.7. Dan.9.24. Luk.4.18,21. Joh.3.34. Act.4.27. & 10.38. Heb.1.9. and he, on whom are founded, all the gracious, both promiſes of deliverance, and performances thereof, at any time unto Gods people, 2 Cor.1.20. and unto him doth this our Evangelical Prophet ſtill carry them up, ch.7.14. & 9.4–6. We need not therefore, with divers Commenters upon this place, ſtand beating our brains to deviſe, what a yoke, and oyl have to do the one with the other: one telling us, that oyl takes away the hard knobs, and knotty parts of a yoke: another, that it helps to ſoften and diſſolve the thongs, that faſten the parts of it one to another. Another, that oyl ſpoils iron, and that peradventure an iron, not a woodden yoke, may be meant here; as Deut.28,48. Jer.24.13,14. with other the like frivolous and groundleſs fancies: ſince, that the mention of oyl here, is not, as of an inſtrument, or means, whereby the yoke ſhould be broken, and diſſolved; but as of a motive, or inducement, in regard whereof, God would vouchſafe to do, what in this caſe and kind there was to be done.

V. 28. He is come, &c.] The Prophet here deſcribeth the progreſs of Sennacherib, with his army marching along from place to place in his ſeveral jeſſes towards Jeruſalem; as if it were a thing preſent; or as if he plainly beheld it, in a Prophetical rapture or viſion; or were going along in company with them. See ch.2.1. and before-hand ſheweth, which way he would come; to wit, through the land of Benjamin, whereunto moſt of the Towns, hereafter mentioned, did appertain. See ſomewhat the like, of the enemies march towards Babylon, ch.13.5. and Jer.4.7.

to Ayath] Or, the territory of Ay, Gen.12.8. Joſh.7.2. Ezra 2.28. Neh.7.32. for the city was by Joſhua utterly overthrown, Joſh.8.28. & 10.1. another from that mentioned, Jer.49.3.

he is paſſed to Migron] Mentioned, as belonging to Gibea, 1 Sam.14.2.

at Michmaſh, he hath laid up his carriages] Heb. made to viſit his veſſels. Either left his luggage there, that he may march on with more expedition; as Jer.36.20. or, muſtered, and taken a ſurvey of his train and proviſions, that what is any way defective, may be ſupplyed, as Num.1.29. & 2.33. ch.22.10. Of the place, ſee 1 Sam.13.1. & 14.5. Ezra 2.27.

V. 29. They are gone over the paſſage] Not the fords of Jordan, as ſome ſuppoſe; or ſome other brook, as others: but the ſtreights, between the hills, neer Michmaſh. Of which, ſee 1 Sam.13.23. & 14.1,4,5.

they have taken up their lodging at Geba] Heb. lodged a lodging. This place ſeemeth to have been on the one ſide of the forementioned paſſage, as Michmaſh on the other. See 1 Sam.14.5. & Neh.11.31.

V. 30. Lift up thy voice] Heb. cry ſhrill with thy voice. See chap.12.6. make a grievous outcry, as is wont to be done, upon diſcovery of ſome eminent and iminent danger, ch.15.4,5. & 21.8. Matth.14.26.

O daughter of Gallim] Or, O daughter Gallim. Of the place, ſee 1 Sam.25.44. of the phraſe, chap.1.8. The Town ſeems to be ſo termed, from heaps, hillocks, or land-banks, neer unto it, or about it. For ſo the word ſignifies, chap.37.26.

V. 31. Madmenah is removed] Her Inhabitants are gone. as thoſe of Gibeah, ver.29. Of the Town, belonging to the Tribe of Judah, ſee Joſh.15.31.

the Inhabitants of Gebim] This place ſeems ſo termed, from ſome ſtore of ditches about it. For that the name importeth. See on ch.33.4. 1 King 2.26.

gather themſelves to flee] Or, rather, have retired; are fled, as Jer.4.6. & 6.1. For that appears to be the true notion of the word, from Exod.9.19,20. by comparing the one verſe with the other.

V. 32. As yet ſhall he remain at Nob, that day] Heb. Yet this day at Nob is he to ſtand, or, ſtay; as Gen.45.1. Deut.5.31. 2 Sam.7.18. (a place abuſed, to prove, that David ſate at the commencing of that his ſolemn prayer) he ſhall make ſtay this day) there: or, as the old Latine hath it, Yet a day for him to ſtand at Nob, that is, he hath now but a dayes journey, to bring him thither, to arrive with his army there. Of the place, ſee 1 Sam.21.1. Neh.11.32.

he ſhall ſhake his hand, againſt the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jeruſalem] Being come to Nob, from whence he might ſee Jeruſalem; Sion eſpecially, the higher part; he ſhall in contempt of the city, and as in a menacing way, intending to be with her ere long, ſhake his hand at her: (the ſame word is here uſed, that was before, ver. 15.) or, as ſome, he ſhall ſo do by his Meſſengers, when he comes by them before her: and that is the worſt he ſhall be able to do to her, in regard of what he intended againſt her. He ſhall threaten and ſtreiten her, and by that means, it may be, affright her: but he ſhall not ſo much as aſſault her, and much leſs ſurprize her, chap.37.33,35. Yea, as he wags his hand now, at her; ſo ſhe after his defeat, ſhall wag her head, in ſcorn and deriſion, at him, chap. 37.21. whereof, alſo, ſome would expound this paſſage; but the words will not well bear it. But a learned Writer gives a different interpretation from others, of this whole verſe: Which, having related only, I ſhall leave to the judgment of others. He thus renders the text, ſuppoſing it to be more day yet, then to ſtay at Nob; he ſhall move his hand toward the Mount of the Daughter of Sion; that is, he ſhall, by the motion of his hand, as he rides to and fro among his troops, make ſigns to them, not to ſtay; but to march on toward Jeruſalem. The like haſte in the Chaldeans march thitherward, ſee deſcribed, Jer. 6.4.

mount] Whereon Zion, that is, that ſtrong fort, and the upper part of the city, called the city of David, 2 Sam. 5.7,9. was ſituate; as threatning her greateſt ſtrength, that it ſhould be unable to withſtand him.

daughter of Zion] See ch. 1.8.

the hill] For the city ſtood upon a knole, or riſing. See Jer.17.3.

V. 33. Behold the Lord, the Lord of hoſts, &c.] The paſſage in theſe two verſes, (which the Prophet begins with a remarkable note, requiring more ſedulous attention, and ſerious conſideration; Of which, ſee ch.3.1.) is by divers diverſly expounded and applyed. Some expounding it all of the defeat given to the Aſſyrian; Some, of the havock made by his forces among the people of Judah: Others, the former part, ver. 33. of the one; and the latter, ver. 34. of the other. I ſhall follow the firſt, (though contrary to ſome of great note therein,) as moſt agreeable to the drift and tenour of the Prophets diſcourſe; who having before encouraged Gods people, thoſe of Jeruſalem eſpecially, againſt the dreadfull expectation of the Aſſyrian Invaſion; and yet, after that, related his progreſs and proceedings from place to place with his potent Army; that affrighted and enforced to fly all before him, whitherſoever therewith he advanced: and his approaches in menacing manner with it to Jeruſalem; becauſe this might miniſter matter of much terrour, even to Jeruſalem it ſelf; and thoſe that ſhould reſort thither for ſuccour, he now, that they might not thereby be diſheartned, enformeth them in the next place, how the Lord would deal with him, and theſe his forces, wherewith he threatned Jeruſalem. He would take them down in an unexpected manner, and diſable him and them, from doing ought further againſt it.

Behold] As if he had ſaid; Mark yet, and behold a ſtrange change. Ye have heard of a furious and forcible approach of an inſolent tyrant. Wait but a while, and ye ſhall ſee his pride pulled down; and his enterprize againſt you utterly fruſtrate.

the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] One mightier then he, as ver. 24, 26.

ſhall top the bough] Heb. word for word, ſhall branch, or, bough, the branch, or, bough: to branch, or, bough; for, to cut, or lop off, either, as to root, for, to root out, Job. 31.12. Pſal.52.5. See the like, ch.22.5. the one word ſignifies not ſo much to prune and pare away ſprigs, or the ſpray, or the lower waſhy branches next to the ground; as to lop and fell the bigger boughs, and great arms, or the loftieſt of them that bear the moſt fruit; which the word, from whence that here uſed (as ſpecially coyned for this purpoſe, and no where elſe read) cometh, doth properly ſignifie, Ezek.31.5,6. chap. 17.6. and 27.10. in regard whereof, the higheſt cliffs of rocks are by the ſame tearm deſigned, Judg.15.8,11. chap. 2.21. & 57.5. the other word imports, not a bare bough, or branch; but a brave bough, or, branch: (for thence the word, bravery, chap.3.18.) a bough, or branch, adorned, and beautified with leaves, and fruit, Ezek.17.6. & 31.5,6,8,12,13. put here collectively, bough, for boughes; as tree, for trees, ver. 19. So that, hereby is meant, that God wou'd cut down the chief and principal, thoſe of greateſt ſtate and might, in Sennacheribs army: ſuch, as are likened to high boughs, and tall trees, ch. 2.13. ver.18. ch.18.5.

with terrour] Or, with violence. In moſt terrible manner, as the like word is uſed, ch. 8.14. & 29.20. For this word it ſelf is alſo without fellow; but comes of one, that ſignifies both to force, and to fright.

and the high ones of ſtature ſhall be hewed down] As Amos, 2.9. the ſame in effect, reiterated in other terms; but with ſome amplification: as if he had ſaid, not the boughs onely ſhall be lopped, but the trees alſo, even the talleſt of them, felled, his Princes whom he mated with Kings, ver.8.

and the haughty ſhall be humbled] Thus ſhall Sennacheribs plumes be pluckt, and his pride pulled down; as was before threatned, ver. 12. See ch.2.11–17.

V. 34. And he ſhall cut down the thickets of the forreſts] Or, forreſt, rather, for ſo it is in the original; that is, the main body of his army. For might, and multitude, compared to a wood, or forreſt full of trees, as before, ver.18. See alſo ch. 9.18.

with iron] Or, as with iron. The note of ſimilitude to be ſupplyed: as ver. 26. that is, as with iron tools, axes, and hatchets, or the like, wherewith boughs are wont to be lopt, and trees feld. See Jer.46.22,23.

and Lebanon ſhall fall] Hence ſome would infer, that this verſe at leaſt, muſt be underſtood, not of Sennacheribs Army; but of the ſtrength and glory of the Jewiſh people pulled down by him; becauſe Lebanon was one of the boundaries of their Countrey, Deut.11.24. Joſh.1.4. and is ſometime applyed to it and them, and more ſpecially, to Jeruſalem, Jer. 22.6,20,23. Zach.10.10. & 11.1. But to omit, that Jeruſalem, fell not by Sennacherib, being defeated of his purpoſe: Mount Lebanon abounding with goodly tall cedars, and other timber trees, and famous far and neer; for the ſame is commonly uſed to reſemble, as well other States, perſons, and people, as thoſe of the Jews; in compariſons taken from woods and forreſts eſpecially. Yea, the Aſſyrian king, in particular, is called a Cedar of Lebanon, Ezek. 31.3. and Carmel, though a Mount of Iſrael, is in this very argument applyed to him and his forces, ver.18. Lebanon therefore, as the Jewiſh Rabbines well obſerve, is no other here then the Aſſyrian vaſt hoſt; for might and multitude, likened to that mountain, and the trees that it bore.

by a mighty one] As Pſal.93.4. or, an excellent one; as the word is rendred, Pſal. 8. 1, 9. & 76.4. or, a goodly one; as Ezek. 17.23. or, a gallant one, as chap. 33.21. or, a glorious one; as in the ſame place: that is, by an Angel, ch.37.36. ſo rather, (as moſt, both Jewiſh, and others agree) then as ſome; who, by Lebanon, underſtanding Sennacherib himſelf, who ſuſtained that army, as mount Lebanon did the trees, that grew on it, would by this great and gallant one, have meant his ſon and heir, that ſlew him; which ſeems not to agree with the ſtory, which tells us, that two of his ſons ſlew him, and a third of them ſucceeded him, ch.37.38. or, as Others, who by Lebanon, would underſtand the Temple at Jeruſalem, built with the Cedars of Lebanon, 1 King. 9.10, 11. burnt down by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King.25.9.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. A*Nd there ſhall come forth a rod out of the ſtem of Jeſſe*] Or, as Some. For, as Chap. 10. 17. whether way we read it, is not much material. The manner of this our Prophet is, as hath formerly bin obſerved, upon occaſion of particular deliverances, and reſtitutions, more remarkable then ordinary, related or foretold; to riſe higher and proceed further, even unto that more general deliverance of mankinde, and ſpiritual reſtauration and enlargment of the Church by the Meſſias at his coming; which is therefore not unfitly here annexed unto that, which he had in the cloſe of the former Chapter delivered, concerning the deliverance of Jeruſalem and the remainder of Judah, by the defeat and fall of the Aſſyrian king and his forces, chap. 10. 27,37,38. a type of the ſpiritual enemies of the Church, utterly quelled by Chriſt, Col.2.15. Howbeit, it may well be conceived to be, not in way of bare conſecution, onely annexed; but by way of declaration alſo ſubjoyned to the former, as rendring a reaſon, why it was ſaid, that God would deliver and preſerve that people, for the anointing, chap. 10. 27. to wit, becauſe of the Meſſias, who was to come of that people, and that family, which God would therefore have preſerved. Some of the late Jewiſh writers would draw all this to Ezekiah; wherein ſome of ours alſo go too far; yet not denying, but that Ezekiah is therein conſidered, as a type of the Meſſias; of whom alſo the moſt, even of the later Jewiſh commenters, therein concurring with the ancient Talmudiſts, expound this place. And among theſe, ſome of them give this connexion of this paſſage with the former. Having there expounded, that excellent, or, gallant one, by whom Sennacheribs forces ſhould fall, to be Ezekiah; for whoſe purity, and piety, wherein heexcell ed, called, being one of thoſe, whom the Pſalmiſt gives that title to, Pſal. 16. 3. and the Prophet, Jer. 30. 21. (in both which places, the ſame word is uſed,) God ſhould upon his prayer, give the enemy that defeat, and vouchſafe thoſe of Judah that deliverance: becauſe, ſay they, it might be further demanded; yea, but what ſhall become of thoſe of Iſrael, that the Aſſyrian carried captive unto Halah, and Habor, 2 King. 17. 6. to this the Prophet here anſwers, that the Meſſias, when he comes, one of the ſame ſtock with Ezekiah, he ſhall gather them together, and bring them back again, and doe more wonderful things for them, then ever was done for Ezekiah; alluding to the term of wonderment, uſed, ch. 9. 6. which they apply to Ezekiah. Thus they acknowledging, not Ezekias, but the Meſſias, to be here meant.

a rod] Or, a twig, ſuch as rods are made of. The word is no where elſe found, ſave here; and Prov. 14. 3. where a fools tongue is termed, a twig of pride, wherewith he is twitting, and twigging of others; or, for which by others, he comes to be twigged himſelf. Howſoever therefore, ſome following therein the Chaldee Paraphraſt, underſtand by it, a royall ſcepter, as another word ſeems to import, uſed of Chriſt, Gen. 49. 10. Pſal. 45. 6. Yet in this place to me, it ſeems to have reſpect rather to the meanneſs and weakneſs of Chriſts appearance in our humane nature, and the low condition, wherein here he lived, rather like to ſome tender and ſorry twig, then to a goodly bough, or a kingly Scepter, chap. 53. 2.

the ſtem of Jeſſe] Stem, or, trunk, or, ſtump. For the word ſignifies properly, the ſtump of a plant, tree, or ſhrub, left in the ground, when the main body of it is felled, or cut away, Job. 14. 7, 8. chap. 40. 24. like that in Nebuchadnezars dream, Dan. 4. 15, 23. Whereupon, ſome ſuppoſe, that theſe words have reference to the lopping, and felling of the Jewiſh ſtate and people, by the Aſſyrian mentioned, as they ſuppoſe, chap. 10. 37, 38. and ſo begin the chapter, with an adverſative; But, or, Yet. As implying, that notwithſtanding that State, compared to a goodly Cedar, were ſo impaired, and impoveriſhed, that it might juſtly be deemed, rather a ſorry ſtump, then a tree: yet from it, ſhould ſprout out a ſprig, that ſhould do ſtrange things. For the expoſition of the former paſſage, and the connexion of this with it, enough hath been already ſaid. But for the term here uſed, it is not denyed, but that the houſe of David, and the ſtrength, ſtate, and wealth of it, was much impaired in thoſe times, as well by the defection of the ten tribes, as the invaſions of theſe their brethren, the Syrians, Aſſyrians, and others. Nor is it improbable, that the Prophet had here an eye thereunto. But withall it is moſt likely, that he principally reſpected the mean and low eſtate, that the family of David was to be brought unto, at the time of Chriſts birth, when Joſeph his father in law, and Mary his mother, both of the blood royal, and lineally deſcended from David, Matth. 1. 1, 16. Luk. 2. 4, 5. & 3. 23, 31. were the one a poor Carpenter, and the other of as mean a condition as he, Matth. 13. 53. Mar. 6. 3. Luk. 4. 22. So that the royal ſtem might then ſeem to be utterly withered, and in a manner cut clean away; in regard whereof he ſaith, not, the ſtock of David; but the ſtump of Jeſſe, a private man of no power or ſtate, nor of any great eſteem, 1 Sam. 18. 18, 23. & 20. 30. & 22. 7. thereby to intimate from how mean a condition, in the eyes of fleſh and blood, the Meſſias, as man, ſhould take his firſt riſe, ch. 53. 2.

and a branch ſhall grow out of his roots] The ſame in effect (which in this Prophet is very frequent) with the former.

a branch] Or, a ſprig, or, a ſcion. Such as they are wont to graff with, ch. 60. 21. and Babel is compared to a rotten ſprig, or ſpray, ch. 14. 19. The Meſſias indeed is termed a branch, Jer. 23. 5. & 33. 15. Zach. 3. 8. but it is another word that is there uſed. The word ſprig, ſeems better here to ſuit with the word twig, that went before, and in ſound comes ſomewhat neat it; and they go yet further off, who with the Latine render it a flower. From the word here uſed, it is by many learned writers deemed, that the Evangeliſt ſaith, that Chriſt was to be called, not a Nazarite, ſuch as Sampſon was, though a type of Chriſt, Judg. 13. 7. Or, ſuch as thoſe in the law, that cut not their hair, nor drank wine, nor touched any dead corpſe. For what is frivolouſly conceited of our Saviour, concerning the firſt, is fabulous, and groundleſs; and for the latter two, it is certain, that he did both drink wine, Matth. 11. 19. & 26. 29. and touch dead bodies, Matth. 9. 25. Luk. 7. 14. (beſides, that the word of ſeparation, whence that name comes, is written with a divers character from the word here uſed,) nor a Nazarene, which ſignifies one of Nazareth, or Naſareth, the Town where he was brought up, Mar. 14. 65. & 16. 6. Luk. 4. 34. which is ſuppoſed to have had its name, from the word here uſed, as a place, which being fit for fruit trees, had much planting of them about it. But a Nazarite or, a Nazaree, (for both readings are found Act. 2. 22. & 3. 6.) that is, as well the ſpriggy one, here propheſied of, as one of Nazareths breed, or abode, Matth. 2. 23.

ſhall grow] Or, bud, as it is rendred, Pſal. 132. 17. or, ſpring up, as Pſal. 85. 11. ch. 44. 4.

out of his roots] Who theſe roots ſhould be expoſiters diſpute, and ſome run upwards and fetch in Abraham, Iſaack, and Jacob, with all Jeſſes anceſtours. Others, run downward, and bring in David, and Nathan, with all Jeſſes Poſterity, his ſons, and ſons ſons, as the Chaldee yeilds it. For Jeſs, ſay they, was as the grain caſt into the ground; thoſe of his poſterity, were as the roots, or ſtrings of the root, that from the grain ſwelling in the ground ſprout out. The phraſe imports the very ſame, but with further emphaſis; that was before ſaid, the ſtump, there; is the roots, here; the ſtump, is ſome ſmall or ſhort part of the ſtem, or ſtock above-ground Dan. 4. 15. the root is that, that lyes under-ground, Job. 14. 8. before Jeſs, that is, his houſe, or race, whence this twig was to ſhoot forth, was ſaid to be, as a ſtump, that is, left neer, but ſomewhat above the ground, when the main body of the tree is gone. Now it is likened to the root of a plant, or tree, ſo cut away that nothing of it is left to be ſeen above-ground; ſo that the ſprig that ſprings from it, muſt needs riſe immediately from the root it ſelf, nothing appearing above ground, from whence it might ſprout. So is Ezekiah ſaid to proceed from the root of Ahaz his father; whoſe rod, that is, power, had been utterly broken, ch. 14. 29. Yea; ſo in a parallel place, where the ſame terms here uſed, are found, Dan. 11. 6, 7. of the daughter of the Southern king, given in marriage to the Northern, it is ſaid, that out of a ſprig from her roots, one ſhould ſtand up; when, neither ſhe ſhould retain any power, nor her husband ſtand; and both he that brought her, and he that begat her, (or, as ſome, whom ſhe begat) and he that ſupported her, ſhould all be given up. Which place conduceth much to the clearing of this. See of the ſmall beginnings in ſhew of Chriſt and his kingdom, thoſe parables, Matth. 13. 31, 32, 33. Mark. 4. 30, 31, 32.

V. 2. And the Spirit of the Lord ſhall reſt upon him] He proceeds here, to ſhew the tranſcendent excellencies, and endowments of this rod, or ſprig, that ſhould riſe, and ſpring up from ſo poor, and ſorry a ſtock, by means whereof he ſhould be enabled to effect and accompliſh, ſuch ſtrange, and unheard of atchievements as are hereafter mentioned.

the Spirit of the Lord] The Holy Ghoſt, which proceedeth from God the Father, Joh. 15. 26. and which over-ſhadowed the Virgin in the conception of our Saviour, Luk. 1. 35. though ſome underſtand by the Spirit here, God the Father, who is a Spirit alſo, Joh. 4. 24. and is ſaid to dwell in Chriſt, Joh. 14. 10. Some, again, the Son, the Second Perſon, called his Eternall Spirit, Heb. 9. 14. 1 Pet. 3. 18, 19. But that which was givin in the firſt place, ſeems moſt probable; becauſe the three Perſons are here diſtinctly propounded, as alſo, Pſal. 45. 6, 7. chap. 61. 1. and as diſtinctly appeared at his baptiſm; the Father in the cloud: the Son in the river: the Holy-Ghoſt in the Dove, Matth. 3. 16, 17.

ſhall reſt upon him] Not come upon him only; as it did upon his Mother, in the conceiving of him, Luk. 1. 35. nor be upon him onely, chap. 61. 1. but reſt, and abide with him; take up, in a more ſpecial, yea ſingular manner, its perpetual and never interrupted, or eclipſed reſidence with him, and in him, typified by the Holy Ghoſts deſcending in the likeneſs of a dove, at the time of his baptiſm, and reſting upon him, Matth. 3. 16. the ſign given John, who baptiſed him, whereby to know him, Joh. 1. 32, 33. Somewhat the like phraſe is uſed; where it is ſaid, that the Spirit of Elias reſteth upon Elizeus, 2 King. 2. 15. as alſo of thoſe elders, concerning whom God told Moſes, that he would take of the Spirit that was upon him, and put it upon them, it is ſaid, that when he ſo did, the Spirit reſted upon them; and when it reſted upon them, they did inceſſantly prophecy, Num. 11. 17, 25, 26. yet not on them; or in them, ſo as on Chriſt; not corporally, in the Apoſtles ſenſe, as in him, Col. 2. 9. not fully as in him, Col. 1. 19. but partially; I will take of it, ſaith God, not inceſſantly, and inſeperably, as in him. For though they propheſied inceſſantly, while the Spirit reſted upon them; yet it appeares not, that, that prophetical Spirit was alwaies ſo with them; for then ſhould they have done nothing but propheſied; whereas they were ſet apart for other employments, Num. 11. 17.

The ſpirit of, &c. The Prophet having ſaid in generall, that the Spirit of God ſhould reſt on him, goes on, to recite ſome heads of thoſe particular endowments, wherewith the Meſſias, in his humane nature, ſhould be ſuperabundantly furniſhed, above al creatures, men or Angels; not for his own private uſe, or honour alone; but for the managing of his ſpiritual kingdom, and the ſufficient ſupply with the like graces, and endowments, according to their neceſſary employments, and due proportions of all thoſe, that had inte reſt in him, and dependance upon him. Joh.1.14,16. & 3.34. & 4.14. & 7.38,39. Act.2.33. Eph.4.13,15,16. Col.1.19. & 2.3,9,19. for the Spirit is put, ſometime, for the Holy Ghoſt it ſelf, the third perſon in the Trinity: Joh.3.8. 1 Cor.12.4,6,8. Rev.22.17. and ſo it is to be underſtood, in the former branch. Sometime, for the graces, and ſpirituall endowments, that are given by the ſpirit; either ordinary, or extraordinary. Joh.7.39. Which place, would being compared with Acts,19.2. help to clear that place, almoſt generally, much miſtaken; as if the perſons there ſpoken of, were wholly ignorant, of the being of the Holy-Ghoſt; whereas the Apoſtles queſtion, was of ſome extraordinary gifts of it; and their anſwer ſuitable to his demand. So Rom.8.23. 2 Cor.1,22. 1 Theſſ.4.8. & 5.19. with 2 Tim.1.6. And ſo is it to be taken in this latter branch, for the graces of the Spirit. And the word Spirit, is prefixed, and repeated again, and again, before theſe endowments, to intimate, that Chriſt, ſhould not have theſe, or the like parts, and gifts, as men commonly have them; either as natural, or acquiſite faculties, enabling them to the performance of natural offices, and the managing of worldly affaires: but that they be in him, of a far more ſublime, a ſpirituall, celeſtial, and divine nature; as proceeding from the Spirit of God, dwelling in him. Col.2.9. Jam.3.17. 2 Pet.1.4. Howbeit, ſome take the Spirit, in this branch, alſo, as in the former, for the Holy Ghoſt it ſelf, expounding the words thus; The Spirit of wiſdome, &c. that is, The Spirit that worketh in mens hearts, theſe graces; and that ſhould conferr them, in a ſingular manner upon him: which yet in effect will come home to that, which was before ſaid, for the ſubſtance of the matter here intended. Spirituall endowments here mentioned, are ſix in number; howſoever our Popiſh writers, following the old verſion, that without due regard, jumbles ſome paſſages together here; and ſwervs, both from the terms in the original, and the tenour of the context; make ſeven of them, to anſwer the number of the ſeven Spirits, mentioned by John. Rev.1.4. & 4.5. But the text mentions but ſix: and the addition of a ſeventh in the Apocalips, ſay ſome, was to intimate a larger meaſure of the Spirit, exhibited in the times of the new teſtament, then of the old. But neither was it the Prophets purpoſe, to relate all the endowments of Chriſt, or graces of the ſpirit; which no tongue, or pen can do: and divers of them, as his humility, meekneſs, compaſſion, patience, &c. are not here expreſſed: nor need we in the number, to ſeek for any myſtery; wherein wanton wits, to ſport themſelves are too prone. Suffice us it may, that by thoſe here mentioned, is intended an abſolute all-ſufficiency, to be found in Chriſt, needfull for the conſummating of the work of his Mediatourſhip; and the procuring of the eternall happineſs of all his. See Rev.3.1.

of wiſdome and underſtanding] This is the firſt pair of thoſe Spirituall endowments: and thoſe two are here diſtinguiſhed: as alſo Deut 4.6. Prov.2.6. & 4.5. & 7.4. But how to be limited in their diſtinct notions, is not eaſie to determine. Some would have the former ſuch a gift, as fits one to be a teacher. 1 Cor.12.8. The latter ſuch a gift, as fits one to be a learner; able to underſtand that, that is delivered by the teacher. Mat.24.15. 2 Tim.2.7. Others by wiſedome underſtand, skill, in divine matters; by underſtanding, prudence, in politike affaires. Others diſtinguiſh them, as antecedent, and conſequent; making wiſdome the gift, of illumination, Eph.1.18. Heb.6.4. & 10.32. and underſtanding, the apprehending, and judging of things aright, by help of that light. Rom.2.18. 1 Cor.2.14,15. And this I take to be moſt probable; though ſome ſuppoſe, the one to be adjoyned to the other, by way of expoſition onely. Many other diſtinctions of them, the Schoolmen deliver: but ſuch, as divers of them groundleſs; and moſt ſuch, as do not ſo well fit this place: nor is it neceſſary to over-clog this work with. Theſe two, God promiſed to beſtow upon Solomon, as two endowments moſt needfull for the government of his people. 1 Kings 3.12. And theſe therefore are in a far larger manner conferred upon him who was far greater then Solomon, Mat.12.42. and of whoſe kingdome, Solomons was but a ſhadow, Pſal.45.6. Heb.1.8.

the ſpirit of counſel, and might] This is the ſecond pair of endowments, and contains two vertues, very requiſite to the managing of a State, ch.36.5. to wit, counſel, and courage. Where again by Counſel, ſome underſtand ability to adviſe, and direct others; by courage, an ability, to execute advice given by others: as if they belonged to ſeveral perſons, or ſubjects. But by Counſel, I conceive to be meant that faculty, whereby a man is enabled to manage his affairs to the beſt advantage, and to find out an iſſue in matters intricate and perplexed, Prov.20.18. & 24.6. Luk.14.31. By courage, (for ſo I would rather render it) that vertue, whereby a man is enabled, reſolutely to undertake, and undauntedly to go through with, whatſoever his place, or office neceſſarily requires of him, ſeem it never ſo hazardous, 1 Sam.14.6,13. & 17.32. 2 Sam.23.16. Neh.6.11. Eſth.4.16. Pſal.18.32. And theſe two proportionably mixt together, make an excellent compoſure.

the Spirit of knowledg, and of the fear of the Lord] The third pair of ſpiritual endowments found in Chriſt; which Some again would ſo diſtinguiſh, as the one beſitting a teacher, as importing skill, in interpretation of Scripture, Mal. 2.8. Luk.11.52. The other belonging to a learner. Deut. 17. 19. Pſal. 25. 14. & 34. 11. But that diſtinction ſuites not ſo well with this place, where the Meſsias is propounded; not ſo much, as a Teacher, and much-leſs, as a learner; But as a mighty Prince, able diſcreetly and righteouſly, to manage a large dominion, and to over-reach, and over-power all the enemies thereof.

knowledg] How to diſtinguiſh this from the two firſt, many much trouble themſelves, and ſo croſs one another, that it is hard to find any two that concur; too tedious it would be to relate their diſſenting judgments. To leave them herefore to their jarring debates; the rather, becauſe the words are in Scripture oft promiſcuouſly uſed. By knowledg, we may well here underſtand the power of diſcerning the true nature of things, even the moſt hidden, and abſtruſe, as the ſecreteſt thoughts, and motions of mens hearts, 1 King.8.39. Prov.15.11. Jer.17.9,10. Act.1.24. & 15.9. 1 Joh. 3.20. that which is in ſpecial manner attributed to Chriſt, Matth.9.4. Luk. 11, 17. Joh.21.17. Heb.4.12,13. Rev.2.23.

and of the fear of the Lord] That which Solomon makes after David his Father, Pſal.111.10. the prime part, if not, the principal piece of wiſdome, Prov.1.7. & 9.10. and Job before them both, wiſdom it ſelf, Job 28. 28. But much doubt is made, how any fear of God ſhould be in Chriſt; unto whom yet, ſome ſuch thing ſeems to be attributed, Heb.5.7. And if we ſhall conſider, that there is not only a fear of wrath, which even the worſt may have, Jam. 2.19. and a fear of ſinning, which even the beſt muſt have, while they live here, Eccleſ. 9.2. Prov.28.13. but a fear of honour and reverence alſo, that accompanies and ſeaſons all ſervice of God, Pſal.2.11. & 5.7. Heb.12.28. ſuch, as even the bleſſed Saints and Angels, retain ſtill in heaven; we need not doubt, but that Chriſt, who adored God, as he was man, Joh.4.22. though, he were adored, and that by the Angels themſelves, as he was God, Heb.1.6. did bear a reverent affection unto his Father, whom he worſhipped, Matth.11.25. Joh.11.41. & 17.1,2. and whoſe ſervant, alſo, he is ſaid to be, ch.42.1. & 53.11.

V. 3. And ſhall, &c.] Before, were the excellent endowments of Chriſt; now followes the employment and exerciſe of theſe his parts and endowments, in the adminiſtration of his royal power and place.

ſhall make him of quick underſtanding in the fear of the Lord] Heb. he ſhall ſent, or, ſmell; or, it ſhall make him ſent, or, ſmell, in the fear of the Lord. This, ſome, following the former verſion, underſtand of the Party ſpoken of, on whom the Spirit doth thus reſt; he ſhall ſent, or ſmell, or breath of nothing, but what is pious, and religious. He ſhall ſend out ſuch a ſweet ſent in all his courſes, as ſhall ſavour of that precious ſpiritual oyl of piety, and godlineſs, wherewith he was ſo abundantly anoynted, Pſal.45.7. ſee Cant. 1.2. See ſomewhat alſo the like of Jacob, Gen. 27.27. Of Gods people in general, Hoſ. 14. 6. and of the Apoſtles, more eſpecially, 2 Cor.2.14,15. but they, ſo from Chriſt, through Chriſt, and the Goſpel of Chriſt, and the knowledg of Chriſt, which they bare about with them, 2 Cor.4.6,7. nor do ſome of thoſe, that admit the latter verſion, depart much from this ſenſe, to wit, that the Spirit reſting upon him, ſhould make him to fill all places where he comes, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of himſelf, and his aſſociates, with ſuch a ſweet ſavour, as the ſent of the ointment, poured upon his head, filled the whole houſe with, where he then was, Matth.26.7. Joh. 12.3. But others, rather of thoſe, that take the latter way, underſtand it of ſharpneſs of judgment; the forementioned Spirit, ſhall make him of quick underſtanding, or, judgement; not in worldly affaires, Luk.12.14. things far beneath his cogniſance, Joh.18.36. but either in matters of piety and godlineſs, in diſcerning of thoſe things, that are agreeable thereunto, and that diſagree from the ſame; whatſoever ſhew they may bear with them, or gloſs may be ſet on them, Rom.2.18. Phil.1.9,10. Col. 2.8,23. or, in judging of mens perſons and inward diſpoſitions, whether they have the power of piety within them, 2 Tim. 3.5. whether their hearts be ſincere, and upright, or no, Joh. 1.47. and to diſcover the hypocriſy of hollow-hearted perſons, through all thoſe masks and ſemblances, vails and pretences, under which they ſhroud, and, wherewith they ſtrive to cover and conceal their unſoundneſs, Matth. 22.18. & 23. 25, 27, 28. Luk.16.15. Joh.2.23,25. & 6.26,70. It is a metaphor taken from the ſenſe of ſmelling, which, ſaith one of the Jewiſh Doctors upon the place, is ſurer, and leſs ſubject to deceit and miſtake, where it is quick and vigorous, then, either the hearing, or the ſight. And it is, as if the Prophet had ſaid, he ſhall be ſo quick of ſcent, in diſcrying things of this nature, that he will ſmell out an hypocrite, though he neither ſee his face, or hear his voice: or, though his face promiſe, or his voice proteſt the contrary, Matth.6.16. & 7.21,22,23. And this expoſition, the words following confirm.

in the fear of the Lord] This term is uſed in Scripture, Sometime for that reverent diſpoſition that man bears unto God, either as his Soveraign Lord and Maſter [illegible] as his Father in Chriſt, 1 King.18.3,12. Neh.7.2. ſomet[illegible] for the ſervice and worſhip of God, 2 King. 17.25,28,32,33,34,41. becauſe it ought to proceed from it, and be ſeaſoned with it, Heb. 12. 38. Sometime, for all pious and religious affection towards God, in general, Pſal.19.9. Jer.32.40. and ſo it is taken here; though I accord not with thoſe, who would have the fear of the Lord, here mentioned, to comprehend, Synechdochically, all the endowments before named; rendring the words, his ſcenting, or, ſmelling, ſhall be joyned with the fear of the Lord; the laſt of thoſe graces, and conſequently, (becauſe they hang all on one ſtring, and are links all of one chain) with the reſt alſo of them: and the meaning to be, that he ſhould not judge of things, ſlightly, and weakly, as the manner of men is; but wiſely, underſtandingly, adviſedly, reſolutely, knowingly, religiouſly. Which, though all true, yet ſtuffs too much into the text; becauſe more by much, then the word it ſelf, ſimply, and ſingly conſidered, imports.

and he ſhall not judge after the ſight of his eyes] Or, So that he ſhall not, &c. as chap.10.19. for this is added, as an effect of his ſagacity and expertneſs, in judging aright of matters, or perſons preſented unto him, to be decided, or tryed by him; that it may keep him free in matter of judicature, from being either deluded with fair ſhews, and out-ſides; or miſled by colourable, but falſe, reports.

after the ſight of his eyes] Not with reſpect of mens perſons, 2 Chr.19.7. Rom.2.11. wherein men, many times are faulty, Pſal.82.2. Jam.2.1,2. Chriſt is far from it, Job 34.19. Matth. 22.16. ver.4. nor according to outward ſhews and appearances, as men are wont of to do, Joh.7.24. 2 Cor.10.7. becauſe they cannot pierce into mens hearts, or diſcern their ſecret intentions, and hidden diſpoſitions, 1 Cor.2.11. as Chriſt being God and man, thus furniſhed, can do, and doth, 1 Sam.16.7. whom no gliſtering outſide, or goodly ſemblance, can deceive, Jer.17.9,10. Gal.6.7.

neither reprove after the hearing of his eares] As he ſhall not, in regard of external ſhews, and appearances, acquit, or approve any, who is in truth, faulty, or inwardly unſound: ſo he ſhall not upon any flying report, or forged ſuggeſtion, proceed to the cenſuring, or miſdeeming of any, (as men, even the beſt, now and then do, 1 Sam.24.9,10. 2 Sam. 16. 3,4, & 19.24–27.) who is not faulty, but free from that, wherewith he is charged, Job 1.8–12. & 2.3–6. Pſal.7.8–10. & 13.15,16. & 23.10. He ſhall not heed, or regard any reports from others, either for men, or againſt them, (which men are, of neceſſity, compelled to do; becauſe they cannot come to the notice of things, otherwiſe: and by reaſon thereof, being through untrue depoſitions, miſ-informed, do by meer miſtake, therefore, many times, accordingly, paſs wrong judgement) but ſhall alwayes proceed upon certain knowledg of his own, in whatſoever doom and ſentence he ſhall paſs upon any, Gen.18.21. Joh. 2.23–25. in the judgement by God the Father, committed unto him, Joh. 5.22, 27. Act. 17.31. Rom.2.17. & 14.10,12. 1 Cor.4.5. 2 Cor.5.10. 2 Tim. 4.1. 1 Pet.4. 5.

V. 4. But] Heb. And. as ch. 7.12.

with righteouſneſſe] Heb. in righteouſneſſe; as Pſal.96.13. & 98.9. that is, juſtly, uprightly.

judge the poor] That is, judge for them; give ſentence in their behalf, and conſequently, execute juſtice for them: as Pſal.7.8. & 26.1. ch.1.17. He ſhall miniſter juſtice, uprightly, equally, impartially, as well to poor, as to rich, Pſal. 72.2,4.

and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth] The ſame thing, in effect, that was ſpoken before; but with ſome little further explication: for inſtead of judge, here, is reprove, or debate; for the word will admit either: if debate; it is, to plead for them: as Job 13.15. if reprove; it is to rebuke for them, by word, Pſal.105.14. or to puniſh for them, by execution of judgment, Pſal.94.10. thoſe that wrong, or oppreſſe them, Pſal.72.4. for juſtice, he puts equity, or eavenneſſe: the ſame, ſee Pſal.45.6. & 67.4. a term taken from thoſe, that cut out a thing, in dividing it, to an hair, as we ſay, or, a thread: for the poor, it is here the meek of the earth, or, land; alluding to that peculiar place, wherein Gods people did then moſt abide. So Zeph.2.3. to poor, he adds meek; partly, to note the qualification of ſuch poor, as Chriſt undertakes to protect: (for, all poor, are not meek; no more then all poor in ſtate, poor alſo in ſpirit, Matth.5.3. with Luk. 6. 20.) and partly, becauſe where poverty and meekneſs meet, ill-minded men are uſually the more prone to abuſe, and wrong ſuch, while they obſerve them content quietly to bear and paſs by thoſe abuſes and wrongs, that others will not ſo eaſily put up. Howbeit, there want not thoſe of note, that expound this branch, not of Chriſts dealing for ſuch; but of his dealing with them: and they render the words thus; and he will reprove, or, correct, (as the word ſometime imports, Pſal.6.1. & 38.1.) in uprightneſſe, or, in eavenneſſe; (that is, uprightly, eavenly,) the meek of the earth, that is, as they conceive it, he will carry an eaven hand, between the one, and the other, not ſparing either, when they do amiſs, nor bearing out either in what they are faulty; as God himſelf gives in charge, Exod. 23.2, 3. or, he will carry a diſcreet, and moderate hand, in rebuking, or chaſtiſing the meek, and lowly; ſo as, though to correct, and reclaim them; yet, not to diſhearten; much leſs deſtroy them, ch. 27.7–9. & 48.9,10. Jer. 30.11. But I adhere rather to the former. See ch.2.4.

And he ſhall ſmite the earth with the rod of his mouth] This ſome alſo underſtand of Chriſts dealing with both ſorts, good and bad, or elect and refuſe; but in a different manner, by the power and Scepter of his word, ſubduing, and bringing in and under, the one, unto a voluntary obedience, and ſubmiſſion to his Will, Pſal. 110. 2, 3. and by the ſame word again, ſmiting the obſtinate and refractory ones in their ſouls and conſciences, and thereby, ſealing them up, as it were, to condemnation and deſtruction, Joh. 12. 48. For the word of God is double-edged, Heb. 4.12. Rev. 1. 16. as a ſacrificing knife unto thoſe that are corrected and converted by it, Rom.15.16,18. 1 Cor.5.5. 1 Pet.4.6. ſo a ſlaughtering knife, unto thoſe that ſtand out againſt it, Rev.2. 12, 16. as a Savour of life, by their converſion unto ſalvation, to the one; ſo a ſavour of death, unto their confuſion, in their condemnation, and everlaſting deſtruction, to the other, 2 Cor. 2.16. But I conceive it rather with others, as well Jews as Chriſtians, to be underſtood only of his dealing with the wicked, called here, the earth; becauſe earthly-minded, Phil. 3. 20. and having their portion only here upon earth, Matth.6.20, 21. Luk. 12.21. & 16.25. Jam.5.5. And they are thoſe, that poſſeſs the greateſt part of the earth; being in moſt places, the moſt in number, in regard whereof, alſo, they are called the world, Joh.16.19. & 17.9, 25. 1 Joh.5.19. and the men of this world, Pſal. 17. 14. Theſe it is ſaid, that Chriſt ſmites, that is, executes judgment upon them, in the behalfe of his poor ſervants, whom they oppoſe and oppreſs: for the effecting whereof, he needs no other weapon, then the rod of his mouth; that is, a word of his mouth; that powerful word of his, whereby, as he created all things, Gen.1.3. Pſal.33. 6. Ioh.1.3. Heb.11.3. and upholds all things, Pſal. 148.5,6. Heb.1.2,3. So is he able to bring all to nothing again, Pſal. 104. 29,30. his word being his will, and his will his work, Pſal.115.3. & 135.6. Dan.4.35. This, I ſuppoſe to be the genuine ſenſe of this clauſe, which requires therefore, to be brought in with an adverſative, But, as denoting a paſſage from Chriſt interpoſing for the one; to his proceedings againſt the other.

and with the breath of his lips ſhall he ſlay the wicked] The ſame thing, in other termes, more emphatically repeated. The earth, there, is the wicked, here: (the word ſingular; but taken collectively, as chap. 3. 11.) though, by the wicked, ſome would underſtand that wicked one, the devil, 1 Joh.3. 10,12. the god and head of all wicked ones, Joh.8.44. & 12. 31. & 14.30. 2 Cor. 4. 4. Eph. 2.2. & 6. 12. But the term ſeems here more general; theſe he is ſaid to ſmite there; which though it imply no leſs, as 1 Sam. 25. 38. 2 Sam. 6.7. Yet is it more fully and expreſly ſaid here, he will ſlay, that which he doth oftimes with ſome of them; by inflicting of exemplary judgments upon them, Dan.7.10,11, 13, 14. Rev. 6. 15–17. and will do with the whole body of them, at the laſt, Luk. 19. 27. 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. And laſtly, what was before ſaid to be done, with the rod of his mouth; is now ſaid, to be effected by the breath of his lips; both which ſome referr to that dreadful doom to be paſt upon all wicked ones at the laſt day, Matth. 25. 41. but it ſeems rather, to imply the ſame with the former, that Chriſt ſhall not need multitudes of men, and ſtore of ammuniton, to bring down, and confound the enemies of himſelf and his people: he can do it of himſelf, with one word of his mouth, as Joh.18.6. Yea, without any word ſpoken, with a blaſt of his breath, or, the breath of his lips; the leaſt motion that may be; they are both joyned together, alſo, Pſal.33. 10. as in creating, there; ſo in deſtroying here, See Job.4.9. & 15. 30. ch. 59. 19. Zach. 4.6,7. 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. Rev. 19.14,15.

V. 5. And righteouſneſs ſhall be the girdle of his loynes; and faithfulneſs the girdle of his reines.] Or, righteouſneſs alſo, &c. as chap. 8. 5,8. or, as ſome, for righteouſneſs ſhall be, &c. as chap.8.21. Thoſe that expound this whole prophecy of Ezekiah, (as we have formerly obſerved, that ſome both Jews and others, do) underſtand hereby righteouſneſs, and faithfulneſs, perſons ſo qualified, men righteous and faithful, (the like whereunto, See on chap. 41. 2.) and the meaning they ſuppoſe to be, that Ezekiah would have many righteous and faithful ones, conſtantly about him; and would not be attended by any, but ſuch; therein following the example of David his predeceſſour, and progenitour, Pſal. 101. 3, 7. & 119. 63, 79, 115. & 141. 7. To which purpoſe alſo, ſome others, who underſtand it of Chriſt, yet give the ſame ſence, that Chriſt will have his holy and faithful ones, alwaies about him, and be himſelf alſo ever in the midſt of them, to protect and ſupport them, Pſal. 46. 5. Zach. 2. 5. Matth. 18. 20. & 28. 20. Joh. 12. 26. & 17. 24. Rev. 14. 4. & 17. 14. & 19. 14. But the words ſeem rather to be taken, for the vertues, or endowments of Chriſt himſelf, as they ſimply ſound with our trope or figure. For the better underſtanding whereof, we are to conſider, that a belt or girdle, is ſometime an enſign of honour, Job. 12. 18. Rev. 1. 13. Sometime, an emblem of power, chap. 22. 21. & 45. 5. Pſal. 18. 32. & 93. 1. Sometime, a note of preparation to fight, 1 King. 20. 11. Sometime, of readineſſe for any affair or employment, journey, or handywork 1 king. 18. 46. Jer. 1. 17. Luk. 12. 35. Eph. 6. 14. 1 Pet. 1. 13. Of Chriſt therefore it is ſayd, that righteouſneſs, and faithfulneſs, ſhall be the girdle that he is girt with; to ſignifie, that he ſhall not need ſuch external ornaments, as worldly Potentates are wont to wear; his gracious and honourable endowments, ſhall be ſufficient to make him conſpicuous and glorious; and from theſe, ſhall he be furniſhed, and enabled ſufficiently for the execution of his office; nor ſhall he be idle and ſlothful, or looſe and diſſolute, (as earthly Kings, and Princes oft are, Eccleſ. 10. 16, 19.) but induſtrious in his place, and alwayes ready for employment, in execution of juſtice, in the behalf of his people; and in faithful diſcharge in a conſtant courſe of whatſoever is neceſſary, for the procurement of their good. Theſe are his girdle. Theſe he counts, as his honour. Theſe ſtick as cloſe to him, as his girdle doth to ones body; and this girdle he never puts off, or layeth down. See Pſal. 109. 19. Jer. 13. 11. The verſe conſiſts of two branches, where the ſame notion, is in other terms redoubled, as one of the Rabbins well obſerves. What is called righteouſneſs, in the former branch; is termed faithfulneſs, in the latter; faithfulneſs, being indeed a part of righteouſneſs, 1 Joh. 1. 9. (See of Chriſt, Rev. 2. 24. & 19. 11.) though here ſome would have it to ſignifie rather firmneſs, then faithfulneſs; and to note the perpetuity and conſtancy of the former, as Exod. 17. 12. for they ſeem to me too wide, that would have the one meant of Chriſts righteouſneſs, whether imputed, or imparted to his, 1 Cor. 1. 30. and the other of faith, whereby they apprehend him, and it 2 Cor. 13. 5. Eph. 3. 17. and for the other two words, that are rendred loyns and reines, though they be ſeveral terms in the original, yet they note both the ſame thing; nor doth the latter word ſignifie reins, (there is another word or two for them, Exod. 29. 13. Lev. 3. 4. Deut. 32. 14. Pſal. 7. 9. & 51. 6.) but loynes, as well, as the former, and is commonly ſo rendred; and that in this very argument, Job 38. 3. & 40. 7. chap. 5. 27. & 32. 11. Jer. 30. 6. and would not, therfore, have been altered here, unleſs for ſome other word of the ſame ſignification.

V. 6. The woolf alſo, ſhall dwell with the lamb] Heb. And the woolf, &c. as chap. 8. 5. but ſome render it here, wherefore, as alſo, verſ. 3. I ſhould rather yield it, Then, as Exod. 7. 9. ch. 8. 3. Here is layd down the ſtrange effect, that this powerful Government of Chriſt ſhould have upon the ſoules of thoſe, who by the miniſtry of the word ſhall be ſubdued unto him, and become loyal ſubjects of his Spiritual kingdom; they ſhall through the efficacy thereof be ſo inwardly changed, that they ſhall ſeem new creatures, transformed out of beaſts into men, Rom. 12. 2. 2 Cor. 3. 18. & 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Eph. 4. 22, 23. This is ſet forth by an allegorical illuſtration, wherein it is ſayd, that ſuch beaſts, and other creatures, as are naturally ravenous, and harmful, as bears, and wolves, adders, and vipers, and the like, ſhould now quietly, and harmleſly keep, and converſe, with mankinde, and with cattel, whom they were wont to prey upon, and do much miſchief to before; thereby implying, that ſuch perſons, as had formerly been of a fierce, ſavage, unteachable, and untractable diſpoſition, like to ſuch forementioned creatures, ſhould then become milde and gentle, tame and harmleſs, tractable & teachable; laying down that their former brutiſh, fierce, froward, and untoward diſpoſition: and that therefore there ſhould be abundance of peace, conſequently, and ſafety, without fear of ſpoyl and rapine, by one from another, in the kingdom of Chriſt. See ch. 2. 4.

the woolf dwell with the lamb] That is, abide, ſtay, as a ſtranger with his hoſt: (So the word properly ſignifies, Judg. 17. 7, 9, 10.) in peaceable and friendly manner; without doing any harm to them, whom he had wont to worry, Mat. 10. 16, 17. See ch. 65. 25.

and the leopard ſhall lye down with the kid] They ſhall lodg quietly together, without fear of harm from the one to the other.

and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together] No wealth, or weakneſs, ſhall tempt them, to attempt ought one againſt another. Some of the Jewiſh writers ſuppoſe an alluſion herein, to the ſtate of the creatures in Noahs Ark; wherein, being ſhut up, they kept all quietly together, during the whole time of the deluge; and it may well be admitted, that the Prophet ſo doth. But that which they add, that it ſhall be ſo again, in the dayes of the Meſſias; that all the creatures ſhall then do the like again, is a meer fable, and fiction of their own idle brains.

and a little childe ſhall lead them] Heb. leading them, or, their leader, which ſome have underſtood of Chriſt, who is called a childe, Luk. 2. 12, 16. Act. 4. 27. and was ſmall, and abject in mens eyes; as David a type of him, ſaith of himſelf, Pſal. 119. 141. But the meaning is plain, that thoſe unruly and ravening creatures, ſhould be ſo tame, that they ſhould not need ſome ſtout and ſtrong fellow, for a ſhepherd, to tend the one, and to defend them againſt the force and violence of the other; ſuch an one as Sampſon, or David, or one of his worthies, that were able to over-maſter, a bear, or a lion, Judg. 14. 5, 6. 1 Sam. 17. 35, 36. 2 Sam. 23. 20. Any childe, though never ſo ſmall, would ſerve to tend them, and to lead them out to paſture, and home again; and not them alone; but thoſe other creatures alſo, where they were mixt with them; implying how, not harmleſs onely, but tractable, men ſhould be; and how meek, content to be directed and conducted, even by the meaneſt, that were able aright to inform them of ought, that might be uſeful for them to know, or concerned them to practiſe; and to follow their advice and direction therein. See the example of Apollos, Act. 18. 24-26.

V. 7. And the cow, and the bear ſhall feed; their young ones ſhall lye down together] Or, The cow alſo, and the bear ſhall feed together (ſupplyed from verſ. 6. or from the next branch either) and their young ones (Heb. their children, as Job 38. 41.) ſhall lye together; they ſhall not only feed, but breed together; nor ſhall the regard of their young ones prevail with them, as it uſually doth with ſuch creatures, to make them ravenous the rather.

and the lion ſhall eat ſtraw like the ox] It is an alluſion, ſay ſome of the Rabbins, to the ſtate of Creation; and the harmleſs food, that the creatures then contented themſelves with, feeding only on ſuch food as the earth afforded them, either hearbs, and graſs on the ground, or, what the ſhrubs and trees yielded, Gen. 1. 29, 30. and not preying upon any other living thing, that is, creature endued with ſenſitive life: for had they ſo done, ſay they, at the firſt, there being but one pair of each made, (which, yet, cannot be proved), a male, and a female, the whole Creation had ſoon been deſtroyed. I will not enter into the diſcuſſion of this difficult queſtion, requiring larger diſcourſe, then the nature of the preſent work will permit, eſpecially, being but a by-matter. See chap. 65. 25. Some expound it, that great and mighty men, ſhould be content to be fed with the ſame food of the word and ſacraments, that the pooreſt and meaneſt feed on, 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4. & 12. 13. Gal. 3. 27, 28. But to ſuch nicities we need not deſcend; an harmleſs courſe of life is intimated; and that is enough.

V. 8. And the ſucking childe ſhall play upon the hole of the aſp; and the weaned childe ſhall put his hand upon the cockatrices den, or, The ſucking childe, alſo, ſhall ſport himſelf, over the hole of the aſp; (a kinde of ſerpent, noted for cruelty, Deut. 32. 33. Poyſon-ful. Job 20. 14, 16. and untameable, Pſal. 59. 5.) Yea, the childe newly weaned (as chap. 23. 9. able now to go abroad) ſhall thruſt his hand, (out of a childiſh curioſity, to feel what is there) into the cave, or, hole (for the word is of the ſame ſence with the former; and the Rabbine obſerves, that ſuch ſerpents holes, in thoſe parts, are oft-times ſo wide, that a little childes hand may eaſily enter into them) of the baſilisk: without hazard to the one, or hurt to the other. Of this latter kinde of ſerpent, See Prov. 23. 32. chap. 14. 29. & 59. 5. Jer. 8. 17. Some expound it, that the great ones ſhall not oppreſs the mean ones, but great ones, ſhould rather be lions, wolves, and bears, Prov. 28. 15. Pſal. 7. 2. & 11. 9. Dan. 7. 5. Zeph. 3. 3. If ſuch particular application were neceſſary, I would rather ſay the meaning were the ſubtile ſhould not circumvent the ſimple. For ſerpents, are of note, rather, for ſubtilty, for ſlight rather then for might, Gen. 3. 1. Matth. 10. 16. And for thoſe, that would have devils meant here; becauſe of the terms given him in Scripture, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Rev. 12. 3, 9. ſtray a great deal further, from the intendment of the text. The thing intended, ſeems to be, that men who were formerly maliciouſly minded, and prone to do miſchief unto others, ſhould now be of an innocent and harmleſs diſpoſition: no fear ſhould be of hurt, from them, to any.

V. 9. They ſhall not hurt, nor deſtroy, in all mine holy mountain] Or, None ſhall hurt, nor deſtroy, as chap. 49. 10. Heb. in all my mountain of holineſs, as Pſal.15.1. Jer.31.23. mount Zion is meant, a type of the Church. Hence our Jewiſh Commenters controlone another, confuting error with error. All the creatures, ſaith one, throughout the whole world, ſhall grow harmleſs, in the Meſſias his dayes. No, ſaith another, that is not ſo. For, it is not ſaid, in the whole world; but, in all mine holy hill. It is the holy land, onely, where no harmful beaſts ſhall be; according to that, Lev.26.6. & ch.25.9. or if any come into it occaſionally, they ſhall hurt no body, according to that, Job 5.23. But it is of men, not of beaſts, that the Prophet here ſpeaks: as they were men, not beaſts, that our Saviour bid his Diſciples beware of; when he talked to them of woolves, Matth.10.16,17. His drift, is to deſcribe, and aſſert, the innocency and harmleſſeneſs of thoſe perſons, on whoſe hearts his word ſhould have its kindly work, See further, ch.2.4.

for the earth ſhall be full of the knowledg of the Lord, Or, the land. For though it be true, that the Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould be diſpenſed unto all nations; and the knowledg of God, thereby, diſperſed into all parts of the world: Mat.24.14. & 28.18. Mar.16.15. Act.1.8. Rom. 10. 18. Yet the Prophet ſpeaking here, of the Church, typified by mount Sion; as the chiefe part, not of the city only, but of the whole country, Pſal.48.2. ſhould be rendred according to the type, that he entreats of. Here is a reaſon rendred, and the ground declared, of this ſtrange and ſtupendious change, to wit, the word of Chriſt; that ſpirituall, powerfull ſpell, Pſal.58.5. by working into their ſouls, the ſound and ſaving knowledg of God in Chriſt; (the want whereof is noted, as the main ground of all evill: Jer.9.3. Hoſ.4.1,2. 1 Cor.15.32–34. Eph.4.18,19.) ſhould purge out of them, their former malignant diſpoſition, and frame them, (as new moulded thereby; and transformed into the image of God, and ſo made conformable to Chriſt,) into a clean contrary; both compoſure of heart, and tenour of life. Joh.15.3. & 17.3,17. Rom.6.17. & 8.28,29. 2 Cor.3.18. Gal.4.19. Eph.4.20–24. Phil.3.8,10. Col.3.9,10. Jam.1.18. 1 Pet.1. 22,23. 2 Pet.2.20. 1 Joh.2.3,4, Now this knowledg, was not to be barely, but to abound in the Church, in the dayes of the Meſſias. Jer.31.33,34. Dan.12.4. Joel.2.28. Hab.2.13. Act.2.17. Rom.15.14. 2 Cor.4.6. Eph.3.19. Col.1.9,10.

as the waters cover the Sea] That is, the channel, or the bottome of the ſea. Job 36.30. Grace and knowledg, ſhall in thoſe times be as plentifull, as water is in the Sea: The land ſhall be as full of the knowledg of God, as the Sea is full of water. See the like, chap.48.18. Or, As ſome other, more agreeably to the originall, as the waters of the Sea; (for ſo it is expreſly) to cover; to wit, the land. It ſhall abound, as the Sea-waters are wont to do: when having ſurrounded its walls, or wrought through its banks, it overfloweth, and covereth the whole ſurface of the land; chap.8.7,8. Jer.51.42. Yet ſee, Hab.2.14. Where the ſame is almoſt word, for word; and it ſeems to go rather, the former way.

V. 10. And in that day, &c.] Or, As ſome render it, For (as chap.9.11.) in that day: that is, at that time. As chap.3.18. The Prophet, here, proceeds to declare, that which ſhall be the main cauſe, of all this peaceable carriage and agreement, between people, and perſons formerly of ſuch different carriages, and contrary diſpoſitions; to wit, the Meſſias calling in of the Gentiles, to be co-partners in grace, and ſalvation with the Jewes; the reſtauration of his Church, with a very conſiderable enlargement, conſiſting of both; and the co-uniting of them by his Spirit, in a neerer conjunction, then ever before, either to others.

there ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, which ſhall ſtand for an enſign of the people; to it ſhall the Gentiles ſeek] Or, It ſhall come to paſs, that (as chap.10.20. verſ.11.) unto a root of Jeſſe, which ſhall ſtand up, for an enſign to people; the Nations ſhall ſeek, or, reſort.

a root of Jeſſe] The ſame, of whom before, verſ.1, a root, that is, ſay ſome, one, who like a root, lay hidden before in the ground; As Iob 14.8. but rather, a root of Jeſſe; that is, a ſprig, ſprouting out, and ſpringing up, from Jeſſe, as a root; as both Iewes and Chriſtians, moſt of them expound it; and as the word ſeems likewiſe uſed, chap.53.2. Nor is it otherwiſe to be underſtood, where Chriſt is ſaid to be the root of David, as here of Ieſſe. Rev.5.5. & 22.16. See alſo, chap.14.30. Ieſſe is a root, as Abraham is one, Rom.11.16. And though Chriſt be the root, that beareth all the faithfull, and the ſtock, whereinto they are engraffed; Rom.11.17,18, 24. Yet, here, he is conſidered in regard of the root, or ſtock, from whence he iſſued, as man. See verſ.1. & Rom.15.12.

which ſhall ſtand] Or, ſtand up: as Dan.11:3,4 for an enſign] Not ſuch as is uſed in fight, for ſouldiers to follow; as ſome of the Iewiſh writers underſtand it; as Pſal.60.4. but ſuch as is uſed to gather people together: ſo verſ.12. Such an one ſhall Chriſt be, being lift up in the miniſtery of his word; Ioh.3.14,15. & 12.32. Gal.3.1.

of the people] Or, to peoples. For the word is plural: not ſome one, but divers ſorts of people; people indifferently, out of all parts. So did this enſign, at the very firſt advancing, or erecting of it, draw together divers ſorts of people unto it. Act.2.5.–12.

ſhall the Gentiles ſeek] Or, repaire: as the word is uſed, Deut.12.5. Though ſome, to expreſs it, as they ſuppoſe, the more fully, repaire for advice, and for prayer; becauſe the word, ſometimes, imports either, Deut.18.11. chap.8.19. & 55.6. Ezek.36.37. But there ſeems here, to be the convention of them, only intended in it; that not Iewes alone, but other Nations, ſhall have recourſe to the enſign, thus ſet up. See chap.2.2,3.

and his reſt ſhall be glorious] Heb. glory; that is, very glorious: as abomination, for very abominable, chap.1.13. or, for glory; as chap.4.2. a reſt of glory, a moſt glorious reſt. See chap.10.1. By his reſt, here, ſome underſtand the death of Chriſt; becauſe death is as a ſleep, or reſt, Ioh. 11.11,13,14. Rev.14.13. which, though ignominious in the eyes of the world, yet was glorious, in regard of the vertue, and efficacy of it; Col.2.15. Heb.2.14. Others underſtand, his grave, his Sepulchre: becauſe the grave is a place of reſt, chap.14.18. & 57.2. And Chriſts Sepulchre is, by reſort to it, and miracles done at it, become famous. So our popiſh writers, moſt of them; following the old verſion, and ſome of the Ancients. Others, his Aſſcention, after the conqueſt of his adverſaries; for reſt followes, when the fight is finiſhed, and victory is glorious: where, that which ſome would have alluded to, to wit, the furling up of the enſign, when the fight is done, and the victory obtained; as if the word, reſt, were referred to the enſign, and that were termed its reſt; ſeems more nice and curious, then ſolid, or agreeable to the text. But, by reſt, rather, is here underſtood, the place of Chriſts reſt, and reſidence; as the word reſt is uſed, Mic.2.10. alluding to that of mount Sion, ſaid to be, his reſt, in regard of the Temple, there ſituate: Pſal.132.8,13,14. a type of Gods Church, the place of his ſpeciall reſiance, and abode among them; ſaid to be glorious, in alluſion to both Tabernacle, and Temple, which are ſaid, to have been filled with the glory of God; Exod.40.35. Lev.9.23. 1 Kings, 8.11. as alſo, unto great Princes Courts, where they keep reſidence in ſtate, which are uſually of great note, 1 Kings, 10.1–7, 24,25. And ſuch, much more, is Gods Church, through his reſiding in it, by his word and Spirit, and the effects of his divine power and preſence, therein appearing; as alſo, by ſtrange and remarkeable things, wrought in the behalf of his people; for their deliverance, and their ſafety. 2 Cor.10.4,5. See chap.4.5. & 60.13.

V. 11. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day, that, &c.] Heb. it ſhall be, &c. So ver. 10.

the Lord ſhall ſet his hand again the ſecond time] Heb. will add the ſecond time his hand: as, the Lord added to ſay to me, ch. 8.5. add his hand, that is, add to ſtretch out his hand; ſtretch it out, again, the ſecond time. See chap.1.25. what this ſecond time, hath reference to, is queſtioned: and what deliverance it is, that is, here, foretold. For the former, Some think, this ſecond time, hath reference to the deliverance from the Aſſyrians, under Sennacherib, invading them, which he had ſpoken of before, ver.12,24. Others, to the deliverance, from the Babylonian Captivity, after ſeventy yeares, expired, Jer.29.10. But the moſt and beſt, both of the Jewiſh Writers, and ours, to the deliverance out of the Egyptian thraldome; whence, he is ſaid to have brought them, with his hand ſtretched out, Ezek.20.6. For the ſetting, or ſtretching out of his hand again, for a further deliverance, ſome underſtand it of the deliverance from the Chaldean deportation. But that others croſſe, and ſome of the Rabbines themſelves: and their reaſon is good, becauſe this is to be done in the dayes of the Meſſias, ver.10. though not by ſuch a kind of reſtitution, as they poor ſouls dream of; but by calling home unto Chriſt, the Elect of them, whereſoever diſperſed, ſome at one time, ſome at another; and alſo, the main body of the reſidue, in his own appointed ſeaſon, Act.2.41. & 4.4. & 21.20. Rom.11.5,25,26. 2 Cor.3.16.

to recover the remnant of his people, that ſhall be left] Heb. to get, to buy, to purchaſe. Which Some ſuppoſe, to have ſome reſpect to Chriſts buying his with his blood, Act.20.28. Rev.5.9. But it ſeems rather, here, to intimate a getting of them into his poſſeſſion again, which had made defection from him, and were now under the power of Satan; whereof their bodily ſervitude and reſtraint, in ſundry places, was a type: See Jer.16.14,15. & 23.7,8. Zach.10.10.

the remnant] A ſmall parcel, in compariſon of the whole, that ſometime was, ch.10.21,22.

of his people] Some underſtand this, of the Elect, both Jew, and Gentile. But the diſtinction of thoſe here mentioned, from the Nations ſpoken of, ver.10. doth plainly ſhew; that the parties here intended, are of the Jewiſh people only. See Rev.7.4—9.

that ſhall be left] The number of them, being much waſted by ſeveral deportations, diſſipations, oppreſſions, and evill uſage, in the places of their forreign abode, Deut.28.62.

from Aſſyria] Whither many of them had been carried, 2 King.15.29. & 17.6.

and from Egypt] Whither no ſmall number of them fled; upon the murder of Gedaliah: whereof very few eſcaped, Jer. 43.5—7. & 44.27,28.

and from Pathros] This ſome, in regard of the like ſound of letters, have ſuppoſed to be Parthia; and ſome Petra, in Arabia, whereof Arabia Petrea; ſee chap.16.1. Others, a part of Lybia, inhabited by the Phaurusii, mentioned by Pliny, and Ptolomy, and ſited neer the Atlantick-Sea. But it appears to have been a Province in Egypt, by Jer.44.1,15. Ezek.29.14. & 30.14. poſſeſſed by the Pathruſim, or, Pathruſes, which were of the linages of Mitſraim, or Egyptus, Gen. 10.14. 1 Chr.1.12. See more of it, on Jer.44.1.

and from Cuſh] A people deſcended from Cuſh, the ſon of Cham, and brother to Mitſraim, Gen.10.6,7. of whom, and their place of abode, ſee further on chap.18.1.

and from Elam] People that iſſued from Elam; the ſon of Sem, and brother to Aſſur, Gen.10.22. 1 Chr.1.17. Hence the Elamites, or Elymei, poſſeſſing ſome part of Perſia, and bordering upon the Medes, joyned therefore together, chap. 21.2. Jer.25.25. there is mention of them in Strabo, lib. 16. and in Pliny, lib.6. cap.26,27,34. Some gather from Act. 2.9. that they lay between Media, and Meſopotamia.

and from Shinar] A Region in Chaldea. Of which, Gen. 10.10. & 11.2. Hence the mountain Singara, mentioned by Ptolomie, in Meſopotamia; whereof Chaldea was ſometime deemed a part; and a Town of the ſame name in Pliny, lib.5. cap.24. Singara, of Shinar; by ſuch enterchange of letters: as in Gaza, Gomorra, and others. It is deemed by ſome, to have been ſo called, of a word ſignifying to ſhake out, or, throw out, Job 38.13. becauſe they were diſperſed that attempted to build Babel: but the Region ſeems to have had that name, before they began to build there, and the letter S, to be radical; which in that word is wanting.

and from Hamath] Of this place, ſee ch. 10.9.

and from the Ilands of the Sea] Or, the lands bordering upon the Sea, the maritine Countreys. For ſo is the name Iland, taken very commonly in Scripture; as where Judea, and Cappadocia are termed Ilands, ch.20.6. Jer. 47.4. So ch.41. 1,5. Jer.25.22.

V. 12. And he ſhall ſet up an Enſign] Not a military Enſign, as many Interpreters imagine, for the conducting an army into the field, or the directing them in fight, when they are in the field; but a civil one rather, ſuch, as is wont to be ſet up, for the gathering of people together, upon any occaſion whatſoever. See the like, ch.49.12. & 62.10. as alſo, before, on ver. 10. of this Enſign, what it is.

for the Nations] Or, unto the Nations. To bring them in to Chriſt, Rom.15.16,18,19. or, rather, as the Jewiſh Doctors ſeem aright to underſtand it, for them to bring, or ſend in, the Iſraelites, that are in captivity with them, or that ſojourn among them; as ch.49.22. & 66.20.

and ſhall aſſemble the outcaſts of Iſrael, and gather together the diſperſed of Judah] Or, that he may gather up; (the word properly ſo ſignifies, Jer.10.17.) or, gather together: (as Num. 11.17.) The uſe of this Enſign, is, as in regard of the Gentiles before, ver. 10. ſo in regard of the Iſraelites, or Jews, whether of the ten, or, of the other two tribes, (for both were to be united, and made one, in and under Chriſt, Ezek. 36. 16.19,21.) for the gathering of them together, out of the places of their diſperſion, Luk.21.24. Joh. 7.35. Jam. 1.1. 1 Pet.1.1. the copulative deſigning the end of the action: as chap.10.19. & 11.3.

diſperſed] Or, diſperſed women. For the word is feminine; as intimating, that no ſort, or ſex, ſhould, either, be neglected, or rejected, 1 Cor.11.11. & 12.13. Gal. 3.27,28. Col. 3.11.

from the four corners of the earth] Heb. wings, or, skirts. For it is applyed to garments, as well, as to fowl, Deut. 22. 12. Jer.2.34. See chap.18.1. & 24.16. ſo Ezek.7.2. an end is ſaid to be coming on the four corners of the land. The meaning is, that no place ſhould be under heaven, where God would not find them; no country ſo remote, whence he would not fetch them. The Goſpel for this purpoſe, was to be preached, unto the ends, or utmoſt parts of the world, Act.1.8. Rom.10.18. and God had promiſed his people, that though they were driven away, into the utmoſt parts of heaven, yet from thence, he would gather them again upon their repentance, Deut.30.4. And as God is ſaid to gather his diſperſed ones, from the four wings of the earth; ſo it is ſaid, that Chriſt ſhall at the laſt day, by the miniſtry of Angels, gather his Elect from the four winds, from the one end of heaven, to the other, Matth.24.31.

V. 13. The envy alſo of Ephraim ſhall depart] The Hebrew Commenters, upon this place, take notice of ſome emulation from the firſt, between Judah, and the other Tribes in Davids time, 2 Sam.2.9,10. & 3.1. & 19.41—43. But the envy here mentioned ſeems rather to have an eye to that, which enſued upon the revolt of them under Rehoboam, from the family of David. For Ephraim, the chief of the ten Tribes, having then the royal ſeat of that Kingdom among them; there was by occaſion thereof much emulation between it and Judah, and continual jarres and wars, from time to time, thence proceeding, to the great moleſtation and much miſchief of either, and the expoſing of them to the incurſions, and invaſions of other Nations abroad; eſpecially, while they ſought help from them one againſt another, 2 Chr. 16. 1—4. & 25.22,23. & 28.5,8,16,20. See chap. 7.1. But this emulation between the houſe of Joſeph, and the houſe of Judah, was to ceaſe, when united, either to other in Chriſt. See Ezek.37.16. and they were then to be in terms of agreement, and amity, that had been at ſuch deadly feud before, ch. 9.21. Luk.9.52,53. Joh. 4.9.

and the adverſaries of Judah ſhall be cut off] Thoſe of Iſrael, ſay the Jewiſh Writers, and ſome of ours treading in their ſteps, that now are adverſaries to Judah, and have of late put them to grievous ſtreights, (as the word, properly, imports) ſhall be deſtroyed; ſo that Judah ſhall no more fear them. But they conſider not, that this is ſpoken of the Meſſias his time: and the meaning is; that the obſtinate enemies of the Church of God, whereof Judah is reckoned as a principal part, ſhall by Chriſt be deſtroyed. See ch.60.12.

Ephraim ſhall not envy Judah] This more plainly ſheweth, what envy of Ephraim, was before meant, to wit, that, wherewith it envied Judah; which, then ſhould ceaſe. I cannot let ſlip, the ridiculous expoſition, that a great Rabby hath of this place. The Meſſias, ſaith he, of the houſe of Joſeph, ſhall not envy the Meſſias of the houſe of David. The Talmudiſts tell us tales of two Meſſiaſſes; and they find them both, in this Prophecy, ch.32.20. where mention is, of an oxe, and an aſſe. The oxe, ſay they, is the Meſſias of the houſe of Joſeph; becauſe Joſeph is likened to an oxe, Deut.33.17. the aſſe is the Meſſias of the houſe of David; becauſe he is ſaid, to come riding on an aſſe, Zach. 9.9. ſuch ſottiſh toys are thoſe ſilly people taken with; and yet about the expounding and reconciling of ſuch ſenſeleſs abſurdities, and abſtracting ſtrange and abſtruſe myſteries out of them, do ſome of ours ſpend grave, and ſerious diſcourſes.

and Judah ſhall not vex Ephraim] Or, nor ſhall Judah put Ephraim to ſtreights; as Pſal. 129. 1,2. They ſhall not in Ezekiah's time, ſay the Jewiſh Doctors, revenge themſelves upon Ephraim, for the miſchief done them by Pekah, 2 Chr. 28.6—8. But we are to look, and ſo ſhould they have done, far beyond Ezekiah's reign, unto the reign of the Lord Jeſus; under whom all ſuch former enmities ſhould be abandoned, and ſuch hoſtile acts buried in utter oblivion, Ier. 3.18.

V. 14. But] Heb. And; as ch.5.12.

they ſhall fly upon the ſhoulders of the Philiſtines towards the Weſt; they ſhall ſpoyl them of the Eaſt together] Or, they ſhall together (joyntly) fly upon the ſhoulder, &c. and ſpoyl them of the Eaſt. They ſhall joyn, in one, and combine themſelves, againſt the Common enemy.

fly] A metaphor, from ſome great fowl, as an Eagle; that flyes ſwiftly, and eagerly to ſeize upon his prey, Job.9.26. Hoſ. 5.1. Though one of the Jewiſh great Maſters rendreth it, they ſhall thruſt with the ſhoulder the Philiſtines, deducing it from another root of that notion, in uſe with them, but not found in Scripture.

upon the ſhoulders] Heb. ſhoulder. Whence Some of the Jewiſh Commenters, following the Chaldee Paraphraſt, expound it, by ſhoulder, that is, by conſent: as Hoſh. 6.9. and as Zeph.3.9. with one ſhoulder; for, with one conſent, (or by mutual conſent) which ſome alſo ſupply in that of Hoſhea: and theſe thus read the words; they ſhall fly with the ſhoulder, (that is, by conſent) to ſmite the Philiſtines: but the conſtruction ſeems over-harſh, and the place of Hoſea is ambiguous. Others therefore conceive it to be the Philiſtines ſhoulder, that they are ſaid to fly upon; a metaphor, as ſome think, from a lion, or woolf, that are wont to faſten on the ſhoulder of the beaſt, that they prey upon: and why not from an Eagle, alſo, or ſome ſuch great ravenous fowl, which ſeize alſo ſometime, in like manner on the leſſer ſort of cattel, their young ones eſpecially, the lamb, or the kid? Others underſtand it, of ſubjugating and ſubduing them. The burden on the ſhoulder, being an emblem of ſervitude. See ch.9. 4,6. & 10.27. But againſt this latter is objected, that the word ſhoulder, is not in a form of regiment here: and ſome uſe of the ſhoulder, proper, or tropical, ſeem to be implyed in their falling upon them. I ſhall add my conjecture, and ſo leave it, the word rendred a ſhoulder, ſignifieth ſometime a ſide, Num.34.11. Joſh.15.8,10. I ſuppoſe the text may well be rendred, they ſhall fly on the one ſide upon the Philiſtines weſtward; the ſupplies are not unuſual.

the Philiſtines] The ancient ill neighbours and enemies of Gods people, 1 Sam.4. & 13. & 17. & 31.

toward the weſt] Heb. to the Sea: as Joſh. 15. 4, 11. this is the mid-land Sea; which lay Weſt from the land of Judah. See ch.9.12.

them of the Eaſt] Heb. Sons of the Eaſt; as Job 1.3. whence, Some would have the Chaldeans, and Arabians, here meant. But I ſuppoſe, rather, the Syrians, as before, ch.9.12. whoſe Country lay Eaſt from Judea. See ch.2.6. for Chaldea and Babylon is in Scripture commonly termed North, Jer. 1. 12, 13,14. and Arabia South, Matth.12.42.

they ſhall lay their hand upon Edom, and Moab] Heb. Edom, and Moab ſhall be the immiſſion, or, laying on of their hands. See the like phraſe, chap.8.8. to lay hand on, imports, to ſeize on: as Eſth.9.10. or, to ſlay; as Pſal. 55. 20. they ſhall by force of arms ſurprize their lands, and ſubdue them; an inbred and inveterate enmity between Eſau and Jacob; Edom, and Iſrael, Gen.25.22,23. & 27. 36,41. continued in their poſterity, Pſal.83.6.

and the children of Ammon] The off-ſpring of Ammon; brother to Moab, (Lots inceſtuous brood, Gen. 19. 36--38.) the ſtyle commonly given to the Ammonites, Jer. 25.21. & 49.1. Both joyned with the Chaldeans in the deſtruction of Judah, 2 King.24.2.

ſhall obey them] Being ſubdued by them. Heb. ſhall be their obedience; at their command, at their ſervice: as 1 Sam. 22.14. 2 Sam.23.23.

V. 15. And the Lord ſhall utterly deſtroy, the tongue of the Egyptian Sea] The reducing of people to the obedience of Chriſt, and the ſpiritual freedome, that thereby accrueth to them, being ſhadowed by the bringing of the people of Iſrael back again into their land, out of thoſe Countreys, whither they had been diſperſed; the Prophet in this next paſſage, promiſeth from God a removal of all impediments, that might hinder them in that their return. And becauſe he had before, parallel'd this their reduction, with the deliverance of them out of Egypt; as a ſecond-maſter-piece of Gods power, and providence ſhewed in behalf of his people; he deciphers this removal of lets and obſtacles, that might impeach them in their paſſage, by the drying up of the red-Sea, which he divided for them, at their departure out of Egypt, Exod. 14. 21,22. See the like, chap.42.15,16. & 51.10. & 63. 11, 12. Zach.10.11. Rev.16.12.

utterly deſtroy] Heb. make an anathema of it: as Joſh. 6.17, 21. not divide it only, as Pſal. 136.13. but even dry it clean up, chap.50.2. ſo that it ſhall be no more, Rev.21.1.

the tongue of the Egyptian Sea] Not Nilus, as Some of the Jewiſh Doctors; but the red Sea, that out of the main Ocean ſhoots into the land, in form and faſhion of a tongue; running up along, between Arabia and Egypt, and growing narrower towards the head: and as Promontories, or head-lands, that ſtrike out into the Sea, are in Latine called tongues of land; ſo ſuch bays, as ſhoot in like manner into the land, are in Hebrew termed, tongues of the Sea, Joſh.15.2,5.

and with his mighty wind, ſhall he ſhake his hand over the river] He alludeth here to the courſe, that God took, in making a paſſage for his people through the red Sea.

he ſhall ſhake his hand over the river] Not Euphrates, of which, ch. 7.20. though the Jewiſh Writers, and others following them, ſo underſtand it; applying the former to thoſe, that were to return out of Egypt: this, to ſuch, as were to come from Aſſyria: (for of theſe, afterwards, ver. 16.) but Nilus, called the river of Egypt, Joſh.13.3. & 15.4. Jer. 28. 1. Ezek.29.3. becauſe it runs down along through the midſt of Egypt, dividing it into two parts, and once in the year overflows it, for the watering of it; to ſupply the want of rain in thoſe parts, Deut. 11.10,11. over this river, or againſt it, as Zach.2.9. it is ſaid, God will ſhake his hand; as Moſes by Gods command, ſtretched out his hand, with his ſtaff lift up in it, over the red-ſea, Exod.14.16,21.

with his mighty wind] Or, by the might (for which a word is here uſed without a brother) of his breath. He will do it with eaſe, by his breath alone: as chap.59.19. Zach.4.6. See Exod.15.8. but alluding to that ſtiff Eaſt wind, wherewith he beat back the red-Sea, Exod.14.21. Pſal.74.13.

his wind] As Pſal.147.18. which he hath at command, Pſal. 107.25, & 148.8. Matth.8.27.

and ſhall ſmite it] As Zach.10.11. and as Elias and Eliſha, ſucceſſively, ſmote the river Jordan, 2 King.2.8,14.

in the ſeven ſtreams] Or, channels; into which, the main body of the river Nilus branching, doth as by ſo many mouthes, empty it ſelf into the Sea, (ſee chap. 7. 18.) where it is of the deepeſt, being neereſt the main-Sea, See Pſal.74. 15. & chap.19.4. Of theſe ſeven out-lets, for which, Nilus is famous, mention is made by Herodotus, lib. 2. Ariſtotel de mundo, cap.2. Strabo, lib.17. Pliny, lib.5. cap. 9. and other Authors, Latine and Greek, without number; Geographers, Hiſtorians, Poets, and others. So that there is no reaſon, to divert the ſtreams here mentioned, unto any other river; as Some Jewiſh doctors do to Euphrates, cutting it out into ſeven ſtreams, to make it paſſable for the return of the people out of thoſe ſeven countries, mentioned before, ver. 12. that which neither ſuits well with the text, nor with the ſituation of ſome of thoſe places: nor doth that of thoſe, ſort well with the ſcope of the Prophet, who underſtand this of Cyrus his dividing that river into many channels, for the readier ſurprizal of Babylon. Of which, ſee Jer. 51. 31, 32. for this ſmiting, and drying up, is of another kind, and for a far other end; not to enter upon her: but to come away from her.

and make men go over dry-ſhod] Heb. and he ſhall, or, that he may (as verſ.12.) make to goe in ſhoes. Our Engliſh, fully expreſſeth the ſenſe of it; that men may paſs over, without boat, or boot; on foot, and in ſhoes, as they uſe to go, or walk, (for the word is indifferently uſed for either) on dry land, Exod.14.22,29. Pſal. 66. 6. they ſhall not need to put off their ſhoes, as they uſe to do, when they are to wade through ſome, though but ſhallow, water. The Prophets words then import, that God would not divide only, the red Sea; as he did for them, at their departure out of Egypt; but dry up that whole bay, for that ſhole Sea is little better; nor drive back for a while, the ſtream of ſuch a river, of no extraordinary wideneſs, as Jordan, being in divers places fordable, as he did at their entrance into Canaan, Joſh. 3.16, 17. & 4.18. & 5.1. but ſo ſmite that vaſt river Nilus, that all the ſeveral ſtreams of it, neer the entrance of the main Sea, (far from which it was that the red Sea was divided) ſhould be clean dried up, to make free paſſage for his people. The meaning is, that no impediment, or obſtacle ſhould be ſo great, that might hinder thoſe, who were to be brought home to Chriſt, and his Church, out of all quarters; but it ſhould be removed.

V. 16. And there ſhall be an highway for the remnant of his people which ſhall be left, from Aſſyria] Becauſe mention is made of drying up the red Sea, and Nilus, as for the free paſſage of thoſe that ſhould come from Egypt, and Pathros, and from Cuſh, or, Ethiopia, verſ.11. But it might be demanded, what will become of thoſe, that are in Aſſyria, and thoſe parts? the Prophet adds therefore, that there ſhall be a courſe taken, for a fit and convenient paſſage alſo, for them.

there ſhall be an high-way] Or, a cauſey, chap.7.3. ſuch a way made by banks caſt up and levelled; as is wont to be done by induſtry and careful proviſion for travellers and paſſengers, in countries where the wayes are deep and miry, or ſtony and uneven. See chap.40.3, 4. & 49. 11. Jer. 18. 15. The Jewiſh Writers expound it, of a paſſage through the waters, either of the river, or the Sea; according to that Pſal. 77.19, 20. but neither is this word found there, and the frequent uſe of it in this argument, by collation of places, carries it rather, the other way.

from Aſſyria] Whence it may appear that the river ſpoken of verſ. 15. was not to be dryed up for them in thoſe parts.

like as it was to Iſrael, in the day, that he came up out of the land of Egypt] Theſe words in the cloſe of all, ſeem to reflect upon all that before was ſpoken, of drying up waters, and caſting up wayes; and to have reſpect to the whole courſe of the peoples conduct in their paſſage from Egypt to Canaan, wherein ſeas and rivers were divided and layd dry in part for the preſent; and paſſages made by ſtrange and uncouth wayes through that wide and waſte wilderneſs, that lay between theſe two lands, as fit and convenient, with ſupply of all neceſſaries, as if cauſeys had been raiſed for them al the way that they went, Exod.13,21. Num.10.33. Deut.1. 31, 33. & 8.2, 4,15. & 32.10.11. See chap. 40,3, 4. & 41. 18, 19. & 42. 15, 16. & 43.19,20.

in the day] At that time, as Jer.7. 22. So ch.12.1.

he came up] Or, came, ſimply, For the word is frequently uſed of paſſage, or departure, from place to place, without any reference to aſcent or deſcent, See ch.7.1.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. A*Nd in that day, thou ſhalt ſay*] That is, at that time, when ye ſhall be ſet free, and fetcht home again, then ſhall ye ſing this, or the like Pſalm, or Song, as chap.26.1. & 27.2. For this chapter containeth certain formes, framed in Songs, or Hymns, of ſolemn praiſe, and thankful acknowledgment, of Gods goodneſs to his people, and gracious workings for them, compoſed by the Prophet, as ditties fit to be uſed by them; or, a directory, to ſhew them the way how to bleſſe God upon ſuch occaſion, or both, So 1 Chr. 16. 7,35,36.

I will praiſe thee] Heb. confeſs thee, or, confeſs to thee, that is, acknowledg thy goodneſs, and my thankfulneſs for it. So David, Pſal.138.1, and Chriſt, Matth.11.25.

though thou waſt angry with me, thine anger was turned away] Or, becauſe, though, or, whereas thou waſt angry; yet, thine anger is turned away. Heb. becauſe thou waſt angry, thine anger is turned away. See the like Syntax, Rom.6.7. God be thanked, ye were the ſervants of ſin, but ye have obeyed, &c. That is, that whereas, or, although, ye were the ſervants of ſin; yet ye have obeyed; or, are now become obedient; &c.

thine anger is turned away] And thou turned from it, Pſal. 85. 3. chap. 10. 25. Dan. 9.16. contrary to that, chap.5.25. & 9.12.

and thou comfortedſt me] By reconcilement to me, mercy ſhewed me, and good done for me, as Pſal.90.15. ch. 40. 1. & 51.3,12. & 61.3.

V. 2. Behold God is my ſalvation] That is, the Aurhour of it. So Pſal.27.1. whoſoever or whatſoever the means or inſtruments are, my Salvation is from him onely, Pſal. 3. 8. & 33.16,17. & 44.6,7. Prov. 21. 31. Jon. 2. 9. To this is prefixed, a note, or term, that cals for ſpecial conſideration and regard, implying the deliverance of Gods people, to be a matter very remarkeable, and a mercy unexpected; conſidering, in what a low and forlorn condition they ſeemed to be in before, as if he ſhould ſay, either among themſelves, or to others, their enemies eſpecially, behold that now done, that was little looked for, So Ezek.37.12.

I will truſt] Or, I will be confident, as Prov.28.1. or, I will truſt in him, as Pſal.18.2. a defect of the pronoun; as Job. 13.15. his preſent deliverance ſhall make me relye on him for future preſervation, chap.26.3,4. 2 Cor.1.9, 10. 2 Tim. 4. 17,18.

and not be afraid] So upon the like ground, Pſal. 3. 6. & 27.1.

for the Lord is my ſtrength] The authour and giver of it. So Exod.15.2. (whence the latter part of this verſe is taken) Pſal. 18. 2. & 28. 7. I have it not from my ſelf, or ought elſe; but from him, Pſal.62. 7. Col.1.11. he doth and will by his powerful hand uphold me, and enable me to perſevere and hold out to the end, ch.40.29–31. Rom.8.37-39. 2 Cor. 1.21. Phil.4.13. 1 Pet. 1.5.

and my Song] The ſubject matter of it, as Pſal. 89. 1. & 104. 34. and he that miniſters matter for it, Pſal.32.7. & 40.3.

and he is become my ſalvation] Heb. Salvation to me, that is, my Saviour, as Luk.2.30. So after Moſes, David, Pſal. 118. 14. not that he was not ſo before, but that he hath now manifeſted it in a more conſpicuous and remarkeable manner, Pſal.89,1,3.

V. 3. Therefore with joy ſhall ye draw water out of the wells of Salvation] Heb. and with joy, &c. as chap. 10. 12. The effect of this their deliverance, the free and plentiful fruition of thoſe benifites and bleſſings, that they had been deprived of, and debarred from before. Ye ſhall have free acceſs now, unto the well-head of all grace and goodneſs; from whence there ſhall be derived unto you abundance of ſaving grace, and ſound comfort, as water drawn by full buckets from an inceſſant wel-ſpring, Pſal.36.8,9. Joh.4.14. & 7. 37,38. Rev. 7.17. There is in the words an alluſion, as ſome deem, to the ſtate and condition of thoſe, that have liquor, to the ful, unexpectedly afforded them, when they have been grievouſly vexed and afflicted for want of it, and were even now ready to periſh, for thirſt, Pſal.107.3,5. chap.41.17. & 43.20. So chap.55.3. Matth.5.6. Rev. 22.17. and more eſpecially to the rock, that afforded the Iſraelites water in the wilderneſs, Exod.17.6. Num.20.11. or rather to the well, out of which God promiſed to give them water, when they wanted it, while they abode about the confines of Moab; and from whence with exceeding great joy and mirth, expreſſed in Songs and Ditties thereupon compoſed, it was received and entertained by them, Num.21. 16–18. Others ſuppoſe, that this paſſage hath reſpect to a ſolemn rite uſed in the Feaſts of Tabernacles, at which their manner was, in the night-time, with great variety of melodious muſick, and abundance of mirth and jollity, to fetch water in a golden veſſel, from the ſpring of Siloam, unto the Temple, and there to pour it upon the Altar. See ch.30.29. But whether this uſage was ſo ancient as Eſays time, is uncertain. See ſomewhat the like phraſe, and as many think, rite alſo, of drawing water, and pouring it out upon the ground, to a contrary purpoſe, in occaſion of mourning, and to teſtifie thereby, their inward remorſe, 1 Sam. 7.6.

V. 4 And in that day ſhall ye ſay;] Or, In that day, alſo, ſhall ye ſay, as chap.8.5. For this is a preface, or paſſage, into a new form, another ditty, of the like nature with the former; ſave, that it is conceived, as in way of Exhortation; whereby the faithful invite, and encite one another unto this office of chearful and conſtant praiſing and magnifying God for his mercyes. See on verſ.1.

Praiſe the Lord; call upon his name; declare his doings among the People] See the ſame, 1 Chron.16.8. Pſal. 105.1.

Praiſe the Lord] Heb. confeſs to the Lord, as verſ. 1.

call upon his name] Or, proclaim his name, publiſh it abroad, as Jer.2.2. & 4. 16. Lam.1.21.

declare, &c.] as Pſal.3.11.

his doings] The courſes taken by him for your deliverance.

among the people] Heb. peoples, not ſome one people; but the ſeveral Nations abroad, throughout the wide world, ver.5. So Pſal.57.9. & 108.3.

make mention] Or, record it, as chap.49. 1. enter it upon record, for poſterity, Pſal.45.17. or, celebrate his name, as Pſal. 45.17.

that his name is exalted] As Pſal.143.13. where it is rendred, excellent, but would rather be, lofty; as chap. 26.5. or, high, as chap. 30.13. or, exalted, as here, and ch.33.5. Howbeit, there is by Some obſerved, a trajection in the text: that which the points or pauſes, alſo, ſeem to imply. In regard whereof, this whole branch might more fitly be thus conceived, celebrate his name, for it is high, or, exalted: as the ſentence conſiſting of two diſtinct branches, whereof the latter containeth a reaſon of the former: as Pſal.99.3,5,9. The word tranſlated, make mention, ſignifies alſo, to celebrate: as 1 Chr.16. 4. Pſal.71.16. ch.63.7. and ſo may it well here.

V. 5. Sing unto the Lord] Sing, or, Play unto the Lord; to his honour and praiſe: as Pſal.66.4. & 47.6. & 92. 1. or, Sing of the Lord: as Pſal.66.2. & 101.1. & 138.5. So Num. 21.17. ch. 27.2. The word properly ſignifies, to make a muſical ſound with inſtruments of all ſorts indifferently; for another word they have for muſick with voices, chap. 5. 1.

he hath done excellent things] Or, done excellently, or, majeſtically. Heb. excellency, or, Majeſty. For ſo the word ſignifies, taken in the better ſenſe; as chap.26.10. though in the worſe ſenſe, pride, ch.28.1,3. So, to do valour, for, to do valiantly, Pſal.60.12. & 118.15,16. to do truth; for, to deal truly, 1 Joh.1.6. to do righteouſneſſe; for, to deal righteouſly, 1 Joh. 3.8,10.

this is known in all the earth] Or, this is made known: as Levit.4.23. or, let this be made known throughout all the earth: as ch. 8.13. make all the world ring of it, by your publiſhing it abroad: as ver. 4.

V. 6. Cry out] Or, cry aloud; or, as Some render it, cry ſhrill. The word properly ſignifies, to neigh, as horſes in heart, full fed, and luſty, or fitted for fight, Jer.5.8. & 8. 16. & 13.27. & 50.11. It is uſed moſt commonly for ſhouting, or hollowing, in token of joy, Eſth.8.15. chap. 24.14. & 54. 1. Ier. 31. 7. Yet for crying out, upon affrightment, chap. 10. 30.

and ſhout] The ſame words are found joyned together again, ch.54.1. See ch.14.7.

thou Inhabitant of Zion] Heb. Inhabitreſs: as Jer. 21. 13. & 51.35. becauſe ſuch places, in Scripture, are commonly ſtyled daughters, as like to young, choyce, and beautiful daughters, or damoſels, See ch.1.8. & Jer.46.19.

Zion] A type of the Church, ch. 2.2.

for great is the Holy One of Iſrael, in the midſt of thee] for the Holy One of Iſrael (of which title, ſee ch.1.4.) who is great (of great might and power, Pſal.48.1. & 135.5. & 145.5.) is in the midſt of thee; to preſerve, and protect thee, Pſal. 46.5. Zach. 2.5,11. and he hath manifeſted the greatneſs of his might and power, in thy deliverance.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of Babylon] Here begin Prophecies concerning forreign States: all that went before, Being concerning Gods people, Judah and Iſrael: ſave what is by the way occaſionally interlaced, concerning the two Kings of Syria and Aſſyria, Rezin and Sennacherib, ch. 7. 8. & 8.4. & 10.5–19,33,34. the forreign States, whoſe ruine is in theſe Prophecies foretold, were ſuch ſpecially, as Gods people either had in former times been, at preſent were, or, in future times ſhould be, much vexed and oppreſſed by: or, ſuch as they had over much reſted and relyed on. Of the former ſort, Babylon ſtands in the front, whoſe Kings, beſides what they had formerly done, were to be principal inſtruments of the utter ſubverſion of the Jewiſh Eſtate.

the burden] In this verſe, is the inſcription of a Sermon, or Prophecy, againſt Babylon, contained in this whole Chapter, & the next, the four laſt verſes of the latter, only excepted: and it is ſtyled, as our Engliſh renders it, a burden. The word in his tropicall uſe; as it is applyed unto matter of inſtruction, or prediction, ſeems to be more general, and to import only a leſſon, a ſpeech taken up, as we ſay, by ſome, or taken from ſome other. As of Balaam it is ſaid, that God put a word in Balaams mouth; and that, he then took up his parable. Num.23.5,7. And ſo the Greeks render it; and the Greek writers on Scripture expound pound it; as implying, documents, or inſtructions, received from God, by the Prophets. Thus it would be rendered, in the title of King Lemuels inſtructions given him, by his Mother; not the Prophecy: (for there is nothing prophetical in it) but the leſſon, wherewith his Mother ſchooled him; as alſo, Lam.2.14. It ſeems to include Sermons, Preachings, or Predictions, in general; where it is ſaid of the fawning falſe Prophets, that they preached unto the people, Sermons, rather, then Burdens (for burdenſome leſſons, neither the people liked; nor they liſted to preach) of vanity. But of that ſee further, on the place. Beſides, it is alledged to this purpoſe, that this title is ſometime prefixed before ſome prophecies, or Sermons, that contain no heavy, but joyfull and lightſome matter, concerning the people concerned in them; as Zach.12.1. The burden, as it is rendered, of the word of the Lord: or, a Leſſon of the word of the Lord, concerning Iſrael; or, in Iſraels behalfe. Howbeit, ſince that the word, in his firſt and proper notion, ſignifies a burden; and it is, in a manner, generally prefixed before ſuch Sermons, or Prophecies, as contain matter of heavy, and ſad occurents, to betide thoſe, whom they concerne; it may not a miſs in moſt places be rendred, a burden; or, burdenſome prophecy: and ſo here, the ſubject matter of this prophecy, as touching Babylon, being altogether of that nature: that which is alſo confirmed, by that which we finde in Jeremy, concerning the peoples mocking of Gods Prophets; with the frequent uſe of this word, in their meſſage, and Gods anſwer thereunto; Jer.23.33,36. of which ſee on the place. The notation of the word is found, in that ſpeech of Jehu, concerning Joram, 2 King.9.25. the Lord lifted up, or, laid this burden (that is, uttered this ſentence, paſſed this heavy doom) upon him.

of Babylon] Heb. Babel: Concerning the originall of the name, we finde, Gen.11.9. that when upon the vain and preſumptuous attempt of people, after the flood, to build a Tower, of ſuch an unheard of height, as might ſecure them againſt a ſecond deluge; God by dividing their tongues, had bred a confuſion among them, and ſo diſſipated their deſign, the place that they had begun to build, was thereupon, from the Hebrew word Balal, that ſignifies, to confound, termed Babel: not as ſome of the Rabbins, and ſome of ours following them; as compounded of Ba, and Bel, and ſo ſignifying, confuſion comes: as Leah ſaid, when ſhe named the childe her husband had by her ſervant Zilpah, Gad; bagad, a troop comes. For though ſhe uſed thoſe words, (of the ſignification whereof, alſo ſome queſtion is;) yet ſhe gave him not that name; but rather, as others, with more plainneſs and probability; (for ſuch manner of compoſitions, are not ſo common in Hebrew:) Babel, ſimply, without compoſition; for Balbel, confuſion, of Balal: (as Golgotha, in the Greek, and Gogbatha in the Syriack, Mat.37.33. for Galgoltha, a ſkul, of Galal) and from thence with the Greeks, Babylon. Now this Babel, or Babylon, became afterwards a prime ſeat of Nimrod, that great Tyrant, who began to ſettle his principallity in Chaldea; from whence he pierced into Aſſyria, where he built Niniveh, Gen.10.10,11. the head-city of the Aſſyrian, Monarchy, at the time of this prophecy; chap.37.37. Babylon being both then, and for ſometime after, held by an inferiour Prince, from the Aſſyrian Monarch: as appeares. by the ſtory of Manaſſes; 2 Chron.33.11. who afterwards, having with ſome other, ſhaken off the Aſſyrian yoke, grew great, by the fall of that State; and ſo ſetled a new Monarchy, called the Chaldean, or Babylonian-Monarchy. Now by this Monarchy, under Nebuchadnezzar, was the Jewiſh State to be ſuppreſſed, Jeruſalem ſurprized, and ſacked, the temple deſtroyed, and the people of the Land carried away to Babylon, there to remain in captivity, for a long time: againſt the terrour and trouble whereof, to fore-arme the faithfull, and to ſupport ſuch of them, as might ſurvive the ruine of their country; and remain in that ſervile condition, with an hopefull expectation of their deliverance from thence, and their return, after ſome time, into their own country again. The Prophet in this Prophecy, foreſheweth the downfall of that State; and the delivery of his people, by meanes thereof, out of that bondage, which under it they had endured. See of the ſame argument, Ier.50.& 51. As for the ſpeciall occaſion of delivering, and divulging this Prophecy againſt Babylon; ſome ſuppoſe it to be, in regard of thoſe grievous calamities, which were foretold ſhould befall the Jewiſh State, in the latter part of the fift, and ſixt Chapters of this Book; which were, ſay they, to be inflicted by the Chaldeans, and Babylonians. But that to me ſeems not ſo likely: becauſe there is no mention of Chaldeans, or Babylonians, at all, there: I ſhould rather deem, that it was revealed to the Prophet, and by him publiſhed, ſometime, after that ſad meſſage that he brought to King Ezekiah, upon his ſhewing of all his treaſure and gallantry, to the Babylonian Embaſſadours; concerning the evils, that his people, and poſterity, in the age following, ſhould from Babylon ſuſtain; chap.39.6,7. I am not ignorant, that a learned man of great note, would have this prophecy to be underſtood, not of the deſtruction of Babylon by Cyrus; but of a former and nearer at hand, between the times of Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, by Deioces, and the Medes, of whom by a cunning contrivement he had made himſelf King. But, beſides that I finde no clear footing of any ſuch conqueſt of Babylon, in any prophane author; nor any foot-ſtep at all of it, in holy writ; there are two main arguments, which, the Prophecy it ſelf affordes, for the removal of this groundleſs conceit. The one is, that the deſtruction of Babylon, here denounced, is ſaid to be executed on her, for the deliverance of Gods people; and the procurement of their liberty, to return again into their own country: chap.14.1,3. nor is there mention, of any deportation of them to Babylon, before the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. The other is, that ſuch a ruine of Babylon is foretold, as ſhould be irrecoverable, chap.13.19,20. & 14.22,23. But if in the intervall, between theſe two terms of time, Babylon had been by the Medes ſacked and ruined, as this Author would have it; the Prophets words, of her irrecoverable ruine, could not be true; were not, then, at leaſt fulfilled: for it is apparent, that under Nebuchadnezzar, ſhe was in a moſt flouriſhing and magnificent condition, Dan.2.37,38. & 4.30. This Prophecy therefore cannot be underſtood of any other overthrow of Babylon, ſave that alone, whereupon followed immediately, the releaſe of Gods people, 2 Chr.36.22,23.

which Iſaiah the ſon of Amos did ſee] See the notes on chap. 1.1. & 2.1.

V. 2. Lift up a banner upon the high mountain] At the entrance into this Prophecy, there is a ſolemn proclamation made, as in Gods name, for the calling together of thoſe people, that were by his appointment, to be employed againſt Babylon. So Jeremy beginneth with ſomewhat the like, Ier. 50.2.

Lift up a banner] To ſummon men to appear, to call in people, that may be ſet apart and enrolled for this ſervice. To which purpoſe Kings are wont to ſet up their Standard, when they intend ſome expedition, that thoſe of their Subjects, who by vertue of their places, or tenures, are oblieged to ſuch ſervice, and ſuch other as are willing to be that way employed, may know whither to reſort. Of this uſe of an enſign, or banner, ſee alſo chap.5.26.

upon the high mountain] Some render the particle, not upon; but againſt. By the mountain, here mentioned, underſtanding Babylon; ſo termed, not from her ſituation; (for ſhe ſtood in a low ground) but for her high towers and ſtately buildings: in regard whereof alſo, it is by Jeremy ſo ſtyled, Jer. 51.25. and the Epithet here given it, Some of them interpret, quiet, and ſecure; ſuch as Laiſh is ſaid to have been, Judg.18.27. deriving it from a Chaldee word, ſo uſed in the Talmud. Others, plain, as Ieruſalem is called the mountain in the field; and the rock of the plain, Ier.17.3. & 21.13. fetching it from a Syriack word, in that verſion oft uſed: other of them again, dark, and gloomy; whom the old Latine followes, deducing it (but with no very good analogy) from the Hebrew word, that ſignifies the evening. But the greater number of Interpreters render the whole branch, as our Engliſh hath it, upon an high mountain. For ſo I ſuppoſe it would be a little better, and more ſuitable to the original, wherein no article is expreſſed, as not pointing to ſome one ſpecial place; but intending an high, or eminent place, from whence ſuch a ſignall may be fartheſt deſeryed; ſuch as are uſually made choyce of for the erecting of beacons, and diſplaying of banners, for that purpoſe ſet up. See chap.18.3. & 30.17. Nor need we make doubt of rendring it an high hill; ſince that we find the word ſo frequently uſed in that ſenſe, Numb. 23.3. chap.41.18. & 49.9. Ier.3.2,21. & 4.11. & 7.29. & 12.12. & 14.6. notwithſtanding that a late learned Annotator contendeth ſtrangly, to have it both here, and in all thoſe places, to ſignifie a plain; becauſe the like word in Syriack ſignifieth a plain, Luk.3.5. His reaſon here is, becauſe Souldiers are wont to be muſtered, not on the hill, but in the Plain. But the uſe of the banner here erected, is to call thoſe together, that may be muſtered afterward in the Plain.

exalt the voice unto them] Cry aloud unto, or call aloud upon, thoſe, that are to be imployed againſt Babylon; that ye may be heard of them, as far as may be. So chap. 40.9. Ier. 22.20.

ſhake the hand] Becken with the hand, unto thoſe that are farther off, whom your voice will not reach unto. See on ch. 10.33.

that they may go into the gates of the Nobles] Heb. and they ſhall go: as ch. 11.3. That they may march unto Chaldea, and ſurprize the cities belonging to that Empire, (gates, for cities: as Deut.16.5.) or, (becauſe it is another word, that is commonly uſed in that kind of ſpeech; and this for diſtinction ſake, would be rendred door, rather then gate, as Ezek.46. 3.)

3.) to break into the houſes and palaces of the Babylonian Princes, chap.45.1.

into] This particle is not in the text; but it is to be ſupplyed; as Gen.10.11.

the Nobles] The great Peers of Babylon, like thoſe of Nineveh, chap.10.8. equall to Princes. The word here uſed, anſwers that of the Greek rendred Benefactors, Luk. 22. 25. and it ſignifies properly, men of frank, and free diſpoſition, Exod.35.5,22. ſuch as keep great houſes, and are large, and liberal in expence, chap.32.5,8. that, which our Engliſh Title of Lord, is in the old Saxon, ſaid alſo to import, as intimating, what men of that rank ſometime were, ever ought to be. Now into the houſes of ſuch great ones, would the enemy endeavour, eſpecially to make entry; partly, becauſe theſe were the heads of the State, and their houſes moſt conſpicuous; and partly, becauſe both moſt and beſt pillage was there to be had, chap.45.1,3.

V. 3. I have commanded my ſanctified ones] I have by a ſecret inſtinct given in charge, (as ch.10.6. & 23. 11. Ier. 34. 22. & 50.21.) to thoſe whom I have prepared and ſet apart for this ſervice, to wit, the expedition againſt Babylon. For ſo is the word ſanctifie uſed, Ier.6.4. & 12.3. Joh. 10. 36. & 17.19. a metaphor, from the religious rites, that men were to uſe in way of preparation, when they were to ſet upon any holy duty, any ſolemn part of Gods ſervice, Exod.19.10, 11. 1 Sam.16.11. 2 Chr. 30. 3,15--19. Job 1. 5. Pſal. 26.6. and the ſlaughter to be made by theſe, of Gods enemies, was a ſervice of God, and unto him as a ſacrifice, ch.34.2,6,7. Ier. 48.10. who theſe ſanctified ones are, ſee Jer.51.27,28. and in part hereafter, ver.17.

I have alſo called my mighty ones] The ſame thing in other terms expreſſed. For Gods call, here, is the ſame with his charge before: as ch.41.2. & 45.4. his mighty ones here, with his ſanctified ones there. Such, as he hath fitted and furniſhed with might and ability ſufficient, to go through ſtitch with his work, chap.5.27. & 45.5. and that come armed with his might, ch. 45.1,2. Joel 2.11.

for mine anger] Some refer theſe words to mighty ones; as if the meaning were, that therefore, they were mighty, becauſe armed with Gods anger; as God is ſaid therewith to arm himſelf, ch.59.17. See ch.10.5. But they depend rather upon the verb, called; I have called them, as Some, in mine anger; or, as ours well render it, for mine anger, to execute vengeance for me, upon Babylon. So the Lord made the wicked for the day of evil, Prov. 16. 4. the genuine ſenſe of that place.

even them that rejoyce in my highneſſe] Such, as ſhall go willingly and gladly about my work: and triumph in thoſe gallant actions, that I ſhall work by them. So the moſt, rendring the words much to the ſame effect, that our verſion yeelds. But the Hebrew ſyntax well conſidered, may ſeem to run ſomewhat a diverſe way. The word tranſlated, them, that rejoyce, is not a participle; but a noun ſubſtantive; and ſignifies exultants, or triumphers, rather, then barely, rejoycers, and it is in a ruling form, taking into it the word following, rendred highneſſe; but ſignifies, as that of neer affinity with it, chap. 12.5. ſometime excellency, or gallantry: as Deut.33.29. ſometime, pride, or haughtineſs; as ch.9.9. & 16.6. ſo that the terms ſound, word for word, triumphers of gallantry, or, (if ye will take the term in the worſe part, which here ſuits not ſo well) of haughtineſſe, that is in our language, gallant triumphers, ſuch as do gallantly triumph. There reſts the pronoun, my, which in the ordinary courſe of conſtruction, is to be joyned rather with the word ruling, then ruled, though in the reading, it be annexed to the latter. So chap. 2. 20. his idols of gold, and his idols of ſilver; not, the idols of his gold, or, the idols of his ſilver; though the pronoun be there alſo affixed to the latter: and ſo would it be rendred here, not the rejoycers, or, triumphers of, or, in his gallantry: but, as before; his ſanctified, his valiants: ſo here, his brave, or gallant triumphants. Thoſe his Commanders, and Servitours, that ſhall bravely demean themſelves in this ſervice, and gallantly triumph in their victorious ſucceſſes, ver.15,17.

V. 4. The noyſe of the multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people] Heb. The voice of a multitude, or, of tumult, or, tumultuous noiſe, (as Pſal.65.7. Amos 5.23.) is, or, is heard upon the mountains; according to the likeneſs, or ſimilitude, (as Ezek. 13.15.) of the noyſe of a great, or, ample (that is, numerous) people. The word, noyſe, ſhould be ſupplyed in the latter branch from the former. See the like, ch. 5.29. There ſhall be heard upon the mountains ſuch a tumultuous and confuſed noyſe, as is wont to be in a place, where a great multitude of people are gathered together, Ezek. 1.14. In which words, the Prophet, as ſpeaking of a matter in preſent action, and as if he heard the very noyſe, that the companies made, either in their muſter, or in their march, doth in a very lively manner, repreſent unto us, either the great ſwarms of people, flocking and thronging together unto Gods Standard before mentioned, erected on the hills, ver.2. or the warlike troops of the Medes and other their aſſociates, paſſing over the mountains to break into Chaldea.

a tumultuous noyſe of the Kingdomes of the Nations gathered together] Heb. a voice of tumult: as chap.16.6. or, of a ſtreperous, or, tumultuous company: as ch. 17. 12. The ſame thing repeated: implying withal, that Cyrus his vaſt Army, wherewith he marched againſt Babylon, ſhould conſiſt, not of one Nation, though one only be named, ver.17. but be gathered out of many Kingdoms: See Jer. 25. 14. & 27. 7. & 50.41. & 51.27,28.

the Lord of hoſts muſtereth the hoſt of the battel] Heb. the hoſt of war; that is, his warlike hoſt, as Num. 31. 14. a defect of the pronoun: as if he had ſaid; No marvel, if the army be ſo numerous, and made up of people out of ſo many countries, when the Soveraign Commander of all the creatures, muſters up his forces; as Princes are wont to do, when they are to ſet forth, or ſend out ſome great army. See ch.1.9.

V. 5. They come from a far Country] From Media and Perſia, places remote from Babylon. For Aſſyria, and ſome other Countries ſevered them. See on Jer.51.46. Heb. from a land of longinquity: and ſo ch.46.11.

from the end of heaven] That is, of the land, or Country lying under heaven: as Matth.24.30. So Ier.50.26. A common phraſe uſed, to ſignifie the people, or countries, moſt remote, of the world commonly known; or with whom any ordinary commerce is, Neh.1.9. Act.2.5. Col.1.23. Nor is it here any hyperbolical ſpeech, as ſome would have it; it is no more then if he had ſaid, from the lands end; which is preciſely true of the Perſians, the Medes, Aſſociates, and both Subjects to one King, to wit, Cyrus. For their Country is bounded on no ſmall part of it, with the main-Sea, and the Perſian gulf; as is Media alſo on the one ſide with the Caſpian Sea.

even the Lord, and the weapons of his indignation] Or, inſtruments of his wrath. For the word is very general. See ch. 22. 24. & 23.7. thoſe that he makes uſe of, to execute vengeance by, and to puniſh thoſe, with whom he is wroth, chap.10.5.

to deſtroy the whole land] Of Chaldea: whereof Babylon was the head City, Ier.25.12. or, as Some render it, the whole earth; that is, the whole world. The Chaldean Empire, that had ſubdued a great part of the world then commonly known in thoſe parts; and whoſe Kings in the height of their pride deemed themſelves Lords of the whole world, Jer. 27. 5--8. Dan.2.37,38. The whole verſe may well thus be rendred, There are coming from a far country from the lands end, the Lord, and his inſtruments of wrath, to deſtroy the whole land. For the Prophet ſpeaks of it, as of a thing preſent; before, as if he heard the noyſe of them thronging together; here, as if he ſaw them, now in their march onward toward Babylon. See the like of the Aſſyrians march towards Jeruſalem, Chap. 28--32.

V. 6. Howl ye] The Prophet turns his ſpeech, here, to the Babylonians; and as before he called on thoſe people, that were to be employed againſt Babylon, to meet together, and march thitherward: ſo now he calls upon the Babylonians, to howl and lament, in regard of the calamities that were comeing upon them. So chap.23.1,6. Jam.5.1.

for the day of the Lord] Gods day, that is, his time of viſitation, and vengeance, wherein he will come unto judgment againſt Babylon. So ch.2.12. & 10.3. Jer.46.10,21. & 50. 20. 27. Zeph.1.7.

is at hand] It is neer: becauſe they that are to execute it, are on their way thither, ver.5. ſo Ezek.30.3. Joel 1.15. & 2. 1. & 3.14. Obad.15. Zeph.1.7.

it ſhall come as a deſtruction from the Almighty] And therefore unavoidable. So Job.31.23. Joel 1.15. There is an elegancy in the ſound of the words, in the original; which our Engliſh cannot ſo fitly expreſs. The Title given to God here, is Shaddai. Concerning the notation and proper ſenſe thereof, there is ſome diverſity of opinion among the learned. Thoſe that render it, Almighty, derive it from a word that ſignifies to waſte; and ſo underſtand it, to intimate one, that is able, as a mighty Conquerour, to lay all waſte at his pleaſure. That which ſuits well with the words here, as devaſtation, from the devaſtatour. Others derive it from a word, that ſignifies, a teat, that yeelds milk; and ſo it ſhould imply one, that feeds all, and miniſtreth nouriſhment unto all; that which is frequently given unto God in Scripture, Gen.48.15. Pſal.23.1. & 104.11,15. & 136.25. & 145.15,16. & 147.9. Others, laſtly, render it, Al-ſufficient; one that hath all-ſufficiency in himſelf, and is able to ſupply and furniſh his creatures with all ſufficiency needful for them, Pſal.23.1. & 34.9,10. & 84. 11. Luk.22.35. 2 Cor.9.8. 1 Tim.6.6,17.

V. 7. Therefore ſhall all hands be faint, and every heart ſhall melt] An utter diſcouragement, and failing both of hand and heart, ſhall, upon the report hereof, befall the Chaldeans; and no marvel, when God himſelf is coming in the head of the hoſt againſt them, Pſal.76.5–7. Ezek. 22.14. See the ſame, Ezek.21.7.

all lands] all their lands, to wit, of the Babylonians, and their Aſſociates; as ver.22.

hands be faint] Or, feeble: as 2 Sam.4.1. or, fall down, or, hang down: as they are wont to do when men are ſo weakned, or tired out, or qualmed, upon ſome ſudden affrightement, their ſpirits being quailed, that they are not able to hold them up, or make uſe of them for their ſuccour or defence, Exod. 17.12. Jer.6.24. & 50.43. Ezek.7.17.

heart melt] A metaphor from wax, that melteth when the fire comes neer it, Pſal.22.14. & 68.2. or the dew that melteth with the heat of the Sun, Exod. 16.21. Hoſ. 6.4. or any ſuch moiſt and flaſhy bodiss, as upon ſlight occaſions, alteration of ayr, change of weather, a little rain or wet falling on them, and the like, are prone to melt away, and run to water, Exod 15.15. Deut.1.28. Joſh.2.11. & 5.1. & 7.5. & 14.8. 2 Sam.16.10. Pſal.39.11. & 58.7,8. & 112.10. chap.10.17. & 19.1. Nah.2.10.

V. 8. And they ſhall be afraid] As Job 21.6. or, For they ſhall be affrighted: as it is rendred, Jer.51.32. or, troubled: as 1 Sam.28.21. 2 Sam.4.1. or, amazed, as Exod. 15.15. Judg. 20.41. or, diſmayed: as ch.21.3. for the word ſignifies ſuch a fright, as diſturbs, and diſtracts; or ſuch a ſudden flight, as caſts women into travel, and makes them to miſcarry, Pſal. 48.5,6. Chap. 21.3.

And] Or, For: as Chap. 8.21. & 9.11. for a reaſon is here rendred, why their hands became ſo feeble, and their hearts ſo faint. They were ſurprized with extream fear and terrour.

pangs and ſorrowes ſhall take hold of them] A defect of the pronoun: as Chap. 1.3,15. ver. 15.

they ſhall be in pain, as a woman that travelleth] Heb. that is, bringing forth. Such pangs and pains ſhall ſeize on them, as are wont to do on women in ſuch caſe. A ſimilitude oft uſed, to expreſs extremity of diſtraction and diſtreſs. So, beſides, the places before pointed to, Chap.36.17,18, & 37.3. Jer. 6.24. & 22.23. & 30.6. & 49.24. & 50.43. Mic. 4.9,10.

they ſhall be amazed one at another] Or, they ſhall be amazed, looking one at, or, on another: as Gen.43.33. & Jer. 36.16. They ſhall be diſmayed to ſee others of their own, and thoſe, ſuch as ſometime ſeemed ſo valorous and couragious, to be now ſo faint-hearted, Jer.50.43. or they ſhall ſtand like men amazed and amated, ſtaring one upon another, as being at their wits end, not knowing what to do; nor having the heart to turn their hand unto ought, whereby to help themſelves, or others. So Pſal.107.27. Chap.19.14–16.

one at another] Heb. a man at, or, on his neighbour, or friend. A familiar phraſe in that language, Gen.11.3. Exod.11.2. Jer. 7.5. & 9.7. & 22.8. & 23.30. Zach.8.16,17.

their faces ſhall be as flames] Heb. faces of flames ſhall their faces be. For the ſyntax, ſee Lam. 4.7. Now this, here, Some underſtand of ſhame. They ſhall ſo bluſh for ſhame of their cowardice and diſtraction, that their faces ſhall look as if they were all on a fire: as Ezek.7.18. ſhame ſhall be upon all faces. But ſuch fear and faintneſs, as is here intimated, uſually drowns, and deſtroyes ſhame; at leaſt hinders ſuch bluſhing. Others expound it of ſuch illneſs of look, as famine and hardſhip, and ſuch calamities as attend war, are wont to produce, making men look many times even like unto Chimney-ſtocks. So Lam. 4.8. their viſage is blacker then a coal: and Lam.5.10. our skin is black, as an oven, through famine. And theſe places indeed, well expreſſe the meaning of the phraſe, faces of flames, being rather, faces ſcorched with the flame, Ezek. 20.47. Such as theirs are wont to be, that work at the forge, and the fire; or ſuch, as mens faces ſeem to be, when they ſtand before ſome kind of fire; that is, pale, wan, ſwarthy, and diſcoloured; then as ſome would have it, of the ſame colour with flame; but they fail in the ground of ſuch kind of viſage here implyed. This manner of look here mentioned, proceeding not from thoſe evil effects of war; not as yet produced: but from the fear and dreadful expectation of it, as yet only approaching them, and on the way toward them; as Jer. 30.5,6. a voice of fear, and trembling, every man, with his hands on his loyns, and all faces turned into paleneſſe, Joel 2.6. before their face, people ſhall be much pained; all faces ſhall gather blackneſs: and Nahum.2.10. the heart melteth, the knees ſmite one againſt another; much pain is in all loyns; and all their faces gather blackneſs. Which places, preciſely parallel to this, both cleer the phraſe, here uſed; and hold out alſo the ground of ſuch appearance in the face here deſcribed, the very ſame that is here intended, extream fear. Of the ſenſe of the place, then, there is no doubt; it is clear enough, that they ſhould look pale, or black, in the face; nor need much queſtion be made of the ground or occaſion thereof, that it ſhould be out of fear. Howbeit, the phraſe ſeems ſomewhat harſh, faces of flames; for, faces ſcorched, or diſcoloured. I incline, therefore, to that, which Some of our Jewiſh Authors have, to wit, that by the word here uſed, is to be underſtood, not flames of fire; but a certain people inhabiting ſome part of Africa, of the poſterity of Mizraim, or Egyptus, in Scripture ſometime termed Lehabim, (the word here uſed) Gen.10.13. 1 Chr.1.11. and ſometime Lubbim, 2 Chr. 16.8. Lehabyans, or Lybians, as we commonly ſtyle them, coming neerer to the latter; who are for viſage not unlike to the Ethiopians, or blackmoores, Jer.13.23. Amos.9.7. on the north of whom they border, being tawny-moores at leaſt. And I ſee not, what ſhould hinder this expoſition, their faces, ſhall be, as the faces of Lybians, they ſhall look like blackmoores, or tawny-moores, for fear; the defect of the note of ſimilitude, is common, Gen.49.9. Deut.33.22. Chap.21.8.

V. 9. Behold the day of the Lord cometh] Or, is come, as of a thing preſent: before, he ſaid, it was neer, verſ.6. he ſaith now, it is come. So Ezek. 7.10. Behold the day, behold it is come. Behold, as ch.10.33.

cruel] cruel he is, or, cruel it is, either he, or the day, or he, in that day; as they dealt cruelly with Gods people, Jer.6.23. Ch. 46.6. So will God then cauſe the enemy to deal cruelly with them, Jer.50.42.

both with wrath, and fierce anger] Heb. and wrath, and heat of noſe, and for both, as Gen. 36.24. Jer. 17.26.--with wrath, as, with thy ſword, and with thy hand, Pſal. 17.13,14. compared with verſ.7. and heat, or fervour of noſe, or, viſage; (the word ſignifies either) for fierceneſs of anger, as ch.7.4. verſ. 13. becauſe anger there uſually diſcovereth it ſelf, Pſal. 18.15. & 34.16. So God ſaith of himſelf, Ezek. 38.18. heat, or fury, or, fume ſhall riſe in my noſe, or my face.

to lay the land deſolate] Heb. to put the land, (to wit, of Chaldea, as ver.5.) into deſolation, as Jer. 2.15. & 4.7. See verſ.8.

and he ſhall deſtroy the ſinners thereof out of it] As Pſal. 37.38. & 104.35. See ch.14.23.

V. 10. For the ſtarrs of heaven, and the conſtellations thereof, ſhall not give their light] A deſcription of extream horror, without any glimps or hope of relief, counſel, or comfort. When men are in ſuch an horrid confuſion, and forlorn condition, as if the light of heaven were wholly taken away from them; all ſhall be ſo full of horror and terror, that the heavenly bodies may ſeem to have loſt their light. So Chap. 5.30. & 34.4. Ezek. 32.7,8. Joel 2.10,31. Math. 24.29. Mar.15.24. Luk.21.25. a reſemblance taken, as ſome think, from men in diſtreſs at Sea, to whom no light from heaven, for direction, appears, Act.17.20.

the ſtarrs of heaven] Fixed in the firmament to give light to thoſe upon the earth, Gen. 1.16,17. Pſal.8.3. & 148.3.

the conſtellations thereof] The word Ceſil, whoſe plural is here uſed, doth ſignifie ſome particular and ſpecial, either ſtarr, or conſtellation, that is, company of ſtars neighbouring and making up one ſign or figure; as appears by Job 9.9. & 38.31. Amos 5.8. Where this and ſome other are reckoned up together. That which croſſeth the conceit of thoſe, who ſuppoſe Cocab, and Ceſil to be diſtinguiſhed, in Hebrew, as aſter, and aſtron, in Greek, Stella, and Sidus, in Latine. The former in each language, to ſignifie a ſingle ſtarr; the latter, a compound figure. For to omit, that it might, without much labour, be ſhewed, that in the two latter languages, the words are oft promiſcuouſly uſed; the places before pointed to, do evidently evince, the word Ceſil, to ſignifie, not a conſtellation, or, configuration, in general; but ſome particular, either ſignal ſtarr, or, ſuch. Some of the Hebrew Doctors, ſuppoſe it to denote a ſingle ſtarr; and that to be the Scorpions heart. The Greeks ſometime render it Heſperus, or the evening ſtarr; other-where, otherwiſe. And it is not unlikely, that thoſe there mentioned together in Job, were rather ſingle-ſtarrs (and why not ſome of the wandring-ones, as well, as of the fixed?) of more eminent luſtre, of whom more ſpecial notice was taken in regard of the times of their appearance, then ſuch configurations, as from our Artiſts we now have, and the Greeks and Latines before us; the greateſt number whereof, have their figures and denominations aſſigned them, from the feigned ſtories of the old fabulous Greeks, it being very queſtionable whether any ſuch figures were in Jobs time, invented, or no. Howbeit, moſt Writers take it to be, not a ſingle ſtarr, but a compoſure of ſtarrs, made up, into ſome figure; which ſome gueſs to be the Pleiades, or ſeven-ſtarrs, at the buls head; called by the Greeks, alſo, Hyades, becauſe at their riſing, they uſed to bring rain. And this, it ſeems, they conjecture, becauſe ſome of the Rabbines affirm it be that conſtellation, which the Arabians call Suhelim, or, Suchelim; (for the copies differ) by a term manifeſtly corrupted from the Latine Sucula; a name given to thoſe ſeven-ſtarrs, by the old Latines, upon a miſtake, ſuppoſing the Greek term, Hyades, to have riſen, not from the verb hyein, that ſignifies to rain; but from the noun, hyes that ſignifies ſwine. But againſt this is objected, that this knot ariſeth in June; whereas this Ceſil ſhould riſe in the Hebrews nineth moneth, anſwering to our November, in part, which thereof alſo is deemed to have its name, Ciſlew, Zach.7.1. Others, therefore (and ſo both the old Greek, and Latine, ſometime) render it rather, Orion, a conſtellation, conſiſting of many bright ſtarrs, and riſing in the moneth before mentioned. Here, and here only, we have it in the plural number; whereof by the Hebrews two reaſons are rendred. Some ſay, becauſe of two ſtarrs of the ſame name neer to the two poles: a thing unlikely, that notice ſhould be taken by the Hebrews of ſuch ſtarrs, as in their hemiſphere did never appear. Others ſuppoſe, that it is as plural, comprehending all thoſe, that made up ſuch a conſtellation; one whereof, being of more eminency then the reſt, ſhould be termed Ceſil, and that with the reſt of them Ceſilin, that is to ſay, Ceſil, and his companions. I ſupoſe, that it is plural, to denote, by a metaphorical manner of ſpeech, any the brighteſt ſtarrs, or conſtellations; as if it were ſaid, no Ceſils; or, ſuppoſing Orion to anſwer Ceſil, no Orions, ſhall afford any light. That ſtarr, or configuration of ſtarrs, being one of the brighteſt in the sky. So are proper names, very frequently uſed both in our own and other languages. Had we ſo many Pauls, and ſo many Neſtors, and the like: that is, ſo many comparable, for piety, to the one, and for policy, to the other. The Prophets words then, may thus be rendred. Neither the ſtars of heaven, nor the Orions thereof (the brighteſt of them, or of the conſtellations thereof) ſhall give their light. See Nimrim, Chap.15.6.

the ſun ſhall be darkened in his going forth] When he comes forth, as a bridegroom out of his Chamber; or ſets forth, as a man of might to run a race, Pſal.19.5. he ſhall no ſooner begin to peep out; but he ſhall clap in again: or, he ſhall be eclipſed at his riſing; as one ſtifled in the birth, See Amos 8.9. Act.2.20.

and the moon ſhall not cauſe her light to ſhine] There ſhall be no light with them, either by day, or by night. Gen.1.16. Pſal.136.7--9. And this may ſeem to have reſpect, to what is ſpoken of the Babylonian King, or State. chap.14.12. where for his goodly, and glorious luſtre, he is compared to the bright morning ſtarr; and yet, now ſaid to have no ſpark or glimpſe of light; much leſs able to afford, or make ſhew of it to any other, ſitting in darkneſs himſelf: chap.47.5.

V. 11. And I will puniſh the world for their evill; and the wicked for their iniquity] Heb. And I will viſit upon the world evill; and upon the wicked their iniquity. That is; I will in my viſitation by judgment, inflict evill upon the world; (that is, upon the Chaldean land, and State, See on verſ.5.) and upon the wicked, the puniſhment of their iniquity, as Gen.4.13. Or, I will puniſh them, for the evill that they have done; and the wicked among them: (as the ſinners, before, verſ.9.) for the iniquities committed by them: to viſite; for to puniſh; as chap. 26.14. Jer.51.44, and evill for their evill: a defect of the pronoun, as prayer, for their prayer. Pſal.65.2.

and I will cauſe the arrogancy of the proud to ceaſe, and lay low the haughtineſs of the terrible] Or, of the royſters; or, tyrants; ſuch as in a bravery, force and offer violence to others: for ſo the word properly ſignifies; chap.25.4,5. I will pull down the pride of Bable; who out of her pride and inſolency, hath been ſo formidable and burdenſome to other people. Jer.51.55. Pride is one of the ſins, that that State is taxed for. See Chap.14.4,6,13,14. Dan.4.30. & 5.20. and pride, whereſoever it is found, ſhall be plucked down. Chap.2.11--17. & 10.12. & 24.10,12. Luk.14.11. & 18.14. The ſame thing in divers terms repeated, as verſ.12.

V. 12. I will make a man more precious then fine gold; even, a man then the golden wedge of Ophir] This is ſpoken, to intimate, either the ſmall number of people that ſhould be left, after the Medes had made ſpoil and havock of them, in the city; as things that are rare, are wont to be deemed precious: 1 Sam.3.1. Prov.25.17. ſee Chap.4.1. or the eagerneſs the enemy ſhould have, to make ſlaughter of them; that they ſhould not for the beſt gold that was, were it tendred them, be hired to ſpare the life of a Babylonian, verſ.17. Yet let it be conſidered, whether this may not be underſtood, of the difficulty that ſhould be, for the Babylonian King to retain men with him, to maintain fight againſt the enemy, and to defend his city; when upon their approach, ſuch a terrour ſhould ſurprize all ſorts, even the valiant ones among them; as was before related, verſ.7,8. Surely, the Prophet Jeremy foretels, Jer.50.16. & 31.9. that thoſe which had been called in, from other parts, to aſſiſt Babylon; when they perceived, how it was likely to go with her, ſhould begin to withdraw themſelves, and leave her to ſhift for her ſelf: and theſe, it is likely, would not with gold, or ſilver, be hired to ſtay by it, for fear of loſing their lives, See Jer.51.6. And this I take to be the true intent of the Prophet, in this place. See verſ.14.15.

a man] The words here uſed are, Enoſh, and Adam: of which, ſee on Chap.2.9. They are here uſed promiſcuouſly: for whereas, ſome would have the former, here, to ſignifie, a man of price, and worth; the latter, a common man: the notation of the former word will not beare it.

then fine gold] And expreſſion oft uſed; to ſhew the excellency of that wherewith it is compared. Pſal.19.10. & 119.127. Prov.8.19. The word here uſed, is paz, or phaz, which ſome think ſo called, becauſe mupaz, or, muphaz, that is, fined, and by fining (the droſſy matter, and baſer mettall, being wrought out of it) made more ſolid. For whereas it is ſaid of Solomon, 1 Kings,10.18. that he covered his throne with mupaz gold: it is ſaid of the ſame, 2 Chr.9.17. that he covered it with pure gold: yet, others ſuppoſe it to be ſo called, rather, from the name of the place whence it was brought; and from whence ſome ſuppoſe the kingdome of Phez in Africa, to retain its name to this day; and ſo gold of uphaz, Dan.10.5. they conceive to be gold from uphaz; as it is, Jer.10.9. That is, brought from thence; as gold of Ophir, that is, gold brought from Ophir: yea they want not, that gueſs the word muphaz in Solomons ſtory, to be contracted of meuphaz, that is, from uphaz. But that is not ſo probable; and yet the want of that letter in ſome words, is not unuſuall: of which ſee on verſ.20. Some make this the ſame with Ophir; the rather, becauſe they finde mentioned by Ptolomy, a Bay, called Paſi, and a river, called Phaſis, in the Iland of Taprobane; which they conceive therefore to be Ophir. I am not ignorant alſo, that ſome, and thoſe of no ſmall note, would have this word, not to ſignifie gold, but ſome pretious ſtone: and that the word topaz, is thence derived: the Greek article prefixed to it. But the places of Scripture, where it is found oft uſed, evince the contrary: as veſſels of paz. Job 28.17. and a crown of paz, Pſal.21.3. But of the ſeveral names of gold, in the Hebrew, See on Job 28.15--19.

gold of Ophir] A place of ſpeciall note for fine gold. 1 Kings,10.11. Job 22.24. Pſal.45.9. The Region ſeems to have been at firſt ſo termed, from the poſterity of Ophir, one of Sems iſſue, who there ſeated themſelves, Gen.10.29. Some of latter times have ſuppoſed it, to be Peru in America; upon a weak conjecture, from ſome letters, in either word the ſame. But thoſe that have made more diligent enquiry into the ſtory, of the diſcovery of thoſe parts, inform us; that no Region there was anciently of that name: but that it came to be ſo called by the diſcoverers, upon a miſtake, through ignorance of the country language, from an anſwer returned them, unto a demand made by them, from the Natives, which they miſunderſtood. Nor is it likely, that Solomons fleet, or Jehoſaphats, which they manned out for Ophir, ever came neer thoſe parts. 1 Kings,9.28. & 22.48. Others therefore ſeek for, and would ſeat this Ophir elſewhere. Some in Arabia, neer to the red-ſea, now termed the Arabian Gulf: or in an Iland, ſituate in the mouth of that Sea. Here, the rather in regard of the gold of Sheba, mentioned, Pſal.72.15. and the great quantity of gold that the Queen of that country brought with her to Solomon: 1 Kings,10.1,2,10. Sheba being held generally to be a region in thoſe parts. But that is too neer a place, for a Fleet ſent out from Ezion-gaber, on the coaſt of that Sea, to make a three years voyage. 1 Kings 9.26,28. & 10,22. Others therefore travel further weſtward, to finde it in Africa: becauſe ſtore of gold, is at this day found in thoſe parts; and it is almoſt the only trade for it, that we now have: beſides, that uphaz famous for fine gold, they ſuppoſe to be Phez, as was before ſaid. But others run as far Eaſtward, to diſcover it in India; theſe, moſt of them, ſeat it in the kingdome of Siam in Sofala, or Sumatra, called by our ancienter Geographers, the golden continent, and the golden Cherſoneſus, or Peninſula; which yet they ſuppoſe to be an entire Iland, rent off from the continent, as Sicily from Italy. Though ſome of them lately in Zeilam, rather, which they conceive to be that, which was called anciently Taprobane, termed, as they conjecture, by the Phenicians, at firſt, Taph-parvan, or, provan; that is, the coaſt of Parvan; whereof, 2 Chr.3.6. And in proceſs of time, Taprobane; wherein alſo they finde a port, called Hipparus, or Ipparus. Pliny, lib.6.cap.22. and Soline, c.4. which they gueſs to be the ſame with Ophir. In theſe parts, ſome ſuppoſe it the more probable, that Ophir was ſituate; becauſe the iſſue of Sem, whereof Ophir, and Havilah were two brethren, are ſaid to have ſeated themſelves to the Eaſt, Gen.10.39,40. And of the land of Havilah, which in likelihood was not far remote from Ophir, it is ſaid, that it hath ſtore of good gold. Gen.2.11,12. Howbeit in theſe dayes, there is no report of any great ſtore of gold, that is found in thoſe Indian quarters, where ours trade; we ſend much thither, receive little thence. Beſides, that they are enforced by the ſite of Havilah, Gen.2.11. to mak two Ophirs, as well as two Havilahs. Gen.10.7,29. In a matter, therefore, ſo abſtruſe and ambiguous, I dare not determine.

V. 13. Therefore I will ſhake the heavens; and the earth ſhall remove out of her place] Therefore, that is, becauſe of their ſins, and wickedneſſe, their pride, and cruelty before mentioned, ver.9,11. or, by reaſon of that extremity, dread, and horror, that ſhall poſſeſs them, upon the approach of the enemy, and their own forces forſaking them; I will cauſe them to be in ſuch confuſion and diſtraction, as if heaven it ſelf were falling upon their heads, and the earth moving, or removing, from under their feet. A proverbial form, intimating a moſt horrid confuſion. See the like, Pſal.18.7–15.& 76.8. & 77.16–18. & 114.3,4.Chap.29.6.Jer.50.46. Joel 2. 10. Hag.2.21. See alſo Job 9.5,6.

in the wrath] Or, through the wrath, by reaſon of it: as Pſal. 18.7. or in the day of the wrath; the word, day, ſupplyed from the next clauſe: as Chap.18.7. & 22.5. & 30.17.

of the Lord of hoſts] In my wrath, or through my wrath. For God himſelf ſpeaks it; the noun for the pronoun: as chap.6. 12. & 8.7. Of the title, ſee Chap.1.9.

and in the day of his fierce anger] See ver. 6,9. Pſal. 18. 8, Chap.6.4. Jer.4.8.

V. 14. And it ſhall be] Babylon ſhall be.

as the chaſed roe] Or, as a chaſed roe, (for there is no article in the Hebrew) as one of the moſt timerous ſort of creatures, and moſt unable, ſave by flight, to ſhift for it ſelf, among thoſe, that uſe to be hunted, Prov.6.5. 1 Chr.12.9.

and as a ſheep, that no man taketh up] Like a ſtragling ſheep, one of the ſillieſt creatures, and leſs able to defend it ſelf againſt any ravenous beaſt, or by flight to make eſcape, then the former: and ſure therefore to miſcarry, in places, where ſuch beaſts of prey are, if none look after it, Pſal. 119. 176. ſhe ſhall be at her wits end, not knowing whither to betake her ſelf, or where to be in ſafety. See Jer.50.17.

they ſhall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land] The reaſon why Babylon ſhall be in ſuch plight; to wit, ſhe ſhall be forſaken by her hired forces and confederates, Jer.50.16. & 51.9.

every one] Heb. a man: as Chap.9.20.

turn] Heb. look back to; or, look after, Chap.8.22. and 53.6.

V. 15. Every one that is found, ſhall be thruſt thorough] The reaſon why people ſhall withdraw themſelves from her; becauſe they cannot with any likelihood of ſafety, without loſſe of life, ſtay with her.

that is found] By the Medes; or, ſimply; that is, or ſtayeth in Babylon: to be found; for, to be, or, abide. An uſual Hebraiſm, Deut.18.10. Eſth.1.5. Act.8.40. A defect of the particle, therein, or, in her: as Deut.8.12. Chap.35.9.

ſhall be thruſt thorough] Slain with the ſword, or lance, Jer. 51. 4.

every one, that is joyned unto them] As an aſſiſtant. Heb. added to them: as Chap.29.1. & 30.1. a defect of the pronoun, as ver.8. Yet Some render the word, decrepit; conſumed, and ſpent with years and age: and the word ſometime ſignifies, conſumed, 1 Sam.26.10. 1 Chron. 21. 12. as if the meaning were, that the Medes ſhould no more ſpare old, then young, as of the Chaldees the like is ſaid, 2 Chron. 36.17. Lam.5.12. and ſo it ſhould have reference to what followes, ver.16. But I ſuppoſe it rather to have reference to the former part of the verſe; and to be rendred by ours here aright.

ſhall fall] Be ſlain: as Chap.10.34. Jer.44.12.

by the ſword] Or other weapon of the enemy. One of moſt general uſe put for all, Chap. 1. 20. Jer. 47. 6. & 50. 35–37.

V. 16. Their children ſhall be daſht in pieces] The Babylonians children, according to that prophetical curſe, Pſal. 137. 9. They ſhall, through the juſt judgment of God, in way of requital, be ſerved themſelves, as they had beforetime ſerved Gods people, 2 Chr.36.17. Of the like cruelty, ſee 2 King. 8.12. Hoſ.14.1. Nah.3. 10.

before their eyes] To encreaſe their grief. See Chap. 1. 7. Deut.28.31,32. Jer.39.6.

their houſes ſhall be ſpoyled] Or, rifled, Zach.14.2. Jer.51.56.

and their wives raviſhed] So had they dealt with Gods people before, Lam.5.11. See this judgment threatned, Deut. 28.30. Amos 7.17. Zach.14.2.

V. 17. Behold] See ver.9.

I will ſtir up] Heb. I am raiſing up; or, Behold me raiſing up. I am even now about it. See Chap.3.1. He ſpeaks as of a thing preſent, in act, and in ſight, Chap. 43.19.

ſtir up] Or, raiſe up, Chap.41.2. & 45.13.

the Medes] Heb. Madai. A people deſcended from Madai, the ſon of Japhet, Gen.10.2. 1 Chr.1.5. whoſe country is commonly called Media. Of the ſite whereof, ſee ver.5. Chap. 41. 2. Jer.50.3. Theſe Medes with the Perſians, and other their aſſociates, marching under the conduct of Cyrus and Darius, were thoſe ſanctified ones, ſpoken of, ver. 3. for under the name of the Medes, are the Perſians alſo comprehended; as in ſome ſort, one people, as well for vicinity, as affinity, and acknowledging one King, Chap.21.2. Jer.51. 11. Dan.5.28. & 9.1.

againſt them] The Chaldeans, and Babylonians, ver.19.

which ſhall not regard ſilver; and as for gold, they ſhall not delight in it] The like ſyntax, ſee chap.8.13. & 45.9. they ſhall not regard to ſpare any for ranſome, as Saul did Agag, 1 Sam. 15.10. the ranſome of a mans life are his riches, ſaith Solomon, Prov.13.8. but this ranſome will not ſerve in the day either of Gods wrath, Prov.11.4. or of mans rage, Prov.6.34,35. Ezek. 7.19.

V. 18. Their bowes alſo ſhall daſh the young men to pieces] Or, But they ſhall daſh to pieces the youths, ſhot thorough with bows. But. Heb. And. the copulative for the adverſative: as Chap.11.4,14. they ſhall daſh to pieces the youths, ſhot thorow; that is, when they have ſhot them thorough, they ſhall daſh them to pieces: or, they ſhall ſhoot them through, and then daſh them to pieces. See the like defective conſtruction, Chap.14.12. & 38.14,17,21. with bows; A defect of the prepoſition: as ver.9. or, with their bows, a defect alſo of the pronoun: as ver.7. hands; for, their hands. They ſhall be ſo outragiouſly affected towards them, and enraged againſt them, that it ſhall not ſuffice them, to have ſhot them thorow, and ſlain them; but they ſhall batter alſo their dead bodies to pieces. An expreſſion of extream cruelty, Chap.3.15. Ier. 50.17. Mic.3.3.

and they ſhall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye ſhall not ſpare children] They ſhall neither give quarter upon any terms, unto any that are able to crave it; nor afford it to young children, and tender Infants, that are not able to ask it. They ſhall ſhew no more pity to them, then themſelves did, when time was, to Gods people, 2 Chr.36.17. Pſal. 137. 8. Jer.50.15,29. Jam.2.13.

the fruit of the womb] Children proceeding from the womb, as fruit from a tree, Pſal.127.3. & 132.11. or encloſed yet in the womb; whom they ſhould deſtroy, by ſlaughtering the mother going great with them, or ripping them up in inhumane manner, 2 King.8.12. & 15.16. Amos 1.13.

their eye ſhall not ſpare children] The very ſight of whoſe tender eſtate might move to commiſeration, and their tears and cryes much more, Exod.2.6. no rueful ſight ſhall move them to ſhew mercy on any. See the phraſe, Deut. 7.16. & 13. 9. & 19.13,21. & 25.12. Ezek.5.11. & 7.4,9 & 8.18. & 9.5,10. & 16.5. & 20.17.

V. 19. And Babylon the glory of Kingdoms] Heb. the beauty, or, delicacy of Kingdoms. The moſt beautiful, and delicate Eſtate and Monarchy, that ever was, that goodly head of gold, Dan.2.37,38. that Lady of Kingdoms, Chap. 47. 5. the praiſe of the whole earth, Jer.51.41. The word contains in it, a reſemblance of the roe, before mentioned, ver.14. a very comely and lovely creature; whom the Spouſe therefore compares her love unto, Cant.2.9,17. & 8 14. See Chap.4. 2.

the beauty of the Chaldees excellency] Or, the Chaldeans excellent bravery, as the word is rendred, Chap.3.18. (the words are both joyned together, Chap.4.2.) So is Babylon ſtyled, becauſe the chief city of Chaldea; and ſuch, as for ornaments, riches, and ſtately buildings, might compare with any city in the world, Dan. 4. 20. and was that therefore, whereof the Chaldees did moſt vaunt themſelves. And the word here ſignifies, as excellency, and ſtatelineſſe; ſo haughtineſs alſo and pride, Job 35.12. & 38.11.

the Chaldees] Heb. Chaſdim. A people ſo termed, from Cheſed, the ſon of Nahor, Abrahams brother, Gen.22.22. Of whom, they were deſcended. So Ezr. 5.12. Ier.34.11. & 37. 5. But, ſometime, it is uſed, for Magitians, and Aſtrologers; becauſe the Chaldees were much addicted to ſuch ſtudies, Dan.2.10. & 4.7. & 5.7.

ſhall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah] Heb. as, or, according to (as Ier.3.26.) Gods overthrowing; or, Gods ſubverſion (as Amos 4.11.) with Sodome and with Gomorrah; or, wherewith he overthrew (the verb ſupplyed out of the noun: as Deut.1.27. Hoſ.3.1.) Sodome, and Gomorrah. Of which, Gen.19.24. The ſame is ſaid of Babylon, Ier. 50.40. An uſual expreſſion, importing, a ſudden, total, inevitable, and irrecoverable deſtruction, Deut.29.23. Chap.1.9. Ier.49.18. Zeph.2.9. 2 Pet.2.6. Jud.7. Howbeit, I cannot approve of what the Rabbines tell us out of their Legends, rather, then Chronicles; that Darius having ſlain Baltaſar, Dan.5.30,31. reigned one year in his ſtead; yet deſtroyed not Babylon, as is here foretold: But in the year following, it was burnt with fire from heaven, as Sodome, and Gomorrah were. To which purpoſe they abuſe a place of Scripture, Ier.51.46. Of which, when we ſhall come to it. But this is but a figment of theirs, whereof there is no ſtore wanting in them. The truth is, that this utter devaſtion of Babylon, was not at once; but began at the conqueſt of it, by Cyrus and Darius, and in the ſucceeding ages was conſummated.

V. 20. It ſhall never be inhabited] Heb. It ſhall not ſit for ever: ſit, to wit, on a throne, as a Queen, or Empreſs: as Chap.10.13. or, inhabite, that is, be inhabited by any, (as the word is uſed, Ier.17.6.) or have place to inhabite, Ier.51.49. So Zach.7.7. & 9.5. Not for ever, that is, never; as Ioh.8.51.

& 11.26. to wit, after that it is once thus utterly deſtroyed. Nor need we, as Some would have it, expound the words, with a concealed reſtriction, untill the time ſet by God, for her reſtitution and reſtauration. For the ground they build on, taken from a two-fold deſtruction of that State, whereof the one is imaginary, (ſee ver. 1.) is but ſandy.

neither ſhall it be dwelt in] Heb. neither ſhall it dwell, Ier. 50. 29. It ſhall neither have throne to ſit on, nor place to dwell in: neither regain power to rule; nor riſe to be a place, for habitation, again, Ier. 51, 26, 43, 52. or, it ſhall neither abide, (as Chap. 11.6.) nor dwell: have no place of abode, or dwelling; that is, have no being, being utterly aboliſhed: as Job 7. 9, 10. & 14.10. Pſal. 37.36. & 103.16. Jer. 51.64. Rev. 18.21.

from generation, to generation] Heb. unto generation, and generation; that is, for many ages ſucceſſively: as Joel 2. 2. or, for ever, as before; and as Pſal. 100.5. contrary to that, which, preſumptuouſly, ſhe promiſed to her ſelf, that ſhe ſhould ſit, not as a widow; but as a Lady, for ever, Chap. 47. 7, 8.

neither ſhall the Arabian pitch tent there] The Arabians are a people, that kept in tents, wherewith they remove from place to place, as they met with paſture for their cattel, Jer. 49.29. called Scenitæ therefore by the Greeks; but in Hebrew they were ſo termed, either from the Plains, whereon they lived, Ier. 3.2. (the word ſo ſignifying. See Deut. 2.8. & 3. 17.) or becauſe their country lay toward the evening quarter, the weſt, (ſee on chap. 59.19) between the Perſian gulf, and the red Sea; the utmoſt Weſt of Aſia: or, becauſe they were a mixture, or medley of divers Nations, Ier. 25.24. as the word it ſelf alſo ſometime imports, Exod. 12. 38. Neh. 13.3. For I ſuppoſe that moſt unlikely, (which yet ſome hold out) that in regard of their hew, they ſhould be ſo termed from the raven, Cant. 5.11. the one having the ſame radicall letters with the other: and becauſe the Kedarenes from their blackneſs may ſeem ſo termed. See on Chap. 21.16. See alſo further of Arabia, on Chap. 21. 13. The word rendred, pitch tent, is obſerved to want a letter, to wit, Aleph: the like whereunto is found, Job 35.11. Prov. 17.4. and as Some, 1 King. 10.18. See on ver. 12. The meaning is, that the place ſhall be ſo waſte, that thoſe wandring people ſhall not ſit down there, becauſe they ſhall not find conveniency of feeding for their flocks. Though Some would have it to be, in regard of thoſe harmful creatures, that ſhould rouſt and harbour in the rubbiſh and ruines of the city, ver. 21, 22.

neither ſhall the ſhepherds make their fold there] Heb. ſhall not make (their cattel) to lye down, (or, lodge) there. So Jer. 33. 11. See the like defect of the noun after the verb, Cant. 1.7. The ſame thing is in divers terms expreſſed. And we may obſerve a further deſolation denounced againſt Babylon, then is againſt Nineveh, Zeph. 3.14. for it is ſaid, that the flocks yet ſhall lye down in the one; which is denyed here of the other. The reaſon whereof, ſee Chap. 14.23. & 17.2.

V. 21. But wilde beaſts of the deſart ſhall lye there] He had before ſhewed who ſhould not lodge, or abide there: he relateth, now, who ſhould.

wild beaſts of the deſart] Heb. Tsijim. Such kind of beaſts as are wont to haunt, and abide in Tſijah; that is, in dry places, or, waſts, Chap. 41.18. & 53.2. So Chap. 34.14. Jer. 50. 39. It is uſed alſo ſometime, for people, that dwell in ſuch regions, Pſal. 72.8. compared with Pſal. 68. 6. Some of the Rabbines ſay, that they are ſuch, as we call martens.

and their houſes ſhall be full of doleful creatures] Heb. Ochim. A word no where elſe found. It is by moſt thought to ſignifie, ſome ſuch kind of harmful creatures, as by biting, or ſcratching, put men to pain: as derived from an interjection of a mournful notion, Ezek. 6.11. & 21.9. Some of the Rabbines ſay, they are ſuch, as aſtoniſh men at the ſight of them: Yet others, again, would have them to be no other then our ferrets. Nor want there of the Jewiſh Writers, that ſuppoſe the word to ſignifie, not a beaſt, but a bird: ſome kind of fowl, ſo termed of the doleful tune that it hath. Theſe, whatſoever they were, ſhould lodge in their houſes, being deſtitute of Inhabitants; or in the waſts, where they ſometime ſtood; as Chap. 5.17.

and owles ſhall dwell there] Heb. the owles daughters: and it is not unworthy the obſervation, that the name here given the owl, is never found in Scripture ſingly, or ſimply; but inſtead of owl, or owls, is conſtantly ſaid, the daughter of the owl, Levit. 11.16. Deut. 14.15. or, the owls daughters, Job 30. 29. Chap. 34.13. & 43.20. Jer. 50.39. Mic. 1.8. ſave once only, Lam. 4.3. where the maſculine plural is found alone. Hence one of the Jewiſh Writers gathers, that the Ochim before mentioned, are no other then theſe owls daughters, or young ones, which for want of food in thoſe waſte places, (wherein owls, in the places pointed to, are noted moſt to abide) being forſaken by the dam, (as in that place of the Lamentations is implyed, that they oft are) no make a very doleful, and hideous noyſe. But the text ſeems to relate them, as ſeveral ſorts of wild creatures: and the generality of the form would imply ſome other matter. But theſe among others, were to be as the Inhabitants and free-deniſons [illegible] ruined Babylon. See Rev. 18.2, and Satyrs] The word here uſed, doth moſt commonly ſignifie a goat, Gen. 37.31. Levit. 4.23. So called, becauſe he is very ſhaggy, or hairy. For that ſeems to be the primary notation of the word, Gen. 27.11. Hence it is, that it is here rendred, Satyrs. Which were among the ancients, ſuppoſed to be monſtrous creatures, haunting woods, and waſte places, of a mixt compoſure, having viſage, and hands like a man, and going upright, as men do; but horned, and hairy, and cloven-footed like goats; and Jerome tells of an Eremite, that ſhould meet with one of them in the wilderneſs: Some ſuch monſters, it ſeems, our Tranſlators thought here intended. To which purpoſe, alſo, one of the Jewiſh Doctors ſaith, that it is a kind of miſhapen wild goats. The word is ſometime uſed for Devils; ſuch, as the idolatrous people in old time adored. So it is taken, Levit. 17.7. 2 Chr. 11.15. and they ſeem ſo termed; either becauſe they appeared in the ſhape of goats, unto thoſe that adored them, or had dealings with them; as to witches at their meetings, they are reported ofttimes to have done; or becauſe by ougly, and direful apparitions, they uſed to ſtrike terror, and horror, into thoſe that behold them, and make their hair, as we ſay, ſtand on end. For the word ſometime, ſignifies horror, Chap. 28.2. Ezek. 27. 35. & 32.10. and an horrid tempeſt, Job 9.17. & 18.20. ſuch, as theſe alſo, ſometime raiſe, or appear with, Job 1.19. And this way the Jewiſh Commenters, moſt of them, go, making the ſeirim, here, the ſame with the ſhedim, Deut. 32.17. and Pſal. 106.37. In which place of Moſes, there is an alluſion to the notation of the word here uſed, in the ro[illegible], from whence it ſprings, in that clauſe; with whom their fathers were not affrighted. And this Expoſition may ſeem to receive ſtrength, as from that in Matth. 12.43. where the Devil diſpoſſeſſed, is ſaid to haunt waſte and dry places: ſo, from that parallel place, Rev 18.2. where it is ſaid, that Babylon was, upon her fall, become an habitation of Devils; and an hold of every foul ſpirit. Nor do I doubt, but that that place hath a compliance with this. But that is ſpoken of ſpiritual, and myſtical; this, of corporal, and material Babel. And I ſuppoſe, rather, the word, here, to ſignifie ſome kind of ſtrange beaſts, as uſed to keep in waſte places; from their horrid, and ougly ſhapes ſo termed; and the rather, becauſe it is ſaid, Chap. 34.13. the ſeir ſhall cry to his mate; ſee further there. There want not, alſo, that ſuppoſe the Seir here mentioned, to be a kind of fowl, and that of the rank of owls, of a middle ſize, between the leaſt, and the greateſt; called by the Greeks, ſcops; whence alſo, we have our Engliſh word, ſcoff; becauſe it is a fowl full of geſticulation, prone to imitate the geſtures that others repreſent it with, and to act, what it ſees them do; and is by ſuch means, commonly, taken, as the dotterell is with us. The main reaſon, I ſuppoſe, that induced them to entertain this conceit, was the word of dancing, here uſed. Which, of how ſmall force it is, to infer this new notion, will in the opening of it appear.

ſhall dance there] So the verb ſignifies, when applyed to man: as 1 Chr. 15.29. Eccl. 3.4. but to skip, rather, when referred to beaſts, as to rams, and lambs, Pſal. 114. 4, 6. and to calves, and the young of other creatures, ſporting, either by themſelves, or one with another, Pſal. 29.6. unleſs we ſhall, with the Rabbines, and the Greek, render it; and devils ſhall dance there. The Prophet may ſeem, the rather, to have uſed the word, that ſignifies, as well to dance, as to skip, to comply with the word in the next branch, ver. 22. that ſignifies as well to ſing, as to cry.

V. 22. And the wild beaſts of the Ilands] Heb. Ijim. The word ſignifies primarily Ilands, Chap. 11.11. & 40.15. & 42. 15. here ſuch wild creatures, as breed, and keep in Ilands, deſtitute of Inhabitants; or unto which, few or none, have any ordinary acceſs. The Chaldee expounds it, wild-catts; the Latine, owls. The Rabbines, Some of them, Pies, or, jays. Some of ours tranſlate it, a terrible, or affrighting wight; and expound it, a dragon. This they build upon two grounds. The former, concerning the tranſlation, is from the form of the verb, which is ſingular; and they would have the noun alſo, ſo to be, as derived from the word Ajam, that ſignifies terrible, or dreadful, whence the Emim had their name, Deut. 2. 20. But there is no reaſon to make Ijim, more, then Tsijim, a ſingular; and of the ſyntax more anon. The other ground concerning the expoſition, is drawn from the Prophets method. He began, ſay they, with beaſts, the Tſijim, and Ochim; then paſſed on to fowls, Owls, and Seirs, ver. 21. and here he comes to ſpeak of creeping things, or ſerpents. But this they ſpeak without proof. And I ſee no good ground therefore, for this new deviſed notation, and for the expoſition, as little. Our Engliſh renders it not amiſs in the general; the Jewiſh Writers, for the notation, backing them therein; though in the particular deſignation of the kind, not agreeing among themſelves.

ſhall cry] It is by the Jewiſh Writers obſerved here, that the noun is plural, the verb ſingular: the meaning, ſay they, being, that each one of them ſhall cry. Of which kinde of Syntax, See Chap.2.20. The word here uſed, ſignifies properly to anſwer; but it is uſed for to ſing, Chap.27.2. Hoſh.2.17. according to which uſe of the word, ſome of the Hebrews would have it taken here; but to ſignifie, crying aloud, and that, as they ſuppoſe, in a doleful tune, See Zeph. 2. 14. But the word, when it is applyed to Singers, and ſinging, doth not ſo much import, ſimply, to ſing; as to ſing by courſe, one party, as it were, anſwering another. So Exod.15.21. Ezra. 3.11. And ſo the Ijim ſhall anſwer (ſo the old Latine renders it) or, cry; each, to others, Chap.34.14. the ſeir ſhall call, or, cry to his mate. Thoſe of the Jewiſh Writers, that would render it, ſhall dwell, or abide; as derived, from a word, that ſignifies a place of manſion, or abode, Pſal. 90. 1. Nah. 2. 13. Seem to ſtrain over-far, without example, and that needleſly, having a plain, and obvious ſenſe, at hand.

in their deſolate houſes] Some of the Rabbines read it, with change of one letter, an R, for an L, in their palaces; avouching for it, the like, Ezek. 19. 7. and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt takes it. But another of them, controlleth this interpretation, affirming, that theſe letters are not convertible, and he renders the words they ſhall cry, there, with their widows: Such of their kinde, as have loſt their mates; as alſo, our Engliſh editions, ſome of them, repreſent it there in the margent; and that of Geneva, hath it in the text: and it is well known, that the word, is commonly uſed for widows, Chap.10.2. & 54.4. and doth properly ſo ſignifie. But I find none that herein concur with this Rabby. Our laſt, here, renders it, deſolate houſes, as in Ezekiel, deſolate palaces, as if he had ſaid, widowed ones, as ſome give it in Latine: which, howſoever, it might well be admitted here in regard of the ſtory; yet that place in Ezekiel, will not ſo well brook it; for it ſeems not ſo ſuteable to the reſt of the relation, deſcribing the pranks, that a ſtirring and potent Prince ſhould play, to ſay, that he viſited the deſolate palaces of other: Princes, and laid waſt their cities. I ſuppoſe rather, that both there, and here, it ſhould be rendred, ſimply, palaces, without any ſuch ſuperfluous addition, as our old ancient Engliſh verſions all had it; nor was the old Latine other: and that, either by the ſcribes over-ſight one letter ſlipt in for another, (the like whereunto ſee, Jer.2.20.& 15. 24.) or by a kinde of liſping pronunciation, the one came to be ſometime uſed for the other.

in their] Heb. in his, to wit, in the palaces of their king, or, of each one of his Nobles, alſo, of whom, before, verſ.2. So Chap.32.14.

and dragons] to wit, ſhall cry, (to be ſupplyed, as the Rabbine well obſerves, from the former branch, as Gen. 1.16. verſ. 6.) after their manner. The word ſignifies the greateſt ſort of fiſh, ſuch as we call whales, Gen.1.21. See on Lam.4. 3. and likewiſe the greater ſort of ſerpents, or, ſnakes: to wit, of ſuch, as wanting feet (which ſome ſerpents, as the crocodile, and others have) glide along, by wringing of their bodies, to and fro, on the ground, as thoſe great fiſh, whom in ſhape, alſo, they reſemble, do in the water. So it is taken, Job 30.29. Chap.34.13. & 35.7. & 43.20. Jer.9. 10. & 10.22. & 49.33. & 51. 37. and of the greatneſs of ſome of them, ſee Plinies natural hiſtory. l. 8. c.11,14.

in their pleaſant palaces] Heb. in the palaces of delicateneſs, or, deliciouſneſs, or, voluptuouſneſs. So Mich. 2. 9. houſes of pleaſure, or, delight, for, pleaſant houſes; but, here, rather, in the worſt part; for their curious, and delicate, or their voluptuous, their banqueting, and revelling houſes, that is, in the places, where ſuch, ſometime ſtood, See Chap.32.13. See the uſe of word, Deut.20.54,56. Chap.47.1. Jer.6. 2. the pronoun is wanting, as verſ.7.

and her time is neer to come] As Ch.56.1. Jer.48.16. Ezek.36.8. Babylons time, wherein ſhe is to be deſtroyed, So verſ.6. where it may be demanded, how this may be made good, when as it was not till about ſome two hundred yeares, after this Prophecy, that Babylon was ſurprized and ſacked, and the Chaldean Empire ruined by Cyrus, and Darius. For this Prophecy was delivered above one hundred year, and upward, before the Babylonian captivity, which laſted full ſeventy years, Jer.25.11,12. Whereunto (paſſing by that novel, and groundleſs conceit of a former deſtruction of Babylon, of which, on verſ. 1.) anſwer may be returned. Firſt, that what may ſeem long with man, is ſhort with God, with whom a thouſand years are but as yeſterday, Pſal.90. 4. or, but as to morrow, for a thouſand years, and a day, are all one with him, 2 Pet.3.8. Secondly, that this is by the Prophet thus ſpoken, as ſpeaking to them, that were in, and under the captivity, (the moſt of whom, in all likelyhood, were as yet unborn) for whoſe ſupport, and comfort, in that heavy time, this was eſpecially delivered, and for their uſe left upon record, by him. So Jeremy writing to them, in the very beginning of the captivity, in the reign of Zedekiah, Jer.51.59. Speaks of Babylons ruine, as of a buſineſs approaching, Jer. 50.1,2. & 51. 46,56. And laſtly, that as to the eye of faith, things future, and a far off, are as preſent, Joh. 8. 56. 2 Cor. 4.17,18. Heb.10.37,38. So the Prophet by the Spirit of Prophecy, ſeeing theſe things, revealed unto him, as preſent, or approaching, verſ.1. doth accordingly ſpeak of them, See verſ.4,5,9. So Jam. 5. 8,9.

and her dayes ſhall not be prolonged] Her dayes; that is, the dayes of her wel-fare, of her proſperity, and tranquillity (So the Hebrews Doctors) ſhall not laſt long, or be prolonged any longer, as Job 9.25. Pſal.89.45. Jer.51.47. Lam.4. 18. & 5.21. Or the dayes of her viſitation, as Hoſh.9.7. no longer deferred; and ſo it is the ſame in effect with the former. The time ſhall not be long, before this be put in execution. God will haſten to effect it, in his due time. It ſhall not be protracted beyond that ſet time, that God hath aſſigned it; See Ezek.12.25,27,28.

CHAP. XIIII.

Verſ. 1 F*Or the Lord will have mercy upon Jacob*] This Chapter is a continuation of the denunciation of the deſtruction of Babylon. And it beginneth with a reaſon rendred of the haſtening of it, mentioned, Chap.13. 22. Gods mercy, and compaſſion towards his people; the deliverance of whom depended upon Babylons deſtruction, Jer.50.3,4. So Pſal. 102.13. Zach.1.16.

Jacob] See Chap.2.5. & 9.8. Pſal.14. 7.

and will yet chooſe Iſrael] He will receive them into grace and favour, as if he had made a new choyce of them again. So ſome others, he will make it appear, that they are ſtill his choſen people, as at firſt they were, Deut.7.6,7. It may be rendred, I will refine (as he promiſed to do, Chap. 1. 25.) or, make choyce ones of them, again, as the word is uſed; Chap. 48.10. Hagg. 2. 23. So the elect or, choyce Lady, 2 Joh.1. And of Paul, an elect veſſel, or, inſtrument, Act. 9. 15. for, a choyce one: or, I will ſelect, or, pick them out again, and gather them out of the places, into which they were ſcattered, See Chap.11.11. & 27.12,13. So the word is uſed, 1 Sam.2. 28. & 24. 2. Luk.6.13. Joh. 15. 19. So Zach. 1. 17. & 2. 12. And this interpretation the next branch confirmeth.

yet] Or, yet again, to take away the ambiguity, for the word, here uſed, doth not anſwer the Engliſh, yet, for, notwithſtanding; but as we ſay, further yet; or, yet again, as Chap. 8.5. So once; not for ſometime; but once onely, Heb.9.27,28. compared with verſ.25,26. Jud.3.

Iſrael] See Chap.1.4. Some render it here, in Iſrael, that is, ſay they, not all Iſrael, but ſome in Iſrael; the remnant of elect ones, Chap.10. 21, 22. Rom. 11.5. And there is indeed a particle in the Hebrew here, that doth uſually ſo ſignifie; but, that particle, in the Syntax of that language with ſome verbs (this here uſed among other) is either ſuperfluous, or a note of the accuſative caſe onely. So here; the main body of the people ſurviving then, intended, and ſo, Chap. 44.1,2. Deut. 14. 2. 1 King.8.16. & 11.32.34.

and ſet them in their own land] Deut. 30. 3-5. Jer. 24. 6. & 32.37. Ezek.37.14.

and the ſtrangers ſhall be joyned with them] Heb. the ſtranger, or, the ſojourner, ſhall joyn himſelf (as Chap.56.3. unto them, as in the next clauſe, Gen.15.13. & 23.4. the ſingular number put collectively, as Exod.12.48. Lev.19.33. Deut. 10. 18. & 24.17. Many ſtrange people, taking notice of the ſtrange works, that God ſhould then work for his people, in this their delivery, Pſal.126.2. ſhall joyn themſelves unto them, to worſhip together with them. See the like, Eſt.8.17. Pſal.47. 8,9. Chap.44.5. & 56.3. & 60.3. This, no doubt, was in part accompliſhed, at their return from Babylon; but more exactly, and plentifully fulfilled, in the kingdom of Chriſt, by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, Chap. 2. 3. Zach. 2.10, 11. Eph.2,13.

and they ſhall cleave to the houſe of Jacob] As 1 Sam. 26. 19. The ſame, in other termes, with the former. See Chap.2.5

V. 2 And the people ſhall take them, and bring to their place] Heb. Peoples, people of divers Nations, (as Chap.2. 3. & 12. 4.) ſhall be helpful to them, in fitting, and furniſhing them, with all neceſſary accommodations for their journey, in their return to their land again, Ezra.1. 4. 6. & 7.13-16. Chap.11. 12. & 66. 20.

and the houſe of Iſrael ſhall poſſeſs them, in the land of the Lord, for ſervants, and for handmaids] The converts, or Proſelytes of other people, ſhall, freely, offer themſelves, unto the Church, to do her any ſervice: they ſhall of their own accord, be as ſerviceable to them, as any ſervants, or bondmen, could be, that had been bought by them. Chap.60.7, 10, 12. & 61.5. Rom. 16.1,2. 1 Cor. 16.15. 2 Cor. 8.4,5. There is in the words an alluſion, to a law, concerning ſtrangers. Lev.25.44,45.

the land of the Lord] The land of Judea ſo called, as, in a ſpeciall manner, his, Lev. 25.23. becauſe he had made choyce of it, to place his people in it; Exod.15.17. in regard whereof, alſo, it is called Gods Sanctuary: Chap.63.18. as a type of his Church.

and they ſhall take them Captive, whoſe captives they were] Heb. they ſhall captive their captivers. as Pſal.137.3. That which was fulfilled, in ſuch victories as God gave the Jewiſh Nation after their return from Babylon, in the times of the Maccabees, over ſuch people, as had, before time, held them in captivity. Though ſome expound it, of buying the Babylonians for ſlaves; as they, alſo, wel might, from the Medes, and the Perſians, that had ſurprized them. The meaning is, that the tables now ſhould be turned, and thoſe now made Lords over them, whom they had been in ſubjection and bondage to, before; and thoſe in ſubjection to them, that had before Lorded it over them. Chap.26.13. Spiritually, moſt interpreters underſtand it, of thoſe people; who by the miniſtery of the Apoſtles were, out of all nations, ſubdued, and brought in to the obedience of Chriſts Scepter. Pſal.45.5. & 68.18. Rom.15.16,19. 2 Cor.10.4,5. and they ſhall rule over their oppreſſors] Heb. their exactors. as verſ.4. Chap.60.17. The ſame things repeated in other terms. See Chap.60.14.

V. 3 And it ſhall come to paſs in that day] or, at that time See Chap 2.20. & 3.7.18,24. or ſimply, when: as Gen. 3.17. Ruth 4.5.

that the Lord ſhall give thee reſt] Heb. of the Lords making thee to reſt: as Deut.25.19.

from thy ſorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage, wherein thou waſt made to ſerve] Heb. which was ſerved upon thee. as Deut. 21.3. When thou ſhalt be ſet free from the Babylonian bondage, wherein thou enduredſt much ſorrow, and hardſhip, and livedſt in continuall feares. Lev. 26.36. Deut.28.48,65,66. Luk.1.74. The Prophet, here, turneth his ſpeech to the people.

V. 4 That thou ſhalt take up] as Ezek.21.2. See Chap. 13 1.

this proverb] Or, by-word, or, taunting ſpeech: as Ezek.16. 44. ſo Deut.28.37. Jer.24.9. The word ſignifies not a parable, or ſimilitude, only; but any quick ſpeech, or ſentence of ſpecial note, and ordinary uſe: ſo called, as the moſt, from the verb maſhal, that ſignifies to rule, as being ſuch, as doth ſway commonly with men; either in their minds, or in their tongues. Though ſome would by a tranſpoſition of letters fetch it, from the word Shalam: which, ſay they, ſignifies to aſſimilate. But neither are ſuch derivations, by tranſpoſitions, over-uſuall in the Hebrew; nor do I finde, where the verb Shalam, ever ſo ſignifies.

againſt the King of Babylon] Inſulting now over him, who before tyrannized over thee: againſt, or, concerning: as Chap. 1.1. By the King of Babylon, ſome underſtand ſome one King; either Nebuchadnezzer, the firſt Monarch of the Chaldean Empire, who ruinated the Jewiſh State. 2 Chr.36. or, Baltaſar, the laſt of that Empire, with whom that State fell. But the ſpeech concerneth not, ſo much this, or, that King, as the Kingdome, which ſucceſſively was holden by them. See Dan.7.17, 23.

and ſay, how hath the oppreſſed ceaſed] The by-word, and taunting ſpeech concerning him, his State and city: ſpoken not ſo much in way of interrogation, as in way of admiration, and deriſion. So verſ.10,12.

the oppreſſor] Or, exactor: as Chap.60.17.

ceaſed] Chap.16.4. See Chap.33.8.

the golden city ceaſed] For, golden; which well ſuites with the golden head. Dan.2.32,38. and the golden cup, that Babylon is ſaid to be. Jer.51.7. Some render it, gold-thirſty; ſome exactreſs of gold; ſhe that ſtripped other people of their gold; as Aſſyria had done before her. Chap.10.14. & 39.6. The word is rather, Syriack; (which language the Chaldees uſed, in thoſe times. Dan.2.4.) then Hebrew: the Prophet would have them, taunt that city by a term of their own language; as another, their idols, by a ſentence of the ſame. Jer.10.11. The ſubſtantive is wanting, but muſt be ſupplyed, either city, or State; not King: for the word is feminine; or, the golden one: ſimply, without any other adjection. See the like defect, Pſal.73.10. Chap.40.10. Ezek.13.11.

V. 5. The Lord hath broken the ſtaffe of the wicked] The anſwer to the queſtion moved, verſ.4. Not Cyrus; but the Lord by Cyrus. Chap.41.2. & 44.48. & 25.1,2. hath pulled down the power of the wicked King, and State of Babylon: he hath broken the ſtaff, wherewith, the wicked Babylonians did beat Gods people. See Chap.9.4. & 10.5.& 47.6.

and the Scepter] Or, rod; as the word properly ſignifies: ſee Chap.9.4. & 10.5,24. and ſo it would, here, be rendered for that which followeth, verſ.6.

of the Rulers] The Babylonian Prince, and great ones: ſee Ezek.19.11, the word, whence that for a proverb, comes, verſ.4.

V. 6 He that ſmote the people in wrath, with a continuall ſtroke] Or, That ſtruck the people, in wrath, with a ſtroke unavoidable, or, irrecoverable. For the words, ſtrike, & ſtroke, in the originall, do here, the one anſwer the other. And ſome underſtand it of the rod, or ſtaffe ſtriking, verſ.5. Others, of the ſtriker, the hand (ſo ſome of the Rabbins) or, the perſon ſtriking with it. And of theſe latter, ſome underſtand the words, on this manner: he that ſtruck the people in wrath, his ſtroke, ſhall not depart, or, be removed: or, the ſtroke of him, that ſtruck the people; (Heb. peoples; as verſ.2.) in wrath, ſhall not depart. He that before, with ſo much fury, and rage, laid load upon many nations, and ſtruck them, at pleaſure; hath now received ſuch a ſtroke, as he was not able to avoid; or hath ſuch a blow given him, as he ſhall not be able to recover. But the former ſeems the plainer way, and to flow moſt naturally from the text. However we take the words, there is a reaſon, therein, rendered; why God had broken the rod of Babylon, for the cruelty that had by her, been executed, and exerciſed on other people.

he that ruled the Nations in anger is perſecuted, and none hindereth] This reading admitted, would ſtrengthen the latter interpretation of the former branch: for the ſame thing, queſtionleſs, is after this Prophets uſuall manner, (though in other terms expreſſed) intended in either: yet moſt interpreters, (ſome of them, alſo, controlling the points in the Hebrew) render it, otherwiſe; as ſpoken, wholly, of the babylonian Kings cruelty; not of ought, that had befallen him; thus rendering the words. He that ruled the Nations in anger; that purſued, or perſecuted them, without hinderance, or, none withholding; or, that hindered, or, reſtrained, not thoſe that did perſecute. ruled roughly, and reſtrained not thoſe, that under him did the like. And this verſion com[illegible] neer, indeed, to the prophets purpoſe, and intendement: but the words will not admit it; I encline therefore, to that, which I meet with in the Jewiſh commentaries, upon this place; who thus render it: That ruled the Nations in anger, the perſecuted without reſtraint; or out of the former branch, ſupplying, what may make the ſenſe more compleat, (as Gen. 1.16. Chap.3. 25.) that ruled with anger the perſecuted: that tyrannized over thoſe, whom inceſſantly, none daring to oppoſe, or being able to reſtrain him, he perſecuted. See Chap.10.14. This syntax, and ſenſe, the text freely yields, without force.

V. 7. The whole earth is at reſt, and is quiet] The Inhabitants of the world, who could have no reſt, or eaſe, ver.16. while Babylon ſo reigned, and ruled, as ver. 6. are now at reſt, and may ſit quietly in the places of their abode, Zach. 1.11. the earth, for its Inhabitants: as Pſal.98.4,9.

is at reſt, and is quiet] Heb. reſteth, is quiet. A quick form of ſpeech, having ſome emphaſis in it. See the like, Chap. 24.4. & 52.9. Lam.2.19.

they break forth into ſinging] So the ſame is rendred, Chap. 44.23. & 49.13. & 54.1. & 55.12. and with ſome addition, Chap.52.9. break out into joy. For the Prophet ſeems much delighted with this word; in this form and ſenſe, no where found in Scripture, out of his writings; ſave once, Pſal.98.4. where it is rendred, make a loud noyſe; which may ſeem to be the genuine notion of the word. It is once, only, but in another forme, uſed, for to break aſunder. Mic.3.3. and may ſeem to imply, a widening of the mouth, or a wide opening of the lips, and lungs; the natural inſtruments of voice, to make the louder noyſe. The Jewiſh Doctor ſaith, that in the Arabick tongue it ſignifies to ſpeake plainly, and cleerly: as Chap.32.4. And it may be deemed to imply ſuch a joy (for of no other note is it uſed) as cannot be contained, or kept in, but muſt needs break forth; and by ſinging, and ſhouting, in acclamation and out-cryes, expreſs it ſelf, ſee 1 King.1. 40,45.

ſinging] So is the word rendered, in the places of this Prophet, before quoted; but is is rendred elſe-where, ſometimes, joy, and rejoycing. Pſal.30.5. & 98.4. ſometime, triumph. Pſal.47.2. ſometime ſhouting, and ſhouting for joy, Pſal. 35.17. Chap.12.6. Prov.11.10. it ſignifies a loud cry, in general: as Prov.1.20. and, that indifferently; whether an expreſſion of grief, or of joy: of griefe, and ſorrow, in way of exclamation, and ſupplication: as Jer. 7. 16. Lam. 2. 19. of joy, and gladneſs, in way of acclamation, and exultation; ſo moſt commonly, and ſo in this place. It may well be rendred, they cry aloud with a joyful ſhout. For there is a defect of the inſtrumental particle, here, as Chap. 55. 12. and oft, elſewhere expreſſed, Pſal.42.4. Chap.48.20. The meaning is, that there ſhould be very great joy every where, upon the fall of that great Empire, Chap.49.13. & 55.12. Jer.51.48.

V. 8. Yea, the firre-trees rejoyce at thee, and the Cedars of Lebanon] He turneth his ſpeech, here, to Babylon; telling her, that the very trees themſelves, the firres, and Cedars, ſhould rejoyce at her fall. By firres, and Cedars, (ſay ſome of the Jewiſh Writers, and others, following the Chaldee Paraphraſt) the Prophet underſtands great Princes, and Potentates, States, and Dominions, compared to, and reſembled by, ſuch, Chap.2.13. & 10.33,34. Ezek.31.3-9,16. Hab.2.17. Others ſuppoſe the meaning to be, that the cruelty of the Babylonians had been ſuch, that the very ſenſeleſs creatures themſelves, might ſeem to be ſenſible of it, and to rejoyce, therefore, at her ruine, Ezek.31.26. Jer.51,48. But the ſenſe is ſimply, and plainly, this, that theſe trees, which had from time to time, ſo frequently, and in ſo great abundance, been felled, to furniſh her with timber, for her ſhipping, and her buildings, might well be glad, had ſuch creatures ſenſe of what befell them, as hoping to be much ſpared, over what they had been, by her fall. See Sennacheribs threats, Chap. 37.24. This ſenſe, the words enſuing confirm.

and the Cedars] A defect of the copulative, as ver.7. Chap. 37.24. Hab.3.11.

ſaying] By a figurative form of ſpeech, ſenſe, and ſpeech is given to dumb and ſenſeleſs creatures, So Judg. 9. 8-15. Habb.2.11,12. But the term implying it, is wanting, here, as Pſal.105.14,15.

Since thou art layd down, no feller is come up againſt us] We are not felled ſo frequently, as we had wont to be, ſince thy fall, ſince thou waſt felled, Dan.4.14, 23. Ezek.31.12.

art layd down] Heb. haſt lyen down, the word ſignifies, properly, to lye down to ſleep, Job 7.4. but ſometime to lye down, by death, 2 Sam.7.12. Job 3.13. & 14. 12. becauſe death is as a ſleep, Pſal.13.3. Act.7.60. & 13.36. 1 Cor.11.30. & 15. 6. and the fall of a State is as its death, ver.15. Ezek. 31. 15, 16. Howbeit, ſome of the Jewiſh Writers take this clauſe, alſo, in a figurative ſenſe, expounding it, of the death of Nebuchadnezzar, termed here, ſay they, the hewer, or, cutter, (which exactly anſwers the Hebrew) becauſe he cut down kingdomes, and either ſlew, or enſlaved their kings, whereas his ſucceſſours, made them tributaries onely. But this, as hath been ſayd, ſuits not ſo well, with the intendment of the text; for the Chaldean eſtate fell not with him.

Hell from beneath is moved for thee, to meet thee at thy coming] After the joyful, and gladſome deportment of the whole world here, upon the fall of Babylon, and of the creatures therein, as well ſenſeleſs, as indued with ſenſe and reaſon, rhetorically related; the Prophet proceeds, here, in a lofty, and poetical ſtrain, to deſcribe the entertainment, given in the other world, to the king of Babylon, or to the State thereof, perſonated in the king, by thoſe, who were gone before him.

Hell] Or, The grave, the common receptacle of all that depart hence. See on Chap.5.14. So verſ.11,15.

is moved] The word ſignifies, ſometime, to tremble, and quake for fear, verſ. 3.15. Pſal.4.4. Joel 2.1,10. And ſo ſome of the Rabbines would have it taken here, as if the fear, and terrour of his tyranny, had poſſeſſed even the dead; and put them into a fear, at his coming among them: but this fits not with what follows, verſ.10, 11. Sometime, to rage, in tumultuous manner, Chap.37.28. Prov.29.9. but that ſuites not here. Sometime, to raiſe up ones ſelf, for ſome employment, Chap.28.21. ſo rather here. The grave doth rouze up it ſelf, as upon apprehenſion of the approach of ſo great a State, to give him entertainment, ſuiteable, in ſome ſort, to his greatneſs.

to meet thee] As men are wont to go forth, to meet perſons of note and ſtate, Gen.46.29. 1 Sam.13.10 & 18.6. a defect of the pronoun, as Chap.13.8,15.

it ſtirreth up the dead for thee] So the word is uſed, Pſal.88. 10. Prov.2.17. & 9.18. Chap.26.14. ſo called, of a word, that ſignifies, to be enfeebled, to faint, to remit, to give over, to ceaſe. Becauſe men in dying grow faint, and feeble, being dead, ceaſe to act, and to live, Job 14.10. and ſo moſt of the Jewiſh Commenters here take it: Yet the Chaldee renders it, mighty ones, from Ezek.32.21. or, giants: thoſe (ſay ſome of ours) that lived before the flood. Though that name be not given them, Gen.6.4. the ſons of Anak, (ſay ſome of the Rabbines) ſo termed, Deut 2.11,20. who ſeem to have been ſo called, from a people of that name, Gen. 14. 5. & 15. 20. (who may be deemed to have poſſeſſed that valley neer Jeruſalem, Joſh.15.8. & 18.16.) either becauſe of the poſterity of them, or like to them, for ſtature. But the text here, ſeems to intend, neither thoſe, nor theſe; but ſuch puiſſant Princes, as had known, and felt the power of the Chaldean State, being overthrown by it, or living in ſubjection to it, ver.10.

even all the chief ones of the earth] Or, Leaders, Princes, Rulers, Chieftains, great ones, that go in and out before the people, Num.27.16,17. 1 Sam.18.13. though theſe places ſeem to allude to the manner of ſhepherds, in thoſe parts, going in and out before their flocks, Joh. 10. 3, 4, 10. Heb. great goats, ſuch, as lead, and go before the reſt of the flock, Chap.1.11. & 34.6. Jer.50.8. & 51.40.

it hath raiſed up] To meet thee, as before. Heb. made to ſtand up: as if they had been ſitting in ſtate before; ſo Judg. 3.20. 1 King. 2.19. Jon.3.6.

from their thrones] He ſpeaks of them, ſaith the Jewiſh Commenter, as if they were living, and ſitting on their thrones, that, here, they had: or, as if they had thrones in the other world, as well as in this. Though Some of ours, by their thrones, underſtand their ſepulchres, or the ſtately monuments, wherein their corpſes lay interred, ver.18. But ſome of them, its likely, had no ſuch.

all the Kings of the Nations] That lived under that State; and were ſubſervient to it, Jer. 25. 9. & 27.6-8. Dan.2. 37,38.

V. 10. All they ſhall ſpeak, and ſay unto thee] The dead are induced, here, ſpeaking, as the place of the dead, before, beſtirring it ſelf; and with a tart, ironical, and ſatyrical ſpeech, entertaining, and welcoming to them this grand Tyrannic; not that they ſhould, or could ſo do; but that ſuch things, might truly, and juſtly, be then ſaid. See Ezek. 32.21.

ſpeak] Heb. anſwer: as Cant.2.10, Matth. 11. 25. a form very frequent, both in the old and new Teſtament.

art thou alſo become weak as we] Heb. ſick: as Chap.38. 1. & 39.1. The word imports ſuch weakneſſe, as comes by ſickneſs and pain: as we uſe the word, infirmity. Art thou pulled down by ſome mortal diſeaſe, who reputedſt thy ſelf to be immortal? Chap.47.7.

art thou become like unto us] Thou that thought'ſt thy ſelf the only great one; and no other thy compeer, Chap.47.8.

V. 11. Thy pomp is brought down to the grave] All thy ſtate, and bravery, wherein thou didſt pride thy ſelf, (ſee Chap.13. 11.) is laid in the duſt, Pſal.7.5. not that it accompanied him unto the grave; but that it periſhed with him, when he went down to the grave, Pſal.49.14,17. & 73.19,20.

and the noyſe of thy viols] The melody of thy muſick, which thou hadſt of all ſorts, Chap.3.5. & 6.18. Amos 5.23. one ſort, put for all. See Chap.5.12. For I ſuppoſe they ſhoot wide, here, who imagine this paſſage, to have reſpect unto ſuch muſick, as was uſed either at funerals, or, beſide the deceaſed, while they lay in the houſe, laid out; but not carried forth yet to burial, Chap.16.11. Jer.48.36. Matth.9.23. for the muſick here mentioned, is implyed, to be ceaſed, and ſilenced together with their pomp. See Ezek. 26.13. Yet it may well be deemed to have an eye to that jollity, and ſolemn feſtival, attended, and graced, no doubt, with much variety of muſick, at which the city was ſurprized. See Jer.51.39,41, 57. Dan.5.1,30. Some would have it, the noiſe of thy drums, or, thy bag-pipes, inſtruments of muſick uſed in war. But we find no ſuch uſe of the word in Scripture, nor of ſuch military muſick in thoſe times. The trumpet, or, cornet, are all of that kind we find mentioned, Num.10.9. Joſh.6.4. The tabers, and harps mentioned, Chap.30.32. ſeem to be, not of fight, or conflict; but of triumph after victory: the copulative is wanting, as ver.6.

the worm is ſpread under thee, and worms cover thee] Inſtead of thoſe coſtly carpets, that thou ſateſt and trodeſt on, and thoſe ſtately, rich, and gorgeous coverings, and other bed-furniture, which thou didſt formerly make uſe of, worms, and maggots, will [illegible] take up their rooms, and ſupply their place, Job 7.5. & 17.14. & 21.26. & 24.20. and this the rather with thee; becauſe thou ſhalt not be enbalmed, or put up in cere-cloth, to preſerve thy corpſe, as Kings, and great ones, ordinarily are, Gen.50.2. 2 Chr.16.14. but ſhalt be caſt out, and thereby expoſed to putrefaction. See ver. 19, 20. There are two ſeveral words in the Hebrew; whereof the one, as Some Jewiſh Authors ſuppoſe, ſignifies, properly, a leſſer ſort of worm, ſuch, as breeds in fleſh, or cheeſe, and ſuch, as the manna bred, Exod.16.20,24. which we commonly term a maggot The other, either, the greater ſort, as the long earth-worm, where they are, as here, diſtinguiſhed; or, any worm, in general, where no ſuch diſtinction is. The words are both, here, ſingular; though the verb joyned with the latter, plural; becauſe taken collectively, both; and diſtributively, alſo, the latter. Of which Syntax, ſee Chap.2. 20. The text may be rendred, The maggot is, or maggots are ſpread, or, laid under thee: and the earth-worm, or, each ſort of worms cover thee. And let it be conſidered, whether this whole verſe, may not be read, by way of interrogation, as well as thoſe; both before, and after. Is thy pomp thrown down to the grave; and the noyſe of thy viols? is the maggot ſpread under thee, and doth the worm of all ſorts, cover thee? for the note of interrogation is in Hebrew oft wanting: as Job 13. 15. & 14.8. Prov.23.5.

ſpread] The word is applyed, as to bedding, moſt commonly, Pſal.139.8. Chap.28.20. ſo to ſackcloth, and aſhes, that on dayes of humiliation, they were wont to lye in, Eſth. 4. 5. Chap.58.5.

V. 12. How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer] The following paſſage, many, both of the ancients, and others, underſtand to have reference to the fall of the Apoſtate Angels. Wherein, one of the learnedſt among the former, doth, not undeſervedly, with a little tartneſs controll them. But it is a continuation of that ſatyrical, and ironical language, wherewith, thoſe deceaſed ones are feigned to entertain the King of Babylon, at his coming among them, ver. 10.

fallen from heaven] From the height of that glorious, and illuſtrious eſtate, wherein thou ſhinedſt, ſo brightly and ſo conſpicuouſly before, Lam. 2. 1. Ezek. 28. 16, 17. Matth. 11. 23. Luk. 10. 15, 18. Rev. 9. 1. & 12. 4.

O Lucifer] This name ſome fondly give, by occaſion of this Scripture, unto the Prince of Devils; whom the Jews call Beelzebub, Matth. 12. 24. Whence, that, by-word among us, as proud as Lucifer. But the name is no where in Scripture given unto him. It is given unto Chriſt, by the miniſtry of the Goſpel, ſhining into mens ſouls, 2 Pet. 1. 19. Rev. 2. 28. 2 Cor. 4. 6. The word ſignifies the morning-ſtar, one of the ſeven planets; or wandring-ſtars, commonly called Venus, in regard of its beauty, and brightneſs: and the name here given it, comes of a word, that ſignifies ſo to ſhine, Job 25. 5. & 31. 26. Chap. 13. 10. It is uſed to repreſent the conſpicuous eſtate of the Chaldean King, and Empire, that ſeemed to ſhine as bright, when it was in its height, as the day-ſtar, it ſelf, in the sky: though there want not, that expound it, of Sennacherib, and his fall, Chap. 37. 38. the rather for what is ſaid, ver. 25. whereof, in its place.

Son of the morning] So is that bright, and beautiful ſtar termed; becauſe it appears uſually in the morning, ſomewhat before the Sun-riſing, thereby giving warning of day approaching, 2 Pet. 1. 19. as if, ſay Some, it were by the morning produced. But the Hebrew phraſe is very general, calling every thing, almoſt, the ſon of that, which it hath any ſpecial relation unto. So, the ſon of a year, for, one of a year, in his reign, 1 Sam. 13. 1. the ſon of ſtripes: one that deſerves whipping, Deut. 25. 2. the ſon of death, one that is worthy to dye, 2 Sam. 12. 5. the ſon of hell, and of perdition: one to whom hell, and deſtruction belongs, Matth. 23. 15. Joh. 17. 12. the ſon of this world: one that lives in this world; or, that hath his portion, here, Pſal. 17. 14. Luk. 20. 34. & 16. 8. and ſo, to paſs by all other: the ſon of the morning here, here, becauſe, wont then to apppear: and not ſo much, as produced by it; but rather, as uſhering it, in, or, bringing it along with it.

How art thou] How, is not in the original; but is ſupplyed, as wanting, from the former branch. Yet may it ſafely be omitted; and the words without it rendred, thou art cut down: the rather, becauſe the Prophet in this latter clauſe, paſſeth from one ſimilitude to another; from a ſtar fallen down, to a tree hewen down.

cut down to the ground] Not cut down cloſe to the ground: as is intimated of that tree, that repreſented Nebuchadnezzars perſon, only, Dan. 4. 14, 23, 24. but, cut down, and caſt to the ground, (of which kind of defective ſpeech, ſee Pſal. 7. 5. & 31. 17. & 89. 39, 44. Chap. 21. 9. & 22. 18. Jer. 41. 17.) as of the tree that reſembled the Aſſyrian Empire; Ezek. 31. 3–14. as this doth the Chaldean, here: importing an utter, and irrevocable ruine of it, as laid along on the ground, never to be reared, or raiſed up again.

which didſt weaken the Nations] Some of the Rabbines expound it, which didſt caſt lots upon the nations. Suppoſing the word here uſed, to be of the ſame ſtock, with one of the ſame ſound, which in their miſcellane language they uſe, for a lot: and this, the rather, they would have it, to ſignifie; becauſe of the particle, uſually, ſignifying upon, found, here, In the text. But neither is the verb, ever uſed, in Scripture: and the particle is, by other of them obſerved, to be here redundant, as oft times it is. The word ſignifies in Scripture, ſometime, to be weak, or, to weaken, Joel 3. 10. ſometime, to diſcomfit, or overcome, Exod. 17. 13. & 32. 18. or, to overthrow, or, lay along; as ſome of the Jewiſh Writers expound it, Job 14. 10. man dies, and is cut down; overthrown; laid along: and ſo I ſuppoſe it would here be rendred, Thou art cut down, and caſt to the ground: laid along on it; that didſt overthrow the Nations: that didſt cut down, and lay along others: thou art ſerved now, as thou, ſometime, ſervedſt them. See the Aſſyrians purpoſe, and practice, Chap. 10. 7. See alſo of Babylon, Jer. 50. 23. & 51. 20.

V. 13. For] Heb. And: as Chap. 8. 21. & 9. 11. as rendring a reaſon, why the Babylonian Monarch ſhould ſo be cut off, and caſt down; to wit, for his extream inſolency againſt God himſelf. Others render it, rather, But: as Chap. 7. 17. & 11. 14. or, Yet: as Jer. 2. 32, 35. as ſubjoyned in way of oppoſition to the fore-going denunciation of his fall, ver. 12.

thou haſt ſaid in thine heart] Or, thou ſaidſt in thine heart: thou thoughteſt within thy ſelf: as Pſal. 14. 1. Chap. 9. 9.

I will aſcend into heaven] Not, that he made account to go to heaven, when he died, as the faithful, 2 Cor. 5. 1. nor, that he ſuppoſed he could, by climbing, get up into heaven, while he lived. But it is an hyperbolical deſcription of the exceſſive pride, and inſolency of that Babylonian Tyrant, in ſuch an height of impiety, invading, and breaking in furiouſly upon the Church of God, compared to heaven, and thereby reſembled, Rev. 4. 1, 2. & 12. 1. and the people of God, the Saints eſpecially, and thoſe of prime note, and place among them, compared to ſtars, Rev. 1. 20. & 12. 1, 4. and Gods Temple, or Sanctuary, which was as his Throne, or his Chair of State, Pſal. 99. 1. Jer. 17. 12. as if he made account to ſubdue, and dethrone God himſelf. See Chap. 10. 10, 11. & 37. 23, 24, 29. Dan. 8. 10, 11. & 11. 28, 30, 36. and of that ſinfull man, 2 Theſſ. 2. 4. And this elegant deſcription, as one of the Jewiſh Commenters obſerveth, doth conſiſt of ſundry proverbial forms, uſual in that language, whereunto, not a few are found, very ſuitable, both in the Greek, and Latine; uſed thereby to expreſs a power, or greatneſs, affected, or advanced, far above all humane height. See Deut. 1. 28. Pſal. 36. 5, 6. & 139. 8. Joh. 3. 13. Eph. 4. 10.

I will exalt my throne above the ſtars of God] The ſtars of Gods making, Gen. 1. 16. Pſal. 148. 3, 5. or, that give light from the heavens, the place of Gods habitation, Chap. 57. 15. & 66. 1. or, the ſtars of greateſt excellency: as the hills of God, Pſal. 36. 6. and the trees of God, Pſal. 104. 16. for, the greateſt, and higheſt hills; the faireſt, and talleſt trees. See Dan. 8. 10.

I will ſit alſo upon the mount of the Congregation] I will ſet my throne, on Mount Sion, the place of Gods ſpecial reſidence, his palace, to which his people reſorted, there to adore, Pſal. 20. 2. & 68. 15, 16, 17, 24, 26, 29. & 84. 7. & 122. 1–4. Chap. 33. 20. & 64. 10, 11. See Dan. 11. 45.

of the Congregation] Or, ſet, or, ſolemn meeting. See Chap. 1. 14. the word comes from a root, that ſignifies in its firſt form active, to ſet, or, appoint, time, or place, 2 Sam. 20. 5. Jer. 47. 7. in the paſſive thereof, at ſuch a ſet time; or, in ſuch a ſet place to meet, Joſh. 11. 5. Neh. 6. 2, 10. Hence, the word here uſed, and thence deduced, is ſometime, put for a ſet time of meeting, in general, 2 Sam. 20. 5. Dan. 11. 29. more ſpecially, for the ſet times of meeting, for performance of holy duties, Levit. 23. 2, 4. Ezek. 46. 9, 11. ſometime, for a place of meeting, or reſort, in general, Joſh. 20. 9. and ſo the grave is called the appointed meeting-houſe, for all living wights, Job 30. 23. more ſpecially, for religious exerciſes; ſo the Tabernacle, is termed the Tent, or Tabernacle of convention; or ſet meeting: becauſe God appointed his people, at certain times, there to meet, for ſuch purpoſes; and had promiſed to meet them there, Exod. 25. 8, 21. & 29. 42, 43. & 33. 7. and the Synagogues are called, Gods Meeting places, Pſal. 74. 8. and mount Sion, is called, here, the mount of Convention, or meeting: becauſe thereon ſtood the Temple, which, for that ſacred uſe, ſucceeded the Tabernacle, 2 Sam. 7. 6, 13. 1 King. 8. 4, 6, 21.

in the ſides of the North] Mount Moriah, whereon the Temple was built, 2 Chron. 3. 1. ſtood on the northerly ſide of mount Sion; but reckoned as a part of it, Pſal. 48. 2. The Rabby doated, that would have the city of Babylon, here meant, by the mount of the Congregation, in the ſides of the North; ſo termed, in regard of her ſtrength, and ſtately buildings, Jer. 51. 25. the reſort of all people to her, Jer. 51. 44. and her Northerly ſituation to the land of Judah, Jer. 1. 15. & 4. 6. For what needed their King to vaunt, that he would ſet his throne there, where he had it erected already? Dan. 4. 29, 30.

V. 14. I will aſcend above the height of the clouds] Heb. cloud; or, thick cloud: (as the word, properly, ſignifies, and is ſo rendred, Job 22. 14. Pſal. 18. 11, 12.) but taken, here, collectively, for clouds in general: and, heights of clouds; for the higheſt clouds: as the heights of the hills; for, the higheſt hills, Pſal. 95. 4. Some think an alluſion, in the word, cloud, to the cloud, wherein God manifeſted himſelf on Mount Sinai, Exod. 19. 9. Deut. 4. 11, 12. in the Tabernacle, Exod. 40. 34, 35. and the Temple, 1 King. 8. 10, 11, 12. but to the firſt of them eſpecially, as if he would ſet his throne higher, then God, at that time, ſeemed to have done, above the place wherein God then appeared.

I will be like the Moſt high] Gods peculiar attribute, Pſal. 83. 18. Eccl. 5. 8. It was our firſt Parents ambitious affectation, and vain hope, to become like God, that ſtripped them of the true likeneſs of God which they were poſſeſſed of, at firſt, Gen. 3. 5, 6, 22. and it was this proud tyrants affecting of an equality with God, to ſit on eaven-ground with him, yea, to raiſe his throne higher then his, that proved the means of his fatal, and irrecoverable ruine. So Ezek. 28. 2, 3, 6–10.

V. 15. Yet] As Pſal. 73. 1. notwithſtanding theſe thine haughty conceits of thy power, and preſumptions of thy future greatneſs. See Chap. 10. 6.

thou ſhalt be brought down] Heb. made to deſcend (as ver. 11.) to hell, or, the grave, inſtead of thy preſumptuous conceit of aſcending up into heaven, ver. 13.

to hell] As Matth. 11. 23. or, to the grave: as ver. 9. Pſal. 16. 10. & 55. 15. the words following confirm it. See Ezek. 32. 27.

to the ſides of the pit] Heb. thighs of the pit; for, ſides: as Exod.26.23. Jon.1.5. inſtead of thoſe ſtately ſides of the North, whereon thou braggeſt that thou wouldſt ſet thy throne, ver. 13. thou ſhalt be thrown down, to the ſides of ſome baſe and loathſome pit. See Ezek.32.23,24. the pit; for, the grave, Pſal.30.3,9. & 88.4. but here, in a larger extent, for any pit; though not made, or intended, for ſuch uſe, that ſome vile, and loathſome corpſe, might be careleſly caſt into, 2 Sam.18. 17. the thighes of the pit, the ſides, or cheeks of it, on which, as on the mouth of it, a ſtone is wont to be laid, that is born up, by them, as the body of man is by the thighes. See Lam.3. 53. Yet becauſe the word, that properly ſignifies a thigh, in Hebrew, is, ſometime, put for the foot of a thing: as Exod. 37.17. Levit.1.11. Hence, Some would have it to ſignifie, not the ſides; but the bottome of a pit: ſome pit of the deepeſt. See Pſal.88.6. But this ſeems to ſtrain more then needs.

V. 16. They that ſee thee ſhall narrowly look upon thee] Or, ſeeing thee: or when they ſee thee: (for it ſeems to have ſpeciall reference to thoſe before ſpoken of, verſ.10.) ſhall look wiſtly upon thee. The word is uſed only here; and Pſal.33.14. Cant.2.9. As for what ſome of the Rabbines ſay, in way of expoſition of it; they ſhall weigh well how it is with thee, and get underſtanding by thee, as Jer.23.20. is for the living, not for the dead: and indeed, ſo ſome underſtand it; as ſpoken by men ſurviving the Babylonian King, and beholding his carcaſe caſt out: ſee the like, Pſal.53.7. But it ſeems more probable, that the Prophet, as in his former parable, ſpake of the dead.

and conſider thee, ſaying] A defect of the copulative, as ver. 7. and of the participle, as ver.8. Yet this latter may ſufficiently be ſupplyed, if it be rendred, and think: as it is rendred, Job 31.1. and may well, Chap.43.18. or, think with themſelves (becauſe the word is in a reciprocal form) of thee, or, concerning thee. For ſo the particle is oft uſed, Gen.20.2. Pſal. 2.7. Chap.33.33.

Is this the man that made the earth to tremble] They ſpeak of the State, as of a man; becauſe the king thereof a man, one in nature, the ſame with any one mean man, Pſal.82.7. Chap.2.22.

that made the earth to tremble] the earth; for, the Inhabitants of it: as ver.7. But the figure makes it emphatical, as if out of his pride, and by his power, he had made a general earthquake, throughout the whole world. See Pſal.60.2. Chap. 2.19. and for the word, here, uſed; See ver.9. ſee alſo Ezek. 32.23,24,&c.

that did ſhake Kingdoms] Or, that made its Kingdoms ſhake. A defect of the pronoun: as Chap.13.22. but to be ſupplyed, as it is, ver.17. that did ſo ſhake them, as to unſettle them, and remove them out of their places. See Chap.13.13. Hab.2. 21,22. Heb.12.26,27. there is an elegancy, in the ſound of the words, in the Hebrew, which, in our Engliſh, cannot ſo well be expreſſed; yet may we come ſomewhat neer to it, if we render the words, that made the earth to quake, and made the Kingdoms thereof to ſhake.

V. 17. That made the world as a wilderneſs] That laid all before him waſte; as thoſe locuſts, Joel 2.3. See Zeph. 2.13.

and deſtroyed the cities thereof] Either by conſuming their Inhabitants, or by razing, and burning the cities themſelves, 2 King.25.9.10,11. 2 Chr.36.19,20. Pſal.137.7.

the world] Properly, the habitable world, as the Greeks uſe to ſtyle it: or, the fertile world, that that yeelds ought uſeful, for food of man, or beaſt: For from a word that ſo ſignifies, it ſeems to be deduced, Levit.26.4. Judg.6.4. which here wants not its emphaſis, being oppoſed to the wild, or waſte.

that opened not the houſe of his priſoners] Of which reading, ſee on Chap.42.7. Or, that did not looſe his priſoners (as the word is uſed, Chap.51.14. Jer.40.4.) homeward. That is, and ſend them home, or let them go home. A defective form, ſuch, as ver.12. that kept his captives in perpetual reſtraint, and would not ſuffer them to return to their own country, and the places of their former abode, Jer.50.33. was not content, in the height of his pride and ambition, to overthrow, and ſubdue them; but in cruel, mercileſs, and inhumane manner, after he had ſubdued them, kept them in perpetual impriſonment, and reſtraint, Lam.3.34.

V. 18. All the kings of the Nations] Other Kings and Princes, ordinarily, or the moſt part of them, as ver.9. So is All oft taken, for all in a manner, or the greater number, or moſt, or many, Exod.9.6,20. Jer.26.7,8, & 44.12,27,28. Mat. 3.5. Joh.2.10. & 11.48. Rom.5.18,19. Phil.2.21.

even all of them lye in glory] Are laied up in ſtately tombs and monuments; where they lye, as in their beds. See ver. 8. Chap.57.2. It is that, that uſually great kings obtain; either by the proviſion of their Peers, or the care of their Succeſſors, thereby to ingratiate themſelves with the people. every one] Heb. a man; as Cant.3.8. Chap.13.14.

in his houſe] Or, in his place: (as ſome render the word; 1 Sam.27.3. 2 Sam.15.17. Job 8.17. Prov.8.2.) To wit, of ſepulture, or burial: In his ſepulchre, in his grave. So ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors here expound it, following the Chaldee; and alledging that of Solomon, Man goes to his everlaſting houſe, or, his long home, Eccleſ.12,5. But it ſeems rather to have an eye, to the ancient manner of preparing their ſepulchres, and burying them in their own lands, grounds, or poſſeſſions, where their anceſtors had been laid before them, and which, with Kings and Potentates, was uſually in ſome part of, or place neer unto their palaces. See Judg.2. 9. 1 Sam.25.1. 1 King.2.10,34. 2 King.12.21.

V. 19. But thou art caſt out of thy grave] Thou ſhalt miſs of that honour that other kings uſually have, to wit, a ſolemn funeral, an honourable enterrement. For thy corpſe ſhall lye above-ground, unburied. So Joſh.7.26. & 8.29. 2 Sam. 18.17. Jer.22.18,19.

But] Heb. And; as Chap.13.21.

caſt out of thy grave] Heb. caſt out from the grave. That is, caſt out, and kept from thy grave; as Pſal 79.2,3. For the meaning is not, that he ſhould be raked, or dragged out of his grave again, after he was buried; as ſome, of whom anon, fondly fain. But that he ſhould be caſt out, and kept from ever coming to be laid up in that tomb, or ſepulchre, which he had, in his life time, prepared for himſelf, 2 Sam. 18.17,18. Chap.22.16—18. Matth.27.60. Of the manner of ſpeech, ſee ver.17. This ſome underſtand of Sennacherib, who ſhould lye at Niniveh unburied, while his two ſons that ſlew him, held that city. But of this there is neither ſtory, nor probability; they two that ſlew him, being ſaid to have fled upon it, and a third of his own iſſue immediately (for ought that appears) to have reigned in his room, Chap.37.38. On the other ſide, the Jewiſh Doctors will have it ſpoken of Nebuchadnezzar. And ſome they ſay, have a conceit of him, that whereas he thought, that the palace which he built at Babel, ſhould be, as his ſepulchre; that is, he ſhould live a long time in it, as a man doth in his grave; (Pſal.49.11. Eccl.12.5. Luk.12.19,20.) there came an evil ſpirit, or a malignant blaſt from God that blew him, or caſt him out of his houſe, and cauſed him to abide abroad, for ſome time, among the beaſts, Dan.4.31,33. So that he could not reſt in his houſe, as other kings do in theirs, ver,18. Others, and the moſt of them, tell us, that when Nebuchadnezzar in the time of his diſtraction, was driven out from his palace, Dan. 4.33. The Peers of the kingdom ſet up his ſon Evil-merodach, Jer.52.31. And that Nebuchadnezzar after his wits reſtored again to him, returning to his palace, Dan.4.34. and finding his ſon ſitting on his throne, committed him to priſon, and did not ſet him at Liberty again, ſo long as he lived. Whereunto they apply what is ſaid, verſ.17. But that, after his deceaſe, when the Nobles brought him forth of priſon, and would have him take the Crown again, he refuſed it, for fear, leſt, his father, being not dead, as the Nobles made him believe, ſhould return again, as before he had done, and ſhould then kill him. Whereupon, to give him ſatisfaction, they ſhould take up his fathers corpſe again, and either let it lye, and rot above ground; or elſe cauſed it to be devoured by beaſts; as did thoſe, Pſal.79.2,3. & 83.10. But theſe are meer fictions. More likely it is that Baltaſars corps ſhould be caſt out, and lye above ground, being ſlain in the night-time, upon the ſurprizal of the city, Dan.5.30. when all was in a combuſtion, and no man had luſt, or leaſure to look after him, or to take order for his enterrement.

like an abominable branch] Or, as (that it may run alike with the reſt) an abhorred (as 1 Chro.21.6. Job 15.16.) ſprig, or, twig, Chap.11.1. Such ſpray, as being not regarded by thoſe that cut it off, or pared it away, in pruning their trees, as matter of no worth, or uſe; nor ſo much as picked up by women, wherewith to kindle, or keep in, their fire, Chap.27.11. is let lye, and lyeth ſo long upon the ground, that being now corrupted and rotted, it is not onely not worth the taking up, but too vile and loathſom to be taken up, nor good for ought, ſave to make ſoyl of. This ſome expound of Nebuchadnezzar, ſuppoſing an alluſion, in the word here uſed, to the latter part of his name. Some other underſtanding it of one Darius that ſhould ſucceed Baltaſar, Dan.5.31. and be ſlain by Cyrus, not at Babylon, but far from thence, at Borſippe (concerning which, ſee on Jer.51.30,31.) conceive him, therefore, here ſo tearmed, as a baſtardly-ſlip, Wiſd.4.3. becauſe not of the blood-royal; but of the Median race, and of mean deſcent, Dan.9.1. & 11.1. But whether any ſuch Darius ever were, or any king of Babylon of that name, after Baltaſar, ſave that Darius, who is deemed to have come in together with Cyrus, is very uncertain: and I ſhall leave it to be diſcuſſed by thoſe, whoſe task it ſhall be to deal with Daniels Oracles.

and as the rayment of thoſe that are ſlain] Which are wont to be ſo ſtained, and polluted with gore blood, that ſcarce any can endure to touch them. See Chap. 9. 5. The copulative not found in the Hebrew, might here well have been ſpared, there following a third branch of the ſimilitude, and either reſerved for the laſt, or wholly omitted, as is uſual, where the members are more then twins; as Chap. 1. 8.

thruſt through with a ſword] This is added, becauſe men may be ſlain otherwiſe (ſuppoſe ſtifled, or dry-beaten to death) without much effuſion of blood. Heb. thruſt through of a ſword. The word, here uſed, is no where in Scripture read, ſave here, and Gen. 45. 17. where it ſignifies to lade; Lade your beaſts. But the Rabbines inform us, that in the tongue of Kedar, that is, the Arabian language, it ſignifies to prick, ſtab, or, thruſt through: whence alſo ſome would have it rendred in that place of Moſes; prick on your beaſts, to make the more ſpeed.

that go down to the ſtones of the pit] That are, together with their rayment, ſo polluted, caſt, unſtript, into any pit, (ſee verſ. 15.) or quarry, that comes next hand, 2 Sam. 18. 17. Howbeit, ſome ſuppoſe an alluſion to the ſtone, or rocks, out of which their ſepulchres were uſually hewen, Chap. 22. 16. Matth. 27. 60. Others, to thoſe heaps of ſtones that were caſt upon the bodies of ignominious perſons, either by judiciary Courts, or otherwiſe put to death, Joſh. 7. 26. & 8. 29. 2 Sam. 18. 17. See Lam. 3. 53. Ezek. 32. 29, 30.

as a carcaſe trodden under feet] Like ſome vile carrion, or a carcaſe trodden to pieces, and not neglected onely, but with miſuſage, ſo bruiſed, battered, broken to pieces, and diſmembred, that ſcarce any well can, much leſs endure to put hand unto it, for the compoſing, and committing of it to the ground, 2 King. 9. 33, 35, 37. Jer. 22. 9.

V. 20. Thou ſhalt not be joyned to them in burial] Heb. united with them; as Gen. 49. 6. Thou ſhalt not lye in grave among them, nor be buried in ſuch ſolemn and honourable manner as they were, and kings were wont to be, with enbalming, and burning odors for them, and attending their corpſe with great ſtate to the ground, ver. 18. See Gen. 50. 2, 3, 7--10. 2 Chro. 16. 14. & 21. 19, 20.

becauſe thou haſt deſtroyed thy land, and ſlain thy people] A defect of the copulative, as ver. 16. Thou waſt not content to deſtroy other Nations, but didſt exerciſe much cruelty upon thine own people, in grievous exactions, and extream penalties, impoſed and inflicted, even to loſs of life, many times, either upon ſlight occaſions, or for thine own pleaſure alone; by means whereof thy cities were ſometime waſted, and ſometime ruined at thy command. This the Rabbines apply to Nebuchadnezzar, alledging the bloody ſentence given by him againſt his wiſe men, when they could not tell him his dream, Dan. 2. 12. But that this cannot be meant of Nebuchadnezzar in perſon, appears by the words following, both in this verſe and the next.

the ſeed of evil-doers ſhall never be renowned] Heb. ſhall not be called for ever. That is, it ſhall not laſt alwaies, not continue for any long time; but be cut off ere long. To be called; for, to be, to continue. See ch. 4. 3. Or, to be called; for, to be named, as the ſon of ſuch an one: as God to Abraham, Gen. 21. 12. In Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called. He ſhall in a more ſpecial manner, as heir to thine houſe, bear, and propagate thy name. And Jacob, Let my name be called upon them, Gen. 48. 16. that is, Let them be called, and accounted as mine. Or, to be called; for, to be of name, and renown; as Numb. 1. 16. Ezek. 23. 23. But I ſuppoſe the firſt here intended, for what follows, ver. 21. concerning the cutting off of his iſſue. Not for ever; for, not at all; never, as our Engliſh well renders it. So Joh. 8. 51, 52. & 11. 26. A general ſentence, of which ſee Job 18. 19. Pſalm 21. 10. & 37. 28. & 109. 13. applyed here to Baltaſar, the laſt Chaldean king, whoſe iſſue periſhed together with him; and to the former his predeceſſors, whoſe line failed with him and his. See Jer. 27. 7.

V. 21. Prepare ſlaughter for his children] The Prophet here turns his ſpeech to the Medes and Perſians, as from God calling upon them, to prepare, and make themſelves ready for the doing of execution upon the king of Babylon; Baltaſar, and his whole houſe, Children, and Nephews alſo, if he had any; as 1 King. 14. 10. & 15. 29. & 16. 3, 11, 12. 2 King. 9. 8, 9, 10. & 10. 6, 7, 11. And we need not underſtand by his ſons, either the people of Babylon, or his Princes; (though they in likelyhood, many, or moſt of them were ſlain together with him, at the ſurprizal of the city, Chap. 13. 15--18. Jer. 50. 27, 35--37. & 51. 39, 40.) but his natural iſſue that was cut off with him, ver. 22. That which with Nebuchadnezzar did not fall out at his death; for his ſon, and ſons ſon, Evil-merodach and Baltaſar, both ſurvived, and ſucceeded him in the Empire, Jer. 27. 7. & 52. 31. Dan. 5. 18, 22.

for the iniquity of their fathers] Wherein they imitate them, or partake with them, Jer. 6. 11. & 7. 18--20. Dan. 5. 20, 22, 23. In regard whereof, ſome expound here, the iniquity of their anceſtors; not done by them, but ſuch as they did, as the ſins of Manaſſeh, for ſuch like ſins, as Manaſſeh committed, 2 King. 24. 5. But neither is it neceſſary that that place ſhould be ſo interpreted, when it may be taken ſimply as it ſounds. Nor can it well be ſo here underſtood, ſince that it includes the whole race of thoſe kings, as well young as old. (See ver. 22.) Whereof, though ſome peradventure were not of years yet to do much miſchief, or had not been yet much in action, yet muſt they ſuffer alſo for their parents, and anceſtors iniquity, Exod. 20. 5. & 34. 7. Numb. 16. 27, 30, 32, 33. Joſh. 7. 15, 23, 25. 1 King. 15. 29, 30. Matth. 23. 25. Which courſe, though man, without Gods ſpecial command, may not take; the rather, God having inhibited him ſo to do, Deut. 24. 16. 2 King. 14. 5, 6. Yet may God juſtly do it, and cauſe it to be done; becauſe all perſons, as well children as parents, owe a death unto him; for what either hath been done by them, or is in them, 1 King. 8. 46. Pſal. 51. 5. & 130. 2. & 143. 2. Prov. 21. 9. Eccl. 7. 20. Rom. 3. 20, 23. & 5. 12. Which he may therefore without any impeachment of juſtice take, how, and when, by what means, in what manner, and upon what occaſion he pleaſeth; and doth, oftentimes, inflict upon children, who for their own perſonal corruptions, and exceſſes, ſtand guilty before him, having an eye therein, not to theirs ſo much, as to their parents ſin, in inflicting of penal things at that time upon them, that he may puniſh their parents in them. See 1 King. 14. 9.-14.

that they may not riſe nor poſſeſs the land] Heb. they ſhall not riſe and inherit the earth: that is, that they may not riſe to inherit the earth; as Joſh. 24. 9. That they may not ſtand up in their fathers room, to repoſſeſs that land, and raiſe up again that State which their fore-fathers ſometime held; but Gods pleaſure was now, that it ſhould be irrecoverably ruined, Chap. 13. 20. ver. 23. Howbeit, in the text, I ſhould prefer earth, before land, becauſe world followeth; and that Empire extended it ſelf to lands, and regions, not a few, Jer. 27. 5, 6. The final, or finitive particle is wanting in the Hebrew; as Chap. 5. 11. & 10. 2. Of which ſee on Chap. 7. 25. The future is put for the potential; as Chap. 45. 3. Mal. 2. 7.

nor fill the face of the world with cities] Heb. and fill. But either the negative muſt be ſupplyed from the former branch; as Pſal. 9. 18. Or it muſt be rendred according to the fore-mentioned Syntax, to poſſeſs, and to fill the face, or ſurface of the world (the upper part of it which people dwell on; as Gen. 6. 7. & 7. 18, 23) with cities. That they may not riſe again, and return to re-eſtabliſh their eſtate, and repleniſh the world again, by diſperſing themſelves into ſeveral regions, and enlarging their dominions with great cities built by them, as Nimrod at firſt did, Gen. 10. 9--12. And thus moſt take the words. Howbeit the Jewiſh Doctors, following the Chaldee, read it, And fill the world with enemies, or, malignants. And ſo indeed is the word, here uſed, taken, 1 Sam. 28. 16. Pſal. 139. 20. Dan. 4. 19. and as ſome alſo, Pſal. 9. 6. Mic. 5. 11, 14. But the former ſeems to ſuit better here with the frame of the context; and to ſort better with the words before-going. There is another expoſition of this verſe, found in the writings of ſome of the Rabbins, who ſuppoſing this paſſage to have reference to what was before ſaid of the Babylonian kings, making the world a wilderneſs, and deſtroying the cities thereof, verſ. 17. thus render the words; They ſhall not riſe again: or, Let them not ſtand up again; (as continuing the charge given to the enemy) that they may, or men may poſſeſs the earth, or land; (whence they were before, by them expelled) and may fill the face of the world (which they made to be like a wilderneſs) with cities: Re-edifying thoſe which they had formerly ruined. Of the uſe of the copulative before: Of the verb indefinite, that they may poſſeſs the earth, (or, as the word is, inherit it, as Pſal. 37. 11. Matth. 5. 5.) and fill the world; (Gen. 1. 28. & 9. 1.) that is, that the earth may be poſſeſſed, and the world filled; ſee on Chap. 2. 19. The expoſition ſeems neither forced, nor improbable. But I leave it to the conſideration, and judgment of the learned. See on Chap. 26. 14.

V. 22. For I will riſe up againſt them, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts] Heb. And; as Chap. 53. 2. The reaſon why that which is threatned muſt be executed, and ſhall be effected: becauſe God, who hath all creatures at command, (ſee Chap. 1. 9.) will have it done; will have, not him alone, to be cut off; but his whole iſſue alſo with him. Yea, he it is that comes againſt them, and will, by theſe his ſelected, and appointed ones, do it. See Chap. 13. 3.

riſe up] Anſwering to what he had before ſaid, in the charge given to the enemy, ver. 21. I will riſe up againſt his children to ſlay them; that they may not riſe up to re-poſſeſs their land, or, repair the ruines of their State; or, re edifie their cities; as Chap. 9. 9, 10. Mal. 1. 4.

and will cut off from Babylon] That is, from the king thereof, ver. 21.

the name, and remnant] That is, as ſome, all memory, and remainder, or monument of them; as Exod. 17. 14. 1 Sam. 15. 5. Pſal. 9. 5,6. & 83. 4. But by name, we may underſtand male-iſſue, 1 King. 14.10. & 21. 21. ſo called in Hebrew, becauſe the memory of the ſtock is preſerved in ſuch. As on the other ſide the females, as moſt think, (but of that, ſee Chap.3.12.) becauſe it is loſt, and periſheth in them, Numb. 27.4. Deut.25.6. 2 Sam. 14.7. & 18. 18. By remnant, other iſſue, or iſſue in general. Becauſe females, in ſuch caſe, are ſometime neglected, and ſpared, as weak, and unable to make head. See Jer. 39. 6. & 41. 10. Or as others, kindred: for ſo is the word uſed, Levit. 18. 6, 12, 13. See 1 King. 16. 11.

and ſon and nephew] Or, even, (as Ezr. 1. 8. & 8.26.) or, both (as Jer.6.24.) ſon, (as Gen. 21.23.) and nephew: or, ſons ſon; for ſo the Chaldee, and Jewiſh writers, not as we uſe the word; the whole race of him, Job. 18.19.

ſaith the Lord]. For more certainty repeated.

V. 23. I will alſo make it] To wit, the city of Babylon, or the ſeat of it, the place where it is now ſcituate. See Chap. 13.19,20. There is in the Hebrew an elegant conſonancy, between the firſt word of the verſe, next before-going, and this, which our Engliſh cannot expreſs.

a poſſeſſion] Or, as ſome, an hereditary poſſeſſion, Num. 27. 11. Jer.49. 1,2. Or, as here rather, a poſſeſſion acquired by, or upon the expulſion of the former inhabitants, and poſſeſſors. For the word ſignifies alſo, to expel, or diſpoſſeſs; and by diſpoſſeſſion to poſſeſs, Numb. 21.32,35. 2 Chro. 20. 7. Pſalm 44. 2. It may well imply either here; both a poſſeſſing of it, by theſe wild creatures, in the room of the inhabitants, either ſlain in it, or driven out of it, and their ſo poſſeſſing it, not for ſome tearm of time; but as an inheritance, or perpetuity to them, and theirs, for ever. See Chap. 34. 11.

for the Bittorn] Or, Bittor. A kinde of water-fowl, that thruſting her bill into the mire, or ſome broken cane, is wont to make therewith a moſt hideous noyſe. And this ſeems not unlikely, as well for what here next followeth; as alſo for that it is elſe-where joyned with another, taken commonly for the Cormorant, Chap. 34.11. Zeph.2.14. Yet ſome latter Interpreters ſuppoſe it, rather, to be an Oſprey, a kinde of Eagle, that preyeth upon fiſh; or a Bald-buzzard, which (as they affirm) haunts lakes, and pooles; and preyeth upon ducks. And ſome an Owl, that uſeth to abide, and breed in old decayed, and deſerted buildings; peradventure becauſe of ſome fowl of that kinde, mention is made, together with this, Chap.34.11. And ſuch are ſaid to dwell in Babylons ruins, Chap.13.21. Jer.50.39. But this is not ſo likely; though one of the Rabbines, contrary to his own expoſition here, doth, in that other of this Prophet, ſo expound it. But the moſt of the Jewiſh Doctors make it not a bird, but a beaſt. And they take it generally to be a Porcupine, or an Hedg-hog: with whom alſo the Chaldee, Greek, and Latine concur; ſave that one of them calleth it, a Torteiſe. For the former they ground their opinion upon this; becauſe, in Arabick, the word ſo ſignifies, including as well the Porcupine, as the Hedg-hog: But theſe are neither of them ſuch, as keep in, or about watry places; the one rouſting in hedges; in hilly places the other. The Torteiſe rather may be meant, becauſe one kinde of them keeps moſt, or much, at leaſt, in the water. Or, as ſome other, the Beaver, that builds (I may well tearm it a building) on the edge, or brink of lakes and rivers, and feeds on the fiſh in them. Of whom they underſtand it, the rather, becauſe the word it comes of, ſignifies to cut down, or cut aſſunder, Chap. 38. 12. Ezek. 7. 25. That which the Beaver (therein going beyond our Otter) is wont to do with the trunks, or bodies, even of vaſte trees, and to ſhear mens bones aſſunder. See Pliny in his natural hiſtory, lib. 8. cap. 30.

and pools of water] That which confirms the creature before mentioned, to be ſuch, as haunts places ſo conditioned. The reaſon why it ſhould not be for ſheep to lodge in, chap. 13.20. The ſite of Babylon, of it ſelf mooriſh, by reaſon of that great river, Deut. 1.7. & 11. 24. to wit, Euphrates, on whoſe banks it ſtood: (ſee on Jer. 50. 38. & 51. 32.) became after the ſurprizal by Cyrus, and in the times ſucceeding, much more ſuch; the dams, and ſluces being neglected, that ſhould keep the river within its due compaſs; and the dikes choked that ſhould receive the waters of it, in its accuſtomed inundations.

and I will ſweep it with the beſom of deſtruction] The word here uſed is an Arabick word: which one of the Jewiſh Doctors acknowledgeth, that he did not underſtand, until he heard an Arabian-chamber-maid ask of her miſtreſs a broom. But the phraſe you may finde, 1 King.14.10. It alludeth to the ſweeping of an houſe, wherein all the ſoyl, being ſwept together, is then caſt out of doors. See ſomewhat the like, Ezek.26.4.

ſaith the Lord of Hoſts] As ver.22.

V. 24. The Lord of hoſts hath ſworn, ſaying] He hath taken a ſolemn oath upon it, which ſhews the doom to be irrevocable, Pſal. 110.4. & 132.11. He hath ſworn it, and thereby manifeſted his will to have it done, his purpoſe to do it: and he is the Lord of hoſts: and therefore wants no power to effect, whatſoever he will have done. See Chap. 1.9. ver. 27.

Surely] Heb. If not. A defective form of ſpeech uſual in oaths. Of which, ſee Chap.5.9. & 22.19.

as I have thought, ſo ſhall it come to paſſe] Heb. as I have imagined, (Num.33.56. See Chap.10.7.) ſo it ſhall be: as Chap.5.7.

and as I have purpoſed, ſo ſhall it ſtand] Pſal. 33. 11. See Chap.7.5,7. ver.26,27. the ſame in other words repeated. That which I have determined concerning the irrecoverable deſtruction of Babylon, ſhall never be diſannulled, or revoked.

V. 25. That I will break the Aſſyrian in my land] Heb. To break: as Chap.23.9. or, In breaking: as Exod.14.11.Deut.9. 18. Some underſtand this of Sennacherib the King of Aſſyria, whoſe forces God deſtroyed in his land, (that is, the land of Judah, ſo called, becauſe ſet apart by him, for his own peculiar, as an habitation for his peculiar people, and a ſeat for his ſolemn ſervice, Pſal.114.2.& 132.14. & 135.12.ver.1,2.) as is recorded, Chap.37.37,38. added here, not only to confirm what had been before delivered, concerning the deſtruction of that inſolent King, Chap.10,33,34. but to give the ſtronger aſſurance thereby of what was here foretold, concerning the ruine of the Chaldean Empire. The like whereunto, ſee Ezek.31.3—18. Howbeit, it followeth not hence what ſome would infer, that the fall of Lucifer, mentioned ver.12. ſhould reſpect, not the Babylonian; but the Aſſyrian King, and State. Yet ſome underſtand this of the Babylonian King, who ſeems to be termed the King of Aſſyria, Neh. 9.32. 2 Chr.33.11. and of the Aſſyrians that ſerved under him, as being taken up by him, their Country lying between Chaldea, and Judah, in his expedition againſt Jeruſalem; and to have been denounced after the fall of Sennacherib. Concerning which latter branch, as I will not contend, ſuppoſing the time of this Prophecy to have been later then his fall; and to have been occaſioned by that heavy doom paſſed upon the Jewiſh State, and the royal iſſue, that from the Babylonians ſhould befall them, Chap.39.6,9. otherwiſe, there was no ground, as yet, to tell this people of the overthrow of Babylon, from whom they had hitherto ſuſtained no dammage, nor, ſave in regard of that prediction, had cauſe to expect any. So for the turning it away, from Sennacherib, and his forces overthrown in that Country, to the ruinating of the Chaldean eſtate, I cannot concur, ſince that the text muſt endure many forced interpretations, ere it will yeeld to any ſuch diverſion. I ſuppoſe therefore, that the fall of Sennacherib is here ſpoken of, as a thing paſt, and performed already: and here produced, as Some other in the like maner, Chap.9.4,5. & 10.24,26. for a pregnant example of the certainty of Gods predictions, and purpoſes, to take place, and not fail, which themſelves had late proof of, in the ſtrange, and unexpected deſtruction of the Aſſyrian forces among them: and for a parallel of the undoubted execution of the doom, forepaſſed, upon Babylon, in its due time to be effected. And to this purpoſe I ſhould thus read the words; As in breaking the Aſſyrian in my land. Of the uſe of this particle with the indefinite verb, examples were before given, to which more might be added. See Chap.3.8. & 10.2. Gen.2. 3. & 3.22. & 24.30. Deut.13.18. & 17.2. & 20. 19. 1 Sam. 12. 17. Neh.13.7. And for the defect of the note of ſimilitude, it is very uſual in Scripture. See Prov.25.20, 25, 28. & 26.9,14,17,21,23. & 28.15. It is then, as if the Prophet had ſaid; Ye need not doubt of the performance of this doom paſt upon Babylon; for the Lord hath taken a ſolemn oath upon it, that what he hath ſpoken, and purpoſed, concerning it, ſhall be effected; as well as that, which was threatned formerly againſt the Aſſyrian, Chap. 10. 12, 16—19, 33, 34. which, having been lately done in your own land, your own eyes have been witneſs of.

and upon my mountains tread him under foot] Or, and trampling upon him; or, when (as Chap.8.21.& 43.12.) I trampled on him, upon my mountains.

tread him under foot] Heb. and I will trample upon him. But the future, is oft put for the fore-paſt: as Pſal.18.36,37,42,43. Then God ſeemed to trample in contempt upon him, as he had trampled upon Gods people, Chap.10.5,6. when by the ſlaughter of his people, he enforced him, to fly, with ſhame. So Pſal.44.5.& 60.12. Dan.7.7. & 8.7,10. Rom.16.20. an alluſion to that, that hath in diſgrace, and deſpight, been ſometime done, to perſons ſubdued, and taken, either in war, or otherwiſe, Joſh.10 24. 2 King.9.33. See Judg.20.40. Chap.63. 3,6. Zach.10.5.

upon my mountains] Not mount Sion, as Some, in way of excellency, ſo termed; as wiſdomes, for, wiſdome, Prov.1.20. & 8.1. becauſe neer to it was the ſlaughter of Sennacheribs hoſt; but the hills rather about Jeruſalem, on which it is likely they lodged, while they lay in leagure about it, Pſal. 125.2. or, the mountains of Judah in general, being a mountainous country, Deut.8.9. Pſal.133.3. Ezek. 6.2,3. & 39.2, 4,17. called his mountains here; and Chap.65.9. as the land before his. The mountains where he had placed his people, called his, here, as thoſe by which they were to paſs, in their return thither from Babylon, Chap.49.11.

then ſhall his yoke depart from off them] Heb. And his yoke ſhaſt depart, (as Chap.6.1.) or, that his yoke might depart, (as Chap.10.19. & 13.2. and ſo ſome Interpreters of the beſt note, here render it) from off them: to wit, the people of God, the Jews, that had before, with tributes impoſed, and hoſtile Invaſions, been grievouſly afflicted by him. See Chap.10.5, 6. & 36.1. and his burden depart from off their ſhoulders] See Chap.9.4 & 10.27. The end, for which God deſtroyed the Aſſyrian, to give eaſe, and reſt to his people, Chap. 10. 24, 25. & 33.20. & 38.6.

V. 26. This is the purpoſe, that is purpoſed] The Concluſion of this whole burdenous Prophecy denounced againſt Babel. Heb. the Counſel that is conſulted: counſel, for, purpoſe; or, determination; the end, and iſſue of it; as Chap. 7. 5. & 19.12. Jer.49.20,30.

upon the whole earth] This great Empire, that ſeems to command the whole world, Chap.13.11. or, againſt (as Jer. 49.20.) the whole land, to wit, of Chaldea, whereof Babylon the head city: as Chap.13.5,19.

and this is the hand that is ſtretched out] See Chap.5.25. & 9.12,21.

upon all the Nations]. Or, againſt all theſe Nations, to wit, the Chaldeans, and others ſubject to it, and ſerving under it. See Chap.13.14,15. Jer.50.21.

V. 27. For the Lord of hoſts hath purpoſed, and who ſhall diſannul it?] Or, determined, or, reſolved (as ver. 26.) it, and who can diſannul it? the future, in a potential notion: as Job 14.4. & 37.23. & 41.13,26. Matth.12.25. with Mar. 3.24. The particle it, having reference to Gods particular purpoſe, and reſolution concerning Babylon, and thoſe that adhere to her, ver.26. is wanting in the text: as Chap.9.9. Rev.1.1. See ver.24. So Pſal.33.10.11. Prov.14.21. & 21.30. Chap. 43.13.

and his hand is ſtretched out] and his hand it is, that is ſtretched out. The hand, that I told you was ſtretched out againſt Babylons adherents, ver.26. is not ſome ſorry mortal mans hand, that may be reſtrained, enfeebled, cut ſhort, turned back, or ſhrunk up, Gen.31.29. 1 King.13.4. Chap.13.7. Jer. 50.15,43 but the hand of God almighty.

and who ſhall turn it back?] Or, can turn it back? as before. See 2 Chron. 20. 6. Job 9. 12. and 23. 13. Dan. 4. 35.

V. 28. In the year that King Ahaz dyed] Here beginneth another Sermon, or Prophecy, diſtinct, as well in time, as in matter, from the former; that being againſt the Babylonians, this, againſt the Philiſtines. In regard whereof alſo, Some have made a ſeveral, and entire Chapter of it. For the Prophet having begun with the Babylonians, the greateſt oppreſſors of Gods people, Jer.50. 17. but more remote, Jer. 6. 22. & 8.19. he proceedeth now to their evill neighbours, that were neerer at hand, and of them ſetteth the Philiſtines in the front. The time of the delivery hereof, is expreſly noted, as of that, Chap.6. the one bearing date, the year of Uzziahs; the other, the year of Ahaz his death. Of which, 2 King.16. 20. This is expreſſed for a ſpecial reaſon; of which, ver. 20. But hence Some take occaſion here to begin a new book, ſuppoſing that the Prophecies here recorded, from Chapter the ſeventh, unto this latter part of the fourteenth, were all of them, and that againſt Babylon, among the reſt, delivered, and publiſhed in Ahaz his reign: with whom therein, I cannot accord. See Chap.1.1. & 14.25.

was this burden] This heavy Prophecy (ſee Chap. 13. 1.) againſt Paleſtine, or the Philiſtines. Of whom, ſee the like, Jer.47. Ezek.26.13--17.

V. 29. Rejoyce not thou whole Paleſtina] Heb. Pleſheth, or Paleſheth, Pſal.60.8. ver.31. as Sarug, Gen. 11. 21. Luk. 3. 35. and Sabaoth, Rom. 9. 29. Jam. 5.4. It is the name of a Country, deemed part of Syria, and bordering Weſtward, on the land of Judah, Chap. 2. 6. & 9. 12. Whence the whole country thereabout, taking in the holy land, as they ſtyle it, is called Paleſtine at this day: but in Scripture doth deſign only that particular coaſt, inhabited by the Philiſtines, people of the poſterity of Cham, and Chuſh, by the Egyptian race, Gen.10.14. and were conſtant enemies, and vexers of the Jewiſh people their Neighbours. See Chap.9.12.

becauſe the rod of him that ſmote thee is broken] By the rod that ſmote the Philiſtines, is generally deemed to be meant Uzziah, who prevailed much in his warrs with the Philiſtines, diſmantled many of their ſtrong towns, and built others within their borders, to keep theirs under, and raiſe contribution from them, 2 Chr. 26. 6, 7. Yet not him alone; but other Kings of Judah before him, that had had the better of them, as David, 2 Sam.5.20,21. & 8. 1, 12. Pſal. 108. 9. and the State of Judah, that in the times of thoſe Kings, kept them under. Whoſe, yet, might, and means were ſo ſorely impeached, and impaired under Ahaz, God, for his ſins, ſuffering other people to break in upon him, and to prevail againſt him, that their power ſeemed to be utterly, and irrevocably broken: (as Chap.9.4.) Now this was to the Philiſtines, the whole body of them, (as upon the ſurprizal of Sampſon, Judg. 16.23--25.) matter of much joy, to ſee that State ſo enfeebled, and at ſo low an ebb. But the Prophet bideth them, not be over-joyed; for their joy ſhould not laſt long. It is not unlike Davids ironical ſpeech to that country, or, the people thereof. Paleſtine triumph thou, becauſe of me, Pſal.60.8. Of which, ſee the note on the place: or, that of Hoſhea to Iſrael, Hoſ.9.1. Rejoyce not, O Iſrael, in regard of the late ſucceſſes God hath vouchſafed to give thee by Jeroboam againſt the Syrians, 2 King.14.27,28. for thy joy will not laſt long, it will be ſhortned for thy ſins.

for out of the Serpents root ſhall come forth a cockatrice] That is, as moſt, both Jews and Chriſtians, underſtand it, one of Uzziahs iſſue, who did ſhrewdly bite thee, 2 Chr.26.6,7. ſhall ariſe in his ſtead, to wit, Ezekiah, whoſe great Grand-father Uzziah was, 1 Chr.3.12,13. that ſhall bite, and vex thee far more grievouſly, then ever he did; and indeed ſo he did: for he over-ran their whole countrey, ſo as neither fort, or fenced city could eſcape him, 2 King.18.8. Yet one I find, that expounds this whole paſſage of the Kings of Aſſyria; underſtanding by the rod broken, Sennacherib, Chap.10.5.& 14. 25. by the Serpent, Tiglath-Pileſer, whoſe Succeſſors ſhould be more grievous to the Philiſtines, then he had been; by the cockatrice, Sennacherib: by the fiery flying Serpent, Nebuchadnezzar; who came from the North, ver.31. but this is nothing probable; nor ſuits well with the times of thoſe Kings. For neither could the Philiſtines rejoyce at the death of Ahaz, in regard of Sennacheribs fall; which was not before the fourteenth year of Ezekiah his Succeſſor, 2 King. 18. 13. nor did Sennacherib ever riſe, and recover ſtrength again after that overthrow, Chap.37.37,38. But this to ſalve, another I light on, that maketh the broken rod, and the Serpent Sargon. Of whom, Chap.20.1. the Cockatrice, Salmaneſer; the fiery flying Serpent, Sennacherib. But neither is there ſtory to confirm this; nor is it ſaid, upon the death of Sargon: of which, no mention is found; but upon the death of Ahaz, and, conſequently, the entrance of Ezekiah, at whoſe coming to the Kingdome, it is not unlikely, that God would have this Prophecy delivered, to make him the more gracious in the eyes of his people, as one that ſhould recover that power, and regain that honour (by repreſſing the malignant attempts of their adverſaries, and his good, yea great ſucceſſe againſt them) which his Father had embeziled, and loſt by his folly. See Chap.32.1.

Serpents] The word is general for any ſort of Serpents; ſo called, of their ſubtilty, Gen.3.1. ſo the verb it comes of, is uſed, Gen.44.15.

root] For progenitor: as Chap.11.1. Judg.5.14. and it is joyned with the two ſorts here mentioned, as a common term comprehending both, Num.21.6. Jer.8.17. but neither was Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzars progenitor; nor Nebuchadnezzar of Sennacheribs iſſue.

a cockatrice] Or, baſilisk: though Some, a viper, that eats out her mothers bowels, ſay they: but that is a meer fable. Some, an aſp, that, coming to be ſeventy years old, turns cockatrice; and becomes then ſo deaf, that ſhe can no more be charmed, Pſal.58.4,5. but that is a Jewiſh tale. It is ſuppoſed to have its name according to Some, by a tranſpoſition of letters, from a word, that ſignifies to wound; for it ſtings grievouſly, Prov.23.32. where it is rendred, an adder: yet it ſeems to be a kind of thoſe, that have their venome, not in their tails, as the Scorpion, Rev.9.10. but in their teeth; wherewith they are ſaid to bite, Jer.8.17. they are ſuch as burrow in the ground, Chap. 11.8. and bring forth, not young, as doth the viper, thereof indeed having its name; but eggs, Chap.59.5. The root whence it comes, ſeems to ſignifie putting out, or bringing forth: for thereof come two words; one, that ſignifies excrements, Ezek. 4. 15. another, that denotes iſſue, Chap. 22.24. where it is ioyned alſo with a word, iſſuing from the verb here uſed; and of the fecundity of it, a thing common to it, with ſuch creeping things, as lay egs, it may well have its name. See Exod.1.7.

and his fruit ſhall be] fruit, for iſſue, either of man, or beaſt; though properly, and primarily of trees, or plants, Num.13.20,23,27. Chap.4.2. So Deut.28.4,18. Pſal.21.10. & 132.

& 132.11. his fruit, not the cockatrices, as Some, ſuppoſing it meant of a ſecond deſcent; but of the Serpent before mentioned, that ſhould breed a cockatrice, yea, worſe then ſo, a fiery flying Serpent: and I ſhould rather render it, yea his fruit ſhall be: as Neh.6.10. Pſal.18.10. Chap.3.9.

a fiery flying Serpent] The word, Saraph, here uſed, ſignifies ſuch a kind of ſerpent, as with extream heat, paineth, and killeth. For it comes of a word, that ſignifies to burn. Whereof the Seraphim alſo, Chap.6.2. have their name; being the very ſame with this, uſed, Num.21.6. where it is ſaid of them, they bit the people, Some of them, even to death; and it is of the Greeks, for the ſame cauſe, called preſter. The word ſerpent, is not here in the text; though it be joyned with it, Deut.8.14. And it is ſaid to fly, as here, ſo Chap. 30. 6. either becauſe it is winged, as thoſe Seraphs were, Chap. 6. 2. and as ſome dragons, or ſerpents, are reported to be; of which kind I have ſometime ſeen one, that had a kind of wing like your flying fiſh; or, becauſe of their ſwift motion, whereby ſuddenly jerking up, they ſhoot themſelves forward, or dart themſelves out of trees, on men, or beaſts, as they paſs by. For of a ſwift motion is the Hebrew word alſo uſed, Pſal. 18. 10. & 91. 5. Chap. 11. 14. In regard whereof, ſome conjecture the Serpent, here mentioned, to be that which the Greeks call Acontias; and the Latine Jaculus; from a javelin, or a dart. Howbeit, I cannot concur with thoſe that render it, a feathered fiery ſerpent; for ſuch feathered ones, I ſuppoſe to be figments only. Now to ſuch ſerpents, as are here mentioned, is Ezekiah compared, not for any fierce, fell, or miſchievous diſpoſition; but for the hurt, and dammage that he ſhould do to the Philiſtims; and to this latter alſo, for his ſwiftneſs, and celerity, in over-running, and ſubduing their country. See Dan.7. 4. & 8.5.

V. 30. And the firſt born of the poor ſhall feed; and the needy ſhall lye down in ſafety] This ſome ſuppoſe added, becauſe by the tearms formerly given him, Ezekiah might be deemed to be ſome cruel tyrant, to ſhew, that though he ſhould be ſuch as is thereby intimated, yet he ſhould be careful of the good, and ſafety of his own people, whoſe proſperity and plenty, ſecurity, and indemnity he ſhould thereby procure. The ſcope ſeems to be, to declare what a vaſte difference there ſhould ſhortly be, between the State of the Philiſtims, who now ſo much flouriſhed; and the State of the Jewiſh people, at preſent, ſo much impoveriſhed; for whoſe conſolation this prophecy was principally intended. Thus God ſtrengthens the ſpoyled againſt the ſtrong, Amos 5.9. For what ſome would have here intimated of their enlargement, quiet condition, and full feeding, after the Aſſyrian ſiege diſſolved, Chap. 33. 16,17,20. & 37.30. ſeems to be without the verge of this prophecy.

the firſt-born of the poor] Thoſe that are brought to extream poverty; as the Jews at that time were. See 2 Chro.28. The ground of the phraſe is, becauſe the firſt-born was of chief note and place in the family; and had a ſpecial portion above the reſt, Deut.21.17. 1 Chro.5.1,2. with Gen. 48.16,22. Hence thoſe phraſes, Exod. 4. 22. Pſal.89.27. Rom.8.29. Col.1.15, 18. Rev.1.5. That eſpecially, that comes neereſt to this here, Job 18.13. The firſt-born of death: for the cruelleſt, and moſt grievous death.

ſhall feed] Either ſhall eat upon thee: ſhall depaſture thee; who before fedſt upon them, Chap. 27.10. Zeph. 2.5,7. and then there is a defect of the Pronoun, as before, verſ. 9. Or, ſhall then feed to the ful, when thou ſhalt be ſtarved, Chap.5. 17. & 35.13. Or, ſhall feed quietly in ſafety, (ſupplyed out of the next branch, as Mark 1.10.) being rid of ſuch bad neighbours; or freed, at leaſt, from the fear of them who did formerly diſturb them, Zeph.3.13.

needy] Poor, and needy; as Chap.26.6. See Chap.10.2.

lye down] It is a metaphor, as the former, of feeding; taken from beaſts, or cattel, Chap.17. 2. Zeph.2.14. that uſe to lye down, when they have fed, Chap. 27.10.

in ſafety] Without fear of diſturbance, or diſtraction. As cattel, where no ravenous creature is neer at hand, to worry, or ſcare them, Ezek.34.25. & 39.26.

and I will kill thy root with famine] Or, but; as Ch. 11.4.14. becauſe the contrary condition of the Philiſtims here followeth. Heb. I will make thy root to dye. A metaphor from a ſtock, or tree, whoſe, not branches, or body onely; but the very root alſo is dryed up for want of moiſture to feed, and maintain it. An intimation of an utter deſtruction, Pſal.52. 5. Chap.5,24. Hoſ.9.16. Mal.4.1. See Hoſ.2.3. Nor need we make any curious enquiry, what the root ſhould mean here; as ſome that would have to be meant here, by root, the Nobility; and by remnant, in the next clauſe, the communalty, as if they ſprung from the Nobility, as from a root; when as the Nobility rather riſeth from them. For no more is meant here, then is elſewhere ſaid of Ekron, a prime town of the Philiſtims, 1 Sam. 6. 17. alluding to the name of it. Ekron ſhall be rooted up, or, rooted out, Zeph.2.4.

and he ſhall ſlay thy remnant] The ſame thing is ſaid, ſave that the perſon is changed. For what was root there, is remnant here. He ſhall ſlay, that is, Ezekiah, before metaphorically deſcribed, ver. 29. as the moſt Interpreters expound it. Or God rather, as Chap. 13. 6. that ſpeaks this, what inſtruments ſoever he ſhould uſe for the effecting of it. For it was not done by any one man, or at any one time; or the verb being taken indefinitely, thy remnant ſhall be ſlain; as ver. 32. See chap. 2. 19. thou ſhalt be utterly deſtroyed. See Zeph. 2. 5,6. a remnant of Gods people is ſtill ſaid to be reſerved, and ſaved, Chap. 1. 9. & 10.21,22. but the very remnant here is threatned to be deſtroyed; that which was not fulfilled in Ezekiah's day. For how could Jeremy, Ezekiel, and Zephany, then, ſo long after again denounce it. See verſ. 31.

V. 31. Howl, O gate; cry, O city] The Prophet, upon this direful prediction of utter deſtruction, turns his ſpeech again, as before he began it, ver.29. to Paleſtine, calling to her cities, to howl, and cry out, as people are wont to do in ſudden dangers, and diſtreſſes. See the like Chap. 13. 6. & 23. 1. Jer. 48.20. & 49.3. Joel 1.11,13. Zach. 11.2. The ſame thing twice ſpoken, in divers tearms; gate, and city, all one; as Chap. 3.26. Ezek. 21. 15. gate, and city, collectively, for gates, and cities; to wit, of Paleſtine, whereof, in times paſt, were ſeven principal ones, 1 Sam.6.17. and gate, or city; not as ſome, the Rulers, that ſit in the gate, 1 Sam. 19. 8. Jer. 38. 2. but the people, or inhabitants of the cities in general; as Chap. 1.21,27. See Jer. 47. 2.

thou whole Paleſtina art diſſolved] Heb. melted: as wax, and metals with fire: or, melowed, and diſſolved, as earth, and mould with water. For ſo the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 46.6. & 65.10. Chap.24.19. Amos 9.5,13. Nah. 1.5. & 2. 6. applyed to a multitude, when they drop away one from another, as things do when they melt, either with heat, or with moyſture, 1 Sam.14.16. of particular perſons; either when their fleſh waſteth, Chap.64.7. Job 30.22. or their heart faints, Exod.15.15. Joſh.2.9, 24. Pſal.75.3. & 107. 26. Jer. 49. 23. Ezek.21.15. It may well be here underſtood in this latter ſenſe of Paleſtine, that it ſhould be, either wholly waſted, or wholly diſmayed; or, that the State it ſelf ſhould be diſſolved: and it is ſaid, thou whole Paleſtina, in reference to what was before ſaid, thou whole Paleſtina, ver.29. thou ſhalt be waſted, diſmayed, and diſſolved, as thou rejoycedſt all before: thy dread, and deſolation ſhall be now, as general, as thy joy, and triumph was before.

for there ſhall come from the North a ſmoke] from the North, that is, ſay Some, from Aſſyria. Of which, Jer.3.12. to wit, Sennacherib with his forces: but that was after Ezekiah ſmote the Philiſtines, 2 King.18.8,13. Nor do we read of any great miſchief, that he did to the Philiſtines: whom it is not unlikely, that he would rather reſcue from the Jews, that were planted, or placed among them, to keep them under; whoſe peace, and quiet abode in their own land, he came purpoſely to diſturb, and ſo did, Chap.36.1. contrary to that which is here implyed, ver.30. from Chaldea, ſay others, to wit, Nebuchadnezzar, with his vaſt army; which ſeemeth to be confirmed from Jer.47.2. where the evil threatned the Philiſtines from the North, is generally acknowledged to be meant of Nebuchadnezzar, who is oft times ſaid to come from the North, Jer.1.13,14. & 4. 6. & 6. 22. but the circumſtances here mentioned, will not admit it; that eſpecially, ver. 32. concerning the ſafety of thoſe, that repaired to Sion for ſuccour. Sion it ſelf being then ſurprized, and the Jewiſh State involved in the ſame calamity with the Philiſtines. I underſtand it therefore, with moſt of the Jewiſh, and Proteſtant, yea, ſome Popiſh alſo, Writers; of Judea, that ſtood North-eaſt from Paleſtine; and Jeruſalem, that was likewiſe ſituate in regard of Gaza, and the coaſts about it; ſurprized by Ezekiah, 2 King.18.8. for which having ſo cleer Scripture, and ſo ſuitable both to the time of the delivery of this Prophecy, and to the ſubject matter of it; I ſee no ſufficient reaſon, why any ſhould ſtrive to divert it, and to turn it any other way.

a ſmoke] Some by ſmoke, here, underſtand a cloud of duſt, raiſed by the footing of horſe, and man, chariots, and carriages, giving warning of ſome great army approaching. Others, the noyſe of the neighing, and prancing of horſes, claſhing of armour, ruſtling of chariots, and rumbling of wheels, Jer.8.16. & 47.3. fore-runners of war, as ſmoke of fire. Others, of the report of the enemies approach, that ſhould utterly fright, and diſmay them, Jer. 4.15. & 6. 24. Others fetch in here the boyling pot, with the mouth Northward, Jer. 1.13. and by ſmoke, underſtand here the ſteam of it, or the like. I conceive ſmoke to be here taken, not as it is a ſign, and fore-runner, or fore-warner of fire, Judg.20.40. but as it dimmes, or darkens the ayr, or offends, and choaks, Prov.10.26. Ezekiahs forces, wherewith he ſhould invade the Philiſtines, are compared to a great, thick, and ſtifling ſmoke, that ſhould overſpread all their country; and either vex, and annoy them, in their dwelling, ings, or expel and drive them out of the places of their abode: or, that ſhould ſet all in a combuſtion with them, make their whole land, as Mount Sinai, ſometime, Exod. 19. 8. Joſh. 8. 20,21. Chap. 34. 10. and this the rather; for the ſmoke is ſaid to come with them.

and none ſhall be alone in his appointed times] Or, meeting places; or aſſemblies. See ver. 13. Moſt Interpreters, both Jewiſh, and Chriſtian, underſtand this, as ſpoken of thoſe Jewiſh forces, that Ezekiah ſhould raiſe for his expedition, againſt Paleſtine; that they ſhould none come alone; but reſort by flocks to him, at his ſet times, for entertainment of them; or ſet places, where they were appointed to meet; ſo willing, and glad they ſhould be, to be employed againſt a people, that had ſo much, and ſo often moleſted them. See the like, Pſal. 110.3. Chap. 13.2—4. Howbeit, one of the Rabbines expounds it of the Philiſtines, that they ſhould not care, or endure to ſtay in their meeting places, their palaces, or ſtrong holds, any one of them, when theſe forces break in upon them; as when a ſmoke comes, ſaith he, no man, though alone, can endure to ſtay in his houſe, Chap. 6.4. Of the latter word, ſee Pſal. 74.8. Of the former, Pſal. 102. 7. And this ſeems more ſuitable to the tenor of the context, if the words will bear it. The ſmoke, that ſhall be driven in upon you, from the fire of Gods wrath incenſed againſt you, ſhall in all places ſo purſue you, and annoy you, that ye ſhall no where be in reſt. See Deut. 29.20. Pſal. 18.8.

V. 32. What ſhall one then anſwer the meſſengers of the nation] Heb. And what ſhall be anſwer: And, for, Then: as Chap. 8.3,14. ſhall be anſwer; that is, Ezekiah, ſay Some, as ver. 30. but rather, ſhall be anſwered: as Chap. 13.9. & 15. 5. As alſo, by the meſſengers of the nation, ſome underſtand the Babylonian Embaſſadours, ſent to Ezekiah, Chap. 39.1. but the time accords not with the circumſtances of things here foretold. See on ver. 29,31. Some, the Philiſtines Embaſſadors ſent, upon unequal terms, to procure a peace: but of this, there is no ground. Others, any meſſengers ſent from any people, to congratulate with the Jews, upon theſe their ſucceſſes, as the manner of Princes is, upon ſuch occaſions to do, 2 Sam. 8.10. and take the word therefore collectively, nation, for, nations, Deut. 28.49. and others, yet more generally, any ſtrangers, that repair to Jeruſalem, by occaſion of commerce, and buſineſs; which though a word thence derived ſignifie, Levit. 11.32. & 16.29. Yet I find not the word it ſelf, ever ſo uſed. I ſuppoſe to be meant any meſſengers in general, that upon any occaſion ſhall come, ſent unto them, from forreign parts.

that the Lord hath founded Sion] He hath built it; and will ſo eſtabliſh it, and protect it, and thoſe that repair to it; and that there is little hope therefore for any to prevail againſt them, or it, Pſal. 87.1,5. & 102.13—16. Chap. 37.32,33.

and the poor of his people ſhall truſt in it] Or, ſhall betake themſelves unto it; as to a place of retreat for ſurety, and ſafeguard. So is the word uſed, Judg. 9.15. Pſal. 36.7. &. 57. 1. & 61. 4. & 91.4. or, that they may repair thereunto; (ſee Chap. 13.2.) as to a place by God ſet apart, and appointed for ſuch purpoſe. So the noun hence deduced, Job 24.8. Pſal. 104. 19. Chap. 4.6. & 25.4. & 28.15. & 30.3.

the poor of his people] Of whom before, ver. 30. and for whoſe comfort this was principally intended, ſee Pſal. 9.9. Joel 2. 32. Zeph. 3.12,13. This anſwer may be given to the Embaſſadours of forreign Princes, by them to be returned unto thoſe that ſent them.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1. The burden of Moab] Of Burden, ſee Chap. 13.1. Moab was the ſon of Lot, begot on his elder daughter in drink, Gen. 19.33,37. From him, his poſterity, and the countrey they inhabited (bordering upon the land of promiſe, out of which, the Emim were by them expelled, Deut. 2.20,21.) had their name. Theſe were ever bad neighbours to the Jewiſh people, and ill-affected towards them, Num. 22.5,6. Deut. 23.3,4. Judg. 3.12—14. 2 King. 13.20. & 24.28. Pſal. 83.6,8. againſt theſe therefore, as the conſtant adverſaries of Gods people, is this burdenſome Prophecy of ſad menaces denounced, in this Chapter, and the next. The like whereunto, ſee Amos 2.1--3. & Jer. 48. in which latter place alſo, are many paſſages found, borrowed from this Prophet; as in their due places ſhall be ſhewed.

Becauſe in the night Ar of Moab is layd waſte] The Prophet begins this prophecy concerning Moab, with a relation of the devaſtation, and deſtruction of ſome cheif Cities, and principal parts of that country; which afterwards he doth more largely, and particularly proſecute; together with the Moabites diſtraction and vain devotions thereupon, flocking unto their idols, who could do them no good.

Becauſe] So the word moſt uſually ſignifies; and ſo the moſt here take it. Yet ſome render it here, certainly: and ſo it is ſometime uſed; as Chap. 5.9. & 7.9,16.

in the night] That is, ſuddenly, unexpectedly, as the day of the Lord is ſaid to come as a thief in the night, 1 Theſſ. 5. 1,2. So Matth. 25.6. Mar. 13.31-35. Luk. 21.34,35. Eccl. 9.12. or, in a night, for there is no article in the text: that is, within the compaſs of a night: as of Jonas his Kikayon, it is ſaid, that it came up in a night, and was deſtroyed in a night, Jon. 4. 10. though that, by a proverbial ſpeech, be ſpoken of the celerity, both of the growth, and the decay of that plant. So of a famous city in France, burnt down in a night, an heathen Author ſaith, that there was but a night between a notable city, and none at all. See Jer. 4.20.

Ar of Moab] Ar, the chief, or mother-city of Moab, Num. 21.28. which ſeems alſo to have given the name to the whole region, round about it, and to the greateſt part of the Moabites ancient poſſeſſion, Deut. 2.9. Some ſuppoſe it to be the ſame with Aroer, mentioned, Num. 32 34. Deut. 2.36. & 3.12. Jer. 48.19. but of that, there is no certainty, yea, or likelihood.

is laid waſte] Or, ſpoiled; or, ſacked; or, plundered: as Pſal. 119.61. he ſpeaks in the preſent tenſe, as of a thing already done; or in doing; and ſo all along afterward. The uſual guiſe of prophetical language; implying the certainty of the things foretold, as ſure to be done, as if effected already. See Chap. 3.1. 1 King. 14.14.

and brought to ſilence] So the old Latine, and ſo the word may ſeem to be taken, Jer. 8.14. but that rather from another root. It were better rendred, is cut off; for ſo it is uſed, Jer. 47,5. Hoſ. 10. 9,15. Obad. 15. Zeph. 1.11. And if we retain this reading, the copulative, which is wanting in the Hebrew, need not be expreſſed; but the word without it, rendred, it is cut off. See Chap. 14.11,13,19,20. and this ſeems to go beyond the former. Not ſacked, or plundered onely, but cut off; deſtroyed, ruined; either burnt down, or beaten down.

becauſe in the night Kir of Moab is laid waſte, and brought to ſilence] Kir, a city of ſpecial note in the land of Moab; called alſo, Kir-heres, and Kir-hareſeth, Chap. 16.7,11. And of Moab here, to diſtinguiſh it from another of that name in Media, mentioned, Chap. 22. 6. 2 King. 16.9. Howbeit the whole verſe, is, ſome other waies, rendred by Interpreters: For the old Latine hath it, concluding the whole ſentence within this verſe, thus; Becauſe Ar is waſted by night, Moab is ſilenced; becauſe the wall (he took the cities name for a common tearm) is waſted, Moab is ſilenced. That is, either is deſtroyed, and brought to the grave, the place of ſilence; as Pſal. 30.17,18. or, he is become mute; all his rejoycing, and ſhouting is gone, Chap. 16. 9,10. Or, all his bragging, and vaunting is ceaſed, Chap. 16.6. Jer. 48.2. Or, he ſits ſtill, and dares not ſtir to make any reſiſtance; as Pſal. 4. 4. Jer. 8. 14. Others, of late, have thus rendred it, Becauſe Moab is waſted, Ar is cut off; becauſe Moab is waſted, Kir of Moab is cut off: and ſo carrying the ſentence on to the next verſe. The reaſon why they read it thus, taking in the word Moab, from the fore-going inſcription, is, becauſe the verb of waſting is maſculine, whereas the names of cities are feminine. But that need not enforce any ſuch ſupply; ſince that the genders are not, in the Hebrew, ſo commonly obſerved. So Chap. 13. 11. where the Nouns are both feminine, the verb joyned to the one, and the participle to the other, both maſculine. And the like, Chap. 16.3. obſerved there by the Hebrew Criticks, and oft elſewhere. See Jer. 2.23,24. Beſide that, the unevenneſs of the compoſure may be helped, by ſuppoſing the inhabitant to be intended, as indeed it is. Ar is waſted; for the inhabitant of Ar: and of Kir likewiſe. And inhabitant; for inhabitants; as Chap. 5. 3. See Chap. 18 2. So Chap. 47. 11. evil, or, adverſity ſhall come upon thee: for the day of evil, or, the time of adverſity; as is more fully expreſſed, Pſal. 27.5. & Jer. 30. 19. Praiſe, or, thankſgiving ſhall come forth. That is, the voyce of praiſe, or, thankſgiving; as Pſal. 26. 7. Jon. 2.9. In all which places, the form of the verb, for the gender of it, agreeth not with the Noun expreſſed, but with that underſtood. But a late writer, of great note, to cut off theſe difficulties, maketh the former verb of waſte, an infinitive, thus rendring the words, Surely in the night that Ar of Moab was ſacked, was he cut off: ſurely in the night that Kir of Moab was ſacked, was he, (that is, Moab) cut off. Moab was deſtroyed in that night, wherein thoſe his two principal cities were ſurprized and ſacked. And this reading ſeems very probable. The word night, in a regent form, here confirming it. The like ſyntax, ſee Chap. 30. 29. unleſs a defect of the relative be in either place; as Chap. 29. 1. Now this deſtruction, wherewith Moab is here threatned, was inflicted, as ſome think, by Salmaneſer, when he invaded Samaria, 2 King. 17.5. As others, by Sennacherib, when he came againſt Judea, 2 King. 18. 13. Or, as others again, by Nebuchadnezzar, after the ſurprizal of Jeruſalem, 2 King. 25. 1, 4. See Chap. 16. 14.

V. 2. He is gone up] Or, is gone unto. See Chap. 7. 1.

& 8.7. He, that is, Moab; his King and his people, ſupplyed from the latter part of the verſe: as Chap. 14. 30. they run to, and fro, from idol, to idol; from Temple, to Temple, to ſeek relief, and ſuccour; but in vain, Chap. 16.12.

to Bajith] A city ſo termed; as an idols Houſe, or Temple, in way of eminency, above all other in that country: or, as if the whole city were all but one idols Houſe, or Temple, it is called at large, Beth-baal-Meon; that is, The houſe of Baals habitation, Joſh. 13.17. more briefly, Beth-Meon, Num. 32.38. 1 Chr. 5.8. and yet cut ſhorter, Beon, Num. 32. 3. here, by the firſt word in the name at large, Bajith; which yet ſome here take not for the name of a city, but for an houſe, or a temple: and render the words, to the houſe, or temple; to wit, of Chemoſh his chief god. See Ch. 16.12. Jer. 48.7,13. But of this, more anon. See ver. 6.

and to Dibon] Another city of Moab, which was ſometime together with Ar, and much of his country ſurpriſed, and taken from him, by the Amorites, Num. 21. 26, 30. By means whereof it came into the Iſraelites hands, having ſubdued the Amorite, Num. 32. 3. And was poſſeſſed firſt by the Gadites, Num. 32. 34. & 33.45. though it fell afterward to the Reubenites, Joſh. 13.17. but was (it ſeems) again afterward by the Moabites recovered, and by them repoſſeſſed, Jer. 48.18,22. See ver. 9. Theſe two places are deemed to have been unto the Moabites, as Dan and Bethel were unto the idolatrous Iſraelites, 1 King. 12.28,29. the principal places of their idolatrous ſervices. See Jer. 48.13.

the high places] Some take theſe words, as joyned by way of appoſition, to the names of the two forementioned places; as if it were ſaid, He is gone to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places: that is, to thoſe high places that are there. Others take it, for the proper name of a city, ſituate neer to the foot of Piſgah, called ſometime Bamoth, Numb. 21. 19,20. ſometime Bamoth-Baal, or, the high places of Baal, Joſh. 13.17. and they render the words, and to Bamoth: ſupplying the copulative, which they ſuppoſe is wanting, as ver. 1. But one of the Jewiſh Writers, whom Some of ours alſo follow, goeth a third way; rendring the words to this effect. He (to wit, Moab, that is, the King eſpecially, or the people of Moab) is gone up to the Temple, (to wit, of Chemoſh, called his Sanctuary, Chap. 16.12.) and Dibon, (that is, the Inhabitant, taken collectively, or the Inhabitants of Dibon) to the high places. And this I the rather incline to, becauſe the article is prefixed before, both Bajith, and Bamoth; which in proper names is not ſo uſual; and it ſuits beſt with what we find afterward, Chap. 16.12. See Num. 21.28.

to weep] Heb. for weeping; the noun for the verb: not to ſacrifice, as uſually; but to weep: that is, to lament, and by prayer and ſupplication to ſeek to their idols, for help, and ſuccour, in their preſent diſtreſs, to pray, Chap. 16.12.

Moab ſhall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba] Or, for Nebo, and for Medeba: as Chap. 24.11. Lam. 5. 17,18. two cities alſo of Moab. Nebo, poſſeſſed ſometime by the Reubenites, Num. 32. 3,38. ſo called, as may ſeem, from the Mount neer to it, on which Moſes deceaſed, Deut. 32.49,50. & 34. 1,5. both, as Some, from the Prophecies, or oracles, that their idols there gave. See Chap. 46.1. Medeba, a city on the confines of thoſe parts of Moab, which the Amorites ſometime took from him, Numb. 21.30. and became afterward a boundary of the Reubenites portion, Joſh. 13.16. for theſe, Moab, that is, the Moabite, ſhall howl; (the ground of their forementioned weeping) becauſe by the enemy ſurpriſed, and ſacked. See Chap. 14. 31.

on all their heads ſhall be baldneſs] Or, all their heads ſhall be bald. Heb. on every his head, or, on his whole head, ſhall be baldneſs: as having reference to Moab before ſpoken; but taken collectively. The lamentation ſhall be general, becauſe the affliction ſo alſo. See Chap. 1.5.

on all heads baldneſs, and every beard cut off] Heb. lopt: uſed properly of trees, or the branches of them, Chap. 10. 33. & 14.12. Dan. 4.14. This was to come to paſs, either by tearing of their hair, through extremity of grief, and impatiency of ſpirit, Ezr. 9.3. See Chap. 3.24. or, by cutting, and ſhaving of head, and beard. An uſual practice, anciently in times of mourning, and lamentation, Levit. 19.27,28. & 21.5. Deut. 14.1. Job 1.20. Jer. 7.29. Ezek. 7. 18. Amos 8.10. Mic. 1.16. And the reaſon of this practice on ſuch occaſion, the Rabbines render; becauſe the hair of head, and beard, is accounted as an ornament to a mans perſon, and the mangling of it a diſgrace, 2 Sam. 10.4. and ornaments in mournings are laid aſide, as unſeaſonable, Exod. 33. 4, 5. See the ſame, Jer. 48. 37.

V. 3. In their ſtreets they ſhall gird themſelves with ſackcloth] Heb. In his (as before, ver. 2.) ſtreets, or outwayes, (becauſe ſtreets comes in afterward. See ver. 5,18.) they gird on ſack. When they come abroad, they ſhall go clad with ſackcloth girt to them: the wonted habit of mourners, 2 Sam. 3. 31. 1 King. 20.31,32. & 21.27. 2 King. 6.30. & 19.1,2. Neh. 9.1. Eſth. 4.1–4. Job 16.15. Pſal. 30.11. & 35.13. Chap. 3. 24. & 20.2. & 22.12. & 37.1,2. & 58.5. Dan. 9.3. Joel 1.8,13. Amos 8.10. Rev. 11.3. See Jer. 48.37.

on the tops of their houſes] On which, being flat-roofed, as teraces, or, open galleries, Deut. 22.8. Joſh. 2.6. they uſed to pray, Act. 10.9. and idolaters to perform their ſuperſtitious devotions, Jer. 32.29. as alſo to repair thither in danger, and diſtreſs, for more ſecurity, or to look about for relief. See Chap. 22.1. Jer. 7.29.

and in their ſtreets] The uſual places of common, and general lamentation, and mourning, Eccl. 12.5. Chap. 24.11. or, as well thoſe, that run to and fro in the ſtreets, as thoſe that are got up to the tops of their houſes.

every one ſhall howl] There ſhall be nothing, but howling, and weeping, in city and country, both within doors, and without, ver. 4,5,8. See Jer. 48.38.

weeping abundantly] Heb. deſcending with weeping: that is, ſay Some, coming down with weeping, and heavy hearts, from their Idol-Temples, whither they went up; ver. 2. becauſe they find little hope of help, or comfort there; or, rather, their eyes running down with tears: as Pſal. 119.136. Jer. 9. 1,18. & 13.17. Lam. 1.16. & 3.48.

V. 4. And Heſhbon ſhall cry] Or, Both Heſhbon, and Elealah, as Pſal. 76.6. Jer. 17.26. Or, For: as Chap. 13. 8. & 53. 2. For he proceeds to ſhew by enumeration of particular places, how general the lamentation ſhould be. See Jer. 48. 34.

Heſhbon] Of this, which was the royal City of Sihon, the Amorite-King, as of the former, ſee Numb. 21. 23, 26. & 32. 37.

ſhall cry] Or, cryeth: as ver. 1.

and Eleale] Of this likewiſe, ſee Num. 32. 3, 37. by Heſhbon, and Elealeh, is meant the Inhabitants of either: as Moab, for the Moabites, ver. 2. See ver. 1.

their voice ſhall be heard] Or, is heard: as before, Cryeth. See ch. 10.30.

even unto Jahaz] The utmoſt border of Moabs country, towards Sihons land, Num. 21.23. called alſo Jahazah, and aſſigned to the Levites, out of the Reubenites portion, Joſh. 21. 36.

therefore the armed ſouldiers of Moab ſhall cry out] The cry ſhall be ſo doleful, and ſo great, that it ſhall make not the weak only, and ſuch as are not acquainted with war; but even the ſouldiers, that are in arms, and the moſt couragious among them, to quail, and by crying with the reſt, to diſcover their inward faint-heartedneſſe, and unwillingneſs to fight, and make reſiſtance againſt the enemy. See Jer. 48.4,14,41.

armed Souldiers] The word ſignifies properly ſuch as have their garments, and their harneſs, or weapons, as ſword, and the like, ſuch as they wont then to wear, and to make uſe of, girt up to them, unto, or about their loyns, Deut. 12,11,41. & 13.18. Luk. 12.35. as ready to go out into the field, or to enter fight, whenſoever occaſion ſhould be, Num. 32. 30,32. Deut. 3.18. Joſh. 4.13. The word, Souldiers, is not in the text.

ſhall cry out] Some of the Jewiſh Writers expound it, ſhall ſhout: as men are wont to do for joy, and in triumph, Judg. 15.14 and as valiant men when they are joyning battle, 1 Sam. 17. 20. 2 Chr. 13. 15,16. as implying, that though the ſouldiers ſhould ſhew themſelves, ready, and forward to go out againſt the enemy, yet Moab, the King, and people, ſhould have no heart thereunto. But the ſhouting here mentioned, as other of them well obſerve, is not of mirth, nor of alacrity, but of mourning, and dejection of ſpirit. See Jer. 48.32,33. So is the word uſed, to cry out, for ſenſe of pain, or fear of evil, Judg. 7.21. Mic. 4.9.

his life ſhall be grievous to him] As if it were ſaid, he ſhall be weary of his life: as Rebekkah, Gen. 27.46. and Job, Job 3. 20,21. & 6.8,9. & 7.15,16. Heb. his ſoul ſhall be ill-affected to him, or, for himſelf. Which the Jewiſh Writers, ſome of them expound; Moabs ſoul ſhall be grieved for himſelf, or, each of the Moabites ſhall be in much grief of mind, for the evil that is like to befall him: and ſome of them, as if an emphaſis were in the laſt word; he ſhall have no liſt to look after any other: but each ſoul ſorrow for it ſelf. The fear, and affliction that ſhall ſurprize each party, being ſo great, that they ſhould mind none but themſelves. This latter ſeems ſomewhat too nice; yet ſee Jer. 47 3. & 49.5. Others, it ſhall grieve within him. There in the text there is an elegancy in the ſound of the words, between this, and that of crying, before uſed. The vicinity whereof hath made ſome great Rabbines, and Some of ours, treading in their ſteps, to expound it; each one ſhall cry for himſelf; referring it, ſome to the whole body of the people, ſome to the men of war, before mentioned. But the word in that form is not found ſo to ſignifie. See Chap. 16. 7.

V. 5. My heart ſhall cry out for Moab] Or, Doth cry out; or, did cry out: (for the tenſes are oft promiſcuouſly uſed. See Chap.14.25. ver.1.) for Moab; or unto Moab, as ver. 4. to him; or for him. This, moſt, both Jewiſh, and Chriſtian Interpreters, underſtand of the Prophets compaſſionate affection towards that people, albeit ſo great an enemy to Gods people; their deſtruction and calamity being ſo grievous, that the very thought of it moved him to commiſeration. Whence alſo one of the Rabbins obſerves a difference, between the Prophets of God, and the Prophets of Idols; between Eſay, and Balaam; the one deſired to be curſing Gods people, Num. 23. whereas Eſay was grieved to forethink what evil was to betide Moab. See Chap. 16.9, 11. & 21.3. Ier.47.6. But other, of both ſorts, underſtand them, not of the Prophet; but of thoſe, before mentioned, ver. 4. (and inſert therefore, as to be ſupplyed in the text, the word, ſaying,; which is indeed ſometime omitted; as Pſal. 105.15. Chap. 63.11.) Some of the men of arms, making profeſſion of their forwardneſs to fight, and their crying to, and calling upon the people for that purpoſe, to reclaim them from flight, and encourage them to ſtand to it. Others, of the Moabites in general, profeſſing their inward grief, even at heart, for the calamities, and ruine of their country. And this, to me, ſeems beſt to agree with the reſt of the context, as well fore-going, as enſuing. See Jer. 48.31, 32, 36.

his fugitives ſhall flee unto Zoar] His fugitives. Or as the Hebrew hath it, her fugitives. (and ſo ver. 8.) as having reference, ſay the Jewiſh Doctors, to the region. Of whom, ſome expound the words here uſed, as our verſion doth. And as another from the ſame root, (which generally ſignifies to flee) doth undoubtedly import, Ezek. 17.21. as alſo is this here uſed by many deemed to ſignifie, Chap.43.14. See alſo Jon.1.10. ſhall flee, is not in the original; but is ſupplyed from the Noun. Inſtead whereof, ſome ſupply from the former clauſe, or from what follows, ſhall cry. And others, ſhall run crying unto Zoar. The city that was ſaved, when Sodom, and her neighbouring towns were deſtroyed. (Of which, and of Lots fleeing thither, whereunto the Prophet is here deemed to allude. See Gen. 19.20--22.) And thither thoſe may well ſeem to flee, that ſtood in fear of, or had eſcaped the ſword of the enemy; either hoping there to finde ſhelter; as others at Heſhbon, Jer.48.45. or thereby intending a further eſcape: (See Ier. 48.6.) it being a bordering town of that State, Deut. 34.3. Whence alſo have divers taken occaſion (the old Latine among the reſt) to render the word here, not fugitives, but bars, or bolts; as moſt commonly, indeed, it ſignifies, Exod. 26.26, 27. Pſal.107.16. So called, becauſe they ſhoot, or run through the rings, or hollow places, made for the paſſage of them, Exod.26.28. & 36.33. And ſome, thereby, underſtand the borders of the land, which are to it, as bars: And read the text, Unto the borders thereof, even unto Zoar, to wit, did I cry. From the former branch ſupplyed; as Gen. 1.16. But of this uſe of the word, (though great ones maintain it) is no example produced. Others therefore, and ſo ſome of the Jewiſh writers, underſtand by it the bars of the city gates; which go commonly together, Deut. 2.5. 1 Sam. 23.7. 2 Chro.8.5. Job.38.10. Pſal. 107.16. Jer. 49.31. Ezek. 38.11. As gate; for city, Chap.3.26. So bar, for gate, Prov. 18.19. Or ſtrong-hold, Amos. 1.5. As alſo ſome take it, Chap. 43.14. And bars ſaid to cry here, ſaith one Rabbine, as gates and cities to howl, Chap. 14.31. But another, rather referring it to the former branch, renders it, My heart ſhall cry for Moab; and for her bars, (that is, all her ſtrength, ſaith he, or ſtrong-holds, becauſe the bars are the ſtrength of a gate, as the gates of a city. And the gate cannot hold out, when the bars are broken; no more then a city, when the gates are broke open, Pſal. 107.16. & 147.13.) even unto Zoar; a principal one of them. In this variety of verſions, and expoſitions, (and others alſo there are, beſides theſe) I ſuppoſe with leaſt ſtraining of the text, the words may be thus rendred, Her fugitives ſhall cry unto Zoar. For of the cry paſſing to and fro, up and down, through the whole country, doth this paſſage ſtill ſpeak. And ſo, Ier.48.34. From the cry of Heſhbon, even unto Elealah, even unto Jahaz have they uttered their voyce: from Zoar, even unto Horanaim. Of which, ſee ver. 5. They ſhall cry thither, that is, carry on the cry along thither: or ſhall run crying thither. Of which kinde of defective ſpeech, ſee examples, Gen. 45.14. Benjamin wept upon his neck; that is, fell weeping upon his neck: or, fell upon his neck, and wept; as the former part of the verſe, more fully, hath it, 1 Sam. 7.2. Iſrael lamented after the Lord: that is, lamenting ſought after him, 1 Cor. 5.2. Ye have not mourned, that the man that hath done this deed might be taken away from you: That is, ye have not, ſorrowing, or being grieved, taken a courſe for the removing of him from among you; as after there, ver. 13. See alſo, Chap. 14.12. & 38.14, 17, 21. I ſhall onely add, and leave it to the conſideration of others, whether this branch, may not, with the next before-going, be thus knit together, and rendred, My heart cryeth out for Moab, (that is, I my ſelf; as Pſal. 25.17. & 27.8. & 28.7. cry out, or I cry out heartily for him) and for his fugitives, (that flee; or ſo as my voyce may be heard) unto Zoar. See Chap. 43.14.

an heifer of three years old] The words thus rendred, make it ambiguous, unto whom this branch is to be referred. Some refer it to the city Zoar: which, they ſay, is called here, an heifer of three years old, in regard of her ſtrength and beauty, and the richneſs of her ſoyl, Gen. 13.10. Becauſe at thoſe years, an heifer is in her prime: and therefore God bids Abraham take an heifer, and a femal Goat, and a Ram, each of that age, for the ſealing of Covenants between them, Gen. 15.9. Yet ſome of the Jewiſh authors would have it, a Calf of the third birth: as if ſuch were uſually the ſtrongeſt. And would have Moab, or Zoar, likened to ſuch a calf, for her wantonneſs; as Jer.31.18. Hoſ.10.11. See Ier.48.11. But Ier. 48.34. where the ſame words are found, they are rendred, as an heifer of three years old. And it is there referred, not to the city, but to the cryers, or the cry. I will cry out, as ſuch an heifer, miſſing her calf, or her company, 1 Sam. 6.9, 12. Or, the cry of thoſe that flye, ſhall be ſuch, and ſo loud, that it ſhould be heard unto Zoar, or it ſhall paſs in that manner over the whole country, till it come thither. See verſ. 4. Of the defect of the note of ſimilitude, ſee in the like caſe, Chap. 21.8.

for by the mounting up of Lubith with weeping ſhall they go it up] Heb. he ſhall go it up: or, it ſhall go up (to wit, the cry; as it is, Ier.48.5.) by the aſcent, &c. In which words, ſome ſuppoſe a reaſon to be rendred, why the men of war ſhould cry ſo loud for the ſtaying of the people: to wit, becauſe all places ſhould be ſo full of howling, and yelling for fear, and grief, that otherwiſe they could not be heard. Others, why thoſe that fled, ſhould not ſtay till they come to Zoar; becauſe they found theſe places, on the way, ſo full of weeping, and wailing, that they well thereby perceived there was no ſafe tarrying there. But I ſuppoſe rather, that the Prophets intent is to ſhew, that the cry was gone over the whole country, and was arrived at Zoar, by relating the places by which it had paſt. See Jer. 48.4, 5.

Lubith] Of this city, or town, we find no mention in Scripture, ſave here, and in Jeremy. The Rabbins tell us, it ſtood high; which I ſuppoſe they gather from the words of the text. Some of ours tell us, that it was ſcituate on an hill, and on that ſide of it that looked toward Judea, as Horonaim, on the other. But whence they have that, I know not.

for in the way of Horonaim] Or, to Horonaim. So Ier. 48.34. From Zoar unto Horonaim. That is, all the way that lyes between them. Hence it is thought, that Sanballat was called the Horonite, Neh.2.10, 16. The name is in the duall, as you would ſay, the two Horons. The reaſon whereof, is by the Rabbins rendred; becauſe there were two of them, the upper, and the lower. And of Beth-horon indeed we ſo finde, Joſh. 10.10, 11. & 16.3, 5. & 18.13, 14. Which, by thoſe places, ſeem to have been ſcituate upon the confines of the Ephraimites, and the Benjamites. And might peradventure be the ſame with Horonaim, here mentioned: (as Nimrah, and Beth-nimrah, Num.32.3, 36.) if the ſituation of them would admit it.

they ſhall raiſe up a cry of deſtruction] That is, men ſhall raiſe ſuch a cry: or, ſuch a cry ſhall be raiſed; as Chap. 2.19. & 14.30. So ſome of the Jewiſh writers, by a tranſpoſition of letters, deducing it from a root that ſignifieth to raiſe, Chap. 14.9. Howbeit, others of them ſay, it is a Syriack word, and ſignifies to cry. And it hath ſome affinity with the tearm of ſhouting, uſed verſ.4. Whereunto alſo ſome refer it. And others again to a word, that ſignifies to break aſunder with force, or violence, Pſal.2.9. and render it, They ſhall break, or rend themſelves with crying. A defect of the particle with, as Pſal. 17.13, 14. with ver. 7.

a cry of deſtruction] Heb. of breach, or breaking. That is, either a cry importing deſtruction; Breach, put for deſtruction, as Chap.1.28. & 14.25: Or as ſome, a broken cry: ſuch as vehemency of paſſion, and diſtraction, in a tumultuous multitude, doth oft produce. But I incline rather to the former. See Ier. 4.20. The drift is, to ſhew, that all places, and paſſages, high and low, from the one end of the land to the other, ſhould be filled with lamentations, and out-cryes. See further, verſ. 8.

V. 6. For] Or, Becauſe. One reaſon of their cry; the utter ſpoyl of their paſtures, at preſent; not, as ſome, their future deſolation.

For the waters of Nimrim ſhall be deſolate] Heb. Iſrael be deſolations; or, ſhall be brought to extream deſolation; as Ier.48.34. See Chap.1.17. That is, as moſt, the waters and brooks, neer to that place, that watered the rich paſtures, in the plains of Moab, ſhall be dryed up. As of Egypt the like is ſaid, Chap. 19.5, 7. But that was there done by diverſion of the main ſtream of the river: whereof here there is no likelihood; and falleth out oft, in times of drought, 1 King. 18.5.

18. 5. Jer. 14.3. But that is not the thing here foretold. Others, therefore, by waters, do here underſtand that fat, and rich paſtures, and grounds themſelves that lay neer to thoſe waters, as Eccl. 11. 1. waters, for ſoyl, or land, well watered, Chap. 32. 20. For as for that which ſome of the Rabbins have of the brooks there, that they ſhould be ſaid to be deſolated; becauſe they were mixed with the blood of the ſlain, or choaked up with their corpſes; It ſeemeth ſomewhat too far fetched. That which others have of the places adjoyning, ſaid to be deſolate; becauſe left by the inhabitants, either fled, or ſlain, is more likely; but ſuits not ſo well with the words following, which ſpeak, not of the towns, but the grounds. See Jer. 48. 34.

Nimrim] There is mention of a town, called Nimrah, Numb. 32. 3. joyned there with divers other of thoſe here mentioned. Called alſo Beth-nimrah, Numb. 32. 36. (for names are oft times cut ſhort, as Sittim, for Abel-ſittim, Num. 25. 1. & 33. 49. Hermon, Pſal. 133. 3. for Baal-hermon, Judg. 3. 3. Aſhan, Joſh. 19. 7. for Coraſhan, 1 Sam. 30. 30. Sheba, for Beerſheba, Joſh. 19. 2. Salem, for Jeruſalem, Pſal. 76. 2.) where it is reckoned up among thoſe cities, that the Gadites poſſeſſed, concerning which, ſee on v. 2. It is here put in the plural number, for the grounds neer to, or about that city. Or, it may be, for ſuch fat paſtures, as thoſe about Nimrah were; as if he had ſaid, the fat paſtures of the Nimrahs, or Nimrim; Towns ſo ſeated, as that was, in rich and fertile ſoyls. See Seſlim, Chap. 13. 10.

for the hay is withered away] Or, the graſs is withered; as the word is uſually rendred, Job 40. 15. Pſal. 104. 14. & 147. 8. Chap. 37. 27. & 40. 6–8. otherwiſe graſs withered, in an ordinary courſe, makes hay; and that is nothing amiſs.

the graſs faileth, there is no green thing] Or, the herbage (that properly that is newly ſprung up, and ſprouted out of the ground, the tender ſprout, Gen. 1. 11, 12. Chap. 37. 27. & 66. 14. Ier. 14. 5.) is gone, or conſumed, (as Chap. 16. 4. & 24. 13.) the green herbage is not. So Gen. 1. 30. and 9. 3. the meaning is: the paſtures, as utterly ſpoiled, either eaten up with the enemies horſe, or trampled on, and ſtamped down with their feet, and ſo beaten into the ſoyl and mire, made of that which grew on them, that there is nothing green to be ſeen. See Chap. 1. 7. Ezek. 34. 18.

V. 7. Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, ſhall they carry away to the brook of the willows] Or, Becauſe (as conteining another cauſe of their out-cry) the abundance which (the relative wanting ſhould be ſupplied; as Gen. 42. 28. Exod. 13. 8.) Or, the reſidue of what (as Deut. 3. 13.) they have gotten. (Heb. made, as Gen. 31. 1. Deut. 8. 18) and their wealth, (ſo called, becauſe the owner is as maſter of it, Ier. 20. 1.) or, their treaſure (ſo tearmed, as by the Greeks alſo, becauſe wont to be laid up, Gen. 41. 36.) ſhall be carried away; or, is carried away; (as ver. 5.) &c. This ſome underſtand of the Moabites themſelves, who, either becauſe the waters of Nimrim were dryed up, and no paſture there to be had for their cattel, ſhould drive them away, to ſeek water and paſture for them, about ſome willowy-brook, elſewhere. Or, as others, ſhould for fear of the enemie, carry away the beſt of their ſubſtance, and of their treaſure, ſo much as they well could, or ſo much as was left of it; to hide it in ſome low place by the brook ſide, yea, or in the brooks; ſuch of it, as might without dammage, or detriment, be there ſtowed, in hope afterward to recover it again. But others rather underſtand it of the enemie, that ſhould ſeize upon their wealth, and carry it all away, which is here brought in, as one cauſe of their lamentations, and out-cryes: as before the ſpoil of their ſoyl; ſo now the loſs of their wealth. And is ſpoken of, as a thing in doing, or done. This to be the true ſence of the place, appears by that of Jeremy, parallel hereunto, Ier. 48. 36. Becauſe the riches that he hath gotten, are periſhed. See Chap. 16. 8. Howbeit, one of the Rabbins, in whoſe ſteps the old Latine treadeth, renders the words to this purpoſe. According to that which Moab hath done, ſhall their viſitation (as Pſal. 89. 32.) or, retribution, alſo be. And ſo runs out into a large diſcourſe of the manifold kindneſſes, that Abraham ſhewed Lot, and the unkinde dealing of his iſſue, the Moabites, and Ammonites, with Abrahams poſterity, for which they were deſervedly thus to be deſtroyed. See Ier. 48. 26, 27. & 49. 1. But the genuine ſence was given before.

to the brook of the willows] So is the word uſed, Levit. 23. 40. Chap. 44. 4. that is, ſay ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, and of ours after them, to Babylon; and ſo, thoſe that expound the former part of the verſe, of a retribution; expound this latter, they ſhall carry them (to wit, the Moabites) unto Babylon; becauſe they find mention of willows, growing by the water-ſide there, Pſal. 137. 1, 2. as if willows grew no where elſe beſides brooks, but at Babylon only: beſides, that it appears not, that this Prophecy intends any carrying at all to Babylon: Others underſtand it, of ſome brook, in the land of Moab, where the Moabites ſhould hide their wealth, or whether the enemy ſhould carry it, there to ſhare it. But the words may as well be read, unto the vale of the Arabians; Of whom, Chap. 13. 20. either by the Arabiſhs themſelves, ſerving under the Aſſyrians; or, by the Aſſyrians, ſending them thither before-hand, (for ſome part of Arabia bordered upon the Moabites country) thence to convey them afterward into Aſſyria. See Chap. 16. 8.

V. 8. For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab] Or, Becauſe: as ver. 7. Heb. border; but taken collectively: as Judg. 11. 22. This appears by the particular recitall of the places, theſe eſpecially here added to them, ver. 4, 5. Heſhbon, being ſituate on the North-eaſt ſide of that country; Elealeh, on the North-weſt; Jahaz, on the South-weſt; Horonaim, as ſome ſay, fartheſt Eaſt; and Zoar, the utmoſt Weſt.

the howling thereof unto Eglaim] Heb. her howling: to wit, Moabs; as her fugitives, ver. 5. or, the howling of it; that is, of the cry; an howling cry; and ſo in the next clauſe: See Jer. 48. 20.

unto Eglaim] This moſt Interpreters, Jew, and Chriſtian, take for the proper name of a place; and the Rabbines affirm it to be a boundary Town of Moab; but on which ſide, they ſay not. The word is no where elſe found. Yet ſome late Writers of note take it, for a common term; and will have it to ſignifie ſuch places, where there is a confluence of divers ſtreams: becauſe the word Egel, Job 38. 28. (where alone it is extant) ſignifies a drop: and they ſuppoſe it, to ſignifie, thoſe watery places, that were neer upon the confluence of the brooks, or ſtreams of the river Arnon, Num. 21. 14. which is there ſaid, ver. 13. to be the border of Moab, dividing them and the Amorites, who lay Eaſterly from them, ver. 11. And it is not unlikely, that the place had its name from the ſpringineſs of the grounds thereabouts. To this nature of the Moabitiſh ſoyl, the Pſalmiſt ſeems to have an eye, Pſal. 60. 8. where he calleth Moab, not his waſh-pot; but his waſhing-pot: his pot, or baſon, to waſh his feet in.

and the howling thereof unto Beer-elim] The word Beer, which ſignifies a Well, Some take here, for a common, or general term: and ſo render the words; the Well of Elim: as if Elim, not Beer-Elim, were the name of the place; and of that name indeed, we have a place, in the Iſraelites journeying from Egypt, Exod. 15. 27. & 16. 1. Num. 33. 9, 10. but that cannot be the place here mentioned. It ſeems rather, that Beer here is part of the name of the place; for which alſo it is put alone, Num. 21. 16. and may ſeem to have been called Beer-Elim, that is, The Well of the mighty ones: becauſe it is ſaid, The Princes (who are ſo termed, Exod. 15. 15. Pſal. 29. 1.) digged it, Num. 21. 18. This Beer-Elim ſeems to have been not far from ſome part of Arnon, Num. 21. 13, 16. between which river, on the one ſide, and Jordan on the other, lay the greateſt part of the Moabites countrey. See Num. 21. 13. compared with Num. 33. 48. & 35. 1. though ſome parts, it ſeems, they were at this time poſſeſſed of, alſo, beyond Jordan, as Zoar, ver. 5. Of which, ſee Deut. 34. 3.

V. 9. For the waters of Dimon ſhall be full of blood] Or, Becauſe they are full, or, are filled with blood, (as before, ver. 6, 8.) to wit, the blood of men ſlain by the enemy. See ver. 6. So Chap. 34. 3, 6, 7. Jer. 46. 10. Ezek. 32. 6. This ſeems to be here ſpecified, as one cauſe of this general out-cry, that ran to and fro, from place to place; becauſe the waters that came down from the place here mentioned, being dyed with blood, ſhewed how it went with them there.

Dimon] The Jewiſh Doctors tell us, that this Dimon is a river in the land of Moab; and that ſtream, ſay ſome, that appeared like blood to the Moabites, in the expedition of the three Kings, againſt Moab, and was after indeed ſo dyed with their blood, 2 King. 3. 22–24. whence they imagine, that it was afterward ſo called. But it may well be queſtioned, whether any ſuch ſtream continued there, after that extraordinary flood, by the Prophets prayer, at that time, in that their extream neceſſity procured. Some again of ours ſay, that it is not a river, but a city, that belonged ſometime to the Gadites. But we find elſewhere in Scripture none of that name. Others therefore, laſtly, ſuppoſe it, to be no other then that Dibon, mentioned before, ver. 2. but by the Prophet here ſo termed, with change of a letter, not Dibon; but Dimon: (as Merodach, for Berodach, Chap. 31. 1.) in regard of the abundance of blood, that ſhould be ſhed in it, and the ſtreams about it, or neer unto it, ſhould flow with, a new name, is upon a new occaſion given it: as Gen. 17. 5, 15. & 25. 30. & 32. 28. Judg. 6. 32. Ruth 1. 20.

for] Or, moreover: as Chap. 16. 8.

I will bring more upon Dimon] This is ſpoken, as in the perſon of God. I will bring, ſaith he, more. Heb. additions; or, things added: that is (ſaith one of the Rabbines well) evills added: a defect of the ſubject: as Prov. 18. 23. the rich anſwereth, or gives out, rough, or harſh things; that is, rough, or harſh words. The meaning is, I will inflict more, and more evills upon them. See ch.1.5. Though others, both of them, and ours, refer it to what was before ſaid of blood, that the river ſhould abound with blood, that ſhould be added to the waters thereof, in great abundance running in, on either ſide of it; & that the word is plural, in regard of the ſeveral ſtreams, that ſhould run divers wayes, not tainted with blood, only, but ſwelling with it: or, in reference to the ſtory above-mentioned, that he would make thoſe rivers to run with blood, more abundantly, then at that time; & yet again with much more, then hitherto they had done. But I ſuppoſe rather, that by additions of evils, is here meant, more then had been before mentioned; to wit, the ſpoyling of their paſtures, and the plundering of their goods, ver.6,7. even the ſlaughter of their Inhabitants, partly, by the ſword of the enemy; and partly alſo, by wild beaſts, that ſhall be ſent in upon them: and it may be, that Moab it ſelf, in the next clauſe mentioned, is here termed Dimon, that is, bloody, in alluſion to the name of Dibon, one of her chief cities: as if it were ſaid; all Moab ſhall be, as one Dibon, or Dimon, rather. It ſhall in all her ſtreams run with blood: as Jeruſalem is called Ariel, becauſe it ſhould be as one Ariel, or altar; in regard of the general ſlaughter, that ſhould be in all parts of it, Chap.29.1,2. See of Edom, Chap.34.5--7.

lions upon him, that eſcapeth of Moab] Heb. upon the eſcaping or, eſcape (as Chap.10.20.) of Moab a lion: that which ſome of the Jewiſh Writers underſtand of Nebuchadnezzar, compared to a lion, Jer.4.7. who ſhould deſtroy whatſoever had eſcaped Sennacherib. But the word, lion, ſeems rather, as ſome of them alſo obſerve, to be taken collectively, for lions: as Chap.30.6. Jer.5.6. Nah.2.11,12. put here for ravenous beaſts in general, ſuch as are wont to prey upon men, Chap. 35.9. 2 King.17.25. The meaning is, their land being much of it waſted, and deſolate, God would cauſe wild beaſts to abound in it, that ſhould deſtroy many of thoſe that had eſcaped the ſword of the enemy, Exod.23.29. Levit.26.22. So that they ſhould be no way able to eſcape Gods hand; but he would meet with them, either in one kind or another, and by variety of judgments, execute his indignation upon them, Chap.24.17,18. Jer.48.43,44. Amos 5.9. & 9.1.

and upon the remnant of the land] To wit, of Moab: the ſame (ſaith one of the Rabbines well) in effect, though in other terms, with the former. For why another of them ſhould ſay, the remnant of Iſrael in their land, I know not.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ. 1. SEnd ye the lamb to the Ruler of the land] This Chapter ought to be joyned unto the former; as in ſome verſions it is; becauſe they make up but one Prophecy, and that no long one, of one and the ſame ſubject, concerning Moab; who in the former part of it, is admoniſhed, what courſe ſhe ſhould, and might have taken, for the averſion and prevention of the judgments here denounced againſt her; to wit, by paying their tribute duly to the King of Judah, and performing kind offices unto Gods people, in the times, eſpecially, of their diſtreſs, ver. 3,4. both which things, becauſe they had not only failed in, but had carried themſelves haughtily, and harſhly, toward thoſe, unto whom they ought to have performed ſuch offices, ver. 6. they are further again menaced with the judgments before mentioned, ver.7--13. and a certain time ſet for the execution of the ſame, ver.14.

Send the lamb to the Ruler of the land] Or, Send a lamb the Ruler of the earth: as the old Latine, and thoſe that follow it, expounding it of Chriſt, that came from Ruth the Moabiteſs, Matth.1.5. or, Send the lamb of the Ruler of the land, or, the earth: which ſeems to ſuit beſt with the original. The great variety of expoſitions, that both Jews, and Chriſtians, give of the words, were too long to relate, and loſt labour to refute, they being many of them ſo abſurd. I will pick out of them therefore, one, or two only, that ſeem moſt probable; and pitch upon that, I deem moſt proper. Some therefore of prime note, expound the words, as if the Prophet ſhould adviſe, or admoniſh the Moabites, to ſend lambs, and the like, for ſacrifice to God, the Ruler of the whole world, 1 Chr.29. 12. as Heathen Princes ſometime did, Ezr.6.8-10.& 7.15-23. to make their peace, if they may, with him. Which ſome of them conceive to be ſpoken ſeriouſly, as exhorting them, to come in to God, ſubmit him, acknowledg him, by ſacrificing to him, to be the only true God, who is able to protect, and ſave them: as Chap.21.12. which their idols cannnot do, ver.12. Others, as in way of deriſion, as if, do it, he might; but it ſhould be to ſmall purpoſe, to ſeek now to him, whom he had ſo deſpiſed, and deſpighted before; and who had now paſt an irrecoverable doom of deſtruction upon him. So it ſhould be like that, Mal.1.9. But the genuine ſenſe ſeems rather to be that, which the ſounder ſort of the Rabbines have; and divers of ours alſo admit: that the Moabites are called upon, to pay that tribute to Ezekiah, which was due from them, to the Kings of Judah. David had conquered Moab, ſlain a great part of them, made the reſt of them tributary, 2 Sam.8.2. this tribute, becauſe they abounded in ſheep, and goats, was paid in ſuch cattel: but after the rent made in the State, upon Solomons deceaſe, the Kings of Iſrael got this yearly penſion into their hands, and enjoyed it quietly, without refuſal, unto Ahabs deceaſe; after whoſe death, they denyed it to Ahaziah, and to Joram his ſons, 2 King.1.1. & 3. 4,5. The Prophet therefore, here mindeth them, of their duty herein, and willeth them to ſend the Rulers lamb, that is, the preſent, or tribute due to him; as the Lord of the ſoyl, to whom of right it belonged, being of Davids poſterity, conſiſting in lambs, with rams, and goats. That which ſome add, that they are admoniſhed now ſo to do, becauſe there was no king of Iſrael now to receive it, Samaria being taken by Salmaneſer, and that kingdom diſſolved, 2 King.18.9,10. is not ſo certain; but that more unlikely, that the Prophets words ſhould be ſpoken in way of deriſion, and inſultation over them, after their deſtruction, and the deſolation of their land: as if he had ſaid, ye refuſed before to pay your wonted tribute, conſiſting of ſo many thouſand ſheep, ſend now, if ye can, but a lamb only, as implying, that they had ſcarce a lamb then left them, of ſuch numerous flocks, as they were late poſſeſſed of. But lamb, is here put collectively, for lambs; as lion, for lions, Chap.15.9. and lambs here, for ſuch cattel, as their tribute conſiſted of: as lions there, for ſuch beaſts, as are wont to kill and devour men. I am not ignorant that one of the Jewiſh great Maſters would have the word, car, here to ſignifie a ſwift beaſt of the camel kind; pointing us to a place, 2 King.11. 4,19. where the words are, the carim and the runners, which we render, the captains and the guard: as if the meaning were, that they ſhould ſend in poſt-haſte. See more hereof, on Chap. 66.20. wherein, howſoever I ſuppoſe he be far wide, as well for the one place as the other, yet he gives a hint of that, which to me ſeems to miniſter an occaſion of ſome doubt, whether the word car and carim, might not better be rendred both here and elſewhere, ram and rams, then lamb and lambs. My reaſon is, becauſe by carim, chieftains and great ones, ſouldiers, and men of might at leaſt, are commonly reſembled by ſuch; ſo ſtyled, Chap.34.6. Jer.51.40. Ezek.39.10. beſides that, the word carim is, it ſelf, uſed for captains and leaders; ſuch as are rams in the flock, as in that place of the Kings: and for thoſe engins of batterie, which both Greeks, and Latines call rams, Ezek.4.2. & 21.22. yea ſo the old Latine rendreth the word rams, 1 Sam.15.9. and ſome late Interpreters of prime note, leaders of the flock. All that can be objected againſt this, is, that elim is uſed commonly for rams; and that elim and carim are ſometime found mentioned together, as Ezek.39.18. & 2 King.3.4. But hereunto may be anſwered, that in like manner ſheirim and athudim are both uſed for he-goats; and yet there ſeems ſome diſtinction between them, and the latter, to be the leaders. See Chap.14. 9. & Jer.50.8. and the carim to be among the ſheep, as the athudim among the goats. Beſides that in the hiſtory which this relateth unto, it is ſaid carim, ſo many ſimply, (which ſome render fat weathers) and elim with wool, ſo many. But this I ſhall ſubmit to the judgment of the learned.

from Sela in the wilderneſs] The Hebrew word ſignifies, a rock, or, a fortreſs, Num.20.8,10. Chap.31.9. It ſeems here to be the proper name of a place, (as is Petra, ſometime, both with Greeks and Latines, and ſo ſome here render it,) ſituate in the confines of Moab, and Edom, mentioned, as then in the poſſeſſion of the Edomite, in Amaziahs time, and by him taken, and the name changed unto Joktheel, (of which name we find a city, anciently ſo called, in Judahs lot, Joſh.15.38.) annexed to the crown of Judah; but in after-times, it ſeems, gained unto Moab; and by them, at the time of this Prophecy, poſſeſſed. Some ſay it was the head city of Moab; and is ſaid here to ſtand on that part of the land, that over-looked the wilderneſs of Moab, Num.21.11. Deut.2.8. Others ſay, that it was the head city of Edom; and ſuppoſe that here is intimated, the full extent of the whole country of Moab; from Sela (the South end, to Edom-ward) unto the wilderneſſe, (for ſo they render the words of the text) to wit, of Jordan; the North-end to Judea-ward: as if he had ſaid; Send all of you, out of all parts of the country, from the one end of your land to the other. I incline to the former; though I doubt whether Sela were the head city of either. See Ar, Chap.15.1. to the Mount of the Daughter of Zion] To Jeruſalem; where Gods ſeat was in his Temple, and the kings in his palace. See Chap.1.8. & 2.2. & 10.32. & 14.13.

V. 2. For it ſhall be, that as a wandring bird, caſt out of the neſt; ſo the Daughters of Moab ſhall be at the foords of Arnon] In theſe words the Prophet foretells them, what will befall them, if they ſhall not follow the advice before given them, ver. 1. but perſiſt in their rebellion, and refuſal to come in: and the things menaced are two eſpecially, confuſion, and deportation. The words may be rendred; Elſe it ſhall be, that as a wandring bird, as a neſt forſaken; the Daughters of Moab, ſhall be at the paſſages of Arnon. Or, as Some thus, Or elſe Moab ſhall be as a wandring bird, as a neſt diſmiſſed; and the Daughters of Moab ſhall be at the paſſages of Arnon.

For] Heb. And: As Chap. 13.8. or, Or; as Gen. 2. 6. Judg.11.31. that is; elſe, Otherwiſe: as Some well render it here.

it ſhall be; that] As Chap.7.21. & 11.11. or Moab ſhall be: as Chap.13.14. Babylon ſhall be.

as a wandring bird] Prov.27.8. that being driven from her neſt, hath no place to repair to. See of Babylon, Chap.13.14. Of Ammon, Ier.49.5.

caſt out of the neſt] Or, as a neſt (that is, a brood, or, young ones in a neſt: as Deut.32.11.Luk. 13.34.) forſaken, (as Chap. 27.10. to wit, by their dam; having none to protect them) or, driven out; or, caſt out: as Exod 12.33. 1 King.9.7. See Chap.10.14. And there is in the Hebrew, an elegant alluſion to the word of ſending, ver. as if he had ſaid, Send away your lamb; or elſe your ſelves ſhall be like birds ſent out of their neſt, expelled, and driven from the places of your preſent abode, Job 29.18.

So the Daughters of Moab] As, the Daughters of Sion, Chap. 3.16,17. and, the Daughters of Jeruſalem, Luk.23.28. that is, the Moabitiſh women; or, as Some more generally, the promiſcuous multitude of that people. The Jewiſh Doctors underſtand it of the villages, or leſſer Towns, that are as Daughters, to the Mother-cities; and are in Scripture commonly ſo ſtyled, Num.21.26,33. & 32.42. But this ſuites not ſo well with the tenure of the text; unleſs we will ſay, that the people of Moab ſhall be as wandring birds; and her Towns as a neſt forſaken. But then, why not the great ones, as well, as the leſs? Of which, Chap.15.1,2.

at the foords of Arnon] Or, paſſages (as Joſh.2.7.) of Arnon, which bounded their country on the one ſide, Num. 21. 13. there ſhall they be, either flying from the enemy, out of their land, toward the wilderneſs, Num.21.13. or by the enemy carried captive, beyond the bounds of their Country. See v.8. and Chap.15.7.

V. 3. Take Counſel, &c.] The ſecond branch of wholſome advice given the Moabites, for preventing of the judgments denounced againſt them; the ſedulous performance of kind offices to Gods people, in the time of their diſtreſſes, wherein they had been much failing, and faulty before, Deut. 23.3,4. implying, that had they been careful ſo to have done, they ſhould not have been now, in the like ſtreights themſelves.

Take counſel, execute judgment] Or, call a counſel, (Heb. make a counſel to come; cauſe a counſel to meet, bring them together: as Pſal. 1.1.) and make a decree: reſolve upon a courſe to be accordingly taken, and put in execution: as Chap. 28. 7. So Pſal.106.30. Or, as Some, deal equally, and uprightly, ſhew the like kindneſs to Abrahams poſterity, as he did to Lot your Anceſtor.

make thy ſhadow as the night, in the midſt of noon-day] Or, at noon-day; as Chap.6.12. or, noon-tide, Ier. 20. 16. at high-noon, as we uſe to ſay. It is a proverbiall kind of ſpeech, as one of the Jewiſh Writers well obſerves; whereby God, or men, are ſaid to make midnight, at, or, of, noon-day: as on the other ſide, God is ſaid to make noon-day of midnight, Pſal.37.6. with 112.4. & 139.11,12. Of ſome other uſes hereof, ſee Chap.59.10. Amos 8.9. Here it is applyed to protection, ſhelter, refreſhment, concealment. The violent, and eager perſecution of the enemy, is compared to the heat of the ſun, at noon-day, that is very grievous to a traveller, or wayfaring man, where no ſhade, or ſhelter is to be had, Pſal.121.6. Jon. 4.8. Rev.7.16. the Jewiſh people fleeing from it, to ſuch travellers, ſo diſtreſſed: the relief that Moab ſhould have afforded them, to a ſhade; which is uſed in Scripture commonly, for protection, ſhelter, refreſhment, concealment, Judg. 9. 15. Job 32.22. Pſal.17.8. & 91.1. Chap.30.2,3. & 32.2. and the night, being no other then the ſhadow of the earth interpoſed between us and the ſun: and midnight conſequently, the depth of that darkneſs, cauſed by the interpoſition of ſo vaſt a body, as the earth is: Hence it comes to paſs, that the cloſeſt concealment, and the moſt copious refreſhment is here reſembled by the making of high-noon, as mid-night. So that it is, as if the Prophet had ſaid, after ſerious conſultation, reſolve upon ſome courſe, whereby ye may afford what ſhelter ye are able, both for ſafety, and ſecrecy, to the diſtreſſed Iſraelites; be both a ſecure refuge to them, and a comfortable refreſhing. See Obad.14.

hide the out-caſts, bewray not him that wandreth] Or, the wanderer: but collectively taken; as appears by the former word, being plural. The ſame in plainer terms, that was before ſpoken. Harbour, and hide thoſe that are driven from their places of abode, and conſtrained to wander; leſt you your ſelves undergo the like calamity, ver.2. Luk.6.38.

V. 4. Let mine out-caſts] The out-caſts of Iſrael, Pſal.147.2. Chap. 11. 12. & 56. 8. For it is ſpoken in the perſon, not of the Prophet, but of God requiring this office, as of duty, in behalf of his people. The out-caſts of my people, whom he owneth yet as his, though he had cauſed them to be driven out of their land, for their ſins, and exceſſes. Ezek. 11. 16. For I ſuppoſe not, (as Some doe) that to be the reaſon, why he here terms them his out-caſts, as being caſt out by him, but as whom, though caſt out ſo, yet he accounted, and acknowledged ſtill, as his. See Chap. 52. 5, 6.

dwell with thee] Or, ſojourn with thee. As Ruth 1. 1. 2 King.8. 1,2. Harbour them for a while.

Moab be thou a covert to them, from the face of the ſpoyler] A metaphor, from ſuch places of covert; as beaſts uſe to retire and repair to, when they are hunted, and purſued. So Pſal. 27. 5. & 32. 7. & 91. 1. Chap. 4. 6. & 32.2. But who the ſpoyler here ſpoken of ſhould be, or, when this office was to have bin performed by them, is much queſtioned. See the next clauſe; and verſe 14.

for the extortioner] Heb. the milker, or ſucker; or wringer out. Prov.30. 33. It is uſed of the wringing out of milk, by milking, or, ſucking. Chap. 60. 16. & 66. 11. of blood, when it is not let out barely, but preſſed, and cruſht out, Levit.1.15. & 5.9. of water, when it is not ſuffered to drop, or run out of a cloth, or fleece; but is wrung out, by ſome force uſed to it, Judg.6.38. Of drink, when not only the liquor, or thinner part of it, or what comes away of it ſelf, is drunk off; but the lees, or thicker part of it, or whatſoever remains behind, is ſucked out, and ſo fetched out, that not a drop, as neer as may be, is of ought left; which we uſually call a wringing of the pot, or cup, Pſal.73.10. & 75.8. Chap.51.17.Ezek.23.34; and it fitly expreſſeth the nature and practice of an oppreſſing tyrant, that ſucketh and wringeth from the people, over whom he tyrannizeth; not the milk only of their ſubſtance, but the blood of their bodies; and leaveth nothing unto them, whereby to ſubſiſt. See Chap.3.14, 15.

is at an end] Or, is brought to nought: as Chap. 29. 20. or, ſhall be no more, Chap.33.1.

the ſpoyler] One of the Hebrew Doctors makes this word, not in common ſenſe only, but in proper ſignification alſo, the ſame with the former; becauſe the word is uſed ſometime for a Pap, or a Teat, Job 24.9. Chap. 60. 16. but there is no place produced where it ſignifies a ſucker, or a wringer, as the former; but it is uſed commonly for a plunderer, waſter, or ſpoyler, Amos 5. 9. and for plunder, waſte, or ſpoyle, Chap,13.6. and 22.4. and 59.7.

ceaſeth] Or is conſumed, is ſpent, is clean gone, as Job 7.9. Pſalm. 73. 26. Chap. 15. 6. and 24. 13. or, ſhall be clean gone, as before.

the Oppreſſors] Heb. treader down, or, trample upon; for the word is ſingular, as the former, but taken collectively; and the verb therefore plurall: or diſtributively, as if he had ſaid, each one of them, Chap. 26. 19. a fit expreſſion, to denote a cruell Tyrant, as one that treads men under feet without mercy, Dan.8.7,10. Lam. 3. 34. or that ſpoiles and makes havock of that which he cannot carry away or make uſe of; like beaſts, that kill more than they are able to devoure, Dan.7.7. Mic.5.8. See Chap.15.6. Howbeit a Jewiſh Commenter, becauſe the word alſo ſignifies a creeper, or a worm, Gen.1. 26,30. Pſal.69.34. would have hereby meant beaſts, or noxious and harmfull creatures, which are ſent oft in judgment upon a Land; See Chap.15.9. but whether he meant properly, or metaphorically ſo taken, he tells us not. Such are Tyrants and Oppreſſors oft compared to in Scripture, Prov. 28.15. Ezek. 22. 27. Zeph. 3. 3. but the former ſence ſeems the more naturall.

are conſumed out of the land] as Pſal. 104.35. or they ſhall be utterly conſumed, there ſhall be an utter riddance of them out of the Land; to wit, out of Judah, the land that Gods people poſſeſſed. For it is commonly conceived, that the ſcope of the Prophet here, is, to let the Moabites know, that neither the calamities and diſtreſſes of Gods people, in regard whereof, the offices before mentioned are in their behalf required of them, ſhall laſt long, nor the performance of them, conſequently, be over-burdenſome unto them: for that Sennacherib with his forces (who by the terms here mentioned is of the moſt deemed to be deſcribed) ſhould not make any long ſtay with them, but ſhould be ſuddenly ſent away, and not one of his vaſt Army left any more to moleſt them, or to reſtrain them from returning into their own Country again. Chap. 37. 36, 37. But ſee further hereof, on verſe 14.

V. 5. And in mercy ſhall the Throne be eſtabliſhed] This is added, to aſſure the Moabites, that though the Jewiſh State might ſeem much impaired, and weakned, by means of thoſe calamities before intimated; yet it ſhould be reſtored to its former ſtrength, and luſtre, again, either by the coming in of Ezekiah, after his Fathers deceaſe, Chap.14.19. 2 King.18. 7. or, by the ſetling of the Eſtate again, after Sennacheribs overthrow, Chap.33.17. & 37.31. & 38.6. and Moab therefore might do well, to afford them this kindneſs, that he might expect the like favour again, at their hands.

the throne] That is, the kingdom; as Pſal.45.6. with Pſal. 145.13. to wit, of Judah, or Iſrael, 2 Sam.3.10. called the Throne of David. Chap.9.7. Jer.17.25. Gods Throne, 1 Chron. 29.23. as both ſetled by him, Pſal.2.6. and a type of his, Dan. 7.24,27. Mic.4.7. Luk.1.33.

ſhall be eſtabliſhed] Or, ſetled, and reſtored again to its former ſtrength and luſtre. See Chap.2.2. 2 Sam.7.13. 2 Chr. 32.22,23.

in mercy] Or, benignity; or, bounty, Prov.19.22. & 20.6. which ſome refer to God by mercy, as it is rendred here, underſtanding Gods free favour, and goodneſs: as Pſal.89.33. Chap.54.8. Others to Ezekiah, underſtanding by it, his kind, and benigne carriage, (oppoſed here to the cruel courſes of oppreſſers, and tyrants) in relieving, and righting the poor oppreſſed, Pſal.72.3,6,7,12-14. Prov.16.22. & 20.28. & 29.14. Dan.4.27.

and he ſhall ſit upon it] Or, one ſhall ſit upon it: as Chap.8. 21. & 14.30. (a Ruler ſhall not be wanting to it, Pſal.132.11. Jer.33.25,26.) Ezekiah a type of Chriſt, for a time, Chap.32. 1. Chriſt himſelf, for ever, Luk.1.33.

in truth] That is, firmly, ſurely; as having reference to the eſtabliſhment of the throne mentioned. So Prov.11.18. a reward of truth; for, a ſure reward: and a retribution in truth; for, a ſure, and certain retribution. Chap. 61.8. or, conſtantly: as reſpecting the due, and daily adminiſtration of juſtice, a principal means of procuring that eſtabliſhment, Jer. 22.1-4. So Prov.29.14. A King, that in truth, that is, conſtantly judgeth the poor; his throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever.

in the Tabernacle of David] In the houſe, or palace of David; a type of the Church, Amos 9.11. compared to a tent, or tabernacle, as a place, that people retire to, for ſhelter, againſt ſtorm of rain, or heat of Sun-ſhine, Pſal.31.20. Chap. 4.5,6. and ſuch ought all courts of judicature to be, Chap.32. 2. though oftentimes, through mans corruption, they prove nothing leſs unto thoſe that repair to them for relief, Eccl. 3.16.

judging] Or, as Some render it, who ſhall judge: and ſo after; who ſhall ſeek, and haſten, judging; that is, hearing cauſes, and deciding them; the ſpecial office of Rulers, in regard of their own people; from thence called Judges, Deut. 16.18. Judg.4.4,5. Act.13.20. and ſo alſo, Some here render it a judge. Howbeit, to ſit judging, ſeems here to be mentioned as a note of peaceable times. The ordinary courſe of judiciary proceedings, being in times of war, and publike diſturbance, uſually interrupted, and obſtructed. So of David, 1 Chr.18.14.

and ſeeking judgment] Or, procuring: as Eſth. 10.3. procuring his people good; or, as Some of the Hebrew Doctors, not doing juſtice only to ſuch poor, or other, that appear before him, to crave it; but making enquiry alſo after ſuch wrongs, as are committed: but concealed and ſmothered, becauſe the oppreſſed dare not come to complain, for fear of the power and greatneſſe of thoſe that wrong them; that, unto ſuch alſo he may do juſtice. See Neh.13.10,11. So God is ſaid to make inquiſition for murder, to avenge it, whether it be complained of to him, or no, Pſal.9.12. See Chap.1.17.

and haſtening juſtice] Diſpatching and diſpeeding cauſes without needleſs delayes, and haſtening the execution of it. So a ready Scribe, Ezr.7.6. and, a quick, or, a ſpeedy writer, Pſal. 45.1. or, as Some, ſedulous, or diligent, in the adminiſtration of juſtice: as the word is rendred, Prov.12.29. but that ſeems implyed in the former branch. See of David, Pſal. 75.2. & 101.8. A late learned Annotator would have it rendred, both here, and in thoſe other places, skilful, becauſe the modern Syrians ſo uſe the word. But I ſee, as yet, no neceſſity of receding from the received verſion; which ſuiteth well with the former member.

judgment, and juſtice] So of David, 2 Sam.8.15. and of Solomon, Pſal.72.1,2. See Chap.1.27.

V. 6. We have heard of the pride of Moab (he is very proud) even of his haughtineſs, and his pride, and his wrath] Some ſuppoſe theſe words ſpoken by the Prophet, in the perſon of other people, as profeſſing not to wonder at the deſtruction of Moab; his extream pride, and haughtineſſe calling for it, and juſtly deſerving no leſs. Others, as in the perſon of God, as implying, his taking notice of their inſolent and outragious carriages againſt his people: and ſo underſtanding it, the words would be rendred, we have heard, or, do hear (I know, Jer.48.30.) Moabs pride— and his haughtineſs, and his pride, and his wrath, or, both his pride, and his wrath: as Chap. 14.22. that is, his rough, and wrathful carriage toward my people, proceeding from his pride: as intimating the contrary practice of Moab, to that, which he was adviſed unto, ver. 1,3,4. together with the ground of it, the pride of his heart; in regard whereof, he ſcorned to ſtoop ſo low, as to do either of the offices before mentioned, unto thoſe, whom he ſo much diſdained. Yea we find expreſs mention of him, as an aſſiſtant to the Chaldees, in their expedition againſt Judah and Jeruſalem, under Jehojakim, 2 King.24.2. See Jer.48. 27,29,30.

but his lyes ſhall not be ſo] Heb. not ſo his lyes, as Job 11.3. (ſee Chap.44.25. Jer. 50.36.) or, his devices (from a word that ſignifies to deviſe, 1 King.12.33. Neh.6.8.) not ſo. An uſual defective form, Gen.48.18. Exod.10.11. Numb. 12.7. Prov.15.7. Luk.22.26. Eph.4.20. The meaning is, for all his proud, and ſwelling thoughts, his vain counſels, falſe confidences, covert carriages, and cunning devices, ſhall not take ſuch effect, as in the pride of his heart, he imagineth. So Jer. 48.30. not ſo his lyes, or, vain devices, they ſhall not ſo (that is according to what he conceives) do ought. The Jewiſh Doctors various interpretations of this clauſe, I let paſs; becauſe they ſeem too far fetcht, and forced. Only that forementioned late Writer of note, rendreth it, his haughtineſſe, and his pride, and his wrath, are not rightly his barres, they are matters of no might; and in vain for him therefore to confide in them. The particle is uſed for rightly, Numb. 27.7. 2 King.7.9. the noun for barres, Exod. 25.14. & 27.6. the ſtrength of gates and cities, Pſal.147.13.

V. 7. Therefore ſhall Moab howl for Moab] Or, to Moab; as Chap.6.3. The Moabites ſhall howl one for another, or one to another, as implying a viciſſitude of howling on every ſide. For ſo the next branch hath it.

every one ſhall howl] Heb. all of him (to wit, of Moab) ſhall howl; a general howling there ſhall be. See Chap. 13.2-5,8. Jer.40.20. Moab for Moab, or, to Moab: as Egypt againſt Egypt, Chap.19.2. and the Lord from the Lord, Chap. 19.24. and, the Lord with the Lord, 2 Tim.1.18. See Jer. 48.31.

for the foundations of Kirhareſheth ſhall ye mourn] Or, as Some, of the foundations of it, ſhall ye meditate, or, talk. A change of the perſon: as Chap.1.29.

the foundations] As Jer.50.15. Ezra 4.12. intimating, that that goodly, and glorious city, was not to be ſacked only, but utterly razed, unto the very foundations of it, (as Pſal. 137. 7.) that which alone of all the ancient cities of Moab, had eſcaped in the expedition of the three Kings againſt Moab, 2 King.3.25. Howbeit that learned late Writer would have it rendred, for the bottles of Kirhareſheth ſhall ye mourn; becauſe the word is ſo uſed, Hoſh.3.1. and thoſe other terms for foundations, he conceiveth to riſe from another root: and the words following ſpeak of vines, verſ.8.

Kirhareſheth] Called alſo Kir, Chap. 13.1. and Kirhareſh, hereafter, ver.11. and ſignifieth, in all likelihood, the city of the ſun, (as by the Greeks, On, in Egypt, Gen.41.50. is called Heliopolis, and Bethſhemeſh among the Jews, 2 King.14.11, 13. the houſe, or the Temple of the ſun; ſo named, by ancient idolatrous Inhabitants) being ſo called, becauſe the ſun was in a more ſpecial manner there worſhipped. Some ſtately Temple being therein erected unto it; which in Scripture is ſometime by a forraign term (as ſome ſuppoſe) called Heres, or Cheres; or, Herſah, or Cherſah, Judg.8.13. & 14.18. Job 9. 7. Howbeit, Some there are, that would have it ſo termed, from a word, that ſignifies an earthen pot, or, a potſherd, Levit. 15.12. Job 2.8. Pſal.22.15. Chap.30.14. & 48.9. Jer.19.1. & 32.14. in regard of a number of Potters there reſiant, and of the curious earthen ware, there made: or, becauſe the walls of it were built of brick, hardened in the ſun, as were the walls of Babel, Gen.11.3. and of thoſe cities, that the Hebrews built for Pharao in Egypt, Exod.1.11,14. becauſe ſtone, in thoſe low and moiſt places, was not ſo plentiful. But the former ſeems more probable. See Chap. 19.18. and Jer. 15.2.

ſhall ye mourn] Or, mutter in a mournful manner. See Chap.8.14. So Chap. 38.14. & 59.11. Howbeit, Some render it, ye ſhall meditate, entertain thoughts of that ſtrong city, as a place for you, to retire unto, as a city of refuge; hoping that that ſtrong piece had yet eſcaped, as formerly it did, 2 King.3.25. and others, ye ſhall ſpeak of it, or talk, and ſay of it, as followeth: and the word indeed, doth very commonly import meditation, and ſpeech, or communication from thence proceeding, Joſh.1.8. Pſal.1.2. & 2.2. Job 27.2. Chap. 33.18. & 59.13. But the reading that our Tranſlators, with other Interpretors of good note, here agree in, ſeems moſt conſonant to the Prophets purpoſe; and the word is by him, more then once, elſewhere, ſo uſed. Yea, and ſo ſome of thoſe, who yet otherwiſe here expound it, render it, Jer.48.31. a place parallel to this.

ſurely they are ſtricken] or, as ſome of thoſe that maintain the latter expoſition of the former word; but they are contrite, or, deſtroyed: as the words of the Prophet, implying a fruſtration of their hopes, and expectation of any relief there; the very foundations of that city being utterly ruined. But we need not alter our verſion in that behalf. The particle is uſed for a note of aſſeveration, or confirmation; ſurely, 1 Sam. 25.21. 1 King.22.32. Yet inſtead of ſtricken, I ſhould rather render it, either lamed, (as the word is uſed of a lame perſon, 1 Sam.4.4. & 9.3.) and unable therefore to ſuſtain their ſuperſtructures; or, broken, or, bruiſed; or (if our Engliſh word of a wall of ſtone-work, or brick-work, would bear it) contrite; as of mans ſpirit, or mind, it is rendred, Chap. 66. 2. inſtead whereof is uſed, Chap.57.15. a ſpirit beaten, or, broken, or, ground to duſt, or powder. Some make them the words of the Moabites, ſpeaking ſo of them. Others, of the Prophet, importing the cauſe of their mourning ſo for that city. So ſome make, that underſtandeth the place of bottels; they are broken.

V. 8. For the, &c.] Or, Moreover: Or, Alſo: as Chap.15. 9. & 32.13. For the Prophet goeth on in relating the grounds and cauſes of their mourning, to wit, not the razing of the cities, only; but the ſpoyl, and waſte of the whole land, and country about them: as 2 King.3.19. Chap.1.7.

the fields] Or, as Some, the vines: becauſe they ſuppoſe it ſo to be taken, and is by divers ſo rendred, Deut. 32.32. but thereof, there is no neceſſity, either here, or there. By collation of places, it is juſtly deemed to ſignifie fields, not-lying waſte; but managed; and either tilled for grain, or ſet with fruitful and uſeful plants. See 2 King.23 4. Jer. 31.40. Hab. 3.17. in which laſt place, fields, and vine, are diſtinct.

of Heſhbon] Of this City, ſee Chap. 15. 4. it ſeems from hence to have been ſeated in a fat, and fertile ſoyl. See Cant.7.4.

languiſh] A metaphor taken from perſons ſo over-maſtered, and quailed, through infirmity, or fear, that they are ready to faint away, with qualmes, and feebleneſſe of ſpirit, Joſh. 4.3. Neh.4.2. 1 Sam.2.5. Pſal.6.2. Chap.19.8. and it is applyed to plants, Chap.24.7. Joel 1.10. to lands, Chap. 24. 4. & 33.9. Nah.[illegible].4. when their goodly beauty, wealth, fruits, crop, and verdure, is all waſted, and gone; to Towns, and Cities, when decayed, and deſtroyed, Jer. 14.2. Lam.2.8. the word here uſed is ſingular; though the word foregoing it, and conjoyned with it, plural; to denote a general waſte of their fields; as if he had ſaid, the fields, each of them languiſheth; the very ſame manner of conſtruction is, Hab.3. 17. and] A defect of the copulative: as Chap.14.5. & 15.1. Hab. 3.11. or, it may be rendred; as for the vine, &c. as 1 Chron. 28. 2.

the vine] For vines: as Chap.7.23. & 24.7. to wit, they do likewiſe languiſh. Howbeit, Some by vine, or vineyard, underſtand here, the city it ſelf; ſo termed in alluſion to the vineyards round about it.

of Sibmah] A city ſometime taken from the Amorites; and re-edified by the Reubenites, Num. 32. 38. unto whom alſo it was aſſigned, for part of their poſſeſſion, Joſh. 13. 10. See the note on Chap.15.2. it ſeems hence to have been a place of note, for ſpeciall good wine, which the vineyards about it yeelded.

the Lords of the heathen] Or, of the Nations. The great Commanders of the enemies forces, whether Aſſyrians, or, Chaldeans, and other their aſſociates.

have broken down] Or, beaten down: as Pſal.74.6.

the principal plants thereof] her choyceſt plants. Of the term here uſed, ſee on Chap.5.2. & 19.9. they have utterly waſted it; for the meaning is not, that they had picked out the choyce plants, and left the reſidue; but that her plants and vines were generally ſuch; though there want not, that expound the words metaphorically, for the perſons of note, and name, abiding in thoſe parts. The whole ſentence may well thus be rendred; Thoſe choyce plants of the vine of Sibmah, have the lords of the Nations broken down; for the pronoun is commonly in ſuch conſtructions, ſuperfluous, ſave that the uſe of that language, as a kind of elegancy, admitteth it. So Gen.2.17. Chap.8.13. & 45.9.

they are come even unto Jazer] Or, which reached (Heb. touched: as Ier.48.32. & 51.9. Mic. 1.9.) even unto Jazer: a defect of the relative; as Gen.39.4. Exod.15.8. Chap. 42.5. This Some underſtand of the men led away into captivity, and of the wealth of the country, carried away out of the land by the enemy, Chap.15.7. Others rather, of the large extent of the vines, and vineyards growing in thoſe parts, reaching for many miles along, even unto Jazer, a Town ſituate in the confines of Moab, deemed to be that, belonging to the Tribe of Dan, whereof mention is made, Joſh. 21. 39.

they wandred through the wilderneſs] Or, that, (as before) or and, (as Chap. 14.5,6.) wandred, (that is, winded to and fro; as in wandring to and fro, men are wont to do, until they reached) to the wilderneſs; to wit, of Moab, Deut. 2. 8. ver. 1. A defect of the particle, from the former branch to be ſupplyed.

her branches were ſtretched out] Or, ſpread abroad. So is the verb uſed, Num.11.32. Judg. 15. 9. 1 Sam. 30. 16. 2 Sam. 5.18,22. Some render it, pluckt up: or pluckt off, and diſſipated, broken off, and ſcattered here and there: alledging, Chap. 33. 23. to that purpoſe: whereof ſee there. But from the ſignification of ſpreading, or ſtretching out comes the word, uſed by Jeremy, in this argument, Jer. 48. 32. and anſwering that other word, uſed by the Prophet here, and no where elſe in Scripture found, for branches, ſo tearmed, from ſhooting out here, as from ſpreading out, there. See Ezek.17.6,7.

they are gone over the ſea] That is, carryed away beyond ſee. So moſt Interpreters; ſuppoſing the meaning to be, that all the Moabites wealth (which conſiſted moſt, ſay ſome of them, in their vines, and their wines, whereof they had great plenty) was carrried away out of their country; together with a great part of their people, into a land, far remote from theirs. See Chap.15.7. But the words may well, and (as I ſuppoſe, with Some other) might better, be rendred; they paſſed over to the Sea, (as Chap.8.8. & 10.28. Ier. 2. 10.) that is, to the dead Sea, the lake of Sodome; whereon Moab bordered. See Chap.15.5. or, the Sea of Jazer; as it is Ier. 48. 32. which Some make divers from this. See further hereof, on Jeremy. For they may well be deemed to ſhoot wide, who, by the Sea, would have here underſtood, either the Aſſyrian river; or the Mediterranean-Sea. Mean while, I incline to the latter interpretation of this paſſage; to wit, that not a far deportation of mens perſons, or of their goods, and chattels; but a large propagation, and extenſion of branches, ſeems here to be delineated. See the very like to this, Pſal. 80. 9-12. and the very ſame; but contracted with this, Ier.48.32. both relating the former flouriſhing condition of the places there mentioned, to move unto commiſeration, and to make the lamentation, for their preſent deſolation, the more grievous.

V. 9. Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer, the vine of Sibmah] Of this ſee Chap.15.5. and ver. 11. Among thoſe that thus read and render the words, there is ſome doubt moved, what the weeping of Jazer ſhould be. And ſome of them would hence gather, that Jazer was ſacked, and ruined, before either Sibmah, or the reſt, hereafter mentioned. And ſo the meaning ſhould be, that he would lament the deſtruction of theſe latter, in the ſame manner, as that other had been lamented before. But the words are, by others, diverſly rendred. Some read them, I will bewail the weeping of Jazer: the weeping (ſupplyed out, of the former branch) Of the vine of Sibmah: That is, I will bewail the miſeries of them both; or, I will bewail them, as their inhabitants did, when either of them were deſtroyed. And ſome again, I will bewail the weeping (that is, the calamity) of Iazer, and the vine of Sibmah. But theſe take no notice of the particle, which in theſe forms hath his peculiar ſenſe, and ought not to be diſregarded. The words therefore, to avoid all ambiguity, would be thus rendred; I will with weeping bewail (that is, very grievouſly bewail: as Chap.15.5.) Iazer, and the vine of Sibmah. And this reading the points in the text confirm, which ſtay the voyce at, weeping: (for the article anſwering our the, is not here.) Of the defect of the copulative, ſee Chap. 15.1, 2. and both of it, the places mentioned, and the occaſion of mourning for them, ſee ver.8. See alſo further hereof, on Ier. 48.32.

I will water thee with my tears, O Heſhbon, and Elealeh] I will pour down ſtreams of tears upon thee; as the Pſalmiſt, I water my couch with my tears, Pſ.6.6. See alſo Pſ.119.136. Jer.9. 1. And there may be ſome alluſion herein, to the famous fiſh-pools at Heſhbon, mentioned, Cant.7.4. as if he ſhould ſay, ſhe ſhould not want his tears to water her, though ſhe had water otherwiſe in abundance. Both of it, and of Elealeh, which it ſeems ſtood not far from it, See on Chap.15.4.

for the ſhouting for thy ſummer-fruits, and for thy harveſt is fallen] Or, over thy ſummer-fruits, and over thy harveſt. Such ſinging and ſhouting, as thoſe were wont to uſe, that did reap their corn in harveſt, or did cut, and tread their grapes at vintage; either to paſs the time with, while they were in work, or to encourage one another unto work, ver. 10. Jer. 25.30. Or the ſhoutings, and acclamations, that in mirth and ſport they uſed to make, at the bringing in, and houſing of their corn, and fruits, their harveſt and vintage, Chap. 9. 3. ſhall fail and ceaſe; none ſuch ſhall be, becauſe no vintage, no harveſt, no reaping, no cutting, no bringing in, or houſing of ought; the enemy having ſpoiled, and made havock of all, Chap. 15. 6. ver. 10. Howbeit, ſome underſtand it of the enemies ſhout, and that way moſt of the Jewiſh writers go, rendring the words, Becauſe upon thy ſummer-fruits, and upon thine harveſt is a ſhout, or an alarme fallen: that is, becauſe the enemy with a ſhout, ſuch as is commonly uſed for encouragement, in joyning of fight in the field; or in way of jollity and triumph, at the ſurprizal of ſome place, hath ſuddenly fallen in upon thy fields and vineyards, to make ſpoil, and havock of whatſoever is found in them. So is the word uſed, Jer.51.14. See Jer.48.32. where inſtead of the ſhout, it is ſaid, The ſpoyler is fallen upon thy ſummer-fruits, and thy harveſt: which confirms the latter ſenſe. And Amos 2. 2. ſummer-fruits] Heb. ſummer, Gen. 8. 22. So 2 Sam. 16. 1. as harveſt, for crop: and ſo Chap. 17. 11.

V. 10. And gladneſs is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field] Heb. And joy and gladneſs is gathered up out of the Carmel. That joy and mirth, that in harveſt-time they had wont to have upon the return of a plentiful crop, after their fore-going labours, and pains taken in tilling their grounds, Pſal. 4. 7. & 125. 5, 6. Chap. 9. 3. & 24. 8. See Jer. 48. 33.

is taken away] Heb. is gathered up, or, gathered in, Chap. 11. 12. & 10. 14. & 17. 5. & 62. 9. But the word ſignifies alſo, taken away, Jer. 8. 13. & 10. 17. & 16. 5. And it ſeems here uſed, with ſome glance, at the gathering of their harveſt, and the mirth then expected; as if he had ſaid, Your harveſt, and your harveſt-mirth, is all gathered in, before hand, for you. It is all gone, ere you can come to gather it your ſelves. See Chap. 57. 1.

and in the vineyards, there ſhall be no ſinging, neither ſhall there be ſhouting] Or, in the vineyard, ſhall be neither ſinging, nor ſhouting. No merry note, nor joyful noiſe, (for ſuch the words, here uſed, import, Chap. 12. 6. Ezr. 3. 11.) the matter, and occaſion thereof, being gone.

the treaders ſhall tread out no wine in their preſſes] Heb. treader; (but collectively put for treaders; as Chap. 63. 2.) and the preſſes; to wit, of the Moabites. They trode out, as at this day, their grapes, not in ſuch preſſes, as we uſe now for Sider and Verjuice, with weights, and ſcrues; but in open veſſels, or fats, with their feet, Judg. 9. 27. Neh. 13. 15. and the treaders (Job 24. 11.) uſed to chant merrily, as they trod, when they taſted the ſweet liquor, Jer. 25. 30. and 48. 33.

I have made their vintage ſhouting to ceaſe] Heb. the ſhout. I have ſtilled their merry ſhout, partly, by taking away the ground and cauſe of it; and partly, by ſending in upon them a ſad ſhout, in the room of it. See Jer. 48. 33. Howbeit, ſome Interpreters of note, underſtand this, as ſpoken in the perſon of the Moabites, forbidding any ſuch ſhout to be uſed, which they could not endure to hear. But this ſeems not ſo conſonant to the parallel place in Jeremy, before cited, where it is conceived, as ſpoken by God. See Jer. 48. 33, 35.

V. 11. Wherefore my bowels ſhall ſound like an harp for Moab] Out of tender pitty and compaſſion to Moab, whoſe miſeries are ſo great and grievous, that they well move an utter enemy to commiſerate his condition; I will make doleful lamentation, ſuch as is wont to be made with mournful kinds of muſick over the dead laid out, and at burials, Jer. 9. 17.--20. Matth. 9. 23. Or, my bowels, upon the very apprehenſion of it, as rolling together, rumble, and make a noiſe within me, as the ſtrings of an harp ſound, when they are ſtruck with the finger of him that playeth on it. So Chap. 63. 15. Lam. 1. 20. Hoſ. 11. 8. See Chap. 15. 5. ver. 9.

and my inward parts] Heb. the midſt of me. That is, my heart, Pſal. 22. 14. & 62. 4. My heart is troubled for him. His miſery, and calamity goeth to the very heart, with me; and makes my heart beat within me, Pſal. 38. 11. Jer. 4. 19. Lam. 1. 20.

for Kirhareſh] See Chap. 15. 1. ver. 7. All this would ſome have ſpoken in the perſon, not of the Prophet himſelf, but of the Moabites, whoſe confidence was moſt, of any place, in Kirheres, which they ſaw now, with all the country about it, waſted, and ruined. But the collation of this paſſage, with Jer. 48. 36. ſeems to infer the contrary.

V. 12. And it ſhall come to paſs when it is ſeen, that Moab is weary on the high place, that he ſhall come to his Sanctuary to pray] Or, it ſhall come to paſs, (Heb. it ſhall be; as Chap. 14. 3.) or, it ſhall come to paſs, that (as Chap. 10. 20.) though (as Chap. 1. 15. Moab preſent himſelf, (Heb. be ſeen; as Chap. 1. 12.) though he tire himſelf on his high place, and come to his Sanctuary to pray. The courſes are here deſcribed, that Moab ſhould, or might in this his diſtreſs take, to get relief and ſuccour, againſt the enemy invading him, by repairing to his high places, and idol-temples, and tiring himſelf out in his ſuperſtitious ſervices; and all to no purpoſe.

Moab] Either the Prince thereof, or the people, Chap. 15. 2.

is weary] Or, tire himſelf; as Chap. 47. 13. Either with running to and fro, from place to place; or by multitudes of ſacrifices offered one after another, as he did when he deſired to have Gods people curſed, Numb. 22. 39, 40, 41. & 23. 2, 14, 27, 30.

on the high place] Put collectively for high places. Or, ſome place peculiarly ſo tearmed; as Ezek. 20. 29. See Chap. 15. 2.

his Sanctuary] Abuſively ſo tearmed. The temple of his chief idol Chemoſh, 1 King. 11. 7. Jer. 48. 46. which was to that idolatrous nation, as the tabernacle and temple were to Gods people, Exod. 25. 8. 2 Chr. 20. 8. Pſal. 78. 69.

but he ſhall not prevail] Heb. and; as Chap. 13. 18. Or, that; (as Chap. 13. 2.) or, yet; as Chap. 17. 6. He ſhall not prevail. Heb. He ſhall not be able. But ſo the word is uſed, Numb. 22. 6, 11. Hoſ. 12, 4. His god ſhall not be able to do him any good. Though we need not, as ſome, inſert that into the text. For the Pronoun here hath reference to Moab, before expreſly named, not to his idol, not mentioned. See Chap. 46. 7. Jer. 48. 13. As for that, which ſome would have here intended; that he ſhould not be able to reach thither, the enemy either intercepting him, or having already ſurprized the place where his idol-temple ſtood, ſeems not ſo well to accord with the reſt of the context, whether of the two waies, before propounded, we read it.

V. 13. This is the word that the Lord hath ſpoken concerning Moab, ſince that time] The concluſion of this ſad Sermon, or Prophecy, againſt Moab. Not unlike that, wherewith the burthen of Babel is concluded and conſigned, Chap. 14. 26. intimating this doom, concerning the utter deſtruction of Moab, to be a doom irrecoverable, paſſed, formerly, with God, and revealed to the Prophet: for the ſtronger confirmation whereof, there is ſomewhat further now added, verſ. 14.

This] That which I have delivered concerning the land, and State of Moab, hitherto related. See the like cloſe, Jer. 48. 47.

the word] The doom, or ſentence; as 2 King. 9. 36. Jeremy renders it, judgement.

concerning Moab] Or, againſt Moab. Heb. unto; as Jer. 48. 1. & 49. 1.

ſince that time] Heb. from then. Or, ſince then; as Pſal. 93. 2. Prov. 8. 23. Chap. 44. 8. & 48. 3, 5. Now by this form of ſpeech, here, ſome conceive no certain time to be underſtood; and therefore render it, before time heretofore: of old; or, from eternity. And ſo in ſome of the places pointed to, it ſeems to be taken. Others ſuppoſe, that ſome certain time is thereby deſigned. Some the time preſent, and render it, from this time; as alſo the firſt words of the next verſe, even now; as an expoſition of this clauſe. But moſt, ſome time paſt: (as indeed, the conſtant and general uſe of the phraſe, requires it) either the time when Balaak hired Balaam to curſe Iſrael, Num. 22. 5, 6. Or, the time when God enacted that law againſt the Moabites, inhibiting the receit of them into communion with his people, Deut. 23. 3, 4. Or, when being ſubdued by David, they became tributary to the Crown of Iſrael, 2 Sam. 8. 2. or ſince their revolt from it, 2 King. 3. 4, 5. or, when their deſtruction was fore-told by Amos, in the reign of Uzziah, Amos, 1, 1. & 2. 1--3. or laſtly, from the time that this judgement, paſt upon Moab, was firſt revealed to the Prophet; that which followeth, verſ. 14. being afterward added thereunto. The like whereunto, See Jer. 36. 32. And of all theſe, the laſt ſeems to me the moſt likely to be intended; though the words would be rendred, as they ſound, indefinitely, heretofore, or, ſometime ſince, without reſtriction, or limitation.

V. 14. But now the Lord hath ſpoken, ſaying] The Lord hath now added ſomewhat further, to what he had formerly denounced againſt Moab; to wit, concerning a fore-going judgement to be ſhortly inflicted upon him, before, and beſides that utter derſtruction, before mentioned; together with the time prefixed, and limited, for the execution of the ſame.

within three years] About theſe three years, there is much diſſention among Interpreters. Some would have the words read, not within three years; but in, or, for three years. Expounding them, not, as ſetting a time, at which this miſery of Moab ſhould begin, or from whence it ſhould commence; but importing onely, whenſoever it began, how long it ſhould continue. That it ſhould not laſt long, as Babels, before, Chap. 13. 19--22. it ſhould not exceed a three years term. But this interpretation, hath but few followers: and other places, parallel to this, as Chap. 7. 8. & 21. 16. (though a little difference there be in the particles uſed there, and here) carry it, rather, the other way, to wit, as deſigning a certain time, when this calamity ſhould befal Moab. But among thoſe alſo, that go this way, there is no ſmall difference about the time therein deſigned. For ſome would have theſe three years, to commence from the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 King. 25. 4--10. Their reaſons are theſe: Firſt, Eſay and Jeremy, propheſie of one and the ſame deſtruction of Moab; for Jeremy uſeth many words and ſentences, the very ſame with Eſay. Secondly, Jeremy ſaith that Moab had not been ſtirred to any purpoſe, nor captived till then, Jer. 48. 11. Thirdly, Joſephus relateth, in his Antiquities, lib. 10. cap. 11. That three year after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Nebuchadnezzar invaded the Moabites. But to this it may be anſwered; Firſt, That though Eſay, and Jeremy, uſe many the ſame terms, and that of the devaſtation of one and the ſame land; yet it followeth not neceſſarily thence,that they ſpeak of the ſame time; yea, or the ſame particular deſtruction: In the Book of the Revelations are many forms and expreſſions borrowed from the writings of the ancient Prophets, yet applyed unto the ſtories of other times, then thoſe whereof thoſe former Prophets ſpake. Secondly, It appears that Moab had been diſpoſſeſſed of much of his land; not onely before the times that Jeremy points at; but long before the times that Eſay lived in: See Num.21.26–30. Jeremies words imply onely, that he had been long at reſt, before the overthrow then denounced; nor had endured,and undergon ſuch a general deportation, as either the ten tribes, or the other two of Gods people had done. Thirdly, Joſephus ſaith not, that three year, but that five year, after the fall of Jeruſalem, Nebuchadnezzar invaded Cœloſyria, and after that ſubdued, ſet upon the Moabites, and Ammonites, and made a conqueſt alſo of them. And laſtly, (though it were granted, as I ſuppoſe it well may be) that the fore-going prophecy of Moabs utter devaſtation, was by Nebuchadnezzar to be accompliſhed; yet could it not be neceſſarily thence inferred, that the three years, here mentioned, might not commence from a neerer tearm,then the times of Nebuchadnezzar. There is no neceſſity therefore of drawing the period of theſe three years, ſo low: nor is there ought to countenance ſuch a vaſt divulſion of them, from the time of the delivery of this prophecy. Whereunto other,with better ground of reaſon,reduce them; though they alſo are at much diſagreement among themſelves. For ſome would have them to commence from the firſt year of Ezekiah; ſuppoſing this prophecy to be of the ſame date, with the next before it, denounced againſt the Philiſtims, Chap. 14. 28. and that Salmaneſer in the fourth year of Ezekiah,when he came to beſiege Samaria,2 King. 18. 9. took the Moabites land in his way. But this ſeems not ſo well to ſort with the advice given to Moab, by the Prophet,for the prevention of this judgement; to ſuccour, and harbour Gods people driven out of their country, ver. 3,4. there being no occaſion given, of ſhewing any ſuch kinde office to Gods people, during the three, or four firſt years of Ezekiah's reign. Others therefore, drawing down theſe years a little lower, ſuppoſe this Prophecy delivered in the fourth year of Ezekiah, what time Salmaneſer ſate down before Samaria, which having taken, after three years ſiege, 2 King. 18.9,10. he then fell, as they ſuppoſe,upon the Moabites. And this might carry with it a little more probability, then the former; becauſe many, out of the ten tribes, might ſeek relief and ſhelter among the Moabites, in that Aſſyrian invaſion. But it is deemed rather, that they were of the Jewiſh people more peculiarly ſo tearmed: in the behalf of whom, thoſe offices are required by the Prophet. Others therefore,go yet lower. Some fixing the date of this Prophecy,much about the eleventh year of Ezekiah's reign,in whoſe fourteenth, Sennacherib came up againſt Judah, 2 King. 18. 13. and withal executed on Moab, what was here denounced againſt it. So, the three years ſhould come about, juſt together, with Sennacheribs invaſion of Judah. But this opinion labouring of the ſame difficulty with the former; ſome to ſalve it, make them to commence from Sennacheribs ſiege of Jeruſalem, three year after which, they imagine that Sennacherib invaded Moab; deſervedly ſpoiled and plundered, through Gods juſt judgement by him,for their harſh and unkinde carriage toward his people, that had ſought ſhelter among them, when their own country had been not long before over-run by him. And this indeed might well ſuit with that,which was from that paſſage of this Prophecy,objected againſt the former. But there is another difficulty ariſeth here, inſtead of that hereby removed. For Sennacherib,by that blow given him, while he was minding, and attempting the ſiege, rather, then beſieging, as yet, of Jeruſalem, was ſo weakened and diſheartned, that there is little probability, that ever he attempted ought that way again; eſpecially being ſo ſoon after it, cut off by the hands of his own ſons, Chap. 37. 37, 38. Amidſt theſe diſſenting opinions ,concerning this place, I ſhall crave leave to deliver my conjecture,concurring much with the laſt; but ſuppoſing the judgement, here denounced againſt Moab, which theſe three years relate unto,to have been executed, neither by Nebuchadnezzar, (albeit, the utter devaſtation of Moab, before denounced, were by him to be effected) nor by Salmaneſer, nor by Sennacherib; but by his ſon and ſucceſſour,Eſar-haddon: who after his fathers deceaſe, having recovered ſome ſtrength, it is not unlikely, but that he might again make towards thoſe parts, and invade ſome of the neighbouring States, and Moab, in particular; expecting ſome opportunity to be dealing with Judah,in revenge of his fathers quarrel. Which albeit, warned by his fathers defeat, he durſt not attempt,during the reign of Ezekiah; yet after his deceaſe, in Manaſſes his ſucceſſors reign, he did; when alſo,the better to clear his way thereunto, he ſwept away the remainders of Iſrael and Samaria; as was before ſhewed,on Chap.7.8. from Ezr.4.2. I conceive therefore this prophecy, to have been delivered about the fourteenth, or fifteenth year of Ezekiah; and that, in particular, which is in this laſt verſe denounced, to have taken effect,about the eighteenth, or nineteenth year of his reign,being put in execution,by the Aſſyrian king Eſarhaddon. To expreſs my minde herein,more fully: I ſuppoſe that the utter deſtruction of Moab, here before denounced, and by Jeremy, long after ſeconded, to have been executed by Nebuchadnezzar. But, as the Lord uſeth ſometime to give aſſurance of the complement of ſome prophecies, of longer date, by ſome other prediction of a neerer tearm; (whereof ſee Chap. 7.8,16. & 8. 4. & 14.25. Jer. 28. 16,17.) in like manner he ſeems to me, here to have done. For having, in the fore-going prophecy, threatened the utter ruin of the Moabitiſh-State, which was many years after to be effected; he doth here,to give the ſtronger aſſurance of the complement of the ſame, fore-tel, that within three years after the promulgation of this prophecy,the State of Moab,by the Aſſyrian king, Eſar-haddon, ſhould exceedingly be impoveriſhed, and empaired. That which being then effected, though at preſent, it may be, little expected, might help to confirm the truth of the former denunciation, though not ſo ſpeedily to take effect.

as the years of an hireling] That is, three years preciſely. Becauſe hired ſervants are wont to keep a preciſe account of the time and tearm of years,for which they are hired; the expiration whereof,alſo, they are wont earneſtly to expect, Job 7. 1,2. and 14. 5. So Chap. 21. 16. For, as for that which the Jewiſh writers, and ſome others, would from this place, compared with Deut. 15. 18. Collect, that the Jews, either might not,or uſed not to hire any for above three year; neither doth that place of Moſes, neceſſarily, prove any ſuch matter; and that the phraſe,here uſed, implyes nothing leſs, may hereby appear, in that it is there alſo uſed, where mention is made onely of one year, Chap. 21. 16. See further there.

and the glory of Moab ſhall be contemned] Or, it ſhall come to paſs, that (as Chap. 14. 3, 4.) the glory of Moab ſhall become mean, of light eſteem, or, of no repute; as 1 Sam. 18. 23. oppoſed to honourable, Chap. 3.5. and there is in the words an elegant notion, though ſuch, as cannot ſo well be expreſſed in our language; for the word glory, in Hebrew, hath an intimation of weight in it: alluded to, by the Apoſtle, when he ſaith, a weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4. 18. and the latter word of contempt, hath affinity with that, which ſignifies, lightneſs, 1 Sam. 18. 26. Chap. 49. 6. And they are both uſed promiſcuouſly, Num. 21. 6. Job 40.4. Nah.1.14. So that it is, as if he had ſaid, the great weight, that Moab now beareth, ſhall then become light. He that weighs down ſo much now, ſhall then bear no weight, but flye up in the ballance. For the metaphor is taken from moneys, or wares, brought to the beam to be weighed; as in payment,and ſale, they uſed to be. See Jer. 32. 9. Hoſ. 12.7. So Pſal. 62. 9. Dan. 5. 27. The like elegancy is found, 1 Sam. 2. 30. And not unlike it, is that which Luke hath, where he ſaith of the Apoſtles, that they went from the conſiſtory, where they had been ill entreated, rejoycing that they had been ſo much honoured, or, graced; as to be diſhonoured, or, diſgraced for Chriſt, Act. 5. 41. for ſo the words there run.

with all that great multitude] Or, with all that multitude, (whereof he now ſo much gloryeth; and wherein he ſo much prides himſelf, ver. 6. the glory of a State conſiſting in the multitude of people, Prov.14.28.) that is great, or, that is now ſo great. For ſo the article redoubled ought to be, and is ſometime, rendred: as Chap. 15. 16. which not obſerved, leſſeneth the emphaſis of it. See 2 Chr.20.12,15. See Jer. 32.18. A late Writer rendreth it, with all his much aboundance, or, great wealth, or, his glory conſiſting in the great abundance of his wealth. See Chap. 5. 13,14.

and the remnant] Or, ſo that the remnant (as Chap.10.19.) that ſhall be left of that multitude before ſo great. See Chap. 10.22.

ſhall be very ſmall] Heb. little ſmall. The notion redoubled, though in two different terms; to intimate,the great paucity that ſhould be left of them. So Chap. 10. 25. See Chap.24.6.

and feeble] Heb. not many: as the margent hath it: or, as others, not mighty. See Chap.10.13. few in regard of what they had been; the copulative is wanting: as Chap.14.5. & 15.1. The meaning is, that Moab ſhould be brought very low; and his main multitude much diminiſhed.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of Damaſcus] Another heavy, and ſad Sermon, or Prophecy, called therefore a burden (of which term, ſee Chap.13.1.) is in the former part of this Chapter (for the three laſt verſes are of a diverſe ſubject) ject) related, concerning Damaſcus, the head-city of the Syrians, Chap.7.8. who had been from time to time ſore enemies to, and grievous vexers of Gods people, on whoſe country they bordered Eaſt-ward, 2 King.13.17. See Judg.3.8. 2 Sam.8.3,5. 1 King.11.24,25. & 15.20. & 20.1. 2 King. 6. 24,25. & 8.12,13. & 12.17,18. & 13.22. & 15.37. & 16.5. & 24.2. Chap.7.1,5,6. & 9.12. The like burdenſome Prophecies againſt Damaſcus, ſee Chap. 49.23. Amos 1. 2. Zach. 9. 1.

Damaſcus] Heb. Dammeſek, Gen. 14. 15. and ſometime alſo, Darmeſek, 1 Chr.18.5. (as Nebuchadretſar, for Nebuchadnetſar, Jer.21.2.) and ſo the Syrian calls it, Darmeſuk, Act.9.2. Some of the Jewiſh Doctors would have it ſo called, becauſe Abel was there ſlain, and the ground there drank in his blood, Gen.4.11. Others, becauſe Adam was there made out of the earth, the mould thereabout, being of a ruddy kind of clay, apt to be moulded into any ſhape, ſuch as his body was framed of, Gen.2.7. Others would have it ſo named, as a ſack, or bag of blood, from the abundance of rich wine, that the country thereabout yeelded, called the blood of the grape, Gen.49.11. Deut.32.14. Whence the heathen alſo feigned, that their drunken God lay hid there, ſometime, in a bottle. But theſe are meer fictions, and fables. It is moſt likely, that the city had its name from the firſt founder of it: yet not Eleazar Abrahams ſervant, as ſome have ſuppoſed; who is ſaid to have been of Damaſcus, Gen.15.2. as deſcended from parents, inhabitants of that city; and in all likelihood born, not in Abrahams houſe, but there: Beſide, that the city had been built, and bare that name before that time, though how long, uncertain, as appears by the ſtory of Abrahams purſuit of thoſe Kings, that came againſt Sodome, Gen.14.15. Being the chief city of Syria, it is put here for the whole country, ver. 3. as Samaria, for the land of the ten tribes, 1 King. 13. 32.

Behold] This note of attention, and conſideration, is prefixed, partly to intimate the improbability of that which he was to deliver, concerning the ruine of Damaſcus, in the conceit of thoſe, that apprehended the Syrian principality, as a State, not like ſuddenly, or eaſily to be conquered, and that city, as an impregnable peece; and partly, to give aſſurance of the certain accompliſhment thereof, whatſoever conceits men might have, either of the impoſſibility, or improbability of it. See Chap.. 3.1. & 7.14.

Damaſcus is taken away] This was effected, partly by Tiglath-Pileſer, who took it, and ſacked it, 2 King.16.9. but more fully afterward, as Some ſuppoſe, by Salmaneſer, after he had taken Samaria; as others by Nebuchadnezzar, after the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Ier.49.23.

from being a city] Heb. from a city: as 1 Sam.15.22. from a King; for, from being a King: and Jer.48.2. from a Nation, that is, from being a nation. It is ſo ruined, that it ſhall be no longer a city.

and it ſhall be a ruinous heap] Or, but (as Chap. 16.12.) it is become (for the Prophet ſpeaks in the prophetical ſtrain, as of a thing already done: So Chap. 15.1.) Heb. an heap of ruine. See the like, Pſal.79.1. Chap.25.2. & 37. 26. Ier. 26. 17. Mic.1.6. & 3.12. There is in the original, an elegancy in the terms of city, and heap, the latter wanting but one letter of the former; and the Prophet uſing a word here, not elſe-where found in that form, to bring it up home to the former word, with the particle prefixed to it.

V. 2. The cities of Aroer are forſaken] The cities ſituate in that whole tract, beyond Jordan, along by the brink, or neer to the banks of Arnon, Deut.2.36. & 3.12. the ancient poſſeſſion of the Amorites, Joſh. 12.2. but held afterward by the Reubenites, and Gadites, Num.32.34. Joſh.13.8,9. and recovered from them again, by neighbouring people, the Moabites one while, by the Ammonites another, Judg. 11. 26,33. and the Syrians another while, 2 King.10.33.& 14.22. & 16. 6. Ier.48.19. Now hence ſome of the Rabbines would gather three Aroers, one belonging to the Moabites, Joſh.13.16. Ier.48 6,20. another belonging to the Ammonites, Joſh.13. 25. a third in Syria, here mentioned: but ſome others, to take that conceit away, ſay rather and better, that Aroer coaſting along upon the river Arnon, lay on the confines of Moab and Arnon; and was held ſometime by the one, and ſometime by the other; and at this time by the Syrians: and after by the Aſſyrians; as in the next note. For as for that Jewiſh Doctor, that would by Aroer, have Damaſcus it ſelf here meant, ſo called, becauſe it was to be as Arar, Jer.17.5. or as Aroer, Ier.48.6. in the wilderneſſe; Of which term, ſee on thoſe places; it is by the generality of them juſtly rejected.

forſaken] The Inhabitants of them (whether Syrians, or Iſraelites, who were in confederacy with them) being expelled, and carried away captive by Tiglath-Pileſer, the king of Aſſyria, 1 Chr,5.8,26. See Chap.16.12.

and ſhall be for flocks] The Hebrew word comprehends as well herds of greater cattle, as flocks of leſs: as appeareth, Gen.32,15-17. cattle ſhall graze freely, where Towns, and Cities before ſtood, Chap.32.14. Zeph.2.14.

which ſhall lye down] Heb. and they ſhall lye down: as Chap. 4.6.

and none ſhall make them afraid] Heb. none ſhall be frighting. They ſhall reſt quietly there, the country being ſo depopulated, that there ſhall be none to diſturbe them, or chaſe them away: A defect of the pronoun, in ſuch ſpeeches frequent, Levit.26.6. Deut.28.26. Job 11.19. Ier. 7. 33. & 30. 10. & 46.27. Ezek.34.28. & 39.26. Mic.4.4. Nah.2.12. Zeph. 3. 13.

V. 3. The fortreſs alſo, ſhall ceaſe from Ephraim] That is, from the ten Tribes. See Chap.7.2. Their fortreſſes (for the word is collective; as Amos 5.9.) ſhall not be able to hold out againſt the enemy; but they ſhall be ſurprized, ſlighted, and diſmantled by him. Heb. they ſhall have their ſabbath, or time of ceſſation, and reſt: as Levit.26.43. Now the ten tribes are here mentioned, and threatned together with the Syrians, Ephraim and Damaſcus together; not ſo much, as ſome Interpreters would have it, either to give the Syrians to underſtand, that if God ſpared not his own people, he would much leſs ſpare them: as Jer.25.29. or becauſe that Samaria was firſt to be deſtroyed by Salmaneſer; and thereby the Syrians might know what ſhould in the next place betide them; but becauſe they were linkt together in a joynt confederacy againſt Judah; and the ruine of them both, therefore, by the King of Aſſyria, is, as in ſome former Prophecies, ſo here again joyntly foretold. See Chap. 7. 1,2,5,6,8,9,16. & 8.4. as alſo 2 King.15.29. & 16.5,9. The time therefore of this Prophecy ſeems miſtaken by thoſe, who ſuppoſe it to have been delivered after the death of Ahaz, about the ſecond, or third year of the reign of Ezekiah: as if that date of the Prophecy againſt the Philiſtines, Chap.14.28. did relate, not to that alone, but to the other alſo enſuing Sermons: or, that thoſe, that follow it, in the book here, upon record, muſt of neceſſity follow it, in courſe of time alſo. See Chap. 1. 1,2. and the Kingdome from Damaſcus] Damaſcus ſhall no longer be a royal city; nor Syria a Kingdome; but a Province. So Ezek.30.18. & 33.28.

and the remnant of Syria] Heb. Aram. So Chap.7.1. either, and from the remnant of Syria; as intimating, that ſuch of them, as remained, ſhould have no royal power left among them, their King being ſlain, and none to ſucceed in his ſtead, 2 King.6.9. or, the ſentence being continued, and this branch joyned (as it may well) to that which followeth.

the remnant of Syria, they ſhall be as the glory of the children of Iſrael] Or, ſhall be, without, they; which in the text is not expreſſed. The meaning is, that the Syrians, and Iſraelites, the joynt enemies of Gods people, ſhould both of them, be alike brought low, and ſtript of their former ſtate and dignity, Chap. 7.16. & 8.4.

ſaith the Lord of hoſts] As Chap.3.15. & 5.9. the Prophets uſual cloſe, to aſſure the effect of the word delivered, Chap. 14.24.

V. 4. And in that day it ſhall come to paſs, that] Or, For (as Chap.16.2.) in that day, &c. as Chap.7.11. For the Prophet ſeems in theſe words, to render a reaſon of what he had ſaid, ver.3. that the State of Syria, ſhould be as the glory of Iſrael, to wit, becauſe they ſhould both be exceedingly impaired; and that much about the ſame time.

the glory of Jacob ſhall be made thin] Or, exhauſt. See chap. 10.2. the word is uſed of rivers, when their waters are ſpent, either drawn off, or drained from them, Job 28.4. Chap. 19. 6. or, of the bodies of man, or beaſt, when their moiſture, fleſh, or fat, is ſo waſted, that they are grown thin withal, and are nothing but skin, and bone, Gen.41.19. 2 Sam.13.4. their might, and multitude, wherein they gloried, ſhould be much diminiſhed, and abated. So Judg.6.6.

Jacob] As Iſrael, ver. 3.

and the fatneſs of his fleſh ſhall wax lean] The like metaphor, ſee Chap.10.16,18.

V. 5. And it ſhall be, as when the harveſt-man gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm] Or, And he (that is, Jacob, ver.4. or, Iſrael, ver.3. the ten tribes) ſhall be. It ſhall be ſo with him. See the like manner of ſyntax, Chap. 29.7, 8. Matth.25.14. They ſhall be cut down, and carried away captive, the main body of them, ſome few only left, as the corn is cut down, and carried away out of the field, where it grew, by the harveſt-workmen, that leave only ſome few gleanings behind them, Levit.19.9. Deut.24.19. they being no more able to ſtand before the enemy, then the corn before the reapers, Rev.14.15,16.

the harveſt man] Heb. harveſt, for, man of harveſt; as prey for, a man of prey, Prov.23,28. and, peace, for, a man of peace Pſal.120.7.

gathereth] See ch.16.10. Deut.16.13.

corn] The word properly ſignifies ſtanding corn, Deut. 23. 25,26.

25,26. Judg.15.5. but there is in it, an ellipſis, of the ſubſtantive; ſtanding, for, ſtanding corn: as parched, for, parched pulſe, 2 Sam.17.28. full; for, a full cup, Pſal.73.10. ſure; for, a ſure covenant, Neh.9.38. ſtrong; for, a ſtrong hand, Chap.40.10. fruitful; for, a fruitful vine, Gen. 49.22. or, olive tree, ver.6. See ch.5.2.

reapeth the ears with his arm] A defect of the inſtrumental particle: as Pſal.17.13,14. or, his arm reapeth the ears, Gen.41. 7,8,23,24. Ruth 2.2.

and it ſhall be, as he that gathereth ears] Or, picketh up ears. The former word is uſed of harveſt-workmen, that reap, and gather by armfulls, or lapfulls, Pſal.129.7. this of gleaners, that pick up ear, after ear, Levit.19.9,10. Deut.23.22. Ruth, 2.2,3,15-18. See Chap.27.12. Hereby is implyed, that there ſhould not only be a ſweeping away of a great part of them together; but a ſecond gleaning of them alſo, as is ſaid of the Benjamites, Judg.20.45. See the like, Chap. 6. 13. That which was effected firſt by Tiglath-Pileſer, 2 King.15.29. then by Salmaneſer, 2 King.17.6. theſe as two harveſt-men: and laſtly, by Eſar-haddon; as one that gleaned after them, Ezr.4.2.

in the valley of Rephaim] A fertile valley, having good ſtore of corn-ground, lying on the Weſt ſide of Jeruſalem, Joſh.15. 8. & 18.16. where it is rendred, the valley of the giants: and the word indeed ſeems ſo to ſignifie, 2 Sam. 23.16,18,22. Deut.3.11,20. But the valley may well be deemed to have had that appellation, from the name of an ancient people called the Rephaites, that inhabited thereabout, Gen.14.5.& 15.20. The Prophet mentioneth it, here, becauſe a place commonly known to the people whom he ſpake to.

V. 6. Yet gleaning grapes ſhall be left in it] Heb. And. as Chap.8.9. or, Yet, a remnant of cluſters ſhall be left in it; becauſe the verb is ſingular, and the noun plural: and the noun is included oft in the verb: as Gen.50.26. with ver.2. The meaning is, that though God ſhould cauſe them, by whole multitudes, at ſeveral times, to be carried away captive by the enemy, and of thoſe that they had left, ſome again, to undergo the like calamity: yet he would not make an utter riddance of them, Jer.30.11. he would deal with them, as he had enjoyned his people to do, in gathering their grapes at vintage, Levit.19.10. Deut.23.20. ſome few cluſters ſhould be left, Chap.65.8. a remnant ſhould ſtill be reſerved for a Church, chap.1.9. & 6. 13. & 7. 3. & 10. 21, 22. for even thoſe alſo that glean, leave ſome behind them, Judg. 20.45, 47. Jer.49.9. Obad.5. See ch.25.13.

as the ſhaking of an olive tree] Heb. according to the ſhaking of an olive tree; or, as in the ſhaking of it. The word ſignifieth properly, not ſo much a ſhaking of the tree, as a ſhaking off, or, ſtriking down of the fruit, by beating of the tree, Deut. 23.20. the law here alluded to, ſee Chap.24.13.

two, or three berries] A defect of the disjunctive; as 2 King. 9.32. Chap.38.14. a very ſmall number, Matth. 18. 20. to wit, are left.

of the uppermoſt bough] So called in the Hebrew here, and ver.9. (for it is no where elſe read) becauſe it is lift up above the reſt, Pſal.94.4. ch.61.6. where-by reaſon of the height, they cannot eaſily be reached.

four, or five] As before, a ſmall number, 2 King.7.13.

in the utmoſt fruitful branches thereof] Heb. in the branches (Chap.27.10. properly, ſide-branches; or, ſpreading-branches, Ezek.31.6,8. See Chap.2.21.) of her fruitful tree: ſuch an one, as hath great ſtore; and where the more, therefore, might well be ſpared, and left; a defect of the ſubſtantive: as Gen. 49.22. See ver.5.

ſaith the Lord God of Iſrael] Jehovah; who both can, and will fulfill what he ſaith, Chap.1.20. & 14.24,27. and the God of Iſrael ſtill, (but not of the Syrians) notwithſtanding theſe heavy judgments inflicted, as well on the one, as on the other. See Deut.3.1--10. Levit.26.44.

V. 7. At that day ſhall a man look to his Maker] The reſidue of Gods people, refined, and reformed, by theſe forementioned calamities, ſhall then, abandoning their idols, repair unto God, ſeek to him, truſt in him, and depend upon him. So chap.10,20,21. Gods end in the chaſtiſing of his, being, not to drive them away from him; but to reclaim them from their wandrings, and to bring them home to him, Chap.19.22. & 27. 9. This was in part fulfilled in the reign of Ezekiah, 2 Chr.30.11. and of Joſiah, 2 Chr.34.33.

that day] As chap.4.1,2.

look to] That is, truſt to, depend upon; as Pſal. 25. 20. & 34. 5. & 121. 1,2. & 123.1,2. & 141.8. Chap. 8. 17. & 45. 22. Becauſe what men truſt to, that they are wont frequently, and wiſtly to look after, and to have their eyes much fixed upon. See the contrary, wherewith Gods people are upbraided, Chap.22,11. & 31. 1.

his maker] Whom therefore he oweth all duty unto, and ought wholly to depend upon, Deut.32. 6. Pſal. 100. 3. and 149.2. Eccl.12.1.

and his eyes ſhall have reſpect to the Holy-One of Iſrael] The ſame notion, in other terms. See Chap.1.4.

V. 8. And he ſhall not look to the Altars] Erected for idol-ſervice, Chap.27.9. Jer.11.13. & 17. 2. Hoſ. 8. 11. Nor to the idols, for the worſhip of whom they were erected, Chap. 30. 22. and were placed therefore near to them, but above them, 2 Chr.34. 4.

either the groves, or the images] Heb. and the groves, and the images; or, both the groves, and the images; as Pſal. 76. 7. But the copulative is here put for the disjunctive; as Exod. 21. 17. Neh.5.8. Theſe two words, rendred groves, and images, we finde divers times joyned together, 2 Chron. 34.4,7. Chap. 27.9. Of the former, whereof is leſs doubt, or difference among the Learned. Yet the word ſeems to be ſometime uſed, not only for a grove, or a company of trees of lower growth, and leſs ſtature, growing thick, and cloſe together, as on a cluſter; of which kinde, they were forbidden to plant any neer to Gods houſe, or his altars, Deut.16.21. But for a model, or curious piece of workmanſhip of gold, or other precious metal, reſembling ſuch a cluſter of trees. For ſome ſuch, in likelyhood, was that grove which Joſiah found in the Temple; but brought forth of it, 2 King. 23. 6. And dealt with it, as Moſes did with the golden-calf, Exod. 32. 20 and Ezekiah with the brazen-ſerpent, 2 King.18.4. Not unlike to the golden vine, and platane, that the Lydian Lord is reported to have preſented Darius with, Herodot. lib. 7. Either of both may be tearmed, the work of mans hand; becauſe, planted by mans induſtry, the one; and framed by mans workmanſhip, the other; whence the phraſe of making groves, here alluded to, 1 King.16.33. 2 King.17.16. & 21. 3. Howbeit, as before, the word altars, ſeemed to be put for the idols, worſhipped at thoſe altars; ſo here the groves, for the idols worſhipped at, or in thoſe groves. But, concerning the latter word, there is no ſmall queſtion: The word is not found, but in the plural, Hammanim, or, Chammanim. And is derived from a Noun, that ſignifies primarily, heat, Pſal. 19. 6. And in the ſecond place, the ſun, (unto whom it is alſo there, by the Pſalmiſt, applyed) ſo called, in regard of his heat, Job 30.28. Cant.6.10. Chap. 24. 22. & 30. 26. The Chaldee paraphraſt renders it, Temples: and ſo alſo doth the Greek, Ezek.6.4,6. And ſome of the Rabbins, on Levit. 26. 30. ſay, that it ſignifies, houſes, or Temples, dedicated to the Sun. But this ſeems not ſo probable, by the collation of other places; whence it may appear, that they were rather ſome kinde of images, then Temples. For of Joſias it is ſaid, that he brake down the altars of the Baalim, and cut down the Hammanim, that were aloft above, or beſide them, 2 Chr.34.4. Others therefore, of the Jewiſh Doctors, do with more probability, conceive them to have been images. And wooden images, ſay ſome of them; as alſo the Greek renders the word, Lev. 26. 30. becauſe there is mention made of cutting them down, 2 Chro. 34.4,7. Ezek.6.6. but that is but a wooden ground. For the word, that is there uſed, is applyed, as well to metal-materials, as to woddden, or treen-fabricks; as to bars of iron, Pſal. 107.16. Chap. 45.2. But the images, ſo tearmed, are by the Jewiſh-writers, generally ſuppoſed to have been images of the Sun; or ſuch, at leaſt, as were erected in honour of him, and whereby to worſhip him; as the heathen moſt of them did, Deut.4.19. & 17.3. 2 King. 23. 5,11. Jer.8.2. & 7.18. & 44.17,18. Ezek.8.16. And Joſeph Ben-Gorion, in his Jewiſh ſtory, tells us, that this Hamman was an image, made like a man of a middle age, with horns on his head, like an Oxe, and a chin, or beard, like a Dog. But other of the Jewiſh-writers ſay, it was a picture made round, to repreſent the Orb of the Sun, like our ſigns of the Sun. And Benjamin the Jew, in his travels, tell us of a Town he met with, inhabited by Cuſhites, neer whereunto were abundance of altars, and images, reſembling the round Orb of the Sun, whom that people worſhipped; which, by magical arts, at the Sun-riſing, when people, men and women, came to burn incenſe to them, ſhined very bright, and made a great noiſe. And I remember to have read in Hero, a Greek-writer, his wind-works; how, by artificial device, an image may be ſo framed, that the Sun ſhining on it, may cauſe it to yield ſome kinde of ſound. But I ſuppoſe this to be but a fiction of that Jewiſh author; whereof he hath not a few. Howbeit, from this Hebrew Hamman, it is not unlikely that the Phenicians had their idol, from whom the Greeks and Latines had their Jupiter-Hammon, or Ammon; of whom they tell many fabulous tales. But Macrobius relateth, Saturnal, lib. 1. cap. 21. that the Lybians worſhipped him, not at the Sun-riſing; (as thoſe Jews, Ezek.8.16. and thoſe other people the Jew ſpeaks of) but at the Sun-ſetting; and repreſented him with the horns, not of an oxe, as the ſon of Gorion, but) of a ram on his head, thereby repreſenting the rays, or beams of the Sun: As both, in Hebrew and Greek, the words of horn, and of glittering light, are of neer affinity, the one with the other. See Exod. 34. 29, 30, 35. (whence the groſs error of painting Moſes with horns) and Hab. 3. 4. It ſeems therefore moſt probable, that theſe Hammanim were images, of what matter, or figure ſoever, made, thereby to adore the Sun. Nor can I therefore readily aſſent to that, which ſome later writers have conceived this tearm to import. The idolaters, ſay they, had divers places for the worſhip of idols, according to the divers ſeaſons of the year, and conditions of the weather; their groves, and ſhady-places, which which they uſed in heat of ſummer; and their ſun-images, ſet in ſun-ſhine places; which they made uſe of in colder weather; ſo called, ſay ſome, becauſe they ſtood in the ſun, and were ſun-burnt. And theſe two ſorts, ſay they, are joyned together, as including all ſorts of idols, and idolatrous ſervices, being reduced to theſe two heads. But for this diſtinction, I finde little ground, either in Scripture, or elſewhere. Groves were commonly uſed, by the ſuperſtitious heathen, for idolatrous employment, in regard of a kinde of awful dread, that ſuch ſhady, and ſolitary places are wont to ſurprize people withal, eſpecially pre-poſſeſſed with a ſuperſtitious conceit of ſome deity dwelling there. Nor were they wont to make uſe of them, more at one time then another: the cloſeneſs of the trees, in them, affording, as well ſhelter, in the winter time, as ſhade in the ſummer. And ſtatuæ ſubdiales, as they render the word, ſignifying images ſet in the open air; having no covert, but what heaven affords, ſeems not ſo well ſeated for winter ſervice, or for uſe, ſutable to cold and bluſtring weather. I adhere therefore to the former; and ſuppoſe groves, and theſe ſun images, to be joyned together; becauſe theſe idols were oft placed, as well in their groves, and high places abroad, as in their temples, and houſes within doores. See 2 Chr. 34.4.

V. 9. In that day] At that time, (as ver. 4.) when God ſhall execute the judgment before denounced. For to that the Prophet now returns again, illuſtrating it further, by the procuring cauſes of it, ver. 10. and the ſad effect of it. verſ. 11.

Shall his ſtrong cities be as a forſaken bough] Heb. his cities of ſtrength, (as Prov. 10. 15. & 18. 11.) ſhall be as the leaving a ſide-bough, or, branch; (ſuch as makes a ſhade, Ezek. 31. 5. anſwering not unfitly to that other word uſed ver. 6.) Or, of a wood, or, thicket. For the word, here uſed, alſo, ſometime ſo ſignifies, 1 Sam. 23. 15, 16, 18. 2 Chr. 27. 4. As a bough, or a branch that is left behind, to wit, by thoſe that did lop, or ſhred a tree: or, as a tree left for a ſtander, when the whole wood about it is felled. For the word forſaken, doth not well ſuit here; in regard of birds or fowl, that neſt, or rouſt in a tree; or, in regard of beaſts that had ſhade and ſhelter, formerly, from it; may a tree, or bough, be ſaid to be forſaken, Ezek. 31. 4, 12. Dan. 4. 12, 14. but not properly by the huſbandman, who when he loppeth a tree, leaves ſome bough or branch, either neglecting it, or becauſe he cannot well come to it; or becauſe he hath no need of it; or hath further uſes there for it. And although the cities, here mentioned, might, in the former reſpect, be compared to a forſaken bough, becauſe left by their inhabitants, being driven away from them, as birds chaſed from a tree, which was before their wonted harbour, Chap. 16. 2. Yet that ſeems not to be the thing that the Prophet here aims at; but that their ſtrong cities ſhould ſtand ſolitary, left alone and deſolate; (ſuch of them, at leaſt, as were not utterly razed, as Damaſcus was, ver. 1. and ſome of Iſrael, it may well be, were) the whole country, and ſmaller towns and villages, round about, being utterly waſted and ruined. See Chap. 1. 7, 8.

and an uppermoſt branch] As ver. 6. A ſtanding bough, that is left on the top of a tree, when the reſt are all lopped away, naked and bare. Though ſome expound both this, and the former, of boughs and branches of fruit-trees, left naked and bare; and many times alſo broken and mangled, diſpoiled wholly of their beauty, when the fruit is all beaten down. But the former ſeems to agree better, both with the Prophets ſcope, here, and the like elſewhere. See Chap. 30. 15.

which they left for the children of Iſrael] That is, which the enemy left; God in his providence, ſo diſpoſing things, out of his gracious affection to his people, of whom he had reſerved a remnant to himſelf, ver. 6. that yet ſome places ſhould be ſpared for them, when the reſidue ſhould be deſtroyed. The verb is imperſonal, and may well be rendred, which ſhall be left (See Chap. 2. 19.) for the children of Iſrael; as for the anoynting, Chap. 10. 27. Howbeit, ſome interpreters turn it another way, reading the words, which ſhall be left, or, forſaken by the children of Iſrael; as Chap. 7: 16. And others, yet, a third way, ſuppoſing this latter clauſe to have ſome reference to the ancient inhabitants of the land of Canaan, in Joſhuah's time, and their leaving the land, upon the Iſraelites entrance thereupon; and this way the Jewiſh Doctors generally go; and divers alſo of our interpreters. Some reading the words, as they left them. The note of ſimilitude ſupplyed before the relative; as Exod. 34. 18. Jer. 44. 8. Some, which they left, (to wit, the Amorites, and Canaanites) before the children of Iſrael, that is, for fear of them; as Exod. 2. 15. Chap. 21. 15. That which Some underſtand of their leaving their tillage, and their fruits; (becauſe one of the words, before-going, hath affinity with another word that ſignifies plowing, and the other belongeth to a tree) and betaking themſelves to their ſtrong Forts, and fenced cities for fear, Exod. 23. 27, 28. Joſh. 2. 9, 11. & 5. 1. Others, of the leaving of their Forts themſelves, and their fenced cities, being by the Iſraelites diſpoſſeſſed of them. And thus moſt of the Rabbines. Some, alſo, making the two words, in the fore-going ſentence, rendred, bough and branch, the proper names of two cities, in the land of Canaan, called Horeſh, and Amir: whereof yet we finde no record in Scripture. But theſe latter interpretations, though not wanting great authors, ſeem ſomewhat too coact.

and there ſhall be deſolation] As Chap. 6. 11. Or, it ſhall be deſolation: that is, moſt deſolate; (ſee ch. 1. 7.) to wit, Samaria, the royal city, ſaith one Rabbin; the land of Iſrael, ſaith another. I ſuppoſe, it hath reference to the firſt words of the verſe, His ſtrong cities, &c. each of them ſhall be deſolate. See Chap. 20. 2. & 26. 19.

V. 10. Becauſe thou haſt forgotten the God of thy ſalvation] The procuring cauſe of this their calamity, their fore-getting, neglecting, diſregarding, and rejecting him, that might, and would have ſaved them, had they been mindful of him, and faithful to him, Deut. 8. 14. Pſal. 106. 13, 21. Jer. 2. 32. & 3. 21. & 13. 25. & 23. 27. Ezek. 22. 12. & 23. 35. Hoſ. 8. 14. & 13. 6. The perſon is changed; as Chap. 14. 3. and the words are in the feminine, directed to the land, or State of Iſrael, as to a woman, or a wife, that had forgot her duty and loyalty to her husband, Prov. 2. 17.

the God of thy ſalvation] Or, thy ſaving God. God thy Saviour. So Pſal. 18. 46. & 25. 5. & 27. 9. & 62. 1, 2, 7. as, the God of my mercy; or, my God of mercy: that is, my merciful God, Pſal. 59. 10, 17. And the God of my righteouſneſs: or, my God of righteouſneſs: that is, my moſt righteous God, Pſal. 4. 1.

and haſt not been mindful of the rock of thy ſtrength] Or, thy rock of ſtrength. Thy ſtrongeſt rock; as the cities of thy ſtrength, or, thy cities of ſtrength: thy ſtrong cities, ver. 10. So Pſal. 62. 7. He that would have protected thee more ſurely, then all thoſe thy ſtrong-holds, which thou didſt minde and truſt to, when thou mindeſt not him. For the one of them is here oppoſed to the other. See Deut. 32. 4, 30, 31. Pſal. 31. 2, 3, 4.

therefore ſhalt thou plant pleaſant plants] Heb. plants of pleaſant; to wit, flowers, or fruits; as Gen. 30. 14. Cant. 7. 13. with Chap. 2. 12. A defect of the ſubſtantive, as there, in the Canticles; and here before, ver. 5.

and ſhalt ſet it with ſtrange ſlips] Heb. and with a ſlip of a ſtranger, or, forraigner, ſhalt thou ſow it. A defect of the inſtrumental particle; as ver. 5. a ſlip, for ſlips, collectively; as Ezek. 8. 17. and plant, for plants, ver. 11. It is uſed, more eſpecially, for a branch, or, ſlip of a vine, Num. 13. 23. Ezek. 15. 2. a ſlip of a forraigner, for forraign ſlips, brought out of forraign parts; and in that regard, of more eſteem. Shalt thou ſow, or ſet: for the Hebrew uſeth the ſame word for both, Levit. 19. 19. Deut. 22. 9. It, to wit, thy vineyard, or thy garden: the Pronoun, for the Noun; as 2 King. 25. 4. Chap. 30. 8. He compareth the State of Iſrael to a curious Lady, that delighteth in beautiful flowers, affects choice fruit, deſires forraign plants, is careful to procure them, to plant her places of pleaſure with them; and ſedulous in nurſing and tending of them there; as the next words imply, ver. 11. See a ſtrange vine, in another ſenſe, Jer. 2. 21.

V. 11. In the day ſhalt thou make thy plant to grow; and in the morning ſhalt thou make thy ſeed to flouriſh] All the pains thou ſhalt take, and all the coſt thou ſhalt be at, in making proviſion for the maintaining of thy ſtate, and the continuance of it, in a plentiful, beautiful, and flouriſhing condition, ſhall come to nought; it ſhall be ſpoiled, and deſtroyed all, by the enemy. There ſeems an eye had to that threatning in the law, Deut. 28. 29, 30, 33.

In the day] In the day time: Day by day; as Pſalm 42. 8.

make thy plant to grow] The ſingle word ſignifies, to grow much, or apace, Job 8. 7, 11. & 12. 23. & 36. 26. Pſalm 73. 12. & 92. 12. But here it is in a redoubled form, as importing a double deſire, endeavour and diligence, conſtantly employed, by all means that might be, to ſtrengthen and advance their eſtate. See Chap. 9. 10.

in the morning] A phraſe implying commonly much ſedulity, and induſtry in purſuit of a buſineſs, Pſal.5.3. & 127.2. Eccl.11.6. Chap.5.11. & 27.3. and it may here be referred, as well to the haſtning of the growth, and putting forth of things, ſet, or ſown, as to the early and conſtant care uſed about them: in alluſion to Aarons rod, that being a dry ſtick over-night, was found budded, and bloſſomed next morning, Num.17.8. or, to the practice of thoſe, that uſe artificial means, and helps, for the forwarding of plants and fruits. See Ezek.17.24.

make thy ſeed] As before; thy plant. That which thou haſt ſet, or ſown. See ver.10.

to flouriſh] Or, bud, or, bloſſome: as Num.17.8. Chap.27.6. & 35.1,2.

but the harveſt ſhall be a heap in the day of grief, and deſperate ſorrow] This clauſe is by divers, diverſly both rendred and expounded. Thoſe that read the words, as they are here rendred; do thus expound them: that in the day, or at the time of their calamity, and irrecoverable grief, which they ſhall ſuſtain by the enemy, all that they had gotten together, ſhould be ſuddenly conſumed, as a ſmall heap of corn is, when a great multitude, or, a whole army, that have been long pinched with famine, ſhall light on it; or all that ye have taken ſo much pains for, ſhall be laid together on an heap, for the enemy, to divide, and ſhare among themſelves. See Chap.15.7. or, ſhall all be ſpoyled and deſtroyed, as ſuch choyce and precious matters are wont to be, when they are regardleſly jumbled together, and ſo caſt upon an heap. See Chap.33.4. & Jer.43.12. And this I ſuppoſe the genuine ſenſe of the words. Which one of the Jewiſh Commenters obſerves to have been a proverbial ſpeech among them, concerning labour in vain. Your crop is come to an heap, or, your whole crop is all on a heap. But ſome others, and ſo of the Jewiſh Teachers, render the words far otherwiſe; to wit, The crop, or, the branches ſhall be removed in the day of inheritance, and there ſhall be deadly grief; or, The heap of the crop, in the day of inheritance, ſhall be deadly grief: or, The crop in the day of inheritance, ſhall be a heap and deadly grief: That is, as Some, thy children, whom thou haſt with ſo much care, and coſt, brought up; as others, thy wealth, which with ſo much pains and travel, thou haſt raiſed, and brought to an height, ſhall be taken all from thee, and carried away, when thou ſhouldſt come to enjoy it, and reap the fruit of it; which ſhall be as deadly pangs, and pains unto thee; it ſhall go ſo neer to the heart with thee, Deut.28.34. Or, all the fruit, or crop, that for all thy forepaſſed care, and coſt, ſhall accrue unto thee, ſhall be nothing elſe, but an heap of hearts-grief, and ſorrow, Eccl.2.11,17,18.

but] A defect of the adverſative: as Pſal.119.69.70,78.

the harveſt] Or, crop: as Chap.16.9. Joel 3.13. yet, according to others the branch. For ſo is alſo the word uſed, Job 29.19. and branch, for branches, or boughes: as Job 14.9.

an heap] So the word commonly ſignifies, Exod.15.8. Joſh.3.13,16. Pſal.33.7. & 78.13. nor is it ever found otherwiſe uſed: and ſome put in here the reſtrictive particle, but; reading it; but an heap only: as Job 8.9. Jer.46.17. Yet divers of the Rabbines, whom ſome of ours alſo, here follow, would refer it to a root, that imports removal, Chap.10.31. & 16.2. & 22.3. & 33.3.

in the day of grief] Heb. of grievous: a defect, as the Jews, that go this way, note, of the ſubſtantive, plague, or ſtroke, expreſſed, Jer.14.17. & 30.12. or, wound, or, breach: as Jer.10.19. Nah.3.19. the like defects, ſee Chap.5.2,4. ver.5,10. Jer.17.16. Ezek.13.14. Howbeit, the ſame word, but deſcending from another root, doth ordinarily ſignifie an inheritance, or poſſeſſion, Num.18.23,24. Chap.54.17. & 58.15. and ſo ſome would here take it: and the time of harveſt, termed the day of inheritance, or, poſſeſſion; becauſe the fruits of the earth, and of mens labours are wont then to be inned, and enjoyed, Deut.16.13,14. Joel 1.5. but a little difference there is, in the vowel points, between the word, in the one uſe, and in the other.

and deſperate ſorrow] Or, deadly pain. So Jer.30.17. from the ſame root is man termed Enoſh, miſerable, or mortal. See Chap.2.9. ſome ſuppoſe the copulative here to be, but a meer expletive; as 2 Sam.13.5. and ſo they knit the firſt words of the clauſe, with theſe laſt: The heap of the crop ſhall be deadly pain, or, grief. In which ſenſe if we take it, it may better be rendred, The crop ſhall be an heap, and deadly pain, or, grief; that is, an heap of deadly pain, or, grief: as a cloud and ſmoke; for, a cloud of ſmoke, Chap.4.5. Others make it, a diſtinct branch, and there ſhall be deadly pain: as the laſt clauſe of ver.9.

V. 12. Wo to the multitude of many people] Some would knit the enſuing paſſage, to the foregoing part of this Chapter, as if in theſe words were contained a reaſon of the deſperate grief mentioned, ver.11. to wit, the multitude of ſtrange people breaking in upon Gods people; which the Prophet ſhould here lament. But by the moſt, and beſt, they are deemed to belong to a new Sermon, or Prophecy; in regard whereof, ſome Interpreters, rent off the three verſes following from this Chapter, and glue them on to the next, as if this parcel, and that Chapter, made up one entire Prophecy, or Sermon. The reaſon they give of it, is, becauſe theſe three verſes contain a denunciation of judgment, againſt thoſe people of ſeveral countries, that aſſiſted Sennacherib, and ſerved under him, in his expedition againſt Judah, and Jeruſalem; and the eighteenth Chapter is againſt the Ethiopians, whoſe deſtruction God would have before-hand denounced, that Gods people might not expect any aid from them, or any means to be uſed by them, to divert the Aſſyrian, from his intended invaſion of it. But this ſeems but a weak ground, to make them one Sermon; being of ſo divers ſubjects. Howbeit theſe words ſeem to begin a new, but ſhort argument; and clearly to intend the downfall of thoſe forces, that Sennacherib led againſt Gods people. See Chap.30.28. & 36. & 37. Although there want not, that underſtand them, of ſuch nations, as joyned with the Syrians, and accompanied them, in Ahaz his time, in the oppugnation of Jeruſalem, Chap.7.1. But the tenour of the text, and all the circumſtances of it well weighed, carry it rather the former way.

wo] Of this particle, ſee Chap.3.11. & 10.5. & 18.1. Some would have it rendred, Alas: as Joel 1.15.

the multitude of many people] Or, as ſome, to the tumult, or, noyſe, of many peoples; (for the word is plural, as intimating, a variety of people, out of ſeveral countries, that ſerved under the Aſſyrian. So Chap.10.13,14.) that is, ſay they, to the many tumultuous people: and it is true indeed, that the word rendred multitude, is ſometime uſed for tumult, or, noyſe; as ch.31.4. Jer.47.3. Amos 5.13. as alſo, that it is derived from a word, that hath a notion of noyſe, or tumult, uſed in the very next clauſe; becauſe multitudes meeting are commonly tumultuous: but neither doth it alwaies neceſſarily imply, or import noyſe, and tumult; as Gen.17.5. nor is there any need here to depart from the ordinary reading, and moſt general acception of the word, deſigning here the vaſt multitude, or number of them, joyned in one body; as the other addition of many people, the multiplicity of nations, whereof that body conſiſted. Howbeit, becauſe the enſuing parallel member may ſeem to plead for the former tranſlation; to accord both members, it may well be rendred more fully, the ſtreperous, or tumultuous multitude: as implying both their multitude, and the manner of their demeanour. See the next clauſe, and the next member: and Ezek.30.10.

that make a noyſe like the noyſe of the ſeas] Heb. according to the ſeas making a noyſe. See Chap.5.30. Jer.6.23.

and to the ruſhing of Nations] Or, ruſtling, or, tumultuous noyſe, Chap.5.14. & 13.4. & 25.5. or, outrage (Chap.37.28.) of Nations; that is, to the ruſtling, or, tumultuous, or, outragious people. See Jer.47.3. Or, (which I take to be the moſt natural ſyntax; for, the wo is denounced to the perſons, or people) to the ruſtling, or, raging company; the abſtract, for the concrete, ruſtling, rage; for ruſtling, and raging company, as pride; for, a proud man, Jer.50.31. folly, for, a fooliſh man: Prov.24.9. See Chap.13.4.

that make a ruſhing, like the ruſhing of many waters] Or, that make a ruſtling; or, that rage according to the ruſtling, or rage of many waters, Pſal.93.4. Chap.8.7. & 28.2. Jer.51.55. Rev.1.15. & 14.2. & 19.1,6. See Chap.16.14. a defect of the relative is in either branch: as Chap.42.5.

V. 13. The nations ſhall ruſh, like the ruſhing of many waters] Ruſh; that is, break in with rage; or, ruſtel; break in with much noyſe. They ſhall break in with ſuch an hideous noyſe, as the ſea, or, ſome great river is wont to do, when it hath broken through, or got over its ſea-walls, or banks, as if they would with a rage, and violence irreſiſtible, bear down, and carry away all before them, Chap.8.7,8. & 59.19. Jer.51.42. See in what a bluſtering, and boyſterous manner, the Aſſyrian brake in, Chap.36.1-20.

but God ſhall rebuke them] Heb. and, (as Chap.16.12.) he ſhall rebuke him; or, one ſhall rebuke him; that is, he (to wit, Sennacherib, with all his forces) ſhall be rebuked; by whom, but by God? Chap.59.19. whoſe rebuke is not verbal; but real, and efficacious: able, not to ſtill only, the noyſe and rage of the ſea, Pſal.93.3,4. and that with a word, Matth.8.26,27. Mar.4.39,41. but to dry it up, ſo that men may walk through it dry-ſhod, Pſal.66.6. & 106.9. Chap.11.15. & 50.2. and much more to bring down, and abate the rage, and to ſtill, and calm the tumultuous outrage of any perſons, or people whatſoever, Pſal.91.5. & 65.7. & 68.30. & 76.6. Chap.25.5. See this effected, chap.37.36.

and they ſhall flee far off] Heb. and he ſhall flee far off; to wit, Sennacherib, who upon the diſcomfiture of his forces, by the miniſtery of an Angel, fled to Niniveh, faſter by much, then he came out from thence, Chap.31.9. & 37.37.

and ſhall be chaſed, as the chaff of the mountains before the wind] wind] As chaff, that the leaſt puff of wind will any where eaſily drive before it, Pſal.1.4. & 35.5. and not chaff in the floor, Dan.2.35. Hoſ.13.3. but as chaff of the mountains; or, chaff on a mountain: as Chap.18.3. on ſome high place, where the wind hath moſt power, and nothing either to reſtrain the force, and violence of it, or to ſtop, and ſtay that that is driven by it, Chap.41.15,16. Jer.4.11,12.

and like a rolling thing before the whirlwind] The Hebrew word is commonly uſed for a wheel: as Chap. 5.28. & 28. 28. but in this place ſome ſuppoſe it, to ſignifie, thiſtle-down; others more generally, a round wiſp, to wit, of ſtubble; or ſome other ſuch-like light ſtuff, Pſal.73.13. Job 21.18. Chap. 41.16. Jer.13.24.

V. 14. And behold] Take notice of, and conſider ſeriouſly, a moſt ſtrange, and ſudden change. See Chap.3.1. & 7.14.

at evening-tide trouble, and before morning he is not] There is in the Hebrew, a tranſpoſition of one copulative; as Gen.22.4. and the defect of another: as Chap. 16.14. which makes the ſentence the quicker. And it is indeed a brief, and conciſe; but quick, and lively deſcription of a great and ſudden alteration, within the ſpace of a night, both in the condition of Ezekiah, and thoſe beſieged with him; and of Sennacherib, and his forces, that lay without in ſiege againſt them.

at evening-tide trouble] Or, terrour; as it is commonly, and conſtantly rendred elſewhere, Job 18.11,14. & 24.17. & 27. 20. & 30.15. Pſal.73.19. Ezek.26.21. & 27.36. & 38.19. All within Jeruſalem overnight affrighted, and damped, with Rabſhakehs bluſterings, and menaces, together with the conſideration of the State of the whole country, about them, and a puiſſant army of ſo many thouſands ſet down before them; ſo that well they may be deemed to have been even at their wits end, Chap.22.2,5,7. & 33.7,8. & 36.1,22. & 37.3. before morning he is not] Ere morning appear, he, and his, are all gone, there is not an enemy to be ſeen, Chap.37. 36, 37. Thus weeping at even, and joy in the morning, Pſal.30. 5. And he ſeems to compare the Aſſyrian to a tempeſt of wind, that riſeth, and bluſtereth towards evening, but is laid again, before the next day. Though ſome underſtand the whole of the Aſſyrian forces, that they were frighted in the night, by that ſad, and ſudden work, that the Angel made among them; and fled away in the morning. So evening ſhould be taken for night; as Gen. 1. 5, 8. But the former ſeems more familiar.

thus is the portion of them, that ſpoyl us; and the lot of them, that rob us] A ſweet and comfortable cloſe to Gods people; but ſad and diſmal to all their oppoſites. Such ſucceſs are they all like, yea, ſure in fine to have, that maliciouſly oppoſe, and impugn Gods people. See the like, but in way of a vote, Judg.5.31. Pſal.83.9–18. There is in the words, a metaphor taken from portions, either of allowance of meat, or drink, Jer.52.34. Dan.1.5,8. or of land, rather, and inheritance, divided among co-heirs by lot; as Pſal.11.6. & 16.5, 5. Jer.31.25. Act.8.21. See the very like, in plainer terms, Job 20.19. Of the other two terms here uſed, rendred, rob, and ſpoyl; See Chap.10.2,6,13.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſ. 1. WO to the land] A new Sermon, or Prophecy, here beginneth, as moſt, generally agree; but againſt whom it is denounced, or whom it ſpecially concerneth, is much queſtioned by many. Some underſtand it, as menacing the ruine of Egypt: which others reject; becauſe the very next is peculiarly, and directly addreſſed againſt that State. Others ſuppoſe, that it threatens the Ethiopians, whom they deem to be deſcribed in the firſt, and ſecond verſes. Others would have it meant of the Romanes, by whom Jeruſalem was deſtroyed. The Jewiſh Doctors, of Gog, and Magog, to be deſtroyed in the dayes of their Meſſias, Ezek.38.4. And laſtly, ſome Spaniſh Writers, of the Inhabitants of the new-world in America, whom they vaunt of, as their converts. I ſuppoſe the Prophecy to contain a denunciation of deſtruction againſt the Ethiopians, to be inflicted by the Aſſyrians, Chap.20.4. (with a promiſe of future reſtitution, ver.7. in the times of Chriſts Kingdome) but directed to the Egyptians, as their neighbours, Ezek.29.10. and confederates, Ezek.30.5. adviſing them by their Embaſſadours to advertiſe the Ethiopians, of their ruine approaching, Ezek.30.9.

Wo to the land] As ſpoken by way of denunciation, like that, Chap.17.12. But they who ſo take it, obſerve not, that the denunciation of evils here mentioned, is darted, not againſt the land, or people, in this verſe, deſcribed; but againſt the people deciphered in the next verſe, whom, they are there willed to ſend a meſſage to, to acquaint them therewith: as appears by ver.7. For thoſe, and no other, are threatned with deſtruction in the one place, unto whom reſtitution is promiſed in the other. I ſuppoſe rather therefore, that the word is here uſed in way of compellation: as Chap.55.1. Zach. 1.6. and ſo both the Jewiſh Doctors, and ſome of ours alſo, here take it; rendring the words, not, Wo to the land; but, Ho the land, &c. to wit, of Egypt. See the like diverſity of expoſition, Chap.10.5. & 29.1.

the land ſhadowing with wings] This many Interpreters apply to Ethiopia, or, ſome part of it; reading the words, the land of ſhadow of wings; and underſtand thereby, ſome, a land ſhadowed with a circle of mountains environing it. Others, with locuſts, and flyes, that abound in it, Chap.7.18. Joel 2. 10. or, with flight of fowl, that at time of year, out of the colder regions, fly in great flocks thither. Others, a land ſhadowing, either the ſea, which it lay upon, with the ſayls of their ſhips, which to them, are as wings; or the countreys they trade unto with wares, and commodities, Chap.45.14. or, the lands, they invade, like locuſts, Judg.6.5. 2 Chr.14.9. & 16.8. with the multitude of their troops, as wings; for ſo are troops ſometime termed, Dan.11.12. beſide that, ſome would have it termed a land of wings; becauſe it was divided, ſay they, into two parts, by the red ſea, or Arabian gulf, that ſevered them, the one from the other; the Eaſtern containing ſome part of Arabia; and the Weſtern, That bordered upon Egypt. But others, rather, (whom I concur with, for the reaſon above rendred) underſtand the land of Egypt to be here deciphered. Which ſome of them ſuppoſe to be called, the land of ſhadow of wings; becauſe it uſed to put other people, and Gods people eſpecially, Ezek.31.6. & 29.16. in great hopes of ample protection from it, Chap.20.5,6. & 30.2. & 31.1. & 36.6. now ſhadow, Num.14.9. Judg.9.15. Pſal.91.1. Eccl.7.12. and wings, Deut. 32.11. Pſal.91.4. and ſhadow of wings, Pſal.17.8. & 36.7. & 57.1. are emblems of protection; and the word, ſhadow, is here, ſay they, in a double form, to denote the amplitude of protection, that Egypt was wont to promiſe. But becauſe the word here uſed, is no where found, ſo to ſignifie; but is uſed commonly, and conſtantly, for a cymball, or ſuch like muſical inſtrument, that makes a tinkling, or jingling ſound, being ſhaken, or ſtricken with the hand, 2 Sam. 6.5. Pſal.150.5. Others therefore, and ſo the old Latine, render, it, the land of a cymbal. Which title, or term, ſome ſuppoſe, to be given unto Egypt, as implying, it to be but a jingling wing; that promiſed much protection, but anſwered not expectation, Chap. 20.6. & 30.5. & 36.6. Ezek.29.6,7. was like a tinkling cymbal, 1 Cor.13.1. according to that, Jer. 46. 17. the King of Egypt is but a noyſe; makes a great noyſe; but doth nothing. Others ſuppoſe the land of Egypt, to be termed a land of cymbals, or, jingles; (the word taken collectively, as others the like, Chap.5.12.) in regard of that great abundance of jingling inſtruments, by the Greeks and Latines, termed ſiſtra, uſed perpetually, in the ſuperſtitious rites of their goddeſs Iſis; and ſo riſe among them, or, peculiar to them, that by other people it was termed, Egyptian muſick; and the ſame of ſo neer affinity, for ſound, and handling, to the Cymbal; that the old Greek gloſſaries interpret the one ſometime by the other: the one alſo is ſuppoſed by ſome to be mentioned with the other, where it is in our Engliſh, very unfitly, and no leſs diverſly rendred, fidles, by the ancienter tranſlators; and cornets, by the later, 2 Sam.6.5. for the word is no where elſe found; but ſignifies ſuch a kind of inſtrument, as by motion, and agitation, yeelded a muſical ſound, as both cymbals, and theſe jingles did; for ſo we ſhall make bold to term them, untill we have a fitter name for them. The difference between them was, that the one was of a ſpherical, the other of an ovall form, made hoop-wiſe, with little bells hanging on the brims, or edges of it; which ſome ſuppoſe here, to be meant by wings, and this kind of inſtrument to be termed here, a cymball of wings, or, a winged cymball; to diſtinguiſh it from the other kind, commonly ſo called. In regard hereof, therefore, might Egypt well be termed, the land of cymbals, or, jingles; ſuch kind of muſick being no where ſo riſe, as there: though for the other term of wings, ſome of thoſe, that thus underſtand the word cymball, conceive that to look another way; and the word, land, as having reference to both, they render the text, a land of cymbals, a land of wings: as if it were ſaid, that jingling land of wings: deeming it ſo to be called; becauſe by the river Nilus, running through the whole body of it at length, Chap.19.5. it was divided, and parted into two moyties, lying on either ſide the river, as two wings; for ſo is the word uſed, Chap.11.12. & 24.16. However certain it is, that not Ethiopia, but Egypt, is here deſcribed.

which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia] That is, as ſome, beyond thoſe rivers, that out of Arabia empty themſelves, either into the red, or the midland ſea; or, as others, beſides; or, on the ſide of; or, on this ſide of: as the word is oft uſed, Num.21.13. & 22.1. & 32.19,32. Joſh.22.7. 1 Sam. 14.1,4. Job 1.19. See Chap.9.1. & Zeph.3.10. However, we read it, the words here rather ſeem to deſign ſome other land, bordering neer upon the Ethiopian coaſt, as Egypt doth, Ezek. 29.10. then Ethiopia it ſelf, beginning at the laſt cataract, or downfal of Nilus.

the rivers of Ethiopia] That is, either thoſe rivers, that run into Nilus, whereof Aſtaboras, and Aſtapus are ſaid to be two principal ones; Strabo, Geograph. lib. 17. or Nilus it ſelf, called the Ethiopick-river; becauſe from, and through that country, it comes down into Egypt: and in the plural, ſtyled rivers here, as alſo, Ezek. 29. 3, 4. either in regard of the rivers, that by the way it receives; or, of the water-courſes drawn out of it, partly above, to abate its violent current; partly, beneath, for the benefit of the bordering places, Chap. 19. 6. or, in regard of the ſeveral ſtreams, and channels, that it runs in, both above, in Ethiopia, where by branching it ſelf, it makes ſundry great Ilands, whereof Meroe a chief one: Strabo, lib. 2. & 16. Pliny l. 5. c. 9. as alſo below, in Egypt, where by ſeven famous channels, it emptieth it ſelf in the midland ſea, Chap. 11. 15. Or, as Some, the rivers of that part of Arabia, which the Chuſites inhabited, lying between Judea and Egypt, running, as the brook of Rhinocorura, into the lake of Sirbon, and Beſor, into the Mediterranean ſea, and Coris, with ſome others, into the red ſea. See Herodot. l. 2. & Strabo, l. 17.

of Ethiopia] Heb. Cuſh: as Chap. 11. 11. a country ſo called, becauſe inhabited by the poſterity of Cuſh, the ſon of Cham, or Ham, Gen. 10. 6. 1 Chr. 18-10. Who at firſt ſeem to have ſate down in, and peopled ſome part of Arabia, Gen. 2. 13. Num. 12. 1, 2. 2 Chr. 14. 9, 14. and in proceſs of time, not only to have extended their habitation unto the ſhore of the red-ſea, but to have pierced alſo, into the Ilands that are ſcattered here and there, about the mouth of the ſame; and from thence (which was no difficult matter for them to do) to have wafted over into the African Continent; wherein, on the South of Egypt, they at length ſetled themſelves: And hence that diviſion of them, into the Eaſtern, and Weſtern, the Aſian, and African Ethiopians, or, Cuſhites: of which may be ſeen Herodotus, lib. 7. and Strabo, lib. 1. and may help to reconcile the differences that are among Writers, concerning the place of their abode.

V. 2. That ſendeth Embaſſadours by the Sea] This ſending of Embaſſadors by Sea, Some underſtand of the Ethiopians on the one ſide of the red-ſea, ſending over to them that inhabited on the other-ſide; for the leavying of forces to go forth with them, to war againſt the Aſſyrian, or ſome other common enemy. Others, of ſending out Heralds of armes, to defie the Aſſyrian, and bid them battel. To which purpoſe, they ſuppoſe to make, that rumor of Tarhakah, the Ethiopians coming againſt Sennacherib, Chap. 37. 9. Others, of the Egyptians ſending, as Some, to the Jews, to put them in hope of ſupplies, and aſſiſtance againſt the Aſſyrians; or, as Others rather, to the Ethiopians, to inform them of the Aſſyrian preparations againſt them, and the evils, that from them they were like to ſuſtain.

Embaſſadors] As Joſh. 9. 4. Ch. 57. 9. Jer. 49. 14. or, Meſſengers; for the word is general, Prov. 13. 17. & 25. 13. Howbeit, becauſe the word is found uſed for images, Chap. 45. 16. Some would have it here ſo to ſignifie; underſtanding this paſſage, not of ſending meſſengers; but of ſending Oſiris his head; as Lucian tells the tale: or an Epiſtle, as ſome of the Greek Fathers (to bring it neerer home to their Verſion) concerning the reviving of Adonis, put up in an earthen pot, and ſo caſt into the ſea, to arrive beyond ſea, at Byblos, which by the Devils help, within a few dayes, it uſed to do. But neither is this relation of any certainty; nor is there any mention of images in it: nor appear therein the paper-boats ſpoken of in the text: and what is called tſirim here, is in the next branch termed malacim, which is, queſtionleſs, meſſengers: and ſmall reaſon therefore to depart from the verſion received.

by the ſea] The red-ſea; that runneth along by the Coaſt of Egypt, and Ethiopia, on the one ſide; and of Arabia, on the other ſide: called therefore, the gulf of Arabia: as that other beyond it, the Perſian-gulf. See Jer. 49. 14.

even] Heb. and. But ſome ſuppoſe the copulative to be here redundant; as Chap. 17. 11.

in veſſels of bul-ruſhes] Heb. of ruſh. For the word is general, of all kinde of ruſh, Job 8. 11. ſo called, of a word that ſignifies to drink, Gen. 24. 17. becauſe ruſhes require moiſture, and thrive not, but in miry and watery places, Job 8. 11. c. 35. 7. But it is here taken collectively, for ruſhes; as Exod. 2. 3. And ſome ſuppoſe it to be uſed here, in way of deriſion, as ſcoffing at the aid that the Egyptians ſhould undertake to afford the Jewiſh people, againſt the enemy, whoever he were: as if it were ſaid, You will ſend them ſupplyes in veſſels of ruſh; or, in paper-boates, as we uſe to ſay: (for their paper was a kinde of ruſh) the matter of your ſhipping, and the ſupplies ye ſend in them, will be the one like the other. But he ſeems rather to ſpeak here of their ordinary manner of ſending meſſages, and paſſing to and fro, in thoſe parts, in boats, or veſſels made of paper, (not ſuch, as we now uſe, but ſuch as was anciently uſed, for writing, and was moſt plentiful in Egypt) & of other the like kinde of ruſh and reed, whereof they had great ſtore, Ch. 19. 6, 7. And of ſuch kinde of veſſels they had much uſe, both in Ethiopia and in Egypt; partly, for expedition, and partly, for ſafety, in ſhallow waters eſpecially, in regard of ſhelves and rocks, and in ſteep downfalls, and ſwift ſtreams of rivers, which other veſſels, of matter leſs pliant, would not ſo well brook. Theſe, both the Ethiopians, and Egyptians much uſed, in the downfalls of Nilus; as Strab. lib. 17. The rather, becauſe they could eaſily draw them a ſhore, carry them on their ſhoulders over land, and put them beneath into the water again, Plin. lib. 5. c. 9. The Egyptians very much, alſo, in that river; as Plin. l. c. 56. but eſpecially in their yearly deluge, when their whole country, the cities only and higher ground excepted, lay all under water, and was, generally, on float; as Lucane, lib. 4. Of theſe paper-barks, Theophraſt. lib. 4. c. 9. Strabo, l. 17. and Plin. l. 6. c. 22. & l. 13. c. 11. Though Herodote, l. 2. ſpeaks of another kinde of ſhipping, that they had for burden; and of ſome earthen-boates of potters work, that they uſed ſometime in the river, Strabo l. 17. and Juvenall, ſat. 15.

upon the waters] Heb. upon the face, or, ſurface of the waters; as Gen. 1. 2. & 7. 18. Here the phraſe is the rather uſed; becauſe theſe kinde of boats or barks, did rather float, and glide on the top of the water, then drive any thing into it, not drawing much water, as thoſe of plank and timber uſually do.

--ſaying] This word is not in the original. Yet either the ſame, as Pſal. 105. 14, 15. Act. 7. 32. or ſomewhat the like, as Pſal. 27. 8. is neceſſarily to be ſupplyed. Thoſe that ſuppoſe the words following to be ſpoken in the perſon, either of the Ethiopians, or Egyptians themſelves, as delivering inſtructions to thoſe that they ſent; ſupply, ſaying. Thoſe that take them, as ſpoken in the perſon of God, or the Prophet from God, ſupply, ſay, as enjoyning, or adviſing the Egyptians, what meſſage God would have them ſend to their friends and allies, as Chap. 22. 15.

Go ye ſwift meſſengers] Heb. light; as Ch. 19. 1. Either alluding to the lightneſs of their paſſage-boats, above mentioned. Or, becauſe lightneſs is a means of ſwiftneſs, as heavineſs of ſlowneſs, in motion. In whoſe perſon they are ſpoken, was before ſpecified.

to a Nation] The Aſſyrians, ſay ſome; the Iſraelites, ſay others: but neither ſort find any mention what their meſſage ſhould be; and ſo diſpatch meſſengers without a meſſage. I ſuppoſe it rather, the nation, here deſcribed, to be the Ethiopians, whom the Egyptians ſhould ſend to.

ſcattered] Or, as ſome, out-ſpread. Heb. protracted: drawn out at length. Uſed of time; as Prov. 13. 12. Ch. 13. 22. Ezek. 12. 18. Or of place; as Judg. 4. 6. Ch. 5. 18. That which the Jewiſh Doctors underſtand of the Iſraelites driven out of their country, and diſperſed by the enemy. Some of ours, of the Aſſyrian, drawn far away from his country, and in war now againſt Judea, Ch. 5. 27. But others, rather, of the Ethiopians, called, a ſcattered, or diſperſed people; in regard of the large territory, or land over-ſpread with them, reaching part of it from the Perſian-gulf to the red ſea, and part of it again from the red ſea, to the main ocean. Though ſome expound it in a future notion, as ſpoken by way of prediction, to be diſſipated, and diſperſed. The like whereunto, ſee Pſal. 137. 7. Ch. 27. 13. Nor want there, that expound it people of long ſtature, from Ch. 45. 14. But I finde not the word any where ſo uſed.

and peeled] Or, as ſome, to be peeled; as before: that is, ſtripped of all. A metaphor taken from the pulling off hair, either from head, or beard, Ezr. 9. 30. Neh. 13. 25. Ch. 50. 6. which ſome apply to the preſent eſtate of the Jews; ſome to the future, of the Ethiopians, by the Aſſyrian to be deſpoiled. Some to the Aſſyrian, as exhauſt, and left bare of their ſouldiery. But it may well, in his native and proper ſenſe, be underſtood of the Ethiopians, being a peeled, and beardleſs people. For the word imports a want of hair, Levit. 13. 40, 41. Little whereof is found on Ethiopian bodies, by reaſon of the heat of their country. For the word poliſhed, by which ſome render it, becauſe it is of iron and braſs, and inſtruments made of either, ſo uſed, 1 King. 7. 45. Ezek. 21. 9, 10, 11, 28. is not ſo fit here.

to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto] Heb. from him: or, from that, and further. The phraſe is uſed, either of time, as Levit. 22. 26. Num. 15. 23. Or, of place; as 1 Sam. 10. 4. & 20. 22. Some take it, here, in the latter ſenſe; and of theſe, ſome underſtanding it of the Aſſyrians, that were terrible to other nations, as well on this ſide, as beyond them: Others, of thoſe that dwelt fartheſt in the inland parts, more remote from the Sea, and from ſociety with other people. And therefore, as the more black and grim, ſo more horrid and ſavage. But the meſſage ſeems to concern the Ethiopians in general, not any ſpecial part of them. Others therefore, following the Latine, read it, Beyond whom there is no other.

ther. Either in regard of ſcituation, ſay ſome, or in regard of fierceneſs, ſay others. But I ſee not how the text will bear either. Thoſe that take the phraſe in the former ſenſe, underſtanding it of continuance of time, as our Engliſh, and many others do, apply it, ſome to the Jewiſh people, who were terrible to other nations, from the time that God firſt made a nation of them; and long after, in regard of thoſe ſtrange works, that God, at ſeveral times, wrought for them, Deut. 4. 34. Joſh. 2. 9, 10. & 5. 1. 2 Chro. 20. 29. or in regard of the dreadful judgments, that at ſundry times he executed upon them for their ſins, ſuch as might well ſtrike a terror into all, that ſaw, or heard of them, Deut. 28. 28, 37. Jer. 18. 16. & 19. 8. & 24. 9. & 25. 9, 18. as ſome would have it. Or, as ſome of the Jewiſh writers, in regard of both. But other again, underſtand it of the Aſſyrians, who had anciently been a terrible people, and ſubduers of other nations; the Aſſyrian monarchy, or tyranny rather, being of the greateſt antiquity of any, at leaſt, ſince the flood, Gen. 10. 8-11. and endured, in likelyhood, as long as any. But thoſe that ſo apply it, may do well to conſider, that the firſt founder and raiſer of that kingdom, was an Ethopian, or a Cuſhite, Nimrod the great hunter, the prime ſon of Cuſh: Nor was it called the Aſſyrian monarchy, at firſt, as founded, or poſſeſſed by Aſſur, the ſon of Sem, Gen. 10. 22. or any of his iſſue; but might ſo be called, becauſe Nimrod the Cuſhite, having in his conqueſts, (after the interruption of Babel, in which intended ſtructure, he ſeems to have had a chief hand) pierced into that country, which Aſſur and his iſſue, at firſt, quietly poſſeſſed, did therein build the city of Niniveh, and made it the head-city of his dominions; and ſo is that of Moſes to be underſtood, Gen. 10. 10, 11. This application, therefore, of theſe words to the Aſſyrians, leadeth us home, as by the hand, to the right owners of it; and directly pointeth, as with the finger, to the perſons intended in them: To wit, the Ethiopians, or Cuſhites, a terrible nation from the firſt; and no other alſo, in ſucceeding ages: The greateſt number of men, being brought into the field by their king, that is read of in Scripture, or, I ſuppoſe, in any other ſtory. See 2 Chr. 14. 9. & 16. 8. There is an ellipſis, in the phraſe; from that: that is, from that day, or, time. As it is more fully expreſſed, Num. 15. 23. 1 Sam. 18. 9. Ezek. 39. 22. as having relation to their firſt original, ſince they began to be a people.

a nation meted out] Heb. a nation of line line. And the word ſignifies ſometime a line of letters, figures, or words in a book; as Chap. 28. 10, 13. Whence ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, applying this to their own people, whom they imagin to be here intimated, would have it to contain a reaſon of their then low condition; becauſe they had no more knowledg of God and his law, (Chap. 27. 11.) then little children; (Chap. 28. 9.) that muſt be taught, line after line, and letter after letter, Chap. 28. 10. But neither is the phraſe here and there alike; nor doth it ſuit ſo well here, either with the fore-going, or the enſuing branches. But the word, moſt uſually, importeth, a meaſuring-line; as in that very place alſo, Ch. 28. 17. and elſewhere, Job 38. 5. Jer. 31. 39. Ezek. 47. 3. And this was uſed, ſometime, to build by, Zach. 1. 16. Or, to rule, ſquare, and cut out by, Ch. 44. 13. in which ſenſe ſome take it here. A nation that taketh upon it to give laws, and rules to others; applying it to the Aſſyrians, as uſurping a power of command over other people. Sometime it is uſed to deſtroy by, to mete out; who, or what, how much, or how many, ſhall be deſtroyed; or having pulled down lofty and ſtately buildings, to lay the places, where before they ſtood, level with the other ground, 2 Sam. 8. 2. 2 King. 21. 13. Pſal. 60. 8. Ch. 34. 11. Lam. 2. 8. And ſo here ſome take it, but underſtanding it, ſome actively, a nation, that meteth out other people to deſtroy them: Others, paſſively, a nation meted out, or, ſhortly to be meted out to conculcation, or deſtruction. To which purpoſe, alſo, one of the Jewiſh writers, affirming it to be a proverbial ſpeech with them, and joyning this, and the next branch together, expoundeth it, by little and little to be deſtroyed; and another of them, as implying the cauſe of their deſtruction, as in way of retribution, meaſure by meaſure: the evil of puniſhment being meted out unto them, according to the meaſure of the evil of their ſin, which they indeed apply to their own people; but may with better ground, and more agreeably to the ſcope of the text, be underſtood concerning the Ethiopians, as deſigned by God to deſtruction; letting paſs theſe latter niceties. I am not ignorant, that ſome of ours underſtanding it of theſe, render the words, diſperſed here and there; as having reference to the manner of the Ethiopian habitations, having no cities, but villages, ſcattered here and there, Hab. 3. 14. which I ſhould not reject, if the words of the text would yeeld it.

and trodden down] Heb. and of conculcation; or, treading down: as Chap. 22. 5. rendred alſo deſtruction, 2 Chro. 22. 7. Now the nation here mentioned, is termed, a nation of treading down; either actively, as ſome, underſtanding it of the Aſſyrians, becauſe they trode down, that is, vanquiſhed and ſubdued other people, Chap. 10. 6. & Pſal. 44. 5. & 60. 12. or, as others, rather, paſſively, a nation trodden down by others, as the Jews expounding it of themſelves, Chap. 5. 5. & 51. 23. or, a nation to be trodden down very ſhortly, underſtanding it of the Ethiopians, to be ſubdued, and captived by the Aſſyrians, Chap. 20. 4. Or, laſtly, as ſome other, an abject people, kept under in extream ſlavery, both at home, and abroad: but the former, concerning their condition ſhortly to enſue, ſeems beſt to ſuit with the Prophets intent here.

whoſe land the rivers have ſpoyled] The form of the verb here uſed, being ſingular, and no where elſe found, hath in part, occaſioned variety of expoſitions. Some ſuppoſing it to be the ſame with a word uſed, Chap. 17. 14. & 42. 22, 24. that ſignifies to ſpoyl, and plunder. Others, with another word uſed, Chap. 37. 22. & 49. 7. & 53. 3. that ſignifies to ſlight, to deſpiſe: again to ſome, they ſeem to be part of the deſcription of the nation before mentioned; whereas others deem them, to be the ſum of a meſſage ſent to them. Thoſe that take it the former way, applying it to the land of Iſrael, read the words, as we render them; and expound them of ſuch direption, and ſpoyl, as the Aſſyrians, and other their enemies, had made among them, Chap. 8. 4. & 36. 1. but thoſe of them, that underſtand it of Ethiopia, read the words in the preſent tenſe, whoſe land the rivers ſpoyl, or, tear aſſunder; and expound it of the great rivers, Niger, and Nilus, that cut through their land, and by their frequent inundations, waſh away the fat of their ſoil. Howbeit, this may ſeem not ſo probable, becauſe with the Egyptians, thoſe deluges have a contrary effect, making their country, by the more watering of it, the more fat and fertile: the abate and reſtraint whereof, is therefore menaced, as a judgment, and a curſe, Ch. 19. 5-10. Ezek. 30. 12. As for thoſe that take this paſſage, as the content of the meſſage, ſent by the meſſengers, before mentioned, they, ſome of them, underſtand them, as to be delivered from the Ethiopians to the Aſſyrians, and read, according to their latter ſignification of the word, above noted, to tell them, (as in way of contempt and defiance) that the rivers (to wit, of Ethiopia; of which ver. 1. that is, the people of that country) deſpiſe (contemn, and ſet light by) his land: howſoever dreadful and terrible he may appear unto other people. Not unlike to that, Ch. 37. 22. But other of them, conceiving it as a meſſage, ſent by Gods direction, from Egypt to Ethiopia, read and render it, according to the former ſignification of the word, to tell them, that the rivers, or, floods will ſpoil their land: that is, that the forces of the king of Aſſyria, Ch. 20. 4. breaking in upon them, like the ſtrong ſtreams of ſome great river, Ch. 8. 7, 8. will overflow their land, not as Niger and Nilus, or Aſtaboras, and Aſtaphus uſe to do, to water and enrich it; but to plunder and ſpoil it; to ſweep all away before them, as great land-floods are wont to do, Ch. 28. 2, 17. This, the rather, I concur with, becauſe I finde the like in Ezekiel, of meſſengers, by Gods appointment, to be ſent unto the Ethiopians, informing them of great pains that ſhould come upon them, to make them affraid, Ezek. 30. 9. The relative for the conjunction, that; as Deut. 4. 40. Neh. 2. 6, 7. For I cannot aſſent to that learned writer, who ſuppoſing the meſſage to be ſent, not from any one nation to another, but by God himſelf to one and the ſame people, deſcribed, ver. 1, 2. would have the ſubject matter of it to be related, ver. 3.

V. 3. All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth] After this warning, or advertizement, willed to be given unto Ethiopia, by Egypt, concerning thoſe calamities that were to befall them; the Prophet turneth his ſpeech unto the wide world; as in the name of God, calling upon inhabitants thereof, to conſider, and obſerve the manner of his proceedings, and the paſſages of his providence, when he ſhall begin to muſter thoſe forces which he purpoſeth to employ, for the effecting of the judgments denounced againſt that people, and to expect the iſſue of it. See the like, Pſal. 46. 8. Chap. 33. 13. ſo thereby withal giving aſſurance, that the execution of the ſame ſhould be ſo remarkable, and ſo conſpicuous, that notice ſhould be taken of it, throughout the whole world; that the whole world ſhould ring of it. See the like, Jer. 49. 21. & 50. 46.

ſee ye, when he liſteth up an enſign on the mountains] When God calleth thoſe together, whom he meaneth to make uſe of, as by an enſign to that purpoſe, ſet up on the top of ſome high hill, Chap. 5. 26. & 13. 2. For the Hebrew Commenters are wide, when they expound it of Gods gathering his people together out of the places of their captivity: as Chap. 11. 12. or, as when an enſign is lift up upon a moutain, ye ſhall ſee it. The judgment executed upon them, ſhall be ſo conſpicuous, that ye ſhall as eaſily ſee it, as a banner erected on the top of a mountain, for any ſpecial uſe, and purpoſe, is of all ſeen, far, and neer.

when he liſteth up an enſign] That is, when God ſhall lift it up, as moſt expound it; or, when I ſhall lift up, as ſome render it. The Hebrew is, as in lifting up; or, according to the lifting up of an enſign; (for the infinitive in the Hebrew, is alſo as a gerund) that is, as when one lifteth up an enſign; or, when an enſign is lift up. So 1 Sam.15.22. as in obeying the voyce of the Lord; that is, as when one obeyeth the voyce of the Lord: or, as when the voyce of the Lord is obeyed. See alſo, ver.5. Chap.64.2. Jer.5.26.

on the mountains] Or, upon a mountain: a defect of the prepoſition; as Deut.33.19. Chap. 17. 13. and mountains; for, mountain: as Gen.8.4.

ſee ye] Heb. ye ſhall ſee it. A want of the pronoun: as Pſal. 37.34. & 91.8. Chap.9.9. Hoſh.8.4. and when he bloweth a trumpet] When God bloweth his trumpet to ſummon his ſouldiers, and ſervitors, to make their appearance, as Jer.4.5. & 6.1. or, to ſet them on upon their ſervice, as Zach.9.14. for the Jewiſh Writers are too far out of the way, in expounding in, of the trumpet mentioned, Chap. 27.13. The Hebrew is, as in ſounding a trumpet; that is, as when one bloweth a trumpet: or, as when a trumpet is blown; as before.

hear ye] Heb. ye ſhall hear, to wit, it; as before: thas which is now foretold you, Chap.12.5.

V. 4. For ſo the Lord ſaid unto me] Or, Thus hath the Lord ſaid unto me. God hath, in theſe words, acquainted me with his counſel, and purpoſe herein; to wit, in letting out the rein unto the Aſſyrian, for ſome ſpace of time, and permiting him to ſubdue, and make havock of many people, Chap. 10.5-10.

I will take my reſt] Heb. I will reſt, or be quiet, Chap. 7. 4. & 14.7. & 57.20. I will ſit ſtill, not offering to interrupt the Aſſyrian, but ſuffering him to proceed in his deſigns, and attempts, for a time. See Pſal.83.1.

and I will conſider in my dwelling place] Though I ſeem to ſit ſtill, as an idle ſpectator of what is done in the world; yet from the place of mine heavenly habitation, I behold, and take notice of the courſes and carriages of men on the earth, Pſal. 2.4. & 11.4,5. & 33.13,14. or, but, or, yet, I will look to, or, upon my dwelling. I will have an eye to my Church, the place of my ſpecial reſidence on earth; to Jeruſalem, and mount Sion, where my Temple is, to protect, to reſcue, to relieve, to refreſh it, Pſal. 132.13-17. Chap.37.29-35.

conſider] Heb. behold, look to, or look after; it implyes a providence, and care, employed for the good of the thing looked to, or looked after, Pſal.102.19. Chap.57.15. & 66.2. or, look upon. So the rather, in regard of what followeth, I will lift up the light of my countenance upon it, Pſal.4.6. I will cauſe my face to ſhine on it, Num.6.25.

my dwelling place] Heb. ſeo, or, ſetled dwelling; and this, with God, is heaven above, 1 King.8.39,43,49. his Sanctuary, a type of his Church, on earth, Exod.15.2,17. 1 King.8. 13. Dan.8.11.

like a clear heat upon herbs] Heb. as ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, upon the herb: as they take the word, Chap. 26. 19. 2 King.4.29. as other of them, and ſo the moſt; upon rain, or, after rain: as they ſuppoſe it to be uſed, Job 36.31. & 37. 11. See Chap.24.15. The meaning is, that the Lord would look out, and ſhine forth upon his Church, though he ſuffered them alſo, to be for a while under a cloud; as the clear ſunſhine (for from the word here uſed, hath the ſun its name, Chap.24.22. & 30.26. See on Chap. 17.8.) upon tender herbs, and plants, after a ſhower of rain; which is wont to make them ſuddenly to ſprout out, and ſhoot up. See 2 Sam. 23.4. Pſal.72.6. Hoſ.14. 5. and of the complement, Chap. 37. 31.

and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harveſt] a cloud of dew, or, a dewy cloud; not, of rain, or rainy: ſuch as may relieve the harveſt man in the heat of the day, and yet not hurt the corn, Chap.25.5. See Chap.4.5. for rain in harveſt is hurtful, Prov.26.1. See Jer.5.24. Nor can I here accord with them, though men of great note, that turn the text a clean contrary way, underſtanding the words; the former, of ſuch a torrid heat, as ſcorcheth, and killeth herbs; the latter, of ſuch a dew, or rain, as coming in harveſt time, out of ſeaſon, when heat rather is needful, for the ripening and hardening of the grain, doth corrupt, and ſpoyl the crop, Prov.25.13.& 26.1. which they expound, ſome, to be a threatning of famine; other of them, a prediction of ſuch evils, as from the Aſſyrian King, ſhould befall Gods people: and other again, of that deſtruction, that from God ſhould befall the Aſſyrians. And to this purpoſe, a late Writer of note thus readeth the whole paſſage, Should I reſt, and look on in my place? (to wit, while the adverſary maketh untimely havock of my people, before my judgments are come to maturity, verſ. 5.) that would be as parching heat to herbs, as clouds ſending down dew, or rain, in harveſt; all then would be ſpoiled. But the words ſeem to me clear for the former ſenſe.

V. 5. For, afore the harveſt, &c.] He returneth, here, to ſhew the effect of Gods ſitting ſtill, and looking on, while the Aſſyrian proceeded in his atchievements; to wit, the untimely ruine and deſtruction of the Ethiopian eſtate, while it was yet in ſuch a flouriſhing condition, as might ſeem to give great hopes of further growth, and afford fair promiſes of long continuance: and this ſet forth, by the reſemblance of a vine, or other plant, that is pruned in an unſeaſonable time; or, a tree, that is lopped, and cut down, ere her fruit come to maturity, when ſhe is full of leaves, and bloſſoms, in the prime of her pride, Job 15.32,33. & 18.16. Pſal.37.2,35, 36. & 49.14. & 52.5. & 55.23. & 73.18-20. & 92. 7,12,13. & 94.23.

For] Or, But yet: as Pſal.118.17. Chap.9.1. Though I have an eye to mine own; yet this people, whom I will have to be deſtroyed, I will leave to the enemy.

afore] before harveſt come; as 1 Sam. 9. 15. before Saul came: & Job 3.24. before my meat; that is, before I eat. Heb. at the face of harveſt; that is, as ſome take it, when the harveſt is coming, is neer at hand: as Prov.18.12. at the face of deſtruction, that is, when it is approaching: according to which acception, it might be rendred, toward harveſt time: but the former ſenſe is the plainer, and more common.

the harveſt] The word includes, as well the time of plucking fruit, and gathering grapes, as of cutting, and inning corn; as well vintage, as harveſt, ſtrictly ſo termed. See Chap. 17.10,11.

when the bud is perfect] Or, as when (ſee ver. 3.) the bud is gone; (as Deut.3.14. for the word ſignifies either) as when the bud that firſt appears, is become a perfect, but a green, and unripe grape, which, ſaith the Jewiſh Doctor, is with them, in the moneth Sivan, which in part, anſwers our May.

and the ſour grape is ripening in the flower] Or, and the unripe, or, green grape is producing (ſo the word is uſed, Num.17. 8.) its flower; or, the flower. See Gen.40.10. Cant. 6. 11. & 7.12.

he ſhall both] Heb. and he ſhall; as Chap.14.22. or, the copulative is redundant, as Zach.2.6. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe, it may well ſtand in his native notion, and uſe, as a copulative, the words being thus rendred; But yet afore harveſt time, as when the bud is paſt, and the green grape is about producing its flower, and one cut off (that is, if one cut off) the ſprigs, and ſo forth.

cut off the ſprigs with pruning-hooks] Or, the ſprigs (the ſmall tender twigs; the word is no where elſe uſed) ſhall be cut off with pruning-hooks; ſo called from that uſe of them, Chap.2. 4. that which is not wont to be done with vines, or other plants, by thoſe that prune them, for the bettering of them, and to make them the more fruitful, Joh.15.2. at ſuch time, when their fruit is green upon them, and making on to maturity; for that were to deſtroy both fruit, and plant: and the cutting therefore here intimated, being thus deſcribed, appears thereby to be intended, for the deſtruction of them, againſt whom it was denounced; not for their correction, or cure. The verb is impersonally, and indefinitely here uſed; of which manner of ſpeech, ſee on Chap.2.19. ſo that we need not ſupply, either, the Lord, with ſome; or the King of Aſſyria, with others. Though it is true, that God, and by him, would do it, Chap.20.4. much leſs, as ſome others do, to put in, the vine-dreſſer, who is not wont to dreſs his vines, on this manner.

and take away, and cut down the branches] Heb. and the branches (to wit, the great ſpreading boughes, reſembling the better, or greater ſort of perſons with them, Jer. 48. 32.) he will take away, and cut down; or, remove by cutting down: this latter word, is no where elſe read in Scripture. But the Jewiſh Commenters upon the place, tell us, that with their Talmudiſts it is uſed for to cut off, or, to take away; as when they ſay, to cut off, or, to take away ones head: and a word drawn from it, for an evil ſpirit, that takes mens wits away from them; according whereunto, the words may be here rendred; the ſpreading branches he will remove, and take away; that is, they ſhall be removed, and carried away: the verb is, as the former, indefinite. So Gen.41.13. Luk.12.20.

ſprigs, and branches] Both the ſmall, and the great ones, Chap.9.14. & 10.33.

V. 6. They ſhall be left together, unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beaſts of the earth] To wit, the ſprigs, and branches, ſo cut off, and caſt away, like matter of no uſe or worth; as the cuttings, or ſhreddings of a vine, or other plant, oft times are, by thoſe that regard them not, Chap.17. 9. & 27.10. Ezek.15.2-4. eſpecially, when the fruit that is on them, is immature, and unfit for mans food, and are left lye, therefore, on heaps, not looked after, for birds to ſit, and beaſts to brouze on, and both to make meat of; the birds, of the fruit, and the beaſts, of the branches, Ezek.31.13.

left together] One with another; without reſpect had to their former, either meanneſs, or greatneſs, as if they made all but one heap, Chap.17.11.

fowls] Heb. fowl: as Ezek.39.4. properly, fowl of prey, Gen. 15. 11. 1 Sam. 14. 33. & 25. 14. Chap. 46. 11. Jer. 12. 9.

of the mountains] On which fowl of prey, eſpecially, do uſually breed, and abide.

beaſts] Heb. beaſt; as Jer.15.3. and as fowl before.

and the fowls ſhall ſummer upon them; and all the beaſts of the field ſhall winter upon them] That is, both the one, and the other, ſhall abide by them, find harbour with them, and feed upon them, all the year long. For we are not ſo to conceive it, as if the meaning were, that the fowl, and the beaſts ſhould divide the year between them; that the fowl ſhould ſummer, but not winter with them; the beaſts ſhould winter, but not ſummer with them: but that both winter, and ſummer, either of them, ſhould make their abode with them, finding matter ſufficient, ſuch as they deſire, and delight in, to detain them there, from ſummer to winter, and from winter to ſummer, from the one end of the year, to the other. Of ſuch like diſtributions, in this Prophet very frequent, ſee on Chap.5.13. and we need not therefore ſtand upon that nicety of ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, of fowl abounding more in ſummer time, and beaſts in winter. The words import a great, and continued waſte: Which ſome underſtand of the wealth of the land, and the people therein abiding; being expoſed, as a prey, to thoſe by whom they were ſubdued, or to the ſpoyl of theeves and robbers, either of their own, or from abroad. Others, of the carcaſes of men ſlain in great multitudes, and ſo left to be devoured by birds and beaſts, Pſal. 79.2. Thus they, who expound it of the Ethiopians. For I paſs by thoſe of the Jewiſh Writers, and ſome alſo of ours, who underſtand it, either of the hoſt of Gog, and Magog, Ezek.39.4. or of Sennacheribs army, Chap.37.37. neither of which I conceive to be ſo probable. Both the verſes I ſuppoſe, may be thus rendred, and knit together; But yet, with thoſe other people, it ſhall be, (ſee the like ellipſis, Matth.25. 14.) as when afore harveſt-time, the bud being gone, and the green grape about producing the flower, and the ſprigs be cut off with pruning-hooks, and the ſpreading branches be removed, and taken away, they are left together; (to wit, thoſe ſprigs, and branches, ſo cut off) or, (as ſome other likewiſe render it) So ſhall they (to wit, thoſe people, like to thoſe ſprigs, and branches) be left together, &c.

V. 7. In that time] That is, after this judgment executed upon the Ethiopians, in the dayes of the Meſſias: as Chap. 11.11. & 19.18,19. A Prophecy of the converſion of the Ethiopians unto Chriſt, by the miniſtery of the Goſpel: the firſt-fruits whereof, we have in that noble Courtier inſtructed by Philip, Act.8.27-39.

ſhall the Preſent be brought to the Lord of hoſts] The Ethiopians ſhall yeeld up themſelves to God, (whom they ſhall then know, and acknowledg, to be the Lord of hoſts, Pſal.24. 8,10. Ezek.30.8.) and to his Chriſt; and ſhall ſhew, and manifeſt their ſubmiſſion by ſpiritual ſacrifices, and oblations offered unto him, Pſal.68.31. Zeph.1.10. Mal.1.11. Act.8.27, 37. as ſubjects declare their homage, and allegiance to their ſoveraign, by Preſents, 2 Sam.8.6. 2 King. 17.4. 2 Chr. 17. 11. Pſal.68.29. & 72.10. & 76. 11. Chap. 16. 1. That which yet ſome expound of the prey taken from Sennacheribs army, Chap.33.23. conſecrated to Gods ſervice: as Num.31.28-47, 50-54. See Jer.51.44.

of a people ſcattered, and peeled] Or, from a people ſcattered, and peeled; the word, from, here wanting: as Chap. 52.2. is ſupplyed from the next clauſe: as Chap.13.13. & 30.17.

from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto, a nation meted out, and trodden under feet] See of all this, ver.2.

whoſe land the rivers have ſpoyled] That being now effected, whereof before they were advertiſed, ver.2.

to the place of the name of the Lord of hoſts] To the place, where Gods worſhip ſhall then be ſetled; as ſometime it was at Jeruſalem, Deut.12.5,11,14. Act.8.27. Joh.4.21,23.

the mount Zion] A type of the Church, Chap.2.2,3.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of Egypt] An heavy Prophecy concerning Egypt. See Chap.13.1. As the Prophecy in the foregoing Chapter, was againſt Ethiopia; ſo this is againſt Egypt: and the next after it, againſt both joyntly, in regard of their vicinity, and mutual confederacy. See likewiſe againſt Egypt, Jer.43.10. & 44.30. & 46. 2, 13. Ezek. 29. & 30. & 31.2,18. & 32.

Egypt] Heb. Mitſraim. So termed, from one of Chams ſons of that name, Gen. 10.6. whoſe poſterity ſeated themſelves in that country: the name, Egypt, we have from the Greeks, whoſe Grammarians and Hiſtorians ſay, ſome of them, that it had that name from an ancient King that there reigned: Others, from the river Nilus, that runs through it; as being at firſt the name, not of the country, but of the river; and that from the colour of the water thereof, black like a vulture. See Sihor, Chap.23.3. Jer.2.18.

Behold] An uſual beginning with the Prophets, this eſpecially; requiring attention to Gods meſſages, brought by them, and ſtirring up mens minds to a ſerious and ſedulous conſideration of the matter therein contained. So Chap. 7. 14. & 24. & 32.1. The Chapter conſiſts of two parts; the former, concerning the calamities and ruine of the Egyptian State: the latter, concerning their reſtitution, and return unto God, ver.18,&c.

the Lord rideth] A deſcription of God coming in judgement againſt Egypt, together with the ſad and diſmal effects thereof.

the Lord rideth] Heb. riding: as ſpeaking of a thing preſent: as Chap.3.1. and a thing that he ſaw, Chap.2.1. as if he beheld the Lord riding in pomp and ſtate toward Egypt; as Judges uſe to do unto the places, where they are to hold their ſeſſion, or aſſiſe, Judg.5.10. & 12.14. 1 Sam. 7.16. or, in a warlike manner, leading his troops, and riding before them, as Princes do, when they go out into the field, 2 Sam. 18.9. Pſal.18,10. & 45.4. Hab.3.8. Rev.6.2. & 19.11,14.

upon a ſwift cloud] Heb. light: as Chap. 18. 2. Jer.2.23. becauſe lightneſs cauſeth ſwiftneſs. God is ſaid to ride, as upon the heavens, Pſal.68.4,33. ſo, to make the clouds his chariots, Pſal.104.3. and here, to come riding into Egypt upon a cloud: as to intimate an impoſſibility of keeping him out, from entrance upon any land he comes to invade; who comes riding not on the ground below, but aloft in the air, Pſal. 18. 11,12. Matth.24.30. Rev.1.7. ſo more ſpecially here, to note his ſudden and unexpected coming againſt Egypt; becauſe clouds muſt needs be very rare in thoſe parts, where ordinarily, it never raineth, Deut.11.10,11. See Ezek.30.3. and not on a cloud only; but on a light, or ſwift cloud; as elſewhere, upon the wings of the wind, Pſal.18.10. & 102.3. thereby to ſignifie, the ſpeedy execution, and accompliſhment of the judgment againſt Egypt, here denounced. So Chap.13. 22. Ezek.12.27,28.

and ſhall come into Egypt] Or, as the word may well be rendred, and coming into, or entring upon Egypt; yea, or coming againſt Egypt: as Gen.33.1. behold Eſau coming; for the prepoſition is wanting: as 2 King.8.7. & 10. 17. 1 Chr. 19. 15. and the Prophet ſpeaks it, as if he ſaw God, in ſome viſible, but ſtately, and majeſtical manner, either marching on againſt Egypt, or falling in upon it, not unlike one of the levant ſpouts, as they commonly call them, wherein a vaſt cloud full of water, ſuddenly falleth, and beateth down all that it lights upon: peradventure alluded to, Ezek. 30. 18. where mention is of a cloud, that ſhould cover Egypt. See the like expreſſions of things; as in preſent view, Chap.7.14. & 10. 28-32. & 13.4,5.

and the idols of Egypt ſhall be moved at his preſence] There were two things that the Egyptians truſted much unto; the multitude of their idols, and the might of their men: but the Prophet here tells them, that neither of theſe ſhould ſtand them in any ſtead. For that the one of them, to wit, their idols, ſhould be ſhaken and ſhattered; and the other, to wit, their mighty men, ſhould faint and fail.

idols] Of the word, ſee on Chap.2.8.

ſhall be moved at his preſence] Or, ſhall tremble, or, quake: as Chap.7.2. or, ſtagger, or, reel: as Chap.24.20. & 29.9. (for ſo the ſame word is in thoſe places rendred, and would rather ſo be here, to expreſs the emphaſis of it) before, or, from his face; as the Hebrew hath it: that is, becauſe of him. as it is rendred, Pſal.38.3. or, for fear of him: as Chap.21.15. The Egyptian idols ſhall be no more able to ſtand before the face God, then the Philiſtine Dagon before the Ark of God, 1 Sam.5.3,4. See Exod.12.12. Jer.43.12,13. & 46.25. Ezek. 30. 13.

and the heart of Egypt ſhall melt in the midſt of it] That is, the courage of the Egyptians ſhall be utterly quailed, Jer.46.5,12, 15, 21.

heart] For courage. Whence alſo that Engliſh term, 2 Sam. 17. 10.

Egypt] For Egyptians: as verſ.2.

melt] As Chap. 13.7.

in the midſt of it] within them: as Pſal.22.14. ver.3.

V. 2. And I will ſet the Egyptians againſt the Egyptians] The Prophet now ſpeaks, in the perſon of God; who in theſe words, threatens to ſet the Egyptians at odds, and diſagreement, to deſtroy one another, by inteſtine jars, and wars, among themſelves: as he did the like, ſometime, with other nations, that came to invade his people, Judg. 7. 22. 1 Sam. 14.16,20. 2 Chr.20.23. Chap.49.26. This ſome ſuppoſe to have been done under Pſammetichus; who living about theſe times, and being a petty King, among others of a particular Province in Egypt, upon ſome indignities offered him, by the Princes of the other Provinces, to revenge himſelf upon them, called in ſome forraign forces, and by help of them, over-powring the reſt, at length made himſelf Lord of all Egypt, Herodot. lib.2. Diodor. lib. 1. Others imagine it, to have thus fallen out upon the Aſſyrians invading the country, ſome being willing to receive him, and another party oppoſing them: as Some alſo deem the like to have been, on the like occaſion, in the State of Judah, Chap. 8. 6. But the former ſeems more probable.

ſet] Heb. mingle; ſometime in confederacy: as Chap. 9. 11. ſometime in war, and jar: and ſo here. See on Chap. 9. 11.

the Egyptians againſt the Egyptians] Heb. Egypt againſt Egypt: as, Moab for Moab, Chap.16.7.

and they ſhall fight every one againſt his brother; and every one againſt his neighbour] They ſhall war (ſo the Hebrew) one with another; and ſeek one to deſtroy another, without any regard had, either to vicinity, or alliance, Chap.9.19,20. Jer. 31. 34.

city againſt city] As city of city, 2 Chr. 15. 6. and houſe againſt houſe, Luk.11.17. but there houſe againſt houſe, is an houſe againſt it ſelf: here city againſt city, is one city againſt another.

and Kingdome againſt Kingdome] One Province againſt another. For Egypt before the war raiſed by Pſammetichus, conſiſted of twelve Provinces, Herodot. l.2. Kingdom againſt Kingdome, one againſt another: as Matth.24.7.

V. 3. And the ſpirit of Egypt ſhall fail in the midſt thereof] Not their courage, and valour only, ver.2. but their wiſdom, and policy alſo, ſhall falter, and fail, ver. 11, 13. God will infatuate them, and turn their wiſdome into folly, 2 Sam.15. 31. Job 5.13,14. & 12.17,20,24,25. Chap.44.25. Rom.1.21, 22. 1 Cor.1.20,25,27. & 3.19.

fail] Heb. be emptied: as Chap.24.3. Jer. 19.7. it is as if he had ſaid; their wits ſhall be drained: alluding to their folly, in draining, and diverting the courſe of their river, and thereby cauſing the waters thereof to fail them, verſ. 5, 6.

and I will deſtroy the counſel thereof] Heb. ſwallow up: as Chap.3.12. & 20.7. that is, either bereave, and deprive them of that faculty, by which, they might be enabled to give any prudent and wholſome counſel, for the ſafety and welfare of the State; called the ſpirit of counſel, Chap.11.2. verſ.11,13. or, overthrow, defeat, and fruſtrate their counſels, that they ſhall never take effect, Pſal. 33. 10,11. Prov. 31. 30. Chap. 8. 10.

and they ſhall ſeek to the idols] When they are thus, either puzzeled in their counſels, or defeated in the iſſue of them, being at their wits end; they ſhall betake themſelves to their idols; as Moab to his, Chap. 15. 2. & 16. 12. but with like ſucceſs, both: and to their Magicians, as Pharao did, Exod.8. 18. & 9.11. but neither of them ſhall be able to afford any ayd or advice to them: no more then in the like caſe unto Babylon, Chap.47.12.

and to the charmers] The word here uſed is no where elſe found; and is by divers therefore diverſly rendred. The Jewiſh Doctors here give us little light; only one of them tells us, that his Father told him, that it was an Arabick term, ſignifying ſome kind of Magicians: it ſeems to come from a root that hath a notion of doing things quietly, ſoftly, gently, Gen.33.14. 2 Sam.18.5. 1 King.21.27. ch. 38 15. Whence ſome conjecture, that it ſhould import ſome ſuch kind of witches, as did diſturb, and endammage men, when they were at reſt in their ſleep. Others, ſuch as uſed fair, ſmooth, and gentle words, as ſome are ſaid, by praiſing, and bleſſing things, to bewitch them. It may rather be, that they had this name given them, from that ſoft, and low, or ſlow, and drawling ſpeech, that they uſed, either in their ſpells, or in their anſwers to thoſe that conſulted them. See Chap. 8. 19. For I cannot concur with them, that hold it to be the name of ſome idol.

and to them that have familiar ſpirits, and to the wizzards] Of theſe two, ſee on Chap.8.19.

V. 4 And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruel Lord; and a fierce King ſhall rule over them] Theſe words, the moſt, both of the Jewiſh, and ours, generally, expound, of thoſe forraign Kings, by whom Egypt ſhould be ſubdued. Some, and ſo the Rabbines unanimouſly, of the King of Aſſyria, Chap.20.4. Others, of the King of Babylon, Jer. 43. 10. & 44.30. & 46.13. Ezek.29.19. & 30.10,24. Others, rather, of their own Kings, by their cruelty, and folly, rigorous courſes, and unadviſed projects, oppreſſing their Subjects, weakning their Kingdoms, and by inteſtine jars working the ruine one of another. That which the ſequel of the context ſeems moſt fitly to agree with.

give over] Heb. ſhut up, or, cloſe, Gen. 8. 2. Pſal. 63. 11 The Jewiſh Writers expound it, by another of neer affinity to it, and of the ſame uſe with it, 1 Sam.24.18. & 26.8. Pſal. 31. 8. Nor ſeems wholly improbable, the conjecture of thoſe, that ſuppoſe the Prophet made uſe of this word, rather then the other, though more uſual, in alluſion to the ſluces, or ſtews rather, mentioned, ver.10. wherein the Egyptians uſed to keep their fiſh; as intimating, that the Rulers here ſpoken of, ſhould keep them ſhut up, and reſtrained, as they kept their fiſh in their ſtews.

into the hand] in the power: as Pſal.78.61.

of a cruel Lord] Heb. Lords, in the plural; hard, Deut. 26. 6. in the ſingular. Which yet the Jewiſh Writers, as our verſion hath it, underſtand but of one: as if it were ſaid; Some one hard, and harſh Lord, or other; or, an hard Lord ſimply; alledging divers places, where the word is in a plural form; though ſpeaking but of ſome one: as Gen. 24.29. & 42. 30. Exod.21.4,6. 1 King.22.17. 2 Chr. 18. 16. which they expound of Sennacherib: as Others, alſo, of ours, do, of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer.46.6. and ſome of Pſammetichus before mentioned: whom alſo each of them reſpectively underſtand to be the fierce King ſpoken of, in the next clauſe; the ſame thing, but in divers words, being intended in both. But on the other ſide, there want not, that take the word in a plural, as well notion, as form; and read the text; Lords hard, or harſh, each of them: a manner of ſpeaking in Scripture very uſual. Of which, ſee on Chap. 2. 20. So Pſal. 78. 15. & 119. 139. Chap.16.8. and they underſtand it, to be ſpoken of thoſe twelve Princes, or Lords, who as petty Kings, ruled Egypt, divided amongſt them, into ſo many Provinces, after the death of Sethon, who had been King of the whole country before. See Herodote, lib.2.

a fierce King] The Hebrew epithet is ſometime taken in the better part, for powerful, and ſtrong, Gen.49.3. Num. 13. 28. & 21.24. Chap.25.3. ſometime, in the worſe part, for fierce, and cruel, Gen. 49.7. Deut. 28. 50. and thus here. This fierce King, is by ſome ſuppoſed, to be Pſammetichus, the Father of Nechoh, by whom the good King Joſias was ſlain, 2 King.23.29.

ſaith the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] See Chap.10.16.

V. 5. And the waters ſhall fail from the Sea] There were two principal means of upholding the Egyptian Eſtate, in wealth, and plenty; their traffick by ſea, and the overflowing of Nilus, that inſtead of rain, which they utterly wanted, watered their ground for them; and by ſuch ſlimy ſtuff, as it brought down along with it, made the ſoyl, which it overſpread, exceeding fertile, and fruitful. In regard whereof, the inundation of it was anciently celebrated, and is yet to this day, with a great deal of ſolemnity; and a yearly account was taken, and kept, how high the river was riſen; the expectation of a plentiful, or penurious crop, much depending thereupon. See Pliny, l.5. c.11. & l.35. c.7. But with the failing of both theſe, their principal props, and means of ſupport, are the Egyptians here threatned. The former, Some ſuppoſe to have been effected, partly, by the hoſtile incurſions of the enemy; partly by their own jars, and diviſions among themſelves; and partly, by Pirats of other people, lying upon their coaſt, and diſturbing their trade. Of which, falling out, much about theſe times, ſee Herodote, l. 2. The latter, by the folly of their own Princes, and Rulers; of which, further hereafter. I am not ignorant, that ſome late Interpreters, refer all that is here ſaid, to the latter only; reading the text, Some, For they ſhall deſtroy the waters from running into the ſea. Others, For they ſhall diminiſh the waters from the ſea, or, of the ſea; (that is, of the river Nilus; all great waters being by the Hebrews termed ſeas. See Chap.9. 1.) ſo that the river ſhall be dryed up. Which they underſtand of the fond, and unadviſed practice of thoſe twelve Rulers, who for the making of a vaſt lake called the lake of Moeris, and the building of two ſtately Pyramides, in the midſt of it; and a Labyrinth neer unto it, for bigneſs, and workmanſhip, almoſt beyond belief; (and all this, only, out of an ambitious humour, to leave a memorial of themſelves, and their greatneſs, to poſterity) both put their people to exceſſive labour and pains; and ſo weakned the river, by water drawn from it, that it could not ſo freely, and plentifully water the country, as formerly it had wont to do; and for this they cite Herodote, l. 2. And it may well be, that ſomewhat of this kind may be intimated in the latter part of the verſe: of which, more anon. But for the former part of it, I adhere unto that, as moſt probable, that was formerly propounded.

the waters ſhall fail from the ſea] Or, ſhall be dryed up; as Some of the Jewiſh Doctors expound it, from Chap.41.17. and ſo the old Latine rendreth it. They ſhall be deprived of their ſea-trade; it ſhall be no more beneficial to them, then as if the ſea had no acceſs to them. See ſomewhat the like of Tyrus, Chap.23.1,4. See alſo, ch.11.15.

and the river ſhall be waſted, and dryed up] the river, to wit, Nilus, called the river of Egypt, Amos 8.8. & 9.5. becauſe it runs down along clean through their country; and both fatteth their ſoil, ſtoreth them with fiſh, Num. 11.5. and enricheth them by traffick. See on Chap.18.1. Heb. ſhall be dryed up, (as ver.6. ch.37.25. & 50.2. & 51.10. for applyed to water, it alwaies ſo ſignifies) and become dry: become as dry land; from this word, ſo termed, Gen. 1.9,10. So Job 14.11. Some of the Jewiſh Commenters expound all this, of the waſte of men, that the Aſſyrian King ſhould make in Egypt, by reaſon whereof, there ſhould be no more trading there, then as if Sea, and river, were both dryed up. See Ezek.30.11,12. And ſome Chriſtian Writers underſtand it, of a great dearth, that God would, through drought, bring upon them, by reſtraining the river, from his accuſtomed courſe of overflowing; at leaſt, in ſuch meaſure, as was needful for a competent ſupply. To which purpoſe, they alledge ſome paſſages out of a panegyrical oration of Pliny the younger, not altogether unlike to thoſe of the Prophet in this place. But the Prophet ſeems rather, as others, before-mentioned, to ſpeak here of errours, committed by their Kings, and Rulers, to the prejudice, both of themſelves, and their people, in draining the river, at ſeveral paſſages, and in ſeveral places, for the effecting of their own vain, and ambitious deſigns. And of this kind, as by the Prophet here intended, is by Some Interpreters of note, ſuppoſed to be the digging of that vaſt lake of Moeris, by thoſe twelve Rulers, or Tyrants, before ſpoken of. But firſt they fail much, both in the time, and in the author of that ſtupendious work. For it was done a long time before their date, by a King, whoſe name it bears, who, as Herodote himſelf relates, lived ſome hundreds of years before them, though by occaſion of the Labyrinth, by thoſe twelve, built neer to it, he takes occaſion to make a further, and larger relation of it, as a work far ſurpaſſing the erecting of that Labyrinth, which might otherwiſe ſeem a matchleſs maſter-peece. Beſide that, the making of that lake, in that place, in that manner, is deemed to have been a work of much uſe, and of great benefit to the country; both for the reſtraining of the river, when it ſurrounded beyond meaſure, and for the helping of it, by an out-let, when it was likely to fall ſhort. See Diodor. lib. 1. But (to paſs by other works of leſs note, in the ſame kind, done by others) of this nature, was that ditch, or water-courſe, digged, after the reign of thoſe twelve, by Pſammetichus, as Some, Strabo, lib. 17. or by Necho his ſon, and Succeſſor, as others; Herodote, l. 2. attempting thereby, to make a free paſſage by water, from Nilus, into the red-ſea; in the purſuit of which attempt, Herodote reports, that he loſt an hundred and twenty thouſand of his people; and at length left the work unaccompliſhed. And to the impairing of the river, and the impeaching of the State, by ſuch vain and fond courſes as theſe, the Prophets words may well be deemed, to have reference, in this place. See ver.6.

V. 6. And they ſhall turn the rivers far away] This ſeems to confirm the latter expoſition of the words before-going. For who are they that ſhould do this? the ſons of men, ſaith one of the Jewiſh Interpreters: and thoſe in likelihood here intended, that drew away the ſtreams of the river, into places far remote, from the main channel, it ran in. Howbeit; the verb being taken indefinitely, the text may be read, the rivers, or, ſtreams, ſhall be turned far away: or, ſhall go back: to wit, by the falling of the water: as ſome here render it. See Chap. 2.20.

rivers] For, river; or, the ſtreams of it: as Chap. 11.15. or, as ſome, the water-courſes drawn from Nilus, for the watering of their grounds: but the former ſeems more probable.

and] The copulative is not in the original: but were it to be ſupplyed, it might rather be rendred by the finitive, ſo that; as Chap.11.3. & 13.2. If it be ſupplyed, as a copulative, it ſhould rather have been inſerted before the laſt branch of this verſe; or at the beginning of the next.

the brooks of defence] That is, ſay ſome, the rivers, or ſtreams of Egypt, in general: Egypt, ſay they, being elſewhere ſo termed. And true it is, that the word here uſed, is in ſound, and letters, ſomewhat like to that name, that Egypt bears in Hebrew. But neither are they the ſame, nor of the like form, nor in likelihood ariſing from the ſame root: for as for thoſe other places (which yet in effect are but as one) where the very ſame words are found, that are here uſed, to wit, 2 King. 19.24. & ch. 37.25. Though ſome of the Jewiſh Writers would by Matſor there, underſtand Egypt; yet others, of their own, therein controll them: and there is little reaſon, in either place, ſo to expound it. The word ſignifies, either obſeſſion, as Deut.28.52. or munition: as Deut. 20.20. And Some therefore by the brooks, or rivers here mentioned, underſtand ſuch water-courſes, as environed ſtrong cities, or holds, in regard whereof, they could not be ſo eaſily ſurprized; termed therefore rivers of obſeſſion, or, ſiege, ſay ſome; becauſe places encompaſſed by them, could not be ſtormed, nor taken, but by long ſiege; or, of munition, and defence, as others; becauſe they were no ſmall ſtrength unto thoſe places; yea, were the main ſtrength of Egypt, Ezek.29.3.& 30.2. Howbeit, others underſtand them of water-courſes, kept in with banks, and dams; and they render the words, ſome of them, rivers of obſeſſion, or, ſiege; becauſe environed and beſet with thoſe banks, as cities beſieged are with the enemies camp. Others, rivers of munition; becauſe fenced, and mounded, by ſuch works raiſed about them, to preſerve and keep them from diminution, and decay, ver.10. See ch. 22.11. Of whether of the two we take them, they could not but be waſted, when the main river, that fed them, ſhould fail.

ſhall be emptied] Or, waſted; or, drained: or, exhauſted. See Chap.10.2. & 17.4. Some render it, they ſhall waſte, or, exhauſt the rivers: to wit, the perſons before ſpoken of. But the word is never uſed actively. See Job 28.4. Pſal.79.8. & 116.6. & 142.6. and it is no where elſe found.

and dryed up] As ver.5. and ſo conſtantly, Gen. 8.13. Job 14.11. Pſal.106.9. Chap.44.27. Jer.2.12. Hoſ.13.15. and it is amiſs therefore rendred by ſome, they ſhall dry up, as before: the verb being never active, in the form here uſed.

the reeds and flags ſhall wither] Or, decay. See Chap. 33.9. Theſe water-plants, or ſhrubs, muſt needs fade, and decay, when the waters, that nouriſhed them, failed. So of the like, Job 8.11. and theſe were of much uſe with them; for of theſe, were their boats and barks uſually made. See Chap. 18.1. In regard whereof, ſome Interpreters ſuppoſe, that a decay of ſhipping is here denounced: of theſe alſo, were matts for their bedding, weels for their fiſhing, and baskets of all ſorts, commonly made with them.

the reeds] Heb. reed, or cane: for ſo is the Hebrew, and ours, from it, ch.36.6. & 42.3.

and flags] Heb. flag, or, reit: ſuch as grew about the brink of the river Nilus, Exod.2.3. and other the like water-courſes. Whereof alſo, the red-ſea hath its name, in Hebrew. See Chap.18.1.

ſhall wither] So Chap.33.9. Lebanon is withered. The word is no where elſe found; though ſome render it, both here, and there, cut down. But the former ſeems the more probable.

V. 7. The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks] To wit, ſhall wither away. For that is here intended; and may be ſupplyed, either from the verſe before-going; or from what followeth in this.

paper reeds] The word is no where elſe found in Scripture; and is in that regard the more ambiguous. The moſt expound it, graſs, inſtancing for proof thereof, in a word neer unto it, Judg.20.33. or green things, as having reference to a word uſed, Pſal.37.35. and this way the Jewiſh Criticks generally run; with whom ours alſo have formerly unanimouſly concurred. Howbeit, the places they point us to, ſeem rather to look another way. And ſome later Interpreters, whom our verſion follows, underſtand by it, the paper reeds, or canes, or, ruſhes; (for a kind of bulruſh alſo ſome make it) ſo called, becauſe they afforded ſheets of paper to write on; before ſuch paper, as we now have, or parchment, were for that purpoſe in uſe. Now this kind of ſhrub being peculiar to Egypt, proved a rich commodity to that State, all civil people deſiring to have traffick with them for it. Nor is it likely, therefore, that the Prophet would omit the failing of ſuch a water-plant, for which the land was ſo famous, and that was ſo advantagious unto it. The Hebrew word they ſuppoſe to be deduced from a word, that ſignifies an hide, or, skin, Gen.3.21. Exod.34.30. becauſe the ſheets of paper were made of the rinde, or coat of it. I ſhould rather derive it from a word, that ſignifies to ſtrip, or make bare, Chap.2.17. & 32.11. becauſe it was ſtripped to make writing-ſheets for books, and tables, and other the like uſes; as hemp, and flax, is, to make linnen in theſe times; though after a far diverſe manner. See Pliny, lib. 13, cap. 11, 12.

by the brooks] Heb. brook, or, river: either the river Nilus it ſelf, as ſome here underſtand it, ſo termed, Gen.41.1,2. Exod. 4.9. & 7.15,18. or, the water-courſes, derived from it: (the word being taken collectively) of which before, ver. 6. or both.

by the mouth of the brooks] Heb. brook; or, river: as before; that is, ſay ſome, by, or, about, the fountain of the river Nilus; at which the water iſſueth out, as at a mouth, where, if moiſture fail, it cannot be expected in the places more remote, that muſt have all their water thence: and ſo infer hence, a ſtupendious waſte, and conſumption of that river, reaching up to the very firſt head of it. But this ſeems nothing probable; nor doth the Prophet ſeem to ſpeak, here, of the river it ſelf alone; but, as our verſion rendreth it, of the ſtreams, and water-courſes alſo, derived from it. Beſide, that the mouth of the river might ſeem rather to import thoſe ſtreams, or channels, whereby it diſgorgeth it ſelf into the ſea; (whereof, ſee Chap.11.15.) being in other languages ſo termed: and being applyed to the water-courſes, thence derived, thoſe paſſages, whereby the water of the river made its entrance into them; or whereby they emptied themſelves again into the river. But by mouth, I ſuppoſe ſimply to be underſtood the brinks, or banks of either; called as here, the mouth; ſo elſewhere, the lip, Gen.41.3. Exod.2.3. Ezek. 47. 6,7. and the two brinks, as lips, on either ſide, ſeem to make up a mouth; are at leaſt, to the river, or water-courſe, as lips to the mouth of man, or beaſt.

and every thing ſowen by the brooks, ſhall wither] Heb. every thing ſowen beſide the river, or, brook, ſhall be dryed up: Places neer to rivers, and brooks, are wont to be moſt fertile, and fruitful; and neer them men deſire uſually to ſow, and plant, Chap.32.20. alluded to, Eccl.11.1. but the things there ſowen, and planted, muſt needs fail, when the water fails, that made the places adjacent ſo fertile. This comprehends ſuch grain, herbs, roots, and other uſeful plants, as hemp, flax, and the like, as they uſed to ſet, or ſow there. See Exod. 9. 31, 32. Num. 11. 5. ver. 9. as the former, thoſe that grew there of themſelves, ver. 6.

be driven away, and be no more] Heb. and not be: as Pſal. 37.36. & 39.13. ſhall ſo fade away, that they ſhall be, as if there never had been any ſuch thing there. Though there be, that underſtand it of the ſpoyl that the enemy ſhall make of them: but the courſe of the context ſeems to carry it the other way.

V. 8. The fiſhers alſo ſhall mourn] As Chap.3.26. Becauſe the fiſh ſhall fail: as they muſt of neceſſity, when the element fails, out of which they cannot live; and which formerly did abundantly furniſh them with fiſh, Num.11.5.

and they that caſt angle into the brooks ſhall lament] The ſame thing in other terms.

caſt angle] Heb. hook: as Job 41.1. Hab.1.15. there being two kinds, or courſes, of catching fiſh, moſt commonly uſed, by hook, or, by net: the one is pointed at in this branch; the other in the next.

the brooks] Heb. brook, or, river: as before, ver.7.

and they that ſpread nets upon the water ſhall languiſh] All ſorts of fiſhermen ſhall be diſheartened, and much grieved, becauſe their trading ſhall decay.

nets] Heb. net: as Hab.1.15,16. and as hook before.

upon the water] Heb. upon the face, or, ſurface of the water: as Gen.1.2. Eccl.11.1.

V. 9. Moreover] Heb. And; as Chap.7.10. & 8.1.

they that work in fine flax, and they that weave net-works ſhall be confounded] Becauſe the materials ſhall fail, that ſhould ſet them on work.

in fine flax] The epithet given to the flax here mentioned, is elſewhere uſed of vines, and their branches; and is deemed to import the choyceſt of them, Chap.5.2. & 16.8. and in like manner, being here applyed to flax, it ſeems to imply the fineſt, and choiceſt ſort of it: as in Arabick, the choiceſt ſort of ſilk, is by ſome of the Jewiſh Criticks, reported ſo to be termed: though ſome of them render it, with the Chaldee, combed, or dreſſed flax; becauſe the Talmudiſts commonly uſe the word in that ſenſe. But that which one of them adds, that of it they made nets to fiſh with, is as ridiculous, as to imagine, that men ſhould uſe to fiſh with ſilken nets, or to angle, as he ſaid ſometime, with golden hooks. That fine linnen, and linnen yarn, was a principal commodity in Egypt, appears, 1 King.10.28. Prov.7.16. Ezek. 27.7. Of the ſeveral ſorts whereof, and the gain that Egypt anciently made thereof, ſee Pliny, l.9. c.1.

net-works] The word here uſed, is by ſome ſuppoſed to come from another, that ſignifies an hole, Chap.11.8. Ezek. 8.7. and ſome of them, therefore, underſtand by it, nets, to fiſh with; ſo called, becauſe full of holes to let the water paſs at, while they hold faſt the fiſh: this the rather, becauſe, ſay they, it followeth, verſ. 10. the nets are broken: but of that, when we come to it. Others of them, with more probability, conceive it, to import cloth, or garments, wrought or woven of purpoſe, with many holes in them; ſuch as our net-works, cut-works, and loom-works ordinarily are. See Chap.3.18. But others deducing it from a word, that ſignifies white, Eſth.1.6. & 8.15. render it, white-works: that being one ſpecial commendation of linnen, lawn, and the like, to be pure white; and ſuch, therefore, were men of chief note wont to be clad with, Eſth.8.16. Dan.7.9. whereof alſo, the name, taken from this, is very frequently given them in Hebrew, 1 King. 21. 8, 11. Neh.2.16. & 4.14. Eccl. 10.17. Chap.34.12. Jer.26,19.& 39.6. and this to me ſeemeth the moſt probable.

V. 10. And they ſhall be broken in the purpoſes thereof, all that make ſluces, and ponds for fiſh] Theſe words are very diverſly rendred, and expounded; in regard of ſome terms in them very ambiguous; we will firſt therefore diſcuſs the words, and then draw up the expoſitions, that ſeem to be moſt probable.

in the purpoſes] The word ſignifieth foundations, Pſal.11.3. Hence ſome expound it, projects, or purpoſes. Which are wont to be the foundation and ground of action, and practice. Others, the walls, and mounds, or, dams, and ſluces, raiſed and built, to keep in the water, in the ſtews, or ponds, hereafter mentioned. The one of theſe two, ſeems to be moſt likely here intended. For little ſhew or colour of reaſon is brought for their opinion, by thoſe, that render it nets: and yet not a few are they, that go this way: and they derive it from a wrong root, that tranſlate it, irriguous, or well-watered places: as if it came from a word, that importeth drinking; which the analogy will not bear.

thereof] Or, of it; to wit, of Egypt, their Kings, and Rulers, of whom before, ver.5,6. and hereafter, ver.11,12.

all that make] Or, of all that make.

ſluces] Or, dams. So ſome render it; as from a verb, that ſignifies to ſhut, or, ſtop up, Gen.8.2. Pſal. 107.42. Others, for hire, or, gain; as the word is very commonly uſed, Jon. 1. 3. Mal.3.5. the prepoſition for, ſupplyed: as Mal.2.5.

and ponds] Or, ſtews, to keep fiſh in; either for ſale, or, to make uſe of otherwiſe, when they pleaſe.

for fiſh] Heb. of ſoul: ponds of ſoul, or, of ſouls; that is, living things: the word taken collectively, for ponds of fiſh; according to that, Gen.1.20. let the water bring forth gliding creature of ſoul; or, ponds of deſire, delight, or, pleaſure: as Gen.23.8. if it be your pleaſure; and Deut.23.24. thou mayſt eat according to thy deſire, or, pleaſure: ponds ſerving for delight, and pleaſure. The whole verſe then, may thus be rendred; And through her, or, their projects, they ſhall all be broken that make ſluces, or, dams, for ponds of fiſh: Or, her, or their banks, or, dams, ſhall be broken, with all thoſe that make, for hire, or, gain, ponds; or, that make gain of ponds, or, ſtews, of fiſh, or, for pleaſure. Whether way we render it, the meaning is, that all the pains and coſt that men had been at, about the making of ponds, and ſtews, to keep fiſh in, and about dams and ſluces, to ſecure them, ſhould come to nothing, the water being drained away from them; neither yeeld them any gain, nor ſtand them in any ſtead: and in a word, as before he intimated, that there ſhould be no catching of fiſh, ver.8. ſo here, that there ſhould be no keeping of fiſh with them. Howbeit, ſome expound it, as if the meaning were, that the people were worn out, by working about thoſe lakes, and water-courſes, above mentioned, and all to no purpoſe: the like whereunto, ſee Jer.51.58. But the other ſenſe before given, ſuits better with the main current of the context.

V. 11. Surely the Princes of Zoan are fools; the counſel of the wiſe Counſellers of Pharao is become brutiſh] The Prophet, in theſe words, directeth us unto one main cauſe of the calamities of the people and State of Egypt, before related; to wit, not ſo much any forraign hoſtility, or invaſion from abroad, as their own folly; the witleſs carriage of their Nobles, and Counſellers at home, who by their fond flatteries, ſoothed up their Kings, and put them upon ſuch inconſiderate deſigns, as tended to the impoveriſhing of the land, and the ruinating of the State.

Zoan] Heb. Tſoan, a very ancient city in Egypt, Num.13.22. one of their Kings ſeats, that gave the name unto the whole Province about it, Pſal.78.12. it was from the Syriack form, by the Greeks, called alſo Tanes, by the loſs of a letter; as of Tſor, or Tſur, Tyre, and Tyrus: and from it, the Tanaitick diviſion; and the Tanaitick ſtream, one of the principal ones, by which Nilus makes its way into the ſea. See Herodote, l.2. Strabo, l.17. Pliny, l.5. c.9,10.

the counſel of the wiſe counſellers] Heb. of the wiſe of the counſellers of Pharao the counſel. That is, the counſel of thoſe that are the wiſeſt among them; as the wiſe of women, Prov.14.1. that is, the wiſer ſort of them; ſuch as are wiſer then many, or the moſt, ordinarily are, Prov.31.10. Eccl.7.28. and, the wicked of the earth, Ezek. 6. 21. for, the wickedeſt upon earth. The fierce of the nations, Ezek. 28.7. for the fierceſt among them. They impair the force of the ſentence, that render it with a needleſs interpoſition, the wiſe, or wiſe men and, counſellers; there being no copulative in the text.

is become brutiſh] Not fooliſh only, but ſottiſh; ſuch as might better beſeem brute-beaſts then men endued with common ſenſe. So Jer.10.14,21. & 51.17.

How ſay ye unto Pharao] The Prophet turns his ſpeech unto the king of Egypts counſellers and Nobles, taxing them, by way of expoſtulation, for their groundleſs opinion, overweening conceit, and vain vaunting and boaſting to their king, of their wiſedom coming unto them, as by deſcent, and the antiquity of their houſes; thereby to commend themſelves, and their advices, to him; and to procure the greater regard to what they ſuggeſted. Or, as ſome, for their groſs and palpable flatteries, wherewith they wrought into their king, the like vain conceit of his own extraordinary wiſedom, as derived to him from his anceſtors; and of the antiquity of his ſtock, drawn down by a continued line of many deſcents, through a multitude of ages, and a vaſte number of years, from ſome of their imaginary deities.

ſay ye] Or, can ye ſay; as Jer.2.23. with what face can ye ſay it? So Jer.8.8.

ſay] Or, as ſome, dictate. Put ſuch words, as theſe, into your kings mouth; as 2 Sam. 14. 3.

unto Pharao] Or, as ſome, of Pharao; as Ch.37.33.

Pharao] A common name of the kings of Egypt, in the more ancient times, it being, as it may ſeem, a term of Sovereignty among them, Gen.12.15. & 40.1,2. & 41. 10, 44. Exod.1.8, 11. For it may juſtly be doubted, whether they ſhoot not wide, that give the word, either an Hebrew, or a Chaldee original. Yet, by ſome other peculiar ſirnames, they were wont to be diſtinguiſhed; as Pharao Necoh, 2 King. 23. 29. and Pharao Hophra, Jer. 44. 30. In latter times, about the time of the Macedonian Empire, they came to be called, Ptolomeys, not in regard of any warlike diſpoſition, from a Greek poetical tearm, ſo ſignifying, as ſome have imagined; but from a name of great antiquity, in thoſe Eaſtern, and Southern parts, Salmai; which, among others, one of the ſons of Anak bare, Num.13.22. Joſh.15.14. So the Talmudiſts call Ptolomy, that cauſed the law of Moſes to be tranſlated into Greek: and from thence the Apoſtle Bartholmew, had his name, Bar-talmai, or Bar-tulmai; as the Syriack pronounceth it, Mat.10.3. that is, the ſon of Talmai, or, Ptolomy; after the Greek phraſe; as Bar-Jona the ſon of Jona, Mat. 16. 17. and Bar-Jeſus, the ſon of Jeſus, Act.13.6. and Bar-Timeus, the ſon of Timeus, Mat.10.46. Both names, it may be, came at firſt, from ſome great one of ſpecial note, in thoſe places, of that name; as the name of Abimelech, to the kings of Paleſtine, Gen.20.2. & 26.1. Pſal. 34.1. and of Benhadad, to the kings of Syria, Jer. 49. 27. Amos 1. 4. of Candace, to the Queens of Ethiopia, Act.8.27. (See Plin. lib. 6. c. 29.) and of Cæſar, to the Romane Emperors, Matth. 22.17. Luk.2.1. Joh. 12.12. Act.11.28. & 17.7. & 25.10. Phil. 4. 22. Being, through uſe, a note and title of Sovereignty, but having otherwiſe no notion of any ſuch thing in it ſelf, as the name, Abimelech, hath.

Pharao] The Pharao, here mentioned, ſome] ſuppoſe to have been Sethon, a fooliſh king, ſay they, as Herodotus ſhews; who yet ſaith little of him, ſave that he neglected his military men. See further of him, on Chap.37.37. Others, with more probability, take him to be Pſammetichus, ſpoken of ver. 4. and under whom, and thoſe twelve, between Sethon and him, the calamities here threatned, as thoſe former affirm, were to befall them. I ſuppoſe, it need not be reſtrained to any one particular king, but may well extend it ſelf unto thoſe kings in general, that ruled Egypt in thoſe times, and thoſe, more ſpecially, by whoſe fond and unadviſed courſes theſe miſchiefs were procured; of which number, Sethon appears not to have been any.

I am the ſon of the wiſe] Heb. a ſon of the wiſe; as a ſon of the gods, Dan.3.25. and a ſon of man, Rev. 1. 13. for ſo thoſe places ſhould be rendred. Or, a ſon of wiſe ones. That is, wiſe men; (a defect of the ſubject, as ver.12. Gen. 41.8. expreſſed, Deut.1.13,15.) and having their wiſedom by inheritance. The words are either of the kings counſellors, concerning themſelves, or his own, ſuggeſted to him, in paraſitical manner, by them, concerning himſelf. Yet it is ſomewhat over-harſh to render it, as ſome would, a ſon of wiſe ones, thou art, or he is. The Egytians, anciently, for wiſedom and learning, arrogated much to themſelves, Act.7.22. And out of other remote parts, many that were greedy of knowledg, and variety of learning, did, for their better ſatisfaction, therefore, travel into Egypt, to have conference with the wiſe men there. See Diodor. lib. 1. Plato in Timeo, Clemens, Strom. lib. 1. and Euſebius præpar. lib. 10.

the ſon of ancient kings] Heb. a ſon of kings of antiquity; as Deut.33.15. Chap. 23.7. The Egyptians vaunted much of the antiquity of their nation, their Kings and Prieſts, eſpecially, who reported themſelves, about theſe times, to have records of their deſcent from the gods, that in humane ſhape, ſometime, converſed there, by 341. generations, under no fewer kings, containing 10341. years, beginning at their firſt king of that divine iſſue, unto Sethons deceaſe; and that within that period of time, the Sun had four times changed his courſe, from Eaſt to Weſt twice; and twice back again, from Weſt to Eaſt, Herodot. lib. 2. But theſe fabulous relations were but meer fictions, deviſed by their Prieſts, to puff up their Princes, and to gain credit to themſelves.

V.12. Where are they? Where are thy wiſe men?] A tart and ſarcaſtical interrogation; like that, 1 Cor. 1. 20. What is become of thy wiſe counſellors? Why do none of them appear, to acquaint thee with theſe evils that will betide thee? For ſo it followeth.

* and let them tell thee now] The copulative, ſome deem here, redundant; as Gen 36. 24. Exod 1. 1. Levit.7. 16. Others ſuppoſe a defect of ſome word, to be ſupplyed: Let them now appear, or ariſe (as the uſual phraſe in Scripture is, Jer.2.27, 28.) and tell thee. See the like, Zach.2.6. But the words may well be rendred, That they may now tell thee; as Chap. 11. 3. and 13. 2. See the like ſpeech to Babylon, Chap. 47. 12, 13.

and let them know what the Lord of Hoſts hath purpoſed againſt Egypt] Or, that they may know; or, ſimply with reference to the former branch, that they may tell thee, and know themſelves; or, or know; as Gen.2.6. Judg.11.31. (in both which places, in the margent of our Bibles, there wants an or) That they may either tell thee, or take notice themſelves, as having that taught them, which they were before ignorant of, and which all the great wiſdom they boaſt of, is not able to acquaint them with, Chap.41.22,26,28. & 47.11. Or laſtly, By telling thee, make known. See Jer.9.13.

the Lord of Hoſts] Chap. 14. 27.

hath purpoſed] Heb. conſulted, or counſelled; as Jer.49.20, 30. Here, the rather, to anſwer the term counſellors, ver.11. and becauſe they pretended to be of counſel with their Gods, and to be acquainted with ſuch matters as were concluded in the Court of Heaven, as falſe Prophets alſo uſually did, 1 King. 22.6, 24. Chap. 36. 10. & 40. 14. & 47. 13. Jer. 23. 18, 22.

upon Egypt] Either againſt; as Chap.5.30. Or, concerning Egypt; as Chap.1.1.

V. 13. The Princes of Zoan are become fools] Or, dote, as it is rendred, Jer. 50. 36. where the ſame is ſaid of the Princes, or Wizards of Babel. See the like of other the heathens, profeſſed wiſe ones, Rom.1.22. The word is, by ſome, deemed to import, a wilful, or obſtinate diſpoſition in, or courſe of folly; or, a preſumptuous folly; becauſe the ſame word, in another flexion, ſignifies, ſometime, to will, Hoſ.5.11. ſometime, to preſume, Gen.18.27,31. Of Zoan, ſee on ver. 11.

the Princes of Noph] A famous city in Egypt; built, as ſome ſay, by their firſt king Menas, Herodot. lib.2. Though others aſcribe it to a latter; Diodore, lib. 1. It might be founded by the one, beautified and enlarged, made, in ſome ſort, anew, by the other: but agreed on, to be one of the goodlieſt, and famouſeſt cities in Egypt, wherein their kings, therefore, many of them, held their ordinary reſidence. It is mentioned by this name alſo, Jer. 2. 16. & 44. 1. & 46. 14, 15. And is, by ſome, deemed to have its appellation from an Hebrew word ſignifying, a tract, coaſt, or, region: (as a word of neer affinity with it imports, Joſh. 12. 23. 1 King. 4. 11.) rendred, ſituation, Pſal.48.2. And for its ſituation, ſome highly commend it. But to force Egyptian tearms to Hebrew notations, is not proper. It is elſewhere, in Scripture, called, Moph, Hoſ. 9.6. whereof the Greeks, and Latines, have framed their Memphis. Howbeit, Strabo, lib. 17. informs us that there were two ſeveral cities in Egypt; the one called, Memphis; and the other, Momemphis; (peradventure, Momphis:) that their ſacred Ox Apis, was kept in the former; their holy Cow, in the other. Whether Noph, might not be the one, and Moph the other, I leave it to the conſideration and conjecture of others. For as concerning the mountain, Mophi, (whence ſome would have Memphis to be called, Moph) with his mate Crophi, between which Nilus his head-ſpring ſhould riſe, and run in one channel, to Ethiopia; in another, toward Egypt; they are both alike figments, having no exiſtence out of the brain of the Temple-treaſurer, that to Herodote related it; nor doth he profeſs to eſteem any otherwiſe of them. Noph, or, Memphis, formerly ſo tearmed, is, by ſome, deemed to be that moſt populous city, which we commonly call, Grand Cairo, as the great city, ſay ſome; though others, render other reaſons of that name. The Arabian writers are reported to call it, Meſſer-hadith, that is, New-Egypt. Zoan, and Noph, are, by ſome, ſuppoſed to be ſpecially here mentioned; becauſe the one, to wit, Noph, was ſituate neer to the utmoſt border of Egypt, upward, toward the land of Ethiopia; the other, to wit, Zoan, in the nether part of the country, toward the fall of the river into the Midland-ſea; which, for the latter, is true enough: (See on ver. 11.) but for the former, ſeems not ſo. For though Memphis be ſituate about ſome twenty miles above the head Delta, where the river Nilus divideth it ſelf into two main channels, (See on Chap.51.9.) which afterward brancheth into ſeven ſeveral ſtreams, Chap.11.15. yet is it ſome hundred of miles diſtant from Siene and Phile, the confines of Egypt and Ethiopia. See Strabo, lib. 17. and Plinie, lib. 9. cap. 7. But theſe two, ſeem rather here to be mentioned, becauſe they were principal and royal cities, and might therefore fitly comprehend all the reſt. See the like, Jer. 2. 16.

are deceived] The pride of their hearts hath deceived them: as God, of Edom, Obad.3.

they have alſo ſeduced Egypt, even they that are the ſtay of the tribes thereof] Or, the ſtayes, or, Princes of the tribes thereof have ſeduced Egypt. That is, their Princes, and wiſe counſellers, either by their ill-grounded advices, and flattering ſuggeſtions; or by their vain and falſe predictions, and promiſes of proſperous ſucceſſes, have deluded the whole land, and led them into courſes deſtructive to the State, which they ought to have ſupported. See Ch. 3.12. & 9.16.

the ſtay] Heb. corner. So the word properly ſignifies, 2 Chr. 28. 24. Job 1.19. Jer. 31. 40. Then a ſtone, laid in the corner of a building, where two walls meet, and are therewith united, Eph. 2. 14, 20, 21. called therefore the head of the corner, Pſ. 118.22. and the corner-ſtone, Job 38.6. Jer. 51.27. & a corner, ſimply, Zach. 10. 4. See Chap. 28. 16. And becauſe ſuch ſtones, ſo placed, are a principal ſtay, ſtrength, and ſupport to a ſtructure; hence it comes to paſs, that the ſame team is uſed, as for towers, or, bulwarks, 2 King. 26. 15. Zeph. 1. 16. & 3. 6. So for Princes and Rulers, or perſons of prime place; for to them alſo it is given, Judg. 20.2. 1 Sam. 14.38. There, in the plural, number; here, in the ſingular; but joyned to a verb plural, to comprehend them all, and take in each of them. See on Chap. 2. 20. Some would have the word, here uſed, to ſignifie, not ſo much a corner, as an end: and render the text, unto the end, or utmoſt part thereof: as implying, no province, or region throughout the land, to be free from this ſeducement. And it is true, that the corner of a building, is the utmoſt part of it. But beſide a needleſs addition to the text, I finde not where the word is uſed in that notion: for as for Judg. 20. 2. & 1 Sam. 14. 38. The extremities, or utmoſt ends of the people, ſeem to ſound ſomewhat harſh in either place.

of the tribes thereof] The Prophet ſpeaks here of Egypt, according, not to their language, but his own country dialect: with whom the ſeveral tribes had this team. The word ſignifies a rod, Chap. 10. 5. 15. & 14. 29. But is commonly uſed, where it is rendred a tribe, for ſuch a number of people united into a body, as deſcended from any of Jacobs twelve ſons; whoſe poſterity therefore was divided into twelve tribes. And this appellation therefore given them, as ſome think, becauſe they were as rods, ſhooting forth, and branching out from one ſtem, or ſtock, the prime Patriarch Jacob; or in reference to thoſe rods, on which their names were written, Numb. 17. 2. But the team ſeems more ancient then ſo, Gen. 49. 16, 28. I rather ſuppoſe, that this denomination was given to the tribes, in regard of the judiciary power and government belonging to each tribe reſpectively, and reſiding in the head, or heads of it. For the word ſignifying, not ſo much a walking, as a ruling rod, a ſcepter, as we ſay, Pſal. 2. 9. & 110.2. implyeth power, and authority, Pſal. 45.6. Ezek. 19.11, 14. And this theſe words of Jacob ſeem to import, where he ſaith, Dan ſhall judge his people, as one of the tribes of Iſrael, Gen. 49.16. As our Prophet therefore calleth Cyrus, Gods anointed, Chap. 45.1. in way of alluſion to the right of anointing kings among Gods people, 1 Sam. 10.1. & 16. 15. though no ſuch ceremony was in uſe among the Perſians: ſo in reference to the Jewiſh tribes, he gives this ſtile, to thoſe ſeveral Nomi, as the Greeks call them; or precincts, and prefectures, as the Latine tearmeth them, into which the land of Egypt was divided; the rather alſo, for that they were juſt as many in number, about thoſe times at leaſt, as the Jewiſh were. See Herodot. lib. 2. and Plin. lib. 5. cap. 9. though ſome other reckon many more. See Strabo, lib. 17.

thereof] This addition overthroweth the interpretation of thoſe, who underſtand the laſt words of this verſe, the ſtay of tribes, or, the corner-ſtone of States, as ſpoken of Egypt, who profeſſed her ſelf to be a ſtay and ſhore to other States. Of which, ſee on Chap. 18.1. for it ſhews evidently, that the ſpeech is of thoſe, that either were, or ought to have been, in their ſeveral places, and within their ſeveral precincts, reſpectively, the ſupporters of the State, Pſal. 75.3.

V. 14. The Lord hath mingled a perverſe ſpirit in the midſt thereof] The Prophet here declareth a principal ground of this diſtraction, in the Egyptian Eſtate, the unadviſed counſels, and courſes, that their Princes took, and the calamities, that by means thereof, the whole Country ſuſtained; to wit, a ſecret hand of God; his juſt judgment following them for their pride and inſolency; and infatuating them in their projects, and purpoſes. See ver. 10; So Rom. 2.21, 22, 24, 26.

mingled] Or, powred out; given them to drink. Of the uſe of the word, ſee on Chap. 5.22. Gods judgments in Scripture, are oft-times reſembled by a cup, containing ſuch liquor, as being ſtrong and heady, ſo diſtempers men, that it makes them either ſo brain-ſick and giddy, that they turn round, or ſtagger with it, as not able to ſtand ſteddilly; or ſo out-ragious, that they fare like mad-men, and miſchieve both themſelves, and others. See Pſal. 60.3. & 75.8. Chap. 51. 17, 21, 22. Jer. 25.15, 16, 27, 28. Lam. 4.21. Ezek. 23.32—34.

a perverſe ſpirit] a ſpirit of error, or, ſeducement: as the Chaldee, and the Greek render it: or, of giddineſs, as the Latine: either of which, ſuites well with what here enſueth; The Hebrew word, no where elſe found, comes from a word, that ſignifies to pervert, turn awry, or, make crooked, Chap. 24. 1. Lam. 3.9. it is plural, and of a duplicate form: as if he had ſaid, a ſpirit of extream perverſities. Inſtead of that ſpirit of wiſdome which they ſo much boaſted of, God hath made them drunk with a ſpirit of ſtupidity, and erroneouſneſs, which being poſſeſſed with, they run head-long into perverſe and crooked courſes, whereby they carry all things awry, unto the great diſturbance of the State, Chap. 29. 10, 14. Rom. 11. 8. See Ezek. 21.32. where a word of neer affinity to this, is thrice repeated. This is ſuppoſed to have been fulfilled, a great part of it, in the time of thoſe twelve, that ſhared the Kingdom among them, after Sethons deceaſe; who falling at variance among themſelves, did exceedingly diſtract, and diſturb the whole land, untill Pſammetichus, at length, overpowred and maſtered them all, and ſo made himſelf abſolute Lord of all. See ver. 4.

in the midſt thereof] Or, into it; to wit, Egypt: her Princes eſpecially; or, among them; as ver. 3. Chap. 5.8.

and they have cauſed Egypt to erre, in every work thereof] The effect of this ſpirit of error, and giddineſs, wherewith the Princes were poſſeſſed, redounding to the prejudice of the main body of the whole State, and diſturbing all employments. When the head is diſtempered with drink, the whole body ſtaggers, and no member is able to carry it ſelf ſteddily, in any work, or office belonging unto it, Chap. 24.19, 20 & 29. 9. Pſal. 107.26, 27. Jer. 23.9.

as a drunken man ſtaggereth in his vomit] Heb. wandreth: that is, walloweth, or, rolleth to and fro, and cannot get out of it, Job 12.24, 25. Jer. 48.26. like a wandring man, that hath loſt his way in a wood, or a wilderneſs, where he can find no iſſue out, Gen. 21.14. Pſal. 107. 4. See Chap. 28.7, 8.

V. 15. Neither ſhall there be any work for Egypt, which the head, or tail, branch, or ruſh, may do] All Eſtates and conditions, ſhall be ſo diſtracted and diſturbed, that they ſhall have no mind, nor opportunity, to mind or attend ought. So 2 Chr. 15.5, 6. Zach. 8.10. head, and tail, ruſh, and branch: a proverbial ſpeech, for high, and low; ſtrong, and weak. See Chap. 9.14.

V. 16. In that day] In thoſe times, wherein this judgment ſhall befall them: as ch. 17.9.

ſhall Egypt be like unto women] The Egyptians, their men; yea their military men, ſhall turn milk-ſops, ſhall become as faint-hearted as women, ver. 1. Jer. 51.30.

and it ſhall be afraid, and fear, becauſe of the ſhaking of the hand of the Lord, which he ſhaketh over it] Heb. from the face of, &c. as Pſal. 38.3. Joel 2.6, 10. by reaſon of the judgment before mentioned, by the Lord inflicted on them, verſ. 14. illuſtrate here by an alluſion to Moſes ſtretching out of his hand, at Gods command, over the red-ſea, to bring the ſea back on the Egyptians, to drown, and deſtroy them, Exod. 14. 24, 25, 26-28. It ſhall not be like Sennacheribs ſhaking his hand at Jeruſalem, Chap. 10.32. that proved uneffectual; but as Gods ſhaking his hand over the Egyptian troops, in time paſt, that took effect, to the ruine, and overthrow of them; (ſee Chap. 10.24. & 11.15.) and as his ſhaking of it over the Aſſyrian forces, Chap. 30.32.

V. 17. And the land of Judah ſhall be a terrour unto Egypt] Not that the Jews ſhould put Egypt into any ſuch fear, or flight, in regard of ought by them done, or attempted againſt it: but that the judgment of God executed and inflicted on the Jews, whom the Egyptians had undertaken to protect, Chap. 20. 5, 6. & 36.6. ſhall, beſide their inteſtine broyls and combuſtions, further exceedingly diſmay them: they ſhall tremble for fear, when they ſee the land of Judah, that relyed on them, Chap. 30.2. & 31.1. over-run, and diſtreſſed by the Aſſyrian forces, Chap. 36.1. as expecting the like to betide them too; partly, in regard of their confederacy; which between thoſe two States, was over-frequent, and conſtant, Chap. 30.4, 5. 2 King. 17.4. & 18.21. Jer. 2.18. & 37.5. Ezek. 17.15. and partly alſo, of their vicinity, Joſh. 13.3. & 15.4. 1 Sam. 27.8. the Philiſtines land only lying between them and it: and the rather ſo, here, for that the land of Judah lay in the Aſſyrians way to Egypt, 2 King. 23. 29. which being ſubdued, therefore, by the Aſſyrian, would make his paſſage unto Egypt the more free. So Ethiopia is ſaid to be affrighted and afflicted at the fall of Egypt, in regard of their neerneſs to them, and conjunction with them, Ezek. 30. 9, 10. and other neighbouring nations, at the fall of Tyre, Chap. 23.5. Ezek. 26.15-18. Beſide that, the Egyptians might juſtly expect the like, or worſe, from the hand of God, when they ſhould behold, and conſider how he had dealt with his own people, Chap. 7.17, 19. & 8.7, 8. See Jer. 25.29. Howbeit, ſome draw down this Prophecy lower, to the deſtruction of Judah and Jeruſalem, by the Chaldeans, Jer. 27.10. & 39. 2, 8. and the conqueſt of Egypt alſo by them, Jer. 43.10-13. & 44.30. & 46. Ezek. 29.19, 20.

a terrour] The word here uſed; but no where elſe found, (a condition common to it, with many others, in this Prophecy, as if the Prophet had of purpoſe coined them, to make his ſtyle the more emphatical) is a term very pregnant: and ſignifies ſuch a trembling, quivering, and quavering, as is wont to befall men, when being ſurprized and overmaſtered with fear, they cannot ſtand ſtill; but do, as it were, dance with their feet, and their heart ſeems likewiſe to dance within them; the very ſame, that the term of trepidation, in Latine, doth in its original import. For as that, ſo this comes of a word, that ſignifies firſt to dance, as at feaſts is uſual, 1 Sam. 30.16. and then to imitate ſuch dancing, through fear, Pſal. 107. 26. where it is applyed to juſt ſuch a diſpoſition, in perſons diſtreſſed, and diſtracted, as is here intimated; and reſembled by the ſame ſimilitude that is here alſo, ver.14.

every one that maketh mention thereof, ſhall be afraid in himſelf] Or, rather, every one (to wit, of the Egyptians) that calleth her to mind, with himſelf, (that doth ſeriouſly call to mind, and conſider with himſelf, what is befallen the land of Judah) ſhall be afraid, or, ſhall fear: the very thought of it, ſhall ſtrike a terror into him: and to this reading, the points in the text lead. So 2 Chr.17.10.& 20.29. Act.5.11.

becauſe of] As ver.16. or, for fear of. Heb. from the face of: as Chap.21. 15.

the counſel of the Lord of hoſts, which he hath determined] Heb. is conſulting, or, decreeing. See Chap. 14.24,26.

againſt it] Heb. againſt, or, concerning him: either the Jewiſh people, which the Egyptians ſhall then ſee executed; or, the Egyptians themſelves, expecting thereupon, their own turn to come next. See ver.12. Some ſuppoſe an alluſion in this clauſe, to the acknowledgment of Gods hand againſt them, Exod.14.25.

V. 18. I*n that day ſhall five cities in the land of Egypt ſpeak the language of Canaan*] A gracious prediction of the converſion of Egypt, unto the ſervice of the true God, in the latter times, after the judgments here denounced, fulfilled, and executed on them. See the like comfortable cloſes, Chap. 6. 13. & 17.7. & 18.7. & 23.17,18. and in particular, concerning Egypt, Jer.46.26.

In that day] Not while theſe calamities lye thus heavy on them; but in after-times, when theſe evils are over. So are the ſame words uſed, Chap.4.2. & 18.7. This ſome ſuppoſe to have been fulfilled, not long after the time of this Prophecy, in the dayes of Ezekiah, when upon Sennacheribs Invaſion of the land of Judah, many Jews fled into Egypt; and having liberty there for exerciſe of their own religion, were the means of converting many Egyptians to God, (not unlike to that, Act.8.4. & 11. 19,21.) being the rather wrought upon, and prevailed with, upon that miraculous, and moſt remarkable defeat, given by God to Sennacheribs forces, and the deliverance of Jeruſalem. For thereupon it is ſaid, that many ſtrangers brought gifts unto the Lord, to Jeruſalem, and Preſents to Ezekiah, 2 Chr.32.23. So Eſth.8.17. Pſal.138.4, 5. Chap.59.19. or, as Others, (and ſo the Jewiſh Writers) that many Egyptians, that ſerving under Sennacherib, having eſcaped in that mighty ſlaughter, and being kindly uſed by Ezekiah, (as thoſe Syrians by Joram, 2 King.6.23.) at their return into their own country, abandoned their wonted idolatries, and addicted themſelves wholly to the ſervice of the true God; as did Naaman, 2 King.5.17. But becauſe there is little footing found of ought in this kind, in the records of antiquity, either ſacred, or prophane; (for as for that, which one of the Rabbines produceth, from Chap.45.14. ſeems little to this purpoſe;) It is rather to be referred unto the times of the Meſſias, under whoſe Kingdome, the Goſpel was planted in thoſe places, and as well in Ethiopia, Chap. 18.7. and in Aſſyria, as in Egypt, ver.23-25.

five cities] A certain number, for an uncertain; as all generally agree: five for many, ſay ſome: but in Scripture, five is more commonly uſed, for a ſmall number; eſpecially, when five are either culled out, or oppoſed unto far many more: as Levit.26.8. Chap.30.17. 1 Cor.14.19. in which laſt place, if five be reckoned, as a very ſmall number, in regard of a thouſand, and of ten thouſand much more; ſure five cities of Egypt, muſt needs, conſequently, be deemed a very ſmall ſcantling, in regard of that whole country, which by ſome Authors is reported to have had above ten thouſand; by ſome, twenty thouſand cities. See Herodote, l.2. & Mela, l.1. c.10. To this, therefore, ſome ſay, that as there were among the Philiſtines, five principal, or head cities, though many other inferiour, and leſs ones beſides, 1 Sam. 6.4. ſo there were five mother-cities in Egypt, Memphis, Tanis, Alexandria, Bubaſtis, and Heliopolis. Which they would gather out of Ezekiel, 30. but there are more then ſix mentioned in that Chapter, verſ. 13,14,16,17,18. Others, that the meaning is, that five cities only, or ſimply, are not meant, but five of ſix; as if five cities for one ſhould come in unto God; or one city of ſix, only, ſhould ſtand out, and periſh in, and for their ſin: but how the text will bear this, I ſee not. Albeit, therefore, we need not admit that exceſſive number of cities, which from their Prieſts report, theſe Authors relate to have been ſometime in Egypt, no more, then we are bound to believe thoſe thouſands of years, that they affirmed their State, in a ſucceſſion of Kings and Prieſts, to have ſtood; nor again on the other ſide, have we any good ground, to reduce their prime cities to ſo preciſe, and narrow a number, as bare five: Yet it is not improbable, that their principal cities, and royal ſeats, were not very many; ſuppoſe ſome twelve, as they might well be, about this time, when into twelve principalities was all Egypt divided. The meaning of the Prophet then may well be, that a conſiderable number, (ſuch as is five of twelve) of the chiefeſt cities in Egypt, ſhould embrace the faith and ſervice of the true God: and that the Prophets intent is, to deſign a number of ſuch, appears by his expreſs nomination of Heliopolis, in particular, to be one of them.

ſpeak the language of Canaan] What is here meant by ſpeaking the language of Canaan, is queſtioned. That there is an alluſion to the Hebrew tongue, as we term it, the language wherein God was then ſerved by his people, is generally agreed on: but there is ſome controverſie among the learned, why that tongue ſhould be called the language of Canaan. The common, and almoſt generally received opinion, both of Jews and Chriſtians, hath been, that it is ſo termed, becauſe it was the native language of Gods people, who then were poſſeſſed of, and lived in, the land of Canaan, and in that language, then, and there, ſerved God; which language being that which our firſt parents ſpake; and was in general uſe before the diviſion of tongues, Gen.11.1. remained ſtill in the line of Sem, among thoſe of Ebers poſterity, (whom a ſpecial mark is ſet upon, as the prime man in Sems iſſue, there recorded, Gen. 10. 21. with a memorable note alſo, ſubjoyned, concerning Peleg his ſon, that in his dayes, the earth, or, world, was divided, Gen.10.25. and from whoſe name Abram, is called an Hebrew, Gen. 14.13.) and was termed Hebrew, becauſe continued conſtantly in his family, Howbeit, in theſe later dayes, ſome men of great note have not ſtuck to affirm, that the Hebrew tongue is termed here the language of Canaan, becauſe it was the native language of the poſterity of Cham, deſcending from him by Canaan, who firſt inhabiting and peopling thoſe parts, both retained that language in the diviſion of tongues, and tranſmitted it to their poſterity: and that Abram was wholly unacquainted with it, as being not his native language, untill leaving his kindred, and Fathers houſe, where he was born, he came to live in the land of Canaan. But this opinion, though maintained by great authors, ſeems to me very improbable, that the ancient tongue, ſpoken commonly, yea, generally, before the building of Babel, which procured the enſuing diviſion, ſhould be loſt in that family, that in all likelihood had no hand in that buſineſs, and ſhould continue in the line of thoſe that were moſt deeply engaged therein; and in all probability, drew others thereunto, Gen.10.10. The arguments brought to confirm this new conceit, ſeem very weak, and inconſequent, and would require longer diſcourſe to diſcuſs, then the preſent work will well afford. Suffice it may for our preſent purpoſe, that the Hebrew tongue, in ordinary uſe with Gods people then reſiding in Canaan, is the language, if not intended, yet alluded to in this place: called alſo the Jews language, Neh. 13.24. Chap.36.11,13. A new queſtion ariſeth, what is here meant by ſpeaking this language? And there want not, that underſtand it, of ſtudying, learning, and making uſe of the Hebrew tongue. Which ſome Writers, therefore, teſtifie to have been very common in ſome Egyptian Towns, bordering upon Paleſtine, and to have continued, though not without ſome alteration, even unto their times: and the meaning is, ſaith one of ours, as if it were ſaid of ſome perſons, or places, in Hungary, or Tranſylvania, that the people are ſo affected and taken with the Mahometan Religion, that they wholly addict themſelves to the ſtudy of the Arabick tongue, becauſe Mahomets Law is written in it: and ſo here of the Egyptians, that out of love and affection to the Jewiſh Religion, and the worſhip of the true God, they ſhould deſire to learn, and make uſe of that language, wherein the Law of God was written, and wherein he was ſerved by that people. But the Prophets intendment ſeems rather to be, though alluding indeed to that language, that the Egyptians converted by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, ſhould, whatſoever language they ſpake in, make the ſame profeſſion, and confeſſion of their faith, with other of Gods people, that were before them, in Chriſt, Rom. 10.9,12,18. & 15.6,9-11. 2 Cor.4.13. their ſpeech and communication, ſhould now be no longer profane, as it had been; but circumciſed, and pure, Chap.6.5. the very ſame that is propheſied, and promiſed, Zeph.3.9. that after Gods judgments there before denounced, and then executed, he would turn peoples lip, (that is, language, as it is alſo here;) and give them a pure lip, that is, a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, and ſerve him with one ſhoulder: that is, with joynt conſent they ſhould all concur in praiſing of and ſwear to the Lord of hoſts] Not, ſwear by him, Jer. 4. 2. & 5.2. and not by falſe gods, Exod.23.13. Joſh. 23.8. Jer. 12.16. though that be mentioned, as one prime piece of Gods royal prerogative, to be ſworn by, and a principal part of mans duty to him, to ſwear only by him, Deut.6.13. & 10. 20. Pſal.63.11. Chap.65.16. but ſwear to him: as Pſal.132.2. that is, bind themſelves by ſolemn oath to depend upon him, and be loyal Subjects unto him, 2 Chr. 15.14,15. Ezr. 10. 5. Neh.10.29. Pſal.119.106. (as people, and Princes alſo, are wont to do to their liege Lords, and Soveraigns, 2 Chr.36.13. Ezek.17.13-18.) abandoning their former idolatries, and ſuperſtitions, 2 King.5.17. Act.19.19. See Chap.45.23. Zeph. 1. 5.

one ſhall be called the city of deſtruction] There is a double reading here, in the Hebrew. Some read heres, with He, which ſignifies deſtruction, or overthrow: and though that word it ſelf is no where elſe read, yet a word, not much unlike it, is in that ſenſe found, Chap. 49. 19. Amos 9. 11. deſcending from a verb, that ſignifies commonly to pull down, or deſtroy. This reading our Tranſlators follow; though the former verſion, in received uſe, before the Geneva, render it, by way of inverſion, the city of deſtruction ſhall be called one of them. But by thoſe that maintain this reading, the words are diverſly expounded. Some, that a ſixt city, remaining unreformed, when five of her neighbourhood were converted, ſhould be allotted to deſtruction, for not following their good example. Others, that each one (as Chap.6.2.) of the five, before mentioned, ſhall be a city, ſaved from deſtruction. Heb. a city of deſtruction: as wine of lees, for, wine, drawn off the lees, Chap. 25.6. Other read the word Hheres, or, Cheres, with Het, or Chet, as the Greeks commonly render it; which the old Latine, and ſome others, among which our ancienteſt Engliſh follow: and the word ſignifies, ſometime, an earthen-pot, Levit. 6.28. Jer.19.1. or, a pot-ſherd, Job 2.8. Chap.45.9. and ſo ſome render it here, oſtracina, the Earthen city; as earthen veſſels, 2 Cor.4.7. by the word there uſed: ſometime the ſun, Job 9. 7. Jer.19.2. and thus the old Latine, and not a few Others, here underſtand it; rendring the text, Heliopolis, or, the city of the ſun, ſhall be, or, ſhall be accounted one. Heb. word for word, the city of the ſun ſhall be ſaid to one: that is, the city of the ſun ſhall be called one of that number, ſhall be reckoned up among them: as Pſal.87. 5,6. So Chap. 62. 4. forſaken ſhall not be ſaid unto thee; that is, thou ſhalt not be ſo called, or accounted. There were divers cities in divers countries, conſecrated to the Sun, and that bare therefore his name, being deemed one of the heathens principal gods, 2 King. 23. 5,11. Ezek.8.16. See Chap.17.8. Of this ſort was Bethſhemeſh, among the Canaanites, Judg.15. 10. & 19. 38. Kirheres, and Kir-Hareſheth, among the Moabites, Chap.16.7,11. and among the Egyptians, Heliopolis, as the Greeks term it, being for ſignification, the ſame with thoſe other, (of which ſee many more in Steven of Byzantium) and by the Latines, Solis oppidum, Pliny, l.5. c.9. and l.6. c.29. in Scripture it is ſometime called by the Egyptian appellation, On, Gen.41.45. and ſometime, by an Hebrew, of the ſame ſignification in effect with this here, Bethſhemeſh, Jer. 43.13. and Aven, Ezek. 30.17. though this latter, it may be, by an Hebrew term of ill preſage, coming neer the Egyptian; the like whereunto, Hoſh.4.15. & 10.5,8. as if he had ſaid On, that may well be termed Aven, as Amos 5.5. Bethel ſhall become Aven, that is, vexation, or vanity, or, a thing of nought: this city ſo called anciently, but in later times, Damiata, was a city much addicted to idolatry, and is reckoned by Herodote, for one of the ſix, unto which the Egyptians uſed, at ſome ſet times, out of all quarters, to repair, as the Jews to Jeruſalem: becauſe there was their famous Temple of the Sun, and there was kept Mnevis, one of their ſacred Bulls, which they worſhipped for a God, as Apis, the other of them, at Memphis; ſo that the Prophets intendment, is, to intimate, that even ſome of thoſe Egyptian cities, that had with idolatry, been moſt polluted, ſhould receive the ſincere ſervice, and worſhip of God. Howbeit, Joſephus is much miſtaken, who imagineth, that this Prophecy was fulfilled under the Ptolomies, when Onias the Jewiſh Prieſt, being driven out of his Country, built a ſtately Temple, with an Altar, not unlike that at Jeruſalem, within the principality of Heliopolis, in Egypt, to draw other of his country men into thoſe parts. See Joſeph. antiquities, l.13.c.6. and of the Jewiſh war, l.7.c.30. The Chaldee takes in both readings here, thus rendring the words, The city of Bethſhemeſh, which is to be deſtroyed, ſhall be ſaid to be one of them: the like doth the Greek. Chap.61.1.

V. 19. In that day] In thoſe times: as ver.21.

ſhall there be an altar to the Lord, in the midſt of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof, to the Lord] The meaning is, that the true worſhip of God, preſcribed by him in his word, ſhall be as amply ſetled among the Egyptians, as it was then among the Jews. See Joh.4.21-24. deſcribed here, as uſually elſewhere, by the rites and ceremonies, and manner of ſervice, that by Gods appointment, was among Gods people, then in uſe. So Chap. 18.7. & 60. 7. & 66. 20, 21. Mal.1.11.

an altar] Not for ſacrifice, ſay ſome; (for that might not be out of Jeruſalem, Deut. 12.13,14. and yet upon extraordinary occaſions, was by Gods, not permiſſion only, but approbation, and ſecret inſtigation, if not manifeſt injunction, at ſometime, built elſewhere, 1 King.18.30,32.) but for memorial, and reſemblance only, ver.20. not unlike that of the Reubenites, and Gadites, Joſh.22.10,11,23-26. But why not an altar for ſacrifice, then, when the Jeruſalem altars ſhould be all, not demoliſhed only, but out of date? Jer.3. 16. Heb. 9.9,10. for why not a ſpiritual altar, for ſpiritual ſacrifices? verſ. 20. Chap.56.7. & 60.7. Rom.12.1. & 15.16. Phil. 2. 17. Heb.13.10,15,16.

in the midſt of the land of Egypt] As Jeruſalem ſtood in the heart of the land of Canaan; for the more eaſie reſort unto it, out of all parts, Pſal. 122. 4, 5. or, in the land of Egypt, among the Egyptians: as Chap.5.12. ver.20,24. But here rather, in the former and ſtricter ſenſe, in regard of the next branch.

and a pillar] Evident tokens and ſigns of Gods true Religion, ſetled with them. An alluſion to ſuch altars, and pillars, as the ancient Patriarchs, in times fore-paſt, erected for the ſolemn ſervice and worſhip of God, in all places where they came, but in thoſe more eſpecially, where God appeared unto them, Gen.12.7. 28,18,22. & 31.13. & 35.7,14. Exod. 17.15. & 24.4. where mention is of twelve pillars in one place: and pillar, may be for pillars, in this place; as it is alſo there.

at the border thereof] Alluding to that, Joſh. 22. 10, 25. where it is ſaid, that at the borders of the land of Canaan, by Jordan, that altar was built: The meaning is, that monuments, and evidences of piety and devotion, ſhould be frequent among the Egyptians, not in the heart of the land onely, but in the ſkirts of the Country; ſo that, no ſooner ſhould a man ſet his foot on Egyptian ground, but he ſhould perceive how piouſly the people were affected, and to what Lord the land now belonged. See Zach.14.9,20,21.

to the Lord] Not to idols, and falſe gods, as formerly: unto which imaginary deities pillars were in Egypt very riſe.

V. 20. And it ſhall be] To wit, that altar, and pillar; or, thoſe altars, and pillars, ver.19.

for a ſign, and for a witneſs to the Lord of hoſts in Egypt] To ſignifie, and teſtifie, that the Lord, the only true God, the ſole Soveraign of heaven & earth, Gen.2.1. Pſal.146.6. is there acknowledged and ſerved. An alluſion to that altar built by the Reubenites, Joſh.22.24,27. and to that ſtone, or pillar, erected by Joſhua, Joſh.24.26,27. of both which, the ſame in effect is ſaid. Yet there are, that refer this, not to the verſe before going; but to the words here enſuing: to wit, that Gods hearing them, and ſending deliverance unto them, when they called upon him, in their diſtreſſes, ſhould be an evidence and argument of Gods favour towards them, and reconcilement to them; not unlike that, Pſal.41.11. & 147.43. But the former more naturally flows from the text. That which followeth, ſeems rather to be here intimated, as a motive and inducement to them, to ſerve him, and adhere unto him, of whoſe powerful and ready help, they had had ſo pregnant proof. So Exod.15.2.

for they ſhall cry unto the Lord for the oppreſſors] Or, when, (as Chap.1.30.) or, becauſe when, (as Jer. 4. 30. & 12. 15.) they ſhall cry; that is, ſay ſome, when the Jews ſhall cry to God, being by Sennacherib beſieged, and diſtreſſed, Chap. 37.4,15. 2 Chr.32.20. But few herein concur. The tenor of the context ſheweth, that it is ſpoken of the Egyptians, who being, by reaſon of thoſe that oppreſſed them, grievouſly afflicted, and diſtreſſed, when they found no relief from their idols, or their wizzards, ver.1,3. as it was with others, in the like caſe, Chap.16.12. they ſhall then, leaving them, ſeek unto the true God, with better ſucceſs. So Judg.10.16. Chap. 10.20,21. & 17.7,8. Pſal.107.6,13,19.

for their oppreſſors] Or, becauſe of. Heb. from the face of: as ver.16,17. as the Egyptians ſometime made the people of God among them, to cry unto him, by reaſon of thoſe that then oppreſſed them, Exod.3.9. ſo ſhould they themſelves be enforced to the like, in regard of thoſe that ſhould oppreſs them. For the ſame word is uſed in both places, and the Prophet may ſeem here to glance at that ſtory.

and he ſhall ſend them a Saviour, and a great one, and he ſhall deliver them] Or, he ſhall then ſend them (as Chap.8.3,14.) a Saviour, and a great one; that is, a great Saviour: as a cloud and ſmoke, for a ſmoky cloud, Chap. 4.5. a great one to be their Saviour; or, even a great one: as Jer.17.17. ſuch an one, as in regard of his power, and greatneſs, ſhall be able to effect what he undertakes to do for them, Ch.63. 1. What great one were, by God, at ſeverall times raiſed up in ſucceeding ages, from time to time, as there were for his own people, Judg. 2. 16. & 3. 15,31. 2 King. 14. 27. Obad. 21. Mic. 5. 5. to give them ſome eaſe and relief, from their oppreſſors, which might be, as a preſage, and ſome ſhadow of their future ſpiritual deliverance, and in whom this prophecy might, in part, be fulfilled, is not ſo clear by the records of antiquity, ſacred, or prophane; eſpecially, while the Aſſyrian, and Chaldean Monarchies ſtood; of which times we have few monuments of worth and credit, remaining. Howbeit, to paſs by what ſome have conjectured of the converſion of many of them, upon the defeat given to Sennacherib; it may well be deemed, that ſome notice of the God of Iſrael came in among them by the Jews commerce with them; and in the latter times, under the Ptolomies, eſpecially, after the law of Moſes was tranſlated into a language, which the Grecian Empire had, in thoſe parts, made more familiar: and divers temporal deliverances, might, from God, be vouchſafed them, in regard of his faithful ones among them; as in Ethiopia, we know alſo that ſome Proſelytes there were, Act. 2. 5, 10. & 8. 27. But certain it is, that the Lord Jeſus, that great Saviour, Tit. 2. 13. is here principally intended, by whom they were delivered from the ſpiritual ſervitude and bondage unto ſin and Satan; under which they had long lyen, as other Gentiles alſo were, through the miniſtery of the Goſpel, Act. 26. 17,18. 1 Cor. 6. 9,11. & 12. 2,3. Eph. 2. 2,3. Col. 1. 13. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9. Mean while, they ſeem to ſtray from the text, that expound this of the Angel, who, by the ſlaughter made in the Aſſyrian camp, delivered thoſe of Jeruſalem, out of their preſent diſtreſs, Ch. 37. 37.

V. 21. And the Lord ſhall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians ſhall know the Lord] He ſeems to ſay the ſame thing in a divers form, or frame of ſpeech. Yet two diſtinct things may be implyed, their notice of God, and their acknowledgment of him. Firſt, that their ſervice of God ſhould not be an ignorant devotion, a blinde obedience, like that of thoſe at Athens, Act. 17. 23. but God ſhould manifeſt, and make himſelf known unto them, Pſal. 9. 16. & 76. 1. Ezek. 29. 8, 25,26. The knowledg of him, being the ground of all true devotion, and ſincere ſervice of him, Jer. 31. 34. Hoſ. 6. 3,4. Rom. 16. 25, 26. 2 Cor. 4. 4, 6. Gal. 4. 8. Eph. 1. 17. & 3. 19. And then, that God being made known unto them, (becauſe man may know a thing, and yet refuſe to be acknown of it, or to make profeſſion of what he knows, Joh. 12. 42.) they ſhall make acknowledgment of him, whom now they knew; but were ignorant of before, Gal. 4. 8. 1 Theſſ. 4. 5. by their performance of ſervice to him, ſuch as he himſelf requires, Deut. 26. 17,18. Joh. 17. 3. Rom. 10. 9,10. To know; for, to own, or, acknowledg, Pſal. 30. 7. & 142. 4. Ch. 59. 12. Ier. 3. 13. Matth. 7. 23. & 25. 12.

in that day] As ver. 18,19.

and ſhall do ſacrifice, and oblation] The word, here uſed, in the Syriack dialect, ſignifieth, indeed, to make, or, to do; as Dan. 3. 1. & 4. 35. but in Hebrew, moſt generally, to worſhip, or, ſerve, Deut. 4. 19. & 6. 13. & 10. 12. See ver. 23. It would rather, therefore, be rendred; And ſhall ſerve, or worſhip him with ſacrifice and oblation. Of the difference whereof, ſee on Chap. 1. 11, 13. Put both here, as the one there, and the other, Pſal. 51. 16. and elſewhere, collectively, for ſacrifices, and oblations: metaphorically, for ſuch ſpiritual ſervices, as were thereby, ſometime, typified, and are correſpondent thereunto. See ver. 19. Zeph. 3. 10. Mal. 1. 11. And this is that, whereby, they ſhould acknowldge God for their Sovereign, and their Saviour, and teſtifie their duty and engagement unto him, 2 King. 5. 15,17. A defect of the Pronoun, him; as Hoſ. 6. 3. Joh. 3. 34. Of the particle with; as Ch. 17. 5, 10.

yea, they ſhall vow a vow unto the Lord, and perform it] Heb. and they ſhall, &c. Look what vows they made unto God in the time of their troubles, they ſhall perform, and make good, upon deliverance, by God, vouchſafed them, Pſal. 66. 13,14. & 116. 8,16,17. Another evidence, and acknowledgment of their dependance on God, and loyalty to him: Of the former, by making vows now to him, as to their falſe gods they did before. Vows being a ſpecial part of religious worſhip, in thoſe times, eſpecially, Gen. 32. 20. & 35. 1,3. Levit. 27. 9--26. Numb. 6. 2--21. The latter, by their due payment, and performance of what they had vowed, Deut. 23. 21, 22. Pſal. 65. 1. & 76. 11. Eccl. 5. 4,5. Matt. 5. 33.

perform it] A defect of the affix, or pronoun; as ver. 22. Chap. 9. 9. Hoſ. 8. 4.

V. 22. And the Lord ſhall ſmite Egypt; he ſhall ſmite, and heal it] Heb. ſmiting and healing. It may therefore be thus rendred, Thus (after this manner; as Jer. 7. 34. Prov. 17. 3.) the Lord ſhall ſmite Egypt, ſmiting, and healing it. The particle is ſupplyed; as ver. 21. God ſhall ſo afflict them by the evils above mentioned, as that he ſhall, yet, by thoſe afflictions, work a gracious work upon them, give a good iſſue of them, and deliver them, not out of thoſe alone, but out of others alſo, worſe then them, Deut. 32. 39. Pſal. 60. 2. Chap. 6. 10. Hoſ. 6. 1. and they ſhall return even to the Lord] Or, for (as Chap. 13. 8. & 16. 2.) they ſhall return to the Lord. Have recourſe to him for mercy and deliverance, in their diſtreſſes, ver. 20.

and he ſhall be entreated of them] As he was of Manaſſes, 2 Chr. 33. 20.

and ſhall heal them] By vouchſafing, as well ſpiritual health, as temporal deliverance, unto them, Chap. 57. 18,19. Jer. 3. 22. See Jer. 46. 26. Ezek. 29. 13,14.

V. 23. In that day] As ver. 19. 21.

ſhall there be an high-way out of Egypt to Aſſyria; and the Aſſyrians ſhall come into Egypt, and the Egyptians into Aſſyria] Whereas there had been much diſſention, and bloody wars, between the Aſſyrians and the Egyptians, 2 King. 17. 24. & 18. 19,21. & 23. 29. & 24. 7. Ier. 44. 30. & 46. 2. Ezek. 29. 19. & 30. 10. They ſhould now, being both converted unto God in Chriſt, abandon all ſuch hoſtility, one againſt another, and maintain free commerce, and friendly entercourſe, either with other. See Ch. 11. 13. Some ſuch thing, ſome deem to have been in Pſammetichus his reign; but it was more fully accompliſhed in the kingdom of Chriſt, Act. 2. 9, 10. Rom. 10. 18.

an high-way] Or, cauſey; as Ch. 11. 16.

and the Egyptians ſhall ſerve with the Aſſyrians] They ſhall both ſerve, that is, worſhip; as ver. 21. One, and the ſame God, with one and the ſame worſhip, in one and the ſame manner, ſuch as he requires, Ch. 2. 2,3. & 46. 7. Zach. 8. 23. Joh. 4. 24. The old Greek and Latine, read the words, The Egyptians ſhall ſerve the Aſſyrians. That is, ſay ſome, not as the Iſraelites did the Egyptians, Exod. 1. 14. & 14. 12. but as Chriſtians do one another, with the voluntary ſervice of love, Gal. 5. 13. But the former is the better. For why ſhould Egypt ſerve Aſhur thus, rather then Aſhur Egypt? The entercourſe before was mutual, the ſervice now joynt; as Zeph. 3. 9.

V. 24. In that day] As ver. 23.

ſhall Iſrael be the third with Egypt, and with Aſſyria] That is, ſay ſome, the Jews, in the latter part of Ezekiahs reign, ſhall be in peace and amity with both of them, on either ſide, 2 King. 20. 19. But, nor doth any ſuch thing appear, yea, or is likely; nor doth that place imply it. The meaning is, that whereas the Jews were formerly diſjoyned from other Nations, who lived then without the pale of Gods Church, and without that knowledg and worſhip of God, which, as a ſpecial priviledg, the Jews, in thoſe times, enjoyed, Deut. 4. 7,8,33,34, & 7. 2,3,6. Pſal. 76. 1, 2. & 147. 19, 20. & 148. 14. Act. 10. 28. & 11. 3. Rom. 3. 1, 2. & 9. 4, 5. Eph. 2. 12. Now the pale being pluckt up, and the partition wall pul'd down, the hatred aboliſhed, and both in one body reconciled, there ſhould be no more any diſtinction of Jew, or Gentile, whether Egyptian, Aſſyrian, or other; but they ſhould all be in a ſpiritual confederacy, and communion, one with another, Zach. 8. 23. Act. 10. 28. & 11. 18. & 15. 9. 1 Cor. 12. 13. Gal. 3. 28. Eph. 2. 13- 19. Col. 3. 11.

the third] Heb. a third. Which becauſe it ſeems to be in a feminine form; Some would have underſtood ſiſter: and put the word into the text, a third ſiſter; as Cant. 8. 8. Ier. 3. 8, 10. Ezek. 16. 45, 46, 48, 51, 52. & 23. 2,4,31--33. But this ſeems not neceſſary; becauſe of States, Nations, and Countries, the Scripture uſeth to ſpeak promiſcuouſly, ſometime in the one form, and ſometime in the other. See Ch. 15. 1,4,5. But what if we render it, Gods third? as Gods tenth, Ch. 6. 13. See the note there; as alſo, Ier. 2. 31. where a word of the ſelf-ſame form and notion, is found.

with Egypt, and with Aſſyria] Theſe two people are ſuppoſed to be more ſpecially mentioned; to ſhew a conjunction of the poſterity of the poſterity of Cham, (from whom the Egyptians were deſcended, Gen. 10. 6.) with the race of Japhet, and both of them with the poſterity of Sem, according to Noahs prediction, Gen. 9. 27. But here is no mention, at all, of any of Iaphets iſſue: for Aſhur was of Sems race, Gen. 10. 21. as well, as Arphaxad, from whom Iſrael deſcended, by Eber, and Abraham, Gen. 11. 13,16,26. It ſeems rather to intimate, that even the moſt accurſed people that were in the world, ſhould, in Gods good time of grace under the Goſpel, partake in the bleſſing by Chriſt, Gen. 12. 2,3. and 22. 18.

even a bleſſing] This may ſeem to have ſpecial reſpect to Iſrael: and is then to be underſtood actively, as a means of conveighing, and imparting a bleſſing unto the other two; as the word is uſed, Gen. 12. 2. Pſal. 21. 6. & 72. 17. And partly, in regard of the Meſſias, to deſcend from them, Rom. 9. 5. in whom they were to be bleſſed, Gen. 22. 18. And partly, in regard of Gods Church eſtabliſhed among them, and, in former times, confined to them; in reſpect whereof, they are ſaid to partake of the bleſſing, by their abode in Sems tents, Gen. 9. 27. and adhering unto them, Ch. 56. 2, 3, 6. Zach. 2. 11. or if it be extended unto all three, it muſt be taken paſſively; for one that hath a bleſſing beſtowed upon him, or partaketh of, and in, a bleſſing; as Ch. 65. 8. Zach. 8. 13.

in the midſt of the land] Or, earth; as Gen. 10. 3. For this bleſſing extends it ſelf unto the whole world, Ch. 49. 6. in the midſt of it; either on earth, in the world; as Pſal. 74. 12. See ver. 19. Or if there be ſome emphaſis, more then ordinary, in the phraſe, I ſhould ſay, it were, not, as ſome, becauſe theſe lands lye all three in the middle of the world, which God would have to be as leven, to ſpread into the whole lump of it, on every ſide, Matth, 13. 33: for two of them, Iſrael and Egypt, coaſt on the Sea: but becauſe the land of Iudah lay in the midſt, between Aſſyria and Egypt; See ver. 17. For, as for that frivoulous and ridiculous conceit of the Iews, wherein the Chinois are ſaid to concur with them, that their country and Jeruſalem, more eſpecially, ſhould be the navel of the world, (abuſing, to that purpoſe, ſome paſſages of Scripture, Pſal. 74. 12. & Ezek. 5. 5. & 38. 12.) it is ſcarce worthy taking notice of.

V. 25. Whom the Lord of Hoſts ſhall bleſs, ſaying] Or, For the Lord ſhall bleſs him. That is, each one of them; as Chap. 2. 10. The relative, for the conjunction cauſal; as 1 Sam. 15. 15. Or, whom, each one, the Lord ſhall bleſs. That is, both pronounce, and make bleſſed, Chap. 61. 9.

Bleſſed be Egypt my people] The ſtile that Iſrael engroſſed before, Deut. 7. 6. Pſal. 78. 71. but ſhould now be common to the Egyptians, with them, Deut. 32. 21. Hoſ. 2. 23. Rom. 9. 26.

and Aſſyria the work of my hands] As Iſrael is ſo called, not as created only, at firſt, in Adam, but as made, and moulded into a State, Deut. 32. 6. Chap. 43. 7. & 44. 2. Pſal. 138. 8. So are the Aſſyrians here tearmed, as being new moulded, and new created by him, in his Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Eph. 2. 10. & 4. 24.

and Iſrael mine inheritance] My portion; my peculiar people, Exod. 19. 5. Deut. 4. 20. Pſal. 74. 2. & 135. 4. See Jer. 12. 7. A priviledg; yet now, not to be appropriated to them alone; but to be extended unto people, in all parts abroad, Pſal. 2. 8. & 82. 8. Eph. 3. 6. All three tearms uſed, for variety and elegancy, come home, in effect, and ſine to the ſame.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 1. IN the year that Tartan came to Aſhdod] In the eighteenth Chapter, was a prophecy of evils to befal Ethiopia; in the nineteenth, of the like to betide Egypt. Now in this Chapter, is a prediction of calamities, that both of them, were, from the Aſſyrians, joyntly, to endure, with a more ſpecial intimation of the time, at which this prophecy was delivered, prefixed in this verſe.

Tartan] A Commander of ſome forces, under the king of Aſſyria, one of the three, that Sennacherib ſent unto Ezekiah, to ſummon him to a ſurrender of Jeruſalem, 2 King. 18. 17.

Aſhdod] Or, as the Greeks and Latines tearm it, Azotus, Act. 8. 40. A chief city of Paleſtine, or the Philiſtines country; famous for their idol Dagon, who had his Temple there, 1 Sam. 5. 1, 2. & 6. 17. Yet it ſeems to have belonged, ſometime, to the Iſraelites, and to have been part of the portion, and poſſeſſion of the poſterity of Judah; as alſo, ſome other, of the Philiſtine cities, Joſh. 13. 3. & 15. 47. See Chap. 15. 2, 4.

(when Sargon the king of Aſſyria ſent him)] Who this Sargon ſhould be, is much queſtioned. The moſt ſuppoſe him to be Sennacherib; and to have had two names; as many others, in like manner, mentioned in Scripture. See on Ch. 1. 1. Uzziah. Though, beyond all probability, they multiply the matter, who tell us, from Jerom, that Sennacherib had no leſs then ſeven names; yea, ſome of the Jewiſh writers, ſay, eight; and mould the Aſſyrian Monarks, many of them, into one. But there want not thoſe, who deem this Sargon to have been, not Sennacherib, but one of his predeceſſors. And ſome of them, thus reckon the ſucceſſion of the Aſſyrian Rulers. Phul, 2 King. 15. 19. 1 Chr. 5. 26. Tiglath-Pileſer, 2 King. 15. 29. 1 Chr. 5. 26. Jareb, Hoſ. 5. 13. & 10. 16. Sargon, Eſay 20. 1. Salmaneſer, 2 King. 17. 3. & 18. 9. Sennacherib, 2 King. 18. 13. Other, omitting Jareb, thus order them; Phul, Tiglath-Pilneſer, Sargon, Salmaneſer, Sennacherib. See on Chap. 14. 29. But, as it may juſtly be doubted, whether Jareb, who, in the former deſcent is reckoned after Phul and Pileſer, were not ancienter then either of them; ſo, I ſuppoſe, it will better ſuit with the courſe of the ſacred Story, (for forraign helps, in a manner, here, wholly fail us) to place this Sargon, between Salmaneſer, and Sennacherib; as the ſucceſſor of the one, and predeceſſor to the other. The name ſeems to be the ſame with Serug, or Sarug, the name of Abrahams Grand-father, Gen. 11. 22. Sarug, Sargon; as Tarakah, Ch. 37. 9. Tarthan, Jeſus, Zach. 3. 1. Jaſon, Act. 17. 5. and the like.

and fought againſt Aſhdod, and took it] This ſome ſuppoſe to have been done in the twelfth year of Ezekiah, under Sennacherib, when he bent himſelf againſt the ſtrong cities of Judah; among which, they ſuppoſe Aſhdod to have been one, as being lately from the Philiſtines recovered, by Ezekiah, 2 King. 18. 8. Others, and ſo ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, draw it down to the fourteenth of Ezekiah; at which time, ſay they, Sennacherib hearing of Tirhakah, the king of Ethiopia, coming againſt him, Chap. 36. 1. & 37. 9. ſent Tartan to take Aſhdod, and went himſelf to meet Tirhakah, whom having diſcomfited, and ſubdued Egypt and Ethiopia, within the ſpace of three years, he returned, with thoſe he had captived of them, to the ſiege of Jeruſalem. But this no way ſuits well with the Scripture ſtory. Which to help, therefore, ſome ſay, that the Ethiopians, led by Tirhakah, made an inroad into Aſſyria, about that time, in Sennacheribs abſence; after whoſe deceaſe, Eſar-haddon, who ſucceeded him, made war upon the Ethiopians, and took many of them captive, together with ſuch Egyptians as were Aſſiſtant to them. That which carries much more probability with it, then the former. But others carry up, far higher, the date of this prophecy, unto the fourth year of Ezekiah, and the ſixt of Hoſea; at which time they ſuppoſe, that this Sargon, Salmaneſers predeceſſor, invaded Paleſtine, and ſent Tartan to beſiege Aſhdod; but dyed before it could be ſurprized. And true it is, that the words may not amiſs, for the ſyntax of them, be ſo read, caſting out the parentheſis; In the year that Tartan came to Aſhdod, when Sargon ſent him to fight againſt Aſhdod, and take it. For we have the very like frame of words, Joſh. 24. 9. where it is ſaid, that Balak the king of Moab aroſe, and warred againſt Iſrael, and ſent and called Balaam to curſe them. Yet Jepthah asketh the king of Ammon, whether Balak did ever fight againſt Iſrael, Iudg. 11. 25. And it is apparent, he never did, nor durſt do it; becauſe he could not induce Balaam to curſe them; which otherwiſe he would have done, conceiving ſome hope to prevail, if he could have drawn him ſo to do, Numb. 22. 5, 6. But the meaning of the place, is, he aroſe and warred, that is, he aroſe to war: aſſaied, or attempted to do it, but never did. So Mal. 1. 9. Do ye now beſeech God, and he will be gracious unto us. For ſo, word for word, the text runs in the original. The Prophet therein intending nothing leſs, then that God, at their requeſt, would deal graciouſly with his people, in remitting his wrath towards them, incenſed by their ſins, whereof they themſelves had been principal promoters and abetters, as he afterward affirmeth; and were very unfit, therefore, to ſue for others, and very unlikely to prevail in their behalf. But the Prophets meaning is, as our Bibles aright render it, Beſeech God that he will be, or, to be gracious unto us: and ſo, he aroſe, and warred; that is, aroſe, that he might war, or, to war: and the like might be here. Howbeit, unleſs ought could be produced, whereby it might appear, that Aſhdod was not taken by Tartan, we need not decline that ſenſe of the words, that is moſt ordinary and common. And ſince, that in places where we have ſo little light of certainty, we muſt of neceſſity go by conjectures, as thoſe before mentioned Interpreters all do; I ſhall make bold to add my conjectural thoughts alſo to theirs. I ſuppoſe, therefore, this prophecy was delivered about the eight, or ninth year of Ezekiah, when Salmaneſer, who, in his ſixt year had taken Samaria, and carried Iſrael away captive, 2 King. 18. 10, 11. being now deceaſed; Sargon his ſucceſſor, deſirous to proſecute his fathers deſigns, and to enlarge his dominions, began to ſet upon the Philiſtines, that bordered upon them, to the Weſt; (ſee Ch. 9. 12.) and began with Aſhdod; to the relief whereof, the Egyptians, their next neighbours, together with the Ethiopians, their confederates, coming in no ſmall companies, were by the Aſſyrians defeated, and carried captive, in ſuch ſcornful and deſpiteful manner, as is here after deſcribed, ver. 4. the rather, to be revenged upon the Egyptians, becauſe they had ſo lately before, been aſſiſtant to the Iſraelites againſt the Aſſyrians, in the reign of Salmaneſer, and an occaſion of their revolt, 2 King. 17. 4. And the ſiege of Aſhdod might well continue three years, as well, as that of Samaria, 1 King. 17. 5. being one of the ſtrongeſt cities in Paleſtine; nor is it unlikely, that Sargon the rather attempted this city, if it were one of thoſe that Ezekiah had ſubdued and regained, that he might pick a quarrel with him, and ſo be dealing with him, as his predeceſſors had done with the other ten tribes before; that which might alſo, the rather, move Ezekiah, to ſeek to ſhake off the Aſſyrian yoke, 2 King. 18. 7. thereby diſcovering their ambitious, and tyrannical intentions. But Sargon, it ſeems, being taken away, before that his purpoſed deſign could be effected, Sennacherib, his ſucceſſor, went on with the ſame, 2 King. 18.13. And this my conjecture, I leave to the conſideration of others, ready to yield unto any, that can bring ſurer grounds, or afford better light. The Egyptians, after their wonted manner of aſcribing to their kings conqueſts, atchieved by others, ſeem to attribute this taking of Aſhdod to Pſammetichus, who, about theſe times, reigned in Egypt, reporting of him, that invading Syria, he ſate down, not three, but thirty years, wanting one, before the ſtrong city of Azotus, which endured the longeſt ſiege that had been known, and at length took it. See Herodot. lib. 2.

V. 2. At the ſame time ſpake the Lord by Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz, ſaying] Heb. by the hand (that is, the miniſtery; as Hag. 1.1. Mal. 1.1.) of Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz; See Chap. 1. 1. That is, by me, and to me; the Noun, for the Pronoun; as Chap. 2. 1. Gen. 19. 24. Gods will and commands, were ſometime made known to the perſons, that were to put them in execution by others; as 2 King. 9. 1, 2. Sometime immediately to themſelves; as Jer. 19. 1, 10. And ſo to Eſay here; who is enjoyned, not only to do ſomewhat that might ſhadow out that which he was to deliver; but to tell his people, withal, what was thereby deſigned, ver. 3, 4.

Go looſe the ſackcloth from off thy loyns] An act enjoyned the Prophet, that was ſymbolical and ſignificative; not unlike that, Ezek. 12. 3--7. fore-ſhewing, in what ſort, the Egyptians and Ethiopians ſhould be carried captive, by the Aſſyrians, ver. 4.

Go] The word in theſe kind of injunctions doth not alwaies imply ſome motion from place to place; eſpecially, when the thing enjoyned may without any ſuch change be accompliſhed; but a ſpeedy, and ſedulous addreſs unto the doing of the thing enjoyned, Gen. 19. 32. & 31. 44. Num. 24. 14. Jer. 19. 1. Hoſ. 3. 1.

looſe] The word ſignifies, firſt, to open, Chap. 50. 5. then to looſe; either captives out of priſon; which is done, by opening the priſon doors, Chap. 14. 17. & 51. 14. & 61. 1. or garments from the body, by opening, and untying the girdle, or whatſoever they were faſtened to the body with before, Job 12. 18. and laſtly, more generally, to put off any garment, whether girt cloſe to the body, or hanging looſe about it, 1 King. 20. 11. Pſal. 30. 11. and ſo here.

the ſack-cloth] Heb. ſack: as Chap. 3. 24. Now ſack-cloth was uſed in times of heavineſs, for a mourning weed, Chap. 22. 12. & 37. 2. Joel 1. 13. Whence to looſe, or to put off ſack-cloth, for to leave mourning, or to give cauſe ſo to do, Pſal. 30. 11. but here it is not ſo uſed; but for ſuch an upper garment, made of courſe, and hairy ſtuff, as the Prophets ordinarily were wont to wear, 2 King. 1. 8. Zach. 13. 4. Matth. 3. 4.

from off thy loins] Whereunto, or, about, ſuch garments, looſe otherwiſe, were ſometime girt, 1 King. 20. 46. 2 King. 9. 1.

and put off thy ſhoo from thy foot] Or, looſe, Deut. 24, 9. becauſe the latchet, or ſhoo-ſtring is looſed, for the pulling of it off, Mar. 1. 7. Luk. 3. 16. ſhoo, and foot: as Joſh. 5. 15. for ſhoos, and feet: as it is, Exod. 3. 5. Heb. from off, or upon: as Deut. 25 9.

and he did ſo, walking naked, and barefoot] Albeit, it be expreſly ſaid, that he did ſo; yet there want not a few, among whom, alſo, ſome of the Jewiſh Writers, who ſuppoſe, that this was not done indeed by the Prophet, but in a viſion only ſeemed to be done by him. See the like conceit, Chap. 8. 3. one cauſe, why they ſo imagine, is, becauſe they conceive, that the Prophet ſhould be enjoyned to walk ſtark naked: whereas indeed, there was no ſuch matter intended. For firſt God enjoyned him only to put off his prophetical robe, or mantle; ſuch, as fell from Elias, when he was carried up to heaven in a whirlwind, 2 King. 2. 13. then, it had been in vain, to add bare-foot, if he had before meant all naked. Secondly, it was to ſignifie, how the Egyptian & Ethiopian Captives ſhould be handled; he was therefore to go ſtript, as a priſoner, or captive; now captives are not wont to be led ſtark-naked; but ill-clothed, in ſingle, and ſorry ſuites, or in ragged apparel. And laſtly, the word naked, is in Scripture commonly ſo uſed; to wit, when a man goeth in his coat, or inner-rayment only, without upper-garments, gown, cloak, or mantle, ſuch, as at other times he ordinarily uſeth. So it is ſaid of Saul, that in a prophetical rapture, he ſtript off his clothes, that is, his upper garments, or garment, (as yokes, for yoke, Jer. 27. 2. & 28. 10.) and lay down naked before Samuel, 1 Sam. 19. 24. So Chap. 32. 11. the women are commanded to ſtrip themſelves bare, (that is, to put off their bravery, or their better apparel, Exod. 33. 4, 5.) and to gird on ſack-cloth. So Peter is ſaid to caſt on his ſhort fiſhers coat, (for ſuch an one, the learned obſerve the word there uſed, to ſignifie, as frequent among them, of that employment, in thoſe parts) for (ſaith the text) he was naked; yet not ſtark-naked, though without it, Joh. 21. 7. nor in any other ſenſe, doth Micah ſay; that he would go ſtript, and naked; or, our Prophet here, that he went naked, and barefoot. See alſo Act. 19. 16.

barefoot] Or, unſhod. The habite, when affected, of mourners, 1 Sam. 15. 30. when enforced, of captives, Jer. 2. 25.

V. 3. And the Lord ſaid] Unto the Prophet, and by him, to thoſe, whom he preached and publiſhed this unto: either when, at firſt, he enjoyned him to walk up and down in that manner, which could not but ſeem ſtrange unto thoſe that beheld it; or afterward, when he had for ſome ſpace of time ſo done, and was demanded of his people, what, by ſo doing, he meant, or intended: as Ezek. 12. 9, 10. & 24. 19.

like as my ſervant Iſaiah hath walked naked, and barefoot, three years, for a ſign, and wonder upon Egypt, and upon Ethiopia] In the words enſuing, God declareth what he intended to ſignifie unto them, by this his command given to the Prophet, and his acting according to the ſame. A relation of what was done by the Prophet, together with the end of it, and whom it concerned, is in this verſe: the application of it, to that which was to befall thoſe two people, to wit, the Egyptians, and the Ethiopians, is in the next.

my ſervant] Not in general only, as are all men, yea, all creatures, in regard of creation, Pſal. 119. 91. or, in ſomewhat more ſpecial manner, in regard of a voluntary addiction, and obſtriction, as are all, that are in ſpecial covenant with him, Neh. 1. 11. Pſal. 79. 2. & 116. 16. but in a more ſpecial rank yet, in regard of his place, and office, as a Prophet: as Num. 11 7, 8. Jer. 7. 25. So, Paul, a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 1. 1. Phil. 1. 1. that is, an Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 1. 1. Eph. 1. 1. a ſervant of God, and an Apoſtle of Chriſt, Tit. 1. 1. the one explicates the other.

three years] Concerning theſe words, there is much diſcrepance of opinion among Interpreters. Some annex them to the foregoing ſentence, and apply them to the Prophets carriage. And of theſe, ſome ſuppoſe, that all this was done in a viſion; as, ſay they, thoſe things of Ezekiel, his lying ſo long on either ſide; and making, and baking his bread in ſuch and ſuch ſort, Ezek. 4. 4-6, 10-15. and doing of a thing three years together, might, by a viſion, be repreſented in a moment. Other of them, affirm it to have been really done, and exhibited. How elſe could it be a ſign and wonderment unto any? yet are theſe alſo divided; for ſome of them ſuppoſe, that he went conſtantly thus, as well within doors, as without, for three years together: other, that he went ſo during that time, only then, when he went out about the diſcharge of his prophetical employment. Thus they, that affix theſe words to the former, underſtanding them of the Prophets continuance in that habit. But there want not, that prefix them to the clauſe enſuing, for three years a ſign, and wonder, or, a three years ſign, and wonder, upon, or, concerning the Egyptians, and Ethiopians: conceiving them to be meant, not of the Prophets act, but of that which was thereby deſigned: and this reading is ſtrengthened by the pauſes, in the Hebrew, the middle diſtinction concluding at the word next before-going. Howbeit, theſe again, are not all of one mind, concerning the thing thereby deſigned. For ſome ſuppoſe that thereby is implyed, when this calamity ſhould befall thoſe two nations, (which is the more probable) to wit, three years after the publication of this Prophecy: as the like, Chap. 7. 8. & 21. 16. Others, how long it ſhould continue; to wit, not above three year; as the like, Chap. 23. 15. & 31. 10. the like difference of opinion, concerning the ſame term of years, which ſome alſo draw to this, See on Chap. 16. 14. Howſoever, the queſtion is with theſe again moved, how long the Prophet was to walk thus naked? the rather, for that the text thus read, ſeems not to determine it: and they deem it unfitting, that the typical act ſhould be of equal extent, for term of time, with the thing it ſelf, thereby typified; no example in Scripture exhibiting any ſuch parallel. Some of them therefore conceive, that one day might ſuffice for him, to walk abroad in that manner; there being no time limited in the injunction that God gave him. As Jeremies wearing a yoke on his neck, but for a day, might ſuffice to denote a captivity of ſeventy years continuance, Jer. 25. 12. & 27. 2. & 28. 10. Others would have it done by him, three dayes, correſpondent to the three years deſigned, either unto the commencing, or, for the conſummating of that, which by the Prophet was denounced. This is moſt agreeable to the uſual manner of Scripture, a day, for a year; ſo fourty dayes, for, fourty years, Num. 14. 33, 34. Ezek. 4. 6. and 390 dayes, for as many years, Ezek. 4. 4, 5.

three years] Some would have it read, a third years ſign, &c. becauſe the cardinall number is put ſometime for the ordinall, as they term it, as one, for firſt, Gen. 1. 5. Matth. 28. 1. but I find not, where any cardinal ſo uſed, is joyned with a ſubſtantive plural: and that enallage, therefore, can have no place here.

a ſign, and wonder] Theſe two words oft joyned together, Deut.6.22. & 7.19. & 13.1,2. & 26.8. & 28.46. Neh. 9.10. Pſal.135.9. Jer.32.20. Chap.8.17. are as genus, and ſpecies; the former of larger extent then the latter. For the former may be, where nothing future is foreſhewn: as Num.2.2.Ezek.20, 12. whereas the latter is ever, for the foretelling, and aſcertaining of ſomething to come, 1 King.13.2,3.the former may be ſome common and ordinary thing; whereas the latter is ever of ſomething, if not miraculous, as Exod.7.9. 2 Chr.32. 24. yet ſtrange, and unuſual, at leaſt, Ezek.4.2,3.& 12.3-6, 11. & 24.16,17,24. and ſo here. See Chap.8.18.

upon Egypt, and upon Ethiopia] Or, concerning Egypt, and Ethiopia: as Chap.1.1. concerning what was to befall the Egyptians, and Ethiopians, See on ver.1,4. yet concerning the Jews alſo, unto whom it was exhibited, to diſſwade, and deter them, from relying upon theſe two people; which they were over-prone unto. See ver.5,6.

V. 4. So ſhall the King of Aſſyria lead away the Egyptians priſoners; and the Ethiopians captive, young, and old, naked, and barefoot] An expoſition of this ſtrange, and unwonted demeanour of the Prophet, and application of it, to the ſad, and ſorry condition of the Egyptians, and Ethiopians; which, within a ſhort ſpace of time, they were from the Aſſyrians to ſuſtain.

the King of Aſſyria] Whether Sargon, or Sennacherib, or Eſar-haddon, his Succeſſor, uncertain. See on ver.1.

lead away] As men are wont to lead, or drive beaſts, and cattel; for of ſuch it is moſt commonly uſed, Gen.31.18. Exod. 3.1.1 Sam.30.20. 1 King.4.24. Ch. 11. 6. and where alluſion is thereunto, Pſal. 98. 52. & 81.1. And it is therefore, not unfitly applyed to poor captives, that are led, or driven, like beaſts, Gen.31.26. Deut. 28.37. Chap. 61.11. Lam.3.2.

the Egyptians priſoners, and the Ethiopians captives] Or, captive. Heb. the captivity of Egypt, and the captivity, or, deportation of Cuſh: captivity, for captives: as Neh.1.2,3. Jer.24.5. For we muſt not imagine, that the one were priſoners, and not captives; the other captives, but not priſoners: (ſee on Ch. 5. 13.) for both the words in the original, import one and the ſame thing: variety of terms, is for the greater elegancy only uſed. This the King of Aſſyria ſhould do, either having diſcomfited their joynt forces, or ſubdued their countries, bordering the one upon the other. See ver.1.

young, and old] Shewing no mercy to any, in regard of tenderneſs, through years, or weakneſs through age. See 2 Chr.36.17.

naked, and barefoot] Stript of their apparel, and left, in a manner, ſtark naked, in baſe rags, ſcarce able to cover their nakedneſs: that which is wont to be the lot of captives, in fight taken, and pillaged by the enemy, Deut.28.45. Chap. 3.17,24. Job 24.7,10. Jer.2.25. Amos 2.16. See ver.2.

even with their buttocks uncovered] Heb. fundament; a word, not unuſual with us: for it is of neer affinity with that, which ſignifies foundations, Pſal.11.3. that part, which mans body ſits upon, and reſts on in ſitting. The meaning is, having not rayment, ſo much, as to hide their ſhame. See on Chap. 3.17. So in deſpight were Davids meſſengers uſed by the Ammonite, 2 Sam.10.5. And herein, ſure, the thing ſignified out-ſtripped the ſign; for the Prophet, doubtleſs, walked not ſo naked, as to have his ſhame ſeen, Rev.16.15.

to the ſhame of Egypt] Who aſſiſted them, and in likelihood, undertook to protect them. See on Chap.18.1.

ſhame] Heb. nakedneſs, 1 Sam. 20. 30. Exod. 32. 25. becauſe nakedneſs, ſince mans fall, is ſhamefull, Gen. 2, 25. & 3. 7.

V. 5. And they ſhall be afraid, and aſhamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory] The event of this overthrow given by the Aſſyrian, unto the joynt forces of the Ethiopians, and Egyptians; to wit, that it ſhould ſtrike a terrour into thoſe, that had ſought to them for ayd againſt the Aſſyrian, and make them aſhamed, that they relyed ſo much upon them for relief. See ver.6.

they] That is, ſay ſome, the Jews; who truſted too much to them, Chap.30.2. & 31.1. & 36.6. Ezek. 29. 6, 7, 16. See Chap.19.17. Others, the Philiſtines, and Aſhdodites, that expected relief from them. It may well be both, and ſuch others, as they undertook to protect. See, on Chap. 8. 1. wings; for the word is uſed indefinitely; as others oft are, Chap.2.19. Mal.1.4.

afraid] Becauſe they ſhall have no hope of ability to hold out againſt an adverſary ſo potent, and prevalent; whom the joynt forces of two ſuch Kingdoms were not able to withſtand, 2 King.10.4. and it is matter of dread, to ſee ſupporters, and confederates to fail, Chap.19.17.

aſhamed] To find their expectations fruſtrate, and thoſe defeated, of whoſe help, they had been over-confident, and had much gloried therein before, Chap.30.5. Jer.2.36.

their expectation] The people from whom they expected ſuccour, and ſafeguard. Heb. their looking into, or, looking after: and ſo ver.6. for the word is no where elſe found; but the root it comes of, is uſed oft in that ſenſe, Pſal.34.5. & 142. 4. and ſo other words of the ſame notion: expectation, for, perſons, from whom ought is expected, Pſal. 71.5. Jer. 14. 8. & 17.13.

their glory] glory, for them, of whom and their help, they gloried; So Pſal.3.3. with 44. 8. Chap. 10. 3. & 17. 4. yet expectation is not here ſo appropriated to the one; and glory, to the other; as if they did not, as well expect help from, as glory in, either. But it is an elegant form of ſpeech; very uſual with this Prophet, intending the ſame thing of either; Of which, ſee before, ver.4. & Chap.5.13.

V. 6. And the Inhabitant of this Ile ſhall ſay in that day] inhabitant, for, inhabitants: as Chap.5.3. in that day; for, at that time: as Chap.19.18. But the queſtion is, what the ile, or iland, here ſpoken of, ſhould be. The word is deemed, moſt properly, to ſignifie an iland, that is, ſome land on every ſide environed with water; as lake, ſome great water encompaſſed with land; whence ariſeth that queſtion, among the ancient Geographers, whether the earth were an iland, or the ſea a lake, that is, whether the ſea encompaſſed the land, or the land, the ſea: and hence in Scripture, the Iles of the Sea, Eſth.10.1. Chap.11.11. and, the Iles in the Sea, Ezek. 26.18. but it is uſed alſo, as is generally agreed on, for ſuch countries, and regions, as lay upon the Sea-coaſts; ſo it ſeems to be taken, Jer.25.22. Ezek. 37.3, 15. Hence ſome gather, that the Philiſtines country ſhould be here meant, becauſe it lay upon the midland Sea. See Jer.47.7. but ſo did the land of Iſrael too, Joſh.13.4,12,47. and that reaſon ſome of the Rabbines render, why it ſhould here be ſo termed: nor is it a ſufficient argument to prove, that the Jewiſh land ſhould not be here intended; becauſe that their country had no where, in particular, this name given it, when as the word is granted to be of ſo large an extent, as to take in all regions bordering on the ſea, as theirs did. Yea it is uſed yet more largely, for lands, or countries in general; and for inlands, as well as ilands. See Chap.41.1,5. & 42. 4, 10. & 49. 1. & 51.5. & 60.9. Jer.47.4. And this land may ſeem rather to carry it to thoſe, unto whom; then to the Philiſtines, of whom, he ſpake.

Behold, ſuch is our expectation, whither we flee for help, to be delivered from the King of Aſſyria; and how ſhall we eſcape?] See on ver. 5. Thus it fareth with thoſe, on whom we relyed, or expected help from. Nor do theſe words evince, that this is not ſpoken in the perſon of the Jewiſh people; becauſe Ezekiah truſted not on Egypt, but on God alone; and Jeruſalem therefore was delivered: but Aſhdod, which truſted to the Egyptian ayd, was not. For it is not unlikely, that Ezekiah, though a good king, and one that truſted in God, 2 King.18.5. as well as Aſa, who did ſo alſo, 2 Chr.14.11. & 16.7,8. might be ſomewhat faulty this way, as well as another way, that ſavoured of ſome diffidence, upon the very ſame occaſion, 2 King.18. 6. 14-16. See Chap. 3. 2, 4.

from the King of Aſſyria] Who ſhortly after, ſurprized a great part of Judea, Chap.36.1. Heb. from the face of: as Chap.21.15.

and how ſhall we eſcape?] Or, how ſhould we eſcape? what hope can we have to be ſecured by help from them, who are not able to ſave themſelves? Pſal. 60. 11. & 146. 3, 4. their ſhame appeared in the former branch; in this latter, their fear. See ver.5.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of the deſart of the Sea] Here begins a new Prophecy, another Sermon. Of the word, Burden, ſee on Chap.13.1. That this Prophecy concerneth Chaldea, and Babylon, appears evidently, as well by the name of it expreſly mentioned, ver. 9. as alſo by the Nations preciſely named, by whom it was to be deſtroyed. But here are two queſtions moved concerning this Prophecy. The former is, why the Prophet ſhould have another Sermon againſt Babylon; when as he had ſo large an one againſt it, before. To which it is anſwered; for two cauſes eſpecially: Firſt, becauſe the people of God were too prone to truſt to, and ſeek amity with, as the Kings of Aſſyria, though they ſmarted for it, 2 Chr.28.16,20,21. ſo the Kings of Babylon, who afterward ſtood up in their ſtead, 2 King. 20. 12, 13. Chap.39.1,2. And again, becauſe they were to ſuſtain very heavy things, at their hands, 2 King.20.17,18. Chap.39.6,7. The Prophet therefore, or God rather, by the Prophet, doth the rather oft mind them of the ruine of Babylon; partly, to withdraw them from relying on a State, that was, it ſelf, to be ruined; and partly, to comfort them, in regard of thoſe evils, that from that City and Kingdome they were to endure. For the ſame cauſe, may ſeem ſo many predictions to have proceeded from this our Prophet, of the Aſſyrians downfall, Chap.10.5-20,24-34. & 30.27-33. and of the Egyptians, as from the ſame Prophet, Chap. 19. & 20. & 30.3. &

31.3. ſo alſo from Jeremy, Jer.43.8-13. & 44. 29,30. & 46. The latter queſtion is, why Babylon, or Chaldea, ſhould be termed the deſart of the Sea. To this, a late Writer of ſome note, anſwers, that though the Prophecy concerns Babylon, yet by theſe terms is deſigned, neither Chaldea, nor Babylon; but Idumea, or the Country of the Edomites, who inhabited the deſart of Sur, or Etham, Exod. 13. 20. & 15. 22. Numb.33.8. But had he ſhewed how this ſad Prophecy had concerned thoſe Edomites, or where any mention had been therein made of them, there might have been ſome colour of ground for the turning of it that way: now having produced nothing from the matter of it, to back, or ſecond this his conceit; we ſee little reaſon to afford entertainment unto it: and taking that for granted, that others, as well Jews, as ours generally agree in, to wit, that it is Babylon, or Chaldea, at leaſt, that is in theſe terms deſcribed; we ſhall proceed to conſider why it ſhould be ſo termed: and becauſe the word deſart, is firſt in the text, we ſhall begin with it. Chaldea therefore is here termed a deſart, as moſt Interpreters imagine, for two cauſes; the one hiſtorical, or geographical; not becauſe it was a wild, or waſte country: For it was a very rich, and well watered ſoyl; but becauſe there lay a large deſart, or wide wilderneſs, between Chaldea, wherein Babylon ſtood, and the countries of Media, and Perſia; by the people whereof, it was afterward invaded. The other Prophetical: not becauſe it was at preſent ſo; but becauſe it was in time to come to be laid waſte, and deſolate. Chap. 13. 19-22. and as it had made the whole world a wilderneſs, Chap. 14. 17. in like manner, by way of juſt retaliation, to be made a wilderneſs it ſelf. So Pſal. 137. 8. Jer.51. 29,36, 37, 43. I ſhall make bold to add mine own conjecture, and leave it to the learned. The Hebrew word ſignifies as well a plain, as a wilderneſs, Chap.63.13. Jer.13.24. Lam.4.19. & 5.9. and the notation of it, from a word, that is in the Chaldee, moſt common, ſignifying to lead cattel out to the places where they are to feed, carries it more ſpecially, unto ſuch plains, as had paſture grounds in them, or conſiſted of ſuch. So the word ſeems to be taken, 1 Sam.17.28. & 24.1,3. & 25. 1, 15. Pſal.65.12,13. Jer.9.9. Joel 1. 19,20. & 2. 22. Luk. 15. 4. compared with Matth.18.12. I ſuppoſe therefore, that Chaldea hath this term given unto it, not as a deſart, but as a plain: and ſuch indeed that country was, wherein the building of Babylon was firſt ſet on foot, as Moſes teſtifieth, Gen. 11.2. in regard whereof, alſo, it is commonly deemed, that the Chaldeans proved ſo ſkilful in Aſtronomy, the ſituation of their country, which lay all in a Plain, without any noteable interruption of hills, or mountains of height, affording a great help to the more exact obſervation of the motion, as well of the fixed ſtars, as of the planets, and the times of the riſing, and ſetting of either. And thus much for the former term of deſart, or, plain: and the reaſon why Chaldea might be ſo termed. The latter word, is that of the ſea. Now this term is given to Chaldea, or Babylon, as ſome think, metaphorically, a ſea, that is, as the ſea, in regard of that great abundance of wealth, that Babylon was ſtored with; (as we uſe to ſay, a ſea of good) all the kingdoms, and countries under that vaſt Monarchy, Jer. 27. 5,6. ſending in their treaſures to Babylon, as all rivers empty themſelves into the ſea, Jer.51.44. ſome alſo, in regard of her unſatiableneſs; though receiving all, yet having never enough; as the Sea is never the fuller, for all thoſe waters, that out of all parts are ſwallowed up in it, Eccl.1.7. See Jer.51.13. and Herodote, l.1. Some alſo prophetically, in regard of thoſe manifold, and immenſe evils, that were to befall her; as we uſe to ſay, a ſea, or, an ocean of evils; the ſea is broke in upon Babylon, Jer. 51. 42. or, becauſe the ſeat of the city was to become as a ſea, to be turned into water-pooles, Chap.14.23. Thus they; but, as to me ſeems, with no great probability; for neither the land of Chaldea, nor the city, are here termed the ſea: but the deſart, or, plain of the Sea; as, the Iles of the Sea, Eſth. 10. 1. for lands ſituate in, or beſide, the ſea. See on Chap.20.6. Others therefore rather deem Chaldea, or the ſeat of the city, ſo termed, in regard of the ſituation of it. And here, in regard that the ſea, in Scripture language, is very commonly uſed, for the weſt, Gen.13.14. & 28.14. Exod.10.19. Chap.49.12. Ezek. 48.17. the reaſon whereof is, becauſe the midland ſea lay to the Weſt of Judea, and was the weſtern border, or boundary of it, Joſh.15.12. Deut.34.2. Some of the Rabbines therefore would have it ſo called, becauſe it lay weſt, or northweſt, from the land of the Medes, and Perſians, by whom it was to be deſtroyed. See Chap.41.25. But this ſeems rather, to others, a little too far fetcht: who rather ſuppoſe this term to allude to the ſituation of Babylon, and the plain whereon it was built, ſtanding the one, and lying the other, ſituate either of them, neer unto, or upon the banks of, the great river ‑uphrates, as it is ſtyled, Gen. 15. 18. Deut. 1. 7. and the ‑e lakes made out of it. For any great confluences, or ‑acles of water, are in the Hebrew tongue termed Seas, Gen.1.10. hence the ſea of Galile, Chap.11.1. Matth. 4. 18. & 15.29. which yet was but a lake, Luk. 5. 1. and the great lover belonging to Salomons Temple, is called, a ſea, 1 King. 7.23,24. Jer.52.17. The country of Chaldea, therefore, that part of it eſpecially, that lay neer to Babylon, is not unfitly termed, the plain of the Sea; in regard of thoſe meers, and pools, the country lying all on a flat, that that great river Euphrates, that ran round about Babylon, as alſo, through the midſt of it, made on every ſide of it; which yet in part to remedy, two Queens eſpecially, were at infinite coſt; the one of them, to wit, Semiramis, by raiſing mounds, and banks of ſtrange height, and ſtrength, on either ſide the river, to keep it, ſo much as might be, within compaſs: the other, to wit, Nitocris, who came long after her, (beſides what in this kind, ſhe alſo did, even to wonderment) partly, by diverting the courſe of the river from his direct paſſage, and through new channels of great depth, by mans induſtry ſunk, winding it to and fro, and enforcing it to fetch many compaſſes, before it came down to Babylon, to break the violent force of the ſtream, running down right before: and partly, by digging a lake neer unto it, three hundred and twenty furlongs broad. Of which things, ſee Herodote, l.1. Strabo, l.16. Pliny, l.5. c.26,27. Hence is Babylon ſaid to ſit upon many waters, Jer. 51. 13. Whereunto may be added, what Abydenus an ancient Writer, cited by Euſebius, in his Evangelical preparative, l.9. c.41. reports, to wit, that it was by tradition commonly received, that the whole country about Babylon was all water, a very ſea, untill Belus (ſuppoſed to be Nimrod, Gen.10.9-11.) having drained it, divided it, and built Babylon upon it: as alſo what God himſelf ſaith by the Prophet, ſpeaking to Babylon, I will dry up thy Sea, Jer. 51. 36. And thus much for the title, or inſcription of this Prophecy.

As whirlwinds in the South paſs thorow; ſo it cometh from the deſart, from a terrible land] Or, As whirlwinds in the South, he paſſeth. A prediction of the Medes and Perſians, their violent irruptions, in a furious and tempeſtuous manner breaking into Chaldea.

whirlwinds] Or, as Some, Some one grievous whirlwind, or, tempeſt: the plural, by way of eminency, uſed for the ſingular: as Prov: 1.20. & 9.1. Mic.5.2. Yet in a plural ſenſe, it may well ſtand here; as another word of the ſame notion, which, with it, is uſed, Zach.9.14. though in that form, this word be no where elſe found: wind, in ſuch ſimilitudes, is a note of ſwiftneſs, Pſal.18.10. & 104. 3. a whirlwind, ſuch as whisking about, involveth all on every ſide, and beareth all down before it; a note of vehemency, and violence, forcibly breaking thorow, and beating down all oppoſition, Pſal. 83. 15. Prov.1.27. Chap.5.28. & 29.6. Jer.4.13. Nah.1.3.

in the South] Of whirlwinds of the South, is mention made alſo, Zach.9.14. Howbeit, the word here uſed, is ambiguous. For albeit, that it be frequently uſed for the South, or Southern parts, Exod.26.18. & 27.9. Num.34.3. Joſh. 15. 1, 2. Judg.21.19. yet it ſeems properly, and primarily, to ſignifie high-lands, or, dry-lands; oppoſed ſometime to the vale, or, lower grounds, Joſh.10.40. Jud.1.9. Jer.17.26. ſometime to the ſpringy, and well watered lands, Joſh.10.40. & 15.19. Judg. 1.15. and the Southern parts are ſo termed, becauſe commonly ſuch, as being neerer to the ſcorching heat of the Sun, either may here be meant: partly, becauſe the Southern winds are oft in thoſe parts tempeſtuous, Job 37.9. as alſo, for that in ſuch uplands, the wind is wont to have the greater power, Jer.4.11.

paſs through] Heb. to paſs through; that is, are apt, or, are wont to paſs along, without ſtop, or ſtay; there being nothing uſually in ſuch places to hinder, or to reſtrain them, Jer. 9.24.

So] A defect of the redditive particle: as Prov. 25.12. & 26.11. but here it needeth not, the text being rendred as before.

it cometh] To wit, the calamity of Chaldea, or, a tempeſt upon it. Or, he cometh, that is, Cyrus with his forces breaking in fiercely and furiouſly upon it, Jer. 50. 42, 44. & 51. 28, 30.

from the wilderneſs] Either, becauſe winds oft blow ſuddenly and fiercely, from waſte places, Job 1.19. Jer. 4.10,11. or, in regard of a wilderneſs, that lay betwixt Perſia, or Media, and Chaldea; which Cyrus and his forces, muſt of neceſſity paſs thorow. Xenophon, l.3. or, of the Country it ſelf, both of Media, and Perſia, the northerly parts of either, wherein their ſouldiery was moſt bred, being much of it waſte, and mountainous, Herodote, l.1. & Strabo, l.11. & 15.

from a terrible land] To wit, out of Media the people whereof, the Babylonians much feared; and their Queen Nitocris, therefore, above mentioned, a woman of prudence, and providence, above her ſex, by all means, endeavoured to keep them from having any commerce with her people, by the Aſſyrians, that lay between them and the Medes, Herodot, l. 1. Of their fierceneſs, ſee Chap. 13. 17, 18.

V. 2. A grievous viſion is declared unto me] Grievous matters concerning Babylon, are, in way of viſion, revealed unto me: and this Prophecy therefore is not without good cauſe, entituled, a burden, ver. 1.

grievous] Heb. hard, harſh; or, cruel, Chap. 19. 4.

viſion] See Chap. 1. 1.

the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherouſly, and the ſpoiler ſpoileth] Heb. The treacherous dealer, a treacherous dealer, or, dealing treacherouſly: and the ſpoiler, a ſpoiler, or ſpoiling. Theſe words ſome joyn with the words going before; reading them on this manner, A grievous viſion is declared unto me, for the perfidious perſon dealing perfidiouſly; and for the ſpoiler, that ſpoileth: as ſpoken of the Chaldeans, and pointing to their ſins, for which they were to be deſtroyed; to wit, their treachery, and their inhumanity, Chap. 47. 6. Hab. 2. 5. Or, a treacherous one, dealing treacherouſly; and a ſpoiler ſpoiling. Underſtanding it of the Medes and Perſians, their dealing with the Chaldeans, thus, in either kinde, as the ſubject matter of this Prophecy. Others, faſten it unto that which followeth, as ſpoken in way of compellation; O thou treacherous dealer, and notable ſpoiler; thou Elam, I mean, go up; thou Media beſiege: as inviting them to go inſtantly about the buſineſs aſſigned them. But moſt read them; and ſo they run beſt, apart by themſelves. Yet ſome on this wiſe, much to the ſame effect with the firſt of the former: This perfidious perſon dealeth perfidiouſly, and this ſpoiler ſpoileth. That is, the Babylonian that perſiſteth in his impiety; (ſo underſtanding the former branch, Dan. 5. 5, 6. & 5. 3, 4, 22, 23.) and in his oppreſſions, Chap. 14. 16, 17. Dan. 4. 27. Others, thus, The perfidious perſon, that is, the Babylonian, dealeth perfidiouſly; and the ſpoiler, or, plunderer; that is, the Mede or Perſian, plundereth, or ſpoileth. God, for her perfidiouſneſs, puniſheth Babylon by the Perſian ſword. Or, which ſence ſeems moſt natural, The treacherous dealer, hath found a treacherous dealer; and the ſpoiler, one that ſpoileth. The perfidious plunderer, the Babylonian, is now paid in his own coyn; hath now met with his match; is, through Gods juſt judgement, now dealt with himſelf, as he had dealt before with others. See Chap. 33. 1. Jer. 50. 15. That which ſome expound of Cyrus, and Darius, whom they ſuppoſe to have been, if not, in ſome ſort, under the Babylonian Monarch, yet in confederacy, at leaſt, with him; yea, as ſome ſay, though without all colour of probability, gueſts with him at table, in that fatal ſupper, whereat he was ſlain. But others, deeming it to be too great a blemiſh to ſo generous a perſon, as Cyrus ſeems to have been, and to caſt a wrongful aſperſion upon him; (beſides, that the laſt branch of it, hath no footing in ſtory, ſacred or other; but is refuted, rather, by either) they expound it rather of ſuch, as fled over from the king of Babylon, to Cyrus, of whom Gadatas and Gobrias, were two principal ones, who being of the firſt that entred the city, and well ſkilled in the paſſages, made directly, with their followers, to the kings Palace, whom they there ſuddenly ſurprized, and ſlew. See Xenophon, lib. 7.

Go up, O Elam; beſiege, O Media] The Perſians, and Medes, joynt ſubjects to Cyrus, are called upon, and incited to go up, inſtantly, againſt Babylon, and to ſet down before it. See Chap. 13. 2—4, 17.

Go up] A military term, uſed commonly of thoſe, that go out upon any expedition unto any place whatſoever. See on Chap. 7. 1. and the like, ver. 5. The rather, here uſed, in a way of elegancy, alluding to the name of Elam, which our Engliſh cannot expreſs. The like is, Mic. 1. 1, 14, 15, Zeph. 2. 4.

O Elam] Or, O Elamite. The Elamites put for the Perſians, becauſe they held that part of Perſia, which bordered upon the Medes. See on Chap. 11. 11.

beſiege] Beleagure Babylon. The Prophet, as Gods Camp-maſter; not that the one ſhould march thither, and the other ſit down there, when they were come thither: but that both, joyntly, ſhould do either. Of this manner of ſpeech, very rife in this Prophet; See on Chap. 5. 13. and 20. 4, 5.

O Media] Or, O Mede; as Dan. 5. 31. For the name of the country, and of the inhabitant thereof, is, in the Hebrew, all one: and the old Latine here ſo rendreth it. Howbeit, in regard that the verbs, here, are both feminine; the words may have reference to the lands, in the firſt place, Elymais and Media; but put here for the inhabitants of either. Of the Medes, ſee on Chap. 13. 17.

all the ſighing thereof have I made to ceaſe] This is ſpoken in the perſon of God; I am determined, by this your ſervice, againſt Babylon, to put a final end to the affliction of my ſervants, which they have, a long time, ſuſtained by their captivity in Babylon. See Ch. 14. 1, 2. He ſpeaks of a thing, as preſent, not in doing only, but even done, though not to be effected, till 170. years after, and naming the people, expreſly, by whom it ſhould then be accompliſhed.

the ſighing thereof] Or, of her. To wit, of Babylon. Not wherewith ſhe ſighed her ſelf, but wherewith ſhe made others, Gods people, eſpecially, to ſigh. The ſighing of people, by her cruelty procured. So, The cry of Sodom; for, the cry of poor perſons, oppreſſed by Sodom, Gen. 18. 20. And my terror; not wherewith I am terrified, but wherewith I might terrifie thee, Job 33. 7. And, your fear, and your dread; for, the fear and dread of you, Deut. 11. 25. Not wherewith you fear, or dread others, but wherewith others ſtand in fear of you. For they ſeem to ſtrain it overmuch, who expound it, of her; that is, of my people; as if the Pronoun had reference to them, of whom no mention is made before. Or, that underſtand the ſighing, here mentioned, of the ſolemn mournings wont to be made at the ſolemn exequies of great perſons, which the king of Babylon ſhould want, Chap. 14. 18, 19.

V. 3. Therefore are my loyns filled with pain] Theſe words are, by ſome, conceived, as the Prophets words, concerning himſelf, exceedingly terrified with the dreadful apparition, in a viſion repreſented unto him, of the ſurprizing and ſacking of Babylon. So Hab. 3. 15. Some, again, make them the ſpeech of Gods people, relating the ground of their ſighing, the great miſery they endured in the Babylonian captivity, Pſal. 66. 11, 12. Lam. 1. 2, 3, 12. But others, rather, ſuppoſe them to be ſpoken in the perſon of the Babylonians, intimating in what an heavy and heartleſs condition they ſhould be, upon the ſudden, and unexpected ſurprizal of their city; ſee Chap. 15. 5. & 16. 7, 9—11. Ezek. 21. 6, 7.

my loins are filled with pains] Diſeaſes, and pains in the loyns are, generally, very grievous, and ſuch as diſable, either to ſtir, or to ſtand upright, Deut. 33. 11. Pſal. 38. 6, 7, 8. & 69. 23. Ch. 45. 1. Ezek. 21. 6. & 29. 7. Dan. 5. 6. In this place, thoſe parts eſpecially, mentioned, becauſe pains there, are more eminent in child-bearing and birth, here eſpecially aimed at. So Nah. 2. 10.

pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travelleth] See the like deſcription of perſons in diſtraction, and diſtreſs, Pſal. 46. 6. Chap. 13. 8. & 26. 17. Jerem. 48. 42.

I was bowed down at the hearing of it; I was diſmaied at the ſeeing of it] Heb. I am writhed, or, wringed: (and ſo, Pſal. 38. 6.) with hearing; I am affrighted, (as Job 21. 6.) with ſeeing. It ſhould be rendred in the preſent tenſe, that it may ſuit with the former. The Pronoun is wanting; as Chap. 9. 9. Hoſ. 8. 4.

V. 4. My heart panted] Heb. wandreth; as Chap. 29. 24. & 53. 6. Or, ſtaggereth; as Chap. 28. 7. Or, fluttereth to and fro; as another word like, for notion, to this, and in the like caſe uſed, Pſalm. 38. 10. It is not able, for fear, to keep in its proper place and poſture.

fearfulneſs affrighted me] Or, horror (as Jerem. 49. 16.) affrighteth, or, terrifieth me; as Job 9. 34. & 33. 7.

the night of my pleaſure hath he turned into fear unto me] The night time, uſually, deſired for reſt, yet affordeth me no reſt, for terror and fear, Deut. 28. 67. Job 7. 4, 13, 14. Or, our feſtival night is turned ſuddenly, into terrors; our mirth and jollity being interrupted by the unexpected irruption of the adverſary. For in a feſtival night, in the midſt of their meriment, was the city of Babylon, by Cyrus, ſurprized, Jer. 51. 39. Dan. 5. 1, 30. See Xenophon, lib. 7.

the night of my pleaſure] Heb. the evening (evening, for, night; as morning, for, day, Gen. 1. 5, 8.) of my deſire; as 1 King. 9. 1, 19. Deſire, for delight; as Ch. 2. 16. & 32. 12. though another word be there uſed. Here ſo, the rather, becauſe the word, here uſed, properly ſignifies a vehemency of deſire, and amorous affection, Gen. 34. 8. Deut. 21. 11. Ch. 38. 17. The revelling night, that we had ſo much longed for, making full account in it, to ſatiate our ſelves with all variety of delights, proved a dreadful, and diſmal night to us.

hath he turned] That is, the enemy, ſay ſome; God, ſay others: and both true. But the word is indefinite; He hath turned it: that is, It is turned; as Gen. 15. 6. He imputeth it: that is, It was imputed, Rom. 4. 3. and they ſhall call them; that is, they ſhall be called, Mal. 1. 4.

turned] Heb. put; as Pſal. 107. 33.

into fear] Or, trembling: for ſo the word, properly, ſignifieth, Gen. 27. 33. 1 Sam. 14. 15. Dan. 10. 7. And great variety of tearms doth the Prophet here uſe, to ſet forth the dreadfulneſs of that fatal night.

V. 5. Prepare the Table; watch in the watch-tower; eat, drink; ariſe ye Princes, and anoint the ſhield] In whoſe perſon theſe words are ſpoken, is queſtioned. Some make them Gods words to the Prophet, as enjoyning him to do that, which he was to fore-tel ſhould be done: For what the Prophets denounce, they are ſaid oft to do, Jer. 1. 10. & 18. 7, 9. Others, would have them ſpoken in the perſon of the Prophet, phet, as either in way of deriſion, bidding the Babylonians go on with their feaſting; but withal, implying, that in the midſt of their revelling, they ſhould be interrupted with the clamours of thoſe, that ſhould call upon them to betake them to their arms. Or, as others, admoniſhing them and their king, inſtead of giving order to have their tables ſpread and furniſhed, to ſet a ſtrict watch for fear of the enemies approach: inſtead of eating and drinking, to ſtand upon their guard, ready armed, to receive, and repel any enemies aſſault. Others, laſtly, divide them, making the former part of the verſe, king Baltaſars words, giving command, as for the Royal banquet to be made ready, ſo for a watch withal to be ſet; and inviting his gueſts to make merry, and feaſt without fear, notwithſtanding the ſiege: and the latter of it, the words of the Prophet, as calling upon the Medes and Perſians, not to overſlip the opportunity offered them, but to ſet upon them, and ſurprize them, in the midſt of their drunken feaſt. And this laſt, to me, ſeems to come neareſt to the minde and purpoſe of the Prophet. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe, the words ſhould be rendred ſomewhat otherwiſe, then generally they are: For the verbs, in the former part of the verſe, are not imperative, as thoſe in the latter part, but of an infinitive form. Thus, therefore, the whole paſſage may run, In furniſhing the table, ſetting the watch; eating, and drinking; (that is, while the Babylonians are thus buſied, and thus employed) ariſe ye Princes, and anoint the ſhield: Set ye ſuddenly upon them. The like row of infinitives ranked, and ranged together. See Ch. 59. 13.

Prepare the table] Furniſhing it with proviſions: as Pſalm. 23. 5. & 78. 19. Ch. 65. 11.

watch in the watch-tower] Heb. watching the watch. Though ſome of the Rabbines expound it, a light; ſuch as was ſet up in ſome high place, in manner of a Beacon, to give notice, thereby, of the approach of any adverſe force: the Noun is no where elſe found. Some underſtand this branch, not of ſetting a watch, or of having an eie to the light; but of Baltaſars eying the hand that wrote his deſtiny on the wall, in the midſt of his feaſt, Dan. 5. 5. as calling on him, to view and conſider well of it. But that ſeems not to ſuit well with the reſt of the context.

eat, drink] Wonted words of invitation, at feaſts, Cant. 5. 1. But it is in the infinitive form, as in the former branches, the like; which argues a defect of the ſame verb, in another form, to be ſupplyed: as if it were ſaid, eating, eat, and drinking, drink: that is, eat, and drink, freely. So remembring, remember: that is, be ſure to remember, Exod. 20. 8. Deut. 5. 12. Joſh. 1. 13. and ſeeing, I ſaw; for, I wiſtly ſaw, Eccl. 9. 11. See Ch. 22. 13.

ariſe] A form of ſpeech, not implying, neceſſarily, any alteration of any preſent poſture, but inciting unto the ſpeedy, and ſedulous addreſſing of a mans ſelf, unto ſome preſent deſign, Gen. 13. 17. & 19. 14, 15. See the like, of going up, verſ. 2.

Princes] Darius, Cyrus, and thoſe that command under you: for ſuch alſo are ſo termed, Gen. 10. 8.

anoint the ſhield] Or. forbiſh the ſhields: ſhield; for, ſhields: as Chap. 22. 6. Jer. 46. 3. prepare for fight: addreſs your ſelves to an aſſault. The Hebrew Doctors, ſome of them, under the term, here uſed, ſuppoſe helmet, & harneſs alſo, to be comprehended, as well as target, or, ſhield: becauſe they all conduce to the protection of mans body, which the word, in its notation, importeth, Ch. 31. 5. & 37. 35. And for the word of anointing, though they grant it to intend ſcouring, and poliſhing, whereunto the uſe of oyl is well known to conduce; yet they add, that they made uſe of oyl alſo, for another end, to make their arms the more ſlick and ſlippery, that the enemies ſhafts and javelins, might not, ſo eaſily, faſten on them. To which purpoſe, they wreſt that, 2 Sam. 1. 21. The ſhield of Saul is caſt away, as if it had not been anointed with oyl: as they expound that place. Howbeit, others of them, turn this, both anointing, and ſhield, an other way: expounding the words, anoint a ſhield, that is, ſet up another king in the room of Baltaſar, Dan. 5. 30, 31. For, as God is call'd the ſhield, that is, the protector of his people, Gen. 15. 1. Pſal. 3. 3. & 84. 11. So Kings and Princes, ſay they, are likewiſe ſo termed, Pſal. 47. 9. Hoſ. 4. 18. (for ſo they underſtand this word in thoſe places) as alſo from another word of the like notion, to wit, ſhelet: (whence our ſhield ſeems to have deſcended, Jer. 51. 11. Ezek. 27. 11.) They are called, ſhalits; or after the Arabick manner, Sultans, Gen. 42. 6. Eccl. 10. 5. becauſe they either do, or ought to protect their ſubjects, Lam. 4. 20. But the ſimple, and plain ſenſe, is here, for either branch, the beſt. The whole verſe runs along, clean through, in ſix members, without any copulative, to make the ſentence the quicker, and to intimate the ſpeedy diſpatch of the buſineſs. See the like, Exod. 15. 9. Judg. 5. 27.

V. 6. For thus hath the Lord ſaid unto me] Or, Thus the Lord enjoyned me. For ſo the word is ſometime uſed, 2 Sam. 16. 10. Eſt. 7. 9. Dan. 3. 20. I deliver theſe things, thus confidently, becauſe I have good warrant from God, for what I ſay. So Chap. 8. 11. ver. 16. Or, becauſe God, by a ſecond viſion, hath further confirmed, and given me ſtronger aſſurance of what he had revealed to me before. So Chap. 8. 1, 5.

Go ſet a watchman, let him declare what he ſeeth] Becauſe the word, in the foregoing branch, is not Jehovah, but Adonai, which ſignifieth, Lord, or Maſter, and is communicable to men, Exod. 21. 4, 8. Mal. 1. 6. Some underſtand theſe words, and all that followeth, with relation to that of a watch ſet, ver. 5. Of the watch-maſter, by the kings appointment, commanding a Sentinel to attend on ſome high tower, and relate, what from thence he ſhould eſpy; who, accordingly, being there ſet, ſhould thence give notice of Cyrus and Darius, their approach, with their forces toward Babylon. But neither doth this ſeem to ſuit well with the courſe of the context: nor was that watch, before ſpoken of, ſet before their approach; but after they had ſate long before the city, the ſame night that it was taken. Others therefore, and ſo moſt, underſtand them, as Gods words to the Prophet; commanding him, as ſome ſuppoſe, to ſet ſome other Prophet on work, to attend on this ſacred, and myſterious buſineſs, as a watchman on a watch-tower, expecting, what, by viſion, God ſhould reveal to him; as Jer. 6. 27. Hab. 2. 1. And this watch-man, ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors, would have to be one of the Prophets Scholars, and, ſome of them, by a trick of theirs, (of which more, on ver. 8.) to be Habbakuk, the lion there mentioned; becauſe of his ſtanding on a watch-tower, related, Hab. 2. 1. But ſome of ours, from the Greek, (which by a vitious reading, ver. 8. for Arjeh, that is, a lion, hath Urias) would have this watch-man to be the high-prieſt Urias, mentioned before, Chap. 8. 2. But the conjecture, with the ground of it, may both go together. Others, underſtand it of the Prophet himſelf, as if God had willed him to ſtand, as on a watch-tower, to ſee what he could deſcry. And Gods Prophets are, generally, ſo termed; becauſe, by the ſpirit of prophecy, they are wont to ſee afar off, and fore-ſee things to come; and that, ſometime, for many generations after; which others, neither by the help of Nature, or Art, are able to deſcry and diſcover, Ezek. 3. 17. & 33. 2, 7. Rev. 1. 1, 19. as men, ſtanding aloft, can ſee, far and neer, many things, which others that are below on the ground, cannot ſee. But I conceive all this to be done in a viſion, as that, 1 King. 22. 17, 19–22. and Ch. 6. 1–13. For to what end is it, to induce a multiplicity of viſions, where one onely is related. Sufficient it was for the Prophet, to relate; as Ch. 6. 1, what, in viſion, himſelf had ſeen.

ſet a watchman] This, as in a viſion enjoyned; ſo in a viſion was done: for a watchman could not be ſet at Jeruſalem, that could be ſet at Babylon.

let him declare what he ſeeth] Or, that may tell what he ſeeth. A defect of the relative: as Gen. 39. 4. Exod. 13. 8. Chap. 42. 5. & 57. 16.

V. 7. And he ſaw] The watchman ſet in this viſion, ſaw in a viſion; as Chap. 6. 1. Dan. 7. 2. & 8. 2.

a chariot with a couple of horſemen, a chariot of Aſſes, and a chariot of camels] He ſaw troops of horſemen, with beaſts, as well for burden, as ſervice, approaching to Babylon.

a chariot with a couple of horſemen] That is, ſay ſome, a chariot with two riding in it, to wit, Darius, and Cyrus; or, as others, Cyrus alone, with two drivers; the chariot being drawn by an aſſe, and a camel: an emblem of Cyrus, as a mungrel mixt of two nations, a Perſian by his father, and a Mede by his mother; and termed therefore a mule: as well, in a frantick Prophecy, of Nebuchadnezzars, as alſo, in an old oracle of Apollo, given to the Babylonians, that their city ſhould ſtand, till a mule were King of Media: and ſome ſuch things, though not altogether thus, are related by Euſebius, in his Evangelical preparative, l. 9. c. 41. out of Megaſthenes, and Abydenus; and by Herodote, l. 1. & l. 3. Others deeming it, an unfit matter to crowd two ſuch great Commanders into one chariot, ſuppoſe a chariot, to be put for, chariots; two at leaſt, with two riders reſpectively, the one in the one chariot, and the other in the other; or two, to wit, the rider, and the driver, in either: Cyrus riding in the one, drawn with aſſes, or mules; which were of moſt uſe in Perſia, and Elymais: Darius in the other, drawn with camels, which the Medes, and the Bactrians their neighbours, moſt abounded in. Others are of the mind, that thoſe chariots of camels, and mules, ſhould allude to a ſtratagem, that Cyrus ſhould put in practice againſt the Chaldeans; who, becauſe they were ſtrongeſt in horſe, Cyrus placed in the front of his army, againſt their horſe-troops, his camels, whoſe ſight and ſent the horſe could not brook, and with them alſo, his mules; which in thoſe Eaſtern parts, are famous for ſwiftneſs; as appears by the ſtory of Abſolom, 2 Sam. 18. 9. & 13. 29.

13.19. But howſoever of camels ſomewhat is related, to this purpoſe, with Herodote, l. 1. as contrived by Cyrus in his expedition againſt Crœſus; yet neither doth he, or any other author, that I can light on, mention ought in this kind attempted by him, either with mules, or camels, in his Invaſion of Chaldea. But to paſs by theſe, and divers other, either over-curious, or frivolous deſcants upon this Scripture; the plain ſong, or genuine ſenſe of it, thus ariſeth. The verb racab, the root whence this word receb here uſed, ſpringeth, ſignifieth, in general, to ride, whether on horſe, aſs, mule, camel, or any other beaſt, uſed to bear a rider; and whether in chariot, caroch, or litter, indifferent. See Judg. 10.4. 1 Sam.25.20. & 30.17. Eſt.6.8. & 8.10. 1 King.1.38. Chap.66.20. See alſo, Chap.19.1. and hence a rider, ſometime for an horſeman, Job 39.18. 2 King. 9.17. ſometime, for a coach-man, 1 King.22.24. Hag.2.22. The word receb, therefore, thence derived, and here uſed, comprehendeth in general, all riding forces, whether on horſeback, and on other beaſts, or in chariots, coaches, and the like: for it is a collective word, as equitatus in Latine, with us, horſe, and foot, in Engliſh; and in forraign terms, cavallery, and infantery; nor is it found, above once, in a plural form, and that in a poem, Cant.1.9. See Exod.14.7. 2 Sam. 1.6. & 8.4. Now theſe riding forces, are here firſt divided into two ranks; whereof the former is for fight, or field ſervice, ſaid to conſiſt of two troops of horſe, or horſemen; and may repreſent the diſtinct companies of Cyrus, and Darius, marching, as under two Commanders; the latter, chiefly for burden; and that again ſubdivided into two ſorts, the one conſiſting of mules, the other of camels; both uſed much for that purpoſe in thoſe parts, Gen.37.25. 2 King.5.17. Chap.30.6. and a multitude of ſuch beaſts were neceſſarily required to carry along all manner of proviſions, for ſo great an army as they led, both in regard they were to paſs through many waſte places, and to continue a ſiege of uncertain length, againſt a city of great ſtrength; and having purpoſely gathered into it moſt of that ſtore, which the country round about it, afforded; partly, to furniſh it for a long ſiege; and partly alſo, to ſtarve thoſe that came to beſiege them. The words therefore may be rendred; And he ſaw a company of aſſes, and a company of camels.

a chariot] The word is ſometime uſed for a chariot, or coach, Exod.14.6. 1 King.22.35. ſometime for horſes, that draw in a chariot, or coach, 2 Sam.8.4. ſometime for wares, that lade a wain, or, a wagon, 1 King. 10.29. ſometime, for an army, or company of riders, in chariots, ſuch, as in thoſe dayes, were much uſed in war, where from horſemen they are diſtinguiſhed, Exod.14.9. 1 King.10.26. 2 Chr. 12. 30. and ſometime, laſtly, for all cavallery, or, troops, riding, whether on horſe, or, in chariot; oppoſed to thoſe, that ſerve on foot, Exod. 14. 7. 1 King.22.31. 2 King.8.21.

a couple of horſemen] The word ſignifies a yoke of oxen, 1 King.19.19. or, a couple of oxen, 1 Sam. 11.7. or of aſſes, 2 Sam.16.1. or, a couple of men, that go, or ride together, 2 King.9.25. here uſed, for a couple of troops, or companies of horſemen: horſemen, for, troops, conſiſting of ſuch: for ſo the ſingular alſo is ſometime uſed, Jer.4.29. Ezek.26.10.

a chariot] Or, company; as before, and after.

of aſſes] Heb. aſſe: as Chap.32.20. See Chap.1.3.

of camels] Heb. camel: as Zach.14.15.

- and he hearkened diligently with much heed] Heb. and he conſidered with conſideration, even with much, or, great conſideration: a defect of the particle with; as Chap.17.5,10. This ſome underſtand of Cyrus, viewing of Babylon, when he was ſet down before it, conſidering which way it might beſt be aſſaulted, and moſt ſpeedily ſurprized. Others, of the Prophet Eſay himſelf, making profeſſion of his own ſedulity, and diligence, in attending the buſineſs that God had ſet him about, and promiſing therein to perſiſt. Others laſtly, of the watchman ſet to watch in the viſion; and upon the repreſentation of ſuch companies to his view, obſerving diligently their motion, which way they bent, and what they intended to do; that which ſeems to be the proper intendment of the Prophet, in this place.

V. 8. And he cryed a lion] Some of thoſe, that thus read theſe words, ſuppoſe, that the watchman, whether ſet up by the Babylonians, to keep ſentinel, while they revelled it, or by the Prophet, appointed to attend what he could deſcry; at firſt beheld, but confuſedly, a great company coming on, as in two troops; after upon neerer approach, and better view, perceived them to conſiſt of mules the one, and of camels the other: and laſtly, upon a third, and more accurate view, ſaw a lion leading them, and by an out-cry, ſignified as much: And this lion, ſome would have to be, either Cyrus, or Darius, that took Babylon, Dan.5.30. called a lion, for his fierceneſs, Jer.50.44. Others, to be Chriſt, the Lion of the Tribe of Juda, Gen.49.9. Rev.5.5. the deſtroyer of the ſpiritual Babylon, and deliverer of his people: of whom Cyrus was a type, Chap.45.1. Nor want there, that dream of a lion, that ſhould be coming on the ſtage to affright, and diſturb the Sentinell; who though by a loud ſhriek, he gave notice of it, yet would not deſert his ſtation; unlike to the hireling, that fleeth when he ſpies the woolf coming, Joh. 10. 12. or, that ſome body, to terrifie him, ſhould tell him of a lion; as Dalilah Sampſon, of the Philiſtines, Judg. 16. 9, 12. which yet he ſhould not regard; unlike therein to Solomons ſluggard, Prov.22.13. But the Jewiſh Doctors have two other readings; the one more light; the other more weighty. For ſome of them, by Gematry, as they term it, or Arithmetick rather, reading the words, And the lion cryed; (wherein ſome of ours alſo concur with them, ſuppoſing the watchman, for his vigilancy, to be termed a lion) expound it, of Habbakuk: And Habbakuk cryed. And if you ask, how they find Habbakuk in the text. The anſwer is, juſt as they finde Jacob and Eſau, in Iſhto, or his wife, Gen.25.21. for there is a tranſpoſition of the words from their ordinary ſequel, running thus in the original, Rebeccah, conceived, his wife. They would have in this laſt word, which is in Hebrew, Iſhto, to be intimated what it was, that ſhe conceived: and if we demand what that was, they tell us, it was fire, and ſtubble; and why ſo? becauſe forſooth, the letters of theſe two words, eſh wekaſh, that is, fire, and ſtubble, do make up juſt the ſame number, with the letters of Iſhto, his wife; to wit, 707. And if we ask further, what this fire and ſtubble ſhould be; they tell us, it is Jacob and Eſau; for it is ſaid, Obadiah, 18. the houſe of Jacob ſhall be a fire, and the houſe of Eſau, ſtubble: and thus you have Jacob and Eſau, in Iſhto; and cleer Scripture for it too. In like manner here, becauſe the letters of the word Aryeh, here ſignifying a lion, amount juſt to the ſame ſum, that the letters of Habbakuks name do; to wit, 216. therefore he muſt needs be the lion here mentioned, and the watchman, conſequently, as was before ſaid. Nor ſhould I mention this idle dotage, but to ſhew how theſe adle-brained Doctors, whoſe myſterious expoſitions many begin to dote on, and are ſo much taken with in theſe dayes, do ridiculouſly and irreverently wring and writhe the words of Gods ſacred oracles, as if they were deſcanting upon, or making ſport with ſome light poem, or ſatyrical pamphlet, for the exerciſing of their wanton wits. Mean while, this is no better then that of the Greeks, of which alſo before; who for Aryeh here, read uriyah: all the difference is, that the one is a groſs miſtake, the other a ſtudied, but frivolous device. But inſtead of this fond and far-fetched conceit, Others of them give a more ſolid reading and ſenſe; which the moſt, or beſt at leaſt, of ours, alſo, embrace; thus rendring the words, And he cryed, as a lion, that is, aloud, like a lion. The note of ſimilitude being ſupplyed, which is oft times wanting; as Pſal.11. 1. Nah.9.12,13. So Lam.3.10. Hoſ.11.10. by his hideous noyſe, implying, and expreſſing much fear and terrour to thoſe, whom it concerned, from great danger then approaching. So Amos 1.2.

My Lord, I ſtand continually upon the watch-tower in the day-time; and I am ſet in my watch whole nights] Or, on the watch-tower, Lord, I ſtand continually by day: for the word Lord, as it is here written, ſeems to have no pronoun affixed to it, but is in a form commonly deemed peculiar to the Deity. The words are the watchmans words, whether, as ſome, of him at Babylon, ſet to keep ſentinel; or, as others, rather, of the watchman ſet in the viſion by the Prophet, to obſerve; either, as the moſt, profeſſing his conſtant vigilancy, and aſſiduous attendance in his ſtation, to give the firmer aſſurance of what he had ſeen; or, as ſome, complaining that he had ſo long watched, in contemplation of Babylons downfal, and had not the full accompliſhment of it revealed, as yet, to him. So Habbakuk ſeems to complain, that he had long watched, and waited for ſome comfortable viſion, but as yet could ſee nothing but of affliction and grievance, Hab. 1. 2, 3. & 2. 1. Howbeit, the former ſeems in this place the fitter, well ſuiting both with the laſt clauſe of the verſe before-going; and with what followeth, ver.10.

whole nights] Or, every night: as Chap.1.5.

V. 9. And behold, here cometh a chariot of men, with a couple of horſemen] Some underſtand theſe words, as no more then a repetition of what the watchman had ſeen, and related, before, verſ. 7. But others ſuppoſe ſomewhat more to be in them, that ſhould more certainly import, and portend the ruine of Babylon. Some therefore expound them, as the former alſo, of Gods people, making out of Babylon, and marching away by troops, with bag and baggage, on ſuch beaſts, as were before mentioned, Jer.50.8. & 51.45. Others rather, (and ſo ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors alſo) of the forces before ſpoken of, piercing into, and entring upon Babylon, part of them, on the one ſide of it, and part on the other, Jer.51.31.

And behold, here cometh] Or, behold, even now are gone in. He ſpeaketh, as of a thing ſuddenly done: as if he had ſaid, while I am yet ſpeaking this, ſome of the retinue before mentioned, ed, are gone in, to wit, into the place, toward which they were bound; the iſſue whereof, I ſo ſedulouſly, and ſolicitouſly had all this while expected, ver.7,8. the pronoun here found, is oft uſed, to denote a thing, at preſent done, and fully, effected, Gen.31.38,41. Num.14.22. & 22.32.

cometh] Or, goeth in; or, is gone in: So the word is oft uſed, for to go unto; or, go into, Gen.7.1,13. & 16.21. & 19. 23. & 24.31. & 30.3.

a chariot of men] Heb. of man: as Num.26.10. Chap.5.4. chariots of men, (for both words are collective) ſuch as men ride in; to diſtinguiſh them from ſuch as were uſed for carriage. Here by an hypallage, chariots of men; for thoſe men that were before ſeen riding in the chariots: as ſilver of ſikles, for, ſikels of ſilver, Levit.5.15. & Levit. 7. 21. uncleanneſs of man, for, a man of uncleanneſs; that is, a man unclean. See ver.7. and Chap.22.6.

a couple of horſemen] See on ver. 7. the troops under the command of thoſe two great Princes, Darius and Cyrus: either having left their horſes, to ſcale the walls, and ſo ſurpriſing the city; or, after ſurprizal of it, entring in on horſeback, by the gates, ſet open for them.

and he anſwered, and ſaid] By the Perſon here ſaid to anſwer, Some underſtand the watchman, further adding, what he was now aſſured of, that the downfall of Babylon, was that, which was in this viſion repreſented. Others, Gods people, who coming out from thence, relate, and publiſh it to others, Jer.51.50. Some, the Prophet Eſay himſelf, aſſuring himſelf now, of what before he expected, upon the report made by the watchman, whom, in the viſion, he had ſet to obſerve what he could ſee. And laſtly, (which to me ſeems moſt probable) God himſelf, expounding more fully to the Prophet, what this apparition, all, tended to.

anſwered] The word in Scripture is uſed, not for the returning of ought to ſome foregoing queſtion, only; but for adding ought, to ſomewhat before ſpoken, Job 34.1. Mat.17. 17, & 19.27. & 22.1. Luk.5.5,22.

Babylon is fallen, is fallen] To wit, by the hands of thoſe, who were ſeen coming againſt her, and entring into her, Jer. 51.8, and it is repeated, as for aſſurance; ſo in way, alſo, of rejoycing, Rev.18.20. So Rev.14.8. & 18.2.

and all the graven images of her gods, he hath broken unto the ground] All her idols are fallen, and come down with her; being either become a prey to the enemy, in regard of the rich matter whereof they were made, and the ornaments that they were dreſſed with; or beaten down, and broken, or burnt, in a bravery, by the Conquerour; as ſeeming to triumph, not over the people, and Princes, only, but their gods, alſo, Chap.10.11. & 37.19. See Chap. 46.1. Jer.50.2. & 51. 44,47,52.

the graven images of her gods] Heb. the gravenings, or, graven works of her gods; that is, her gravened gods: as Chap.30. 22. the gravenings, or, graven works of thy ſilver; for, thy graven works, or idols, made of ſilver. So alſo, Deut. 12. 3. See Chap.2.20. graven ones, put for all ſorts of them, Jer.8. 19. Mic.1.7.

her gods] Her idols; whom Baltaſar, a little before, had ſo much extolled, when in contempt of the only true God, he drank with his concubines, in the cups taken out of his Temple, Dan.5.2,4,23.

he hath broken] God, ſay ſome; Cyrus, ſay others. But the verb (as the Jewiſh Doctor well obſerves, parallelling it with that, Num. 26. 59.) is indefinite; and it might well therefore be rendred; and all her graven gods are broken. See Chap.2.18,19. & 18.5. ver.4. broken unto the gound] Or, broken, and thrown down, unto the ground: as Pſal.89. 39. Chap.14.12. & 22.18.

V. 10. O my threſhing, and the corn of my floor] Thoſe words ſome Interpreters make the words of God, ſpeaking unto Babylon, and foretelling what now ſhould befall her, as if he had ſaid; Thou Babylon, by whom I have formerly threſhed, that is, grievouſly afflicted, and trodden down, other people, (as Chap.25.10. & 41.15.) art now thy ſelf to be threſhed, or to be made a place, wherein thy Princes, and people, ſhall be threſhed by the Medes and Perſian, as corn is in a threſhing floor, Jer. 51.33. Mic.4.13. But others rather ſuppoſe them to be the Prophets words, ſpeaking unto Gods people, and comforting them againſt thoſe grievous afflictions, which they had from the Syrians, Aſſyrians, or others, formerly ſuſtained, and were from the Chaldeans, and Babylonians, further to ſuffer; aſſuring them, that what he had foreſeen, and fore-ſhewed them of the ruine of Babylon and the Chaldeans, was no dream, or relation of his own deviſing, but what by revelation he had received from God. And indeed the latter part of the verſe, which cannot, without apparent force, be pulled away from this, of neceſſity enforceth to carry it, this way.

O my threſhing] How this might be ſpoken by God, either concerning Babylon, by whom he had threſhed, and whom he meant now to threſh, by others: Or, of his own people, whom he had threſhed already, and intended further to threſh; though not utterly to deſtroy them, Chap. 28.28. as he did ſome others by them, Chap.26.14,19. & 41.15,16. Jer. 30.11. it is not hard to conceive. But how the Prophet ſhould ſpeak in this manner, of his people, as to call them, his threſhing, there ſeems ſome difficulty in it. This to clear, and aſſoil, ſome would have it underſtood, not effectively, but denunciatively: as Jeremy is ſaid to build, and pull down; to plant, and pluck up; not by way of execution of ought in that kind, but by way of denunciation, alone, Jer.1.10. & 18. 7,9. ſo, ſay they, doth Eſay call this people, his threſhing; not becauſe he himſelf had threſhed them; but becauſe he had from God denounced thoſe heavy judgments, wherewith they were to be threſhed, for their ſins. But I ſuppoſe we need not have recourſe unto any ſuch far-fetcht interpretation. It is agreed on; and the very next words evince it, that by threſhing, (a word in this place only found) is here meant, not the act of threſhing, as by another word of the ſame ſtock, the time, Levit. 26.5. but the object of it, as the corn, ſtraw, and grain; ſo ſuch perſons, or people, as either have been, or are to be threſhed in ſuch manner, as is in the words here intended. So captivity, for, captives, Chap.20.4. eſcaping, for perſons eſcaped, Neh. 1. 2. Chap. 15. 14. now this being granted, I ſee not what ſhould hinder, but that the Prophet may well call them, his threſhed ones, though not threſhed by him; as well, as he might alſo have termed them, his afflicted ones, albeit he had no hand in the afflicting of them; and that without reference to any threſhing, or affliction by him, miniſterially, denounced againſt them.

and the corn of my floor] The ſame thing, ſaith the Rabbine well, in divers terms. Heb. my ſon of the floor; the ſon of the floor; for, the corn that is threſhed in the floor: as, the ſons of the quick-coal, for, the ſparks that fly from it, Job 5.7. the ſon of the bow, for, a ſhaft ſhot by it, Job 41.28. and, the ſons of the quiver, for arrows, that are laid up in it, and drawn out of it, Lam.3.13. my ſon of the floor, as, my mountain of holineſs, Chap.56.7. and his idols of ſilver, Chap. 2. 20. and, my God of mercy, Pſal.59.10,17. in all which places, and many more, the words run in the very ſame ſtrain, with theſe here: and it is ſon, not daughter, as of Babylon he is wont to ſpeak, Chap.47.1, and ſo the Pſalmiſt, Pſal.137.8. and in the feminine form, Chap.13.19. and in the verſe next before-going. Whereby alſo it may well be deemed, that he ſpeaketh here, not of her, but of his own people, whom, he might, not unfitly, call, not, the ſon of his floor, (for none ſuch, as is here intended, he had) but, his ſon of the floor; that is, his poor country-men, and much commiſerated brethren, that had been oft under the flail, or, (as their manner of threſhing was) under the cart-wheels, and the beaſts-hoofs, in the floor, and were ſo to be again. See Chap. 28.27,28. As for Jeromes conceit of an alluſion, in theſe terms, to Araunahs threſhing-floor, on which the Temple was built, 2 Chr.3.1. I ſuppoſe it to have no place here.

that which I have heard from the Lord of Hoſts, the God of Iſrael, have I declared unto you] I tell you nothing, but what God hath told me. It is like that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11. 23. The Prophets fidelity, in the delivery of Gods meſſage, without addition, or detraction of ought, Jer.23.26,28. & 26.2. And the certainty of the matter, delivered in it, to be, in its due time, accompliſhed; as that which comes from him, who is both the Lord of Hoſts, and able, therefore, to effect it, Chap. 14.24,26,27. and the God of Iſrael alſo; and though he ſuffer his people, therefore, to be under the threſhing inſtruments in the floor, for a while, yet he will not permit them to lye alwaies there; but will ſend deliverance at length, Ch. 27. 7--9. & 28. 27,28.

V. 11. The burden of Dumah] The title of another prophecy, diſtinct from the former: The ſubject matter whereof, is intimated in the word, burden, to be ſome ſad and heavy tidings. See Ch. 13.1. The object, or land and people, whom it concerneth, are deſcribed by the word Dumah; concerning which, interpreters are at ſome variance. For ſome fetch it from Dumah, one of Iſraels race, Gen. 25. 14. 1 Chr. 1.30. His poſterity, as his brother Kedars, verſ. 13,16. had ſeated themſelves in ſome part of Arabia, which, in regard thereof, bare the name of that their anceſtor, and is here called, Dumah. And we read, indeed, in Ptolomy, lib. 6. of a ſea-Town in Arabia, called Dama; as alſo of an inland Town, called Domana: and in Pliny, lib. 6. c. 39. Out of Juba, the Mauritanian, of a city ſituate in that part of Ethiopia, which he aſſigneth to Arabia, as poſſeſſed by Arabians, called Dumana. And further alſo, in Stephen the Byzantine, out of Glaucus his Arabian antiquities, of Dumathea, a city of Arabia, which may well be all one with either of the former, (the manner, both of Greeks and Latines, being to mould forreign terms, as they pleaſe) and the ſame with this Dumah: that of Steven cometh neereſt home to the Hebrew: Dumath, for Dumah;

as Eliſabeth, for Eliſheba, Exod. 6.23. and Goliath, for Goliah, both in the Greek and Latine, 1 Sam.17.4. Of this people, therefore, called not Idumeans, but Dumeans, do ſome writers of note, both among the Jewiſh and ours, expound this prophecy. Yet others again, by Dumah, underſtand here Idumea, or Edom. Dumah, ſay they, by an Aphereſis, or detraction of the firſt letter, for Idumea, or Edomea; as Ram, for Aram, 1 Chr.2.9. Job 32.2. Paſdammim, 1 Ch. 11.13. for Epaſdammim, 1 Sam. 17.1. But I finde not in Hebrew Scripture, where the land of Edom, is termed, either Edomah, Adomah, or Idumahs, for Edomeah, and Idumeah, Mar.3.8. as Iudea, Mat. 2. 1,5. are words of a forraign frame. As for what is objected, that the next prophecy, is concerning the Arabians, and therefore not this; is no good conſequence; for this concerns the Dumean Arabians, and that, the Kedarens. The main reaſon of any weight, that may induce to this ſuppoſal, is the mention of Seir in the next words, of which more there. Howbeit, Jerom telleth us, that not the whole Province of Idumea; but ſome Region, or part of it, which lay Southward, and was not above twenty miles diſtant from a city of Paleſtine, called, in his time, Eleutheropolis, was thus teamed. Nor is it improbable, that ſome of Iſhmaels poſterity, might ſeat themſelves in ſome portion of that country, which the Edomites, their kinſmen, in thoſe times, inhabited. Of whether of the two, the word is here uſed; there may ſeem to be in the uſe of it, here, ſome ſecret alluſion, to what the word, ordinarily, imports, to wit, either exciſion; as Ezek.27.32. or, ſilence; but ſuch as is cauſed by diſſolution and deſtruction, Pſal.94.17. & 115.17. See on Chap. 15.1. as implying the ruin of that State, which this ſad prophecy concerned.

He calleth to me out of Seir] The prophecy is as well ſhort, as ſharp, wrapt up in two verſes; and neither of them of any length, but very obſcure: and that the rather, becauſe little light is afforded us, for the clearing of it, from the ſtories extant of thoſe times.

He calleth to me out of Seir] Or, as the Hebrew runneth, One is calling to me from Seir. Or, A cry, or, A call is made, or cometh to me from Seir. I am cryed unto, or called upon from thence. For the ſpeech is indefinite; as ver. 9. This thoſe that underſtand this prophecy of the Dumeans, interpret, either of a voice that ſhould come from God to the Prophet, concerning the deſtruction, that from the Edomites ſhould befal them; as of Edom, the like, Jer.49.14. Or of a noiſe, and clamour of warlike preparations, heard from mount Seir; the Edomites intending to invade, and ſurprize Dumah. But thoſe that, by Dumah, underſtand Edom, or Idumea, expound it of the Edomites, ſpeaking unto the Prophet, either in ſerious wiſe, or in deriſion.

from Seir] Seir was (as Shemir, Cant. 4.8.) the name of a mountain, poſſeſſed by Eſau, and his poſterity, Gen. 36.8. Deut.2.4,5. Ioſh.24.4. So called, not, as Some have thought, from Eſau, who was born rough and hairy, which the notation of the word importeth, Gen.25.25. or from the roughneſs, and horridneſs of that rocky mountain, though alluded unto, Jer 49. 19. but from the ancient lord, and poſſeſſor of it, Seir, the Horite, Gen.36.20. in whoſe race it continued, Gen.14 4. until the Edomites, or poſterity of Eſau, thence expelled them, Deut. 2.12. Eſau, in likelihood, at firſt, having got ſome footing there, by the marriage of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, by Zibeon, deſcended from Seir, Gen.36. 2,20,24,25. which his iſſue well liking, and loath, either to quit the place again, or to be couped in ſome corner or ſcantling of it, at the will and pleaſure of others, diſpoſſeſſed the right owners, and made themſelves abſolute lords of it.

watchman, what of the night? watchman, what of the night?] Some ſuppoſe theſe words to be the Dumeans, who, in regard of the great dangers and fears they were in, having ſet a watchman to keep ſentinel, night and day; as ver. 8. were ever and anon, calling on him, to tell them whether he deſcryed ought, or no, whereby they might be endangered. Or, as others, the Idumeans calling to the Dumean watchman, (as ſentinels are wont to be ſet in bordering places) enquiring of them, as being in the like fears with them, and likely, in regard of neighbourhood, to run the ſame hazard with them, whether ought were repreſented to him, that concerned either of them. Implying, as they imagine, that there were hoſtile forces abroad, that had made full havock in the countries about them; and it might be expected, would do the like with them alſo. And this ſuiteth not amiſs, with the matter of the prophecy next enſuing, concerning the Kedarens, their neighbours and neer allies, ver. 13, 16. which might well be of the ſame date with this, as well for delivery, as for accompliſhment alſo. Some again, would have them to be the words of ſome Edomites, that come, as ſpies, to view the confines, and ſee what watch and ward was there kept; but makeing, as if he were one of the country, and had ſome occaſion, either of journey, or of ſome other buſineſs abroad: or of ſome Dumeans, that thus call'd upon the Sentinels, to ſee whether they were awake, or no; or demanding of them, how far the night was ſpent; as hoping to be in ſome more quiet compoſure, being freed from the fear of a mighty invaſion; as more dreadful, and not unuſual, where the enemy is neer at hand, and lying in wait for opportunities, and ready to lay hold on any advantage, for aſſault, Cant.3.7,8. Chap. 15.1. Or of ſuch as were in arms, and ſtood all night attending the approach of the enemy, enquiring how near it is to break of day, that they might be, either relieved, or diſcharged of that their wearisom employment, Pſal. 130. 6. And theſe are, divers of them, the expoſitions of the Jewiſh Doctors; but admitted and approved, the moſt, by ſome of ours alſo. Among whom, yet, there are not a few, who underſtand them, as ſpoken, either by the Dumeans, or Idumeans, to the Prophet Eſay himſelf; and that either in ſcoffing manner, by way of deriſion, as if they had ſaid, You Prophet, that profeſs your ſelf to be a warder, and to watch for the good of your people, What tidings have you for us? What ſay you to the calamities, that other of your fellow-Prophets, have ſo oft ſaid ſhould befal us? You threaten us with nights of affliction, and heavineſs; but we enjoy fair day-light of proſperity, peace and liberty, ſince that, in Jorams time, we ſhoke off your yoke, and ſet us up a king of our own, 2 King. 8. 20. Or ſeriouſly, and ſollicitouſly, as being in great difficulties and danger, in regard of a prevailing Conqueror, that bore down all before him, and had ſeized upon many Provinces, adjoyning near to them, and deſirous, from the Prophet, to underſtand what he ſaw, or fore-ſaw concerning them, or what advice he could give them: for even to Gods Prophets, as to God himſelf, Judg. 10.10, 13, 14. Jer. 2. 27. Hoſ. 5.13,15. ſometime, in ſuch caſes, they that otherwiſe did not reliſh, nor regard him or them, were content to repair, 2 King.3.12, 13. & 5. 3, 5. & 8. 7, 8. & 13. 14. Thus have I delivered, though not all, (for there are many more) yet the principal, and moſt probable expoſitions of theſe words; leaving them to the judgment of others, to pick out, and pitch upon, which, in a Scripturure of ſo great difficulty, they ſhall deem to be moſt likely; onely profeſſing my ſelf to encline to the judgment of thoſe, who ſuppoſe them to imply, a diſtracted and hazzardous condition of thoſe, by whom they were delivered, unto whomſoever they were directed.

watchman] The word is not the ſame, that was uſed before, ver.6. that ſignifies, properly, a veiwer, or a ſpier: But the word, here uſed, is one, that, properly, ſignifieth a warder, an obſerver, or a keeper, 1 Sam.1.12. & 17.20,22. That which, therefore, hath given occaſion, here, of divers miſinterpretations, eſpecially, among the Jewiſh Expoſitors. Some underſtanding here, by the warder, or keeper, God, the keeper of Iſrael. Pſal.121.4. Some the Ruler of the country, the keeper of his ſubjects, as the ſhepherd of his ſheep, 1 Sam. 17.20. Others, ſome Souldiers; becauſe the ſouldiery are the keepers of the country; whence Achiſh to David, I will make thee keeper of my head, 1 Sam.28.2. But we need not run out to theſe far-fetcht interpretations, inducing ſtrange ſenſes; which, becauſe they have little ſhew of probability, we have formerly omitted. The word doth here, either imply the Prophet himſelf, one of Iſraels watchers and warders, an obſerver of them, as well as Jeremy, Jer.6.27. or, a watcher for them, as well, as Ezekiel, Ezek. 2.27. & 33.2,7. Yea, and a keeper of them, as well as their ſouldiery; the chariots and horſemen of Iſrael, as well, as either Elias, or Eliſeus, 2 King.2.12. & 13.14. Or ſome watchman, as the former repreſented in a viſion, ſo queſtioned and ſo anſwering, as is here expreſſed. For the word here found, is of ſuch watchmen, alſo uſed, as the former, Neh.3.29. Pſal. 130.6. and out Prophet delighteth much in variety of terms.

what of the night?] How much of it is paſt, or yet remains? How far is the night ſpent? Or, what in the night, or, by night, as we uſe to ſay, haſt thou ſeen, or obſerved? Of the night, for in the night; as, of a book, for, in a book, Job 19.26. and, of the city, for, in the city, Pſal. 72.16. or, concerning the night, to wit, of affliction, (as Job 5. 14. & 17. 12. & 35. 10. Pſal. 30. 5. & 112. 4.) that at preſent lyeth heavy on us.

watchman, what of the night?] The ſame, as moſt interpreters, redoubled; after the manner of thoſe, that move ſuch queſtions, unto thoſe, eſpecially, that ſtand far above them, as doubting whether, at firſt, they hear, or no; or, as thoſe are wont to ſpeak, that are full of fear and ſollicitude, asking oft the ſame thing, Chap. 33. 18. only the contract is put for the entire word, though ſtanding entire, without leaning on any other. Which, as in ſome other the like, Chel, for Chayil, Ch. 36. 2. Obad.20. So in this word, Lel, for Layil, is not unuſual. See Chap. 15. 1. & 16. 3. & 30.29. Yet, becauſe the word millel, ſignifieth, ſometime to ſpeak, Job 8. 2. Pſal. 106. 2. whence the term millah, that ſignifies a word, Pſal. 139. 4. Some Interpreters, of good note, render the words here, The watchman, what ſaith he? (for ſo lye the words in the text) or, what ſaith the watchman? as, who would have ſaid to Abraham? Gen. 21. 7. where the ſame word is found. But the syntax runs more ſmoothly, the former way.

V. 12. The watchman ſaid] The watchmans anſwer to the queſtion, before moved to him, followeth. Which whether it be delivered, as returned by the Prophet himſelf, to thoſe that did ſollicite him for advice; ſo (as repeating their words) calling himſelf by the tearm, that they before gave him; or, as by the watchman, in the viſion repreſented unto him, unto thoſe that enquired of him, either concerning the time of the the night, or of ought he ſaw in the night, is to be taken as a divine Oracle, intimating what was to befal that people, whom heſpake to.

the morning cometh, and alſo the night] The watchmans anſwer conſiſteth of two parts; conteining an aſſertion, the one; an advice the other: very obſcure either; and much canvaſed by Interpreters, as well Jewiſh, as others. This former part laid down in theſe words, muſt import ſome ſad and heavy tidings to thoſe whom it concerned. The prophecy elſe ſhould not anſwer its inſcription: a burden, or burdenſom viſion, or prophecy. The title ſhould not be ſuteable to the contents of it. Some, therefore, expound the words, as if he ſhould ſay, The morning, indeed, approacheth; but ſuch a morning, as ſhall afford you no light or comfort at all; as little comfort ſhall you have of it, as if it were dark night, or midnight ſtill with you, Chap. 8. 22. & 51. 30. & 59. 10. Job 5. 14. & 24. 17. Amos 4. 13. & 5. 8. Others, though morning be come, as you ſuppoſe, with you, having, as Iſaak, your Great Grandfather ſometime foretold, ſhaken off that yoke, wherewith Jacobs iſſue kept you under, Gen. 27. 40. Yet this fair morning will not laſt long with you; a night of calamity and miſery, will, by the Aſſyrians, ere long ſeize upon you, worſe then that you were in, under the Iſraelitiſh yoke. Others, I have nothing to impart unto you, ſave that, as ſure as the night ſucceeds the day, ſo certainly will affliction and deſtruction ſhortly ſurprize you; either coming and commencing, or to be accompliſhed and concluded, within a ſet compaſs of time, like an entire day, conſiſting of morning, and night; morning, for, day; as evening, for, night, Verſ. 4. and it well ſuits with that of the Kedarens, their kinſmen, Verſ. 16. morning, and night, for an entire day; and a day, for a year, as Ezek. 4. 6. See on Chap. 20. 3.

if ye will enquire, enquire ye; return, come,] As many ſeveral ſenſes of theſe words, are given, as of the former. I will preſent you with one, or two, onely. Some knit this clauſe to the former branch, as noting the inevitableneſs of the evil therein menaced; the night, I foretel you of, will come, though (ſo the particle is found uſed, Job 14. 7, 8. & 16. 6. & 17. 13. & 27. 16.) Ye enquire, and enquire never ſo oft, never ſo earneſtly, and go to and fro, and come again, and again; or, retaining the former reading, ye may enquire further, if ye pleaſe, and return and come again, as oft as ye will; but other anſwer cannot be returned you. Others, if you will needs be enquiring, enquire ſeriouſly, not in mockery; or, enquire of that that concerneth you, and may be for your good; to wit, how you may make your peace with God, before this night ſeize upon you, Jer. 13. 16. and the only way whereby that may be effected, is by returning to him with ſincere repentance of your ſins, and adjoyning your ſelves to his people, Chap. 55. 6, 7. Jer. 18. 7, 8, 11. Dan. 4. 27. Jon. 3. 4, 10.

enquire] The word is, by ſome of the Rabbines, here noted, to be a Syriack; by other, a Kedarene, or an Arabick word: and it is indeed in the Chaldee Paraphraſt of the old Teſtament, and the Syriack verſion of the new, very frequent. It ſeems to import an earneſt, eager, and ardent inquiſition; when a mans minde is reſtleſs, and his heart boyles ſo within him, that he cannot be quiet, but is continually enquiring after ſomewhat, that his minde is wholly taken up with: for the word in his firſt (as may ſeem) and original ſenſe, ſignifieth to boil, Chap. 64. 2. whence, as bubbles ariſing upon the ſurface of boyling water; ſo bliſters from inward heat, breaking forth, and ſwelling up on the outward parts of the body, have their name in Hebrew, Exod. 9. 9, 10. and that it implieth a very narrow, exquiſite, and exact enquiry; ſee Obad. 5. 6. It is therefore, as if he had ſaid, ſince that (ſo is the particle alſo rendred, Job 14. 5.) you are ſo inquiſitive, or ſo eager upon enquiry, enquire, and ask what you pleaſe, but ſo enquire, as that your inquiſition be not vain and fruitleſs. Which that it may not be;

return, come] That is, ſay ſome, no more then come again. And indeed the word of returning, oft-times, imports no more then a reiteration of that which it is joyned with. So Iſaak returned and digged; that is, he digged again, Gen. 26. 18. return, lye down, for lye down again, 1 Sam. 3. 5, 6. he returned, and lodged there, for, he lodged there again, Judg. 19. 7. being not yet gone out of the houſe. But in ſuch forms of ſpeech, the words are wont to be knit together; which here they are not, and imply, therefore, two diſtinct acts: A return (not, as ſome, to thoſe that ſent them, but) to God, who alone was able to relieve them: And a coming over, (not as ſome, of the Idumeans, to the Dumeans, either to fight for them, as confederates, craving their aid; or with them, as enemies, to be deſtroyed; but (whether of Dumeans, or Idumeans) unto Gods people, among whom the Prophet abode, and with whom, alone, protection was to be had, Chap. 4. 5, 6. & 10. 24. & 56. 6–8.

V. 13. The burden upon Arabia] Another prophecy, concerning either Arabia, in general, whereof Dumah, before mentioned, ver. 11. might be a part: or concerning that part of it, more ſpecially, which the Kedarens poſſeſſed, ver. 16.

The burden] See on Chap. 13. 1.

upon Arabia] As Neh. 2. 12. To be laid upon Arabia; as a burden is laid upon a beaſt, Chap. 30. 6. Or, againſt Arabia; as againſt Egypt, Exod. 14. 25. And Arabia, for the Arabians, (as Egypt there, for the Egptians) and againſt thy neighbour, Exod. 20. 16. and againſt Moſes, Numb. 12. 1. for the particle is the ſame. And the Latine goeth wide, that rendereth it here, as he ſhould after have done it, in Arabia; as if the burden were not the burden of Arabia, but of ſome other, that ſhould flee thither for ſuccour.

Arabia] Whence this region had its name, at firſt, is uncertain. The fabulous Greeks in Euſtathius, tell us of one Arabus, of the race of Apollo; and Solinus would make us believe, that the word ſignifieth an holy country; but in what language, he telleth us not. The name in Hebrew hath affinity with a word, that is uſed for the Weſt; ſuppoſed therefore, by ſome, to be ſo called; becauſe that it lay toward the Weſtern part of Aſia, trending along over againſt Ethiopia, and Egypt: as alſo with another word that ſignifieth a plain, or, a deſart, Chap. 51. 3. Jer. 50. 12. which ſuites well with ſome part of it; and hither ſome of the Rabbins draw that, Jer. 2. 2. as the Arabian in the wilderneſs. But I take it rather to have had this appellation, from the name that ſignifieth a mixt multitude, Exod. 12. 38. Jer. 50. 37. becauſe the region was, much of it, peopled by ſuch, ſome of Chams poſterity, Gen. 10. 7. and ſome of Abrahams iſſue by Keturah, Gen. 25. 2, 3. and by Hagar, from Iſmael, Gen. 25. 13, 14. being therein intermingled, the one with the other; whence the ambiguity, and variety of readings, and verſions, 1 King. 10. 15. 2 Chron. 9. 14. Pſal. 68. 4. Hab. 1. 8. Zeph. 3. 3. See Jer. 25. 24. For as for thoſe that imagine, they ſhould be ſo called of the word Arab, that ſignifies lying in wait; though it carry a fair ſhew with it, as if the words were the ſame, and it ſuit well with the condition of that people, living much by robbery to this very day, and to that purpoſe waiting for paſſengers, to ſurprize them, Jer. 3. 2. Yet the roots of either, in the original, are divers; and the initial letters differ, as in Amoz, and Amos, Chap. 1. 1. which not obſerved, breed a groſs miſtake in the Greek verſion, Joſh. 8. 14. The whole region lying, a great part of it, between the Perſian gulf, on the Eaſtern ſide; and the Red ſea, thence called the Arabian-gulf, on the Weſt; is commonly divided into three parts, Arabia the fertile, the rocky, and the waſte. But Strabo, l. 16. ſeems to make a dichotomy of it, as nature it ſelf, in a manner, hath done; dividing it into two parts, the fertile, and the barren; which latter may well include thoſe two, which others divide, being for infecundity much at one; in the wilderneſs whereof, the Iſraelites ſo long wandred to and fro, after their cutting the red ſea, before they arrived on the coaſt of Canaan. And of this part of Arabia, do moſt underſtand this Prophecy; (though peradventure, yet, of a larger extent) becauſe bordering upon Paleſtine, it is probable, that the Aſſyrian king over-ran this alſo, when he invaded that country, Chap. 20. 1. Of Arabia, ſee alſo on Chap. 13. 21.

In the forreſt in Arabia ſhall ye lodge, O ye travelling Companies of Dedanim] This Prophecy foretelling the calamities that ſhould befall the Arabians, from the Aſſyrian invading them, relateth how they ſhould be driven, leaving their abode in the champion, to ſeek ſhelter in the woods; calleth upon Some of them, to relieve their neighbours in their flight, ver. 14, 15. and prefixeth a time, wherein this diſaſter, betiding them, ſhould much impoveriſh their eſtate, ver. 16, 17.

the forreſt] Or, wood; as 1 Sam. 14. 25. wood, for, woods: or, forreſt conſiſting of woods: as Chap. 7. 2. the woody part of the country, whither, as well men, as beaſts, uſe to betake themſelves for covert and retreat, in times of danger and diſtreſs, when invaded, or purſued in the plain, or expect ſo to be, where they lye more open to aſſault, Gen. 3. 8. 1 Sam. 22. 5. Joſh. 17. 18. though it be a wood, or, forreſt, apt to ſhelter, and more difficult therefore to ſurprize: for ſo the particle ſhould there, as after in the ſame verſe, be rendred. The meaning ſeems to be here, that not only for fear of the enemies, but being ſtript, by them, of their tents, which they uſually lodged, and dwelt in, Chap. 14. 20. they ſhould now be compelled to take up their lodging in the woods. See Jer. 49. 28, 29.

in Arabia] The woods, that are in that country; or, of Arabia: in Arabia, for, of Arabia: as, the mountains in Gilboa, 2 Sam. 1. 21. for, of Gilboa: and, in thy people, Exod. 22. 28. for, of thy people: as it is rendred, Act. 23. 5. and it may, as well, be rendred, ye in Arabia, or, of Arabia ſhall lodge; as well Inhabitants of Arabia, as woods of Arabia: referring the words in, or, of Arabia, not to the woods, wherein they ſhould lodge, but to the people, that ſhould lodge in them. The Latine, deceived by the neerneſs of the word, tranſlates it, at evening: and the word that ſignifies evening, is ſuppoſed indeed, ſometime, to be put for Arabia, 1 King. 10. 15. but this of Arabia never for evening: and the word is the ſame here with that before. As for the Popiſh Interpreter, he did but play here, (as many of them oft do;) who becauſe the word Arab, is not far in ſound from Oreb, that ſignifies a crow, or, a raven, (for the word ſeems to include either, Levit. 11. 15. ſo called it may be, for his blackneſs, Cant. 5. 11. reſembling the Arabians ſmoky tents, Cant. 1. 5.) would have it here intimated, that the Arabians deſtiny was, like Pharaohs chief Bakers, to be hanged, and made meat for ſuch fowls, Gen. 40. 19. Prov. 30. 17. Thus do wanton wits, as well among profeſſed Chriſtians, as apoſtate Jews, in prophane manner dally, and make ſport with Gods ſacred Word.

ſhall ye lodge] This Some, and ſo the Rabbines alſo, divers of them, underſtand of the Jews, who, in the Aſſyrian Invaſion, fled into thoſe parts for relief. Whom the Arabians (here upbraided, therefore, for their inhumanity towards them, as was Moab before, Chap. 16. 3, 4.) refuſing to entertain, ſhould conſtrain them to lodge abroad in the wide, and wilde woods. Others underſtand it, of Caravans, or troops of people, that uſed to travel that way with merchandiſe, Gen. 37. 25, 28. Job 6. 19. and to take up their lodgings among them; but now finding the Country full of ſouldiers, in regard of whom they could not paſs with ſecurity, and ſafety, as formerly they had done; (ſee Lam. 5. 9.) or rather, all rifled, and waſted by the enemy, ſhould be compelled to lodge in the words. But I ſuppoſe it rather to be intended of the Kedarens, or Arabians, inhabiting in the lower parts of the Country, towards Paleſtine; who being expelled from the places of their wonted abode, in the plain, ſhould be enforced to flee up into the higher parts of the Country, to ſeek ſhelter there in the woods.

O ye travelling Companies of Dedanim] The word here uſed, ſignifieth firſt, and properly, paths, wayes, or paſſages, Gen. 49. 17. Job 6. 18. Chap. 2. 3. and ſo ſome Interpreters here underſtand it; rendring the words, in the wayes, or, paſſages of Dedanim; by the wayes, that lead thither. The particle is wanting: as Hoſ. 6. 9. in the way, or, upon the way; or, by the high-way ſide to Sechem, that is, ſay they, in the woods, that are about the way toward Dedan. Howbeit, as the word Oreach, ariſing from the ſame root, (but once read, Job 34. 8. having a notion of journeying, and there uſed of ſuch, as travel, in ſociety, or company together) doth ſignifie a traveller; whence a lodge for travellers, Jer. 9. 1. and, like a traveller, that turns in to lodge for a night, Jer. 14. 8. ſo the word Orchah here uſed, is by a metonymy deemed to be put for a company, or, troop of travellers, that journey together, Gen. 37. 25, 28. Job 6. 19. in which latter place alſo, walks, or, marches, (for ſo the word properly ſignifies, Pſal. 68. 24.) ſeems to be put for companies marching, or journeying; as another the like alſo, 2 Sam. 12. 4. where a walk, or, a way, for a man to walk, or journey in, is put for a man of the way, or, by the way, that is, a wayfaring man, and made the ſame, with oreach, a traveller, there alſo uſed. The text therefore may well be ſo read here, as our Engliſh rendreth it; though I ſee no neceſſity of departing from the proper, and moſt frequent ſignification of the word.

Dedanim] Or, Dedanites: a people deſcended from Dedan, one of Abrahams iſſue by Keturah, Gen. 25. 3.) and they are reckoned up with the Temaites, and other people of Arabia, Jer. 25. 23, 24. though among the Edomites alſo, together with the Temanites, as neer neighbours to them, and mixt alſo, it may be, with them, Jer. 49. 7, 8. Ezek. 25. 13. So the Dumeans, and Idumeans, before, ver. 11. See of them, and their merchandiſe, Ezek. 27. 5, 20. & 38. 13. by which places, it may be deemed, that they dwelt neer upon the fertiler part of Arabia. Howbeit, from that former place of Ezekiel ſome obſerve two ſeveral people, of Countries far diſtant one from another, both bearing that name; the one deſcended from Cuſh, by Raamah, Gen. 10. 7. ſeated Eaſtward from the Gulf of Perſia, on the Indian Sea-coaſt, where a region is called Daden unto this day, that traded at Tyre, in ivory, and ebony, the wares of thoſe parts, ver. 15. The other, as before, deſcended from Abraham by Keturah, whoſe ſeat was, as hath been ſaid; and their trade in clothes only, ver. 2.

V. 14. The Inhabitants of the land of Temah, brought water to him that was thirſty; they prevented with their bread, him that fled] The Jewiſh Doctors conceiving theſe thirſty fleeers to be of their own Country-men, underſtand the words to be ſpoken with an intimation of Duty, relating what they ſhould have done: The Inhabitants of Tema ſhould have brought water to the thirſty Jews, their kinſmen, and ſhould have prevented with their bread, thoſe of them that fled away from the Aſſyrians: or, as ſome of them would have it, but they prevented them with their bread; that is, as they expound it, whereas being thirſty, they wanted drink, and they ſhould in the firſt place have ſupplyed them with that, they did not; but firſt tendred ſalt-meats, that encreaſed their thirſt; and when they had ſo done, then offered them empty bottels, which putting to their mouthes, in hope to meet with drink in them, they drew nothing but wind from them, and ſo dyed: Theſe are Jewiſh fictions and fables. As far from the truth of ſtory, do thoſe run another way, that would have it underſtood of their helping to relieve the Aſſyrians, their confederates, purſued by the Medes. The words may well be rendred, from the Hebrew, Bring forth water, wherewith to meet the thirſty, with your bread prevent thoſe that flee. Which is ſpoken by the Prophet, to intimate unto the Temaites, what diſtreſs their Country men of other parts of Arabia ſhould be in, being conſtrained to leave ſuddenly their wonted places of abode, and to flee either to them, or along by them, being deſtitute of all neceſſary proviſions, in thoſe waſte regions eſpecially, to ſeek for ſome ſhelter, and relief elſewhere.

the land of Tema] As Dumah, ver. 11. ſo Tema, was one of Iſmaels race, Gen. 25. 15. from whom the land, that the people deſcended of him did inhabite, was ſo called, Job 6. 19. Jer. 25. 23. They miſ-read here Teman, for Tema, with the Greek, who after the old Latine render it, the land of the South.

brought] Or, bring. Heb. come: as Jer. 12. 9. and ſo taking it, in the firſt form it ſhould be rendred, not, come O water, as ſome very unfitly; but, come with water: a defect of the particle: as ver. 7. or, as Some, come, and bring water: as Gen. 27. 9. take me (that is, take, and bring me) two kids; or, it may be here, in the ſecond, or active form; and then it is, make to come; which is all one with bring. I rather chooſe the former, come with water, partly, becauſe the verb in Jer. 12. 9. (and in this form, it is no where elſe found) ſo ſounds, come to eat; and partly, becauſe the Hebrew hath it more fully then our Engliſh expreſſeth it, come with water to meet the thirſty: as 1 Sam. 25. 34.

water] A commodity, in thoſe parts, very ſcanty, Exod. 17. 1. Num. 20. 2. Job 9. 18, 19.

thirſty] Heb. thirſty one: as afterward, the fleeer: but both taken collectively: as Chap. 32. 6. & 16. 3. In this condition their neighbours then were, partly, in likelihood, being ſtript of all neceſſaries; partly, not daring for fear, to ſtay to eat, and drink, or, to take any proviſions along with them; and partly alſo wandring in thoſe hot, and dry places; ſuch, as their country, for the moſt part, was. So 2 Sam. 17. 28, 29. Pſal. 107. 3, 4. Heb. 11. 37, 38.

they prevented] Or, prevent ye. Which whether way taken, doth not imply, as the fond Rabbine would have it, a tendring of meat, or bread, to them, before drink; but a ſpeedy, and ſpontaneous act of beneficence, not ſtaying till they were cryed unto, or called upon for it; but freely of their own accord, without delay, doing it, and with their voluntary tender, anticipating their ſuit for it. So Deut. 23. 4. & Neh. 13. 2. becauſe they prevented not the children of Iſrael, with bread, and with water by the way: not amiſs rendred in either place, met, being the ſame, that is implyed in the former branch, by coming to meet, importing a going voluntarily to meet them, before they were come at them, or arrived with them: as Gen. 46. 29. Prov. 7. 15.

with their bread] Or, with your bread: one perſon for another; the third for the ſecond: as Job 18. 3. O thou that teareſt his ſoul in his anger; (for, thy ſoul, or, thy ſelf, with thine anger,) ſhall the earth be forſaken for thee? and Job 17. 10. return ye all them; for, all of you.

him, that fled] Or, that fleeth. Heb. the fleeer, or, wanderer: as Prov. 27. 8. Jer. 49. 5. See ver. 15.

V. 15. For they fled from the ſwords, from the drawn ſword; and from the bent bow, and from the grievouſneſs of war] It is no groundleſs fear, that makes them flee thus, like that, 2 King. 7. 8. but the dread and terrour of a potent enemy, not making towards them; but fallen in upon them, with an over-powerful army.

they] Which ſhews the word before-going, ver. 14. to be collective.

fled] Or, flee: as Pſal. 31. 11.

from the ſwords] Heb. from before the ſwords, that is, for fear of the ſword, ready to ſeize on them: as 1 Chron. 11. 13. Chap. 31. 8. Joel 2. 6. and ſo in all the branches following, the ſword is put frequently for hoſtile Invaſion, Levit. 26. 6, 25. Chap. 1. 20. & 51. 19.

the ſword drawn] So the Chaldee. Heb. left, or, let go, as the verb ſometime ſignifies, Deut. 32. 15. Gen. 31. 28. or rather ſtretched out, at them, and ready to fall upon them, as the verb is uſed, Num. 11.31. 1 Sam. 4. 2. Chap. 16. 8. or, diffuſed, and ſpread abroad, over the Country: (ſo one of the Rabbines) as the participle is uſed, 1 Sam. 30. 16. and the verb alſo, Judg.15.9. 1 Sam.4.2. 2 Sam. 5. 18,22. the word is no where elſe found applyed to a ſword: and ſome therefore ſuppoſe netuſhah, to be put here, for letuſhah; that ſignifies ſharp, or, ſharpened, Pſal.7.12. & 52.2. but that is a needleſs boldneſs.

the bent bow] Heb. the trodden bow. See Chap. 5.28. ſword, and bow; as elſewhere, ſo here, for all manner of warlike weapons, being two of the moſt principal, and in thoſe times moſt commonly uſed; the one, to ſmite with at hand; the other, to reach afar off; joyned frequently together, Gen. 48.22. Pſal.37.14. & 44.6. & 76.3. Chap.13.15,18. & 41.2. Hoſ.2.20.

the grievouſneſs of war] That is, a grievous war. Heb. heavineſs: as Chap.30.27. heavy; for, grievous: as Gen.18.20. Chap.36.2.

V. 16. For thus hath the Lord ſaid unto me] See ver.6. and Chap.31.4.

within a year, after the years of an hireling, and all the glory of Kedar ſhall fail] In theſe words, is a ſhort ſpace of time ſet, a bare year, within compaſs whereof this ſad Prophecy ſhould take effect; and the heavy doom, in the verſes foregoing, cloſely, and darkly delivered, now more expreſly, and in plainer terms denounced, ſhould be executed upon the Arabians.

within a year] Heb. in yet a year; that is, while the year, that now is, is yet in being: before a year be come about, or be compleat. A ſhorter time, then that aſſigned to the Moabites, Chap. 16.14. or, that to the Ethiopians, and Egyptians joyntly together, Chap.20.3. the Aſſyrian, whether Sargon, Chap.20.1. or Sennacherib, Chap. 36.1. falling in, it ſeems, ſooner upon thoſe parts of Arabia, then upon thoſe people; If thoſe ſeveral Prophecies, at leaſt, were delivered about the ſame time with this. For I cannot aſſent to them, that conceive this Prophecy, to intend the calamities on this people, inflicted by the Chaldeans, above one hundred year after Eſays dayes, foretold by Jeremy, Jer.49.28. and that the time here mentioned, doth not tell when this heavy doom ſhould be executed; but how long the execution of it ſhould laſt.

after] Or, according to the years of an hireling; Who ſo ſoon as his years are run out, expecteth inſtantly his wages, Gen. 29.20,21. See on Chap.16.14.

and all the glory] Or, ſhall all the glory. For as our Engliſh runs, the and is ſuperfluous; within a year,-and all his glory ſhall fail: or, if we retain the copulative, which in the original is not unuſeful, it may be rendred; As yet a year,-and all the glory ſhall fail. So Chap.10.25. Jer.51.33.

all the glory] Their wealth, might, and multitude; or whatſoever it is, that they glory in, or procureth them any note, or name: as Chap.16.14. Their wealth ſeems to have conſiſted moſt in their cattel, not the greater ſort, but the leſſer, to wit, ſheep, and goats; that will thrive in places, though ſomewhat bare, and affording but ſhort-commons, where they may have ſcope enough; and ſome camels, beaſts, that will endure hard feeding, and hold out long without water; See Chap.60.7. Ezek.27.21. Jer.49.29.

of Kedar] The name of one of Iſmaels ſons, Gen. 25.13. whoſe poſterity ſeated themſelves, in the leſs fertile part of Arabia, as well the waſte, as the rocky; that which this our Prophet intimates, Chap 42. 11. there they lived moſt in tents, therefore called Scenites; which they were wont to remove from place to place, to procure change of paſture for their cattel. Hence, the tents of Kedar, Pſal.120.5. Cant. 1.5. and their curtains, whereof their tents conſiſted, Jer. 49. 29. Hab.3.7.

fail] Or, be conſumed: as it is rendred, Pſal. 37.20. Chap. 1. 28.

V. 17. And the reſidue of the number of archers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar ſhall be diminiſhed] There ſhall be a very ſmall company left among them, of any might, or fit for military ſervice.

the reſidue] The ſmall remainder, like a remnant of a large piece of cloth, or the like: See Chap.10.22.

of the number] The word is uſed ſometime as a note of fewneſs, ſuch as may eaſily be numbred, Deut.33.6. Chap.10.19. ſometime, of multitude, a number not eaſily told, Numb. 23. 10. Pſal.147.4. and ſo here: as alſo numbers, in the plural, Pſal.71.15.

of archers] Heb. of the bow; that is, of men of the bow; or, bow-men: as, harveſt; for, an harveſt-man, Chap. 17. 5. See Chap.22.3. yet the word may be taken here in his proper ſenſe, without that trope, if we carry on the ſentence, without interruption, thus, the number of the bow (that is, of the bows; as ver.15. for the word, howſoever taken, is collective) of the mighty men, &c. as the very like is, 2 Sam.2.4. that is, the reſidue of the multitude of the bows, that is, the arms, and the might, conſequently, of their martial men ſhall be diminiſhed. So Jer. 49.35. I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might. The bow was theſe Kedarens chief arms, therein imitating their anceſtor Iſmael, that was trained up in that trade; and living in the wilderneſs, (it is not unlikely) lived much by it, at firſt, Gen.21.20.

of the ſons of Kedar] The Kedarens, his poſterity. See ver. 26. as, the ſons of Lot, Pſal.83.8.

ſhall be diminiſhed] Not utterly deſtroyed. So of Moab, Chap.16.14.

for the Lord God of Iſrael hath ſpoken it] See Chap.1.20. & verſ. 10.

God of Iſrael] The only true God, Jer.10.10.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of the Valley of Viſion] A ſad Prophecy againſt Judah and Jeruſalem: as appeareth, ver. 8,10. Of burden, ſee Chap.13.1.

the valley] It is here queſtioned why Jeruſalem ſhould be called a valley, when as it ſeemed to ſtand upon an hill; whence that, Pſal.87.11. Her foundation is on the holy mountains, or, hills. To which ſome anſwer; that though the city ſtood, the chief part of it, on a knole, or riſing-ground, and might therefore be termed an hill; the Temple built on mount Moriah, whereon Abraham was to have ſacrificed Iſaac; and Sion the city of David, being an hill of ſome height, Gen.22.2. 2 Chr.3.1. 2 Sam. 5.7. Pſal.48.2. & 68. 15,16. Chap.2.2. & 14.13. yet, in regard that the place in which it was ſeated, was environed with mountains, far higher then it, or any part of it, it is in regard of them ſaid to ſtand in a vale, and is here termed a valley. See Pſal.121.1. & 125. 2. Chap.52.7. Jer. 3.23. Others would have it ſo termed, both Jewiſh, and ours, in regard of the dejected eſtate, and low condition, (that it ſhould be brought unto, by the troubles here fore-told, in regard whereof, it might well be called, not a lofty, or ſtately mount, now, as ſometime; but a depreſſed, low valley. See Jer.17.3,12. & 22.23. the former ſeems the genuine ſenſe.

of Viſion] It is called the Valley of Viſion, as moſt think, in regard of the abundance of viſions, or divine revelations, from time to time, there imparted to Gods Prophets: for Jeruſalem (as one well ſaith) was as a Seminary of Seers: and there was the place from whence God was wont to give Oracles; whence that ſacred room, or cloſet in the Temple, was ſo ſtyled, 1 King.6.5,19,20. & 8.6,8. Some, a little more nicely, proceed ſomewhat farther; becauſe thereinto, from heaven, as from an hill, into a vale, did thoſe divine revelations, in great plenty deſcend. Nor are there wanting, who ſuppoſe it might be ſo termed, not as the ſubject only, but as the object of ſuch viſions; becauſe ſo many viſions either went before, or were delivered concerning it, Exod. 15. 17. Deut.3.25. & 12.11. 2 Sam.7.10,13. Pſal.87.2,3. & 132.13,14. According to this firſt expoſition, which ſeems moſt genuine; Viſion is put for Viſions: as Chap.1.1. Howbeit, ſome think, there is in this title, an alluſion to the name of Jeruſalem, upon the apparition made to Abraham, in that place, named thereupon by him, Jehovah-jireh, Gen. 22.14. for Jeruſalem, ſay they, may well ſignifie, Salem, (ſo it was anciently termed, Gen.14.18. Pſal. 76. 2.) where God appeared; which words both joyned together, make up Jeruſalem, Joſh.10.1. 1 Chr. 11. 4.

what ayleth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the houſe tops?] The former part of this Chapter containeth a Prophecy, concerning the diſtreſs and diſtraction, that ſhould befall the Jewiſh State; and more ſpecially, the Inhabitants of the city of Jeruſalem; with whom the Prophet here parlieth, demanding of them (for to them he directeth his ſpeech) what the reaſon might be of ſo ſudden a change with them; that whereas, but a while before they were ſet wholly upon revelling and jollity, ver. 13. they ſhould now be generally poſſeſſed with ſuch fears, and ſo full of diſtractions and diſturbance. Now ſome ſuppoſe this to be a Prophecy of the ſurprizal and ſacking of the city, under Zedekiah, by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer.39. & 52. Others, of the diſtreſs of it, under Zedekiah, by Sennacherib, Chap.36. & 37. and this latter is moſt likely; becauſe the whole tenour of the Chapter doth moſt fitly agree thereunto.

what ayleth thee?] Heb. what to thee? that is, what is the matter? what hath betided, or, is befallen thee? So Judg.18. 23. Pſal.114.5.

gone up to the houſe tops] To burn incenſe to the hoſt of heaven, ſay ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors: which indeed, ſometime, they uſed to do. See Jer.19.13. But this is not here intended. To lament, and bewail themſelves, ſay Others; as Chap. 15. 3. that, more likely then the former. Or to look abroad, to ſee what the enemy doth, as thoſe are wont to the, that are begirt with hoſtile forces; or, to look about, to ſee whether they can deſcry any ayds coming to their relief, Pſal. 121. 1. Jer. 3. 23. or, to ſafe-guard themſelves there: for unto the higher places, as more defenſible, people in ſuch caſes are wont to retire, Judg. 9. 51. or, to call thence, for aid, or advice, to neighbours, or, others neer to them; or, to crave relief and help, at Gods hand, Act. 10. 9. For ſome one; or more, or the moſt of theſe ends and purpoſes, it may be, that this running up to the tops of their flat-roofed-houſes at this time, was; importing, howſoever, much fear, and diſtraction, throughout the whole city.

V. 2. Thou that art full of ſtirs, a tumultuous city, a joyous city] Or, That thou art full of ſtirs, thou tumultuous city, thou joyous city? What is the matter, that thy note, and tune, is ſo altered? that thou art now ſo full of out-cryes, and clamours, that waſt ſo full of mirth and jollity before. See ver. 13.

full of ſtirs] Or, clamours, or noiſes. The word is uſed, ſometime, for joyful acclamations, Zach. 4. 7. ſometime, for doleful exclamations: and ſo it is by ſome deemed here to ſignifie. It may well be taken either way; either, that they had been before full of the one, or that they were now full of the other.

a tumultuous City] Or, thou tumultuous, or, ſtreperous city: For ſome refer this branch to the former, ſuppoſing it, to denote, in part, her preſent condition; becauſe the word, ſometime implyes a mournful noiſe, Pſal. 55. 2. Chap. 59. 11. Other, carry it on to the branch next enſuing, as deſcribing her former condition and eſtate; the word is uſed ſuch noyſe, as revellers amidſt their mirth make, Prov. 20. 1. Zach. 9. 15. the word ſeems here to imply, an hideous, confuſed noyſe, whether of the one, or of the other. See Chap. 17. 12. and 51. 15.

a joyous city] Or, thou revelling city. See Chap. 5. 11, 14. So Chap. 32. 13.

thy ſlain men are not ſlain with the ſword, nor dead in battel] Thoſe that conceive the ſiege, and ſacking of Jeruſalem, by the Chaldeans, to be here intended, underſtand this paſſage, the former part of it, of thoſe that died with plague and famine, in the time of the ſiege, Jer. 14. 18. & 38. 2. the latter, of thoſe that were ſlain at Riblah, after the ſurprizal of the city, Jer. 39. 6. Others, that apply it to the Aſſyrian Invaſion, ſuppoſe the meaning to be, that they were ſo diſmaied and diſheartned, that they had no more ſpirit or life in them, then as if they were ſlain men, ere the ſword touched them; ſtark dead with fear, ere they came to any fight, Joſh. 2. 11. & 5. 1. 1 Sam. 28. 20. Dan. 10. 17.

thy ſlain] Or, that thy ſlain ones; (for men is not in the text) as carrying the text on in a continued tenor, from the firſt verſe, unto the ende of the third. Thy ſlain; either ſlain indeed; or, as ſlain with fear, Pſal. 88. 4, 5. Chap. 59. 7. Lam. 2. 12.

with the ſword] Heb. the ſlain ones of the ſword; as Num. 19. 16. Lam. 4. 9. For the former word is put ſubſtantively, and governs the latter; and the like is in the next clauſe.

dead in battel] Heb. the dead ones of war, or, battel: as 2 Sam. 18. 8. dead of battel, for, dead in battel; as woods in Arabia, for, woods of Arabia, Chap. 21. 13.

V. 3. All thy Rulers are fled together] This perturbation and affrightment, hath ſeized upon, not the common ſort of people alone, but thy Captains alſo, thy Commanders, thy military men, Chap. 13. 7, 8.

All thy Rulers are fled] Or, That all thy Captains do flee; as continuing ſtill the queſtion, at firſt propounded, ver. 1. Rulers; as Chap. 1. 10. & 3. 6, 7. Or, Captains, Leaders; as Joſh. 10. 24. Judg. 11. 6, 11. Prov. 6. 7.

are fled] Or, flee; as Chap. 21. 15. Or, wander; as Job 15. 23. Prov. 27. 8. Either they wander, and run to and fro, as men in a maze, or at their wits end, Chap. 8. 21, 22. Seeking one while to the Aſſyrian, to make their peace with him, Ch. 33. 7, 8. another while to the Egyptian, to crave aid againſt him, Chap. 30. 2, 4. (ſo Jer. 2. 18, 36.) or, that they flee to Jeruſalem, out of all parts, not daring to ſtand it out againſt the Aſſyrian, bearing all down before him, Chap. 36. 1. (ſo Jer. 8. 14. & 10. 17.) or, (as thoſe that refer it to the Babylonian invaſion) they flee out of the city, to ſhift for themſelves, Jer. 6. 1. & 39. 4.

they are bound by the archers] Or, that they are bound: (carrying the ſentence ſtill on) Heb. of, or, from the bow. Which thoſe that apply the Prophecy to the times of Zedekiah, expound, from, that is, of, or, by: as Pſal. 78. 64. the bow, that is, the bow-men, the archers: as Chap. 21. 17. and underſtand it of thoſe that were taken, and bound by the Chaldeans, after the ſurprizal of the city, Jer. 39. 5, 6, 7. But thoſe that ſuppoſe it to concern Ezekiahs dayes, expound it, Some, from the bow, that is, for fear of the bowmen, referring it to the former verb, they flee from the bow; and ſo the words indeed lye in the text. Other of them, referring it to the latter verb, read it, from the bow they are bound: which they expound, by an Hebraiſm not unuſual, they are bound from the bow: that is, bound from making uſe of it: as, from ſpeaking, that one cannot ſpeak, 1 Sam. 25. 17. from ſeeing, Pſal. 69. 23. that they cannot ſee, Rom. 11. 10. from a King, from being a King, 1 Sam. 15. 22. from miniſtring as a Prieſt, Hoſ. 9. 12. that thou ſhalt no more do it. Thus underſtood, the ſenſe is, that their hands are ſo reſtrained, and tyed up with extremity of fear, that they are not able to manage, and make uſe of their bows.

all that are found in thee, are bound together] Or, that (as before) all that are found in thee, that is, are in thee, (as Eſt. 1. 5. Chap. 39. 2.) are bound together; either in fetters, Jer. 52. 11. or with fear, Pſal. 76. 5. Though Some expound it, of a conſpiracy of the Princes of Judah among themſelves, not to fight, but to flee, and make their peace with the enemy, Chap. 8. 12.

which have fled from far] Or, that they flee from far; that is, that they flee hither to Jeruſalem, from the fartheſt part of the Country; or, that they flee away, ſo faſt, from an enemy afar off, before he come neer to them: or, ſimply, that they flye far away; (for ſo is the word uſed, Chap. 23. 7.) that they withdraw themſelves, and get as faſt, and as far as they can, out of the way: as Pſal. 55. 7, 8. and ſo it is not unlikely, that divers of them did.

V. 4. Therefore ſaid I, Look away from me; I will weep bitterly: labour not to comfort me; becauſe of the ſpoyling of the daughter of my people] The Prophets ſpeech of himſelf, ſetting himſelf upon a ſolemn and ſetled courſe of mourning, in regard of the calamities that he foreſaw would ſhortly befall his people: So Chap. 15. 9. & 24. 16. The wonted manner of Gods Miniſters to mourn, as for the ſins, ſo for the ſufferings alſo of Gods people, Jer. 4. 19. & 9. 1. & 13. 17. Luk. 19. 41.

look away from me] So Cant. 6. 5. but in another ſenſe, turn thine eyes away from me: here, as if he ſhould ſay, ſpeaking to his friends about him, endeavouring to take him off from his grief; Look another way, betake your ſelves to ſome other employment, and let me alone, leave me to my mourning, whereunto I have, with a firm reſolution, abandoned my ſelf. Whence, alſo, ſome here render the words, ceaſe from me: as alſo, Job 7. 19. & 24. 6. Pſal. 39. 13. which places are parallel to this.

I will weep bitterly] Or, that I may weep bitterly: a defect of the final particle: as Chap. 5. 11. & 10. 2. Heb. I will, or, that I may, embitter my ſelf in, or, with, weeping: a bitter weeping; for, a ſore, and grievous lamentation, Jer. 6. 26. & 31. 15. Ezek. 21. 6. & 27. 30, 31. Zach. 12. 10. Matth. 26. 75. So Exod. 1. 14. they made their lives bitter to them: and, God hath dealt very bitterly with me, Ruth 1. 20.

labour not to comfort me] Heb. urge not, or, preſs not to comfort me: ſo the word is uſed, Gen. 19. 15. Exod. 4. 13. Jer. 17. 16. preſs not comfort upon me. So Jacob, Gen. 37. 35. he refuſed to be comforted: and Aſaph, Pſal. 77. 2. my ſoul refuſed to be comforted: and Rachel, Jer. 31. 15. Thus paſſion prevails ſometime overmuch, even with the Saints.

becauſe of the ſpoyling of the Daughter of my people] Becauſe of the ſpoyl made by the enemies forces, among my country-men, as dear to me, as to tender parents, any daughther, ch. 1. 8. Jer. 9. 1. Rom. 9. 3.

V. 5. For it is a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity, by the Lord God of hoſts, in the Valley of Viſion, breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains] Theſe words relate to, and further dilate, what he had touched upon, and given ſome hint of, in the cloſe of the former verſe. That therefore his ſo great profeſſed grief might not ſeem groundleſs, he doth in this verſe very pathetically, and rhetorically, lay forth the grievous diſtreſſes and diſtractions, that his people ſhould be in, when theſe diſmal evils ſhould befall them.

a day] That is, a time: as Jer. 30. 7. Joel 2. 2.

of trouble] So it is rendred, Ezek. 7. 7. Prov. 15. 16. or, tumult: as Amos 3. 9. Zach. 14. 13. or, vexation: as 2 Chr. 15. 5. Ezek. 22. 5. or, diſcomfiture: as 1 Sam. 14. 20. or, deſtruction: as Deut. 7. 23. 1 Sam. 5. 9. the verb it comes from, uſed in that place of Moſes, ſignifies to break, or, deſtroy: and ſo Chap. 28. 28. See Chap. 37. 3.

of treading down] As Chap. 18. 2. See Chap. 10. 6. where Sennacherib hath a commiſſion ſigned from God, thus to deal with his people: and Chap. 14. 25. where with breaking (that is, diſcomfiture) and treading down, as a further degree of harſh, and diſgraceful uſage, Sennacherib himſelf is threatned. See alſo, Chap. 63. 6.

of perplexity] As Eſt. 3. 15. Mic. 7. 4. it is a metaphor from man, or beaſt, entangled in a thicket. So Pharao, of the Egyptians; they are entangled in the wilderneſs, Exod. 14. 3. there is in the original, an elegant paronomaſia, or ſimilitude of ſound, between this word, and the former; which our Engliſh cannot expreſs.

by the Lord God of hoſts] Who hath given commiſſion for it, Chap.10.6. and whoſe inſtruments and officers they are, who are here-after-mentioned, ver. 6. Chap. 10. 5,15. that which maketh the evill to be unavoidable, and unconquerable. See Chap.13.6. So Zach.14.13.

by the Lord] Heb. to the Lord: to him; for, by him: or, from him: as Ruth 3.10. 1 Sam.23.21. Pſal.3.8. & 115. 15. Jer.15.8.

breaking down the walls] Heb. wall: but taken collectively: as 1 Chr.14.1. where wall-wrights, is put for Maſons. Hence a city, or walled-Town, may ſeem to be termed Kir. See Chap.16 7,11. and thence alſo, the word here uſed, not to build up, but to pull down a wall; (as, to branch, for, to lop; or cut down branches, Chap.10.28. See alſo, Chap.66.3.) and conſequently, to deſtroy, Num.24.17. It is that, which God before threatned; to wit, that he would break down the wall of his vineyard; and ſuffer it to be trodden down, Chap.5.5.

and of crying to the mountains] Not, a noyſe from the mountains, Ezek.7.7. either an hollow ſound only, ſuch as mountains uſually yeeld; or, a noyſe of mirth and jollity, ſuch as in vintage time the vintage men are wont there to make; but a crying to the mountains, ſuch loud ſhreiks, and out-cryes, as ſhall reach the neighbour mountains, and cauſe them to ring again with them, Chap.15.4,5,8. Jer.48.34. or, a crying of perſons making towards the mountains, for ſhelter and ſafety; and crying out unto their friends, and others, after the uſual manner of people, in ſuch caſes, as they go along; to the mountains, to the mountains: one uſual place of retreat and refuge, for man and beaſt, being here put for all other of like kind, Gen.19.17,19. Judg.6.2. 1 Sam.13.6. Pſal. 11.1. and 104.18. Jer.13.16. & 16.16. Matth. 24. 16. Though there want not, that expound it of the noyſe of houſes, and buildings ruinated, and either beaten, or burnt down: or, of the clamour and ſhouts of the enemy, falling in, upon, and ſacking the city, Pſal.137.7. See Chap. 16.9. But the former ſeems more probable.

V. 6. And Elam bare the quiver, with chariots of men, and horſemen; and Kir uncovered the ſhield] In theſe words, the Prophet further ſheweth what people, among others, were to be employed in this expedition againſt Judah.

Elam] The Elamites, or Perſians: at that time ſubject unto the Aſſyrian Monarch; and ſerving under him in this expedition. Of them, ſee on Chap.11.11.

bare the quiver] Served as bowmen: That people being of ſpecial note for archery, in thoſe dayes; as appears by Jer.49. 35. like as the Parthians, their neighbours, have been alſo, in all ages: and of the Elamites, Strabo, lib. 16. teſtifieth as much.

with chariots of men] Heb. with a chariot of a man: as chap. 21.9. ſave that the word is Iſh there; Adam here. Of which words, ſee on Chap.2.9. chariot of man; for, a company of chariots, (as ver. 7.) with military men; Commanders for the moſt part, in them, Judg.4.15. 1 King.22.31,34. 2 Chr. 35.24. ſo termed, to diſtinguiſh them from ſuch as were employed for carriage of proviſions, or other neceſſaries: and ſo alſo, Chap.21.7,9.

and horſemen] A defect of the copulative: as Chap. 21. 7. See more there.

Kir] Not that of Moab; whereof before, Chap. 15.1. but another city of that name ſituate in Media, and under the dominion then of the Aſſyrian, 2 King. 16.9. Amos 1. 5. The Medes and Perſians are here joyned together, being neighbouring nations; as Chap.21.2. For thoſe that would have this Kir, to be Cyrene, (whereof, yet, ſome of note ſeem very confident) conſider not well, how far Lybia, wherein Cyrene is ſituate, and theſe Regions lye aſſunder.

uncovered the ſhield] Heb. made naked, or, bare: as chap.3. 17 & 32.11. that is, they uncaſed it, they took off the caſe, wherewith, out of times of uſe, and ſervice, arms are wont to be covered, to preſerve them from duſt and ruſt; and fitted them for ſervice, Chap.21.5. or, becauſe the courſe of the context ſeems to import, not a preparation for war, but matter of preſent action, (ſee ver.7.) the words may be rendred, Kir diſcovered the ſhield; that is, appeared in the field, with their ſhields in ſight, to the terrour of the other party, before thoſe places which they came to aſſault. Thus it ſorts well with the former branch; Elam bare the quiver; and Kir bare up the ſhield. For as men may be ſaid to conceal their arms, when they come with ſword, or dagger, under coat, or caſſock, or with their piſtols in their pockets, or when they carry ſhield or buckler, hanging behind them, at their backs; ſo they may well be ſaid to reveal, or diſcover them, when they bear them in open view, or advance, and lift them up to make uſe of them in battle: and ſo do ſome of the Hebrew Commenters expound the word here. And of ſome ſuch uncovering, and diſcovering of arms in fight, ſee Hab. 3. 9. as alſo of making the arm bare; by ſtripping of it up to the elbow, for the fitting of it to fight, or ſmite with. See Chap. 52. 10. Howſoever, they are wide, who taking the word Kir, here, not for the name of a city, or the men of that country, wherein it ſtood, but for a wall, render the words, either after the old Latine, the ſhield made bare the wall; that is, the ſhield-men pillaged the walls of their houſes, of all their rich hangings and ornaments: or, after ſome of the Rabbines, they made the wall bare of the ſhields: taking them from the walls, where they were hung up before: and thoſe other of this latter rank, no leſs, that following the Chaldee; and becauſe the verb here uſed, in their Talmudick language, doth frequently ſignifie, to adhere, and be annexed unto; though they produce no clear text of Scripture for it, render the words; the ſhield ſtuck to the wall; or, they faſtened their ſhields to the wall; to wit, that under the covert thereof, they might with more ſafety either aſſault the Defendants, or undermine the walls.

the ſhield] If it be demanded, why Elam hath the quiver aſſigned him; and Kir the ſhield: It may be ſuppoſed, becauſe the Elamites were the better, generally, at bow and arrows, and thoſe of Kir, at ſword and target. But we are not ſo to underſtand it, as if the Elamites were archers only; and thoſe of Kir, none but ſwordmen: though it is not unlikely, that the uſe of the one ſort of weapons might be more rife in the one country, then in the other: but that yet there was uſe of the quiver alſo with them of Kir, and of the ſword with them of Elam. It is an elegancy of phraſe, whereby our Prophet is wont, in way of diſtribution, to aſſign ſeveral attributes, to ſeveral ſubjects; although both common to them both. See on Chap. 5.13. & 18.6. & 20.4. & 21. 14. ſo likewiſe, verſ. 7.

V. 7. And it ſhall come to paſſe, that thy choyceſt valleys ſhall be full of chariots; and the horſemen ſhall ſet themſelves in array at the gate] The ſtate and condition, is here deſcribed, of the land of Judah, invaded by the people before mentioned, ver.6. and what ſhould be done by the chariots and horſemen there ſpoken of; to wit, that their rich vales ſhould be ſpoiled by them, and their cities beſieged, and aſſaulted.

it ſhall come to paſs, that] Heb. it ſhall be that: as Chap. 16. 12.

thy choiceſt valleys] Heb. the choyce of thy valleys: as, the choyce of our ſepulchres, Gen.23.6. the choyce of his firres, ch.37. 24. and, the choyce of thy Cedars, Jer.22.7. their valleys which were of ſpecial note and regard, as well for pleaſure, as profit, Chap.28.1,4.

chariots] Heb. chariot, or, company of chariots: as verſ. 6.

ſhall ſet themſelves in array] Heb. ſhall ſetting, ſet; or, diſpoſing, diſpoſe, themſelves, to wit, in warlike manner, to aſſault, and ſurprize: as Pſal.3.6.

at the gate] Heb. to the gate-ward: as, to the wilderneſſe-ward, Chap.16,1. So alſo, chap.28.6. either toward the city; (gate, for, city: See Chap.3.26.) or, toward the gate of the city, (both collectively taken) to force entrance thereby, into the city, Judg.9.44,52. Yet, the meaning is not, that the chariots ſtaid in the valleys, and the horſemen only approached the cities; but chariots, and horſemen both, ſpoyled the one; and aſſaulted the other. See on ver. 6. And although true it be, as one of the Jewiſh Doctors well obſerves, that the chariots were more uſeful in the vale, then on the hills; yet it is apparent, that they made uſe of them, in, and on either, Joſh.17.18.

V. 8. And he diſcovered the covering of Judah] In this verſe, and thoſe that follow, is related the courſes that were taken by thoſe of Jeruſalem, eſpecially, in thoſe calamitous times; the meer worldly ſedulity of ſome, ver. 8-11. and the deep ſecurity, and bruitiſh ſenſuality of other ſome, ver. 12, 13. joyned with a neglect of God, the one; with a contempt of him, the other.

he diſcovered the covering of Judah] Who did it, is not expreſſed. God did it, ſay ſome; the enemy, ſay others: the verb ſeems to be put indefinitely; and it may well be rendred, the covering of Judah was diſcovered, See verſ. 19. By covering, ſome underſtand the city of Jeruſalem it ſelf; to which the people had repaired for ſhelter, ver.3. but was broken up by the Chaldeans, Jer.39.2. Others, the Temple, or Sanctuary, (and the vain confidence they put therein, Jer.4.4.) being ſurprized, and rifled together with the city, Jer.52. 13, 17-20. Lam. 1.10. Others, Gods protection, formerly ſpread over them, Chap.4.5,6. but now withdrawn from them, Exod. 32.25. Num.14 9. 2 Chron. 28. 19. Mich. 1.11. Others, their ſtrong-holds, and fenced Cities, which were unto them, as the covert is, in the forreſt, unto the beaſts, that there abide, Pſal.29. 9. but were now laid open, being ſeized upon, and diſmantled alſo, it may be, ſome of them, by the enemy, Chap 36.1. and this I take to be the genuine ſenſe of the place; it being, (as the ſequel concerning Shebna, ſhews, verſ.15.) intended for the times of the Aſſyrian Invaſion; wherein, though a main part of the countrey was over-run by their forces, yet neither was the city of Jeruſalem ſurprized by them; nor Gods protection withdrawn from it, Chap. 37.33,35. Howeit, there want not, that by the covering, here, underſtand their armories, and ſtorehouſes, wherein their armes and ammunition were beſtowed, and laid up out of ſight; which were unlocked, and ſet open, and the armour, and weapons, brought forth, to be in a readineſs, for warlike uſe; which might ſort well with that which followeth, ſave that the courſe of the context, duly weighed, ſeems to imply a paſſage unto the relation hereof, as a divers act from this, and occaſioned by it. I ſhould rather prefer, before this, what a Jewiſh Doctour ſuggeſts; to wit, that by covert, ſhould be meant their power, in general, whereinſoever it conſiſted; diſcovered now, to be but feeble, and unable to ſtand before ſo potent an enemy, as was broken in upon them, See Chap.37.3.

and thou didſt look in that day to the armour of the houſe of the forreſt] When ye perceived that the enemy was broken into your countrey, and had taken many of your walled cities; Ye ſuppoſed it was high time, for you of Jeruſalem, to look about you, and beſtir you; by making the beſt preparation that might be, for the defence of your city, 2 Chron.32.1,2.

thou didſt look] Ye, (as verſ. 9.) the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, 2 Chr.32.3. did look after thoſe outward meanes of proviſion and defence; as your ſole, or principal, at leaſt, meanes of ſafegard, See Chap.17.7,8. and ver.11.

in that day] At that time, as Chap. 17.9. when the Country was full of forraign forces, verſ.7.

of the houſe of the forreſt] That this was the name of an armory ſituate within Jeruſalem, is generally agreed on. But whether it were that which Solomon called, the houſe of the forreſt of Lebanon, 1 King.7.2, is queſtioned. For ſome of note there are, who deem, that houſe which Solomon built, was ſo called, becauſe it ſtood in mount Lebanon; built by him for a ſummer-houſe, or houſe of pleaſure, to retire unto when he hunted, or deſired to take the air; and that this ſpoken of here, bears the name of that, becauſe it reſembled it, and ſucceeded it in ſome ſort, and for ſome uſe, as for an armory, among others. That ſituate on Lebanon, being long ſince loſt, and at this time held, if in being, by ſtrangers. But I ſee no reaſon, why this may not be the very ſame with that which Solomon built, not in Lebanon, but in Jeruſalem: for, to omit, that by the relation of the ſtructure of it, the porch, wherein his Thron ſtood, ſeems to have been adjoyning to it; and his dwelling-houſe, not far from either, 1 King.7.2,6,7,8. Certain it is, that the ſhields and targets of beaten gold, made for ſhew, not for ſervice, for his guard and attendants to bear about him, in State, were in this houſe of the forreſt of Lebanon; or, ſome part of it, laid up, where they might be at hand, to make uſe of, upon occaſion, See 1 King. 10.16, 17. and there is no reaſon to imagine, that his guard ſhould run, or ride for them, to mount Lebanon, ſo oft as the king ſhould pleaſe to goe abroad in State. Beſides, that in his ſons dayes, after the defection of the ten tribes, the king of Egypt found them, and ſeized on them, not at mount Lebanon, but in Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. 12.9, 10. Nor is it improbable but that this may be the ſame that is called the tower of David, ſaid to be built for an armory; and to be ſtored with thouſands of ſhields and targets, for warriors, Cant.4.4. So called, either becauſe built in that place by David, at firſt, or becauſe belonging to the houſe of David. And if it can be further demanded, why the houſe ſhould be ſo called, the houſe of the forreſt of Lebanon, if it were not there ſituate. I anſwer, it is not certain why; but it might well be, in regard of ſome reſemblance it had of mount Lebanon, in wilde walks about it; or, the loftineſs of it, or ſome other circumſtance, now unknown: and this is the more probable; becauſe the city of Jeruſalem it ſelf, or the royal palace, at leaſt, in it, is ſometime termed, for like reaſons, by the name of Lebanon, Jer. 22.23. Zach. 11.1.

V. 9. Ye have ſeen alſo the breaches of the city of David, that they are many] Ye viewed and repaired the decayed places, in the upper city; eſpecially, the fort Zion, which had been neglected in time of peace, and not regarded, when no invaſion feared, or expected, See 2 Chro.32.5.

Ye have ſeen alſo] Heb. And, but may well be rendred alſo, as Chap.12.4. Ye have ſeen, or, did view, that it may run in the ſame tenor with the former branch, verſ.8. thou didſt look, but that looking, and this ſeeing, ſeem ſomewhat to differ; that looking to their armes, as confiding in them; this ſeeing, or veiwing the breaches, or decayes in their fortifications, to repair, and make them up: to ſee, for, to view, or, conſider, as Exod. 32.9. Job 34.21, Rom. 11. 22. Some read this whole verſe, as in a continued tenor, thus. And conſidering, that the breaches of the city of David were many, ye gathered together the waters of the lower Pool; as if the former branch implyed no ſpecial act of proviſion, but related only the ground, or cauſe of the act, mentioned in the latter. But I take it rather, to be a Zeugmatical term, importing a twofold act, ye veiwed the breaches, to repair them; as Moſes viewed his brethrens burdens: to relieve them, Exod.2.11: the plain Syntax of the text, carrieth it this way, and the ſtory it ſelf ſtrengthens it, 2 Chro.32.5. Of the form of ſpeech, ſee Chap. 14.12. But they divert this branch of the Prophets words, far away from the main ſtream of the text, as well as the truth of the ſtory, that render them, on this manner, ye ſhall ſee the breaches of the city of David, to wit, which the enemy ſhall make in your ſight.

the city of David] The fort of Zion, which David dwelt in, after he had taken it from the Jebuſites, 2 Sam.5.7, 9.

that they were many] Or, for, (as Pſal.12.1.) or, becauſe, (as Pſal.14.6.) they were many, and the more need therefore of diligent view, and due repair.

and ye gathered together the waters of the lower Pool] For the better, both ſtrengthening the city, and ſupplying it with water, if it came to a ſiege; as alſo to withdraw, and derive it from the enemy, to themſelves. See 2 Chron.32.4,5. Some of the Jewiſh Commenters, add, to make brick and morter therewith, for the repair of the walls.

the lower pool] Two pools of note there were near to Jeruſalem, Neh.3.15,16. the upper-pool, 2 King.18.17. Chap. 7.2. & 36.2. and the lower, of which, 2 Chr.32.30. See on Chap.7.3. & ver.11.

V. 10. And ye have numbred; the houſes of Jeruſalem; and the houſes have ye broken down, to fortifie the wall] Another courſe taken by them, to make the city the more defenſible.

Ye have numbred the houſes] Or, ye numbred, as ye gathered, verſ.9. or, ye ſurveyed, for ſo the word alſo ſignifies, 1 Sam.14.17. Job 14.16. Pſal. 119.26. (ſo it ſhould there be rendred) Chap.33.18. It is queſtioned, to what end this numbring of the houſes ſhould be. Some ſay, to take a muſter of the men, fit for ſervice, in every family; and to aſſign each one his employment. Others, to ſee what proviſion of victualls they were furniſhed with; and to know what quantity, both of water, and of bread, would be requiſite againſt a ſiege. Others, to ſee which might well be ſpared, to afford timber and ſtone, for the repair of the wall. Others, to conſider, what houſes ſtanding might hurt, or hinder; or be advantagious to the enemy; and which of them ſtood fit to be imployed, and fortified for defence. And again, which might be ſet apart, for the receit of thoſe, whoſe houſes were to be demoliſhed, either without, or, within the city. And theſe or ſome of theſe, might well be the occaſion of this ſurvey.

the houſes have ye broken down to fortifie the wall] Or, Ye brake down (as ye made a ditch, ver.11.) the houſes, (ſuch of them as ye thought good, or ſaw fitting) to fortifie the wall; either by making uſe of the ſtone, and timber of them, to that purpoſe; or, becauſe, joyning upon the walls, as Rahabs did, Joſh.2.15. they could not well come to ſearch, or make up the defects that were in the wall, without removal of them. Though there want not, that underſtand it, of ſuch houſes, as ſtood without the wall, in the ſuburbs; which are wont to be, on ſuch occaſions, demoliſhed, that the enemy may not finde harbour and ſhelter in them, with more ſafety, and ſecurity, to undermine, or aſſault. See Jer.33.4.

V. 11. Ye made a ditch, alſo, between the two walls, for the water of the old pool] For the better, and further, both ſecurity, and ſupply of the city: and that the enemy for want of water, might be the leſs able to maintain any long ſiege, 2 Chro. 32.3.4.

a ditch] Heb. a receptacle, for confluence of waters, Gen. 1.9,10.

between the two walls] Of which, See 2 Chro. 32. 5. Jer. 39.4.

the old pool] This ſeems to have been the upper pool, Chap.7.2. & 36. 2. from whence water was afterwards drawn to the lower, 2 Chron. 32. 30. which was made long after, Neh.3.16.

but ye have not looked unto the maker thereof; neither had reſpect to him, that faſhioned it long agoe] Hitherto were the outward proviſions they made, for the repelling of hoſtile aſſaults, and the ſafeguarding of themſelves, and their city againſt them: which all ſo exactly, and preciſely, in all circumſtances, agreeing with the hiſtorical relation, concerning the courſes taken by King Ezekiah, his Princes, and the people aſſiſting them, upon the expectation of Senacheribs coming with his forces, to beſiege Jeruſalem, do clearly evince this Prophecy to belong unto, and to concern his times. Nor were theſe preparations, and proviſions, of themſelves, evil, or unwarrantable: Yea, it would have been a ſin in them, and a tempting of God, to have neglected them. But here comes in their failing, in that, as Aſa, in his ſickneſs, ſought unto Phyſitians, and ſought not unto God, 2 Chr.16. 12. ſo that they looked after theſe outward means, with a neglect of God; as if theſe means were ſufficient to ſecure them and their city, without him, which yet by experience, afterward, they found, and acknowledged to be otherwiſe, Chap.37.3. See Prov.18.10,11. Howbeit, Some of the Jewiſh Interpreters, conceiving this Prophecy to have reference, not unto the Aſſyrian, but to the Chaldean Invaſion, propound an objection, in the perſon of thoſe that ſhould then live; as if they might ſay to the Prophet; Why do ye tax us for the taking of ſuch courſes as thoſe, for the ſafeguard of our ſelves, and of our city? did not Ezekiah do the like? And this they ſuppoſe the Prophet doth, in way of anticipation, meet with in theſe words; as if he had ſaid, It is true indeed, that Ezekiah did the ſame, that ye do; as by the ſtory of his times appears, 2 Chr.32.3-5. But it is added withal, that he truſted in God, 2 King.18.5. which ye, in Jehojakims, and Zedekiahs dayes, do not. But it is evident enough, as hath been ſaid, what times the Prophecy belongs unto: and though Ezekiah truſted in God, yet might he have many hollow-hearted Princes, and Officers, whereof Shebna was one, of whom, hereafter, in this Chapter; nor might the peoples hearts, for the main multitude of them, be ſo upright with God: beſide, that Ezekiahs own faith ſomewhat faltred, when in ſuch ſubmiſs manner, he ſent to Sennacherib, and pillaged Gods houſe, to pacifie him, 2 King.18.14-16.

looked unto] Sought to, and relyed upon, Pſal.34.5. Chap. 17.7,8.

the maker thereof] As Chap.45.18. or, the doer thereof: as Mal.3.17. & 4.3. Heb. makers, or, doers. Which, becauſe the word is in a plural form, the Jewiſh Writers, ſome of them, underſtand it of David and Ezekiah; the one that took the fort of Zion, and built about it, 2 Sam.5.8,9. the other, that made thoſe conveyances for water, 2 King 20.20. 2 Chr. 32. 30. theſe they looked not after, to tread in their ſteps. But the plural form hindereth not, but that the words may be, and indeed muſt be, underſtood of God. For the ſame word (whether to intimate a plurality of perſons in the deity, or in way of excellency, and eminency, I ſtand not now to diſpute) is in the ſame form, frequently uſed of God, Job 35.1. Pſal.149. 2. Chap.54.5. and though this be in a plural form; yet that in the next branch, ſpoken, queſtionleſs, of the ſame party, is in a ſingular. The only doubt is, what the pronoun, rendred, thereof, or, of it, hath reference unto. Some refer it to the preſent occurrents, which God in his ſecret counſell, had diſpoſed of them, and accordingly by the enemy, whoever he were, inflicted on them this judgment, Chap. 10. 5,6. 2 King.24.2. Others, to the pools, and water-works, beforementioned; which God, by the careful proviſion of thoſe Kings, had furniſhed them with; the rather aſcribed unto him, becauſe fed much with rain-water, which is in Scripture, made his peculiar gift, Levit.26.4. & 28.12. Chap.30.23. Jer.5.24. & 14.22. Joel 2.23. Zach.10.1. Matth.5.45. Others, laſtly, which ſeems the moſt probable, the city of Jeruſalem, a type of his Church, which he had ſetled, and made the ſeat of that Kingdome, and the ſpecial place of his more ſolemn ſervice and worſhip, Pſal. 76.2. & 87.2. & 122.3-5. & 132. 13,14. See Chap.37.26.

that faſhioned it] Heb. the Potter of it: or, the framer of it: he that faſhioned, or framed it, as the potter doth clay, or the like ſtuff, to make an earthen veſſel of it, Chap.64.8. Jer.18. 6. and God is ſaid, here, either thus, to have framed, and faſhioned, that is, deviſed, and produced the evill, that was befallen, or was to befall them; as the like phraſe is uſed, Jer.18.11. or, as to have made, ſo to have framed the city; to be the maker, and framer, or faſhioner of the city; as elſewhere, the maker, and faſhioner, or framer of that State, Chap. 44.2.

long ago] Heb. from afar. The word is uſed ſometime of place, ver.3. Chap.5.26. ſometime, of time, Chap.25.1. Jer. 31.3. long-ſince, as having reference to the firſt conſtituting, and ſetling of that city. See Chap.37.26. The Jewiſh Doctors, ſome of them, refer it to Gods purpoſe, at the time of Creation, when he had Jeruſalem, and his Temple there, in his head. Yea, their Talmudiſts run higher, and tell us here of ſeven things that God framed, before he created the world, the garden of Eden, the Law, the juſt ones, Iſrael, the Throne of glory, Jeruſalem, and Meſſias, the Son of David. And this the Prophet, if ye pleaſe to afford credit to their fancies, had reſpect unto, in this place.

V 12. And in that day did the Lord God of hoſts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldneſs, and to girding with ſackcloth] In the foregoing paſſages, was deſcribed the ſedulity of one party, in making of preparations to withſtand the enemy, when they perceived that he was bent to come and beſiege them, and could not, by ſuch rich Preſents, as their King had ſent him, be diverted from that his purpoſe, 2 King. 18. 15-17. 2 Chr.32.2-5. together with their neglect of God, whom in the firſt place, they ſhould have ſought unto; as if with theſe proviſions, they might do well enough without him. Now followeth the ſecurity, and ſenſuality of another party among them, or it may be, alſo, the ſame; abandoning themſelves unto all manner of mirth and jollity, riot, revelling, and exceſs, as deeming themſelves now ſufficiently ſecured, by the courſes they had taken, againſt any enemy whatſoever; and that in an open, and profeſſed contempt of God, his meſſages, and menaces, who by his Prophets foretelling what evils hung over their heads, called upon them for humiliation, and repentance of their ſins, and reformation of their lives, for the prevention, and averſion of the ſame. See Chap.5.11,12.

in that day] At that time, either when this, or ſome other the like Prophecy, was delivered, giving warning of ſuch calamities, as would ſhortly, and ſuddenly befall them. For to ſome ſuch prophetical Sermon, or Sermons, do their words, in the next verſe, relate: or, when they had diſpatched thoſe their forementioned deſigns, for the ſafe-guard of the city, eſteeming themſelves now to be ſufficiently ſecured againſt all occurrents that could be. So ver.8. For I cannot concur with thoſe, that make ſuch a diſtraction between the branches of this Prophecy; as if this calling upon them for humiliation, were not in regard of the evils then eminent; but in regard of thoſe that had befallen them, in King Ahaz his time, 2 Chr.28.5-8,17-20. Albeit, it may not amiſs be ſaid, that God did call upon them for humiliation and repentance, by thoſe heavy things, that, about theſe times, befell their brethren of Iſrael, by Salmaneſer, 2 King. 18.9-12. which they ought to have taken notice of, and to have taken to heart, Jer.3.8-10. Amos 6.6. But in this place, the approach of their own calamities menaced, ſeems to be the call mentioned.

the Lord God of hoſts] As Chap.10.24.

call] God is ſaid to call, two wayes: ſometime, by way of operation, and execution; and ſo it is ſaid, he called for a famine, Pſal.105.16. that is, he cauſed it; ſometime, by injunction, and direction; and ſo here, when by his Miniſters, and Meſſengers, giving warning of evils impendent, he requires means to be uſed, for the preventing of them, Chap. 55.6,7. Zeph.2.1,2. though there may be an alluſion in the word here uſed, to the ſolemn proclaiming of a faſt, which was uſual with them, in times of danger, or diſtreſs, 2 Chr. 20.3. Joel 1.14. & 2. 15. as implying, that there was juſt cauſe for them, ſo to do. But ſee an expreſs calling, in thoſe very times, by this Prophet himſelf, hereunto, Chap.32.11.

to weeping, and mourning] So Jer.6.26. & 9.17-20. Joel 2. 12,13.

to baldneſs, and to girding with ſackcloth] Signs of much grief and ſorrow, Chap.3.24. & 15.2,3.

to baldneſs] Either, by ſhaving the head, as Job 1.20. or, by tearing of the hair: as Ezr.9.3. But it may be demanded, how God is ſaid here to call for baldneſs; when as, elſewhere, he ſeems to forbid it, Levit.19.27,28. & 21.5. Deut.14.1. To this there are two anſwers given: 1 That it is forbidden to be done, upon private deceaſes, or departure of friends; not upon occaſions of publike lamentation, for calamities of like condition, Mic.1.16. 2 That it is condemned, when it is done out of a deſperate diſpoſition, or out of impotency, and impatiency of ſpirit; not when it proceeds from a zealous, and pious indignation againſt ſin, as in Ezra, Ezr.9.3. or from a ſpirit, ſurcharged with abundance of ſincere contrition, and ſanctified ſorrow for ſin, and Gods wrath thereby incenſed; as it ought to have been here.

ſackcloth] Heb. ſack: as Chap. 20. 2. See on Chap. 15.3.

V. 3. And behold] Or, But behold. The copulative for the adverſative, as Chap.5.12. & 11.14. The direct contrary practice in this people, to that which God, by his judgments denounced againſt them, and ready to ſeize on them, did then call for: uſhered in, not undeſervedly, with a note of admiration; as from one aſtoniſhed at their ſtupendious ſecurity, and horrible contempt of God, and his dreadful menaces; Behold. So Chap.5.7.

joy, and gladneſs] Inſtead of weeping, and mourning, that God called for, ver.12. abundance of mirth, or, nothing but mirth: two words of the ſame notion, implying an exceſſe, or eminency of it. So Chap. 35.10. & 51. 3,11. Jer. 7.34. & 16.9.

ſlaying oxen, and killing ſheep] To feaſt, and make merry with, Amos 6.4.

ſheep] The word imports both ſorts of leſſer cattel, as well goats, as ſheep, Chap.7.21.

eating fleſh] Which was not ſo ordinary with them, in thoſe parts, among the meaner ſort eſpecially, ſave at invitations, and feaſts, Gen.18.7. Deut.12.15,20. 1 Sam.28.24. 2 Sam.6. 9. Luk.1.23,27,29,30.

and drinking wine] Reſerved for feaſts, and ſpecial occaſions, Neh.5.18. Eſt.1.7. & 5.6. Eccl. 10. 19. Amos 6.5. otherwiſe water was their ordinary drink, Gen.21.14. & 24. 17. Exod. 17.1-3. Deut.2.6,28. Joh.4.7-15.

eating, and drinking] Feaſting, and making merry together: as Job 1.4,18. but here, as Matth.24.38. they were eating, and drinking; the words imply a conſtant and continued practice, as if they did nothing elſe; minding nothing elſe; but addicted, and abandoned themſelves wholly to ſuch riot and exceſs, without regard of ought beſide. So Chap. 5. 11, 12. Amos 6.4-6. and the phraſe here is emphatical; the verbs running all in an infinitive form: as Chap. 21. 5. & 59. 13. which yet ſome would have all to be conceived, in an imperative, or invitative notion; as thoſe the like, Chap. 21. 5. And, indeed, ſo divers read and render this laſt branch; ſaying, Let us eat, and drink: and ſo the ancient Greek hath it, and the Apoſtle from them, 1 Cor.15.32 which if we admit, there muſt be a ſupply of the verb redoubled in the Hebrew: Eating, let us eat; and drinking, let us drink; that is, let us eat and drink freely: as where the word repeated, is expreſſed; Eating, thou mayſt eat, that is, thou mayſt freely eat, Gen. 2.16. See Chap. 21. 5. & 56. 12. the word, ſaying, is oft wanting: as Pſal.105.14,15. Act.7.32. and ſo ver.14,15.

for to morrow we ſhall dye] Or, we muſt dye: as it is rendred, 2 Sam.14.14. Some underſtand them, as words of men in a deſperate paſſion, making an account, that there is no way but one with them; that within a day, or two, they ſhall undoubtedly be ſwept, or ſnatched away, an enemy coming on them, whom they cannot eſcape; and that their beſt and wiſeſt courſe therefore is, to enjoy themſelves, and make uſe of that which they have, while they may, and have opportunity ſo to do. But I ſuppoſe it rather to be, here, the ſpeech of profane mockers, and ſcoffers, that believed nothing leſs, then what the Prophet threatned them with, whoſe words they eſteemed to be no other then wind, Jer.5.12,13. 2 Pet.3. 3,4. (ſee Chap.5.18,19.) and ſpeak therefore thus in mockery: The Prophets ſay we muſt all dye, and be deſtroyed ere long; let us take us pleaſure therefore, while we have time for it: and it is the common language of looſe and debauched perſons; our life is ſhort, and it will ſoon be gone, (not that they have any ſerious thought of their end, or ought that enſueth it, which either they believe not, or have no liſt to think on) and lets be merry therefore while we may. So 1 Cor. 15.32. See Wiſdome, 2. 1-9. and ſee alſo, Chap.28.15.

V. 14. And it was revealed in mine ears by the Lord of hoſts] So ſome; as if the Prophet ſhould in theſe words meet with an objection, that ſome might make, againſt what he had charged them with; How do ye know that we thus think, or ſay? why? God himſelf, ſaith the Prophet, hath acquainted me with it, hath revealed it unto me. So Jer. 11. 18,19. or, it was, that is, this heavy doom that is now to be paſſed upon you, for this your vile impiety, and horrible profaneneſs, was revealed to me from God, it was uttered by him, in my hearing. The particle, by, is not indeed in the text; but it is oft in like manner ſupplyed: as Pſal. 44. 2. Others, ſuppoſing that ſupply here needleſs, read the words as ſpoken in the perſon of God, and thus render them, it is revealed in the ears of me the Lord of hoſts; that is, this your height of impiety and contempt of God, and his Word, is aſcended up into heaven, and entred into his ears, and doth cry to him for vengeance, as Gen.4.10. & 18.20,21. & 19.13. 2 Chr.28.9. Ezr.9.6. Ion. 1.2. But that which ſeems the genuine ſenſe, and reading of the words, is this, the Lord of hoſts, did in my hearing reveal himſelf, ſaying, as the words of the Prophet, relating what God had revealed to him, concerning thoſe lewd wretches, that thought thus to jeſt out Gods judgments: in mine ears; for, in my hearing: as Chap. 5. 18. where ſee the like form of ſpeech: ſaying, ſupplyed: as ver.13.

it was revealed] Or, he revealed himſelf: for the paſſives are oft uſed in a reciprocal ſenſe: ſo, God was revealed, that is, revealed himſelf, to Samuel, 1 Sam.3.21. and, the King of Iſrael was revealed, or uncovered; that is, revealed, uncovered, laid himſelf open, as one of thoſe vain fellowes, is revealed, or, laid open, that is, diſcovereth, and layeth himſelf open, to his ſhame, 2 Sam.6.20.

Surely, this iniquity ſhall not be purged from you, till ye dye] A dreadful and direful doom, paſſed by God himſelf, upon theſe profane ſcoffers, and bound with an oath to make it irrevocable, that this high and hideous contempt, and contumely, offered by them to his Majeſty, ſhall by no means be expiated; but that they ſhall without hope of mercy, be deſtroyed for it. See the like, 1 Sam.3.14. Deut.29.18-21. Matth. 12. 32. Heb.6.4-6. & 10.26-29.

Surely, this iniquity ſhall not be] Heb. if this iniquity be, &c. a conciſe form of an oath, frequent in Scripture. Of which, ſee on Chap.5.18.

purged from you] Heb. propitiated to you, or, expiated for you: and there is, as the Rabbines ſuppoſe, an alluſion in the word, to the ſolemn day of propitiations, or expiations, Levit. 23.27,28. and the legal rites uſed, for expiation of delinquents, Levit.4.20,26,35. & 16.30-33. intimating, ſay they, that no repentance, no prayer, no ſacrifice, ſhould ſerve, or be available to expiate this ſin, Num.15.28-31. 1 Sam. 3.14. Heb.6.6. & 10.28. 1 Joh.5.16.

till ye dye] Eternally, ſaith the Chaldee: captivity ſhall not ſerve your turn; but you ſhall dye by the ſword of the enemy, ſaith a Jewiſh Doctor: but the former might befall them, as well as the latter, Chap.5.13,14. Amos 6.6,7. and the latter might be no leſs bitter then the former, Jer.22.10. Lam. 4. 9. the meaning is, that Gods vengeance ſhould purſue them, to their dying day, Pſal.140.11.

ſaith the Lord, the Lord of hoſts] I have ſaid it, yea, have ſworn it; (as Amos 6.8.) who am the Lord, the Lord of hoſts. See Chap.1.24.

V. 15. Thus ſaith the Lord God of hoſts] Or, ſaid, to wit, at the ſame time, Chap.8.12. ver.14. For this Prophecy concerning Shebna in particular, the diſplacing of him, and the ſubſtituting of Eliakim in his ſtead; ſeemeth to have been both delivered by God to the Prophet, and by the Prophet publiſhed at the ſame time with the former, concerning the ſtate of thoſe times in general.

Go, get thee unto this Treaſurer, even unto Shebna, which is over the houſe, and ſay] What this Shebna's carriage was, whereby he procured to himſelf the heavy doom here paſt upon him of deveſtment, and deſignment to deportation and deſtruction, is no where expreſſed; only, the Jewiſh Writers tell us, that he was one that complyed, and had correſpondence with the King of Aſſyria, and drew others into the ſame conſpiracy with him, who ſhould have betrayed the city into Sennacheribs hands; drawing hither thoſe paſſages, which of him, and his complices, they expound, Chap. 8, 6, 12. But their relations are of little eſteem, where there is nothing for them, but their word. Certain it is, that he was a rotten-hearted man, and one that had much abuſed his power, and place; being, in likelihood, of mean parentage; and it may be, a ſtranger by deſcent. See ver.16.

get thee unto] It may be queſtioned, whether Gods meaning were, that the Prophet ſhould repair unto Shebna's houſe, and there directly, by word of mouth, deliver him this meſſage, as Nathan did to David, 2 Sam.12.1. or, only ſo publiſh it, that Shebna might hear, or hear of it; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Say to Archippus, that is, Let this be ſpoken to Archippus; let him take this, as ſpoken in ſpecial to him, Col. 4.17. However, Gods pleaſure was, that this ſad meſſage ſhould by ſome means be made known to him, and to others alſo, thereby to be warned of better and more upright carriage, in their places of truſt and command.

this Treaſurer] So moſt, both Jewiſh, and others, expound it: ſuppoſing that he had the overſight and cuſtody of the Kings monies, proviſions and treaſuries; becauſe it cometh of a word, that ſignifies, to be profitable, or uſeful, Job 15. 3. & 22.2. & 34.9. & 35. 3. and from whence a term, that is uſed for ſtores, or proviſions, Exod. 1. 11. 1 King.9.19. 2 Chr. 8.4. & 16.4. & 17.12. & 32.28. There want not thoſe, that ſuppoſe ſome ſecret intimation of Shebna's corrupt carriage, wrapped up in the title here given him; as if it were ſaid, the money-man, the man, that medleth much with money; or, that dangerous fellow; becauſe the root it ſprings from, is deemed to import danger, Eccl. 10.9. and ſo the Rabbines commonly uſe it, as in that common by-word, A knife in a childs hand is hazardous: Which yet runs not ſo elegantly with us, as with them. But theſe I ſuppoſe but light and ſlight conjectures. I ſhould rather encline to that which ſome of the Rabbines ſuggeſt; that it was a name, not of the office he bare; (for his office comes after; and it is not uſual to have a man in Scripture, deſcribed by two offices;) but of the place where he was born, which they affirm to be a Town in Egypt, ſo termed, as ſome ſuppoſe, from one Sochis, ſometime King there, Pliny, l.36.c.8. of whom the city was called, Sochen, and from it Shebna born there, a Sochenite: and this ſome of ours ſeem not unwilling to admit. Howbeit, becauſe I find little footing in Scripture, or ſtory of credit, for it; as alſo, for that names of Gentiliſm are of another ſtamp in Hebrew; and it ſhould, according to analogy, have been, not Sochen, but Socheni; as Keni, Judg.4.17. and Canaani, Gen. 12.6. I therefore wave it; and if in a point ſo dubious leave may be obtained, I ſhall make bold to add my conjecture; the word is no where found in a maſculine form, ſave here only; but in a feminine form, it is found, 1 King. 1. 2, 4. where it ſignifieth an adjutreſs, or, a cheriſher, (for they can hardly be cleared from abſurdity, that would make Abiſhag, Davids Shee-treaſurer, and ſo there tranſlate the word) in like maner may Shebna be here termed this, or that, co-adjutor: but in way of irony; as importing what he profeſſed to be to his Soveraign, and what in regard of his place, he ought to have begn; but implying withal, that in deed, and truth, he was nothing leſs, then what he proteſted, or pretended to be. See the like, Pſal.55.13. Chap.48.1,2. Rom.2,19,20. So I ſhould rather take it, then as ſome other, who (I ſuppoſe from the ſame ground) render it, this adjutor; and expound it, this favourer, and maſter of thoſe profane varlets, before ſpoken of, ver.13. or, as others, this fomenter, and cheriſher of ſecret conſpiracies, and compliances under-hand with the enemy.

which is over the houſe] Or, high-ſteward. By houſe, ſome of the Rabbines, here, underſtand Gods houſe, the Temple; called ſometime, ſimply, the houſe, 1 King.5.17,18. and hence gather, that Shebna was the high Prieſt; or, becauſe no ſuch name is found in the catalogue of High-Prieſts, ſome of them would have him to be one of thoſe that had the charge of the Temple-treaſure; of which, 2 King. 18.15. 2 Chron.32.28. Ezra 8.33. but other of them, and ſo the beſt approved Writers, by the houſe, here mentioned, underſtand the houſe of David, or, the Kings houſe; to be over which, was one of the higheſt places in the Kingdom. See Gen. 41. 40. 1 King. 4. 6. 2 King.10.5. & 15.5. and this appears to be here meant, by the office of Eliakim, his ſucceſſor, deſcribed, verſ. 21,22.

and ſay] Theſe words are not in the original; but are to be ſupplyed; as the like oft, elſe-where, 1 Chr. 28.19. verſ. 13. Chap.18.2.

V 16. What haſt thou here? and whom haſt thou here? that thou haſt hewed thee out a ſepulchre here, as he that heweth him out a ſepulchre on high, and that graveth an habitation for himſelf, in a rock?] The Prophet is enjoyned here to begin his meſſage from God to Shebna, with a quick, and tart expoſtulation, demanding of him, what he meaneth, being a ſtranger born, and a man come up of nothing, to hew him out ſuch a ſtately monument for his corpſe, to be enterred in, as if he were a man of great birth, and ancient deſcent, and made full account to enjoy his preſent dignities, ſo long as he lived, and to lay his bones there, when he dyed; whereas God had determined to diſpoſe far otherwiſe of him, to throw him down from his dignities, and to ſend him packing into a ſtrange country, where he ſhould dye, far enough off from the place where he made account to be laid up, ver.17-19.

what haſt thou here?] Or, as Some render it, what haſt thou to do here? as Pſal.50.16. Chap.3.15. implying, ſay they, that he was unworthy of that high degree of honour, which, at preſent, he enjoyed; and ſhould therefore be diveſted of it, and not retain it, till he dyed, as he hoped, and out of that hope, built him this monument: or, as Others, rather, who retain the more received reading, implying, that, being an alien by birth, though in Ahaz his time he had crept up under him, and ſo continued his greatneſs under Ezekiah, and was grown now ſo powerful, that the good King, though diſcovering his corrupt carriages, yet could not, or durſt not wholly caſt him off; yet he had no inheritance among Gods people; nor lawful poſſeſſion of land, but what might be redeemed; or, at the year of Jubilee, was to be releaſed, Levit. 25.23-28.

and] Or, or, rather: as Chap 8.19. & 10.14.

whom haſt thou here?] Whom to help, or uphold thee? ſaith one of the Jewiſh Commenters; but, as other of them rather, what brethren, or kindred? being a ſtranger born; which is alſo the more probable; becauſe of the three Courtiers ſent by Ezekiah, to parlee with Rabſhakeh, the other two have their pedegree, or parentage mentioned; but of his there is no word, of his place in Court only, Chap. 36.3.

that thou haſt hewed thee out a ſepulchre here] As if this were the place where thine Anceſtours had lien before thee: (for men of note had places of purpoſe ſet apart for the enterrement of them, and theirs, Gen.23.4,6. & 9,20. & 49.29-31. & 50.13,25. Joſh.24.30,32,33. 2 Sam. 19. 37. and were not buried in the common places of burial, Jer.7.32. & 26.23.) and thou madeſt no doubt, but here to dye, and be intombed, in the monument that here thou haſt made thee. Yet there are of the Jewiſh Doctours, that by ſepulchre here underſtand, not a burial place; but a palace; but that conceit hath no place here; and others of their own, therefore, therein juſtly control them. See further on the laſt clauſe.

here] In the city of Jeruſalem; the chief place of the kingdom; though I ſuppoſe thoſe Jewiſh Doctours over-reach, who report that Shebna had made his ſepulchre among thoſe of the houſe of David, the Kings of Judah, 1 King.22.50. 2 King.8.24. 2 Chron.21.20. which honour yet we finde, that Jehojada the high-prieſt obtained, 2 Chr.24.16.

as he that heweth him a ſepulchre on high] Great men are wont, and that oft in their life-time, to build them lofty and Stately ſepulchres, correſpondent to their greatneſs; and ſuch Shebna it ſeems would imitate; little deeming, or once dreaming, what is hereafter denounced, of his diſhonourable fall, and end; the note of ſimilitude is not in the text, but is ſuppoſed to be ſo ſuppreſſed, that it ought to be ſupplied, by thoſe, that thus read the words; and ſo it is indeed frequently elſewhere, ſee on Chap. 21.8. But the words may be read better, here, another way, without any ſuch ſupply. O he that heweth himſelf a ſepulchre on high; that is, O thou that heweſt thy ſelf a ſepulchre on high, a change of the perſon, juſt like that of Bildad, Job 18.4. O he, that teareth himſelf in his anger; for, thou that teareſt thy ſelf, ſee on Chap. 21. 14. their bread.

on high] Aloft in ſome conſpicuous and eminent place, as Chap.57.7.

and] The copulative is not in the text, nor need be inſerted.

that graveth an habitation for himſelf in a rock] This ſome ſuppoſe to be ſpoken alſo by way of ſimilitude, as well as the former. Thou heweſt thee out a tomb, as one that were building him ſome ſtrong and ſtately palace, to continue to all poſterity, being founded on a rock, Pſal.49.11. Matth. 7. 24, 25. Others read the words by change of the perſon, as before, thou that graveſt thee out a dwelling place in a rock; which ſome would expound of the ſepulchre before-mentioned. And of the Egyptians indeed it is reported, that they called, and accounted, their dwelling houſes, their innes; their ſepulchres, their houſes; and their great men therefore built them more like palaces, then places of burial; nor was it a thing unuſual among the Jews, to hew them ſepulchres out in rocks, Matth.27.60. But we need not ſuppoſe the one put for the other; as well his manſion-houſe, as his monument, might be built on a rock; and the ſame rock: for their ſepulchres were, uſually, either within the walls of, or neer adjacent unto their houſes. See Chap.14.18. His affected magnificence, and ambitious humour of perpetuating the memorial of himſelf, as well by the one, as the other, is commonly deemed here to be taxed: but his folly, I ſuppoſe, is principally aimed at, in making ſo full reckoning of that, wherein God was reſolved directly to croſs him, and to fruſtrate his deſignes. So Luk.12.19,20.

in a rock] On high, before for ſtatelineſs, as Jer.22.23. in a rock; for firmneſs, as Matth.16.18.

V. 17. Behold, the Lord will carry thee away with a mighty captivity; and will ſurely cover thee] Shebna's preſumptuous folly, in being ſo confident of a firm, both ſeat and ſepulchre, was before tartly taxed. Now followeth the doom of deprivation, and deportation, paſt upon him by God, and diſcovering the vanity of theſe his inſolent preſumptions.

Behold] A note requiring more then ordinary conſideration, is prefixed, as to the relation of a ſtrange and unexpected alteration, So Pſal. 37. 36. & 52. 7. Chap. 17. 14.

the Lord] Thou intendeſt one thing, but God purpoſeth another; ſo Luk.12. 19, 20. Thou makeſt account to live alwayes in Jeruſalem, and there to dy: but God intendeth ſhortly, and ſuddenly, to remove thee from thence; and to ſend thee far away, to end thy dayes elſe-where, ver.18.

will carry thee away, with a mighty captivity] Heb. is caſting, or, throwing thee out, (as Chap. 3. 1. with the caſting, or throwing out of a man; or, is caſting thee out with caſting, O man; or, O thou mighty man; for ſo the word properly ſignifies. See on Chap.2.9. & Jer.31. 22. which they expound, either God will caſt thee out in ſuch a violent manner, as a man of might and ſtrength is wont to throw ought away from him; or, he will cauſe thee to be carried away captive, with ſuch a captivity as men uſe to be captived with, who are carried away farther commonly then women, and are wont to have leſs favour and mercy ſhewed them, then that weaker ſex oft hath; or, becauſe the former noun of caſting, or, throwing, is abſolute, and ſhould not therefore be conjoyned with the word man, from which the point of diſtinction alſo with-holdeth it: the genuine ſenſe ſeems to be this. The Lord is preparing ſuddenly and ſpeedily to throw thee out of thine offices, houſe, and place of abode, in a violent manner, (that the repetition, or reduplication of the ſame notion, in the noun annexed to the verb, commonly imports, as Pſal.53.5. & 76. 5. Chap. 24. 22. & Zach.1.14.) O thou mighty man, (as Job 38.3. & 48. 7.) thou that art ſo high and powerful in thine own conceit and aprehenſion; ſo Pſal.52.1. where the word deduced from this, and of neer affinity to it, is uſed; or, O man, ſimply, and ſo the Italian renders it; Behold O man; as men uſe to ſpeak to thoſe, whom they ſet light by, as not deigning to give them their name. And ſomewhat like hereunto, is that of the Apoſtle: Thinkeſt thou, O man? and, who art thou, O man? Rom.2.3. & 9. 20. But that ſoundeth not ſo well, without ſuch a trajection, as the text hath not; which ſeems to have put it off, as a more emphatical compellation, to the cloſe of the ſentence. The vulgar Latine renders it; God will carry thee away, as a cock is carried. Whereupon a learned Interpreter ſaith, he wondreth whence this cock flew into the text. But the anſwer is ready; It was by Jeromes over-much credulity, in giving credit to his Hebrew-maſter, who told him, that Gaber, here ſignified not a man; but a cock. And indeed ſo the Talmudiſts are ſaid frequently to uſe it. And ſo ſome of the Jewiſh Commentors in this place expound it; as if God threatned to drive him away like a cock; that is driven from place, to place, by the puttock; or to carry him away, as a cock, or capon, is by the country-man carried to market, with his wings and legs tyed together; a fit emblem of a captive, ſaith a Popiſh-writer, to ſet ſome fair gloſs on this their abſurd tranſlation, which yet muſt not be refuſed, ſince the Pope hath ſet his ſtamp upon it; though it be confeſſed, that the authour of it, was herein gulled by the Jew. But contrary to all this that hath been ſpoken, concerning the ſenſe of the place: Some late interpreters, of no ſmall note, underſtand it, as relating, not what God would doe with Shebna, but what he had done for him. For they read, and render the words thus, God that covereth thee with a covering, as much as may be for a man; or, (becauſe the article is abſent) God covereth thee with a covering (and becauſe the word is in an abſolute form) even with the covering of a man; that is, God, who now arayeth thee with moſt gorgeous apparel: for rich and goodly apparel, is an enſign of honour, Gen.41.42. Eſt.8.9-11. Dan.5.29. Matth.11.8. and Shebna was in likelyhood, the ſecond man in the State; as Joſeph next Pharaoh, Gen.41.40. The ground they give for this interpretation, is, becauſe the word here uſed, doth, as they ſuppoſe, though in another form, ſignifie to cover, Neh.3.15. Where it is ſaid, the gate of the fountain he built, and covered it. Whence alſo the dew hath its name in Hebrew, becauſe it covers the ground, Judg. 6. 40. and though the word in the Hebrew be not ſo uſual; yet it is found in the Syriack of Daniel, where it is ſaid, the beaſts had covert, or ſhade, under it, Dan.4. 11. and both in the Chaldee paraphraſe of the old Teſtament, and the Syriack verſion of the new, the ſame word is uſed for to cover, and to ſhadow, Exod.40. 21. 1 King. 6. 9. Pſal. 80. 10. Matth.17. 5. Luk. 1. 35. But it is well obſerved, that the words uſed, in the moſt of, if not all thoſe places, may well come from another root, that ſignifies a ſhadow; nor is any place produced, wherein it is found applyed to apparel. The ſingle word therefore, being ſo commonly uſed, for caſting, or throwing, 1 Sam.18.11. & 29.33. Pſal. Job 41. 9. Ezek.32. 4. Jon.1.4,5,12,16. I ſee not why it ſhould not in the doubled form retain the ſame ſenſe; or, why it ſhould not be ſo taken in this place; when as it ſuits ſo well, with the main ſcope of the place; and the ſingle word is there found uſed, where the ſame judgment is denounced, wherewith Shebna is here threatned, verſ.18. Jer. 16. 13. & 22.26,28.

and will ſurely cover thee] Heb. and is in covering, covering thee] The repetition, hath ordinarily, an implication, either of certainty, or of eminency, vehemency, and the like; ſo before, and again, verſ.18. This alſo, thoſe later interpreters expound as the former, of Gods conferring honour and dignities upon Shebna; rendring the words, and doth clothing, cloth thee; that is, doth fairly, or gorgeouſly cloth thee. And they have the more colourable ground, for this their expoſition here, becauſe this word indeed is ſometime found uſed of putting on apparel, 1 Sam. 28. 14. Pſal. 104. 2. & 109. 19. Chap.59.17. & 61.3,10. But there ſeems no reaſon of weight appearing, that ſhould neceſſarily force us out of the way of denunciation, which the Prophet all along here, is commonly deemed to inſiſt in. Some therefore read it, he will wrap thee up. So one of the Jewiſh Writers alſo; becauſe the word is ſuppoſed, ſometime, ſo to ſignifie, ſee Jer.43.12. and a man may be ſaid, to be wrapped up in his garments, as wares are wrapped up, in thoſe things, wherewith they are covered. See on Chap.3. 12. but it is taken, as they imagine, from thoſe, that intending to caſt a garment, or ſome other looſe thing away from them, are wont to wrap it up, hard, and round, that they may fling it the further. But that notion ſeems rather to be implyed, in the branch following, verſ. 18. Others therefore expound it; he will chaſe thee far away, into captivity, like a bird. So another of the Jewiſh Commenters ſuppoſing the word to have a notion of flight in it, as indeed ſometime it hath, 1 Sam.15. 21 & 25.14. the people flew upon the prey; and our maſter flew upon them, for ſo the words there are; but then it hath reference to another root, as another of them, controlling this expoſition, well obſerves. Others again render it, he will ſurely, or, to the purpoſe, cover thee, with ſhame and confuſion, in ſtead of that honour thou now enjoyeſt, and makeſt full account ſtill to retain; and ſo much indeed the word imports, where thoſe terms are expreſſed, as Pſal.89.45. & 109. 29. but ſo it is not here. The received reading therefore, without any addition, doth well; the only doubt is, what covering is here intended, or alluded unto. And here ſome would have it, to be, the covering enjoyned the leper, Lev. 13. 45. hence gathering that Shebna ſhould be ſmitten with leproſie, as Moſes his Siſter, Num. 12. 10. Gehazi 2 King.5.27. and Uzziah, were, 2 King.16. 19. And ſuch a tradition, ſome of the Rabbins tell us here, that the Jews have. But of this, there is no great probability. Others therefore, referr it, rather, to ſuch a covering, as perſons fallen into diſgrace, ſurcharged with ſhame, or ſorrow, carried into captivity; or condemned unto death were wont to have their faces covered, with, as unworthy to ſee the light. See 2 Sam. 15. 30. Eſt. 7.8. Job 9.24. Ezek. 12.6,12.

V. 18. He will ſurely turn, and toſs thee, like a ball into a large country] Heb. he will wrapping, wrap thee up, with a wrapping. There is a reduplication of the verb, as in the latter branch of the verſe next before going; and to that an addition of a noun of the ſame notion, as in the former branch of the ſame verſe; a defect of the particle with here, as there; and Chap.21.7. The words may well be rendred; He will ſurely, or, ſtreightly wrap thee up, and toſs thee, like a ball. The ſame word oft-times, comprehends a two-fold notion; as take, for, take, and bring, Gen.27. 9. receive; for receive, and give, Pſal.68.18. with Eph.4.8. ſo here, wrap up, like a ball, for, wrap up, and toſs, or throw, like a ball, into a ſpacious land. Heb. a land large of hands, or ſpaces, as Pſal. 104.25. Chap.33.21. He will be ſure to ſend thee far away from the place of thy preſent abode. An alluſion to ſomething made up round like a ball, or, to a ball it ſelf, that being toſſed, or thrown, with more then ordinary ſtreſs, from a ſtrong hand, into a ſpatious plain, where there is nothing to ſtay it, runs on an end forward, without interruption, or intermiſſion, until either the force fail, that it was thrown with, through the great length of the way; or it arrive at the lands end.

turn, and toſs] The word, though repeated in a two-fold form, is but one; and it is no where elſe found, but here, and Lev.16.4. where it is uſed of the linnen miter, or, turbant, wherewith the High-Prieſt was to be attired; ſo termed, either becauſe it was wound up, with many wreathes, as the Turkiſh and Perſian turbants are at this day. Or, becauſe the head of him that wore it, was therewith enwrapped. See Chap.3.23. & 62. 3. Now becauſe the word hath ſo neer affinity with ſuch a kinde of head tire, as was uſed moſt by Kings, Prieſts, and perſons of prime note, and place, ſome conceive a bitter taunt, to be cloſely couched in it; as if by it, the Prophet had ſaid, God will attire thee, or crown thee (as the old Latine alſo renders it) with a witneſs; with another manner of attire, then that thou now weareſt; he will wrap thee up, in a bundle or fardle of miſeries; and environ thee with troubles, inſtead of an head-band of State. As on the contrary, God is ſaid to encompaſs the godly with favour, loving-kindneſs, and mercies, as with a crown; or, the like head-band of State, Pſal. 5.12. & 103.4. for ſo the word alſo there uſed, imports. Again, Some of the Jewiſh Writers, upon the ſame ground ſuppoſe it to be implyed, that all his treaſure, and honour, ſhould be packed up together with him, and ſo he, and they, both thrown out, or ſent away together. But that ſeems not to ſort ſo well with the ſubject matter intended; it is more likely, that he was firſt ſtript of all, and then carried or ſent bare enough into a forraign Country.

as a ball] A defect of the note of ſimilitude: as Chap.13.8. & 21.8. the word is no where in Scripture found in this ſenſe; though frequent with the Talmudiſts. Yet there are, that ſuppoſe no ſuch defect; for that the word dur alone, ſignifies a ball, or, a bowl; and that in the Arabick it is frequently ſo uſed. See Chap.29.3.

into a large country] What country this was, that Shebna was either carried captive, or exiled, and confined unto, or upon diſcovery of his evill carriages, and depoſition from his dignities, ſhould flee, and retire himſelf, for ſhelter, is not certain. The Jewiſh Writers, ſome of them, ſay, it was Caſſiphia, Ezr. 8.17. ſome, Nineveh, in Aſſyria; ſome, Babylon; and this laſt, ſome of ours ſuppoſe not to be improbable: Yet, not imagining, as they, that he could be carried captive, in the Chaldean Invaſion, firſt, or laſt, under Nebuchadnezzar; (for he muſt needs be dead long before) but that together with Manaſſes, ſurviving Ezekiah, he might be thither carried by the Aſſyrians under Eſar-haddon, 2 Chr. 33.11.

there ſhalt thou dye] Not at Jeruſalem, where thou haſt hewen out thy ſepulchre, ver.16. as thou madeſt account to do, when thou ſo didſt. The Talmudiſts tell us, that this Shebna, with ſome others, made a defection to Sennacherib; by whom, after the ſlaughter made by the Angel, in his camp, they were carried away, in much diſpleaſure, into his own country, where, after ſome deſpightful uſage, he put many of them to death: and this may be as true, as what other of them ſay, that with Jehojakim, or Jehojachin, (and why not, as well Zedekiah?) he was by Nebuchadnezzar carried to Babel; or, what others, not that he dyed indeed abroad, but that being ſequeſtred for his leproſie, he was as a dead man, as of Mirriam, or Mary, (for the names are the ſame, Luk.2.16.) it is ſaid in the like caſe, Num.12.12. yet after being recovered, he returned to the city, though not to his former office, and dignity again, now conferred upon another.

and there the chariots of thy glory ſhall be the ſhame of thy Lords houſe] Some of the Rabbines on this place, out of their Talmudick ſtories, tell us another ſtory of Shebna, ſomewhat differing from the former; that when Shebna came alone to the Aſſyrians camp, and they asked him, where the reſt of his conſpirators were, he told them, that they were revolted again, and ſo had deſerted him: whereupon they laid hold on him in a rage, and having bored through his feet, they drag'd him, faſtned to horſe-tails, over brambles and bryars; and that this is that, which the Prophet foretelleth him here, of the ſtately chariots, that there he expected to have. But this may well go among the reſt of their fondly-forged figments. Other of them more ſerious, expound the words thus, Thy ſtately chariots, that are now thy glory, ſhall be turned into ſhame, and ignominy, becauſe thou art the ſhame of thy Lords houſe: and ſo in him, ſay they, was fulfilled, what our Maſters ſay, He that ſeeks the ſhame of his Maſters houſe, his honour ſhall be turned into ſhame: or, as other of them, whom many of ours alſo concur with, keeping cloſer to the text; and there ſhall thy glorious chariots, all thy ſtate and pomp, that thou now glorieſt in, dye, that is, ceaſe, and come to an end, O thou that art the ſhame of thy Lords houſe.

the chariots of thy glory] Or rather, thy chariots of glory, that is, thy glorious chariots; thy chariots of ſtate, which as a great man, thou rideſt in, up and down, through the city. So, thy throne of glory, for, thy glorious throne, Jer. 14.21. and, his eyes of glory, for, his glorious eyes, Chap 3. 8. his chariots, both his power and pomp; for chariots denote either, Gen. 41.43. 2 King. 9.25. & 10.15. Joſh. 17.18. Judg. 4.3. 2 King. 2.12. & 13.14.

ſhall be] Or, rather, ſhall dye; ſupplyed out of the former branch: as Job 16.21. & 22.24. & 23.6.

ſhall be the ſhame of thy Lords houſe] According to this reading, the meaning ſhould be, that the honour conferred by the king, upon Shebna, being ſuch an one, as he was, ſhould in fine, prove a diſhonour to his Lord, and to his houſe over which he had placed him. But the old Latine reads it, inſerting a copulative, inſtead of the verb ſubſtantive, and the ſhame of thy Lords houſe. Which ſome following, expound the whole ſentence thus, There ſhalt thou dye; and there alſo thy chariots with thee; and the ſhame of thy Lords houſe, to wit, ſhall alſo then ceaſe, thou being thrown out of it, whoſe honour was a diſgrace to it, and a better man being ſet up in thy ſtead, by whom it may recover its wonted honour again. But the proper ſenſe of the place, ſeems to be that above, O thou the ſhame of thy Lords houſe: thou that by thy corrupt courſes, art a foul blemiſh to thy maſters honour, and a diſgrace to his houſe, Pſal. 12. 8. & 101. 4-7. Prov. 28.12,28. & 29.2. Eccl. 10.5,6.

V. 19. And I will drive thee from thy ſtation] The Prophet ſpeaks here, as in the perſon of God: in regard whereof, ſome render it, For I will, ſaith he, (as looking back to verſ. 15.) drive thee from thy ſtation: and the copulative, is, indeed, put, ſometime, for the cauſative: as Gen. 12.1. & Exod. 14.19. for the places are parallel, and ſhould be rendred alike.

drive thee from thy ſtation] Depoſe thee from thy dignity; thruſt thee out of thine office, wherein thou thinkeſt, that thou ſtandeſt ſo faſt: thou ſuppoſeſt thy ſelf ſo ſurely ſeated, that thou canſt not be ſtirred. But they cannot ſtand, whom God drives, Jer. 46.14,15. there is in the word ſtation, a notion of firm ſetling, and conſiſting, whence a pillar hath its name: notwithſtanding which, as he conceived it, God telleth him, that he would not move him only, but remove him, as the like is threatned Queen Huzzab, that though her name imported the ſame, yet ſhe ſhould be removed, ſhe ſhould be carried away captive, Nah. 2.7.

and from thy ſtate ſhe ſhall pull thee down] The ſame thing repeated in other terms: from thy ſtate, that is, thine office: as 1 Chr. 23.28. 2 Chr. 35.15. or, ſtanding; as the word properly ſignifies. Whence a pillar, alſo, hath another name. Now becauſe the perſon is in this latter branch, changed from the firſt to the third; the Prophet ſpeaking before, as in the perſon of God, now as himſelf, ſpeaking of God; ſome read the words, ſaying, from thy ſtation ſhall he pull thee down: and expound it, he, that is, the King, who before advanced thee, ſhall by the appointment put thee down: and this they ſuppoſe, was in part done, when of High-Steward, he was made Scribe, or Secretary, which was a far inferiour place, Chap 36.3. And it is true, that the word ſaith, or, ſaying, is oft neceſſarily ſupplyed: as ver. 13,15. Job 8.18. & 9.20. But there is no ſuch need here: and they wrong the text, by omitting the copulative, which is of uſe here. Others therefore ſay, he, that is, God: he will do it, whether thy Lord the King do it, or no: as Levit. 20. 4, 5. So Pſal. 52, 5. and, ſaith one of the Rabbines, it is, he will, for, I will, pull thee down: one perſon for another, as is the manner of Scripture in many places, 1 Sam. 6.4. 1 King. 22.28, Job 17. 10. and this God did, ſaith another, by ſmiting him with leproſie, as he did Uzziah, and ſo enforcing him to leave his place, 2 Chr. 26.19-21. But of that before: nor need we ſtand here, to enquire, who ſhould do it, though whoſoever were the inſtruments, it is ſure, that God did it; and no leſſe ſure, that it ſhould be done; that which only ſeems here to be intimated: for the verb may well be taken indefinitely; he will pull thee down; that is, thou ſhalt be pulled down. I will drive thee from thy ſtation, and thou ſhalt be pulled down from thy ſtanding. I will do it; and it is therefore ſure to be done, Pſal. 115.3. & 135.6. Dan. 4.35,37. Of this indefinite uſe, ſee on Chap. 2. 19. & 17.13. ver. 8.

V. 20. And it ſhall come to paſſe in that day, that I will call my ſervant Eliakim, the ſon of Hilkiah] Hitherto was the depoſition and deportation of Shebna. Now followeth the ſubſtitution of Eliakim in his ſtead: after the deveſting of the one, the inveſting of the other.

it ſhall come to paſſe] Heb. it ſhall be: as Chap. 2.2. & 3.24. & 7.21.

in that day] At that time, Chap. 2.20. & 4.1,2.

that I will call] Heb. and I will call: as Chap. 16.12. he ſhall not intrude himſelf into thy place; but ſhall be called, by God to it. So Chap. 42.6. & 48.15. Rom. 1.1. Heb. 5. 4. that which God doth ſometime immediately, as by word of mouth, or inward motion of ſpirit, Exod. 31.2,6,25. Chap. 6. 8,9. Jer. 1.5,7. Matth. 4. 18,21. & 9.9. Gal. 1. 1. ſometime mediately, and ſo ordinarily, by the miniſtry of man, Exod. 16.18. & 11.14,15. Act. 6.3,6. & 13.23. and thus, in likelihood, was Eliakim called to this office, advanced thereunto by Ezekiah. Nor amiſſe, therefore, doth one of the Rabbines here paraphraſe it; I will put it into the heart of Ezekiah, to put him into thy place. Who yet, I ſuppoſe, was miſtaken, ſuppoſing great Princes, to be termed called ones, when it is rather renowned ones, Ezek. 23.23. more likely ſo, Num. 1.16. & 16.2. & 26.9. but the word there doth a little vary, and is doubtful too; and by moſt, rendred the other way.

my ſervant] Not in general; or, at large, as are all men, yea, all things, Pſal. 119.91. but in a more ſpecial manner, as one deſigned to do him and his people ſpecial ſervice, in that place, which Shebna formerly had held. So Num. 12.7. Pſal. 78.70. Phil. 1.1. Tit. 1.1.

Eliakim] See 2 King. 18.18,26,37. Chap. 36.3. & 37.2. the name well ſuiteth with the perſon. For Eliakim importeth one raiſed, or ſetled, by God: as Jehojakim, alſo, doth the ſame. See Jer. 22.18.

the ſon of Hilkiah] This is added, to diſtinguiſh him from others, that might be in thoſe times of the ſame name. For the name Eliakim, was among that people, not unuſual: as may appear, 2 King. 23.34. 2 Chr. 36.4. Neh. 12.41. Mat. 1. 13. Luk. 3.30. and it may well be alſo, becauſe his Father Hilkiah, was a man of ſome note.

Hilkiah] Heb. Hilkijahu; as Hannibal: or, Chilkijahu; as Charran, Act. 7.2. Of the form, ſee on Chap. 1.1. there are divers other found in Scripture of the ſame name, 1 Chr. 26. 11. Neh. 8. 4. among the reſt, the High-Prieſt, in Joſiahs reign, 1 Chr. 6.13. 2 Chr. 34.9. Ezr. 7. 1. and Jeremy the Prophets Father, Jer. 1. 1. The word ſignifies, Gods portion.

V. 21. And I will clothe him with thy robe] God by the Prophet directeth his ſpeech ſtill to Shebna, into whoſe office Eliakim was to ſucceed (as the promiſe, or prediction of the ſaving ſeed, is directed, not to the woman, but to the Devill, whom it was to deſtroy, Gen. 3.15. Heb. 2. 14.) to vex him the more; ambitious perſons hating ſuch as are to ſucceed them: eſpecially, when to be depoſed from their high, and great places; and not enduring to hear the name of a Succeſſor. See 2 Sam. 19. 13. & 20.9,10.

thy robe] Or, coat: as Gen. 37.3,31,32. ſuch a rich, and goodly robe, or, coat, as thou now weareſt, correſpondent to thy place. So Gen. 41.42. Eſt. 6.8. & 8.15. Dan. 5.29. See on ver. 17.

and ſtrengthen him with thy girdle] I will give him that power and authority, that thou now haſt: or, I will not only put him in thy place; but I will confirm him alſo, and ſtrengthen him in it, ver. 23. the girdle, an emblem of power. See Chap. 11.5. & 23.10. & 45.1,5. Prov. 31.17. Though an alluſion, as ſome not improbably conjecture, to ſuch rich, as robes before; ſo girdling here; as great men uſed to wear, Exod. 28. 39,40. Rev. 1.13. Howbeit, I ſuppoſe they go too far, who because ſpecial mention is made of Aarons robe, or, coat rather, (for ſo the word properly ſignifies, both here, and there) and girdle, or belt, Exod. 28.4,39. would hence infer, that Shebna now was, and Eliakim was to be, High-Prieſt; ſubſtituted in his place by Ezekiah, as Zadok, in the place of Abiathar by Solomon, 1 King. 2.27,35. But of this, ſee on ver. 15.

girdle] Or, belt. Which may well be deemed to come from thence, by no unuſual change of a letter; it is ſo called in Hebrew; becauſe the belly is girt in with it.

and I will commit thy government into his hand] Heb. I will give: as Job 9.24. This we find effected afterward in the ſtory. For as Shebna is ſaid to have been over the houſe here, verſ. 15. ſo is Eliakim ſaid to be afterward in that office, 2 King.18.18. Chap.36.3. & 37.2. God, ſay the Jewiſh-Writers, revealed his treacheries, and covert carriage, to Eſay; by Eſay to Ezekiah, who thereupon put him beſide his place; and placed Eliakim therein.

in his hand] Or, hands; for the word is collective: as Prov.31.20. a metaphor from a coach-man, or chariot-man, in whoſe hands the reins are, that guide and rule the horſes that draw in the chariot, or coach, Jam.3.3. or, from a pilot, that ſitting at the ſtern, with the helm in his hand, thereby ſteereth the ſhip which way he pleaſeth, Jam.3.2. So Pſal. 78.72.

and he ſhall be a father to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and to the houſe of Judah] Heb. for a father; that is, a father, ſimply: as Gen.17.4. or, inſtead of a father; as a father, Judg. 17.10. & 18.19. 2 Sam.7.14. As in regard of his command, and the eminency of his place; as all Rulers are ſtyled Fathers, Exod.20.12. Num.36.1. 2 King.5.13. ſo more eſpecially, in regard of his fatherly care of them, and tender affection towards them: a fit title for a good governour. See 2 Sam. 23.17. & 24.17. 2 Chr. 30. 18, 22. Neh.2.10. & 5.8, 13-19. The Perſians uſed to ſay, of three of their Kings, that Darius was a trader, Cambiſes, a maſter; Cyrus, a father: Herodote, lib.3. But they ſtrain the ſtyle here too far, who would hence infer, that he muſt needs be High-Prieſt. For who elſe ſhould be father, ſay they, to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem: but either the High-Prieſt, or the King? For they might have conſidered, what the Rabbine on this place ſuggeſteth; to wit, Joſephs ſpeech of himſelf, that God had made him a father to Pharaoh, and Lord of all his houſe, and a Ruler throughout all the land of Egypt, Gen.45.8. See Pſal. 105. 20, 21. The words yet ſhew, as thoſe of Joſeph, that the power of the place was not confined to the family, or houſhold ſervants only; but was extended alſo unto other the Kings Subjects. See 2 King. 15.5. Of Jeruſalem and Judah, ſee on Chap.1.1.

Inhabitants] Heb. Inhabitant: as Chap.5.3.

the houſe of Judah] As, the houſe of Jacob, Chap.2.5. and, the houſe of Iſrael, and the houſe of Judah, Jer.5.11. & 11. 10, 17. not to the Kings houſe only, but to the whole body of the people, that were as one joynt family: ſo all the faithfull make one family, Gal.6.10. Eph.2.19. & 3.14, 15.

V. 22. And the key of the houſe of David will I lay upon his ſhoulder] Hence it appears, that Eliakim now, as Shebna before, was to be Controller, or High-Steward of the Kings houſe, as one of the Jewiſh Commenters on this place, well obſerveth; and not High-Prieſt, as ſome other of them, groundleſly affirm, whom yet ſome of ours follow; and much leſſe one, that bare both offices; which yet the Chaldee Paraphraſt aſſerts. It is as if he had ſaid, I will commit unto him, the whole charge and government of the Kings houſe; ſo as there ſhall not be done any thing there, in one kind, or other, without him; nor ſhall any controll him in what he doth, Gen.40.41, 44. Pſal.105.21, 22.

the key] An emblem of power and authority: becauſe none can come into a place, or go out, without the will and leave of him, that hath the command of the key: and when a man therefore comes to take poſſeſſion of an houſe, the key is wont to be given him. When rendition of a City, Town, or Caſtle, is made, the keys are commonly delivered. See Matth. 16.19. Rev.1.18. & 3.7. & 9. 1. & 20.1, 3. key, collectively, for keys, Matth.16.19. as after, ſhoulder, for ſhoulders. Some ſuppoſe, that the party who bare this office, either carried a key himſelf; or, had one of gold carried by ſome other before him, as Maces before ſome in high place at Court, are with us. Others, that he had the figure of a key woven into, or faſtened unto, or embroidered upon his upper garment, as an enſign of his office. But theſe are but ſurmiſes, and groundleſs conjectures.

will I lay] Or, put. Heb. give: as ver. 21. Jer. 23.40. Ezek.37.7, 14, 17.

upon his ſhoulder] See on Chap.9.6.

ſo he ſhall open, and none ſhall ſhut; and he ſhall ſhut, and none ſhall open] The effect of this his authority in the execution of his place. Heb. and he ſhall, &c. which may well be rendred; that he may open, or, ſo that he ſhall open, and none ſhall ſhut, &c. as Chap.10.19. & 11.3. & 19.12. A form of ſpeech borrowed from the office of thoſe, who having the keys of city, or caſtle, committed unto them, the gates thereof cannot be opened, or ſhut, without their direction, and ſpecial order from them. The meaning is, that he ſhall have power to diſpoſe of matters, for the government of the royal palace, and execution of juriſdiction, appertaining to his place, without let, and reſtraint, or power in any other to reverſe what he doth. So Rev.3.7. Job 12.14. and the like in ſome kind, Matth.16. 19. & 18. 18. The Rabbines gloſſe falls ſhort, who expounds it, that he ſhall be of counſell to Ezekiah, who ſhould do nothing without, or, but by his advice. For the place that Eliakim was to poſſeſſe, was an office diſtinct from the place of a Counſellor. See 2 Chron. 26. 21.

V. 23. And I will faſten him as a nail, in a ſure place] To the power of executing what belonged unto his place, (leſt the due, and impartial execution of his duty therein, might prove prejudicial unto him) God further here promiſeth ſuch an eſtabliſhment of him in it, that he ſhould be ſure to ſit faſt; and be able, not only to diſcharge his place, ſo as ſhould be both for the Kings honour, and the publike welfare; but to ſupport alſo thoſe in inferiour offices, whether ſtrangers, or of kin to him, that ſhould have dependance upon him: contrary to that, which of Shebna is threatned, ver.25.

as a nail] The note of ſimilitude is ſuppoſed to be wanting: as Job 11.12. Pſal.11.1. Chap.21.8. Yet I ſuppoſe the text may well be rendred without it; I will faſten him a nail, or, a pin, in a firm place: as, to give us a nail, or, a pin, in his holy place, Ezr.9.8. Becauſe the verb faſten, here uſed, is ſometime applyed to the pitching of tents, Gen.31.25. Some Interpreters therefore would have this word rendred, not a nail, but a ſtake; ſuppoſing ſuch a ſtake, or poſt, here intended, as being pight in the midſt of a tent; beſides that many neceſſaries may be hanged on it, ſupports the whole pavilion. True it is, that the word is alſo oft found uſed about tents; but it then ſignifies not ſuch a poſt, or ſtake, as ſupports it; but ſuch an iron nayl, or woodden pin, or ſhort ſtake, (if ye pleaſe ſo to term it) as the cords of a tent are wont to be faſtened unto, Chap.33.20. & 54.2. as appeareth by the ſtory of Jael, Judg. 4.21, 22. & 5.26. But here the alluſion is rather to ſuch a nayl, or pin, as is faſtened ſome where about the houſe, in the wall, to hang ſuch utenſils upon, as are of ordinary uſe in the houſe; that they may not be caſt about, and ſo wronged; but may there be ſafe out of harms way, as we ſay, and at hand, when occaſion is to make uſe of them, Ezek.15.3.

in a ſure place] That he may not be, either ſhaken, or wrenched out of it, Eccl.12.11. as thou ſhalt be, ver 25. Heb. in a faithful place, Num.12.7. 1 Sam.2.35. ſuch a place, as will not fail, but hold faſt; as a faithful man, one that fails not the truſt repoſed in him; but is true and firm to them that confide in him, Deut.7.9. Prov.14.5. & 25.13. Prov. 31. 11. One of the Hebrew Commenters ſuppoſeth a trajection in the words, which he would have therefore to be thus read, or rendred, I will faſten him a ſure nail in the place. But, beſides that the genders agree not; (for the one is maſculine, the other feminine; and the Hebrew points carry the conſtruction the other way:) the repetition of the ſame form of ſpeech, ver.25. doth evidently refute it. See Zach.10.4. and he ſhall be for a glorious throne to his fathers houſe] As thou waſt a ſhame to thy Lords houſe; ſo ſhall he be a grace, and an honour, not to his Lords houſe alone; but to his fathers houſe too.

for a glorious throne] That is, as a glorious throne; or ſimply, a glorious throne: as, for a father, ver.22. for a glorious crown, and, for a goodly diadem, Chap. 28. 5. Heb. a throne of glory: as 1 Sam.2.8. Jer.17.12. Some would have it read, to the throne a glory: underſtanding it of the Kings throne, and conſequently, of the King; that he ſhould be an honour to him, by whom he had been to that height of honour advanced. But the points in the original, and frame of the context, will not eaſily admit it.

to his fathers houſe] His prudent and upright carriage, ſhall make his whole ſtock and kindred, the whole family he came of, honourable; as was Joſephs the like to his, Gen. 47. 5, 6. 11. Some extend the word family here, to the whole Tribe of Judah, called the houſe of Judah, ver.21. but the term here uſed, ſeems narrower here, then that there: and the words following, run rather the former way.

V. 24. And they ſhall hang upon him all the glory of his Fathers houſe, the of-ſpring, and the iſſue] All his kindred and allies, with their iſſue, as well ſmall, as great, ſhall partake of his honour, in one employment, or other. So I rather take it, then, as ſome other, who expound it of the general care, that Eliakim ſhould have in the execution of his office, of doing right to, and relieving, as well the mean, as the mighty, Exod.23.2. Deut.16.18, 17. 2 Chr.19.6, 7. Pſal.72.2, 4, 13, 14. & 82.3, 4.

they ſhall hang upon him] they ſhall hang; that is, there ſhall be hanged, as things are wont to be hanged on a pin, or nail; (for the verb is here taken indefinitely. See verſ. 19.) upon him; or, upon it: in alluſion to the nail, or pin, before mentioned, ver.23. they ſhall have, all of them, dependance upon him.

all the glory of his fathers houſe] Either, the whole family, which by his means ſhould become honourable; See Chap. 4.5. or, thoſe among them, that are of ſome note, otherwiſe, for wealth, wiſdome, or the like; as Chap.10.16,18. oppoſed to the little ones, afterward mentioned.

the off ſpring, and the iſſue] The former of theſe words, ſignifies properly, plants, that grow up out of the ground, Chap. 34.1. & 42.5. or, branches, that ſprout, or ſpring out from a root, ſtock, or ſtem, Chap. 44. 3,4. and in the next place, children, or iſſue, Job 5.25. & 21.8. & 27.14. & 31. 8. Chap. 61.9. & 65. 23. ſo called, becauſe they iſſue, and proceed from the bowels of their parents, of thoſe, that breed and bear them, Chap. 48.19. The latter, in this ſence, no where elſe found; but uſed for excrements, Ezek. 4. 15. is deemed to come from a root of the ſame notion with the former; from whence alſo are words derived, that ſignifie the ſame thing, Chap.4.4. Ezek.4.12. ſo termed alſo, becauſe they come out of mans body, Deut.23.14. but this latter root ſeems to imply a more abundant iſſue, flowing out, as ſtreams of water, from a fountain; becauſe it hath neer affinity with another term, that ſignifies ſuch abundance, Deut. 33.19. Job 22. 11. Chap.60 6. And becauſe the former word is of a maſculine form, the latter, of a feminine, Some of the Jewiſh Writers underſtand thereby, ſons and daughters: and becauſe it was before ſaid, that he ſhould be as a father to the houſe of Judah, ver.21: Some of them would have the people to be reputed, here, as his children; the men, his ſons; and the women, his daughters: but of that formerly. Other of them, with the Chaldee Paraphraſt, underſtand, ſons, and ſons ſons, or nephews, as that name properly ſignifies. But theſe are by other of them, not improbably, deemed niceties; ſuppoſing both words to ſignifie (as our Prophets manner is, to uſe oft variety of terms) but one and the ſame thing. For, as for that which a learned late Writer ſurmiſeth, that theſe two ſhould be the names of the keys, that Eliakim ſhould have the command of; the former, of the foregate, by which they went in and out, of the word, that ſignifies to go out: the other, of the back-gate, by which they went to the back-ſide; becauſe of that uſe of the word, Ezek.4.15. it is a conceit, ſo far fetcht, and ſo improbable, that it is ſtrange how it ſhould enter once into any judicious mans brains.

all veſſels of ſmall quantity] The Prophet proceeds in the forementioned metaphor, of nails, or, pins, on which, veſſels, inſtruments, and utenſils, eared ones eſpecially, as flagons, pots, cups, and the like, are wont to be hanged: and it may be deemed, that the copulative ſhould here be ſupplyed, which is oft omitted, as Chap.21.5. ver.6. and all veſſels, (or, utenſils; for the word is of a very large extent) of a ſmall ſize, as ſome, of little; or, leſs, uſe; as others: for the word is here put ſubſtantively: as Gen.44.20. 2 Chr. 34.30. and I ſuppoſe alſo comparatively: as Gen. 27. 15,42. And ſo this branch will not unfitly anſwer the former; he ſhall ſupport, and bear up, with honour and credit, not thoſe alone of his ſtock, that are perſons of note, and parts, fit for more honourable employments, together with thoſe, that are of their iſſue, and partake therefore with them, in their honours; but even thoſe alſo of them, that are of meaner parts, and leſſe eſteem, who yet, in regard of their alliance to him, ſhould have reſpect given them, and have ſuch employments aſſigned them, as they were found to be fit for. God, the more to ſpight Shebna, declares, how not Eliakim himſelf alone, but his whole kindred ſhould be graced with him. Some expound the words, of the great care that Eliakim ſhould have in his place, of ſecuring, even the meaner ſort of people; and not their perſons only, but their goods, and chattels alſo, even to the meaneſt of them. But the former I take to be the genuine ſenſe of the place.

from the veſſels of cups, even to the veſſels of flagons] This amplification continued in the former ſimilitude, ſeems to argue both the great power, and the fixed firmneſs, that Eliakim ſhould be poſſeſſed of in his place. Even in the meaneſt mens houſes; but in great mens much more, there are many pins and hooks of ſeveral ſorts, to hang utenſils, pots, and cups, of ſeveral ſizes, and weight, on; and they are to be chary of hanging over many on the ſame hook, or pin, for fear of looſening, or breaking it. But this pin ſhould be ſo ſtrong, and ſo well faſtened withal, that it ſhould be able, without fear of danger, either to it ſelf, or the things hanged on it, to bear all the veſſels, or utenſils in the houſe, though never ſo many, of ſeveral ſize, weight, and uſe. Some following the Chaldee Paraphraſt, would have the meaning to be, that all thoſe that had any ſacred employment in the Sanctuary; as well the Prieſts, that ſacrificed, as the Levites that ſang, and played on Inſtruments, ſhould have their dependance upon Eliakim; ſuppoſing him to be High-Prieſt. Others, that all the Offices in the Kings Court, as well the higher, as the lower alſo, ſhould be at his diſpoſal. And others again, that there ſhould be nothing in the Kings houſe, or palace, that ſhould not be under his power. But the tenour of the context ſeems to run another way, and to admit none of theſe.

from the veſſels of cups] veſſels of cups; that is, cups, ſimply, ſaith one: as, an inſtrument of viol, (the very term here uſed) for, a viol, ſimply, Pſal.71.22. or, veſſels of cups, for ſeveral kinds, or, ſorts of cups, or, bowls; So the Jewiſh Commenter: becauſe there were, ſaith he, divers ſorts of them, different as well for matter, as for ſize. The word is not above twice found elſewhere in Scripture, Cant.7.2. Where the ſpouſes navel, is likened to a round bowl, or goblet, repleniſhed with liquor. Whence it is with good probability deemed, that the word comes from the ſame root with that, which is uſed, for a target, or ſhield. Of which, ſee on ver 6. in regard that the one did, in form, for roundneſſe at leaſt, reſemble the other: and Exod.24.6. where it is ſaid, that Moſes received into baſons, the blood of the beaſts, or bullocks, ſlain, for ſacrifice, at mount Sinai. Whereby it appears, that it was a veſſel, bowl, or baſon of ſome large ſize, and of ſome good competent capacity: thoſe uſed at table, were, in likelihood, of gold, as the Rabbine here gueſſeth, in great mens houſes, or of ſilver, at leaſt; and are mentioned here, as the principal. For thoſe uſed at the altar of burnt offerings, might be of braſſe, Exod.27.19. & 38.3. and ſo might the like for other uſes, in private houſes: but the former ſort ſeems to be aymed at in this place.

even unto] Heb. and unto: as Chap.1.6.

the veſſels of flagons] Or, ſorts: as before; and for the cauſe there mentioned. The word, firſt, and properly, ſignifies a bottel: ſuch, as they uſed commonly, to carry, or keep wine in, 1 Sam.1.24. & 10.3. and 25.18. 2 Sam. 16.1. Jer. 13.12. they were uſually of earthen ſtuff, Ch.30.14. Jer.19. 1,10. & 48. 12. and therefore of no great value, Lam. 4. 2. put therefore here, for perſons of the loweſt rank, and leaſt eſteem: as the bowls before, for men of ſome prime note, and repute. The one anſwering to the honourable ones, ſpoken of before, the other to the ſmall ones. Howbeit, becauſe the ſame word is uſed alſo, for an Inſtrument of muſick, a viol; ſo called, becauſe it is bellied, ſomewhat like a bottel, of which, ſee on Chap.5.12. Hence, ſome would have it rendred, the inſtruments of viols; underſtanding it of muſical inſtruments: and the Rabbines moſt of them run this way, thoſe eſpecially, that dream of Eliakims High-Prieſt-ſhip; as alſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and the old Latine. But this agreeth with the former, as harp, and harrow.

V. 25. In that day, ſaith the Lord of hoſts] In this laſt paſſage, wherewith the latter part of this Prophecy concerning Shebna is concluded; the Prophet returneth to relate, as from God, the ruine now, not of him alone; but of all thoſe, that had dependance upon him.

in that day] At that time: as ver. 20.

ſhall the nail that is faſtened in the ſure place, be removed] Or, ſhall the pin (as ver. 23.) that is faſtened in a ſure place, (for there is no article here, more then there) remove: as Zach. 14.4. Chap. 54.10. or, depart: as Numb. 14.44. Joſh. 1. 8. Judg.6.13. Chap.59.21. The Prophet reſumeth again the former ſimilitude from a pin, or nayl, driven into a wall, to hang ſome weighty thing on. To ſuch an one ſurely faſtened, that it might be able to hold whatſoever was hung on it, he compared Eliakim before, that was to be Shebna's Succeſſor; but Shebna, now, to ſuch a pin, or, nail; as though it might ſeem to be ſurely riveted into the poſt, or wall, yet ſhould fail, and fall out of its place, when it came to the ſtreſs; and not be able to bear, or hold up that, that was hanged on it. For they are very far wide, that underſtand this of Eliakim, that he alſo ſhould be removed, and taken away, as was Joſias, 2 King.23.26,29. for the ſins of the people: as alſo thoſe, that refer this to the Babylonian deportation, and expound it of the Prieſthood, that ſeemed then to have failed, Hoſ. 3. 4.

in a ſure place] As he accounted himſelf to be, when he hewed him out his ſepulchre, ver.23. as making no queſtion but to live, and dye there; and to hold his place, and ſtate, to his end: as Job 29.18.

and be cut down, and fall] See Chap.10.33. & 14.12.

and the burden that was upon it, ſhall be cut off] As he compared Shebna to a pin, or, a nail; ſo his favourites, and his dependants, ſuch as reſted, and relyed on him, in regard of his power, and place, (whether thoſe of his family, or thoſe of his faction) to ſome weight of bottels, or other utenſils, that hanging upon ſuch a pin, or nail, muſt needs, when that fails, and falls, fall together with it; and being brittle ware, break to pieces. So Chap.31.3.

For the Lord hath ſpoken it] The Prophets uſual cloſe. See Chap. 21.17.

CHAP. XXIII.

Verſ. 1. THe burden of Tyre] Of Burden, ſee Chap. 13. 1. Tyre, the place, which this Prophecy concerns, was a famous port, and mart-Town, in Phenicia, the lower part of Syria; from which that whole Country is ſuppoſed to have been ſo termed, (ſee on Chap.7.1.) lying upon the midland-ſea, and ſituate like Venice, within the ſea, Ezek.26. 5. & 27.3,4. It is in Hebrew called Tſor, which ſometime ſignifies a rock, Ezek.3.9. becauſe it was built upon a rock, Ezek.26.4,14. and in that regard very ſtrong, Joſh.19.29. in Syriack Tſur, whence Suria, and Syria: but by the Greeks, turning that firſt double letter into a ſingle T, Τύρος, whence the Latine, Tyrus, and our Tyre; and by the Latines again, changing it into a ſingle S, ſometime Sarra. See the like Prophecies againſt this Town, and State, Jer.25. 22. & 47.4. Ezek.26-28. Amos 2.9. Zach.9.2,4. denounced againſt it, among other their exceſſes, for their inſolent and injurious carriages towards Gods people, their neighbours, the Jews, Ezek.26.2. & 28. 24. Joel 3.4.

Howl, ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh] The Prophet beginneth his Sermon againſt Tyre, with a ſummons of ſuch as had trade with her, and were maintained by her, to mourn for her, or over her, in regard of her ruine.

Howl] Make a grievous lamentation, Chap.13.6. ver.14.

ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh] Either the ſhips themſelves; as by a rhetorical compellation, the ſenſeleſſe creatures are ſometime called to mourn, Chap.14.31. and ſaid ſo to do, Lam.1.4. implying what they would do, were they ſenſible of ſuch occurrents, whereby ſo much detriment accrues unto them. See Chap.24.7. or, the ſhips, put for thoſe that are employed about them, and trade in them; who loſing, and miſſing their former trade, with her, and gain that thereby they gat, ſhould make grievous moan for Tyres fall, as being either wholly undone, or much endammaged thereby, Ezek.27.29-32. Rev.18.11-19.

of Tarſhiſh] That trade there, Ezek. 27. 12, 25. either of Tarteſſus in Spain; or of Cilicia; whoſe chief port Town Tarſus was; (the Cilicians being anciently maſters of thoſe midland-ſeas; as Strabo, l.14. and Solinus, cap. 41.) or, of the main ocean, or great ſea, from the one of thoſe countries, in proceſſe of time, generally ſo termed; (as Pontus, with the Latines, from the like) or, from the colour of the ſtone called Tharſhis, Exod.28.20. Ezek.1.16. & 10.9. as ſome: but the ſtone, in more likelihood, had its name from the Sea. See on Chap.2.16.

for it is laid waſte] When, or, by whom, this calamity befell Tyre, is much queſtioned amongſt Interpreters. The moſt draw it down to Nebuchadnezzars dayes, by whom they ſuppoſe it to have been effected, Jer.47.4. Ezek.26.7. Joſeph againſt Apion, lib. 1. though other of them ſay, that it then indeed began; but was not fully compleated untill Alexanders time, by whom, after a long ſiege, having been taken with much difficulty, it was utterly ſacked, and ruined. See hereof, Diodore, lib.17. Arrian, lib.2. Plutarch, in Alexanders life, & Curtius, lib.4. Yet ſome late Writers ſuppoſe, that what Eſay here foretold, was effected and fulfilled by the Aſſyrian Kings of thoſe times, in which the Prophet himſelf lived; to wit, by Salmaneſer, and Sennacherib. To which purpoſe, they alledge an ancient record out of the writings of one Menander, an Epheſian, cited by Joſeph the Jew, in his antiquities, l.9. c.14. wherein it is related, that under Eluleus (or, as Some out of Ruffinus read it, Eliſeus) King of Tyre, the King of Aſſyria having ſubdued moſt of Phenicia, and having taken Sidon, and old-Tyre, ſet upon Tyre it ſelf too; which alone ſtood out againſt him; and ſo beſet them, that they could come by no freſh water, for the ſpace of five year, but what, by digging within the city, they got out of Wells. Now this, ſaith Joſeph, was done, by Salmaneſer; whoſe attempts againſt it, it is not improbable, that both Sargon, and Sennacherib, might after purſue.

it] That is, Tyre; whom this Prophecy concerns.

laid waſte] Heb. waſted, or, ſpoyled, Pſal.17.9. Chap.33.1. Obad.5. waſted, or, ſpoyled, for, to be waſted, or, ſpoyled, ſay ſome: as Pſal. 137.8. deſtroyed, for, to be deſtroyed: but this nicety here needs not. It is the manner of the Prophets, and their common language, to ſpeak of things to come, as already done. So Babylon is fallen, Chap.21.9. Rev.18.2.

ſo that there is no houſe] Heb. from houſe, or, from an houſe; that is, ſo, ſay ſome, that there is not an houſe left ſtanding in her, Ezek.26.4,14. Others, no place of receit, or harbour, Job.39.6. Pſal.104,17. or, from being an houſe; that is, from being a city: houſe, for, city; as Beth-ſhemeſh, for Kirheres: the houſe of the ſun, for, the city of the ſun. See Chap. 16.7. her wonted trading and ſtate, thereby upheld, being gone. Of the phraſe, ſee on Chap.7.8. & 17.1. Thus the moſt, which in the latter ſenſe may import no more, then what might by thoſe Aſſyrian Kings well be accompliſhed. Some late Writers, in expoſition of this clauſe, go another way, expounding the words, from houſe; from her domeſticks, thoſe that are of her own houſe, is ſhe ſpoiled; according to that, Mic. 7.6. Matth.10.36. and ſo, ſay they, it came to paſſe; when the State of Tyre, being much weakned by long warrs between them and the Perſians, their ſlaves joyned in a conſpiracy, ſurprized the city, ſlew their maſters, poſſeſſed themſelves of their wives, and goods, and ſet up ſuch a King as themſelves pleaſed, Juſtine, lib.18. But neither doth it appear, at what time this ſhould be done; nor is it likely to be that, that the Prophet here pointed at; and the text ſounds rather the other way. See the next words.

no entring in] Or, nor entring in; or, nor going, to wit, In, or out. For the copulative wanting, as Pſal. 110. 3. would be ſupplyed: as Hoſ. 9. 11. Heb. from going: as 1 Sam. 25. 26, 33. or, from entring: as Chap.24.10. a place parallel to this, every houſe is ſhut up, from entring, or, going; that is, ſo as none doth, or can go in, or out. The meaning is, either Tyre is not frequented with repair of merchants, and traders, that paſs to and fro, her wonted traffick being cut off, or decayed: or, it is ſo beſet, and begirt by the enemy, that there can be no repair to it, or paſſage for it, or, from it, with ſafety. For it ſeems too forced a conſtruction that ſome here give, to carry on their fore-mentioned expoſition, from coming; that is, from men of coming: as wine, for, a man of wine, a wine-bibber, Prov.20.1. wiſdome, for, a man of wiſdom; a wiſe man, Mic. 6.9. men of coming, ſtrangers: as, the come Governour, Dan.9. 26. the Governour ſtranger: ſo the meaning ſhould be, Tyre is to be waſted by her own houſhold-ſervants, her ſlaves; and by ſtrangers, the Chaldeans, Ezek.28.7. But neither is any ſuch phraſe found in Scripture; men of coming, for, ſtrangers: nor is the word of coming, or, going, here a noun, but a verb: and beſides, that it ſeems ſomewhat improbable, that by theſe two terms, the Prophet ſhould deſcribe two divers manners of devaſtation, by two ſeveral ſorts of perſons, at two ſeveral times, far diſtant the one from the other; the tenour of the text, according to the common phraſe of Scripture, whereof the Jewiſh Commenters, upon the place, afford examples enow, from 1 Sam. 15. 23. 1 King.15.13. Ezek. 16. 41. to which many more alſo might be added: the current of the context runs fairly, and familiarly, the former way.

from the land of Chittim] As Tarſhiſh, ſo Chittim, was the name, at firſt, of one of Javans ſons, Gen. 10. 4. from whom thoſe lands, or countries, were afterward called, which by him, or his poſterity, were poſſeſſed. Now becauſe it is ſaid, that among Japhets, or Javans iſſue, the Iles of the Nations were divided, Gen.10.5. Hence it is ſuppoſed, that under the name of Chittim, are comprized ſome of the maritine coaſts, bordering upon the Eaſtern parts of the Midland-ſea, as well on the European, as on the Aſian ſide, and of the Iles that are therein. This they ſurmiſe, the rather, in regard of the ancient names of divers places, in thoſe parts, as Cittium, a Town in Cyprus, whence Zeno the Philoſopher was, Strabo, lib.14. Joſeph, antiquities, l.1. c.7. & Pliny, l.5. c.31. Cyteum in Candy, Pliny, l.4. c.12. the Ceteans, a people ſituate between the Cilicians, and the Pelaſgians, Strabo, l.13. ſo called, as ſome think, from the river Cetis; which they lye upon, Pliny, l.5. cap. 20. or, from Cetis, whether a town, or Province in Cilicia, of which Ptolomy, l.5. nor want they, that draw in hither, ſome parts, at leaſt, of Achaia, and Macedonia; called anciently Macetia, as Heſychius informs us; and the Inhabitants thereof Macetians, as Steven the Byzantine, out of Heraclides, as alſo part of Italy; becauſe Suidas, out of ſome old Author, reporteth, that Telephus the ſon of Hercules, brought ſome Cetians out of Aſia, and placed them in Italy. Yet ſome there are, that would confine Chittim to the Ilands about Italy, in the utter, or Weſtern parts of the Midland ſea; as Tarſhiſh, to thoſe about Greece, in the inner, or Eaſtern parts of it: which to me ſeems not ſo probable. See Num.24.24. Dan.11.30. 1 Maccab.1.1. & 8.5. Nor is it unlikely, but that thoſe of Chittims poſterity, were diſperſed into divers of thoſe forementioned places: out of which Merchants had traffick with Tyre. But this branch of the verſe, concerning Chittim, is by divers diverſly expounded. For ſome refer it to the words before-going: and of theſe, ſome to the firſt word, is waſted, or ſpoyled from the land of Chittim; that is, ſay ſome of them, from Cilicia, by which way Alexander brake into the Eaſtern parts; whereof, yet, I find no particular mention, in the ſtories of thoſe times. Others, from Macedonia, whereof Alexander was King, and from whence, at firſt, he ſet forth: and ſo the Author of the Maccabees conſtantly takes it; whatſoever a learned Writer in his Annotations, affirms, in the one place, by his own verſion, croſſing himſelf in the other: and theſe both underſtand the place of that devaſtation, that by Alexander, and his forces, befell Tyre. But other joyn this paſſage to the words next before-going, thus rendring them, ſo that there is no entring, or coming, in from Chittim; that is, ſo that the Merchants, who had wont from thoſe parts to repair to Tyre, can now finde no entrance thither. Thus they, that annex it to the former words. But moſt refer it to the branch following, reading the text; from the land of Chittim, it is revealed to them] Which yet is diverſly expounded. Some, from the Merchants of Chittim, that are neerer at hand, is the overthrow of Tyre reported to thoſe of Tarſhiſh, that are further off. Others, by the Merchants of Chittim, trading to Babylon, the Babylonians have been informed of the wealth of Tyre, and incited to invade it: or, the Tyrians have by them been informed of the Babylonians evill purpoſes againſt them. Others, from the land of Chittim it appears to them: as Chap. 40. 1. & 56. 1. or, it ſhall fall ſuddenly upon them, to wit, the Tyrians; to them, for, on them: as Pſal. 9. 4. Exod. 15. 15. or, as others, on it; or, on her, to wit, Tyre: as Job 10. 23. but the pronoun is in both places maſculine. Others, laſtly, from the land of Chittim is the foundation diſcovered, or, laid bare, with them. The word, foundation, ſupplyed, as it is found compleat, Ezek. 13. 14. Mic. 1. 6. for, as for thoſe, that following the old Greek, render it, it is, or, ſhe is led captive, or, gone into captivity: or, more generally, it is removed, or, ſhe is gone: as the word is uſed, Chap. 38. 12. they take no notice of the laſt particle, unto him, or, unto them; (for it may ſignifie either: as Chap. 53. 8.) which yet is not here ſuperfluous. Amids this great variety, I encline to thoſe, that joyn thoſe words, from the land of Chittim, with the next before them, and underſtand the paſſage of all harbour in Tyre, or entrance into it, denyed unto ſuch as had wont to have recourſe thither: to which is added, it is revealed to them, to wit, to thoſe that formerly traded with her; the report is come to them, how it fareth with her; that ſhe is ſacked and ſpoyled, and there is, therefore, nothing for them to do there: and the whole paſſage may, as I conceive, be, not amiſſe, thus rendred, taking the initial particle in a double notion: as Jer. 4. 30. & 12. 5. (of which, ſee on Chap. 18. 3.) for that ſhe (Tyre) is ſpoyled, ſo that there is no houſe, nor coming in for thoſe from Chittim, is made known to them: as Chap. 22. 14. Dan. 10. 1. So the words run ſmoothly without rub; and many needleſſe difficulties are taken off, wherein moſt of the other readings received, do neceſſarily entangle us. I ſhall add only, what one of the Jewiſh Commenters hath on this place; becauſe I find it ſeconded by a man of great note; to wit, that by the Chittim, or Chittijim, as they are termed, verſ. 12. are meant the Chuthei, a people inhabiting ſome part of Suſiana, to the Eaſt of Babylon, called alſo by the Greeks, Ciſſia. So the meaning ſhould be, from Chaldea, and the parts adjacent ſhall this evil befall them. But this I ſhall leave to the judgment of others.

V. 2. Be ſtill, ye Inhabitants of the Ile] It is ſomewhat doubtful whom the Prophet here either ſpeaks of, or ſpeaks unto. Moſt Interpreters underſtand by the Ile here mentioned, Tyre it ſelf; ſo called, becauſe it ſtood within the Sea, environed round about with it, Ezek. 27. 3, 4. & 28. 2. untill by Alexander it was adjoyned to the Continent: as Pliny, lib. 5. c. 19. The Inhabitants of Tyre, therefore, ſay ſome, are here adviſed to be quiet, and not trouble themſelves, about courſes to be taken for the defence of their city; ſince, that all would be to no purpoſe. See the like, Jer. 8. 14. Pſal. 4. 4. But this ſeems not to ſuit well with the main current of the context, running all along in the Prophetical ſtrain, in ſpeaking of things to come, as paſt and done; and of Tyre, as already, either ſpoiled, or deſtroyed: and others therefore, on better ground, ſuppoſe, that the Tyrians are here called upon, (as were her merchants before) to mourn for her, and to be ſilent; that is, to leave their boaſting of the ſtate and wealth of their city, and their rioting and revelling, that formerly they had uſed, ver. 7-9. (ſee the like, Chap. 22. 2, 13.) and to ſit down in ſilence after the manner of mourners, Job 2. 8, 13. Chap. 47. 5. Jer. 8. 14. Lam. 3. 28. and this I ſuppoſe to be the genuine meaning of the words. Yet ſome other, among whom, one of the Jewiſh Commenters, on the place, ſuppoſe the word, Ile, to be taken here collectively; Ile, for Ilands: as ox, and horſe, and aſſe; for oxen, and horſes, and aſſes, Gen. 32. 5. 2 King. 1. 10. Chap. 1. 3. and the place to be underſtood of thoſe, who dwelling in Sea-towns, or Ilands, had trading with Tyre; either ſaid here, to ſit down, and give over their trade; the city, with which their chief traffick was, being deſtroyed. For they read the words, not imperatively; but enunciatively; not, as adviſing them what they ſhould do: but as relating what they do; they are ſtill: or, as others, called upon, and adviſed to forbear going to Tyre, or looking any more after her, as the word is uſed, Ezek. 24. 17. or, willed to ſit down, and mourn with her, and for her, as thoſe, verſ. 1.

thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that paſſe over the ſea, have repleniſhed] Heb. merchant that paſſeth: as Gen. 23. 16. Prov. 31. 14. The Sidonians being merchants, and trading alſo by ſea, helpt to fill the mart at Tyre with their wares, being not far from her; and finding a good market for themſelves with her; though in Ezekiel, they are mentioned rather as her marriners, then as her merchants, Ezek. 26. 8. but they might well be both. Some read the words, the merchants of Zidon, that paſſe the ſea, and fill thee, O Tyre, are ſtill, alſo, or ſilent: ſupplying the verb from the former branch. For Tyre falling, Zidon being ſo neer it, and in ſome ſort, a joynt State with it, could not but fall with it. See on verſ. 4. but this Syntax ſeems over-forced.

that paſſe over the ſea] Or, as we uſe to ſpeak, that croſſe the Sea.

repleniſhed] Have haunted, and enriched; ſo Tyre ſpeaks in her pride, upon the fall of Jeruſalem, I ſhall be repleniſhed, Ezek. 26. 2. I ſhall grow great, and rich.

V. 3. And by great waters, the ſeed of Sihor, the harveſt of the river is her revenue] Tyre further deſcribed, as before. by her trade with Zidon, verſ. 2. ſo here, by her traffick with Egypt. See Ezek. 27. 7.

by great waters] By the midland-ſea; by which the wares of Egypt were conveyed unto Tyre, Pſal. 104. 25. & 107. 13. See Chap. 18. 1. and ſome therefore ſupply here, the word, came, or, was brought, thus reading the text, by great waters, came the ſeed of Shihor; it was brought unto her: and the reading ſeems not amiſſe. See the like defects, Jer. 51. 25. Behold, I come againſt thee, Pſal. 120. 7. I am, or, ſtand, or, plead, for peace. See ver. 5. Howbeit, the Jewiſh Writers ſuppoſe here a trajection in the text; and by great waters, underſtand the waters of Nilus, reading the words, the ſeed of Nilus, beſide thoſe great waters: as Chap. 32. 20. but the plainer reading ſeems the better.

the ſeed of Sihor] The grain of Egypt; and whatſoever elſe the land of Egypt, being watered by the river Nilus, did afford, as fine flax, paper, and the like. Of which, ſee on Chap. 19. 7, 9.

Shihor] Or, Shichor: as Achaz, and Achab. See on Chap. 1. 1. This Shihor, ſome great ones would have to be, not Nilus; but a petty river, or brook, that ran between Paleſtine and Egypt, termed ſometime, the brook, or, the river of the wilderneſſe, or plain, Amos 6. 14. the ſame they ſuppoſe, that by forraign Writers is called Rhinocolura; and the Greek ſometime ſo renders it; though that in thoſe Writers is the name not of a river, but of a town, ſituate indeed in the confines of Egypt and Syria, in a waſte place, not far from the Sea, ſo called, from the condition of thoſe that were firſt placed in it. For an Ethiopian King, having, as they report, ſometime ſubdued Egypt, and finding the Kingdome much peſtered with theeves and robbers, to rid the land of them, being loath yet to kill them, eſpecially, being ſo many, only cut off their noſes, and placed them in that Town, which there of purpoſe he built for them. So Strabo, lib. 16. Diodore, l. 1. c. 60. and Steven the Byzantine; Pliny alſo mentioneth it, l. 5. c. 13. and Ptolomy, l. 4. nor appears it, that this Town ſtood upon any river of note. For Diodore writes of it, that it had no good water neer it; nor was that very good, that they had from Wells ſunk within the city. Sihor therefore, (as this very place alone might ſuffice, were there no other argument to prove it) is no other then Nilus, as the old Latine alſo here renders it. For how abſurd a thing were it to imagine, that, either ſome ſorry rivulet, of which ſcarce any record, becauſe it lay on the skirts of the country, ſhould give the name to the whole Kingdome; as Twede to England: or, that the grain of Egypt ſhould be termed the ſeed of ſome ſuch petty brook, running along through waſte places, where ſcarce any tillage at all could be had? Beſide, that the ancient name, that the river Nilus was known by, intimates as much. For Diony the Geographer teſtifies, as alſo Pliny, l. 9. c. 5. that by the Ethiopians it was anciently called Siris; that is, as thoſe inform us, who are skilled in that language, according to their manner of forming words, Shikri, for Shichri; which comes very neer to the Hebrew Shihor, or Shichor. Whence alſo ſo many names in the Egyptian tongue, of Oſiris, Buſiris, Petoſiris, and the like: for an abſurd thing it is, as Euſtathius, on the Geographer, obſerves, to give Greek notations of Ethiopian, or Egyptian appellations. The Hebrew name Shichor, hath a notion of blackneſſe in it; as appears by the common uſe of the fountain, whence it ſprings, and other the iſſues of it, Job 30. 30. Levit. 13. 31, 37. Cant. 1. 5. & 5. 11. Lam. 4. 8. Zach. 6. 2, 6. and the colour of its water ſeems to have given the river that name. Whence alſo, the Greeks are deemed anciently to have given it the name of Egypt, (as Euſtathius obſerves, that Homer doth in his Odyſſes, l. 14.) and to the land from it, (which the ancient Writers called the gift of Nilus, as produced, all the lower part of it, by the inundation of the river, and the ſlime it brought down with it, and left there behind it, Herodote, l. 2. and Strabo, l. 1.) not from Egyptus, a meer figment of a man, ſuch another as Nileus; that ſhould give Nilus his name, Diodore, lib. 1. c. 63: but from the colour of the water, reſembling, not ſo much the Eagle, thence ſo called by the Latines, as the Vultur, termed Egypius in Greek. To which purpoſe, alſo, Euſtathius further informs us, that it was likewiſe upon the ſame ground, anciently by the Greeks, called Melas, which ſignifies black: and thence, by the Latines, in old time, Melo; as Feſtus, and Servius, on Virgil obſerve: ſo that both the preſent text, terming the Egyptian wares, either growing upon the banks of Nilus, or procured, and produced, by the water thereof, bateling the Egyptian ſoil, the ſeed, and harveſt of Shibor; as alſo the name, by the Ethiopians, given to the river; the very ſame, in a manner, with it; and the notation of the name concurring with thoſe, whereby the Greeks anciently ſtyled it; do all joyned together, ſtrongly evince Shibor to be no other then Nilus. All that can be objected againſt it, is this, that the Egyptian Shibor, or, the river of Egypt, is mentioned, as one of the limits of the land of promiſe, Num. 34. 5. Joſh. 13.3. & 15.4,47. 1 Chr.13.5. within compaſſe whereof the land of Egypt came not, nor did the Iſraelites ever poſſeſſe ſo far, as Nilus: To which may well be anſwered, firſt, that in like manner, is the river Euphrates recorded, as a limit of the ſame land, Gen. 15.18. Deut.1.7. & 11.24. Joſh.1.4. and yet read we not, that Gods people ever poſſeſſed, or inhabited, at leaſt, ſo far. Though of Solomon it is ſaid, that he reigned over all the Kings, from the river, (to wit, Euphrates: as Pſal. 72.8.) even unto the land of the Philiſtines, and to the border of Egypt, 2 Chr.9.26. they attained not to the full extent of the boundaries by God aſſigned them; partly, through their own negligence and cowardiſe, Judg.1.21,27-33. Pſal. 10.6. 34,35. and partly, through the juſt judgment of God, who for their tranſgreſſions and apoſtaſies, after much of it ſurprized, refuſed [illegible] put them into further poſſeſſion of it, Judg. 2.20-23. Hereunto may be added, that when Nilus is mentioned, as a boundary of the promiſed land, it is not ſo to be underſtood, as if the limits thereof reached as far as the main body of that river, or any branch of it, ran; (for then it ſhould take in the whole lower region of Egypt; which the river Nilus, as Pliny relateth, l.5. c.9. branching it ſelf into ſeveral channels, doth on either ſide, by her embraces determine) but any ſuch branch of that river, or ſtream, thence derived, as lay neereſt unto the land of Canaan, and bounded Egypt on that ſide. Now the neereſt main channel is that of Peluſium, as that of Canopus, the furtheſt: out of which a leſſer ſtream iſſuing, makes the ſea, or lake of Sirbonis, of a great length, and vaſt depth, dividing Egypt from the Edomites, that lay on the upper part of it, and the Philiſtines, that confined upon the lower: as Herodote, l. 3. Strabo, l. 24. Diodore, l.1. c.30. Pliny, l.5. c.13. from whence, as Leo the African, l.8. c.1. teſtifieth, by a narrow paſſage, the water thereof, through waſte places, finds out a way to the ſea: that which Brocard alſo, c.6. atteſteth, having been an eye-witneſſe of it: ſave that following the common errour, he would have this little gut, or gutter, to be that, which is in Scripture termed Sior, and the river of Egypt. So in Scripture, Nilus ſhould never be named; an obſcure rill, or drill of water, derived from it, inſtead of it, ſhould; which whether it be probable, let other deem. For howſoever the river without further addition, be, in way of emineny, uſed ſometime of Euphrates, Chap.7.20. Jer.2.19. as it is alſo of Nilus, Chap.19. 5. and in this verſe; yet the name of Euphrates, is withal, frequently mentioned, Gen. 2. 14. 2 King. 23.29. & 24.7. Jer.13.4. & 46.2. & 51.63. nor doth it ſeem to ſtand with reaſon to imagine, that Nilus, ſo famous, and ſo oft ſpoken of in Scripture; yet ſhould not, ſo much as once, be therein named.

the harveſt] The word harveſt, is here taken in a large ſenſe; for whatſoever, either ſpringing out of the ground, or from ſuch plants as grow on it, is for mans uſe wont to be taken, at certain times, from either. See on Chap.17.11. for they ſeem to cut out the text over-curiouſly, and needleſly to reſtrain the terms of it, who by ſeed, would have underſtood the flax alone; and by harveſt, the grain.

of the river] To wit, Shibor, or Nilus, before-mentioned. For the one branch ſpeaks the ſame, in effect, with the former: ſave that the one hath a glance, at the ſeed-time; and the other, at the harveſt: the river, for Nilus: as Ezek.29. 3,9. called more fully, the river of Egypt, Amos 8.8. & 9.5.

is her revenue] Or, was her revenue: Whatſoever Egypt, by help of her river could afford, it was brought, as commonly, and as plentifully to her, as if it had been, both ſowen, or planted, and reaped, or plucked on purpoſe for her uſe. The word is general, for all kind of encreaſe, of grain, fruits, or the like, Levit.23.39. & 25.22. Num.18.30. Deut. 14.22. & 22.9.

and ſhe is a mart of Nations] Or, ſhe was a trader with Nations. The word tranſlated mart, ſignifies properly, not a mart, or market; that is, a place of trade; but trade, or, traffick, or, merchandiſe it ſelf, ver.18. Prov. 3.14. & 31.18. Chap.45. 14. and ſome of the Hebrew Commenters, therefore, ſuppoſe a defect of a word to be ſupplyed, a miſtreſſe, or owner, of trade: as, defect cannot be numbred; defect, for, things of defect, or defective, Eccl.1.15. and ſpoyl, for, men, or maſters of ſpoil, ſpoylers, Judg.5.30. and fraud, for, men, or maſters of fraud, fraudulent perſons, Pſal. 109.2. and, prey, for, men, or maſters, of prey: ſuch as uſe to prey upon others, Prov.23. 28. ſo trade, for, a miſtreſſe, or owner of trade: and miſtreſs, or, owner of trade, for, a trader: as, a miſtreſſe, or, owner, of a familiar ſpirit, for, a witch, or, a great witch, Nah. 3. 4. And thus is Tyre termed, a trader of, or, for, or, to, or with, nations: (for it may be any of theſe ways rendred) becauſe ſhe had trading, not with one, or two, but abundance of ſeveral nations, far and neer, being, in regard of her ſituation, a moſt convenient place for them; and was therefore the greateſt mart of the known world, in thoſe dayes, for all manner of merchandiſe. Whereof, ſee at large, Ezek.27.4-25.

V. 4. Be thou aſhamed, O Zidon] The denunciations in this Prophecy, are directed, and darted, as well at, and againſt Zidon, as Tyre: as the like is done alſo, Jer.47.4. becauſe it was a neer neighbour to Tyre, and though it were not under the ſame government with it; (for it appears, that they had ſeverall Kings, Jer.27.2.) yet were they ſo linkt together in commerce and confederacy, that they ſeemed as one State; in regard whereof, we find them ſo often joyned in Scripture, Joſh.19.28,29. 2 Sam.24.6,7. 1 Chron.22.4. Ezra.3.7. Jer.25.22. Joel.3.4. Zach.6.1. Mat.11.11. & 15.23. Mar.3. 8. & 7.24,31. Luk.6.17. & 10.13. Act.12.20. and the fall of the one, therefore, the more principall eſpecially, muſt needs prove the overthrow of the other. Howbeit, Ezekiel hath a Sermon ſpecially directed apart unto, and againſt Zidon, Chap.28.20-24. ſevered from thoſe ſeverall ones, denounced againſt Tyre, Chap. 26. & 27. & 28.1-10. & verſ. 10-19.

Be aſhamed] Or, confounded. As Pſal.25.2,3. & 119.6.

O Zidon] Heb. Tſidon, for which the Greeks and Latines have Sidon; as for Tſion, Sion, Rom.9.33. & 11.26. Mat.11. 21. This city for antiquity, was in likelihood ancienter then Tyre; for we finde records of it, far ancienter then any of Tyre, Gen.10.19. & 49.13. And it is obſerved by Strabo, lib.16. that Homer makes mention of Sidon, but not of Tyre: which being at firſt but a ſmall rocky Iland, was not much therefore regarded, untill ſea-trade was grown riſe; and it was then obſerved to be a place fit to ſettle a mart in, for the midland-ſea: and as ſome forraign hiſtories report, untill the Sidonians, being driven out of their country by the King of Aſcalon, by ſhipping, betook themſelves unto that Iland, as a place of defence, and thereon built, and peopled it, that lay formerly waſte: Juſtine, lib.18. And in Joſhua's time, though Tyre had the name of the ſtrong city, Joſh.19.29. yet had Zidon the name of the great city, Joſh.11. 8. & 19.28. As, though far inferiour to it for ſtrength, yet for amplitude, far exceeding Tyre; in regard whereof Strabo tells us, that it was queſtioned in his time, whether of the two ſhould be reckoned the chiefe city of Phenicia; mean while they are wide, that from that epithet given to Sidon, would produce us two Sidons, a greater, and a leſs; as there were two Tyres, the old, and the new: and no leſs wide are they, who ſuppoſe that the city Sidon was ſo called from the ſtore of fiſh that it abounded with, through the neighbourhood of the ſea: affirming withall, that Sidon in the Phenician tongue, ſignifies a fiſh; Juſtine, lib.18. But neither doth Sidon in that language, being of neer affinity with the Hebrew, and derived from it, ſignifie any ſuch thing: nor had the city thence its name, but from Sidon, one of Canaans ſons, Gen.10.15. 1 Chron.1.13. who either himſelf, or his iſſue, ſettled in thoſe parts, founded that city, and called it after his name.

for the ſea hath ſpoken, even, the ſtrength of the ſea, ſaying] Sidon is brought to ſhame and confuſion, becauſe Tyre, of whom ſhe before ſo much boaſted, and upon whoſe trading ſhe much depended, Verſ.2. is utterly waſted and ruined, Verſ.1.

the ſea] The ſea-coaſts ſay ſome, thereabout in generall: or, thoſe that trade by ſea, As Chap.60.5. But the moſt, both Jewiſh, and ours, ſuppoſe Tyre to be here ſo termed; becauſe ſhe was ſituate, as an Iland within the ſea, or, in the heart of ſea, as it is, Ezek.27.4. & 28.2. Or, the ſea, at leaſt bordering on it, as lamenting the devaſtation of Tyre, her chiefe port, Ezek.26.4,5,12.

the ſtrength of the ſea] Or, ſea-fort, as Chap.25.4. & 30.3. So is Tyre termed, in regard of her ſituation, being both founded upon a rock, Mat.7.25. and environed with the ſea, See on verſ. 1. And it was famous therefore for ſtrength; as well as Sidon for greatneſs, Joſh.19.28,29. and did rule therefore, and command the ſea in thoſe parts. But of the ſtrength of Tyre, ſee Curtius, l.4.c.1.

I travell not, nor bring forth children; neither do I nouriſh up young men, nor bring up virgins] Thus is the midland-ſea, as ſome, or, that part of it neer about Tyre, as other ſome, or, Tyre it ſelf rather, as the moſt and the beſt, brought in, ſpeaking by a rhetoricall frame, and fineneſs of ſpeech; as in the perſon of a woman bemoaning her ſelf, and bewailing her preſent condition; that hath had many children, but now either is wholly bereaft of them, nor is like ever to breed any more: or, hath as little comfort of them, and help from them, as if ſhe never had born any. Some read the words of the text in the preſent tenſe, as our verſion hath them; implying, that howſoever ſhe was plentifull in people, whom ſhe bread up in ſo great abundance, that with her colonies ſhe peopled many other places: (of which ſee Strabo, l.16. Mela, l.3.c.6. Pliny, l.5.c.19.) yet now ſhe was ſo waſted and worn out, that ſhe was not able to bear, or bring up, or ſend forth any more; like Naomi, Ruth.1.11,12. And this ſeems the plaineſt, and moſt naturall ſenſe of the place. Howbeit, others read them in the time paſt; and ſome, as ſpoken by way of interrogation. Have I not travelled, and brought forth children, and brought up young men, and reared up virgins? As complaining, that albeit ſhe had ſo done, yet that none of them now had come in to her ſuccour; like that of Jeruſalem, of all the ſons that ſhe had brought forth, and brought up, there is never a one to take her by the hand, Chap.51.18. And this, ſay they, is that, which Sidon is willed to be aſhamed of: that ſhe had not offered her ſelf, to the reliefe of her mother city: but Tyre was indeed rather a daughter of Sidon, then Sidon daughter to Tyre. Others conceive the words ſpoken, in an optative form and ſenſe: as wiſhing, that ſhe had rather been alwayes barren, and had never bred or brought forth any, then to breed and bring up children: either for her ſelf, to ſee the deſtruction of them, or, for them to ſee her dreadfull and ſhamefull ruine. See Hoſ.9.11.14. where Tyre and Ephraim are compared together: but this ſenſe, how the letter will well bear, I ſee not: And others laſtly, (to omit all others,) as lamenting her calamitous condition: being as one that had never born, or brought up any children, her people and inhabitants being ſlain and deſtroyed, either in the ſiege, or in the ſurpriſall of the city: of whom what havock was by Alexander made in his rage, after he had taken the city; partly, for the long ſtay they had put him to in the ſiege; and partly, for their barbarous breach of the law of nations, in murdering his Embaſſadors, and throwing their bodies in contempt into the ſea: (the violation whereof, ſo much incenſed David againſt the Ammonites, 2 Sam.10.4. & 12.31.) See Curtius, l.4.c.4. See alſo concerning Nebuchadnezzars dealing with Tyre, (who might likewiſe be the more enraged againſt it, becauſe he had ſpent thirteen years in the ſiege of it; as Joſeph the Iew, out of the Phenician records againſt Appion, l.1.) Ezek.26.6,8,11, 15. & 27.34. and ſee of Babylon, Chap.47.7,8.

I travell not, nor bring forth children] Cities are in Scripture reſembled to teeming women, Chap.47.8,9. & 49.19. 41. & 51.18. & 54.1,3. & 66.4,5. & 66.7,8.

neither do I nouriſh up young men] Heb. greaten: that is, bring up, till they are grown great (as Chap.1.2. & 49.21. & 51.18.) choice young men. See Chap.9.17. & 40.30.

nor brought up virgins] Either reared them up to womans ſtate, till grown up to height, and made fit for marriage; as of young men the like, in another word before, having in it a notion of greatneſs, Pſal.144.12. as this of height, Ezek. 32.5. and ſo the ſame thing, though in divers notions ſhould be ſaid of either; or, advanced them, as the word is moſt commonly uſed, 1 Sam. 2.7. Iob 17.4. Pſal.37.34. Prov.4.8. To wit, by giving or placing them out in marriage; that, which with our engliſh phraſe wel accordeth: Both the words, this and the former, are together found, Ezek.31.4. and before here, Chap.1.2. See there. A large iſſue cannot be atchieved, unleſs children be as well brought up to maturity and ripeneſs of growth, as before that, bred and born; nor, thoſe of the female ſex eſpecially, in an honeſt and deſireable way, but by advancement of them in marriage; that which it may be is alluded unto, the rather, by the Prophet in theſe words; becauſe, perſons broken in their eſtates, have not now, thoſe means and abilities to prefer their daughters, that formerly they might have had: So it is, as if Tyre had ſaid, I am not able now to breed children, to bring up ſons, or to prefer daughters, as I had formerly wont to do. The particle, as well negative as copulative, is in this branch wanting, to be ſupplyed from the former, as Pſal.9.18. Chap.28.28.

V.5. As at the report concerning Egypt, ſo ſhall they be ſorely pained at the report of Tyre] A ſecond effect of the overthrow of Tyre, in regard of others, neighbouring perſons and people: to wit, that as her allies and aſſociates were before ſmitten with extream ſorrow and ſhame, in regard of the loſs and dammage they ſuſtained in their wealth and ſtate, by her fall, Ezek.27.34. verſ.1.4. So both they alſo, and others beſide them, ſhould be ſurpriſed with ſore fear and pain; as not without cauſe, miſdoubting that their turn might be next; at leaſt, they could not ſit ſure, or be ſafe, when a place deemed ſo impregnable, as that, was pulled down. See Chap.19.7. Some reſtrain this effect of Tyres fall, to Egypt only: thus reading the text, when the report (to wit, of the fall of Tyre, came to Egypt; they, that is the Egyptians, were ſorely pained, or, much affrighted at the report of Tyre, (at the hearing of her downfall:) or, according to the report of Tyre; that is, according to the fear and amazement that the Tyrians were ſurpriſed with, when they heard of Nebuchadnezzars comming againſt them. The Egyptians, ſay they, were much amazed and troubled upon the tydings brought them, how it had fared with Tyre; partly, in regard they had much merchandiſe there, which muſt of neceſſity miſcarry; and partly, becauſe that block being removed, that lay in the Aſſyrian, or Chaldean Kings way, he ſhould now have freer paſſage, and readdier acceſs unto Egypt; and the particle tranſlated, as, doth ſometime alſo ſignifie when, or, as ſoon as; as it is rendered, Ioſh.2.7. and for the defect of the verb, ſee on verſ.3. And this reading, beſides ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, the ancient Greek, and old Latine have, whom many of ours alſo follow: But the effect here mentioned, ſeems to be more generall, as it is alſo by Ezekiel at large related, Ezek.26.15,18. & 27.35. To wit, that as the fall of Egypt, or, the overthrow given the Egyptians, did terrifie and affright many neighbour nations; yea, ſo many as came to the hearing of it; ſo ſhould the fall of Tyre affright and aſtoniſh thoſe, unto whom the report of it ſhould come. Now againſt this verſion and expoſition, the only objection is, that by Nebuchadnezzar Tyre was deſtroyed, before Egypt: as appears, Ezek.29.18-20. To which (beſides what might be returned, that is not ſo cleer; at what time, or by whom, the judgment here denounced, was upon Tyre inflicted;) anſwer is two wayes returned; firſt, by ſome granting it to be ſpoken of the deſtruction of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar; that as other people ſhould be affrighted at the fall of Egypt, when it ſhould come: ſo ſhould others alſo be, at the fall of this ſtrong city. Secondly, by others it is anſwered, that what is ſpoken here concerning Egypt, hath reference, not to that conqueſt of Egypt by the Chaldeans, but to an over-running of it, ſay ſome, about Eſays time, by the Aſſyrians, of which ſee on verſ.1. Or, as others, riſing far higher, to the fearfull judgments inflicted from God, on Egypt, by the Miniſtry of Moſes, that ended in the deſtruction of Pharao, and all his forces, in the red ſea; the report whereof is ſaid to have ſtruck fear, and dread, pain, trembling, and amazement, into the Edomites, Moabites, Philiſtines, Canaanites, and other people round about, Exod. 15.14-16. Ioſh.2.9-11. And this latter way, go the greater part of the Jewiſh Commenters, who yet ſome of them, fondly and needleſly buſie their brains, in paralleling the ten plagues of Egypt, with thoſe things that befell Tyre. See verſ.11.

As at the report concerning Egypt] The particle at is wanting, to be ſupplyed, as Pſal.18.44. the report. Heb. hearing, as Chap.53.11. concerning Egypt; as the particle is uſed, Chap.8.12. There was much affrightment; or, men were much affrighted, is to be ſupplyed in this branch, from the next: as in the like ſpeech, the one branch is oft made up by the other, See Iob 24.19. Prov.9.7. & 13.1,2,11. Chap.13.13. & 18.7.

ſo ſhall they be ſorely pained] The note of ſimilitude is wanting, as oft, in the latter part of ſimilitudes. See Prov.25.12 & 26.11.

ſorely pained] The word properly ſignifies womens travell, wherein trembling and pain concur, Pſal.48.6. See Chap. 13.8. The verb is indefinitely here uſed; they ſhall be in pain, that is, there ſhall be much pain; or, men ſhall be much pained, See on Chap.2.19.

at the report of Tyre] Or, according to, as the particle ordinarily ſignifies. Chap.1.7. & 8.20. & 10.26. but here rather, as our Engliſh rendreth it.

V.6. Paſs ye over to Tarſhiſh, howle ye inhabitants of the Ile] Whom theſe words are ſpoken to, Interpreters are not agreed on. Some conceive them ſpoken all to thoſe, that had trade and traffick with Tyre; expounding them, ye that carry the tydings of Tyres fall, get ye over beyond the ſea; and ye in the Ilands, and elſe-where, that had dealings with her, lament for her, upon the hearing of it. Or, ye Egyptians, and others, that had wont to haunt Tyre, turn now over to Tarteſſus, or Tarſus, and mourn for your loſſes ſuſtained at Tyre, by your wares there ſurpriſed, and your trade there at an end, Ezek.27.27. Others ſuppoſe them to be ſpoken to the Tyrians themſelves, either in whole, or in part, by this kind of ſpeech inſinuating what ſhould befall them; as before the like, verſ.1,2. To wit, either that they ſhould betake themſelves to the ſea, and by help of their ſhipping ſeek places of harbour, and ſhelter, elſewhere abroad; to which purpoſe ſome relate, that in the time of their ſiege (but by whom they ſay not,) they ſent away many of their people to Carthage; or, as others, and ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, that they ſhould be carried away captive by the enemy, into tranſmarine parts, which ſorts well with what follows after, verſ.7. nor need we divert from them, to any other, the latter branch of the verſe; as if the inhabitants of ſome other Iſlands, which they either paſſed to, or paſſed by, in that manner, ſhould howl for them, as the ſhips of Tarſhiſh are ſaid to do, verſ.1. when as this their tranſmigration, would undoubtedly miniſter matter enough of howling and lamenting, as well, if not much more, unto themſelves, as unto others; and that they were before here called, the inhabitants of the Ile: to wit, on which Tyre ſtood; whereof, and why it was ſo called, See on verſ.2, 10.

V.7. Is this your joyous city? whoſe antiquity is of ancient dayes? her own feet ſhall carry her afar off to ſojourn] The Prophets words inſulting over Tyre, and in bitter manner upbraiding the Tyrians, for their vain conceit, and preſumptuous vaunting of, and confidence in their city, as well the pomp and pleaſure, as the antiquity of it; as if having continued ſo long, in ſo proſperous and flouriſhing a condition; ſhe were now paſt all hazard, or fear of any change; whereas now now they might ſee her in a very mean and ſorry condition, compelled to travell on foot, far, at the pleaſure of thoſe, into whoſe hands ſhe was fallen.

your joyous city] Heb. a joyous, or revelling one, unto you, or, with you; for city is not in the text, no more then in the next verſe, nor verſ.12. yet may well be ſupplyed, for ſo is Ieruſalem ſtyled a joyous city. Chap.22.2. which one of the Iewiſh Commenters parelleleth here with that, Pſal.48.2. the joy of the whole earth; as if the meaning were, the city, that you may all the country over glory of, and rejoyce in. But I ſuppoſe, well weighing the Prophets words, and his wonted manner of ſpeech, it will appear, that he ſpeaks rather of the city, as of a ſtately and laſcivious Lady, that lives in all manner of bravery, and jollity: Is this your jolly, or revelling Lady, as ye accounted her, that lived in ſo great plenty and exceſs? See of Babel, Chap. 47. 1, 5, 8. and of Tyre, and her jollity, Ezek.26.13. as alſo of Sidon, ver.12.

Whoſe antiquity is of ancient days] Heb. from days before, or, days of antiquity, as Chap.3.26. For the antiquity of Tyre, Joſeph the Jew tels us in his antiquities, l. 8. c. 3. that it was built two hundred and fourty years before Solomons Temple, that ſhould be about Gideons time. Juſtine goeth higher, lib.18. and ſaith, it was built by Agenor, the Phenician Cadmus his father, and that ſhould be about Joſhuah's time; and ſo far, we are ſure of its antiquity: for we find it ſtanding, a ſtrong City in his days, Joſh.19.29. and how long before it had ſtood, we know not. For, as for the fables of Annius, his counterfeit Beroſus, who l.5. tels us, that Tyras (the Son of Japhet, Gen.10 2.) built Tyre, and ſo brings the founding of it very neer up to the Floud: We give as much credit to them, as to the tale, that the Tyrian Prieſts told Herodote, as himſelf reports, lib.2. that their Town had then ſtood no leſs then two thouſand and three hundred years, and ſo carry it up above the Floud: But of great antiquity it was, doubtleſs; for we have infallible record of about ſeven hundred and forty years paſt, when it was found built; and a place of ſpecial note, before the time of this Prophecy: but a fond thing it was therefore, thence to conceive, that it muſt needs ſtand, and continue in that flaunting and flouriſhing condition, that ſhe had formerly enjoyed. See ver.13. So Babel, I ſhall ſit as a Lady for ever, Chap.47.7, 8.

Her own feet ſhall carry her afar off to ſojourn.] An elegant deſcription of one of the weaker Sex, having lived plentifully, daintily, and deliciouſly; but now led captive into a far country, to live there in a ſorry and ſervile condition. She ſhall not now, as heretofore (like ſome gallant nice Lady, that out of ſtate and delicacy, either ſcorneth, and will not adventure to ſet the ſole of her foot once to the ground, Deut.28.56.) be carryed in her Coach, or Litter; or, in ſtate, and pomp, ride out as a Princeſs; but ſhe ſhall be compelled to travel on foot, as a Lackey, or, ſome other obſcure and mean perſon, Eccl. 10.7. and that not ſome ſhort journey, but into ſome remote countrey, far diſtant from the place of her former abode; into Aſſyria, or Chaldea, or ſome of their Provinces; not there to reſt, or have any place of ſetled abode; but to ſojourn there as a ſtranger, in ſlavery hurried to and fro, at the will and pleaſure of thoſe that have power over her. See of Babel, Chap. 47.2.

V.8. Who hath taken this counſell againſt Tyre, the crowning City?] This demand is made in way of admiration, as by ſome wondring, who either could endure to plot, or put in execution, ſuch a deſign, againſt ſo noble and gallant a City as Tyre was; or was able to effect it, againſt a place of that impregnable ſtrength, in which ſhe had ſo long continued, ver.7.

taken this counſel] Heb. conſulted this, that is, contrived it, as Chap.7.5. or, deviſed it, Chap.32.7. or, purpoſed it, as Chap.19.12. or, reſolved it, as 2 Chron.25.16. Chap.14.27. or, (which I conceive to be fitteſt here) taken this courſe, as Hab.2.10. thou haſt taken a courſe to bring ſhame to thine houſe; for all theſe being the wonted effects, and conſequents of counſel, are oft contained reſpectively under that term; or, are taken in, together with it; ſo the word, to conſult, is frequently uſed for, by, or upon conſultation, that is, counſel given, and taken, to contrive, deviſe, purpoſe, reſolve, take a courſe. (Of which manner of ſpeech, ſee on Chap.14.12. and 22.18. nor is the term of conſulting in this notion unuſual, as well in other learned languages, as in the Hebrew; for ſo both in Greek and Latine one is ſaid to have conſulted well or ill for himſelf, when the meaning is, that he hath taken ſome courſe, either behooful, or prejudicial to himſelf: which being not obſerved, hath cauſed a miſ-underſtanding of a proverbial verſe, uſed both in Greek and Latine, whereby, as it is commonly taken, ſhould be ſaid, that evil counſel is worſt to the Counſellor, or him that giveth it; whereas the right meaning of it, is, that evil courſes, or contrivements, are worſt to the contrivers, to him, or thoſe, that contrive them, and take them, as Pſal.5.10. and 7.15, 16. and 9.15, 16. in the firſt of which places, the word counſel is alſo found thus uſed.

The crowning City] Heb. the crowning, or crowned one: for the word City, as before, ver.7. is not in the text: But ſo is Tyre termed, either as a ſtately Princeſs (being a royall City, Jer.25.22. and 27.3.) wearing a goodly rich Crown, Ezek.27 3. and 28.12. ——14. or, as one that crowneth her followers, and favourites, her merchants, and inhabitants, with wealth and ſtate, Ezek.27.33.

Whoſe Merchants are Princes, whoſe traffickers are the honourable of the earth] With whom Kings, Princes, and great Potentates trade; or, that makes thoſe that trade under her, and with her, as rich, and as great as Princes, Ezek.37.21, 33. See the Aſſyrian vaunts, chap.10.8. and of Babylon, Rev.17.2. & 18.3. Cineas one of King Pyrrhus his counſel, ſaid of the Roman Senate, it was a Counſel of Kings. Plutarch in the life of Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus himſelf of Rome, that was a City of Kings: Jerome on this place.

V.9. The Lord of Hoſts hath purpoſed it.] And anſwer to the former demand, ver.8. declaring not onely who it is that hath contrived, reſolved upon, and put in execution this deſign; (for the Prophet ſpeaks conſtantly of the overthrow of Tyre, as of a thing already done) but the end, and aym alſo that he had in ſo doing; to pull down the pride and inſolency both of Tyre, and of other great States and Perſons, that were grown to a great height of haughtineſs, the ſin, that God moſt abhors, and can worſt brook, Pſal.138.6. Prov.3.34. and 6.16, 17. Chap.2.12.-17. Jam.4.6. 1 Pet. 5.5.

hath purpoſed it] Heb. conſulted it. See ver.8. and his counſell ſhall ſtand, Pſal.33.11. Chap.14.24, 26, 27.

to ſtain the pride of all glory] to ſtain, or pollute, by pulling down, or throwing down, as ſome polluted and filthy thing; to throw it down, as ſuch, or by throwing down, to make it ſuch, when it ſhall come to be trodden upon, and trampled under foot: ſo Pſal,89.30, 44. Chap.14.12, 19. and of Tyre, Ezek. 27.16, 17. and 28.7. in both which places, the ſame word is uſed.

the pride of all glory] the word tranſlated pride, ſignifies firſt excellency, Chap. 4.2. then pride, or inſolency, Chap. 13. 11. becauſe the one riſeth uſually from the other: the latter, beauty lovelineſs, ſuch as pleaſeth the eye, or the eye is wont to be taken with, as Gen.3.6. Ezek.24.16, 21. 1 Joh.2.16. of the word, ſee on Chap.4.2. All ſuch goodly ſtate, as people are wont to pride themſelves in: And Tyre is principally taxed for her pride, Ezek.27.3. and 28.2.-5, 12, 13.

and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.] Heb. to make light, properly, 1 King.12.4. Jon.1.5. then to ſet light by, to contemn, Ezek.22.7. or, to cauſe to be ſet light by; to make contemptible, to bring into contempt, 1 Sam.2.30. See Job 12.21. Pſal.107.40. Mal.2.9.

all the honourable of the earth] or, of the Land, as ver.10. and Chap.5.8. and 9.19. either thoſe of Tyre, and within her territory; as ſome: or more largely, & generally, of a great part of the known world; as others: which the ſubject matter of the next chapter ſeems to confirm: And indeed by the Aſſyrian was much done to that purpoſe, much about this time, Chap. 10.9, 10, 14. and 36.18,-20. as after, the like by the Chaldeans, Jer.27.3.-8. there is in the Hebrew an elegant antitheſis, between light, and weighty; as if he had ſaid, God is reſolved to make light, or to bring into light account, all that bear weight in the world: for that the word properly imports. See Chap.3.5.

V.10. Paſs through thy Land, as a river, O daughter of Tharſhiſh.] Theſe words ſome take, as ſpoken to the Tyrians, or Inhabitants of Tyre, adviſing them with all poſſible ſpeed, to quit their Country, and to betake themſelves to ſome other place for ſafety: or implying,as ſome would have it,that they ſhould paſs away before the enemy into captivity. Others rather conceive them, to be ſpoken to the multitude of Merchants,or traders by Sea,whether of Tarſus, Tarteſus, or other places,that had dealings at Tyre,to withdraw themſelves from thence,and betake themſelves to their own homes.See before on ver.6.

Paſs through thy Land,] or, from thy Land. So thoſe that underſtand it of the Tyrians , either fugitives, or captives: againſt which is objected, that the particle from, which is not here in the text,is never omitted,where mention is of motion, from place to place; to which may be returned: Firſt, that in ſomewhat the like paſſages,as this,it is ſometime ſuppreſſed, as Chap. 18. 7. and 52. 2. And again,that the particle from is not of neceſſity here, through, which our Engliſh verſion hath,will ſuffice,and is ſometime omitted, as Chap. 47. 2. Jer. 2,10. and laſtly, that it may be ſimply rendred without either. Paſs,or Paſs over thy Land,like a river;Make no ſtay in it: for the word of Paſs, in this Notion, of a motion from place to place,doth frequently admit an accuſative caſe attending it, Gen.32.31. Num.35.10. Deut.2.4. the note whereof, is very commonly omitted. But others, ſuppoſing the text not to ſpeak of the Tyrians at all , but of thoſe that traded with them,render it,Paſs away,or depart, or return to your own land, go back to your Country,as Num.22.26. Joſh.6.7. 1 Sam.27. 2. 2 Sam.16.9. the particle to, or unto being oft times concealed,as Exod.4.19.and 10.29. 1 Sam.20.6. Jer. 20.6.See V.1 . .

as a river] By this ſome underſtand, a ſwift, haſty, and ſpeedy flight,alluding to the current of rivers,or land-floods, that falling by ſteep paſſages from higher grounds, run with a ſwift and ſtrong ſtream,chap.59.19. Amos 5.24. or, as a river, that doth not ſtop, or ſtay, but runs on without intermiſſion, untill it arrive at the Sea,Eccleſ.1.7. Others, conceive it, to intimate the flight of multitudes (underſtanding it of thoſe that traded at Tyre) as in flocks ,or ſholes, in their paſſage over-ſpreading the Seas; becauſe the term of a river , is uſed in Scripture; as alſo, in other Authors, to note abundance,and plenty, chap. 8.7. and 48.18. and the word here uſed,is not a word that is general, common to all rivers; but peculiar to Nilus,the river of Egypt,(which one of the Jewiſh Doctors ſuppoſeth to be here intended) uſed of the main body of it,in the ſingular form, Gen. 41. 1,2, &c. Exod.1.22.and 2,3.and 4.9. and 7.15. &c.and 8.5,7. and 17.5. Chap. 19. 7, 8.ver.3. Jer.46.7,8. Ezek.29.3,9 Amos 8.8.and 9.5. Zach. 10.11.of the many ſtreams of it,in the plural, Exod.7. 19. and 8.8.Pſal.74. 44.Chap.7.18.and 19.6. Ezek.29.3, &c. and 30. 12. Now Nilus, though it riſe high, and with abundance of water over-ſpread the Land, Jer.46.8. Amos 8.8.and 9. 5.yet it runs not ſwiftly,but gently & ſmoothly,as Pliny, l.5.c.8.Howbeit, all this hindreth not, but that the phraſe here may have a notion of ſpeed and haſte,as well as of ſholes and multitudes: Since that it is found uſed in the one notion, as well as in the other: nor is the word here uſed ſo peculiar in Nilus , but that it is uſed alſo of other rivers and ſtreams, as well in the ſingular form, Dan. 12. 5. ——— 7. as in the plural, Job 28. 10. 2 King.19.24. chap.33.21.and 36.25. nor doth Nilus wholly run ſo, either ſlowly or quietly; but as is generally well known,with much violence, and exceeding ſwiftneſs, in ſome places, at its fals eſpecially, as Pliny in the ſame place relateth;who ſaith only, that it comes down lower, where it finds more freedom, as wearied with its long paſſage, by ſo many turnings and windings: at length it runs more calmly, and quietly,then before it did. As for thoſe,that render the works,paſs through thy country,as men paſs over a river;or,as a ſhallow brook that men paſs over on foot : they carry little ſhew of probability with them, and I forbear therefore to inſiſt on them.

O daughter of Tharſhiſh,] By this circumlocution, ſome underſtand Tyre, or the Inhabitants of it, (for the place is put commonly for thoſe that therein abide.See chap.1.27.) called the daughter of Tharſhiſh, that is, of the main Sea,or the Ocean, becauſe ſcituate in the Sea,maintained by the Sea,and the famouſeſt Sea-town, and mart, for Sea-traffick, in all thoſe parts.See on v1,2,6,7. Others,Tarſus,or Tarteſſus(the daughter, whether Tarſus,or Tarteſſus,or of Tarſus,or Tarteſſus,for Tarſus, or Tarteſſus it ſelf,as the like,ver.12.) as if the Tyrians were adviſed to flee thither,leaving their own Land,the particle to, or unto,being,though ſuppreſſed,yet to be ſupplyed,as before. But againſt this, is objected, that where this form, or metaphor of daughter is uſed; there, not ſo much the place it ſelf,as the people,or perſons, there reſiding or inhabiting, is implyed;which yet, it may be,need to be no bar to this expoſition of the place; ſince that as well to the people of a place, as to the place it ſelf,men may betake themſelves for refuge.But others conceive it to ſignifie the ſhipping that uſed to Tyre , the daughter of Tarſhiſh,that is,the ſhips of Tarſhiſh,as ver. 1. ſhips in Heathen Authors alſo,being called Virgins, or Damſels of the Sea;or the Merchants that had trading at Tyre , ſo ſtiled, either,as ſome,from the principal place, that they belonged unto,whether Tarſus,or Tarteſſus; put here, to comprehend under its name, all places, whence any repaired to Tyre for traffick: or as other ſome, from the main Sea, the mid-land eſpecially,on which, their places of abode lay, and by which they traded to and fro.

there is no more ſtrength] The reaſon, why either the Tyrians ſhould quit their country, or forraign people ſhould leave them;to wit,becauſe there was no place of ſhelter, or means of protection, and ſafety there, either for the one,or the other. See Ezek. 26. 4. ver. 11, 12. and ſomewhat the like, Chap. 47.1.

Strength] Heb. girdle. as Pſal. 109. 19. where only, & in this place,it is in this form found; and in another,Job 12.21. by it, is underſtood, either the wall and rampire of Tyre, wherewith the City was begirt, ver.4. but now gone, ver.11. or her former might and power, whether by fortifications within her,or the Sea about her, or her ſhipping, or her Souldiery,or any other means whatſoever, now utterly impaired, ver.4. the girdle being an uſuall emblem of might & ſtrength, Job 38.3.chap.11.5.and 22.21. in particular, ſome from the Chaldee Paraphraſt,would have the girdle here mentioned to be their Souldiery,becauſe the military belt,or girdle,was a badg of that profeſſion,2 Sam.20.8. Pſal.45.3. Others, the Sea, wherewith it was begirt, untill the enemy beſieging it , by ſtrange devices,and ſtupendious works,joyned the Ile it ſtood on to the Continent, thereby to render it aſſailable from the ſhore: whereof ſee Curtius, l.4.c.3,4. and Pliny,l.5.c.19. but theſe two latter,though ſomewhat far fetcht, yet without any ſuch ſtraining of the word, do of themſelves, fall within compaſs of the former; for, as for their interpretation, it ſeems to me over-poor,& ſlender,(though ſome of good note miſlike it not) who taking the word girdle,in its native notion; becauſe they find girdles among other petty commodities, that Merchants ſometimes trade in,Prov.31.24. would have the meaning to be,that Tyre had been ſo rifled, and her wares ſo plundered, and ſwept clean away, that there was not ſo much as a girdle left in her.

V. 11. He ſtretched out his hand over the Sea, he ſhook the Kingdoms,] or, He hath ſtretched out his hand over the Sea, and ſhaken the Kingdoms. The Prophet returneth again,after the former digreſſion,or interjection, conceived as in way of advice,ver.10. to ſhew who it was,that had both contrived, and brought about that deſign againſt Tyre, ver.8,9. or to faſten the words of this verſe to that that went next before, unto the very cloſe of ver. 10. he renders a reaſon, why Tyre was not able to retain her wonted ſtrength, or to afford ſhelter , and ſafeguard any more,either to others, or her own; becauſe the Lord had lift up his hand againſt her , and the other States and Kingdoms thereabouts;and hath ſet out, and ſent againſt her military forces,to make an end of her.

He] that is,the Lord,to be ſupplyed from ver.9.or from the next branch.See the like,Hoſ.13.9,10.

Stretched out his hand over the Sea,] or againſt the Sea; as Ezek.16.27. that is,againſt Tyre,ſay ſome, ſcituate within the Sea; as ver. 4. or againſt the Ilands and Provinces bordering upon the Sea; to ſtrike at her,or them,or both,and to deſtroy either; as Jer.15.6.and 51.27. Ezek.6.14.and 14.9.and 16.27: and 25.7.and 35.3. And who can ſtay,or turn back his hand? chap.14.27. Dan.4.35. Howbeit, there ſeems to be an alluſion to Gods hand, that was ſometime ſtretched, or held out over the red Sea,when as Pharao, and his forces,were therein drowned and deſtroyed,Exod.14.26,27.and 15.6,12.alluded to alſo,chap.10.26.and 11.15. though I concur not with thoſe of the Jewiſh Commenters, or others, who ſuppoſe that ſtory to be here intended,as produced to ſhew,that God was as well able to deſtroy Tyre,and her allies,now, as he was to deſtroy Pharao,and other great ones,then. See ver.13.

he ſhook the Kingdomes] or made them quake;as Deut. 28.65. 1 Sam.14.15.Hab.3.7,16.or as ſome render it, he raiſed up,or moved the Kingdoms: as chap.14.9.which they expound of Gods ſtirring up Nebuchadnezzar,and the Kings,or Princes, of the Provinces under him,to come againſt Tyre,Ezek.26. 7. -12. But the word here uſed, is no where found to ſignifie ſuch a moving,or gathering together,as this expoſition implyes; but ſuch a ſhaking,as is joyned with trembling,and terrour, Deut.2. 25.chap.32.11. Jer.33.9. Joel.2.10. Jer.50.36. or ſuch a moving,as is joyned with removing, Job 9.6. 2 Sam. 7.10. 1 Chr. 17.9. not unlike that ſhaking,ſpoken of Hag.3.21,22.Heb.12. 26,27. The Kingdomes therefore here ſpoken of, are either the Kingdoms of Tyre and Sydon,and thoſe other on the Sea coaſts,that God had ſhaken and ſhattered, whether by the Aſſyrian,or the Chaldean,ver.1, 12.for Tyre & Sidon were two Kingdoms,Jer.37.3.beſide that they may both ſeem to have had inferiour Kingdoms,or Provinces,alſo under them. Jer.25.22. and the Prophet ſpeaks of theſe things, as paſt, and done. See on ver.3,4,5. or they are rather,as ſome other,thoſe kingdoms and provinces that were made to tremble,and ſhake,being ſtricken with fear and terrour, at the fall of Tyre. So Ezek. 26. 15. - 18. then which, no other Commentary needs on this place. And, howſoever I take it to be no relation, as ſome would have it, of what God did for his, either in Canaan, Joſh. 12.7. - 24. or in their way to Canaan, after they had paſſed the red Sea, Joſh. 12.1. - 6. in ſhaking the Kingdoms on either ſide Jordan: yet I ſuppoſe there is an alluſion unto the ſtories of thoſe times; and withall, as to the dreadfull Earth-quakes, and ſhakings of the Mountains, that ſeem to have accompanied ſome of thoſe things then done; (See Pſal. 77. 16. - 18. and 114.4. Hab. 3.6,10.) ſo to the fear and terrour, that upon the ſame, ſurprized the Kingdoms and Countries about them, Exod. 15.14. - 16. Joſh. 2.9. - 11. See ver. 5.

the Lord hath given a Commandement againſt the Merchant City, to deſtroy the ſtrong holds thereof,] or, the Lord gave; becauſe the charge, in courſe of carriage, precedes the execution of the thing given in charge; it is the Lord of Hoſts, ver. 9. that ſet his Souldiery, whether Aſſyrians, or Chaldeans, on work to do it; and therefore it could not but be done, chap. 14.27. and 55.11.

given a Commandement] Heb. commanded, or charged: a military term, as we alſo uſe it; whence the term of a Commander, and it importeth, by a kind of Zeugmatical form, a ſending of forces with a charge. So Amos 6.11. and 9. 3,4,9. Some of which places are not ſo clearly rendred, through want of this obſervation. The conſultation, as at a councel of War, and reſolution upon it, was before, ver. 9. now there is a commiſſion given out, for the putting of it in execution, and a miſſion of forces, with a ſtrict charge to effect it: ſo chap. 10. 6. and 13.3.

againſt] Heb. unto; as Jer. 51.3. or concerning; as Jer. 22. 11. but uſed alſo for againſt, as Eſt. 7.7.

the Merchant City,] the word City, is not in the text, ver. 7, 8. The term uſed here, rendred Merchant, is Canaan, (whereof ſee chap. 19.18.) which ſome therefore retain, rendring the words, againſt Canaan; yet by Canaan, underſtanding Tyre, as ſo termed, becauſe it ſtood within the compaſs of the country that was commonly called, and known by that name, Pſal. 105. 11. and 135.11. and fell by lot to the Tribe of Judah, Ioſh. 19. 29. ſee Mat. 15.21,22. or more generally, the reliques of the Canaanites, abiding in Tyre, and Sidon, and the Coaſts thereabout. But it is by others rather deemed here to ſignifie, as we render it, a Merchant; for becauſe the Phenicians, or Canaanites (compare Mat. 15.25. with Mar. 7.26.) were, their Land lying fit for Navigation, much addicted to merchandize: hence it came to paſs, that the word Canaan was uſed for a Merchant: ſo it is taken, Hoſ. 12.7. Iob 42.6. v. 8. and Tyre is ſo termed here; becauſe a principal place for mart, and market for merchandize and merchants: ſee on ver. 2,3,8.

the ſtrong Holds thereof] The ſtrength of this place, how great and extraordinary it was, may appear by the long and ſore pains, that it put Alexander and his whole Army to, ere he could be maſter of it: whereof ſee Curtius, l. 4. c. 2,3,24. And this the Prophet to expreſs, ſeems to have coyned a new word, nowhere elſe found, but here; and drawn it out in length longer then any, from the ſame root; as if one ſhould ſay, with us, her ſtrengthedneſſes, or her fortificationeſſes.

V. 12. And he hath ſaid. Thou ſhalt no more rejoyce, O thou oppreſſed virgin, daughter of Zidon.] Or, He hath alſo ſaid, as chap. 8.8. & 29. becauſe the Prophet turneth his ſpeech from Tyre to Sidon, fore-telling her overthrow, together with Tyres: ſee Ezek. 28.21. Ier. 47.4. Ioel. 3.4.

He] the Lord, ver. 11.

hath ſaid] hath paſſed this doom or ſentence upon thee, as chap. 15.14.

thou ſhalt no more rejoye,] Heb. thou ſhalt no longer add (as chap. 1.13, and 7.10.) to exalt, or to revel; to wit, as formerly thou waſt wont to do, and as Tyre thy daughter did, ver. 7. yet no more, or no longer, rather (becauſe that ſolves the ambiguity) doth not intend a perpetuity; but an intermiſſion, or interciſſion, for the preſent; or for ſome ſpace of time, at moſt, as ſome of the Jewiſh-writers well obſerve, pointing us to the like forms, 2 King. 6.23. prov. 31.7. for it is not unlikely, that as Sidon fell together with Tyre; ſo with Tyre ſhe alſo roſe, and recovered again: ſee ver. 17.

O thou oppreſſed] or, O thou grievouſly oppreſſed; for the word is in that form, that aggravateth the ſimple notion of the theam, in which form the ſame is no where found, but here only; and our Prophet is in his terms very pregnant and preciſe. This ſome ſuppoſe ſpoken, in regard of the dammage that the Sidonian merchants ſhould ſuſtain by loſs of their wares remaining at Tyre, when it was taken by the enemy; but it ſeems to imply much more then ſo; no leſs, then the like ſurpriſal, & ſacking alſo of their own city: as Ezek. 28.22,23. Some ſuppoſe that there is in the word an alluſion to a Virgin, or Damſel, forced and raviſhed, Deut. 22.25. 2 Sam. 13.14. and this ſuits not amiſs with the term here given to that State, or City; nor is it unuſuall, that ſuch things are over-frequently acted in the ſurpriſal of ſuch places, Lam. 5.11. but I finde not the word any where ſo uſed, or applyed.

Virgin, daughter of Zidon] or Damſel, Daughter Sidon. By Virgin, Daughter of Zidon, moſt of our Interpreters here underſtand Tyre, ſo called, ſay they, becauſe founded at firſt by thoſe of Sidon, as Juſtine, l. 18. ſee on ver. 4. whom I ſhould willingly aſſent unto; did I not obſerve the conſtant tenour of Scripture in forms of this kind, concerning States, and Cities, without exception, running perpetually another way; which therefore induceth, or enforceth me rather, to go with theſe, though fewer, Jewiſh writers, and ours, who conceive not Tyre, but Sidon it ſelf here intended, called a Virgin, or Damſel; (for the word ſeems to be taken ſometime not ſo ſtrictly, as Joel. 1.8.) either becauſe ſhe had hitherto continued untouched, unſubdued, unacquainted with any yoke of ſervitude, or any ſuch grievous preſſures as now ſhe ſuſtained; or becauſe, for ſtate and beauty, ſhe was like to ſome young beautifull Damſel of noble parentage, daintily brought up, and living at eaſe and in pleaſure; Daughter of Sidon, for Sidon it ſelf; as Daughter of Sion, for Sion it ſelf: ſee on chap. 1.8. and Virgin, or Damſel, Daughter of Sidon; as Virgin, or Damſell, Daughter of Sion, chap. 37.22. and Virgin, or Damſel, Daughter of Babel, chap. 47.1. and Virgin, or Damſel, Daughter of Egypt, Jer. 46.11. where it may be obſerved, that the word Virgin, or Damſel, in ſuch phraſes, is conſtantly in a contract form, and hath in a way of regiment therefore, a reference, as well as the word daughter, unto the noun following both of them; which I find no Grammarians to have taken, or given notice of, by any rule for the like: and as Daughter apart, ſo is Virgin, or Damſel found apart, in this manner of ſpeech: for ſo we reade the Virgin, or Damſel of Iſrael, Jer. 18.13. and 31.4,21. Amos 5.2. in which frame of ſpeech, the Virgin of Iſrael, is not to be underſtood as a Virgin of Iſrael, Deut. 22.19. that is, an Iſraelitiſh virgin, or a virgin that is ſome Iſraelites daughter, though the terms be juſt the ſame; but by the virgin Iſrael, is to be underſtood, Iſrael the virgin; or the virgin Iſrael; as by the City of London, the City London; or, London the City. And it would further be obſerved, that theſe kind of forms, the virgin, or Damſel, or Daughter of Sidon, Sion, Judah, Iſrael, Ieruſalem, Moab, Edom, Egypt, and the like are not found, but in the poetical and prophetical books of Scripture; or where ſomething of either nature is inſerted into the ſtory.

ariſe, paſs over to Chittim.] The like advice is here given to the Sidonians, that was before to the Tarteſſians, or Tarſenſes, as ſome; to the Tyrians, as others, ver. 10.

ariſe] This term doth not always imply any particular preſent poſture of body to be changed: as ſitting, lying along, or the like: but it imports only, a ſpeedy and ſedulous addreſſing of ones ſelf without delay, and ſetting all other buſineſs aſide, unto ſome ſpeciall act, or work, employment, or journey, that he was not at, or on before, Gen. 13. 17. and 19.15. and 27.19: Jon. 1.2. Mic. 4.13.

paſs over to Chittim.] Leave Tyre, ſay ſome, for there is no more mart, or market, for thee there, and ſeek out ſome other place for thee to trade in: or, as others rather, leave thine own place and ſeat, and ſeek thee ſome place of ſhelter, and harbour elſe-where: the particle to, is wanting, as oft elſewhere: ſee on ver. 10. But ſome reade the words, as ſpoken to Chittim, and the ſame advice given it, that was given Sidon before: O Chittim, ariſe, and paſs, or depart: and the order of the words, as they lye in the Original, ſeem to favour this interpretation: but the former I ſuppoſe to be genuine, and more agreeable to the tenour of the context: of Chittim, ſee on ver. 1.

there alſo ſhalt thou have no reſt.] Having no aſſurance of ſafety any where, as Deut. 28.65,66. either the enemies ſword purſuing them, and following them whitherſoever they flee, which ſome ſuppoſe ſhadowed before by the ſimilitude of a river, that findes no place of reſt any where, till it come to the Sea, ver. 10. See the like, Lev. 26.33,36. - 38. Jer. 42. 14. - 17. or the enemy every way, and on every ſide ſo prevailing, that no ſure place of ſuccour, or ſhelter, can any where be had: ſo Jer. 25.15, - 26. and 27.6, - 8. and 43.10,11. A learned Author underſtands it, of the deportation of them unto Babylon, and other Countries thereabout, Ciſſia, or Suſiana among the reſt; where yet they ſhould not long be at reſt, in regard of the Medes invading theſe parts. See on ver. 1.

V. 13. Behold the Land of the Chaldeans: this people was not, till the Aſſyrian founded it for them that dwell in the Wilderneſs.] The ſcope of the Prophet in theſe words, by divers diverſly expounded, ſeems to be, to meet with an objection, or to remove a doubt at leaſt, that many might make, or have, againſt the verity, or concerning the certainty of that that is here denounced againſt Tyre and Sidon, as deeming it a thing, conſidering the preſent ſtate and ſtrength of them, if not utterly impoſſible, yet almoſt incredible, that they ſhould be by any other people or power thus deſtroyed. This therefore the Prophet ſheweth,to be no ſuch,either impoſſible,or incredible matter:either by pointing at thoſe, by whom it ſhould be done, a people of more antiquity, and greater power then themſelves,and that had been the firſt founders of them, and their State, as ſome; or as others, rather, by telling them of other States,to wit, the Chaldeans,or Aſſyrians,or both,which being far more ample and potent then theirs; yet had either the one by the other,or either of them,by ſome other, in like manner been deſtroyed : ſee the like, Ezek. 31.3, — 21. Amos 6.2. But that learned Author, of whom, on verſ. 12. ſuppoſeth this to be ſubjoyned, as rendring a reaſon, why in Chaldea they ſhould not be long quiet, being that Land,alſo, God had devoted to deſtruction,chap.13.& 14.

Behold the Land of the Chaldeans] This ſome underſtand of Tyre,as affirming it to have been ſometime the Chaldeans; who, as they at firſt founded and peopled it, ſo now come to deſtroy it: Others,rather,of Chaldea, or,the Chaldeans; by whom Babylon,and Niniveh,were then poſſeſſed, though not the firſt founders,or owners of them; and that, for all their greatneſs, were to be deſtroyed by the Medes and Perſians, chap.13.& 14.Jer.50.& 51.

this people was not] The Tyrians, ſay ſome, were neither ſo ample,nor ſo ancient a people, as the Chaldeans, or Aſſyrians,whom they ſuppoſe to be here the ſame: But the moſt go another way,or other ways rather: Some,the Chaldeans were not a people of any great note, or name, at firſt: See of their original,on chap.13.19. Others, there was not any like this people, the note of ſimilitude ſupplyed; as chap. 22. 18. there was no people comparable to them, as 2 King.18. 5.& 23.25.Others again, this people now is not; they are not now a free people, but a Province, governed by an inferiour King under the Aſſyrian,2 Chr.33.11.Dan.2.37,38.

till the Aſſyrian founded it] it, or her, that is, Tyre, ſay ſome; nor doth that,ſay others,croſs what is elſe-where related of its founding by others: of which,ſee on ver.7,12. becauſe thoſe others were then under the Aſſyrian command: But others, the Land of the Chaldeans, before-mentioned; wherein the Aſſyrian,not Aſhur the ſon of Shem,Gen.10.22. but Nimrod,the ſon of Cuſh, Gen.10.8. built Babylon, and other Cities,whoſe Succeſſors were called Aſſyrians, and their Empire, the Aſſyrian Monarchy: after he had ſubdued that country held by Aſhur, and his before, and made Niniveh, there by him erected, the principal Seat of his Empire, Gen. 10.10-12.But ſome reade the text,not till, but ſince, ſince that the Aſſyrian founded it,for ſtrange people,that is,placed ſtrange people in it,which they expound of the Samaritans, there ſeated by Salmaneſer,2 King.17.16.

for them,that dwell in the Wilderneſs] The word here uſed ſometime ſignifies ſhips, Num.24.24. chap.33.21. Ezek.30.9. So ſome would have it here taken, that the Aſſyrian Kings finding Tyre a fit place for ſhipping, did for that purpoſe at firſt build it. But it ſignifies alſo deſarts, waſte, and dry places, Pſal.63.1. & 74 14. and thoſe that abide,or dwell in ſuch places,whether perſons,or other creatures, Pſal. 72.9. chap. 13.21. Thus moſt here take it, that the Aſſyrian Kings built Cities in it, either for ſuch people,as were ſcattered abroad, here,and there,living in wild and waſte places,after the floud, Job 3 14.& 15. 28. or,that diſperſion cauſed by the diviſion of tongues, Gen. 11. 11. that they might convene, and be cemented, into a People,or a State: or, for ſuch people of other Nations,as having ſubdued, they there placed in the room of ſuch Colonies as they thence removed, and tranſplanted in other places,2 King.17.6,24.& 18.11.

they ſet up the towers thereof] properly,watch-towers, chap. 32.14. Jer.6.27. they fitted them,not only for habitation, but for defence:Heb. they ſet up his watch-towers,that is,each company of people their own; as chap.2.20. though ſome underſtand it of the Princes of Babylon, endeavouing each one to ſtrengthen his part,what he could,in that City.

they raiſed up the palaces thereof]to wit,of the Land,or of the City: the former particle,or affix,was maſculine,this feminine. See chap.15.1. they built further; as for ſtrength, ſo for ſtate, chap.13.19,22.Dan.4.29,30. Howbeit, ſome read the words, they have deſtroyed, or,demoliſhed her palaces: So the Chaldee Paraphraſt,whom ſome of the Rabbines follow;and ſo the old Latine,whom ſome of ours, as if it came from the root that ſignifies to raze, Pſal.127.7. Jer.51.58. Hab.3.13. not from that to raiſe,chap.14.9. Zach.9.13.for they are neer in ſound, and letter,the one to the other; or, ſomewhat more rather,in Hebrew, then in Engliſh: but in this latter notion, I never find it applyed to walls,or buildings: and I therefore embrace rather the latter ſenſe,and read the words,yet, (as chap.17.6.) they razed her palaces; or, were her palaces razed, as chap. 22. 24.

and he brought it to ruine] He that firſt founded it, to wit, Tyre,can,and ſhall ruine it; as ſome; or, as others,rather,the Chaldean,or Aſſyrian State, Babylon, or Nineveh, or both, either already are,or ſhall be ruined: See chap.13. & 14. Jer. 50.& 51. Nah. 1.2,3.

he brought it] One brought it; or, it was brought, as chap. 22.8. Heb.put it; or, made it, to a ruine, or, a ruine; that is, a ruinous heap, as chap.25.2. Jer. 12.11. See on chap.1.7. So rather,then (as a learned man of late renders it) cotages: ſuppoſing the punick word for cotages,deduced from the word of ruine, (for both the root, and the uſe of it ſhew that it ſo ſignifies)here uſed: but neither doth the notation of it,ſo well ſuit with the thing,thereby expreſſed; and the skilfull in that language affirm,that it comes from a word, only by change of a letter,that with them ſignifies an houſe.

V.14. Howl,ye ſhips of Tarſhiſh,] As he began this denunciation of Tyres ruine, with an invitation of the ſhips of Tarſhiſh, to howl in regard thereof: ſo he cloſeth it here again with the like: concerning which,ſee on ver.1.

for your ſtrength is laid waſte] or,your fortreſs, rather; and ſo, ver.4.to wit,Tyre,ver.1.

V.15. And it ſhall come to paſs in that day] At that time, wherein this prophecy ſhall be fulfilled: as chap.10.20.& 22. 20.In the paſſages following,there is firſt an extent with limitation of Tyres calamities, here fore-told, how long they ſhould continue,in this verſe; and ſecondly, a gracious promiſe of her reſtitution, after that term of time expired, in the verſes following.

that Tyre ſhall be forgotten ſeventy years] forgotten, that is, neglected,not regarded, not looked after, either by God or Man: as Pſal.13.1. & 45.10. chap.49.14. Jer.2.32. Hoſ.2. 13. & 4.6 & 8.14. becauſe things forgotten,are not regarded: hence,thoſe caveates,ſo frequent, Exod.20.8. Deut.4.9,23. & 8.11,18. nor is it improbable, or impertinent, that one of the Jewiſh Commenters here ſuggeſteth, that the Prophet ſhould have ſome alluſion to the condition of an Harlot, forgotten, and forſaken by her lovers; ſince that it ſuiteth ſo well with what immediatly followeth, v. 16. ſo the word forgotten,ſhould have ſpeciall reverence to her Merchants, whom her trade was with,before, ver.17. ſee the like,Jer.30.14. Howbeit, it ſeems more generall, and to include alſo Gods diſregarding of her,who is ſaid to viſit her again,v.17.

ſeventy years] Concerning this number,and the fixed terms of it, there is difference amongſt Interpreters. One ſurmiſeth ſome corruption in the text; and that,as chap. 7. 8. there is,as he conceives, ſixty,for ſix: ſo here,ſeventy,for ſeven: and theſe ſeven years, he ſuppoſeth to have been under Salmaneſer; of whoſe invaſion of Tyre,and interruption of their trade for five years together, ſee what was out of Menander alledged,on v.1. But this ſeems to be ſomewhat over-bold dealing with Scripture, both here, and before. Other Interpreters therefore,generally,reading the text, without any ſuch alteration,deem theſe ſeventy years to concur with thoſe of the Jewiſh Captivity in Babylon, Ier.29.10. Dan.9.2. and that the rather,becauſe not the Kingdom of Judah only, but the other Kingdomes alſo thereabouts, and thoſe of Tyre, and Sidon, among the reſt, are ſaid to be by God given,for the like time, into the hands of the Babylonian Empire,to ſerve it, Ier.27. 3-8. and a Commiſſion to be made out from God to Nebuchadnezzar by name,for the taking,and ſacking of Tyre,Ezek. 26.7-14. and Egypt aſſigned to him, as pay, for him and his forces,in way of recompence for their ſervice, therein performed,Ezek. 39.18-20. Howbeit,that prediction of Tyres deſtruction in Ezekiel,ſeems to reach further then this; ſince that this goes with a limitation of years, and a promiſe of reſtitution, at the expiration of thoſe years; whereas there is denounced a finall and perpetuall devaſtation, without any reſtauration,Ezek.26.14. as of Babylon,chap.13.20.

according to the days of one King:] This one King, a late Writer,would have to be Salmaneſer; during whoſe reign and life, Tyre was never able to recover the damage that by him ſhe ſuſtained,whereof above. But this ſandy conceit I let paſs,becauſe it is founded on that which directly croſſeth and controlleth the text. The Jewiſh Interpreters that hold to it; yet are of divers minds about the meaning of it; ſome of them underſtand it of David,who is ſaid to have lived ſeventy years,being thirty years old,when he came to the Crown, and holding the Kingdom forty more, 2 Sam.5.4. which put together,make ſeventy. But one of them confeſſeth ingeniouſly, that he knows no reaſon why David's life ſhould be here intimated,as the limit of ſuch a time; which yet,another,to meet with, ſaith it might be; becauſe there was a league of amity between their King,and David, 1 King.5.1. to mind the Tyrians of the breach of it,which had brought this calamity upon them: See on ver. 1. And ſome Chriſtian Writers, who take this way, ſay; becauſe the name of David was exceeding precious among the Jews, and all his acts, and occurrents,of ſpeciall obſervation with them: But theſe reaſons ſeem to be of very ſmall moment: Others therefore ſuppoſe, that the ordinary limit of mans life is here aymed at,as it is circumſcribed,Pſal.90.10.by Moſes,and by Heathen men; as Marcrobius on Scipio's dream,l.1.c.6. but ſaid,of a King, rather then of a Man; that is, of ſuch an one,as lives freely,and choicely,not tired out with pains-taking, not expoſed to ſuch occurrences and inconveniences as are wont to ſhorten mans life,in ſuch manner, as others uſually are: and the rather (addeth the Rabbine) he ſaith,of a King; becauſe Tyre, whom he ſpeakes of,had lived as a Queen, or a Princeſs, v. 8. But the moſt probable,and, as I take it, the genuine meaning of the words, is that,which another of them gives, according to the days, that is, the Reigns,or continuance in Reign, as chap.1.1. of one King,that is,of one Kingdom: as Dan.7.17.& 8.21.to wit, in the days or reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, his ſon, and his ſons ſon,who ſucceſſively held the Chaldean Empire, during the time of thoſe ſeventy years,Jer.17.7. For thoſe Writers of ours wrong them, who would father ſuch an abſurd opinion upon them; as if by the days of one King, they ſhould underſtand Nebuchadnezzar, ſuppoſing him to have reigned himſelf full ſeventy years; which indeed is moſt untrue: for he reigned but fourty three years in all,both with his Father,and by himſelf; as out of Beroſus his Chaldean,or Babylonian ſtories,Joſeph againſt Apion; which agrees well with the holy ſtory;wherein we finde upon record, that in the eighth year of his Reign, he carryed Jehojachin away captive, 2 King.24.12. and withall, that he reigned not above ſeven and thirty year, after that, 2 King.25.27. which put together, make up much about the ſame ſum,but come far ſhort of ſeventy:Nor could thoſe Jewiſh writers be ignorant of this: nor do they ſay, that Nebuchadnezzar is this one King; but expreſly, that he, his ſon, and his ſons ſon,are accounted as one King.

after the end of ſeventy years] The time ſet for her deſolation, and the diſcontinuance of her wonted ſtate, being expired,what time the Babylonian yoke ſhall be broken; ſhe alſo, among other people, that had formerly been in bondage under that Empire, ſhall recover her liberty, and return to her former trading again.

ſhall Tyre ſing as an harlot.] Heb. it ſhall be to Tyre,according to the Song of an harlot. Or,as ſome, there ſhall be with Tyre, as the ſong of an harlot. Which ſome underſtand of a ſong ſung to an harlot: ſuch a ſong ſhall be ſung to her, as men uſe to ſing to an harlot, that hath for ſome ſpace of time been left, and not lookt after, in regard of ſome diſeaſe, or other like diſaſter, which ſhe hath now overcome, and is recovered of again; inciting her to uſe means for the regaining of her Lovers: and ſuch a ſong they ſuppoſe to be that, which followeth,v.16. But moſt take it, for a ſong uſed by an harlot,to draw thoſe again to her,as they paſs by, who had formerly abandoned her: and ſome therefore render it, there ſhall be in Tyres mouth, as the ſong of an harlot, which our Engliſh well expreſſeth: The meaning is, that Tyre, upon the ruine of that Empire,which had at the firſt riſing of it to its height,ſubdued her,and till that time kept her down; having now recovered her liberty, ſhall by all means labour to ſet up her former market and trade, and to draw merchants and cuſtomers to her again. Howbeit,I ſuppoſe they are over-nice on the one ſide, that would have Tyre, that was termed a virgin before,while yet unſubdued, v. 12. to be ſtiled now an harlot, as forced and deſloured; for neither was it Tyre, but Sidon, that was ſo termed: nor is ſhe conſidered as unſubdued,where ſhe is ſo termed: nor is it violent enforcement; but voluntary proſtitution,which makes any one an harlot. As alſo do thoſe mince it too much on the other ſide, who by the word here uſed,would not have to be meant an harlot; but one that earneth her living by ſome honeſt, but mean employment; as by being an hoſteſs, or an huckſter, or one that cryeth ſome ſorry wares about,which they uſe to do ſometime with a ſong: and ſome alſo, in ſome countries,with the tinckling of a pan, or the like,as Tinckers do; thereof ſo termed with us: that which they think alſo alluded unto, v.16. So they ſuppoſe the word to be taken,where it is given unto Rahab, Joſh. 2.1. & Heb.11.31. (and it is not improbable,that the word there ſignifies an hoſteſs,or victualler) and of thoſe two women that contended before Solomon for the child, 1 King. 3. 16. of which, yet, more doubt may juſtly be made. And it is true indeed, as appears by a Poem aſcribed commonly to Virgil, that hoſteſſes in thoſe times uſually did by ſuch ſingings and jinglings invite cuſtomers to them; but thoſe that ſo did, were commonly light-houſwives; ſuch as are alluded to, Prov.9.13-27. and the words following here, v.17. where it is ſaid, She ſhall return to her hire,and commit fornication with the Kingdoms of the World, do evidently ſhew, that no other then an harlot is here meant: not as if merchandize were a diſhoneſt,or unwarrantable courſe, being of great and neceſſary uſe,and in the word of God not approved onely,but commended too, Pſal.107.23. Prov.31.14,24. Eccl.11.1,2. which laſt place, ſeems to intend traffick, rather then alms-deeds: but the one is reſembled by the other; becauſe gain is intended, as well in the one,as in the other: and in regard of ſome ſimilitude, or proportion, in ſome particular that the one hath to the other, are good and commendable exerciſes, ſometime compared unto courſes evill and unjuſt. See Luk.16.1-8,9. for I fear they go again a little too far,who would have the compariſon here intended, to hold in regard of the fraud and iniquity; or, the tricks and devices found and uſed commonly in either; whence the mammon of iniquity, Luk.16.9. as alſo that of Solomon,Prov.20.14. and that of Siracks ſon, Ecclus.27.2. For merchandizing is here conſidered ſimply, as a gainfull courſe; and the gain thence ariſing, not as evill-gotten gain; but as ſuch gain as might warrantably come into Gods treaſury, where the hire of an harlot might not be admitted,Deut.23.18. ſuch as might well go for an offering unto God, who abhorreth an oblation made of ill-gotten goods, Chap.61.8. Jer.7.9-11. Mic.6.6,7,11. See v.18.

V. 16. Take an harp, go about the City thou harlot, that haſt been forgotten] The Prophet proceeds in his former ſimilitude, comparing Tyre to an harlot, that having grown out of requeſt, uſeth all means,as melodious muſick of voyce and inſtruments,among the reſt, to come into ſome requeſt again; yet he may,withall ſeem to allude to her wonted muſick, mentioned Ezek.26.13.& 28.13.

make ſweet melody] good ſtriking, or, hand-muſick, ſo the word properly imports. See Chap.38.20. the Hebrew phraſe is,do well to ſtrike, for,ſtrike well, skilfully, cunningly, pleaſantly. So 1 Sam.16.17. one doing well to ſtrike; for, one that can ſtrike skilfully, play cunningly; and do well to ſtrike, for ſtrike skilfully, play cunningly, ſweetly,pleaſantly, Pſal. 33.3.

ſing many ſongs] Heb. multiply ſong; as, multiply ſope, for, uſe much ſope,Jer.2.23. multiply ſin, for,commit many ſins, 2 Chr.33.23. and, multiply viſion, for, afford many viſions, Hoſ.12.11.

V.17. And it ſhall come to paſſe after the end of ſeventy years] Or,at the end. Heb. from the end: as Gen.8.6. Exod. 12.41. Deut.5.1. when ſo many years are once expired. See on ver. 15.

that the Lord will viſite Tyre,] Gods viſitations are of two ſorts: either of mercy; as Ruth 1.6. Pſal.65.9. Luk.1.68, 78. & 7.16. & 19.44. or,of judgment, Exod.20.5. & 34.7. Chap. 13. 11. & 26.14. See Chap.24.21,22. This of Tyre here,is in mercy; and it is ſaid, not that her merchants ſhall viſit her, repair to her, and renew their former trade again with her; but that the Lord ſhall viſit her,to ſhew, that this her recovery and riſing again, ſhall not be effected, or come to paſs,by meer caſualty, or her own might, or skill, and the means mentioned, or intimated to be uſed by her; but a gracious and powerfull paſſage of Gods providence, in mercy minding her, and making the means uſed by her, ſucceſsfull and effectual to that purpoſe. See Deut. 8.18. Pſal.127.1,2. Prov. 10. 20.

and ſhe ſhall turn to her hire] Heb. return, and ſo it would be rendred; as Lev.22.13. Chap.6.13. for it hath reference apparently to Tyres former trading, v.2,3,6. ſhe ſhall return to her wonted trading.

hire] The word ſignifies,not properly only,but generally, the hire of an hore, (for ſo ſhould it be written, according to the true and due notation of it,not whore) or, an harlot: either given to her,or given by her, for impure purpoſes. So Deut.23.28. Ezek.16,31,34,41. Hoſ.9.1. Mic.1.7. nor is the verb,from whence it comes,uſed any otherwiſe. Hoſ.8.9,10. Howbeit, it is uſed in way of ſimilitude, or reſemblance, for gain ariſing from trade and traffick, and conſequently trade and traffick it ſelf; as another word of very neer affinity to it, of the ſame family,and of the ſelf-ſame notion with this,is uſed Hoſ. 2.14. (being no where elſe found) in the like way of ſimilitude, for ſuch commodities as the Iſraelites had, and received by their commerce and trade with other Neighbouring Nations; the main matter taxed in them there, being not ſimply, that they had trade with them, and ſuch commodities thereby from them; but that they aſcribed them wholly unto thoſe whom they dealt with,and not to God: not to him from whom they received thoſe commodities by them, Hoſh. 2.7,8. as in Nehemiah's time,they are blamed,not ſimply for trading with Tyre and Sidon; but for violation of Gods day, in their trading with them,Neh.10.31. & 13.16-21.

and ſhall commit fornication with all the Kingdoms of the world] Or,play the harlot, as the word is rendred, Gen.38. 24. ſhe ſhall have commerce with people of all Kingdomes and Provinces, as a common ſtrumpet hath with all comers, Ezek.16.15,25. & 23.43,44. for the Prophet perſiſts ſtill in his former compariſon. Nor doth this note here, an inſatiable exceſs of wickedneſs,as ſome would have it: as Rev. 17.2. & 18.3. but an amplitude of commerce and trade, ſuch as before ſhe had. See on v.8.

World] Heb. earth: as Chap. 37.16,20. but here rendred World; becauſe earth followeth: ſo Rev.11.15.

upon the face of the earth] The word ſeems more ſpecially to imply the earth tilled,trodden,and traded on, by mankind, Pſal.104.24. Chap.13.14. & 24.21.& 30.23,24. This clauſe ſome refer to Tyres trading, ſhe ſhall trade with them, not in corners privily,but in open ſight and view,publikely: or,with much pride and pomp: as Chap. 57.7-9. Ezek.16.15,16,24, 25,31. But others rather with the Chaldee Paraphraſt,to the Kingdoms next before; as noting the generality of them,from whence, out of all the habitable parts and quarters of them, people had recourſe to Tyre, as recourſe is wont to be even from forraign parts, to ſome ſtrumpet of ſpecial note, Ezek. 16.15. So Deut.14.2.

V.18. And her merchandize, and her hire ſhall be holineſſe to the Lord] In this laſt paſſage, as in the cloſe of other ſad Prophecies before,Chap.18.7.& 19.18-25. the Prophet ſubjoyneth an intimation of the converſion of the Tyrians unto God,in the Kingdom of his Chriſt, yet delivered in forms, alluding to the manner of Gods ſolemn ſervice, then in uſe: as Chap.60.9,10,13,14.Mal.1.11. And to the days of the Meſſias do ſome of the Rabbines refer it; though ſome other of them,to the times of their return from Captivity under the ſecond Temple.

And] Or, Yet: as Chap.17.8.

her merchandize,and her hire] Heb. hires, the word before uſed; bnt here plural,that is, the gettings, earnings, or gains of her merchandize: or, thereby accrewing to her: of the phraſe, ſee Chap. 4. 5. and hence appears, what before was meant by hire, v.17.

holineſſe to the Lord] It ſhall be,a great part of it, devoted and conſecrated to Gods ſervice; ſet apart for pious and ſacred uſes. There is an alluſion in the words, to the motto engraven on the high Prieſts golden frontlet, Exod.39.30.ſo Lev.27.30. Joſh.6.19.Jer.31.40. Zach.14.20. For it is a very abſurd conceit that a popiſh Writer ſaith,that Tyres gain gotten by her trading, ſhould be called ſacred, as an accurſed or abominable thing, like the goods of Jericho, Joſh. 16.17,18. or like the hire of an harlot, Deut 23. 18. becauſe the word ſignifying ſacred in Latine, is ſometimes uſed for deteſtable; and one in ſound ſomewhat like the word of holineſſe here uſed,doth ſignifie an impure perſon, in that place of the Law before-mentioned,and elſe-where,Gen.38.21. 1 King.15.12. & 22. 46. and that therefore it was not to come into Gods treaſury, directly contrary to what immediatety followeth.

it ſhall not be treaſured,not laid up] It ſhall not be reſerved or laid up for any prophane uſe, either publike, or private: One of the Jewiſh Writers thus diſtinguiſheth the words; It ſhall neither be carryed into the Kings treaſury, nor reſerved (as durable ſubſtance; ſo the word properly ſignifies, chap. 33.6.)for iſſue,for poſterity, 2 Cor.12.14. the former word is uſed commonly of publike reſerves, Neh.10,39. Chap.39.6. Mal.3.10.the latter of private, Prov.15.6.& 27.24.

for her merchandize ſhall be for them that dwell before the Lord] for, or, but,as Chap. 2. 6. her merchandize, this is the gain thence ariſing, Prov.3.14.for them that dwell; or, ſit; or abide before the Lords preſence; or,in the Lords preſence, for his miniſters that attend upon him in his houſe, the place of his ſpecial preſence and reſidence among his people, Deut. 10.8. 2 Sam. 7. 18. Pſal.27.4. & 42.2. & 61. 7. & 84. 4. & 134.1.

to eat ſufficiently] Heb. to eat unto ſatiety, or fulneſs, as Lev.25.19. & 26.5. prov.13.25. that Gods Miniſters may have food ſufficient,even to the full, 2 Chr.13.10. Mat.3.10. Some expound it, of the Tyrians making great feaſts after the time of their recovery: by occaſion whereof, they ſhould laviſh out their money, upon corn, wine, and fleſh, which the land of Iſrael abounded in, and ſo their eatings ſhould fall into the hands of Gods people; if it had been ſaid, they ſhould bring them to Jeruſalem, and ſpend them there in ſacred feaſts, that Gods Miniſters might feed, and feaſt with them,it had been ſomewhat to the purpoſe. See Deut.14.23-29.& 16.11,14.But the expoſition given,as before, is not only forced, and far fetcht; but it is clean beſide the intent and ſcope of the place.

and for durable clothing] Heb. covering, as the like term imports,Gen.8.13. Exod.26.14. ſo is rayment called, in regard of the principall uſe of it, to cover the body, and to ſhelter it againſt outward annoyances,Hoſ.2.9. 1 Tim.6.8. Rev. 3.18.& 16.15. The word rendred durable,as prov.8.18. doth in his prime notion ſignifie old, 1 Chr.4.22. pſal.6.7.but ſometime hard, or harſh,and ſtiff,pſal.31.18. & 75.5. whence ſome render it thick; ſuch,ſay they,as the wooll, in Paleſtine, made the Rabbines precious,or of worth; from that in the Proverbs, ſuch as ancient things ſometimes are, as in regard of their worth,kept and reſerved. Others,as ours, durable; ſuch as will laſt long; as the originall word hath a notion ſometime of continuance only; not of decay, Job 21. 7. See the like form, Chap. 65.22. The meaning is, that from the Tyrian trade,they being converted to God, means and maintenance ſhould be freely and largely afforded unto Gods Miniſters, as well for apparel,as for food.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Verſ. 1. B*Ehold the Lord maketh the earth empty,and maketh it waſte,and turneth it upſide down, and ſcattereth abroad the Inhabitants thereof*] Here beginneth a new Sermon, or Prophecy, more generall then thoſe going before; and ſeems to comprehend not the Land of Iſrael alone, or Judea alone; (unto which ſome would reſtrain it) but the Countries alſo on every ſide,neer to either: and ſuch of them, eſpecially,as had exerciſed enmity with them, or been unuſefull ſtays to them,as the Moabites, the Ammonites, the *P*hiliſtines,the Syrians, the Ethiopians, the Egyptians, the Idumeans,the Arabians,the Tyrians,the Sidonians,againſt whom he had formerly,in more particular manner,propheſied; and to have been executed,partly by the Aſſyrians,and partly by the Chaldeans, the two principal Inſtruments and Executioners of Gods judgments,on thoſe people, Chap.10.5.14.and 14.12,17.Jer.50.23.and afterward alſo,by others, upon them. See the like,Jer.25.15-38.& 27.2-8. Howbeit,as thoſe ſtraighten it too much, that confine it to the narrow limits of Judah and Iſrael;ſo they over-widen it much more, that would extend it to the generall day of doom, which many paſſages in it do clearly controll.The whole Sermon reacheth unto the end of the 27.Chapter.

Behold] The Prophets uſuall preface to the relation of remarkable acts,either of judgment, or of mercy.See Chap.7. 14.& 17.1.

the Lord maketh the earth empty] Heb. word for word, Behold,Jehovah emptying the earth, and laying waſte; as himſelf, by the Spirit of prophecy,ſeeing God already in doing it, and inviting others by the eye of Faith grounded on this prophecie,revealing as much to them, to behold the ſame with him. So Chap.3.1.and 13.9.

maketh the earth empty and waſte] for, the earth; ſee on Chap.13.5,11. emptying it of its Inhabitants, either ſlain on it,or removed out of it; laying it waſte, by deſtroying, and ſpoyling all of worth, or uſe, in it, and on it; as if he were bringing it to its firſt condition, without all form and furniture,Gen.1.2. See the like, Nah.2.10.where both words are found; the latter here,and there,onely; which though moſt of the Jewiſh Interpreters here expound, as we do; yet ſome of them would from the Arabick give it other far-fetcht notions. which I forbear to recite. See ver. 3.

turneth it up-ſide down] Heb. perverteth the face of it; as Lam.3.9. where, and here,only, the word is found in that form: he ſo transformeth it, that it hath not that face and faſhion, that before it had. Which ſome apply,more ſpecially, to what followeth, ver. 2. and expound of a prepoſterous diſpoſition of ſtates and conditions; that whereas in due courſe, the maſter ſhould lead, and the ſervant follow; the miſtreſſe lead,and the maid attend;theRuler be reſpected,and the Subject leſſe regarded: all ſhould now be turned a clear contrary way.

ſcattereth the Inhabitants of it] By flight from their enemies invading them, or deportation by the enemy, having ſurprized them. So Gen. 11. 8. Deut.28.25. 2 King. 17. 6. & 18. 15. Jer.13.24. & 18.17. Ezek.5.10.

V. 2. And it ſhall be, as with the People, ſo with the Prieſt: as with the Servant, ſo with his Maſter; as with the Maid, ſo with her Miſtreſſe] Heb. word for word; as the People, as the Prieſt, or, Prince; as Hoſh. 2. 9. and ſo in the reſt: whence ſome read, there ſhall be like People, like Prieſt, and ſo forward; ſuppoſing the ſenſe to be, that there ſhould be a general confuſion, no order, no diſtinction, or regard of perſons, in Church or State; as Chap.3.5. whereof ſome expound, that perverting the face of things, ver.1. But others rather, as ours render it, it ſhall be, as with the people, ſo with the Prieſt, or, Prince, and ſo on. The ſenſe being, as they conceive,that all eſtates and conditions ſhould fare alike; none, in regard of eminency of place, or ſtate, ſpared, Chap.2.9. & 5.9. 2 Chr. 36.17. Lam.5.12.

the Prieſt] The Prieſts being ſuch, ſay ſome, as Jeroboam made, of the meaneſt of the people, 1 King. 12. 31. or ſuch as,by their miſcarriages, and Gods juſt judgment thereupon, were become vile and contemptible with the people, 1 Sam, 2.12,17,22,30. Mal.2. 3, 8,9. Or, the Prince; for ſo the word ſometime ſignifies. See Gen.41. 45. Exod.2.16. & 3.1. and on ſuch doth God, oft-times, for the like cauſes, caſt contempt, tempt, Job 12.21. Pſal.107.40. But this ſeems to look another way, to wit, that neither Prieſt nor Prince, or this latter rather, here, principally, I ſuppoſe, intended, ſhould eſcape more then any of the common ſort of people: ſee the ſame word uſed in the ſame place; but diſtinctly for both Offices, 2 Sam. 8.17,18. & 20.25,28.

his maſter] Heb. Lord, but ſo uſed, Gen.39.20. Exod.21. 4,6. Deut. 23.15.

as with the buyer, ſo with the ſeller] Or, ſo with the buyer, as with the ſeller; for the very ſame particle is in either member, and admitteth either notion here, rather thus, then as before; becauſe in the three former branches, the better condition, and more likely to do well, to wit, the Prince, the Maſter, the Miſtris, were in the latter place; whereas in theſe three latter branches, the better eſtate, to wit, the buyer, the lender, the letter, are in the former, He that by purchaſing made account to mend his eſtate, ſhall be in no better plight, in regard thereof, then he that hath made it away, and imbezilled thereby his means. See Ezek.7.12,13. and ſee ſomewhat the like, but in another notion, 1 Cor. 7. 30.

as with the lender, ſo with the borrower:] Or, ſo with the lender, as with the borrower; neither having any ſurety of what he owns, or what he owes; nor any man more of what is in his own hands, then of what is in anothers. Of the uſe of the words, ſee Pſal.37.21. & Prov.22.7.

as with the taker of uſury, ſo with the giver of uſury to him.] Or rather, ſo with the letter on uſury, as with him, to whom he letteth on uſury; for ſo it is, word for word, in the text: as alſo, Deut.24.11. the man to whom thou lendeſt, or letteſt; for the word is in either place the ſame, and the word both here and there uſed, is of a large extent, comprehending as well free lending, as letting upon conſideration, as the Greek δανείζειν, which it anſwereth unto, alſo ſometime doth. See Luk 6.34,35. The Hebrew Commenters therefore to diſtinguiſh this branch from the former, ſay, ſome of them, that the former ſpake of thoſe that let, or lent out money: this latter of thoſe that lent, or let out victuall, or any ſuch other thing, Deut.23.19. others of them, that the former is meat of ſuch as lend what they have freely: this latter, of ſuch as lend upon pledge or pawn, as Deut.24.11. where yet no conſideration is mentioned, or neceſſarily implyed; but the contrary rather: for it ſpeaketh of a brother, of whom they were forbidden to take intereſt, Deut.23.19. ſo that the pawn ſeems to be there intended only as ſecurity for the principal. Howſoever, this latter diſtinction here ſeems more probable then the former. But though the parties here and there mentioned, are for good cauſe to be diſtinguiſhed; yet the particle, or note of ſimilitude, is the very ſame here, that was in all the former branches; and that learned Scholiaſt was much miſtaken (though not the firſt that here tripped) in ſuppoſing the term here to be altered; and the word caaſher to be no more here, then (as in other places oft it is) the ſame with the Latine ſicut, or quemadmodum; the Engliſh, as, or, in like manner; whereas indeed it is more then ſo, and it is to be taken aſunder, as oft elſe-where; the ca it ſelf alone, as in the former branches, importing as much as he would have ſignified by the whole; and the latter part, to wit, aſher, being here a relative diſtinct from it, and looking forward, not to the participle next it, but to the pronoun demonſtrative, by an elegant redundancie in that language very uſual, ſubjoyned in the cloſe of the ſentence, the very like conſtruction whereunto is preciſely found, in that parallel to this, Deut. 24.11. Howbeit, herein I concur with that learned Writer, for the reaſon before rendred (which yet by him is here croſſed) that albeit in the three firſt branches, the former particle is to be rendred ſicut, as: the latter, ſic, ſo: and that therefore in the former part of the verſe, the ſentence runs aright, as our verſion hath it, as with the people, ſo with the Prince; and ſo forward: yet in the three latter branches, (and not in the two latter onely, as he grounding upon his fore-mentioned miſtake would have it) the text ought rather to be rendered, ſo with the buyer, as with the ſeller; and ſo forward: as if he had ſaid, as the Prince, or Prieſt, ſhall fare no better then the common ſort of people; the Maſter or Miſtreſs, then the Man or Maid-ſervant: ſo it ſhall be no better with the richer ſort, with well-monied men, (ſuch as uſe to purchaſe, are able to lend, and are wont to let money out to uſe) then with thoſe of poor and meaner condition; ſuch as are fain to ſell, and are conſtrained oft to borrow, or to take money up at intereſt: either of which to be enforced unto, is made a note of penury, Deut.15.6-8. & 28.12. Nehem. 5.3,4. Prov.22.2,7. & 29.13. Thus a miſtake hath yet miniſtred an hint of that, which gives ſome light for the right conceiving of the text. Nor were the miſtake ſo much to be regarded, but that it hath bred another more materiall, as one errour uſually begetteth another. As therefore, there was before obſerved ſome difference among the Jewiſh Writers about the diſtinction of this branch from the former: ſo is there no leſs variance among them about the ſtating of the two terms uſed in this branch. For one of them miſled by that former miſtake, would have by the former term here uſed, to wit, noſheh, to be underſtood, the taker up of money at intereſt, or the borrower: and by the latter term, to wit, noſheh bo, the letter out, or the lender, therein controlling another that had gone before him, and went a diverſe way; and with him concur ſome great Maſters in that language; as alſo ſome late Interpreters of prime note, and the Chaldee, and ancient Greek, ſeem to go the ſame way with him. But that ancienter critick by the former term noſheh, underſtandeth the creditor, or letter out, the Money-maſter, as he termeth him; and by the latter, aſher noſheh bo, that is, he to whom he letteth out, or lendeth, the debtor, the taker up, or the borrower; and in his ſteps, tread moſt of the Latine, and all our Engliſh verſions; as alſo the order of the terms in the former branch pleads for it; where the lender ſtandeth before the borrower, as the letter here before the taker; the creditor in either before the debtor: and the conſtant uſe of the word noſheh, never found uſed any otherwiſe, then for one that lendeth, or letteth out, doth abundantly confirm it. See Exod.22.25. Deut.24.11. 2 King.4.1. Pſal.109.11. nor doth the word it ſelf taken apart by it ſelf, ſignifie any other thing in the one member, then it doth in the other; but the ſelf-ſame thing in both: Howbeit, the words taken intirely together, as they make up the latter member of the ſentence, he whom he letteth to him, as Deut. 24.11. the man whom thou lendeſt to him; (for ſo in either place the words expreſly are) they do evidently deſign the debtor: all the difference between thoſe two parallel places is, that there is a defect of the antecedent (ſuch as is found, Ruth 1.16,17. & 2.9. 1 King.18. 12.) in the one, which is expreſſed in the other. But ſo laſtly, 1 Sam.22.2. where it is ſaid, as our verſion rendereth it, every one that was in debt; it is in the original, word for word, every one whom a lender, or letter, was to him (the redundancy before obſerved, there alſo found) that is, every one that had a creditor, or, every one that was indebted. And thus much for the preciſe notion of the terms. Now from hence ſome obſerve, that thoſe of the ten Tribes (whom alone they ſuppoſe this prophecy to concern) had not regarded to obſerve the law of God, by Moſes, enacted againſt taking uſury of their Brethren, Exod. 22.25. Lev.25.36,37. Deut.23.19,20. as alſo many other of Gods Ordinances, v.5. And it is true indeed, that not they alone, but the Jews alſo were oft times very faulty that way, as appears, Neh.5.2——7. Ezek.22.12. as well as in not releaſing their ſervants at the ſix years end, Jer. 34.8——11. But this Prophecy, though it concern the Iſraelites among others, yet it reſpects other Nations beſides them, as was before ſaid: nor is this here mentioned, more then any of the former, as a matter of iniquity; but as a note of ſome mens more plentiful eſtate, then others, and an occaſion of their commerce and dealing with others, uſually of meaner and lower condition, with gain and advantage to themſelves; notwithſtanding which, yet they ſhould be no more ſecured in theſe diſtracted times, then the pooreſt of thoſe they dealt with. See Jer. 15. 10.

V. 3. The Land ſhall be utterly emptied, and utterly ſpoyled] The Land. Heb. earth, as v.4. of Iſrael, ſay ſome; of Judah, other ſome: but al that circuit of land, rather, devoted to deſtruction, againſt the ſame here denounced. See v.1,4. Heb. ſhall emptying be emptied; and ſpoyling ſpoyled, the word in either branch doubled, for the more emphaſis, as the like, Gen.2.17. & 37.33. Exod.18.18. & 19.13. 2 King.3.23. Cant.8.7. and the latter word here confirms the expoſition given of the ſecond, in v.1. emptyed, as Chap. 19.3. ſpoyled, as Chap. 10.6. and 17. 14.

for the Lord hath ſpoken this word] God hath paſſed this doom upon it. See Chap.21.17. or, as ſome, hath ſpoken this thing, as Num.30.1. & 36.6.

V.4. The earth mourneth, and fadeth away] Or, It fadeth away; for ſo runs the Hebrew without the copulative: the earth it mourns, it fades away; there is a fineneſs of language in the originall, which our Engliſh cannot ſo fitly expreſs; as if it were ſaid, it wails, it fails; or, it quails. The former may have reference to the emptying forementioned, by voydance of her Inhabitants: as Chap.3.27. Lam.1.4. the latter, to the ſpoyl, before pointed at, of her fruit, and other furniture; as Chap.1. 30. See v.1,3.

the world languiſheth, and fadeth away] By the world here, ſome ſtill preſs to have underſtood the Land of Iſrael, being as a little world within it ſelf, ſequeſtred and ſevered from other people, by thoſe ſpeciall rites and ordinances aſſigned them by God, which other Nations had not, Deut.4.7,8,34. & 7.6. & 26.17,18. Pſal. 147.19,20. Rom, 3.1,2. and 9.4. but they produce no place, where it is ſo termed; and the term, as it is of a far larger extent; ſo it evinceth this Prophecy to reach far further, then they would have it. Of the word, ſee Chap.13.11. & 14.17.

languiſheth] See chap.16.8. & 19.8. Ezek.7.17.

and fadeth away] The text runs here, alſo, elegantly on the letter, it faints, and fails, or falls; but there is a metaphor, from the faintneſſe of a feeble and craſie body, pining, and ſpent, in a manner, with ſome long and lingring diſeaſe, in the one, 1 Sam.2.5. Neh.4.2. Pſal 6.2. See Chap. 17.4. from plants, that withering and fading, ſhed their flowers, and their leaves, Chap. 1.30. or, from the leaves and flowers themſelves, that ſo wither, and fall, in the other, Pſal. 37.2. Chap.28.4. & 34.4. & 40.7.

the haughty people of the earth do languiſh] Heb. the height, or, haughtineſſe of the people of the earth, not, doth, but, do languiſh. Which ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters taking in the former ſenſe, for height, which it firſt, and properly ſignifies, verſ. 21. Chap.2.13,14. & 14.10,13. & 22.16. expound it of great ones, in power and place, ſet higher then others: as, the height of his Cedars, for, the higheſt, and talleſt of them, Chap.37.24. ſo, the height of the people, for, the higheſt, and greateſt among them: they that ſit loftieſt among them faint, as wel as thoſe that lye loweſt; as even the talleſt men, and the greateſt bodies ſtoop, and grow faint and feeble with ſickneſſe, as well as the loweſt, and the leaſt. So Chap.1.5. & 2.9. & 5.15. But the moſt take it in the latter ſenſe, for haughtineſſe; as Deut.8.14. Pſal.131.1. Prov. 30.13. as pride, for, a proud perſon; or, proud perſons, Jer.50.31. Pſal.36.11. and, might, for, mighty ones, Chap.3.25. ſo, haughtineſſe, for, haughty ones; &, the haughty ones of the people of the earth, for, the haughtieſt, among the people upon earth: as, the wicked of the nations, for, the worſt, and wickeddeſt among them, Ezek. 7.24. The haughtieſt, thoſe that heretofore carried their heads higheſt in any place, among them, do now droop, and hang the head. See Chap.2.12,17. It may well include both; the one uſually cauſing, and accompanied with the other, Chap. 5.15. Ezek.31.10.

V. 5. The Earth alſo is defiled under the Inhabitants thereof] A reaſon of the former denunciation is here rendred, why God was reſolved thus to proceed againſt the world, and the people thereof; to wit, in regard of their ſins, and grievous tranſgreſſions, whereby both thoſe other nations, and his own people, violating as well the Laws of Nature in general, as his ſpecial inſtitutions and ordinances, had defiled and polluted the places of their reſpective abode, which ſhould, therefore, caſt them up, and ſpue them out, as ſome impure and loathſome matter, that made them ſick, and qualmy, until they were rid and eaſed of them, Levit. 18.25-28. Lam.3.13-15.

The earth alſo] Or, as ſome, This land alſo; that is, ſay they, even the land of Iſrael and Judah; not of other nations, at large only: that land, that ſhould have kept it ſelf free from ſuch defilements as other people are polluted with, Lev. 11.43,44. & 18.16,18. Ezek.14.11. and ſo indeed, is the copulative uſed, Chap.12.4. & 22.9. but the article is no other here, then was, ver.1,4. Heb. And the earth; which may well be rendred, For the earth: as Chap.13.8. & 16.2.

is defiled] Either with the gore-blood, and carcaſſes of men, ſlain, and ſacrificed on it, in the execution of theſe judgements, Ezek.7,21-24. & 9.7. & 39.11-20. or, rather, with the impieties, impurities, murthers, rapes, violences, and other like wickedneſſes, committed by thoſe that live therein, Levit. 18.25,27. Numb.35.33. Pſal.106.38. Chap.1.10,15,21. & 4.4. & 54.3. Jer.3.1,2. Ezek.20.30,31.

under the Inhabitants thereof] As if they were ſo contaminated with ſin, that their very footings defiled the ground that they trode on; not unlike thoſe things, or perſons legally impure; whereof, Levit.11.31-35. & 15.4-12,20-27.

becauſe they have tranſgreſſed the Laws, changed the ordinances, broken the everlaſting Covenant] Becauſe all Gods Laws, both general, and ſpecial; civil, and ſacred, have bin grievouſly and extreamly violated by them; that which hath made them ſo impure, Levit.18.24. Ezek.14.11. & 20.26,43. & 23.7,13. & 24.6,13. Zeph.3.1. Mat.15.18-20.

tranſgreſſed] The word ſignifies properly to paſſe over, or beyond, Joſh.4.1. & 15.3. applyed to ſins and treſpaſſes, becauſe by commiſſion of them, men paſſe the bounds and limits preſcribed them by God; as Shimei the circuit, aſſigned him by Solomon, 1 King.2.36,37.

the Laws] Either in general, written, or unwritten, concerning mans duty, both to God and man; which even the Heathen alſo have engraven in their hearts, Rom.2.14,15. or, as ſome, the moral, and civil Laws delivered to Gods people, diſtinguiſhed from the ordinances, afterward mentioned: as 2 Chr.33.8.

changed] So the word, ſometime, ſignifies, Gen. 31.7,41. & 35.2. but not in the form here uſed; where it ſignifies to paſſe away, or, paſs by, Job 4.15. & 9.26. & 11.10. and ſo ſeems to intimate, properly, neglects, or paſſings by; ſins of omiſſion, as the former paſſings over; or, beyond, ſins of commiſſion: and it would therefore be rendred, paſſed by the ordinances.

the ordinances] Heb. ordinance: but taken collectively; as Ezr.7.10. rendred, ſometime, ſtatute, and ſtatutes, Deut.4.5,8. Joſh.24.25. ſuppoſed, here, to intend ſacred rites, and obſervances, more ſpecially by God preſcribed to his people: as Neh.9.13,14.

broken] The word properly ſignifies, to annul, fruſtrate, or make void, Numb.30.12,15.

the everlaſting covenant] Heb. the covenant of eternity: as Chap.55.3. that is, a covenant, never to be broken, or annulled, Jer.50.5. This ſome underſtand of the covenant of circumciſion, made with Abraham and his ſeed. So called, Gen.17.7,13,14. Others, of the Covenant made with the Iſraelites in Mount Sinai, at the giving of the Law, Exod.24.7,8. Jer.11.2,4. and this ſeems more probable then the former. Others, of the Law of nature, concerning all men in general, which was from the beginning, and ſhall laſt to all eternity, Pſal.119.89. Matth.5.18. and they ſuppoſe, that theſe three ſeveral branches intend one and the ſame thing only, in divers terms, as is uſual with this Prophet. But I find not where the word covenant, is thereof uſed in Scripture; and encline therefore rather to the former.

V. 6. Therefore] To wit, for the ſins and tranſgreſſions before-mentioned, verſ. 5. and ſo in the next branch.

hath the curſe devoured the earth] Or, land: as verſ. 1,4,5. the curſe, that is, the wrath of God, by theſe diſmal effects, manifeſted, and executed therein. It ſeems to allude, either to the curſe denounced in the Law, taking hold of the wilfull breakers of it, Deut.27.26. & 28.15-68. & 29.20. or, to the curſe, together with the oath conceived by them, in their covenanting with God, as now for the violation thereof, juſtly inflicted, Neh.10.29. See Jer.23.10. Zach.5.3,4.

and they that dwell therein are deſolate] Being ſtript, and bereft of all thoſe comforts and commodities, that from it they formerly enjoyed, Lam.4.5. or, pined, waſted and conſumed, for want of neceſſary ſuſtenance, Ezek. 4.17. Joel 1.18. or, deſtroyed: as Ezek.6.4,6. according to another reading, they ſuſtein the puniſhment of their treſpaſſes; they ſuffer for their ſins: as Prov.30.10. Jer.2.3. See the like ambiguity, Pſal.5.10. & 34.21,22. Hoſ. 5.15. & 10.2. & 13.16. See alſo, verſ. 20.

therefore the Inhabitants of the earth are burnt] burnt up; conſumed with fire and ſword, by hoſtile Invaſions, Ezek.5.2,4. & 24.10,11. or, with the fire of Gods wrath, Chap.9.18. & 10.16. or, dryed up, and exhauſt; as the body of man, or beaſt, through want of moiſture, Pſal. 69.3. & 102.3. or, a brook, by means of drought, 1 King. 17.7. Jer. 50.38. & 51.32.

and few men left] The words are all ſingular, but collective; as Pſal.8.4. Chap.2.9. & 5.15. See Chap.16.14.

V. 7. The new wine mourneth, the vine languiſheth] The Prophet proceedeth, in particular, to inſtance in ſome ſpecial outward comforts, that the creature is wont to afford men; to wit, in wine, that is ſaid to chear mans heart, Pſal. 104.15. but ſhould now be taken away, both it, and the vines that yeeld it, being both ſpoiled.

the new wine] So it properly ſignifies; whereof the moneth Tiſbri, the ſeventh moneth, anſwering to our September in part, is, by ſome deemed to have its name; becauſe then their vintage was: but it is put here for wine in general: as Chap.36.17. Jer.31.12. Hoſ.7.14.

mourneth] The wine is ſaid to mourn, being ſpilled and ſpoiled by the enemy: as the land, or, ground, is ſaid to mourn, Joel 1.10. implying what it would do, were it ſenſible of what is done unto it. See Chap.23.1.

the vine languiſheth] Being trodden down, and deſpoyled by the enemy. See Chap.16.8. ver.4. Joel 1.12.

all the merry-hearted do ſigh] The wine-drinkers, ver.9. (ſo called, becauſe wine makes the heart merry, Pſal. 104.15. 2 Sam.13.28. Eſth.1.10. Zach.10.7.) do ſigh, and mourn; becauſe the means and matter of maintaining their mirth, are gone, ver.8,12. Amos 5.17. inſtead of their wonted ſinging, ver.9. now they ſigh: to ſigh, for, to mourn: as Ezek.9.4. Lam.1.21.

V. 8. The mirth of Tabrets ceaſeth, the noiſe of them that rejoyce endeth, the joy of the harp ceaſeth] Their muſick and melody, that they uſed at their banquets, and merry-meetings, is all at an end. See Chap.5.12. & 16.10. Jer.7.34. & 16.9. & 25.10. Ezek.26.13. Hoſ.2.11. Amos 6.5,7.

tabrets] Or, tabers. See Chap.5.25. and of harp, there alſo.

the noiſe of them that rejoyce] Or, the tumultuous clamor (the confuſed noiſe that they uſe to make, when they are drunk, Pſal.78.65. Zach.9.15.) of the revellers; ſtyled, the ſons of clamor, Jer.48.45. See Chap.22.2. & 23.7,12.

V. 9. They ſhall not drink wine with a ſong] Heb. the ſong: ſuch ſongs as they uſed to ſing in their merry meetings, and at their feaſts. They ſhall not revel it as they had wont to do; either with voices, or other muſick, ver.8.

drink wine] To drink wine, for, to feaſt: as Job 1.18. Chap.22.13.

ſtrong drink ſhall be bitter to them that drink it] little pleaſure ſhall they take in any ſtrong drink, by reaſon of the calamities and diſtractions of the times. See chap.5.11.

V. 10. The City of confuſion is broken down] Or, The City of emptineſs; as it is rendred, Job 26.7. or, of waſtneſs; as Deut. 32. 10. Job 12.24. or, of deſolation; as chap. 34.11. Jer.4.23. or, of vanity; ſuch, as things void of ſoundneſs, or vertue, are, 1 Sam.12.21. chap. 41.29. & 44.9. & 45.18,19. & 59.4. and becauſe ſuch things are as good as nought, and nothing worth, the word is uſed alſo for nothing, Job 26.7. chap. 40.17,23. So, Cities of waſteneſſe, that is, waſted, made or laid waſte, chap. 61. 4. Hence, ſome underſtand here, the City Bethel; which, both in regard of the Idol, by Ieroboam there erected, 1 King.12. 29,32,33. as alſo of that deſolation that was denounced againſt it, and made good upon it, 1 King.13. 2. Hoſ. 5. 5. is by the Prophets called Bethaven, that is, the houſe, or city of vanity, or deſolation and emptineſſe, Hoſ.4. 15. & 10.5, 6. Others would have it to be Jeruſalem, ſaid to have been broken up by the Chaldees, 2 King. 25. 4. Jer. 39. 2. and as having been guilty of the like ſins with Bethel, did undergo the like judgment, Jer.7.17-20. & 11.13. & 32. 28-35. And theſe ſeem juſtly to others over-narrow; But they may no leſſe juſtly be deemed to range, as far over-wide, that would thereby have underſtood the whole world; becauſe all that is in it, is vanity of vanities, and nothing but vanity; Eccl. 1.2. and to be brought unto its firſt emptineſſe again, Gen.1. 2. The moſt, and beſt, ſuppoſe it to be ſpoken, not of any one city, but by the word city, taken collectively, as chap.25. 2. & 27.10. the ſeveral Cities of the Kingdoms and Countries reſpectively, which this prophecy concerned; ſo termed, as ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, becauſe their Inhabitants ran after idols, and other vanities, of whom this word is uſed, 1 Sam.12.21. chap.44.9. or, as others of them, rather, becauſe ruined, emptied, and deſolated, by the enemies breaking into them, and breaking down of them, though the word down is not in the text. See chap. 3. 26. & 34.11. and it is obſerved by one of them, that by a kind of anticipation, it is ſaid, the city of deſolation is broken; albeit, it were not ſuch before it was broken; but being broken, and ſo ruined, came to be ſuch; to which he ſuppoſeth a parallel place to be, chap.44. 19. whereof ſee there. But ſuch anticipations are found manifeſtly, Gen.28.19,22. Lev.15.16. Judg.4.21. chap.27.9. & 28.1. & 32. 6. & 40.19. Ezek.3.3. Nah.3.5. Howbeit, others would have it to be termed the city of deſolation; becauſe deſigned, or deſtinated to deſolation, as, the city of deſtruction, becauſe thereunto deſigned, chap. 19. 18. See Chap. 23. 12.

every houſe is ſhut up, that no man may enter in] or, that there is no going in, or out, Heb. every houſe is ſhut up from entring, as chap. 23. 1. Which ſome underſtand of being ſhut up, to keep out the enemy having broke into the city, chap. 26.20. Joh.20.19. Others, ſo ſhut, that none goeth in, becauſe there is no buſineſſe there to be done, as chap.23.1. or, ſtand ſhut up, and neither going in, or out, for fear of the enemy, as 1 King. 15.17. 2 Chr.15.5. & 16.1. or, becauſe the Inhabitants are gone, either captived, or ſlain, ch.27.10. I ſuppoſe it may well be rendred, all houſes are as ſhut up, ſo that there is no going out, or in; there is no more going in or out, then as if the houſes were all ſhut up. See chap.22.3. Jer. 13. 19. See alſo, ver. 22.

every houſe] that is, many, or the moſt of them, as Gen. 41.57. ſo one of the Jewiſh Commenters. Howbeit, if rendred as before was intimated, there will no ſuch reſtriction need.

V. 11. There is a crying for wine in the ſtreets] This paſſage, among others, ſhews that this Prophecy is not to be underſtood of the univerſal deſtruction of the world at the laſt day, 2 Pet.3.10,11.

a crying for wine] or, becauſe of the wine; not calling for it, but yelling and lamenting; not, as ſome, for the preſent want ſo much, Hoſh. 7. 14. as becauſe of the ſpoil, and loſſe of it, Lam.5.18. Ezek. 27. 30. where it ſhould alſo be ſo rendred. See chap. 16.7-10. for they ſeem to wander much out of the way, who would have it underſtood, either of paſſengers, or thoſe few left in the city, crying up and down in the ſtreets, who hath any wine to ſell? as intimating, both the ſcarcity of that liquor, and mens greedy deſire of it, notwithſtanding the calamities of the times; that which ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters ſuggeſt, and ſome of ours admit.

all joy is darkened] extinct, put out. See chap 8. 22. & 9.19. word for word, it is even-tide with it; becauſe at even darkneſs comes Pſal. 104. 20, 23. their mirth ſhall ſet, as the Sun doth at even, and end in mourning, Amos 8.9,10. Howbeit, becauſe the verb is in that notion no where elſe found, there may be ſome ſuſpition, that by a tranſpoſition of letters, which in Scripture is ſometime obſerved, (ſee Lev.3.7. & 4. 32. 1 Chr.4.9, 11.) the word may ſignifie here to paſſe away, which, with that alteration, it moſt frequently doth, and would ſuit very well with the next branch. See Job 30.15.

the mirth of the Land is gone] together with the liquor that helped to maintain it, v. 8,9. Heb. is gone into captivity, chap. 5.13. as alluding to the captivity of the people of the land carried away by the enemy: the like alluſion is in the word of Elies daughter in law, when the Ark of God was taken, 1 Sam. 4.21,22. See alſo, Hoſ.10.5.

V.12. In the city is left deſolation;] or, as ſome render it, He that is left in the city ſhall be deſolate. Heb. deſolation, as chap.1.7. or, unto deſolation, as Jer.4.7. or as others; what is left in the City, ſhall be deſtroyed with deſolation; ſupplying the verb from the branch enſuing: as chap. 13.13. & 18.7. and the particle of wanting, as chap.21.7. & 22. 17,18. which way ſoever we read it, the ſenſe is plain; there is nothing left in the city, City and Country are both alike ſtript and plundered of all, City for Cities, as v.10.

and the gate is ſmitten with deſtruction] the ſame, in effect, is in divers terms repeated.

the gate] either the gates of the city, broken open and deſtroyed by the adverſary, Judg.9.52. Neh.1.3. Ezek.21. 22. or, gate, for city, as chap. 14 31.

is ſmitten] Heb. broken to pieces, as Mic.1.7.

with deſtruction] ſo the Rabbins, affirming this and the former word to be ſiſters, and ſo the moſt take it; yet ſome render it, with a noiſe, or, a crack; ſuch a noiſe as ſouldiers are wont to make in the aſſault of a Fort or City, Ezek.21.22. Amos 2. 2. or ſuch a crack, as Gates or Walls, being violently broken aſunder, or broken down, are wont to give, alluded to, Jer.49. 21. Ezek.26.15. The reaſon of the ambiguity is, becauſe both the root whence this word comes (being no where elſe found) and ſome others derived from the ſame, and in ſound coming neer it, have in them, not unuſually, a notion of either: the reaſon whereof, may ſeem to be, becauſe ſuch aſſaults, whereby deſolation is wrought, are commonly accompanied with fearfull out-cries on either ſide. See on chap.16.9,10. The particle, all grant, is to be ſupplyed, as before.

V. 13. When thus it ſhall be in the midſt of the Land among the people, there ſhall be, as the ſhaking of an Olive-tree, and as the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done] or, For ſo (as Gen. 15. 5.) it ſhall be in the Land among the people, as in the beating of an Olive tree, as with cluſters left, when the vintage is done. Thus, or, ſo, as was before ſaid, it ſhall be, when theſe judgments ſhall be executed in thoſe places, and with thoſe people where they are put in execution, that a very ſmall company ſhall be left, or eſcape; which may here come in, either in way of confirmation of the former relation, and further amplification of the judgment therein related, by a lamentable effect, to wit, the paucity of thoſe that ſhould therein eſcape, or in way of mitigation and limitation of thoſe ſad denunciations of deſolation and deſtruction, that yet God would not make an utter riddance of all, but reſerve a remnant, that he might have a people to praiſe him. v.14. The former I conceive to be principally intended, though with an intimation of the latter. See Chap.1.9. & 6.13. & 7.3. & 10.21,22. Jer.3.14. This ſome ſuppoſe to have reference to thoſe that Tiglath-Pileſer captived, 2 King.15.29. Others, to the Jews, that either by the Chaldees were carryed captive to Babylon, Jer.39. 9. or that voluntarily of themſelves went down into Egypt, Jer. 43. 5 —— 7. both which I leave to the judgment of others.

in the midſt of the land] or, earth, as Pſal. 74. 12. whereby ſome underſtand Jeruſalem, ſituate (as the Jews ſay) in the very midſt of the world, or the navel of the earth, Ezek. 39.12. neer to which, ſay they, the laſt judgment, or oecumenicall aſſiſe, Act.17.31. ſhall be held, Joel 3.2,12. Zach.14.4. But theſe are groundleſſe conceits; in the midſt of the land, is no more, then in the land, as chap.6.12. & 7. 22. as, in the midſt of the people; or peoples rather, (for ſo the text hath it, as alſo chap.25.6, 7.) is no more, then among the people, or peoples, as Jer.39.14. & 40. 1,5,6. which yet argues the prophecy to concern more, then any one people.

as the ſhaking of an Olive-tree] or, as in the beating of an Olive-tree; it ſeems to have been a proverbiall kind of ſpeech: ſee chap.17.6.

as the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done] or, as cluſters left, when the vintage is done, a defect of the epithet cluſters, for cluſters left: as ſheep, for loſt ſheep, chap. 53. 6. See chap. 5. 2. and the cluſters ſo left, are called the cluſters of the vintage, Mic.7.1. as, a corpſe left by the ſoul, is called a ſoul, Num.19.13. and wines drawn off the lees, are called lees; by the name of that they left, chap. 25.6. See chap.17. 6. Jer.6. 9. & 49. 9. The vintage, the time of cutting grapes hath thence its name in Hebrew; as the harveſt, being the time of mowing graſſe, or reaping corn, is thence alſo ſo termed; and but one letter difference between the one and the other. See chap.17.5,11.

V. 14. They ſhall lift up their voyce, they ſhall ſing for the majeſty of the Lord, they ſhall cry aloud from the Sea.] In this verſe, and ſome enſuing, is deſcribed the condition and carriage of thoſe few, the remains among each people, that ſhould be preſerved in, or delivered out of the common calamities and afflictions of thoſe times; they ſhould abundantly rejoyce, and out of the joyfull ſenſe and apprehenſion of Gods might and mercy therein ſhewed them, break forth into praiſes of him. So Chap. 12. & 25. & 26. This ſome reſtrain to thoſe that were delivered in Sennacheribs Invaſion, Chap. 37. 31, 32. ſome to thoſe that were freed from the Babylonian captivity, Pſal. 126. 1, 2. But it ſeems to be of a larger extent, and ſome extend it unto the times of the Goſpel, which yet ſeems not ſo cleer.

They] or, theſe; for there is an emphaſis in the word, the pronoun not only expreſſed, which ſeldome is, but with an additional adjection alſo to it, as Eccl. 3. 18. Chap. 35. 2. the perſons ſo left, as v. 13.

lift up their voice] The phraſe is uſed to ſignifie an expreſſion, either of great grief, as 1 Sam. 11. 4. Job 2. 12. or, of much joy, and ſo here, as the like, chap. 40. 9.

ſing] or, make joyfull acclamations, as chap. 12. 6. & 54. 1. Pſal. 35. 27.

for the majeſty of the Lord] or, excellency, as Amos 8. 7. or, magnificence, See chap. 2. 10. the ſupereminent greatneſſe of his might, and mercy ſhewed, both in the deſtruction of ſome, and in the deliverance of others. Theſe words, according to the diſtinctions in the original, appertain not to this branch, but to the next.

cry aloud] Of this word, ſee on chap. 12. 6. Some ſuppoſe, that it alludes here to the ſhoutings in vintage and harveſt, chap. 16. 9. Others, to the ſhouting of Sea-men, at their coming into harbour, becauſe of the next words.

from the Sea] that is, ſay ſome, after their deliverance from their former afflictions; compared in Scripture oft to a Sea, Pſal. 42. 7. & 69. 1, 2, 15. & 88. 7. & 93. 3. & 130. 1. Rev. 15. 2, 3. when the Sea ſhall be no more, Rev. 21. 1. of this uſe of the particle, ſee on chap. 38. 15. & 53. 8. But other rather underſtand it of the place, from whence thoſe voices of joy and praiſe ſhould be heard, which ſome underſtand of thoſe that are upon the Sea, Pſal. 65. 5. & 107. 23. as if the ſenſe were, that God ſhould be magnified both by Sea and Land, Pſal. 96. 11. & 98. 9. Others, from the Sea, that is, from the Weſt, as chap. 49. 12. from Paleſtine, which lay Weſt from Judea, chap. 9. 12. or the ſea-coaſt, the utmoſt bound of the Land of Iſrael Weſtward, Ioſh. 1. 4. & 15. 47. or, the Iles of the midland ſea, v. 15. or laſtly, which is moſt likely, the tranſmarine lands, or ſea-coaſts in general, where any of thoſe ſhall be found that were partakers of this deliverance.

V. 15. Wherefore glorifie ye God in the fires; even the name of the Lord God of Iſrael, in the Iles of the ſea] The faithfull delivered, and eſcaping the forementioned calamities, as they celebrate Gods name, for both his judgments on the wicked, and his goodneſſe to themſelves; ſo they incite others alſo to do the like with them, and encourage one another thereunto: ſo Pſal. 34. 3. chap. 12. 4, 5.

in the fires] Ye that abide yet in the fire of tribulation, Pſal. 66. 10, 12. chap. 48. 10. deſpair not, nor be diſcouraged; but by your patient ſufferings glorifie God, and depend upon him for deliverance, Pſal. 94. 19. Mat. 5. 12. Act. 5. 41. & 16. 25. Rom. 5. 3. 2 Cor. 4. 8, 9. & 6. 9, 10. Phil. 1. 18, 20. & 2. 17. Col. 1. 24. Iam. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 6——8. & 4. 12-14. or, in the valleys, ſo termed, as ſome, by way of antiphraſis, as a grove in Latine; becauſe they enjoy leſſe light that live in them, then thoſe that dwell in higher places on the hils; or as others rather, for the plenty of herbs, and green things that there grow, chap. 18. 4. & 26. 19. So divers of the Jewiſh Doctors underſtand that, Gen. 11. 28, 31. Ur of the Chaldeans, that is, the vale wherein the Chaldeans dwelt, for their Countrey lay low: ſee chap. 21. 1. and they ſuppoſe the valleys here mentioned, becauſe more Cities are uſually in valleys, for conveniency of watering and feeding, Pſal. 64. 12, 13. & 104. 10, 14. then on hils, chap. 32. 19, 20. and this ſeems moſt probable. Though there want not Jewiſh Criticks that would have the word ſignifie holes, as two other words ſomewhat neer it do, both found together, chap. 11, 8. expounding it either of ſuch holes and caves, wherein they lay hid, 1 Sam. 13. 6. & 14. 11. or of ſuch holes and dungeons wherein they were held, Chap. 44. 22.

the name of the Lord] the Lord himſelf, as Pſal. 9. 2. & 69. 30. his power and majeſty, Deut. 28. 58. 1 King. 8. 41, 42. ſee chap. 30. 27.

the God of Iſrael] by his judgments manifeſted to be the only true God, 1 King. 18. 39. Pſal. 9. 16. & 83. 18. chap. 45. 6. Zach. 14. 9. but therefore, ſaith the Rabbine, here ſo ſtiled; becauſe for his Iſrael he doth all this, Chap. 43. 3, 4. and 45. 4.

in the Iſles of the ſea] The Iles, whereof great ſtore in the midland ſea, Pſal. 97. 1. or, the regions bordering upon the ſea. ſee v. 14. chap. 21. 6.

V. 16. From the uttermoſt part of the earth have we heard ſongs,] Or, of the Land, as v. 3. The generallity of the joy, and praiſes of God, from that ſcattered remnant, out of all places, far and neer, where any of them are found; there is nothing but ſinging with them; all the Land over they ſing ſo loud, that they may be heard even from the Lands-end; ſee the like of Lamentations and out-cries, chap. 15. 4, 5, 8. Jer. 49. 21.

the uttermoſt part] Heb. wing, as chap. 11. 12.

ſongs] ſongs of deliverance, Pſal. 32. 7. ſuch ditties properly, as are made to be ſung unto ſome muſical inſtrument, and thoſe are in Greek alſo peculiarly termed Pſalms, Col. 3. 16. ſee chap. 12. 2.

even glory to the righteous] Some make this the ſubject matter of their ſinging, to wit, Glory be, or be given, to the righteous, that is, to God the righteous One, whoſe righteouſneſſe hath been manifeſted, and magnified in the execution of the judgments above-mentioned, Pſal. 129. 4. Apoc. 7. 12. & 15. 3, 4. & 19. 1. Others underſtand it of the godly and righteous, by thoſe deliverances made beautifull, delightfull, amiable, and honourable: ſee Pſal. 149. 4, 9. and they read the words, a beauty, or beautifull ornament, to the righteous: ſee chap. 28. 5. and of the term it ſelf, chap. 4. 2. righteous, for righteous ones, as chap. 3. 10.

but I ſaid, my leanneſſe, my leanneſſe] After the relation of this great glory that ſhould fill the hearts of thoſe that ſhould eſcape ſo, as to ſurvive the judgments before denounced; the Prophet, in an abrupt manner, breaks off that his chearfull and gladſome diſcourſe; and to ſhew how full his heart was of grief and regret for the miſeries that were the whileſt to befall his people, he falls to lament their condition, as well in regard of their grievous ſins, as of the great variety of dreadful and unavoidable judgments, that for the ſame ſhould be inflicted upon them; withall, making a very pathetical profeſſion, and affectionate expreſſion of his own preſent affliction, upon the very fore-ſight thereof: ſo Jer. 9. 1.

My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe] The old Latine, following the Chaldee, rendreth it; My ſecret to my ſelf, my ſecret to my ſelf: And the Chaldee expounds it of a ſecret revealed to the Prophet, concerning the retribution of the wicked in one kind, and of the righteous in another; but neither is the laſt letter in it a pronoun, but the formal and uſual termination of the word, as in others of the like ſtamp; nor is the word ever found without it in Hebrew, as it is, when it ſignifies a ſecret, in Chaldee; nor hath either the root it ſelf, from whence the word riſeth, or any other of the ſame ſtock, any other notion but of leanneſſe, as our Engliſh therefore well rendreth it. See Num. 13. 21. chap. 10. 16. & 17. 4. Ezek. 34. 20. The meaning is, that the grief of his mind was ſo great, for the perfidiouſneſs of his people, and Gods wrath thereby incenſed, and ſure ſhortly to ſeize on them, that even the fleſh of his body was alſo waſted and conſumed with it, as with ſome emaciating and pining diſeaſe. So Pſal. 69. 9. & 119. 139. See alſo the like expreſſions, upon other occaſions, Pſal. 22. 15, 17. & 32. 4. & 102. 3-5, & 119. 83. The repetition is only to manifeſt the vehemency of his affection: ſee the like, Jer. 4. 19.

Wo unto me] or, wo is me, or, alas for me; for it is ſpoken, not in way of denunciation, as chap. 29. 1. but in way of lamentation, as Lam. 5. 16.

the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherouſly; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherouſly] Heb. dealing treacherouſly, have dealt treacherouſly, as Jer. 5. 11. that is, they have dealt exceeding treacherouſly; or, have dealt treacherouſly oft times, again, and again. He cannot multiply words ſufficiently, to expreſſe the extream perfidious courſes and carriages of his people towards God; whom by ſo many ſpecial and peculiar obligations, they ſtood ſo deeply endeared unto, and had ſo oft, and ſo ſolemnly engaged themſelves: that which made their treſpaſſes and tranſgreſſions far the more hainous then the ſins and exceſſes of any other people, Pſal. 81. 11. Amos 3. 2. See the like heaping up of various expreſſions to the ſame purpoſe, Dan. 9. 5, 6. For it cannot be ſo fitly underſtood of other perſons dealing perfidiouſly with Gods people; albeit it be true, that divers of them ſo did, chap. 21. 2. & 33. 1, 8. Lam. 1. 2. and ſo ſome apply it, as if the Prophet mourned, not ſo much for their treacherous dealing with God, as for others treacherous dealing with them.

V. 17. Fear, and the pit, and the ſnare, are upon thee, O Inhabitant of the earth] Heb. Fear, and pit, and ſnare. The hainouſneſſe and grievouſneſſe of their ſinful courſes was before; the dreadfulneſſe of Gods inevitable judgments upon them, for the ſame, now enſueth. Thus when ſin is come to an height, judgment followeth it at the heels, Gen. 15. 16. Ezek. 7. 10, 11. Matth. 23. 32, 36. 1 Theſſ. 2. 16. In theſe words, a variety of perils, of ſundry ſorts, is implyed, and they are knit together with a copulative reiterated, as purſuing the ſame perſons; that if they chance to miſſe in the one, yet they may be ſure to take in the other, ver. 18. The words run very elegantly, in a neer affinity of letter, and ſound, in the original; as if we ſhould ſay, Scare, and ſewer, and ſnare, or the like; yea, the words come ſo neer, in letters and ſound, one to another, that ſometime one of them is, in ſome copies, read for the other: as Lam. 3.47. See the ſame, Jer. 48.43.

O Inhabitant of the earth] Inhabitant, for, Inhabitants; as Chap. 5.3. but there is ſome emphaſis, here, in it; as if each one ſhould be expoſed to the ſame perils of the earth, or land; as ver. 16. which the Jewiſh Commenters would, by all means, put off from their own Nation, to the people abroad in the world.

V. 18. And it ſhall come to paſſe, that] Heb. And it ſhall be: as Chap. 17.4.

he who fleeth from the noiſe of the fear, ſhall fall into the pit; and he that cometh out of the midſt of the pit, ſhall be taken in the ſnare] The meaning is plain, he that eſcapeth one danger, ſhall fall into another; as if he ſaid, he that fleeth for fear of the enemy, either breaking in upon him, or purſuing him, ſhall fall into ſome Well, or ditch; as thoſe, Gen. 14.10. and if he get out of that, (though he may then think himſelf ſafe,) ſhall fall into the hands of ſome that lye in ambuſh for him, or the like; as Judg. 20.42,43. See the like, 1 King. 20.30. Amos 5.19. & 9.23. and an alluſion to ſomewhat the like, Prov. 29.25. There ſeems to be, in the words, a metaphor taken from the manner of hunters dealing with Deer, or other wild beaſts, whom, when they have digged pits for, and covered with ſome looſe, or light matter, and ſet toils, or gins and ſnares, not far from them, that if they eſcape, either paſſing by, or getting up out of, the one, they may be ſurprized with, and held faſt in the other, do then, with noiſe and clamor raiſed rouze up their prey, and ſo drive them, while they flee to ſave themſelves, for fear of the noiſe, into thoſe pits, or gins, that they have before-hand prepared for them, to intercept them in their flight. Hereunto are frequent alluſions in Scripture, Pſal. 9.15. & 10.8,9. & 35.7,8. & 57.6. & 64.5. & 91.3. & 124.6,7. & 140.3,11. Jer. 16.16. Lam. 3.52. & 4.18-20. Howbeit, I cannot concur with thoſe, who in the word fear, ſuppoſe an alluſion to ſuch feathers and papers, as hunters uſe, with us, to blanch the Deer with; or that ſtring, or line, furniſhed with the like, which they were wont, anciently, to ſcare wild beaſts with, to the ſame purpoſe that ours do; becauſe in Latine, it is termed formido, that is, the fright, or the ſcare: for it ſuits not well with the words of the text, wherein it is ſaid, not, from the ſight, as it ſhould be, if that were intended, but, from the noiſe (which that makes none,) of the fear: and indeed, the noiſe, or voice of the fear, is nothing but the fear of the noiſe: as, the uncleanneſſe of a man, for, a man of uncleanneſſe, Levit. 7.21. the oath of obligation, for, the obligation of an oath, Numb. 30.14. and to flee from the ſound, or the noiſe of the fear, is no other, then to flee for fear of the noiſe; as for fear of the ſword, Chap. 21.15. or, to flee from the dreadful noiſe; as Chap. 33.3. a noiſe of fear, for, a fearfull noiſe; or, a noiſe, or report of ſome fearfull evil approaching; as Job 15.21.

out of the midſt of the pit] For, out of the pit, ſimply; as Prov. 5.15. Jer. 51.6. with Rev. 18.4. Ezek. 32.21. Amos 6.4.

for the windows from on high are opened, and the foundations of the earth do ſhake] This is further added, more fully to illuſtrate the unavoidableneſſe of Gods judgments; the vengeance of God breaking forth, and ſurprizing them, both from above, and from beneath, as well over their heads, as under their feet; and as no ſhelter for them, againſt the one; ſo no ſteddy ſtanding for them, in regard of the other.

the windows from on high are opened] from on high, that is, from heaven. So Chap. 32.15. Lam. 1. 3. the windows from heaven, for, the windows of heaven: as, a boar from the wood, for, a boar of the wood: Pſal. 80.13. or, the windows from above pour down, being opened; or, are opened, and pour down from above. Of which conciſe and comprehenſive form of ſpeech, ſee on Chap. 14.12. & 38.17. The windows of heaven are ſaid to be ſet open, to intimate, ſometime, abundance of bleſſings, Deut. 28.12. Mal. 3.10. ſometime, to expreſs as large meaſure of unavoidable judgements; and ſo here, in way of alluſion, either to the general deluge in Noahs dayes, Gen. 7.11. or, to that dreadful deſtruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. 19.24. See Pſal. 11.6. Rom. 1.18.

the foundations of the earth do ſhake.] An hyperbolical phraſe, very frequent in Scripture, whereby is repreſented that exceeding terrour and aſtoniſhment, wherewith people are ſurprized and tranſported, upon the manifeſtation of Gods might and wrath, in ſome extraordinary judgment; as if the earth, to the very center of it, ſhook under their feet. See Pſal. 18.7. Chap. 2.19,21. & 13.13.

V. 19. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean diſſolved; the earth is moved exceedingly] The Propet proceeds, ſtill, in rhetorical amplifications of the ruines and ſubverſion of the Kingdoms and States, coming within compaſs of this Prophecy, ſo ſubverted, and all things with them turned upſide-down; as if the earth it ſelf, that beareth them, were rent, and torn aſunder and ſhattered, and not able, any longer, to conſiſt, or to ſubſiſt. So ver. 1, 18, 20.

is utterly broken down] Heb. in breaking aſunder, or to pieces, is broken aſunder, or, to pieces; for that is the more proper notion of the word, and better ſuits with the object here, the earth. So Pſal. 2.9. Prov. 11.15. & 13.20. & 25.19.

is clean diſſolved] Heb. in diſſolving, is diſſolved; or, rather, in renting, or, tearing, is rent, or torn aſunder. For though the word in one form ſignifies to diſſolve, break, fruſtrate, or make void, vows, covenants, and contracts, Numb. 30.8,12, 13,15. verſ. 5. yet in the form here uſed, it ſignifies to rent, or tear aſunder, ſome ſolid body, Job 16.12. Pſal. 74.13. and thence of the word for clefts, or ruptures in the ground, Chap. 2.20. yet there may be a glance at the former, here, in this latter, as noting a retaliation of tranſgreſſion, and penalty; the earth is broken, and rent aſunder with them; becauſe they have broken and violated their covenant with God, verſ. 5.

is moved exceedingly] Heb. in moving, is moved. The word is uſed for ſuch a moving, by which a man ſtaggers; ſo as his feet are ſcarce able to keep him ſtanding upright, Deut. 32.35. Pſal. 13.5. & 17.5. & 66.9. & 98.18. or, for ſuch a moving, where ſomewhat is removed out of its former fixed ſeat, Chap. 54.10. Applyed to the earth, or land, and the States and Kingdoms thereof, Pſal. 46.6. & 60.2.

V. 20. The earth ſhall reel to and fro, like a drunkard] Or, reeleth: that it may run in the ſame tenour with the former. The future is frequently uſed of things ſpoken of, as paſt, or preſent, Pſal. 2.2. & 18.6,11,13,16,20. Heb. reeling reeleth: the ſame term is uſed, Chap. 19.1. & 29.9. and the ſame ſimilitude, Pſal. 107.27. Chap. 19.1. Jer. 23.9. It is the ſame in effect, but clad under a new notion in other terms, that was before, ver. 19.

and ſhall be removed like a cottage] Or, is removed, as before. The word properly importeth a flitting, or removing from place to place; the curſe of Cain, Gen. 4.14,16.

a cottage] The word is uſed, Chap. 1.8. for a ſhed, that a gardiner, or keeper of a garden, ſetteth up in it, there to repoſe, or to ſhelter himſelf in a ſtorm; or from thence to watch the fruits, or plants in it; and it is there rendred, a lodge: but it ſeems here to be taken for a tent; either a ſouldiers tent, as ſome, that is taken down and removed, when they are to march, or are quitting of their quarters; or, a ſhepherds tent, which he removes from place to place, as he finds conveniency of feeding for his ſheep, Chap. 13.20. & 38.12.

and the tranſgreſſion thereof ſhall be heavy upon it; and it ſhall fall, and not riſe again] Or, that it ſhall fall, and not riſe again; as Judg. 7.13. the judgements of God, by the tranſgreſſions of its Inhabitants procured, ſhall lye ſo heavy on it, that it ſhall ſink down under the weight of them, and not be able to recover again its former eſtate. See ver. 5,6.

the tranſgreſſion] That is, puniſhment of it: as Gen. 4.7, 13. Prov. 29.22.

heavy] In the puniſhment of it, Pſal. 38.4. Ezek. 33.10. a metaphor taken from weighty burdens, ſo heavy, that a man cannot ſtand upright under them.

not riſe again] Heb. not add to riſe; So Jer. 25.27. & 51.64. Amos 5.2.

V. 21. And it ſhall come to paſſe in that day, that, &c.] As Chap. 10.27.

the Lord ſhall puniſh the hoſt of the high ones, that are on high, and the Kings of the earth, upon the earth] None ſo great, or high, in power, or place, that ſhall eſcape in this judgement of God. verſ. 2. Chap. 5.15.

puniſh] Heb. viſit upon: as Chap. 28.14.

the hoſt of the high ones, that are on high] Or, the hoſt of that high one, (that is, as ſome think, the King of Aſſyria, Chap. 10.12.) that ſitteth on high; ſo far above other Princes, Chap. 36.4. or, as the King of Babylon, in his own haughty conceit, Chap. 14.13,14. or, the hoſt of each high one, with the high one himſelf; not their hoſts alone, but themſelves alſo; as Pſal. 68.12, Chap. 34.2. So is the particle uſed, 1 Sam. 1.24. Jer. 11.19. or, each high one, in his height; that is, the higheſt of men, in their higheſt eſtate. And ſo the latter part of the verſe, ſhould expound the former. But ſome would have it meant of the celeſtial bodies, the Sun, and the Moon, that are ſaid to be darkned, verſ. 23. the darkning whereof is counted a diſmal ſign, Chap. 13.10. Joel 2.21, to the Heathen eſpecially, Jer. 10.2. Some, of the Angels, that ſtand for ſeveral Kings, and ſeem concerned in their affairs; them in heaven, oppoſed to, yet joyned with, the Kings on earth: So ſome of the Jewiſh Commenters, from Dan. 10.13,20,21. Of Chriſtian Writers, not a few, of the Devills, thoſe principalities, and powers, that are ſaid to be in high, (as our laſt edition rendreth it,) or rather, in heavenly places; that is, aloft, in the ayr, Eph. 2.2. (as, the birds of heaven, Pſal. 8.8. Matth. 13.32. that is, of the air.) and are to be judged at the laſt day, 1 Cor. 6.3. Jud. 6. And ſome again, of their idols, ſet uſually aloft, 2 Chron. 34.4. or their images of the celeſtial bodies, Chap.17.8. & 27.9. Amos 5.26. Act.7.43. See Chap. 19.1. & 46.1. Others, of the heavenly hoſt here on earth, that is, the Church militant, which ſhould be viſited, as well as the world, and the Princes of it, Lam.2.1. Dan.8.10. Rev.12. 1, 3,7. Among this great variety of Interpretations, to which divers others might be added; I ſuppoſe that moſt probable, that by the hoſt of the high one, (the word collectively taken; for thoſe, that ſit aloft, Chap.26.5. are meant, thoſe great Monarchs and Potentates, ſuch as the Heads were of the Aſſyrian, and Chaldean Empire, ſtyled not barely Kings, but Kings of kings, Dan.2.37. and whoſe dominion is ſaid to reach up unto heaven, Dan.4.20,22. whoſe reſplendent ſtate and majeſty, is alſo compared to the luſtre and brightneſs of thoſe celeſtial bodies, Chap.13.19. with 14.11. ver. 23. and whoſe dejection and downfal, therefore, is reſembled by ſimilitudes taken from, and glancing at the diſſolution and alteration that thoſe heavenly ſubſtances ſhall, in likelihood, undergo at the laſt day. See Chap.34.4. Rev.6.12-14. as on the other ſide, the reſtitution and reſtauration of Gods Church, and children, after ſome long captivity, or grievous calamities, is wont to be deciphered by reſemblances drawn from, and alluding to, the general reſurrection, and glorious condition that the whole body of the faithful, ſhall, at the laſt day, attain, Chap.26.19. Ezek.37.1-14. Dan.12.1,2.

and the Kings of the earth, upon the earth] Or, that are upon the earth; that it may anſwer the former branch: thoſe Kings and Princes, who though great, and high, in regard of thoſe that are under their command; yet ſeem to have their thrones on the ground, in compariſon of thoſe their ſuperiours, ſo far above them, that they ſeem to have their thrones ſet among the ſtars, or above the clouds, Chap.14.13,14. See Chap.10.9.

V. 22. And they ſhall be gathered together, as priſoners are gathered together in the pit; and ſhall be ſhut up in the priſon] Theſe great ones, of both ſorts, or ſizes, When God ſhall have executed judgment thus with them, ſhall, as common people captived, be kept down, and kept in ſo by his Almighty power, that they ſhall no more be able to ſtir abroad, or to act ought, as they had wont to do, until he pleaſe to releaſe them, and ſet them at liberty again, then as if they had been all that while kept faſt ſhut up in ſome dungeon, or ſome ſtrong and cloſe priſon. See Zach.11.9,12. Rev. 20.1-3. and of ſuch like executions of judgment on ſuch, 2 King.23.33. & 25.7. 2 Chr.33.11. & 36.6. Pſal.149.7,8. Chap.38.33. Jer. 52. 12. Ezek.19.4,9. Lam.4.20.

be gathered together, as priſoners are gathered together] Heb. gathered together with the gathering of a priſoner, as ſome render it: and ſo it ſhould be like the phraſe uſed, Chap. 10. 26. & 27.7. & 62.5. but becauſe the former noun is not in a form of regiment, it would rather be rendred, as the Rabbines conceive it, they ſhall be gathered with a gathering, (that is, exactly, or ſtrictly gathered, ſo as none ſhall eſcape; as throw with a throwing, chap.22.17. and as, gathering gather, Mic. 2.12. beſides that, the verb is in a form alſo implying no leſſe, and ſo chap.33.4. Zach.14.14.) as a priſoner, (to wit, is gathered) or, as priſoners (the word taken collectively, as Pſal.79.11. & 102. 20.) are gathered together, a defect of the note of ſimilitude, as chap.22.18. yet ſome render it without any ſuch ſupply, they ſhall be collected, being collected, bound. Heb. ſay they, a collection bound: but this ſounds very harſh; unleſſe we read, and bound; but the word is not a participle, but a noun, and that ſingular; and ſo alſo, the text ſeems over-forced. Nor doth that, which ſome of the Rabbines ſuggeſt, come off any more ſmoothly, to wit, that thoſe great ones, Iſraels enemies, when they are gathered together, ſhall be as a man in bonds, not able to ſtir hand or foot, untill they have ſubmitted themſelves to Gods people. See ſomewhat the like, chap.22.3. For as for the Latine, they ſhall be gathered with the gathering of one bundle, it cannot be admitted, ſince that the word here uſed, doth no where ſignifie a bundle, but a priſoner always, or one in bonds, chap.10.4. & 42. 7. nor any interpretations therefore grounded thereupon.

gathered together] that is, ſay ſome, deſtroyed, becauſe the word ſometime ſeems to have ſome ſuch like notion, chap.57. 1. Ier.8.13. Hoſ.4.3. Zeph.1.2. but the moſt take it, in the ordinary and moſt common ſenſe, they ſhall be gathered together, as malefactors are oft times out of ſeveral places, to be laid up faſt in ſome Gaol or priſon, untill the day, either of aſſiſe, or of releaſe.

in the pit] Heb. on the pit; yet the particle is alſo ſo uſed, chap.38.20. and in the next branch; and if it be ſo taken here, it may ſeem, that ſomewhat elſe ſhould be ſupplyed, and the text thus read, they ſhall be gathered together, ——— and caſt into, or laid up in the pit: of which manner of conciſe ſpeech, ſee v.18. Otherwiſe it may be rendred, they ſhall be gathered together ——— for the pit, as malefactors for the Gaol.

the pit] that is, ſay ſome, the grave, which mens carcaſſes are wont to be caſt into, chap.14.16,20. & 38.18. others better, the dungeon or hole, wherein priſoners are caſt and kept, Ier. 37. 16. & 38.6. Zach. 9. 11.

and they ſhall be ſhut up in the priſon] or, in priſon; for there is no article in the text; nor doth it ſuit ſo well here: or, as in priſon, as in the former branch; as a priſoner, they ſhall be as ſurely and narrowly reſtrained and curbed, as if impriſoned and mured up in the ſtrongeſt and ſtricteſt place of reſtraint: there is in the Hebrew, a neer affinity between the verb and the noun; the word rendred priſon, ſignifying a ſhutting up, or, a place of ſhutting up, Pſal.142.7. chap.42.7. and the verb is in the more weighty form; as Ioſh.6.1.v.10. Ier.13.19. importing a ſtrict and ſure ſhutting up.

and after many days ſhall they be viſited] what manner of viſitation it is that is here intended, is among Interpreters much controverted: Some, and thoſe not a few, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Writers, underſtand it of a viſitation, not for good, but for evil; ſo divers of the Rabbines, of whom, ſome ſuppoſe it to allude to the manner of mens dealing with captives and ſlaves, whom they keep ſhut up all night; and in the morning, let out to labour: Others, unto the wonted manner of proceeding with malefactors, that are committed to priſon, and there kept, untill they be brought forth unto execution, or to triall. Where in the main, to wit, that the viſitation here mentioned, is no matter of mercy, thoſe Chriſtian Writers concur with them that interpret this whole Prophecy of the general judgment at the laſt day; which yet becauſe this paſſage ſeems to oppugn, ſome of them make uſe of a Rabbinical expoſition, though not naming the author, rendring the words from, or, for, many dayes; and expounding it, of being queſtioned, and upon trial condemned to ſuffer for the ſins that had been, in many dayes, committed by them; or committed, not many dayes after their commitment before-mentioned; but many dayes before they were brought to their triall, 2 Cor. 5.10. But the moſt of ours, and the moſt judicious, expound it of a viſitation in favour and mercy; ſuch as is intimated in the like phraſe, Gen.21.1. & 50. 24,25. Exod. 4. 31. Ruth 1.6. Zeph.2.7. which the Jewiſh Writers, that go this way, expound, ſome of their own nation, that though they were held in bonds and captivity, for ſome ſpace of time, both Princes and People; yet, at length, God would in mercy viſit them, and ſet them at liberty again, Chap.27.12,13. Jer. 29.10. & 32.37. & 52.31-33. Others more largely of other Nations and States, that ſhould, after theſe judgments executed upon them, being bettered by them, adjoyn themſelves to Gods people; and find mercy and grace. Wherein we willingly concur with them, acknowledging the ſame to be fulfilled under the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt, the true Meſſias, in thoſe other Nations; and deſire to ſee accompliſhed, alſo, in them, Chap.2.3,4. & 18.7. & 19.20-22. & 23.17,18. & 60. 3,11,12. But here a rub would be removed, caſt in our way by a late Interpreter of prime note, that may elſe impeach the free progreſs of this expoſition; the rather, becauſe our late Tranſlaters have afforded it admiſſion into the margent, though not into the text. This learned man, therefore, renders the word here, not, they ſhall be viſited, but, they ſhall be miſſed, or found wanting; that is, for many dayes, or, for a long time, they ſhall not be extant, as he expoundeth it. And it is true, indeed, that ſuch a notion the word here uſed ſometime hath: it ſignifieth, firſt, and properly, to viſit, or to ſurvey: and in the next place, upon ſurvey, to take notice of the abſence, or preſence, of thoſe things, or perſons, that come within compaſſe of the ſurvey, and to diſpoſe of them, this way, or that way; for evil, or for good. Hence it comes to paſſe, that ſometime it ſignifies to miſſe, and to be miſſing: as Numb.31.49. 1 Sam.20.18. & 25.7, 15. 2 King. 10. 19. Chap.34.16. But that cannot be made good, which to ſtrengthen this Interpretation, here, is averred; that in that form, which is here uſed, put abſolutely, it never ſignifieth otherwiſe: nor if it were ſo in all other places, where it is ſo put, would it neceſſarily follow, that it cannot otherwiſe be underſtood here. For firſt, it is apparent, that it is uſed otherwiſe, where put abſolutely, without any addition, in a place parallel to this, Ezek.38.8. where it is ſaid, After many dayes, thou ſhalt be viſited; that is, as this Author himſelf renders it, execution ſhall be done upon thee: and that, indeed, is the genuine ſenſe of the place: thou ſhalt be viſited, to wit, with evill; as Solomon, more fully, Prov.9.23. where the ſame word is, in the ſame form uſed, he ſhall not be viſited with evill; and if it do ſo ſignifie, when good, or evill, is added; why not, where neither is expreſſed, ſince that in the active, it is ſo frequently uſed, without either? Again, it ſeems but an harſh expoſition, After many dayes, they ſhall be miſſed; that is, they ſhall not be extant for many dayes: and laſtly, the like term uſed, but in the active, of Tyre, Chap.23.17. after ſeventy years the Lord will viſit Tyre, helps much, both to confirm that which we have here in the text, and to enervate that which the margent ſuggeſteth.

V.23. Then the moon ſhall be confounded, and the ſun aſhamed; when the Lord of Hoſts ſhall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jeruſalem, ruſalem, and before his Ancients gloriouſly] This Chapter containing the firſt part of the preſent Sermon, or Prophecy, the Prophet cloſeth after his wonted manner, with a paſſage concerning the ſpiritual, yet conſpicuous, glory, and magnificence, of the gracious Kingdome of God, in the times of the Goſpel, ruling in his Church, by his Chriſt; the brightneſſe and majeſty whereof ſhould be ſuch, as no light of Sun, or Moon; no glory or magnificence of any worldly ſtate, ſhould be comparable thereunto.

Then] When God ſhall have manifeſted his might and majeſty, both in dejecting, and in reſtoring again, Kingdomes and States; in viſiting them in wrath firſt, ver. 21. and then in mercy again, v.22. Heb. And, as chap.8.3,14.

the moon] ſo called, in regard of her whiteneſſe, as here; ſo Cant.6.10. chap.30.26. an emblem of worldly ſtate and glory, ſubject to change and variety, Rev.12.1.

ſhall be confounded] or, bluſh, as alluding to the notation of her name; ſhe ſhall bluſh, for all her white or pale face; or, be aſhamed, for that the word properly ſignifies; and ſo is it rendred, Pſal.34.5. & 71.24. chap.54.4. Jer. 50.12.

the Sun] ſo termed, in regard of his heat, Pſal. 19.6. both here, and Job 30.28. chap.30.26. an uſual type of the greateſt and moſt reſplendent glory, Jud.5.31. Mat.13.43. & 17.2. Act.26.13. 1 Cor. 15.41. Rev. 1.16. & 12.1. for the ſentence riſeth here, from the moon, to the ſun, as Cant.6.10. chap.30.26. from the leſſe light to the greater, Gen.1.16.

ſhall be aſhamed] or, becauſe this ſuited well with the former, ſhall be abaſhed, which both in letters and ſound, comes very neer to the Hebrew; whence, in likelyhood alſo, it hath its original; both words are oft conjoyned, as of a neer or common notion, in ſome of the places above recited, and elſe-where. The leſſe lights loſe their light or luſtre, at leaſt, upon the appearance of ſome far greater and more glorious one; which by its eminent ſplendor dimmeth their former bright, but far inferiour, beauty: ſo the taper burns dim in day-light; and the moon and ſtars appears not when the ſun ſhines forth, Joh.3.30. & 5.35. 2 Cor.3.10.

When the Lord of hoſts ſhall reign] Pſal.33.1. & 97.1. when the Kingdomes of the world, ſhall be the Kingdomes of the Lord, and of his Chriſt, Rev.11.15.

and before his ancients gloriouſly] or, in glory or, with glory, as moſt conceive it to run in the Hebrew, the defect of the particle being frequent, as chap.22.17,18, v. 22. or, as ſome other, and there ſhall be glory before; or, in the ſight of his ancients, or, the ancients thereof, that is, of the Church of Iſrael, a type of the main body of the faithful, Rev.4.4. & 5.8,9. among whom, and in whom, God more ſpecially manifeſteth his glory in his ordinances, and the paſſages of his providence, in the regiment of his Church, Pſal.29.9. See chap.4.5. for they narrow this precious and pregnant prophecy over-much, that would reſtrain it to Gods magnifying himſelf, his might and his mercy, in relieving Jeruſalem, by the ſlaughter of thoſe that beſieged it, chap. 37.36. & the Elders of Iſrael, their going up with their rich robes unto the Temple in triumph, there ſolemnly to bleſſe God for it, chap.38.19,20.

CHAP. 25.

V. 1. O Lord thou art my God, I will exalt thee, I will praiſe thy name.] The Prophet in the former part of this Chapter, as one tranſported with the apprehenſion of the tranſcendent majeſty, might and mercy of God manifeſted, in the juſt execution of his vengeance on the inſolent and obſtinate wicked of all ſorts, and the gracious protections and deliverances of his poor diſtreſſed, deſpiſed, and dejected people, and with the conſideration of his admirable and unexpreſſible wiſdome, moſt clearly revealing it ſelf in the paſſages of his providence concerning either, doth abruptly break off the file of his prophetical diſcourſe, and falleth into a ſolemn celebration and praiſing of God, for theſe his wonderful works, as well of judgment, as of mercy; and in the latter part, ſo returneth again to his former diſcourſe, that it is not eaſie to deſign or fix the preciſe liſts or limits of either, they are ſo artificially interwoven the one with the other.

O Lord, thou art my God] Some ſuppoſe this ſacred hymn to be conceived, as in the perſon of the Elders, or Ancients, mentioned, chap. 24. 23. and ſo thoſe words wanting to be ſupplyed, In that day it ſhall be ſaid, as v 9. or, In that day ſhall this ſong be ſung, as chap.26.1. But I conceive it rather to be an expreſſion of the Prophets own affection and diſpoſition, much taken with the mercy and goodneſſe of God in thoſe counſels and courſes of his ſhewed to his people; ſuch like holy breathings may be obſerved to break oft from Gods Children amidſt other their diſcourſes, Jer.10.7. & 16.19. 1 Tim.1.17. Rev.1.5,6.

thou art my God, I will exalt thee] So Moſes, Exod. 15. 2. thou art my God, the pronoun for the verb ſubſtantive, as Pſal.44.4. I will exalt thee, ſo Pſal.30.1. & 145.1. God exalteth his, Pſal. 37.34. chap.1.2. and they exalt him: he them, by making them high and great; they him, by acknowledging and celebrating his ſoveraignty and his greatneſſe.

I will praiſe thy name] That is, thee, as chap.12.1. So Pſal. 54.6. But of a full aſſurance of what will be done, he praiſeth God for it, before it is done. So Pſal.13.5,6.

for thou haſt done wonderful things] Heb. a wonder, as chap.29.14. but here taken collectively, as Pſal.77.11. ſee chap. 9.6.

thy counſels of old are faithfulneſſe and truth] Or, counſels of old faithful and firm: Or, even thine ancient counſels, or, purpoſes, done in faithfulneſſe and truth. For ſome read the words, as an entire propoſition apart by it ſelf, what thou hadſt determined; or, (as thoſe that conceive them ſpoken as already done in the perſon of Gods ſurviving people) what thou didſt fore-tel long ſince, are all faithfully and really fulfilled. Others, as an additional by way of amplification, to the former; ſhewing what thoſe wonders done were, to wit, things conſulted and reſolved on long agon, moſt faithful and moſt firm counſels, or contrivances or purpoſes, (ſee chap.23.8.) for things conſulted, contrived, & purpoſed, as Pſal.81.12. Mic.6.19. of old, long agon, as chap.22.11. faithfulneſſe and truth, or firmneſſe, for things, or counſels, contrivances (ſupplyed by repetition, as Pſal.111.7.) of faithfulneſſe and truth, or firmneſſe, that is, moſt faithful and firm, or true, as Deut 32.4. Pſal. 119.30,87,142,151. yet firm and firmneſſe here, rather then true or truth, becauſe the word in the ſingular no where elſe found, is in the plural uſed for pillars, 2 King.18.16. or counſels, contrivances, and purpoſes; things conſulted, or contrived and reſolved on; in faithfulneſſe and firmneſſe, a defect of the particle in, as chap. 24.22,23. & 41.2. faithfulneſſe and firmneſſe, ſaith a Rabbine, one and the ſame thing, in two terms of the ſame ſtock, and the ſame ſenſe; as the like, Jer. 16.19. But I ſuppoſe yet, there is in either place ſome difference; faithfulneſſe is one thing, and firmneſſe another; and though the one is with God, ground ſufficient for the other; yet with men, oft it is otherwiſe: faithful enough a man may be in his purpoſes; and yet his deſigns may prove infirm: but in Gods counſels, both concurring, give good and ſure ground of praiſing him, for the doing of them, though not yet done, when ſo faithful and firm; and as ſure therefore to be done, as if accompliſhed already, Matth.5.18. Mar.13.30, 31.

V. 2. For thou haſt made of a city, an heap; of a defenced city, a ruine;] Or, Thou doſt make. Thou manifeſteſt thy might in overthrowing and ruining the Cities and ſtrong holds of thine enemies, and the enemies of thy people. A learned late Writer thus rendreth the words, Thou haſt from being a city, (or that it may no more be a city) brought a fenced city to an heap, to ruine a palace of ſtrangers, from being a city; or, that it may no more ſo be.

a city] Collectively for cities, as 7.3. chap. 26.5. though ſome reſtrain it to Jeruſalem, Pſal 79.1. a moſt unlikely thing, that the Prophet ſhould praiſe God for the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, which the Pſalmiſt there ſo much lamenteth. Others, to Babylon, chap.13.19-21. Jer.51.25,26. with more probability. But it ſeems here to be more general.

an heap] Heb. to an heap, and ſo after, to ruine; and it might therefore be rendred, thou haſt brought it (oft wanting, as chap.9.9. & 21.3.) from a city to an heap; from a fenced town to ruine, that is, to a ruinous heap, as chap.23.13. where the ſame phraſe is ſo rendred. So, to be unto deſolation, is, to become deſolate, Jer.12.11. the latter repeateth the ſame thing only with ſome emphaſis, implying, that no ſtrength of the creature can ſtand out againſt God, chap.2.15. & 27.10.

a palace of ſtrangers to be no city, it ſhall never be built] Heb. from a city; of which phraſe, ſee on chap. 23.1. & 24.10. the latter part may be rendred, that it be not built for ever, Job 12.14. a defect of the particle, as chap.5.11. & 10.2. for ever, here may imply, not ſimply at any time, but for a long time, or an age, as Exod.21.6. 2 King.5.27. Pſal.37.18,27. chap.34.10. for as for that commenticious diſtinction of the word here uſed, that being written at full, as it is here, it ſhould ſignifie eternity, when otherwiſe, ſome long time, but finite; it may by manifold places of Scripture be controlled and confuted: it is full written in moſt of the Scriptures above mentioned; it is otherwiſe, Exod.3.15. & 15.18. Deut. 32.40. and elſe-where; where yet of neceſſity, it muſt ſignifie eternity. By the palace of ſtrangers, ſome Jewiſh Writers would have Babylon here meant in particular; and ſome of ours, Rome; (the former words they underſtand both more generally) ſo called, ſay they, becauſe there the Chaldean Court was, to which ſtrangers from all parts repaired, chap.13.22. But the moſt take the word Palace here, as City before, collectively: ſo chap. 32.14. The Palaces, for royal Cities, Seats of great Kings, as chap.23.13. called the palaces of ſtrangers, that is, poſſeſſed by ſtrange people of other Nations, then Iſraelites; as ſtrangers, and Iſraelites do commonly counter-divide, 1 King.8 41. Jer. 5.19. Lam.5.2. Eph.2.12. ſo v. 5. or, as ſome, ſtrong holds, furniſhed and guarded with forrein forces,chap.13.14. Jer.51. 9. Ezek.27.10,11. But I ſee not how the verſion of theſe latter ſorts well with the text.

V.3. Therefore ſhal the ſtrong people glorifie thee,the city of the terrible Nations ſhall fear thee]The ſtouteſt and ſtrongeſt of them, that before would not acknowledge thee, either eſcaping and ſurviving in the States and Kingdoms ſubverted, or living in remote places,and hearing the report of their fall,ſhall be enforced to give glory to thee ; and they that were formerly a terrour to others,ſhall then ſtand in aw of thee. So Exod.5 2. & 8.8. & 9.27,28. & 15.14,15. Pſal.18.44,45. & 66.3. & 83. 16. city for cities,as v.2. and cities for inhabitants, as chap.19. 18.

V. 4. For thou haſt been a ſtrength to the poor , a ſtrength to the needy in his diſtreſſe] Or, Becauſe thou haſt been a ſtrong hold,or fortreſſe to the poor, a ſtrong hold, or fortreſſe to the needy, for ſo the word properly ſignifies,chap.23.4.& 30.3. diſtinguiſhed from ſtrength,Ier.16.19. That which ſhall gain ſo much glory to God, will be, not onely the conſideration of the deſtruction of thoſe mighty ones, with their States and Kingdomes,that oppoſed him and his people,v.2.Dan.2.44,45. but the obſervation alſo of his powerful protection of his poor deſpiſed and dejected ones, formerly oppreſſed by them; and of his ſtrange deliverances wrought for them in their deepeſt diſtreſſes,Pſal.9.9. & 18.27.A very conſpicuous and remarkable example hereof,doth the raiſing of the ſiege of Jeruſalem,if it were,at leaſt beſieged by Sennacherib;the raiſing of hisCamp, howſoever,intended for the ſiege of it,afford,chap.37.36. Yet to reſtrain it to that, I ſuppoſe to be a needleſſe narrowing of the text.

a refuge from the ſtorm] What he had ſaid before of Gods protecting,and delivering his poor people, is here illuſtrated by certain elegant reſemblances ;this taken from ſuch places of covert and ſhelter,as in ſtorm and tempeſt of winde or rain, men or beaſts are wont for ſuccour and ſafeguard to retire to,chap.4.6. & 32.2.

a ſhadow from the heat] See chap. 4.6. & 32. 2. ver.5.

when the blaſt of the terrible ones is as a ſtorm againſt the wall] or,for the blaſt of the violent ones,was like a ſtorm againſt a wall, as rendring a reaſon , why there was no ſmall need of ſuch ſhelter and ſafeguard;becauſe the violent rage of the wicked, untill by God repreſſed and ſuppreſſed,Pſal.76.10,12.was like ſome furious guſt of wind,or ſtorm of rain or hail,that beating on a wall,and that but a weak one,either wholly ſhattereth,or ſhrewdly ſhaketh it,chap.28.2. Ezek.13.10,11,14. Mat.7.24. a ſtorm of a wall, for a ſtorm againſt a wall ; as, a covert of a ſtorm,for a covert from,or againſt a ſtorm,chap.32.2.

V. 5. Thou ſhalt bring down the noiſe of ſtrangers, as the heat in a dry place] Or, But, as the heat, in a drought;or, dry place; ſo the tumultuous noiſe, or, tumult, of the ſtrangers , didſt thou abate. The adverſative, oft wanting, is to be ſupplied ; as Pſal.119.103,113. to clear the connexion of this verſe, with the cloſe of the former. Thou didſt ſuppreſſe their tumultuous noiſe and rage; as the extream heat of the Sun,in an open Plain, or on ſome Heath, putting paſſengers to much pain, is much abated, by the intervention of ſome thick cloud , or, the ſhade of ſome ſhroudy tree. See Chap.4.6. & 32. 2.

the noiſe] Or, tumult : as Pſal.74.23. See Chap. 22.2.

of ſtrangers] Of whom, ver.2.

in a dry place;] Heb. drought : and ſo Chap.32.2. Pſal.68. 6. for land, or place of drought : as more fully, Pſal. 63. 1. Chap.41.18. Ezek.19.13.

even, the heat with the ſhadow of a cloud , the branch of the terrible ones ſhall be brought low.] I joyn theſe two branches together,becauſe they make up the latter part of the verſe, divided by a middle ſtop from the former. The words may well be rendred,as the heat (is abated) with a thick ſhadow ; ſo the ſong, or chanting of the terrible ones was abaſed; for this latter part runneth exactly in the ſame tenour with the former ; the former note of ſimilitude is ſupplyed from the former part;the latter as before,and oft in the like, Prov. 25. 12. and 26. 11.

with the ſhadow of a cloud] Or, of a thick cloud. See chap. 14.14.& 19.1. or, as ſome render it not amiſſe, with a thick ſhade, whether of cloud, ſhroud, or the like ; for the word is more general. See Exod.19.9. Hab.1.6.

branch] Where the word is ſo uſed,I finde not ; nor,were it elſe-where ſo uſed,would it fit here ; for ſong it is uſed,Cant. 2.12. it is put here for triumph,well ſorting with the precedent tumult ; their roaring and revelling, their ſhouting and triumphing ſhall be quelled and quailed, Chap. 23. 11. & 24. 8,9.

the terrible ones] The ſame with the ſtrangers before.

brought low] or abaſed, dejected, humbled, caſt down,laid low,ſo is the word uſed,Pſal.116.10. I was much dejected, and, before I was humbled,or,brought low, Pſal.119.67. compare this with Pſal.74.23. there their tumult is ſaid to go amain up,here their triumph is ſaid to come as faſt down, and but one letter difference between the one and the other. They , though great ones, that would have it to ſignifie, to anſwer, and thus render the words; which (to wit,heat) anſwered (or was fit for) the branch of the violent, ſeem to writhe and ring the text too hard. For I ſpare to ſpend further words,in relating how ſtrangely the Rabbines, ſome of them, and ſome of ours alſo, tear it aſunder : Onely I will adjoin what a learned late Writer ſuggeſteth, He would have the text thus rendred ; As the heat in a dry place, is the tumult of ſtrangers, the heat wilt thou bring down with the ſhade of a thick cloud, the cutting off of the terrible ones ſhall teſtifie it. He confeſſeth, the pauſes, as they are in the text, go againſt him ; but he denieth it neceſſary to ſtick conſtantly to them ; and yet when they afford a plain and fair ſenſe,I ſhould not lightly depart from them.

Verſ. 6. And in this mountain ſhall the Lord of hoſts make unto all people a feaſt of fat things,a feaſt of wines on the lees : of fat things full of marrow,of wines on the lees well refined.] Or, Moreover;For the Prophet having finiſhed his former digreſſion,wherein he had directed his ſpeech unto God, in way of praiſing of his name for ſuch paſſages of his providence, as he had formerly related : He doth at this verſe return again to his former prophetical diſcourſe; and in theſe words,fore-tels what the Lord will do further ; When having vanquiſhed his enemies, and enlarged his Kingdom, and beginneth to manifeſt himſelf in more glorious manner, then formerly, among his people, chap. 24.23. he will do as great Princes and Potentates are wont to do in ſuch like caſes, 2 Sam. 6.18,19. 1 King.8.65. Eſt. 1. 2-9. Dan.5. 1. he will entertain his ſubjects of al ſorts,out of Nations reduced now unto his obedience,with a moſt royal and magnificent ſpiritual feaſt, deſcribed here by ſuch worldly dainties, as are wont to be the materials of ſuch ſolemn and ſumptuous banquets ; thereby figuring thoſe celeſtial viands, wherewith God feedeth his people by the Miniſtry of his Word and Sacraments, and the comfortable preſence of his ſpirit in his Church here, Pſal.22. 26,29. & 36.8. Prov.9.2. Mat.22.2-4. Luk.14.16,17.Rom.14.17. and will yet further ſatisfie them,even to the full,by the immediate communicating of himſelf unto them hereafter, Luk.22. 16, 30.Rev.19.9.

in this mountain] Mount Zion,Gods court,chap.24.23. unto which this looks back,a type of the Church,chap.2.2.Rev.14. 1.& 21.2.

the Lord of hoſts] See chap.1.9.

unto all people] Heb. peoples,as chap,2.3. & 56. 7. as well Gentiles as Jews,Rev.7.9.

a feaſt] Not a ſacrifice,as a learned late Writer would have it; expounding it of Gods vengeance executed on his enemies, who are thereby conſumed, as meat at a feaſt, and whoſe deſtruction is as pleaſing to God, as is any meat and drink at a feaſt to man ; though it be true, that the word ſacrifice is ſometime uſed of a feaſt, Gen. 31. 54. and the ſlaughter of Gods enemies is termed a ſacrifice, chap.34.6. for that is not the word here uſed;but one that hath no ſuch ambiguity,ſignifying no other thing then a feaſt, or a drinking, as the Greek word alſo doth,Gen.21.8. Eſt.2.18.

fat things] Fit for,and reſerved commonly for Feaſts,Neh. 8.10.Luk.15.23,30.

wines on the lees] The Hebrew text hath no more then lees,as Pſal.75.8.Zeph.1.12. whereby ſome would have to be meant ſtrong wines,wines not racked, but remaining ſtill upon their lees,Ier.48.11. and it is true indeed,that as wines cannot be clear till they have ſome time to ſettle ; ſo they cannot attain their full ſtrength, untill they have reſted ſome ſpace of time upon their lees, which for ſome time, are ſaid to preſerve and feed them ; whereof alſo it may be ſuppoſed, that they are ſo termed. Howbeit, I rather conceive, by Wines of lees (for that it is to be underſtood) are meant pure wines, wines drawn off from the lees (the Prophet himſelf afterward ſeems ſo to expound it)as by a city of deſtruction,ſome conceive to be meant,a city ſaved from deſtruction,chap.19.18. and as ch. 32.2. an hiding place of the ſtorm, and a covert of the tempeſt, for an hiding place from the ſtorm , and a covert from the tempeſt ; or,as a corpſe is termed a ſoul, from the ſoul that it formerly held,though now gone from it,Num.5.2,& 9.10.and as vintage cluſters, for cluſters remaining when the vintage is paſt and gone,Mic.7.1.of Wine at Feaſts, ſee chap.5. 12. and 22.13.

full of marrow] Heb. marrowed,or well marrowed, for there ſeems an emphaſis in the word , the word is no where elſe found ; the word marrow,whence it comes once onely, Iob 21. 24. and another from it, ſignifying fat ones ; becauſe ſuch commonly have moſt marrow,Pſal.66.15.chap.5.17. whence alſo ſome expound the word here, fatted,or crammed ; not fat of themſelves, and their own feeding ; but fed of purpoſe, to make more then ordinarily fat. So Mat.22.6. Luk. 15. 23. in marrow, not fatneſſe onely,but ſweetneſſe alſo exceedeth ;

ſo they conceived, that renderd another word marrow, Pſal.63.5. but the word there uſed doth not ſo ſignifie.

wines on the lees well refined] Heb. no more then lees refined; or, well, or, thorowly, refined: For the word is in the form of weight: and in its original notion, it importeth ſuch a refining, as is uſed about metals, for the purifying of them, by melting out of them, whatſoever droſſy matter is mixt with them, 1 Chr.28.18. & 29.4. Pſal.12.6. Mal. 3.3. but here, being applyed to wines, it muſt of neceſſity, ſignifie a drawing of them, clear, and clean off from their lees; that being the thing, wherein the purity of that liquor conſiſteth. The Jewiſh Rabbines, divers, refer all this to the execution to be done on Gog, and Magog, Ezek. 39. 4. and by fat things, therefore, would have underſtood, ſuch cloying meats, as mans ſtomack abhorreth: by lees refined, not wine drawn from the lees, but lees drawn from the wine, Pſal.75.8. and applying hereunto, that paſſage, Chap.49.26. But tenour of the context, which they little regard, doth, of it ſelf, readily, and clearly refel them.

V.7. And he will deſtroy in this mountain, the face of the covering caſt over, all people, and the veil, that is ſpread over all Nations] The Prophet further proceeds, to relate the ſpiritual benefits that ſhould accrew unto thoſe of the Gentiles, that ſhall be, by the miniſtery of the Goſpel, brought home unto God, and joyned unto his Church. The firſt whereof is, that they ſhall be freed from that ignorance and obſtinacy, wherewith their minds and hearts were formerly poſſeſſed, and that kept God and them aloof, Eph.4.17,18. For they narrow the text unreaſonably, that reſtrain it, to the removal of that great terrour from Sennacheribs forces, that blinded mens mindes, and made them at their wits end.

deſtroy] Heb. ſwallow up, or ſwallow down, as ver.8. chap. 19.3. & 49.29.

in this mountain] Whereof before, ver.6.

the face of the covering] Or, wrapping rather, as 1 Sam. 21.9. and there ſeems to be a tranſpoſition in the words, (not unuſual) the face of wrapping; for, the wrapping of the face; or, the face of wrapping, or wrapper, as Gen.3.24. a flame of ſword, for a ſword of flame, or a flaming ſword, Lev.5.15. ſilver of ſhekels, for ſhekels of ſilver, Num.6.9. his head of conſecration, for the conſecration of his head, and this face-wrapper may ſeem to allude either to the face-cloth of death, wherewith dead mens faces are wrapt up, Joh. 11.44. or of condemnation, wherewith malefactors, after ſentence paſt upon them, had wont to have their head wrapt up by the hand of the executioner, or ſome other, as unworthy longer to ſee the light, Eſt.7.8.

caſt over] Or, wrapt over: covering them ſo; as it doth enwrap them withal: as in mourning, men wrap up head and face, 2 Sam.19.4. and Elias wrapt up his head and face, with his mantle, 1 King.19.13.

all people] Heb. peoples: as verſ. 6. and ſo after, nations; all of them, being deſtitute of the light of grace, and ſound knowledg of God, while they abode wrapt up in their natural blindneſs of mind, and hardneſs of heart, and ſpiritual deadneſs in ſin, Eph.2.1-3,12. & 4.17-19.

and the veil, that is ſpread over all nations] The ſame thing in divers terms.

veil] Or, covering: as Chap.28.2. & 30.1. Of this veil, or covering, now reſting upon the Jewiſh Nation, as in times paſt, upon the Gentiles; yet promiſed, in time, alſo, to be taken from them: See the Apoſtle, 2 Cor.3.14-16. alluding there, to another veil: whereof, Exod. 34.33,34. For the Jewiſh Doctors run wide here, that underſtand all this, of much evil and miſery, that ſhould befall the Nations, who had lived quietly and ſecurely hitherto, as under a ſure and ſafe covert, Zach.1.11. which as a veil, caſt over their faces, had kept them from the foreſight of their future afflictions, Chap. 47.7,8.

V. 8. He will ſwallow up death in victory] Or, And he will, or, he will, alſo, deſtroy death for ever. That the copulative is to be ſupplyed, both the connexion of the context, and the uſe of the verb in Hebrew, ſhew. The ſecond benefit accrewing to the convert Nations, a freeing of them from the power of death, Hoſ.13.14. Heb.2.14,15. and putting them into a condition of life, yea, into poſſeſſion of eternal life inchoated here, Joh.3.18,36. & 8.51. & 10.25,26. and to be entirely completed, and fully conſummated, hereafter, 1 Cor.15.26, 54. 2 Tim.1.10. Rev.20.14. & 21.4. For they ſtraiten the text, and give it a very ſlender ſenſe, that expound it only of freeing the Jews, at Jeruſalem, from fear and danger of death, from Sennacheribs forces, by the diſſolution of his Camp, chap.37.35. & 38.6.

ſwallow up] Or, deſtroy: as verſ.7.

in victory] Or, unto victory; untill an utter conqueſt be made of him. So the Greek, which the Apoſtle retaineth, 1 Cor.15.54. becauſe the ſenſe is ſound and good; though it do not exactly render the letter: for the Hebrew is, as the old Latine well yeelds it, for ever: and ſo, indeed, the word in this form of ſpeech, conſtantly ſignifies, Job 4.20. Pſal. 9.18. Chap. 13.20. & 34.10. which they cut too too ſhort, that expound, ſo long as Ezekiah lives; and ſo limit it, by the narrow liſt of his life, Chap.39.8.

and the Lord God will wipe away tears from all faces] A third benefit accrewing to the godly converted ones, (not, as ſome, to the beſieged, by Sennacherib, at Jeruſalem, onely,) that they ſhall be freed from all occaſions of ſuch anxiety and anguiſh, as they were formerly ſurcharged with, and drew tears oft from them, which ſhall then be dryed up; fulfilled, partly, in this life, by the inward comforts, and ſpiritual joyes, from time to time imparted unto them from above, Matth. 5. 11,12. Joh.16.21,33. Act.2.41. & 8.8. & 16.34. Rom.5.2,3. & 12.12. & 14.17. 2 Cor.6.10. Phil.3.1. & 4.4. 1 Theſſ. 5. 16. 1 Pet.1.6,8. 1 Joh.1.5. but perfectly in the next, when all grounds and occaſions of grief and heavineſſe, ſhall be utterly abandoned, Chap.30.19. & 35.10.

God will wipe away] As an affectionate Father would, with handkercheif, or the like, wipe the tears from the face, and eyes of his child, when it lies weeping out of pain or grief. So Rev.7.17. & 21.4.

tears] Heb. tear: as Pſal.116.5. Jer.9.1. Mal.2.13.

faces] For, eyes, Rev.21.4. as eyes, for, face, Chap. 1.15. ſo face to face, Gen.32.30. and, eye to eye, Chap.32.8. are uſed for one and the ſame; or, faces; becauſe with weeping and tears, the whole face, the cheeks eſpecially, are oft blurred and beſmeared, Lam.1.2. and the rebuke of his people, ſhall he take away from off all the earth] Or, and the reproach: as it is rendred, Pſal.31.11. & 44. 13. & 89.50. Jer.31.19 and ſo in moſt places: nor was there any ſufficient reaſon, of ſwerving from the uſual & moſt common acception, and expreſſion of it, here: rebuke, or reproof, (for they are, in a manner, one, Prov. 9. 8.) is a friendly and neighbourly office, Levit.19.17. Pſal.141.5. Prov. 28.23. reproach, a ſpiteful and enemy-like taunt, Pſal.42.10. & 89.51. & 102.8. and therefore ſuits well here: for that is the fourth favour God vouchſafeth to honour his reconciled people with, a removal, and riddance of thoſe outward afflictions, whereby Gods enemies and theirs, did ordinarily take occaſion to reproach, and taunt both him, and them. See Pſal.74. 22. Chap.37.3,23. & 54.4. Ezek. 36.15,20,30. and of the phraſe, ſee Gen.30.23. 1 Sam.17.26. chap.4.1. Luk.1.25.

all the earth] Not Sennacherib, and the Aſſyrians alone, chap.37.3,23. but the enemies of his Church in general, Pſal. 79.4. & 89.40. Joel 2.19, 26,27.

for the Lord hath ſpoken it] as Chap.21.17. & 22.4. See Ezek.36.36.

V.9. And it ſhall be ſaid in that day] The thankfull and joyfull acknowledgment made by the people of God, partakers of theſe his favors and mercies in thoſe times, is by the Prophet here expreſſed, though ſomewhat more ſuccinct; yet the ſame in effect, with that in his own perſon before conceived, v. 1-5.

And it ſhall be ſaid] Heb. And he, or one, or each one, (to wit, of Gods people, ſo delivered, v.8.) ſhall ſay; which ſome therefore ſupply, and put into the text, reading it, And Gods people ſhall ſay, which yet is not needful. Some others render it, that he may ſay: ſo knitting it unto the former words, concerning Gods taking away the reproach of his people, and making as parentheſis of the clauſe lying between; but ſuch forced connexions make no ſmooth ſcanning. The word here is impersonal, or indefinite; and it is therefore well and fully enough rendred, as our verſion yeeldeth it, containing in it as much as the word in ſuch form of ſpeech importeth: ſo Deut. 32.37. where being not obſerved, it hath cauſed a foul miſtake; making that to be Gods ſpeech, which the tenour of the text duly conſidered, will appear to be the bitter taunt of his malignant adverſaries, and the enemies of his people. So alſo, Chap.45.24. & 57.14. & 65.8. Pſal.42.3.

in that day] In thoſe times, as Chap.26.1.

Lo, this is our God] as Chap.12.2. ver. 1. It is he, and he onely, that hath done all this, Pſal.118.23. See alſo, Chap.35. 4. & 40.9. for what is ſpoken by way of encouragement there, as ſure to be effected, is uttered in way of acknowledgment here, as being really accompliſhed.

we have waited for him, and he will ſave us] As Chap.8. 17. & 33. 22. or, we waited for him, (Pſal.33.20 & 40.1. Chap. 26.8. & 30.18.) and he hath ſaved us, ver. 4. for he ſpeaketh in the perſon of the people delivered, upon their deliverance now atchieved. See Chap.26.8,9. & 33.22.

this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad, and rejoyce in his ſalvation] Or, we are glad, and do rejoyce. For it is the ſame thing, for the greater emphaſis again reiterated, with expreſſion of their inward diſpoſition thereupon. So Pſal. 118.23,24. Though ſome underſtand it, as ſpoken of an hopeful expectation of future preſervation and protection, ver.10.

be glad, and rejoyce] Two words of the ſame notion, to expreſſe the abundance of their joy, Pſal.14.7. Chap. 65. 18. & 66.10.

in his ſalvation] In the deliverances afforded us by him. So Pſal.9.14. & 13.5. & 21.1.

V. 10. For in this mountain ſhall the hand of the Lord reſt] Theſe words render a reaſon of the rejoycing and triumphing of Gods people, and of the aſſurance of their ſafety, to wit, becauſe the hand of Gods power and providence, is continually, and conſtantly ſtretched out over them, both for their protection, and for the deſtruction, alſo, of thoſe that attempt ought againſt them, Zach.2.5,9. And this branch is, therefore, deemed by ſome, to be as a paſſage from the relation of the gracious exhibition of mercy and magnificence to the one, unto the declaration of the juſt execution of ſuch grievous judgments as ſhould be inflicted upn the other. Thoſe other Interpretations, either of thoſe that expound it of Gods ſmiting hand only, in afflicting and chaſtiſing of his own people, which, ſay they, ſhall then reſt, that is, ceaſe, Gen.2. 2,3. Numb.10.36. or, in taking vengeance upon their enemies, which it ſhall reſt in, that is, ſhall be long about: as Pſal.125.3. Zach.9.1. or of thoſe that underſtand it of the eternal reſt of the Saints, with God, in heaven, Heb.4.3-11. they ſeem none of them to expreſſe the genuine ſenſe of the place.

in this mountain] Whereof before, ver.6,7. for in heaven (as Some will have it) ſuch a powerful protection will not need, no more then ſtrong guards, where no enemy either is neer, or can approach.

the hand of the Lord] His powerful protection, Ch.49. 2.

reſt] Reſide, make its conſtant abode. So Pſal. 132. 14. Prov.14.33. Chap.11.2. See Deut.33.12. Chap.4.5,6.

and Moab ſhall be trodden down under him, even, as ſtraw is trodden down for the dunghill] That hand of his, that is ſpread over his people to protect them, ſhall be ſtretched out againſt their adverſaries, to deſtroy them, Chap.11.13,15. & 19.16. & 26.11.

Moab] The Moabites here, as the Edomites elſe-where, Chap.34.6. & 63.1. and both together, Chap.11.14. are put for the enemies of Gods people in general; becauſe they were of the chief of thoſe bad neighbours, Jer.12.14. that diſturbed Gods inheritance, and were ever and anon, plotting and attempting againſt them, Numb.22. & 23. & 24. Deut. 23. 3. Joſh.24.9. Judg.3.13,14. Mic. 6.5. and ready to Joyn with any other that invaded them, Pſal.83.7. 2 Chr.20.1. 2 King. 13.20. & 24.2.

trodden down] Or, cruſhed: as Job 39.15. or, threſhed. So the word properly ſignifies, Deut.25.4. 1 Chr.21.20. Chap. 21.10. & 28.28. but ſo uſed, as here, Judg.8.7. 2 King. 13. 7. Chap.41.15. Amos 1.3. Mic.4.13. Hab.3.12. Howbeit, a learned Writer would have that of treading, the firſt and native notion of the word; becauſe the Syrians moſtly ſo uſe it; that of threſhing, the ſecundarie; becauſe with cattle, they uſed to tread it out in threſhing, Deut.25.4.

under him] Under his feet, Pſal.110.1. Chap.26.6. Mal. 4. 3. or, as ſome interpret it, in his place, to wit, Moabs. whereſoever he ſhall be found, or abiding. So is the word uſed, Exod.16.29. Chap.46.7. and may do not amiſſe here.

as ſtraw is trodden down] Or, threſhed: and by threſhing, bruiſed and broken with the iron teeth of the cart-wheel, that is drawn over it, Chap.28.28. & 41.15. or the hoofes of the cattel, that tread it out, Deut.25.4. Hoſ.10.11. Mic. 4.12, 13. See ſomewhat the like reſemblances uſed, of ſubduing, and deſtroying, Pſal.18.42. & 44.5. & 60.12. & 108.13. Zach.10. 5. but here, rather, trodden down: becauſe the dung-hill followeth; on which it is not wont to be threſhed, but trodden, Matth.5.13. Luk.14.35.

for the dung-hill] There being leſs regard had of ſuch ſtraw, as is deſtinate to the dunghill, then of that, that is intended to be reſerved for the fodering, or littering of beaſts, or other the like uſes, Gen.24.25. 1 King.4.28. Chap.11.7. or, in the dunghill, that being caſt out thither, is there trodden down, and trampled upon, with the feet both of men and beaſts, Matth.5.13. There is, in this place, ſome variety of copies; the writing is jeme, with a jod; but the Maſcrets would have it read veme, with a vau: and ſo it is preciſely, in, or, on, the dunghill. Howbeit, a learned late Writer, retaining that which the writing exhibiteth, rendreth it, in the water of the dunghill; as the Chaldee, in the dirt: for dung and water maketh dirt: nor is chaff, or ſtubble, wont to be laid on ſome dry, but on ſome moiſt dunghill, the ſooner to rot it, and make the better ſoil of it: So he. But ſome conceive it, to be the proper name of a place, before mentioned, Chap.10.31. which they deem to be a Town of Moab, the ſame with that, Jer.48.2. though aſſigned to Judah, Joſh.15.31. and ſo read it, as ſtraw in Madmenah; ſuppoſing mention to be made thereof, becauſe being ſituate in a corn-countrey, there was both great ſtore of ſtraw, and in that regard, the leſſe regard had thereof there. The root it comes of, ſignifies dung, 2 King. 9.37. Pſal.83.10. Jer. 8.2. and thence the Jewiſh Criticks ſuppoſe this word, being here only ſo uſed, to ſignifie the place of dung, the dunghill. Howſoever, in the words here, there is a pleaſant conſonancy, between the word uſed for ſtraw, here, (in that form, no where elſe found, as made choice of, by the Prophet, for that purpoſe,) and this Madmenah, which our Engliſh cannot expreſſe.

V. 11. And he ſhall ſpread forth his hands in the middeſt of them, as he that ſwimmeth ſpreadeth forth his hands to ſwim] Some, as well Jewiſh, as Chriſtian Writers, underſtand theſe words of Moab; but diverſly, either that he ſhould ſtrive and endeavour by all means, but in vain, to get from under thoſe preſſures, that, from Gods hand, lay heavy on him, Pſal. 38.2. as one in danger of drowning doth, to get ſafe to the ſhore, Act. 27.43,44. or, that being ſubdued and thrown down, he ſhould lye ſprawling on the ground, reſembling the manner of a ſwimmer; or that being ſo ſubdued, he ſhould in like ſort, as a ſuppliant, ſpread abroad his hands to God in prayer: as Chap.1.15. Others, of either ſort, conceive it rather to be ſpoken of God; he ſhall, as one that in ſwimming with all his might, ſtretcheth out his arms, in powerful manner, reach and ſmite his enemies, on either ſide, Zach.5. 3. or, he ſhall as eaſily deſtroy them, as the ſwimmer parteth the waters with his hand, they being no more able to make reſiſtance againſt him, then the water againſt the arm, or the ſtroak of the ſwimmer, Pſal.110.2. Chap.14.26,27.

and he ſhall bring down their pride] Which reigned ſo much before with them. See Chap.16.6. Jer.48.29. as a man in ſwimming eaſily dippeth, or thruſteth down ought, that he meeteth with in the water.

together with the ſpoils of their hands] So ſome; or, as others, with the lyings in wait, or wiles of his hands; (to wit, Moabs,) underſtanding it of the wealth of the Moabites, gotten by robbery, and lying in wait, to prey, and ſpoil, Prov. 1. 11,13. both the pride of Moabs heart, and the fetches of his hands, ſhall be pulled down. To ſomewhat the like purpoſe, do ſome other expound the word, but with reference to God, with, or, by, the lyings in wait of his hands, that is, with his hands, that lye in wait: and they ſuppoſe it to be a metaphor taken from wild beaſts, that ly lurking in dens, and covert, watching for prey; which when it comes in their way, they ſuddenly ſtart out, and ſurprize it with their paws, Pſal.10.8, 9. ſo the meaning ſhould be, that he would be to Moab, as he is ſaid to have been ſometime to his people; as a bear, or lion, lying in wait in his covert, Lam. 3.10. But becauſe a word ſomewhat neer to it, and of the ſame ſtock with it, ſignifieth windows, Joſh.13.3. 2 King.7.2. Chap. 24.18. which were in thoſe parts of lattice, 2 King.1.2. Cant.2.9. ſome thereby underſtand the fingers, that being ſpread abroad, are as lattice: and ſo it ſhould be, with the lattice, or fingers, of his hands: and becauſe the ſame word applyed to waters, ſeems to import ſluces, or dams, that keep in water; (ſo they render it, Gen.7.11. & 8.2.) ſome would have the word, here uſed, ſo alſo to ſignifie; and tranſlate it, with the cataracts, or ſluces, of his hands: Which, to me, ſeems to ſound very harſh, and not to ſuit well with the context; the uſe of ſuch ſluces, or dams, being to keep in, and to keep up water, contrary to what is here intimated, of depreſſing and bringing down. The word, therefore, being no where elſe read, I concur with thoſe Jewiſh Criticks, who inform us, that the word here ſignifieth not the arm, as many of our Interpreters miſtake them; nor the cubite, as ſome other; but the elbow, or, more largely, the nookes, or bendings of the arm, whether at elbow, or, arm-hole; for the word ſeems indifferent to either, coming from a root, that ſignifieth to lye in wait: as in nookes and corners, both men or beaſts uſe to do, Pſal.10.9,10. and ſo it ſorts well with the ſimilitude of a ſwimmer; and may be rendred, with the elbows, or arm-holes: and conſequently, more familiarly and plainly, with the bowings, or bendings; that is, with the motions, or, ſtroaks (as both the Chaldee, and old Latine interpret it,) of his arms. The only difficulty is, how it ſhould be fitly ſaid, with the elbows, or arm-holes, of his hands: but that is eaſily ſolved: for in thoſe places where the word is uſed, whereby they interpret this, and is generally acknowledged to ſignifie one of theſe twain, the very ſame phraſe is uſed, the elbows, or, arm-holes, of the hands, Ezek.13.18. Jer.38.12. In which places, the learned alſo obſerve, that hands, are put for arms: and ſo the old Greek Tranſlators took the word, Pſal.128.2. when they rendred it by a word, that ſignifies the fore-part of the arm, next the hand, or wriſt; which word, alſo, uſually ſignifying fruit, gave, by miſtake, occaſion of that abſurd tranſlation, in the old Latine; Of the labour of thy fruit ſhalt thou eat: out of which, the ancients pick myſteries. Thus have I endeavoured to clear this dark and difficult paſſage; which, as many, on the one ſide, ſtrain and ſtray in; ſo, as many on the other ſide, ſlight and let ſlip, as if nothing were dim, or doubtful in it. I ſhall add onely, what I find ſince this note here inſerted, in the poſthumous Annotations of a famous Writer very deeply ſeen in the Oriental languages. He would not have the word here queſtioned, to be applyed to God. His reaſon is, becauſe the particle here uſhering it in, is (as he ſuppoſeth) never taken in an inſtrumental notion. Yet ſo is it found uſed, Eſth. 9.25. He commanded by letters. The word, for the ſenſe and uſe of it, here, he interpreteth it much in effect, as I do; but fetcheth it about another way, and applieth it to Moab. For becauſe he findeth in Schindlers Penteglotte, that with the Rabbines, arboth, (the word here uſed) or arubboth rather, (for to arubbah Schindler ſubjoyneth it,) of the feet, doth ſignifie the ſecrets, or ſecret parts of the body, and that a word in arabick, ſomewhat neer it, is uſed for the ſame; he thence conceiveth the term to come from a root, that hath a notion of muchneſſe in it; (the firſt letter in it, as in arbeh for a locuſt, being not radical, but additionall,) and to ſignifie thoſe parts of the feet, that have moſt fleſh on them, to wit, the thighes: and conſequently, by proportion, the arboth, or arubboth of the hands, to be thoſe parts thereof, that are moſt fleſhy and brawnie, to wit, thoſe which the Latines call lacertos, the arms. So, becauſe mans ſtrength conſiſteth moſt in his arms, Pſal. 18.34. the meaning to be, that God would put down Moab, together with all his might; and ſo he threatneth, indeed, to break Moabs arm, Jer. 48. 25. Now about theſe his criticiſms, I will not contend with ſo great a Scholar, being, in theſe ſtudies, but a novice to him. Howbeit, well knowing the word feet, to be frequently uſed in ſome forms, for thoſe parts, not with the Rabbines onely, but in the ſacred Scriptures, as I have ſhewed on Chap.6.2. & 7.20. I conceive that thoſe Jewiſh Maſters, where they apply this arubboth to the word feet ſo uſed, underſtand nothing thereby, but foramina, the holes, or iſſues of, or in thoſe parts; taken from that acception of the word, whereby it is in Scripture uſed for ſuch holes in the wall and houſe-ſide, windows, and loopholes; or in the roof and houſe top, lovers and the like, whereby light iſſueth, and is let in; ſmoke iſſueth, and is let out, 2 King.7.2,19. Hoſh.13.3. See on Chap.24. 17. & 60.8. and according to this notion, there is no fit application of it unto the hands. Beſides, ſhould it be referred to that other root, as he would have it, I ſhould rather deem the term given to thoſe parts in a notion of multiplication, then of muchneſſe; becauſe they are inſtruments of propagation, whereof that root is moſt frequently uſed, Gen.1.22,28. & 9. 1,7,8. Exod.1.10,12. What from ſome of the Jewiſh criticks I have obſerved, concerning the genuine notion of the word in this place, was above ſhewed; and how fitly it agreeth to the courſe of the context, I leave, together with what hath been here annexed, to the judgment of others.

V. 12. And the fortreſſe of the high fort of thy walls, ſhall be bring down, lay low, and bring to the ground, even to the duſt] The Prophet here turneth his ſpeech to Moab, (as the variation of the perſon, is in this Prophecy, very frequent. See Chap.1.29. & 10.3,4,25,26.) telling him, that notwithſtanding his pride and haughtineſſe before touched, Chap. 24. 21. & 16.6. and the height and ſtrength of his walls and fortifications, which he ſo much relyed upon, he ſhould find God too ſtrong, both for him and them, who would pull them both down, lay them level with the ground, and reduce them to duſt; and this he delivereth in variety of terms and expreſſions, cloſe packt together, without any intervening particles, (which needed not, therefore, to be inſerted) to make the ſentence the quicker.

the fortreſſe of the high fort of thy walls] That is, thy fenced and lofty walls; for both words have reference unto walls. See Chap.26.5.

ſhall be bring down, lay low] Or, ſhall be brought down, laid low: as ver.9.

bring to the ground] Or, brought to the ground, as before. Heb. make to touch the ground: as Lam.2.2.

to the duſt] Laid in the duſt: as Pſal. 7.5. & 44. 25. So Chap.26.5. he makes them touch the duſt; or, diſſolved, and turn'd into duſt: not broken down only flat to the ground, but battered, alſo, ſo to pieces, that they are nothing but duſt: as Job 10.9. Pſal.22.15. & 18.42. Chap.27.9. & 41.15. 2 King. 23.7,15. duſt, for, rubbiſh: as Neh.4.2,10. Thus if we take it, (which would add much emphaſis) ſomewhat is to be ſupplyed: but the former, becauſe of the parallel place, there cited, ſeems ſufficient.

CHAP. XXVI.

Ver.1. IN that day ſhall this ſong be ſung in the land of Judah] As before, the Prophet did, by the way, briefly relate, what affections and meditations Gods people ſhould have, when they ſhould ſo plentifully partake of the mercies of God above mentioned, Chap.25.9. ſo here thorow this whole Chapter, he delivereth them a large ſong, of purpoſe penned by him, for them, ſuitable to their affections, before related, then to be made uſe of, what time theſe benefits ſhould betide them. See the like, Chap. 12. The Pſalm, or Song, is wholly ſpent, in the relation and acknowledgment: 1. Of their former extream miſery, in their forepaſſed difficulties and diſtreſſes. 2. Of Gods gracious mercy and free goodneſſe, in the ſupporting of them under them, and delivering them out of them. 3. Of the obſtinacy of the wicked under Gods hand, together with his juſt judgment inflicted on them for it, to their endleſſe deſtruction.

in that day] As Chap.25.9. & 27.1.

in the land of Judah] In the Church: as Jer.31.23.

we have a ſtrong City] To wit, Jeruſalem, while God protecteth it, Chap.37.35. and the Church of God, thereby typified, Pſal.125.1,2. Matth.16.18. Heb. a city of ſtrength; as, a fort of ſtrength, for, a ſtrong fort, Prov.18.10.

ſalvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks] Heb. ſalvation he ſetteth; that is, ſalvation is ſet: as Chap. 25.9. the main ground of the cities ſtrength, not her walls, or motes between the walls, or her outward means of defence, Chap. 22.9-11. but Gods protection, his ſalvation, ſufficient inſtead of all theſe, and without which, none of theſe were able to ſecure them, Pſal.121.1,2. & 125. 1,2. Chap. 60. 18. Zach. 2.5.

walls and bulwarks] Heb. bulwark: or, whatſoever it is, that the word here uſed, ſignifies. So Lam.2.8. where wall, and it, are likewiſe joyned together, and is rendred rampart. Some would have the word to ſignifie a ditch, or trench, Chap. 22. 11. as our Engliſh renders it, 2 Sam.20.15. Some, the counterſcarf, or the outer, and lower wall, that ſtandeth before the inner, and higher. For their cities were many of them double-walled, Chap.22.11. and ſo thoſe take it, 2 Sam 20. 15. that underſtand the words there of the city: Some, the parapet, or bank of earth, or ſome other like fortification raiſed within the wall to ſtrengthen it. Others, laſtly, the coping of the wall. Whereof, ſee Vitruvius, l.2. c.8. & Curtius, l.9. c.4. for the ſhooting of the rain, making the fence firmer, and entrance over it, the more difficult. The Jewiſh Rabbines ſeem doubtful of it, and differ much about it: and though it be here, and elſe where, in the two latter places above mentioned, diſtinguiſhed from the wall; yet it ſeems to be uſed for the wall in general: and is ſo rendred, 1 King. 21. 23. though ſome Jewiſh Doctors would have the text there altered, & a letter added to make it agree with, 2 King.9.36. Howſoever, this, and wall here, are uſed to comprehend all means of fortification, which Gods ſafeguard is alone ſufficient to countervail, where wanting; and to add ſtrength ſufficient for ſafety, where weak: and theſe ſeem here, as to be oppoſed to thoſe ſtrong and ſtately walls of Moab, that were to be battered and broken down, Chap.25.12. wanting that principal ſtrength, which this city is from God ſaid to have; and withal, to have ſome eye to the naked, and undefenced eſtate of that city, that continued ſtill diſmantled for ſome ſpace of time, even after the peoples return from the captivity, to aſſure them of Gods protection, and to ſtrengthen their faith in him, as alſufficient to ſecure them, notwithſtanding the want, or weakneſſe of ſuch outward means of defence, Neh.1.3. & 2.13. & 4.2,3. See Zach.2.4,5. a good Comment upon this place.

V.2. Open ye the gates, that the righteous Nation which keepeth the truth may enter in] He willeth either the gates of Jeruſalem, a type of the Church, to be ſet open for the receipt of thoſe returning from diſperſion or captivity that had continued faithful with their God, or by repentance returned to him; thereby intimating, both the multitudes of thoſe that ſhould be reſerved in thoſe calamitous times, to repleniſh and recruit that City and State; as alſo, the confluence of others together with them unto Gods Church, when the limits thereof ſhould be enlarged, Chap.60.11. Zach.2.11. & 8.4,5,22, or, as ſome, of the Temple that the people preſerved, and returned, might enter thither, to praiſe God for his mercy toward them, in the deliverances vouchſafed them, Pſal.24.7,9. & 118. 19,20. But the former ſeems the better, and is the more received; for they draw it out too far, that underſtand it of ſetting heaven gates open at the laſt day for all the faithfull, Mat.25. 10,34.

the righteous Nation] As Chap.60.21. & 61. 11. a reformed and upright people; ſuch righteouſneſſe is here intimated, as is ſpoken of, Mat.5.20. Luk.1.6. what ſome add of imputed righteouſneſſe, ſeems not here aimed at.

that keepeth truth] Heb. truths, or faithfulneſſes, as Prov. 13.17. & 14.5. & 20.6. that have continued conſtantly faithfull with God, Pſal.31.23. Hoſ.11.12. Rev.2.10,26. & 3.8,10. & 14.12. Some expound it of faith, as well to Man, as to God; in the former whereof, the Phariſees failed, Mat.23.23. as alſo, hypocrites uſually do. See Chap. 1. 14,15,16. But this I ſuppoſe is too nice.

V.3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtaid on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee] Or, The ſtaid mind wilt thou keep in continued peace. Or, To the ſtaid mind wilt thou preſerve conſtant peace. So, the moſt, referring the firſt words unto the godly mans conſtancy, in adhering unto, and depending upon God, and aſſuring al, that ſo do, of a continued courſe of peace, & proſperity from God; Or, as others, who ſuppoſe (but without ground) that there would be a tautology in the latter part of the verſe, if the former were ſo underſtood, and require therefore to have the former applyed unto God; By a firm thought, or purpoſe, wilt thou preſerve conſtant peace unto them, (that is, to the faithful before-mentioned, ver. 2. becauſe they truſt in thee, Pſal. 37.40. Rom. 11.29. 2 Tim. 1.9.

whoſe mind is ſtaid] Heb. a ſtaid thought, or imagination, or mind, or purpoſe; the word ſignifieth properly a frame, or faſhion, or thing framed and faſhioned, by the potters art and skill, Chap. 29.16. Hence it is tranſlated, and applyed, ſometimes to mans body, and the frame and model of it, Job 17.7. Pſal. 103.14. ſometime to the ſoul, and to the mind more ſpecially, that is as a mint or forge in it; and ſo it ſignifies any thing whatſoever is framed, conceived, or contrived in it, be it thought, imagination, deliberation, determination, or the like, Gen. 6.5. & 8.21. Deut. 31.21. 1 Chr. 28.9. & 29.18.

ſtayed on thee] As Chap. 48.2. they ſtay themſelves upon God, but that is in another form. Or ſimply ſtayed, applied to Gods precepts and purpoſes, Pſal. 111. 8. to the godly mans heart and mind, Pſal. 112.8. here, a ſtayed mind; for, a man of a ſtayed mind; a firm or conſtant minded man: as firmneſſe, for hands of firmneſſe, hands firm and ſteddy, Exod. 17.12. and firmneſſe, or faithfulneſſe, for precepts of firmneſſe or faithfulneſſe; firm and faithful precepts, Pſal. 119.86. ſo folly, for a man of folly, a fool, Prov. 24.9. and wiſdome, for a man of wiſdome; a wiſe man, Mic. 6.9. and peace, for a man of peace; a peaceable man, Pſal. 120.7. and prayer, for a man of prayer; a devout man, Pſal. 109.4.

perfect peace] Or, conſtant continued peace; or all manner of true and ſound peace, Joh. 14.27. & 16.33. Rom. 5.1. & 14. 17. Phil. 4.7. Heb. peace, peace, as Chap. 57.19. peace, for proſperity, as Chap. 48.18. Pſal. 119.165.

becauſe he truſteth in thee.] So Pſal. 37. 40. 1 Chr. 5. 20. 2 Chr. 13.18. & 16.8. See alſo, Pſal. 9.10. & 22.4,5. & 32.10. & 33. 21,22. & 34. 2. & 125.1. The word here, is, he, or it; is truſted in thee, that is, by truſt or confidence, fixed or faſtened upon thee, as Pſal. 112.7. (and the form is no where elſe read, but here, and there) his heart is fixed, it is truſted (or by truſt and confidence faſtened or ſetled) upon God.

V. 4. Truſt in the Lord for ever] Upon aſſurance of Gods readineſſe, to confer all ſure and ſound peace and proſperity upon thoſe that ſincerely rely on, and keep firm and faithfull to him; and of his conſtancy, in continuing the ſame inceſſantly to them, they incite and encourage one another perpetually in all eſtates, and at all times to rely and depend upon him. So 2 Chr. 20. 20. Pſal. 32.3,5,7. & 55.22. & 62.8. Prov. 3.5. & 16.3.

for in the Lord Jehovah is everlaſting ſtrength] Heb. for, or becauſe in Jah, Jehovah, is a rock of ages; or, as the old Latine rendreth it, for Jah Jehovah is a rock of, or, unto eternity; that which a learned late Writer approveth, deeming the particle to, here redundant, as Exod. 32. 22. Job 18.8. Pſal. 55.18. Hoſh. 13.9. as alſo, Pſal. 68.4. not in Jah, but Jah is his name, or, whoſe name is Jah, as Chap. 47.4. & 48.2. An argument to induce and perſwade to truſt conſtantly and perpetually in the true God, becauſe he continueth for ever a God of infinite power, able ever to ſave, Chap. 63.1. Heb. 7.25.

Jah, Jehovah] Two names of God: the former found alſo, Pſal. 68.4. and conſtantly in Hallelu-jah; that beginneth and endeth divers Pſalms, as Pſal. 111.1. & 112.1. & 113.1. and 104. 35. & 105.45. & 106. 48. Rev. 19.1,3,6. the latter, as frequently throughout all the books of the Old Teſtament, ſo expreſly in our verſions, Exod. 6.3. Pſal. 83.18. nor is the one, as ſome have deemed, an abbreviation only of the other; but they are two diſtinct names, ariſing from two diſtinct roots, though both of the ſame ſignification, and have a notion of being in them, and either name therefore belongeth unto the onely true God; both in regard of his own eternal and immutable eſſence, or being; which he hath from no other, but in, and of himſelf only, and is no other then himſelf, Exod. 3.14. and in regard alſo of his works, the creatures which have their being all from him, Gen. 1.1. & 2.1. Pſal 146.6. Act. 17.25,28. Rom. 11.36. Rev. 4.11. and of his word and counſels, and their accompliſhments, which he never fails to give being to, in their due and appointed ſeaſon, Exod. 6.3. & 12.41. Pſal. 33. 11. & 146.6. Chap. 14.24,27. & 55.11. Thoſe of ours, that would have the one to ſignifie here God the Father; and the other, God the Son; and render the text, in the Lord, the Lord is ſtrength everlaſting: that is, the Son in the Father; according to that, I am in the Father, and the Father in me. The Lord in the Lord; as the Lord from the Lord, Gen. 19.24. and, the Lord with the Lord, 2 Tim. 1.18. ſeem to pick that out of the text, that the Prophet therein never intended, and to alter the genuine ſyntax of it.

everlaſting ſtrength] The word tranſlated ſtrength, ſignifies primarily a rock, Deut. 32.13. Job 18.4. It is given oft to God, in regard of his invincible and unmoveable firmneſſe and ſtrength, ſometime ſimply and abſolutely the rock, he is a faithful God, Deut. 32.4. and, The rock that begat thee, the God that formed thee, Deut. 32.18. and, Their rock is not our rock, Deut. 32. 31. that is their God, as our God: ſometime, with ſome ſpeciall reference to the creature, as he who alone is able to ſecure them, and ſupport them: and ſuch an one therefore, as they may alone confidently repair to, and rely upon. Hence, thoſe ſpeeches, Who is a rock, (that is one to be truſted to, or relied upon) ſave our God? and, There is no rock like our God, 1 Sam. 2.2. and this phraſe alludes, partly to ſuch places, as men or beaſts are wont to repair to for ſuccour and ſafeguard, Judg. 15.8. & 20.47. Pſal. 104.18. Prov. 30.26. and hence is God ſtiled, as a Rock of ſalvation, that is, a ſaving Rock, Deut. 32.15. 2 Sam. 22.47. partly to ſuch firm grounds and bottomes, as men are wont to make choice of to build upon, that their foundation may be firm, and their ſtructure ſtand ſure, Chap. 22. 16. Mat. 7.24,25. and to this, more eſpecially, the Prophet ſeems here to have had an eye: as alſo, Chap. 28.16. and 33. 16. So Matth. 16.18. Rom. 3. 33. Epheſ. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 2.6.

everlaſting] Heb. of ages, ſuch as continueth firm, and the ſame throughout all ages, Pſal. 102.27. & 146.10. So, a Kingdome of ages, for an everlaſting Kingdom, Pſal. 145.13. and ſalvation of ages, for everlaſting ſalvation, Chap. 45.17. and, righteouſneſſe of ages, for everlaſting righteouſneſſe, Dan. 9.24.

V. 5. For he bringeth down thoſe that dwell on high] An argument to perſwade men to truſt in God, and to give them aſſurance of his ability to protect thoſe that depend upon him, againſt the proudeſt and moſt prevalent of thoſe that oppugn or oppoſe them, taken from a preſent and pregnant proof of his power, in pulling down ſuch mighty Potentates that ſate aloft ſo high above others, and ruinating their ſtrongeſt and beſt defenced Cities, and enabling ſuch of his, as were in regard of their ſeeming wants and weakneſſes in the eyes of fleſh and bloud accounted contemptible, and unable to effect ought to prevail againſt thoſe, and even to trample upon them that had ſo mean an eſteem of them, and had formerly oppreſſed them, God then ſuffering it for their ſins.

he bringeth down] Or, hath brought down; for it is ſpoken, as of a thing now done and paſt. See ver. 1.

thoſe that dwel on high] Or, that ſit aloft; either that dwell in high walled Towns, and high built Palaces; See Jer. 51.25,53,58. or, ſit on high thrones, in ſtate far above others. See Chap. 14.13,14. & 24.21. & 25.11. Dan. 4.37.

the lofty City he layeth it low] Or, hath layed it low, a redundancy of the pronoun very frequent, as Gen. 5. 29. Pſal. 1.4.

he layeth it low even to the ground, he bringeth it even to the duſt] Or, he hath laid it low even to the ground, he hath brought it even to the duſt. Heb. made it to touch even the duſt. See Chap. 25.12. & 32.19. The whole verſe may be thus rendred, as ſome give it. For he hath brought down thoſe that dwell on high, and the lofty city he hath laid it low, he hath laid it low even to the ground, he hath brought it to the duſt; and this beſt agreeth with the diſtinctions in the original.

V. 6. The foot ſhall tread it down, even the feet of the poor, and the ſteps of the needy] Or, So that the foot treadeth it down, that it is trampled upon, and that by thoſe that ſeem pooreſt, and of leaſt ability, or were formerly ſuch. See Chap. 14.30. a defect of the particle, intimating the effect or event: of which, ſee on Chap. 7.25. The copulatives are wanting, nor need be inſerted, becauſe the ſenſe is plain enough without them, and their abſence makes the ſentence the quicker. The ſum is, he ſetteth up his poor formerly afflicted ones over the power of their proud Oppreſſors, Joſh. 10. 42. 1 Sam. 2,8. Luk. 1.52. & 10.19. Rom. 16.20. Rev. 2.26. that which is ſet forth by a ſimilitude taken from cattel that tread down the graſſe, which even the leſſer can do with the rankeſt of it. See Chap. 37.26. Ezek. 34.18. Mal. 4.2,3. foot] For, feet, as Job 39.15. Pſal. 9.15. & 36.11. Put collectively, as alſo poor one, and needy one, for poor and needy perſons, as Pſal. 9. 18. & 10.9.

V. 7. The way of the juſt is uprightneſs: thou moſt upright doeſt weigh the path of the juſt] From this verſe the Prophet directeth his ſpeech unto God, and ſo runneth on through the greateſt part of it that followeth, relating therein the various paſſages of his providence, and acknowledging his goodneſſe in going along with them, in them, and in due time giving a good iſſue of them. This verſe ſome expound of the juſt and upright courſes that the faithfull take in all eſtates: yet ſo, that their ability ſo to do, is from God who ſtrengthens them therein, and enableth them thereunto, Pſal. 37.23. Phil. 3.13. Col. 1.10,11. Others rather, of Gods gracious providence out of his free favour towards them: ſo diſpoſing of all occurrents befalling them, that in al their courſes, and the paſſages of this life, they find a way made for them, and ſuch impediments removed as might prove prejudicial unto them; or hinder their free progreſſe, ſet forth by a metaphor taken from ways that are levelled, for the more eaſe and conveniency of paſſengers, and the ſtones or other like matter removed that may offend them in their paſſage. See Pſal. 5.8. & 18.32. & 27. 11. & 143.10. Chap. 40.3,4. & 62.10. Some reade the verſe, not disjoyned in two ſeveral axiomes, as we have it; but in one continued ſentence, Thou doſt level the way of the juſt with all evenneſſe, or, with moſt even courſes; the path of the juſt with an even poiſe or ballance. So there ſhould be a defect both of the particle with in either member, which is common: ſee chap. 24.22,23. and of the ſubject, or ſubſtance alſo, in the latter: the like whereunto, ſee Chap. 5.2. But I rather divide it, as our Engliſh doth.

The way of the juſt is uprightneſſe] Or, a moſt even, or, ſtrait way. Heb. evenneſſe, or ſtraitneſſe, for a way of evenneſſe or ſtraitneſſe: the word ſupplyed in the predicate from the ſubject, as Pſal. 111.7. the works of his hands are works of truth and judgment, and thy law is a law of truth, Pſal. 119.142. and thy precepts, precepts of righteouſneſſe, Pſal. 119.172. and a way of evenneſſe, or ſtraitneſſe, for a moſt even way, as a place of plainneſſe, or evenneſſe, for a plain or even place, Pſal. 26.12. without rubs or hillocks: ſo Jer. 31.9. in an even way where they ſhall not ſtumble, or a moſt ſtrait way, without windings and turnings, Prov. 4.26,27. as, a land of ſtraitneſſe, or evenneſſe; for a moſt ſtrait, or, moſt eaven land, v. 10. See Prov. 21.10. where the ſame, in effect, is ſaid, that is here, and may ſerve as a comment for this place. of the juſt] Such as were before deſcribed, v. 2,3.

thou moſt upright doſt weigh the path of the juſt] This way the Jewiſh Commenters moſt of them go; yet the words might peradventure better be rendred, Thou doſt with eavenneſſe ballance the path of the righteous: with eaveneſſe, that is, eavenly: for the word is ſometime alſo uſed ſubſtantively, as Pſal. 111. 8. and we need not take in poiſe or ballance: or thus, The eaven path of the righteous thou doſt ballance, or level rather, for there is no uſe of a ballance here; that is, thou O Lord, doſt by the levelling of them make them thus eaven: of the phraſe, or manner of ſpeech, ſee on c. 24.10. This I conceive to be the genuine, both ſenſe, and ſyntax of the place. For the further clearing whereof, we are to take notice of the uſe of the word rendred weigh; which though it ſeem properly ſo to ſignifie, in regard of a word that either comes from it, or it comes from, (for in Hebrew, verbs ſometime come from nouns) ſignifying a ballance, Prov. 16. 11. Chap. 40, 12. where it is rendred weight in the one place, ſcales in the other; and it may be, would be better beam in either: Yet in that ſenſe properly, it is never found uſed in Scripture, but another in the room of it, whereof the ſhekel hath its name: but by a metaphor thence taken, it is uſed for to conſider a thing exactly, and to decide, or doit eavenly: to which purpoſe, ſee on Pſal. 58.2. where it is very elegantly uſed; and being applyed to a way or path, it hath a two-fold notion: for ſometime it ſignifies, to conſider exactly what manner of way it is, whether good or bad, right or wrong, that is, as we uſe to ſay, to weigh it wel, as in a ballance, or to ponder it; as it is rendred, Prov. 4.26. & 5.6.21. ſometime to level it, or to make it exactly eaven: ſo it is taken, Pſal. 78.50. where it is but ſlenderly tranſlated, he made a way; whereas it ſhould be, He levelled a path for his wrath: he cleared a paſſage for it, that it might without let or interruption (as Exod. 32.10.) proceed to do execution on the obſtinate Egyptian: And ſo it is to be here underſtood, Thou doſt by levelling make the juſt mans path eaven. As for weighing them out as in a ballance, a juſt and due proportion of chaſtiſements and deliverances, or carrying an eaven-hand in chaſtiſing of them when they do amiſſe, and relieving them again upon their repentance; neither of them ſeem to be proper to this place; no more then of the weighing of mens ſpirits, or pondering of their hearts, Prov. 16.2. & 21.2. where another word is uſed, which yet ſome would alſo draw hither.

V. 8. Yea, in the way of thy judgments O Lord, we have waited for thee] Or: Even. An effect of their faith, and confident aſſurance of ſuch dealing of God with his People, which they formerly profeſſed, v. 7. to wit, that in conſideration hereof, even then, when God ſeemed to lead them along through rough and rugged ways, yet they ſtill depend upon him, and their hearts and affections hung continually after him, and kept cloſe with him, hopefully expecting an iſſue out of them, and patiently waiting untill the time thereof ſhould come.

in the way] Properly, the high-way, or, travellers way, Chap. 33.8. Gods way of Chaſtiſement, is an ordinary way with his, Pſal. 73.14. & 89.31,32. a defect of the particle: as Hoſ. 6.9. of thy judgments] That is, chaſtiſments, 1 Cor. 11. 32. ſo called, either, becauſe diſpenced with moderation, Jer. 10.24. & 11.30. See Ch. 27.7,8. or, becauſe in inflicting of them, God ſeems to carry himſelf as a Judge; and for the ſubject matter of them, they are the ſame oft with thoſe things, that in (a judiciary way,) he inflicteth upon the wicked, Jer. 30. 14, 15. Lam. 1.15. & 2.5. & 3.3.

we have waited for thee] See Chap. 25.9. & 33.2. & 64.4.

the deſire of our ſoul is to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee] Theſe words may thus be knit to the former. Even when in the way of thy judgements we waited for thee, the deſire of our ſoul was (for it would be conceived in the time paſt) unto thy name, and unto the remembrance of thee. Our affections were not eſtranged from thee; but our hearts were ſtill towards thee, and our minds on thee, Pſal. 44.17,18. Job 13. 15. Chap. 64.5.

V. 9. With my ſoul have I deſired thee in the night, yea, with my ſpirit within me will I ſeek thee early] Or, with my ſoul I deſired thee; and with my ſpirit I ſought thee; becauſe they ſpeak of their forepaſſed carriage, during the time of their troubles. Our thoughts of thee, and our deſires after thee, have been continual, night and day, Pſal. 42.1,2. & 63.1,6. Mal. 3.16.

With my ſoul] An affectionate form of ſpeech. So Gen. 34. 8. Pſal. 63.1. a defect of the particle; as Chap. 24.22,23. The Rabbine here obſerveth, that a man hath both a ſoul, and a ſpirit, and maketh them here two diſtinct faculties: and it is true, that ſometime they are diſtinguiſhed the one from the other, 1 Theſſ. 5.23. but here they ſeem only mentioned, by an elegant variety, to make the ſpeech the more paſſionate.

in the night] When others are taking their reſt, Pſal. 63. 6. & 119.62,148. Cant. 3.1. & 5.2. They that by night, here underſtand the night of affliction, I ſuppoſe, ſwerve from the intendment of the Prophet in this place.

with my ſpirit within me] Heb. in the midſt of me: a phraſe here emphatical; as Chap. 25.11. and would therefore have been expreſſed, Pſal. 143.3. Dan. 7.15.

will I ſeek thee early] The word is taken from, not the lightſome, but the dim and dusky morning, ſcarce twilight, (for of duskiſhneſſe it hath its name,) implyes both an earneſt and early ſeeking. It is uſed, Pſal. 63.1. Prov. 8.17. where deſire is ſincere, there endeavour will be ſerious, and ſeeking early, and earneſt, Pſal. 119.47. & 130.5,6.

for when thy judgements are in the earth, the Inhabitants of the world will learn righteouſneſſe] Such a diſpoſition and affection, not they alone, but others alſo, ought to have, under Gods hand; and when his judgments are abroad in the world, thereby to learn the fear of God, and amendment of their lives, Job 37.23,24. Rev. 15.4.

when] So is the word uſed, Joſh. 2.5.

thy judgments] The word is general, and comprehendeth as well the effects of Gods avenging wrath, as of his fatherly diſpleaſure. See on ver. 8.

in the earth] Or, on the earth: and ſo it ſhould be rendred, Matth. 6.10. the prepoſition it ſelf there requiring it: as, on the Throne, Pſal. 9.4. & Chap. 3.26. on the ground.

the Inhabitants of the world] Not we only, thy peculiar people, Pſal. 9.16,19,20. & 83.16,18.

will learn] Or, ſhould learn. Heb. have learned. But that tenſe is uſed alſo in ſignification of duty; or in a potentiall form: as chap. 37.26. and as the future is oft, Mal. 2.8.

V. 10. Let favour be ſhewed to the wicked; yet will he not learn righteouſneſſe] Having intimated what ſhould be done, when Gods judgments are in the world; he ſubjoyneth, now, the contrary diſpoſition and carriage of many; ſo perverſe in their demeanour towards God, and ſo deſperately bent to, and ſet upon, evil, that neither Gods mercies, nor his judgments, have any gracious or kindly work upon them; they take the more liberty to live looſely from the one; and they ſtand out obſtinately againſt the other, untill, at length, they bring deſtruction upon themſelves, deſervedly for either, ver. 11. See a pregnant proof hereof in Pharaoh, Exod. 7.12,14. The like texture of ſentence, as it is here conceived, may be found, Job 13.15. Lo, let him ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. Howbeit, it may be rendred, with ſome others; Yet when favour is ſhewed the wicked, he will not learn righteouſneſſe: or, Though favour be ſhewed him, he will not learn righteouſneſſe. See Rom. 2.4,5. The particle is oft omitted: as Deut. 8. 12. Chap. 17.6.

learn righteouſneſſe] To do righteouſly, to walk uprightly: as Chap. 1.17. Phil. 4.10-12.

in the land of uprightneſſe will he deal unjuſtly] Or, in the plaineſt, or eavenneſt land, or ground, he will deal perverſly. He will perſiſt in his wicked courſes, though he live among a reformed people, or, in a land, where godlineſſe is profeſſed, and means of inſtruction are. So Interpreters, the moſt, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian. Or, in a land, or, place, where all is plain and clear, and nothing either to offend a man in his way, or to force him out of it, even there will he go awry, or turn aſide to crooked by-pathes; there will he betake himſelf to his wonted wicked courſes, where there is nothing to preſſe him from walking uprightly, or to put him upon ſuch practices; and this I take to be the true meaning of the Prophets words in this place, inſiſting ſtill on the ſimilitude of a way, or path; before uſed, ver.7,8. Gods children walk eavenly and uprightly with God, even in rough and rugged wayes: the wicked will tread awry, and run out, though the way be never ſo fair and clear, Pſal.125.5.

in the land of uprightneſs]Heb. a land of ſtraitneſſes, or, righteneſſes, (as Chap.59.14. right, or, equity cannot enter, and Amos 3.10. they knot now to do, or cannot do right, and Chap.30.10. prophecy not right things) that is, in Jeruſalem, or in Judah, ſay the Jewiſh Commenters; in the Church where righteouſneſſe reigneth, ſay ours, Chap.60.21. Rom.5.21. 2 Pet.3.12. Or, a land, or, ground of ſtraitneſſes, or, eavenneſſes, that is, a a moſt ſtrait, or, eaven, or, plain land, or, ground, where all is fair, and clear, and ſtrait, and eaven, and plain; ſo that a man may walk right on with eaſe; that which David alludeth unto, when he ſaith, Pſal.5.8. Lead me for thy righteouſneſſe, becauſe of thoſe that watch me, to do me ſome miſchief: Make plain, or, eaven before me, thy way, that is, the way that thou leadeſt me. And Solomon, when of wiſdome he ſaith, All the words of her mouth are juſt, there is nothing perverſe or crooked in them; they are all plain to an underſtanding man, and ſtrait to the finders of knowledge, to knowing men: See v.7. He will ſtray, and go out of Gods way, even where it is ſtraiteſt, plaineſt, eavenneſt, cleareſt, eaſieſt, both to finde, and to follow, Jer.2.25. & 6.16. & 14.10. & 18.14,15.

dealt unjuſtly] Or, unequally, and perverſly (the verb is found here onely) as Pſal.71.4.

and will not behold the majeſty of the Lord] Or, as ſome, and he ſhall not ſee the majeſty of the Lord, as if it were ſpoken by way of commination, that ſuch wicked ſhall never attain to that beatificall viſion which the Saints enjoy in heaven, Mat.5.8. Heb.12.14. 1 Joh.3.2. and ſome frame here a dialogue between God and the Prophet, as debating with God about the toleration of the wicked here, and ſuffering them to thrive, and riſe, as Jer.12.1. and God at length ſtopping his mouth, with this cloſe. But the ſenſe ſeems to be that plainly, which our verſion affordeth: they refuſe to take notice of any hand of God in his work, either of mercy, or judgment, though his majeſty ſhine forth never ſo eminently in either, Pſal.28.5. Chap.5.12. The next following paſſage plainly confirmeth it; for we may obſerve an elegant reiteration, or epanalepſis, wherewith the Prophet chaineth and linketh together the ſeverall branches of his diſcourſe, with the cloſe of the precedent ſentence, making entrance into the ſubſequent, and that in a conſtant courſe, from ver.7. to v.11. the like may be obſerved in the beginning of John's Goſpel, Ioh.1.1-12.

majeſty] See Chap.12.5.

V.11. Lord, when thy hand is lifted up, they will not ſee] Or, Lord, thy hand is lifted up, but they will not ſee it, (it ſupplyed, as c.21.3.) Or, thine high-hand, or, hand lifted up they wil not ſee) as Deut.32.17: Our high hand, and not the Lord, hath done all this. Tho the workings of thy mighty power in theſe, admirable & remarkable occurrents, as well the deſtruction of thy proud & potent Foes, as the deliverances of thy poor deſpiſed people, be ſo conſpicuous, as might well wring an acknowledgment thereof from thine adverſaries themſelves, Pſal.118.15,16. Deut.32.31. yet they wilfully ſhut their eyes, againſt it, and refuſe to regard it. See ver.10. They that reſtrain this, as ſome do, either to the deſtruction of the twelve Tribes, by the Aſſyrians, for their ſins, 2 King.18.11,12. or, to the ſlaughter made in the Aſſyrian Camp, Chap.37.37. do too much, in my mind, ſtreighten the text.

but they ſhall ſee, and be confounded for their envy at thy people] Or, Yet they ſhall ſee it, and be confounded, Or, they ſhall ſee, (and be confounded at the ſight of it) thy zeal for thy people. They ſhall at length, will they, nill they, to their pain and ſhame, be enforced to take notice of, and acknowledge, what now they will not, when Gods vengeance ſhall ſeize upon them, to their utter confuſion, Pſal.83.16,17. Or, they ſhall with ſhame and confuſion, or, to their ſhame and confuſion, be compelled to ſee and take notice of the zeal that God beareth to his people, Chap.9.7. & 37.31. in the ſtrange protections and deliverances vouchſafed to them, Pſal.86.17. & 112.10.

ſhall ſee] be enforced to take notice of, Pſal.48.5. or, ſhall ſee, that is, ſhall feel it to their coſt and ſmart, 1 Sam.5.6-12. Chap.30.30. ſo, to ſee death, for to ſuffer death, Pſal.89.48. Ioh.8.51. to ſee affliction, for to ſuffer it, Lam.3.1. See the next branches.

for their envy at the people] Their envious and ſpitefull carriage towards Gods people, Chap.11.13. that bitter zeal, of which, Jam.3.14. or, the zeal of the people, that is, thy zeal or ardent affection which thou beareſt to thy people; and in behalf of them, againſt thoſe that oppoſe, or oppugn them, Zac.1.14. & 8.2. a metaphor taken from thoſe, that having an ardent affection, ſet upon ſome perſon that is very precious in their eye, cannot endure to ſee any affront offered them, or the leaſt injury done unto them, Num.23.21. Pſal.105.15. Chap.43.3,4. Zach.2.5,8.

zeal of the people] not whereby they are zealous for God, as Num.25.11. 1 King.19.10. 2 King.2.16. Pſal.119.137. but wherewith God is zealous for them, Chap.63.15. and whereof they are not the ſubject, but the object, as the zeal of Gods houſe, Pſal.69.9. which David hath for it; whereof David is the ſubject, Gods houſe the object: ſo Ioh.2.17. See the next branch.

the people] That is, thy people, the pronoun ſupplyed from the latter branch, as Chap.58.13. from the former.

Yea, the fire of thine enemies ſhall devour them] That fierceneſſe of wrath wherewith thou art wont to proceed againſt thine enemies, ſhall for their obſtinacy deſtroy them, Ch.42.13. & 59.17,18.

the fire of thine enemies] That fierce wrath of thine, compared frequently to fire, whereof they are the object, wherewith thou art wont to proceed againſt thine enemies, Deut.32.22. Pſal.21.9. & 97.3. as before, the zeal of thy People, which thou beareſt unto them: ſo, my wrong, Gen.16.5. Lam.3.59. not done by me, but done to me; and thy curſe, Gen.27.13. not, wherewith thou curſeſt, but, which thou mayſt incur, wherewith thou mayſt be curſed; and of the wicked man, Job 18.10. his ſnare, and his trap, not laid by him, but laid for him; as appeareth, ver.8,9. and as there, the ſnare of the wicked, for the ſnare ſet for the wicked: ſo here, the fire of thine enemies, for the fire prepared for thine enemies. See Chap.30.33. Mat.25.41,46. Rev.20.9,10.

V.12. Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us:] From Gods juſt proſecution of his obſtinate enemies with the fiery fierceneſſe of his wrath; the Prophet ſpeaking ſtill in the perſon of Gods people, proceedeth to his gracious adminiſtrations, for the benefit, comfort, and welfare of his people. Some read the words in form of a prayer, Lord diſpoſe peace for us: for the future ſeems ſometime ſo to be uſed, as Job 6.23. Pſal.[illegible]9,20. But the moſt, as in way of profeſſion of their faith, and hopefull expectation of peace, and proſperity from God, on whom alone they depend for it. See ver.3.

for thou alſo haſt wrought all our works in us] This, many, the School divines eſpecially, expound of Gods working by his Spirit in the hearts and ſouls of his people: of which Phil.2.13. Heb.13.21. But that ſeems not to be the genuine ſenſe of this place. The meaning is rather, as moſt Interpreters, that all thoſe gracious protections and preſervations of them, in the times of their troubles, and all thoſe ſtrange deliverances out of their troubles, which hitherto had been afforded them, they had been all wrought by God, and to him alone they do aſcribe them. So Pſal.18.32-36,47-50. & 44.3,7. & 55.28. and this experience of the former favour and goodneſſe of God, formerly exhibited to them, they lay here, as a ground whereon they build, either their petition for, as Pſal.22.9,10,11. & 27.9. & 71.4-6. & 85.1-4. or their aſſurance and expectation of future favour, as continuance of peace and proſperity, from his hand: ſo 1 Sam.17.36,37. 2 Cor.1.10. 2 Tim.4.17,18.

our works] Not wrought by us, but for us: as my violence, for the violence done, not by me, but to me; as it is well rendred, Jer.51.35.

in us] Heb. unto us, as in the former branch; as we ſay, to our hand, or for us, as Pſal.47.4. Chap.6.8.

V.13. O Lord, our God, other Lords, beſide thee, have had dominion over us: but by thee only will we make mention of thy name] Or, Though other Lords beſide thee have had dominion over us, yet through thee alone we now celebrate thy name. This paſſage many expound of the carriage of Gods people in time of their afflictions; that ſo they were harſhly and cruelly handled by thoſe whom God had given power over them for their ſins; yet they had conſtantly, even then alſo, depended upon him, and ſuſtained themſelves by the frequent remembrance, and ſerious meditation of his might, and his mercy; and ſo it ſhould be in effect the ſame, with what we had before, v.8. But the words ſeem rather to look another way, and to proceed in what was intimated in the latter part of the verſe, next before going, to wit, that howſoever God had ſuffered wicked men to tyrannize over them for a time; yet through his gracious providence, being protected and preſerved, they now ſurvived to praiſe his name, Pſal.66.11,12,12,13. & 71.20.

other Lords] Forreign Tyrants, 2 Chr.12.8. Jer.27.7,9,12. & 50.17. Lam.5.8. a defect of the word other: as 2 Chron.32.22.

beſides thee] Other then thou, who art our Soveraign Lord, and King. Pſal.44.4. & 74.12. Chap.33.22. or, then thou hadſt appointed to be Rulers over thy people, Deut.17.15. See Jer.30.21. Some refer it, not to the Rulers, but the manner of ruling; they have ruled over us harſhly, cruelly, otherwiſe then according to thy word and will. But I no where find the word uſed for otherwiſe, to diſtinguiſh the manner of doing ought: but for beſides, as ſecluding party from party, and thing from thing; it is frequently found, 1 Chro. 17. 20. Chap. 45. 5, 21. & 64. 3.

but] A defect of the particles here: as ver. 11.

by thee only] Or, through thee; as Pſal. 44. 5. & 60. 12. without whom, all humane helps are unavailable, Pſal. 33. 16, 17. & 60. 11. Prov. 21. 31. Some read it, with a ſupply, as a defective ſpeech, but truſting in thee: but ſuch inſertions are ſuperfluous, where the context runs full enough, and ſmooth without them.

will we make mention of thy name] Or, we celebrate thy name: We now ſurvive to celebrate thy name; to publiſh and praiſe thee for thy might and mercy. So is the word frequently uſed, 1 Chr. 16. 4. Chap. 63. 7. See chap. 12. 4.

V. 14. They are dead, they ſhall not live; they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe:] The people of God do here amplifie Gods gracious dealing with them in their deliverance, albeit, he had permitted ſome cruel Tyrants, as rigid taskmaſters, to uſe them harſhly for a time, with his contrary carriage towards, and dealing with other people, and other perſons, whom he had irrecoverably deſtroyed, Pſal. 36. 12. Chap. 24. 20. Jer. 25. 27. & 51. 64. See chap. 27. 7.

They are dead, they ſhall not live; they are deceaſed, they ſhall not riſe] Or, Their dead ſhall not live; their deceaſed ſhall not riſe. Or, Being dead, they ſhall not live; being deceaſed they ſhall not riſe. When they are once deſtroyed, they ſhal no more be able to recover themſelves and their former eſtate again; then a man, when he is once dead, is able to recover, and to return to life again, 2 Sam. 12. 22, 23. & 14. 14. Job 14. 7-12, 14.

deceaſed] Of the word here uſed, ſee on Chap. 14. 9.

riſe] Shall the deceaſed ariſe, Pſal. 88. 10.

therefore haſt thou viſited and deſtroyed them, and made all their memory to periſh] The reaſon is here rendred, of this their irrecove[illegible]deſtruction, to wit, Gods ſevere, but juſt proceeding in judgment againſt them, Pſal. 9. 6.

therefore] To wit, that they might not recover, and return again, to oppreſſe and wrong Gods people, as formerly they had done. See chap. 14. 21. Ezek. 28. 24. or, becauſe; becauſe thou haſt, in thine heavy viſitation, taken ſuch a courſe with them, that they are utterly deſtroyed. So is the particle found uſed, Gen. 38. 26. Numb. 10. 3. & 14. 43. Pſal. 42. 6. Jer. 48. 36. and ſo the context runs ſmoother.

viſited] See chap. 24. 21.

V. 15. Thou haſt increaſed the nation, O Lord; thou haſt increaſed the nation] They return again to relate Gods dealings with them, though in ſomewhat an harſh and rough manner, for ſome ſpace of time, ver. 15-18. yet in a far other manner of iſſue, then with thoſe other before mentioned, ver. 19. Theſe words are by divers, very diverſly expounded. The Hebrew is, word for word, Thou haſt, or haddeſt, added to the nation. Some underſtand them of Gods manifold benefits, conferred upon that people, the people of the Jews. Thou haſt added to them, bleſſing upon bleſſing; thou haſt laded them with variety of benefits, Pſal. 68. 19. Others, of the enlargement of Gods Church, by adding multitudes thereunto, Chap. 2. 3. & 60. 3-12. Zach. 8. 20-23. Act. 2. 41, 47. & 4. 4. & 5. 14. Others, of the reſtitution of them, oppoſed to that of other people, ver. 14. Thou haſt added (that is, reſtored) life to the nation. See ver. 19. But others, again, underſtand them of variety, not of bleſſings, but judgments; either of vengeance, as Some, executed upon the people before-mentioned; God purſuing them with a continued courſe of calamities, untill he had utterly conſumed them, Jer. 30. 11. or of chaſtiſements; in way whereof, God had exerciſed his people with variety of evils, adding one affliction to another, Jer. 45. 3. See the phraſe, Pſal. 69. 27. And this laſt interpretation I take to be moſt likely.

thou art glorified] Thou didſt glorifie thy ſelf, or gain glory to thy ſelf, by the good thou diddeſt, or haſt done for thy people; both in the deſtruction of their enemies, and in the deliverance of them, and reſtoring them, as to life again, Exod. 14. 4, 17, 18. & 15. 1, 6, 11. Chap. 10. 18. & 59. 19. & 63. 12. Ezek. 28. 22. & 38. 23. So Some. Others, Thou didſt glorifie thy ſelf, by thy judgments executed upon thy people for their ſins and exceſſes: for thereby, alſo, doth God vindicate the honour of his name, which by means thereof, is oft diſhonoured, Lev. 10. 3. 2 Sam. 12. 14. And others, again, render the word to another ſenſe, thou waſt aggrieved; to wit, with their ſins: and the word, indeed, doth alſo ſo ſignifie, to be preſſed, vexed, and grieved, as with ſome weighty thing, that lyeth, or hangeth heavy upon one, Exod. 18. 18. 1 Sam. 5. 11. Pſal. 32. 4. Chap. 24. 20. And in ſuch manner, is God ſaid to be vexed and grieved, yea, broken and tired out with the ſins of his people: See the Note on Chap. 1. 13. See alſo, Chap. 43. 24. & 63. 10. Jer. 15. 6. & 44. 22. Ezek. 6. 9. Amos 2. 13.
